We, the members of The Kelly Bible Class of the Shallow Well Sunday School, wish to pay tribute to the memory of our beloved member, Mrs. I. S. Kelly, who died April 9, 1937.

She was a faithful and genial member, who will be sadly missed from our class.

Therefore be it resolved:

1. We know our Heavenly Father doeth all things well, and even though we cannot understand, we bow in humble submission to His will.
2. We hold in loving remembrance her service, her genial personality and willingness to work for the class.
3. We extend our heartfelt sympathy to her family and loved ones and commend them to Him who is able and willing to uphold and comfort them.
4. That a copy of these resolutions be placed on the records of our class, a copy sent to the family, and a copy sent to "The Christian Sun" for publication.

Respectfully submitted,

Mrs. W. A. THOMAS,
Mrs. L. J. SLOAN,
B. W. THOMAS,

LA FOLLETTE.

Almira Johnson La FOLLETTE was born December 7, 1848, and departed this life April 29, 1937—aged 88 years, 4 months, and 22 days.

She had been a member of Timber Ridge Church at High View, West Virginia, since her early girlhood days and was ever loyal and faithful to her church. Her friends bear testimony to her fine Christian character and say that she lived a constant Christian life.

Burial services were held from the church, Sunday, P. M., May 2nd, and her body interred in the church cemetery.

We believe she has entered into that rest that remains for the people of God.

SMITH.

With a deep feeling of sadness, the Ladies Benevolent and Social Union of the Suffolk Christian Church records the recent passing of Mrs. Otis S. Smith, Sr.

Ever since its organization Mrs. Smith has been a loyal and faithful member, and was interested in every phase of the work.

Her personal charm was interwoven with quiet, yet forceful manner, and a fineness of feeling for her associates.

Her death deprives not only this society, but her church and the entire community of a loyal friend.

Resolved, that we extend to her family our sincerest sympathy, and the hope that our expressed appreciation of her friendship may, in some measure, lighten the burden of their bereavement.

ACROSS THE YEARS.

This is the very significant and suggestive title of a recent book written by Dr. Charles Stedman MacFarland.

The fact that Dr. MacFarland has been an outstanding national and international religious leader for the past thirty years makes this autobiography of unusual interest and value to ministers and to all workers in the field of Religious Education. Here are 350 pages of delightfully rewarding reading, telling in a fine literary style the story of the ambitions and struggles, the visions and disillusionments, the defeats and victories of a great man who as a poor boy on the streets of Boston "Hitched his wagon to a silver star."

Any home would be blessed by having this volume in its library. It is published by the MacMillan Company of New York City, and can be secured from the Acme Book Service, 287 Fourth Ave., New York City, or at any up-to-date book store at $2.50 a copy.

ROY C. HELFENSTEIN.

My business is not to remake myself, but to make the absolute best of what God made.—Robert Browning.

IF

If you were busy being kind,
Before you knew it, you would find
You'd soon forget to think 'twas true
That someone was unkind to you.

If you were busy being glad,
And cheering people who are sad,
Although your heart might ache a bit,
You'd soon forget to notice it.

If you were busy being good,
And doing just the best you could,
You'd not have time to blame some man
Who's doing just the best he can.

If you were busy being true
To what you know you ought to do,
You'd be so busy you'd forget
The blunders of the folks you've met.

If you were busy being right,
You'd find yourself too busy quite
To criticize your neighbor long,
Because he's busy being wrong.

REPRESENTING THE SOUTHEAST CONVENTION OF CONGREGATIONAL AND CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

In Essentials, Unity — In Non-Essentials, Liberty — In All Things, Charity

VOLUME LXXXIX.

RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, JUNE 3, 1937.

NUMBER 22.

J. M. DARDEN.

On his seventy-first birthday, May 30, 1937, Mr. J. M. Darden, one of the leading citizens of Suffolk, Virginia, passed to his reward. He was a deacon of Suffolk Christian Church, a member of the Finance committee, and a dependable worker in that church. He was vice-president of a local bank and president of business concerns that reach throughout the South.

Mr. Darden has been a friend to many of our local churches and to the various Boards and Institutions. He gave much time as assistant mission secretary before his health broke down. His greatest love in church work, however, was probably the Elon Christian Orphanage at Elon College, North Carolina. For several years he has been president of the Board of Trustees and on many occasions has made valuable contributions to that institution. A fuller account of his life will appear in a later issue of "The Christian Sun."

LET THERE BE LIGHT

PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

Monticello Church at Brown Summit, N. C., is holding their revival this week with Rev. F. Erwin Hyde, of Sanford, N. C., doing the preaching. Mr. Hyde is a former pastor of the church, and we feel sure that this week will be a fine one for the church and people.

June 20 will be an important day for the people and friends of Haw River (N. C.) Christian Church. A Memorial window for the late Rev. C. C. Peel, who built the church, is to be dedicated, and along with this is to be the annual home-coming day. All those interested are cordially invited to attend. There will be services morning and night, with dinner served at the church. Rev. E. J. Sanderson is pastor.

Mrs. Vida S. Githens has recently been chosen by the First Congregational Church of St. Petersburg, Florida, to assist the pastor, Rev. John P. Jockensen. Mrs. Githens has served as a missionary in Africa. At present she is in Chicago University taking post graduate work in Religious Education and Young People's work. Her new duties will begin next September. The church bulletin reports the average attendance for the three months of this year as being 2,727, an increase over last year.

Rev. John H. Knight, pastor of the United Congregational-Christian Church, LaGrange, Georgia, in a letter of May 24, reports the following: "We have had a very fine Preaching Mission here for the past 10 days under the direction of Dr. James R. Clinton. Dr. Clinton is a hard worker, and an exceptionally fine preacher, and I feel that we are exceedingly fortunate to have a man of his calibre working here among us in the District of the Southeast. Dr. Clinton was here at the United Church from May 12-23. He has now gone on for a five-day's meeting with the Liberty Church, East Tallassee, Alabama, Rev. J. I. Barker, pastor.

Rev. W. J. Andes, one of our young ministers, presided at an Interdenominational Youth Conference held in Harrisonburg, Virginia, May 21-22, last, at which there were 1,000 people for the first night session. Dr. Roy A. Burkhart was among the list of fine leaders. Rev. Mr. Andes says that he thinks the discussions on "Practicing Our Religion," "Educating for World Peace," "The Problem of Beverage Alcohol," "Creating a Christian Economic Order," "Breaking Down Race Barriers," "Preparation for Home and Marriage," and "The County Youth Council and Its Work" faced vital issues and will prove to be helpful to those who shared in them.

The Church of Wide Fellowship, Southern Pines, N. C., regretfully accepts the resignation of their pastor, Dr. C. Rexford Raymond. In doing this, however, they welcome him to a more abiding relationship with the church as Pastor Emeritus. Dr. Raymond says that he hopes to serve wherever needed without asking for any honorarium except travel expense and entertainment. He wishes to be at the call of the churches of the Southeast for occasional preaching. He has only one engagement at present; namely, at Holland, Virginia, for a preaching mission September 12-19. His duties at Southern Pines will end with his vacation in August, which he expects to spend in western New York. Dr. Raymond and his family will make their home at Southern Pines, N. C.

SEMI-CENTENNIAL CELEBRATION.

Nineteen-hundred-forty will be the half-century mark of the existence and service of Elon College. Preparations are being made for a fitting observance of this historical occasion.

The Board of Trustees in session, Wednesday, May 26th, voted authorizing the appointment of a special committee to arrange for the celebration, also the selection of a historian who would write a complete history of the college and have the same ready by 1940. Certain goals were set, among which were the complete payment of all debts and the increasing of our cash endowment to $500,000. At one time it would seem utterly impossible to attain such goals, but today we are all convinced that it is not only possible to realize these achievements, but that is extremely probable with the cooperation, the sacrifices, and the help of all. There is no question but that every dollar of indebtedness can be paid and our endowment increased to the half-million mark.

This note is given that the church at large may begin to think about this important and coming event in the life of one of its principal institutions. The entire church will be greatly interested in the golden anniversary of the college.

BLESSINGS OF THE BIBLE.

By DR. C. REXFORD RAYMOND.

[Note: Address delivered in presenting Bibles to the graduating class of Elon College, May 26, 1937.]

I congratulate you on the Christian education received in this college which will enable you to appreciate this Bible which I am permitted in the name of Elon College to give you.

Because of your education you will not make the Bible a fetish and treat it with superstition; nor, on the other hand, will you dismiss it as a relic of superstition. The Bible is your inheritance. Part of your inheritance is racial. The color of your skin, the quality of your brain, your inborn temperament and capacities—this legacy comes to you from your ancestors. Language, institutions, literature, art, customs, mores—all of these are because of when and where you were born. You drink out of wells that you did not dig. The Bible may be called perhaps your most valuable social inheritance.

You understand that the Bible is not an idol to be worshipped but a record of religious experience to be understood and to be shared. There is no magic in your use of the Bible. Its presence in your home will not be a blessing unless you and yours know how to use it. The Bible has proved its inheritant worth by the way it has blessed folks in spite of their limited knowledge. But the Bible would mean more to you than it does to an untrained mind.

You have learned how to find in the Bible the record of a growing knowledge of God. It shows how the dawn of conscience and the growing sense of what is right and wrong came into the experience of the Hebrews, plainly hinting how the religious experience of the more ancient cultures of Egypt and Babylonia were appropriated and developed by the Israelites. It shows how a long line of Semitic priests and prophets cooperated in developing the worship of the one good God and in revealing what that God demands as right living. It shows how this development of Israel prepared the way for the coming of Jesus, the Word made flesh, our Lord and Redeemer. Supreme in all its record of redemption, it enables us to share in the religious experience of Jesus, which has been called the world's most precious possession.

In thus enabling us to share in the religious experience of the historic Christ, it makes it possible for us to recognize the presence of the living Spirit of Christ in our life today. In short, the Bible may be said to prime the pump for our religious life. Just as one gets water from a well by pouring water into the dry leather valves of an otherwise useless pump so that the pump takes hold and lifts the water to our thirsty lips, so the message of the Bible, poured into our dry and thirsty souls, enables us to find a well of water springing up within us to eternal life. Reading in the Bible the story of the Jesus of history, we are fitted to recognize the message of the Spirit of Christ within our souls today.

The Bible thus fits us to be inspired here and now. The inrush from the wider spiritual world finds us prepared to meet God in the terms of today's needs. Dissatisfied with the world as it ought to be, the Bible shows us how to trust our best institutions and helps us to launch out with Christ to build a better world. Thus using the Bible as our torch and compass, we are enabled to share in the visions and hopes of the saints and sages of the past and to declare our own faith that "The Lord is my Shepard, He restoreth my soul."

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgement and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

A DIVIDED CHURCH.

The generations following Jesus have sometimes forgot the necessity of unity. Apparently we do not remember His prayer. We think much of the things we believe and the way we want to do. If the Church group of which we are a part, either locally or otherwise, does not agree with our ideas there are those of us who are willing to divide the body of Christ. We discontinue our allegiance; we stand aloof; we fight for our independence, forgetful of the fact that it is the body of Christ being wounded, that it is the blood of Christ which is being shed afresh.

Today the Church stands face to face with the possibility of absolute success or absolute failure. We can conquer the world, or the world will conquer the Church. The Church can redeem the world through the saving influence of Jesus, or the world will destroy the Church. Leaders on every hand are telling us that it is a choice between Christianity and Communism. Atheists are boldly challenging the hosts of God for a fight to the finish. Pleasure and money blind the eyes of our modern generation so that they are unable to distinguish the weightier matters of the spirit. New methods of communication bind the world together so that people everywhere can hear the leaders speak.

In such a time as this the army of the Lord is all too badly divided into either warring, unfriendly or rival camps. There is no one to accept the challenge of the giant; no authoritative voice rings clear and true with a, "Thus saith the Lord." With a church on every corner in sections of our cities the people go out for pleasure rather than in for worship. There seems to be little of the fire of God that makes living evangelists and binds together the hearts of mankind. Oh, there is some, but how much more do we need!

Tragedy of tragedies! There are those churches and church groups who somehow feel that they are better than others and must needs stand alone. They cannot enter into the fellowship of the larger group. They will not abide by majority votes in a democracy. Apparently, they have forgotten how frequently Jesus prayed for the unity of His Church. Sacrifice is a beautiful theory for them but has no place in experience. Cooperation is a lesson they have not learned. The Church must do as they wish or else they will not share in the program at all. The denomination must obey their will or they will not be part of it, even though they may not attend its councils to express their opinion.

This writer has never been known to conform too easily. He believes in independence; he believes that every person should think for himself. But he is aware that there are currents which are deeper than personal desires and independent thinking. No man can stand alone successfully. We are dependent one upon the other. So are churches. No man liveth to himself, and no man can bury himself when he is dead. Cooperation comes at a price, but the price is none too high if it means the unity of spirit in Christian service. With all my heart this appeal goes out to those in local churches and those everywhere who feel that they must be separate and apart from the other followers of God. It is an appeal to remember the prayer of Jesus for the unity of His Church; it is an appeal to consider again whether there is a real principle at stake or whether it is a personal peeve; it is an appeal to face the world that stands ready to turn toward God or to slaughter itself, and remember that only the Church has the message of unity that will bind the world together and make it stand forever. In thought we shall never agree, but in heart we can find fellowship and devoutly worship at the feet of the Master who prayed that the Church might be one even as His own heart was united to the heart of the Father.

A UNITED CHURCH.

When Jesus prayed for his Church the night before he was murdered, the prayer was that the Church be united. He wanted the disciples and those who believed on him through their teachings to be as united as He and the Father were. Three times He prayed the same prayer. There is no language by which he could have made this desire of His heart more evident than to pray for it three times on such an important occasion. He must have meant it.

He never suggested that they think alike, dress alike, or look alike. But in spirit, underneath the outward show and circumstance, they were to be united even as Jesus and His Father were united. It was in this realm of spirit that sufficient strength was to be generated to transform the whole world and make of it the Kingdom of God. There are many things about which He did not talk, and only a few that he discussed just before leaving His disciples, but this matter of understanding, of unity, of cooperation seemed to weigh heavily on His heart. He was doubtless right in thinking that only so could the new Church stand the test of the centuries.

At the upper room communion the disciples did not quite understand what He meant, but as they looked back on it through many experiences and Pentecost the words of the Master became important and they sought diligently to be united even if it cost them all of their living. Into the common treasury went all their money, and into the service of the Master went all their time and thought. There was no earthly power that could stop their progress. The message went out to the ends of the known earth within a generation. They were invincible. Neither the infuriated Jewish Sanhedrin nor imperial Rome could stop them. Fire from God had welded their hearts together, and they went out as flaming evangelists bearing the glad tidings of the Kingdom. Not until they had experienced this unity of soul could they find success.

CONFLICT IN THE FAR EAST.

By CHARLES A. LEONARD, SR.

In the struggle of Light and Darkness in Manchukuo (Manchuria) Christ Becomes Triumphant in the Lives of Many.

Having just finished teaching a Bible class last night, I was supposed to go then into the gospel hall and preach, but was met in the church yard by Evangelist Chia, who said: "I'll ask you not to preach tonight, if you don't care. One brother is speaking now, and Mr. Hwang would like to witness when he is through." It is always a joy to see our Manchurian brethren take hold, to realize that earnest believers are willing and sometimes waiting to testify to the saving power of God.

The "Virtue Society" Teaches "Salvation by Works."

Just back from a long trip of six weeks, my desk still loaded with unanswered correspondence, I excused myself from the meeting, hoping to answer some letters before retiring. On the way home I stepped inside the small packed public meeting place of the "Virtue Society," to hear for a few moments what a young woman was preaching, but the head of the Society forced me to the front.

A half dozen women from Virtue Societies in other cities have been here for a month speaking every night. This young woman assured her audience that the Society is not a religious organization, but claimed that "since its teachings include all the important tenets of every religion, the Society is universal in its scope and complete in its teachings." She praised Christianity, but told the two hundred men and women present that adherence to any one religion was not necessary, that all people need is more instruction of the kind that the Virtue Society gives.

Three young women spoke. They bemoaned the increase in cigarettes and opium smokers, the wide use of morphine, so much gambling, the lack of filial piety and other sins, but gave no real remedy for these. It was pathetic to see how far they missed the mark. At the close some of the speakers and others promised to come to the Church to hear a Christian message. A good number followed me down the street, where I preached to them. A characteristic illustration used by one of the speakers was that a man is like a rough stone: he needs only to be polished. It was not hard, however, to lead those who heard us on the street corner to realize that the illustration does not really fit man, for whereas the farther one goes into a stone the better one finds its content, the deeper one goes into the heart of man the more sinful it is found to be. Peter the "rock" was not "true to the core" until he was truly "born again."

During the afternoon an evangelist, Mrs. Leonard and I had been to a detention camp where the Gospel was preached to hundreds of men and women—opium, morphine and other drug fiends, taken in from the streets to be given forcible treatment against the use of drugs. Surely one could find nowhere in all the world a more brokendown, dejected lot of human beings! As we distributed tracts and Gospels among them, it was noticeable that more than fifty per cent could read, while only ten per cent of the people generally are literate. During the last twelve months more than twelve hundred dead bodies of opium, morphine and other drug addicts were gathered up from the streets of Harbin. Their bodies are piled up on carts and carried to the outskirts of the city, where in winter, in piles they await the springtime, when holes are dug and they are buried as so much refuse. Had others not been gathered into pest houses, they too would have died in the same way. Among those who thus threw away their lives and were carried away as so many dead dogs, there were likewise a high per cent of educated people. The most terrible and desperate crimes committed in this city these several past years were either by men supposed to be polished, or by their accomplices. Many of the worst bandit leaders have had the "polish," advocated by speakers of the Virtue Society, who claim that this is enough, but it is hopelessly deficient, as seen on every hand. The Gospel of Christ makes "new creatures," and what fine characters these people do become when born again!

Anything will do, the devil contends, just so trust in the blood of Jesus Christ and the power of His Gospel are left out. But really nothing else will do, for "there is NO OTHER NAME given among men." The opposition to Christianity was great at one time. Now the devil sees he is losing out; so he offers compromises. "Yes, Christ was a good man, but there are others. Christianity is all right, but it means giving up too much and its acceptance is not necessary," he insists. The people generally were never so willing to hear, never so friendly, and never has our work been so encouraging.

*Many Saved by the Gospel

Turning back to the evangelistic meetings at the city church, referred to above, as I pushed my way through the crowded gospel hall to the front door, Christians outside were inviting people into the meetings. A brother from an outstation greeted me with a smile, and under the electric lights of the new church building, told with joy of the progress being made at Chuhehsien, one of the outstations. "Since Pastor Liu came back from his visit home," he said, "the work has gone forward as never before. The enlarged Bible-class room is full three times a week with around thirty people." Then he added with pride: "Another forty-odd were baptized recently, among them some more Koreans."

"But," I asked, "What about your enlarged church house? Is it full?" (I had feared that they could not be able to fill it.) "Why," he said, "it too, is full at nearly every service. On the day the forty-two were baptized the house was packed; and what a gracious service we did have! You know we have been afraid," he continued, "that we would not be able to pay off the money borrowed to enlarge the building; but God has now added this good number, among whom are some excellent people. So contributions have increased. We are advancing in a fine way."

At another of the outstations eighteen were recently baptized. At another twenty-two followed the Lord in Baptism, and at still another twenty. Mr. Koon returned a few days past from Anganghsi, one of the hardest places we have known to get work started, but now there is a revival there where forty-one have just been baptized. Twenty or more will be baptized here in Harbin next Sunday. And so the work goes on. The reports from every one of our twenty outstations bring encouragement. The total number of baptisms last year was more than five hundred. We are hoping and praying for not less than seven hundred this year. It looks as though the Lord is going to give that many, or more. But, of course, much preaching and teaching is required, and there are plenty of difficulties.

God's faithful in the homeland, who are supporting the work out here through the Cooperative Program and with designated gifts, should certainly feel encouraged that He is using their money in such a gratifying way. It encourages us to learn of the movements to increase the number of members to the Hundred Thousand Club for reduction of the debts. When our Foreign Mission Board is free of debt then Southern Baptists will be better able to go forward as they should in this new, growing, and promising part of the world.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

This writer had the privilege of attending the Elon College Commencement, on Wednesday, May 26th. It has been several years since such an opportunity has been accepted. The occasion was of deep interest. Thirty nine years ago, the class of 1898 made their speeches and received their diplomas. It was interesting to compare a commencement of 1898 with a similar occasion of 1937. Our class did not wear caps and gowns. We were too poor to afford such extravagance and display. The graduates were required to deliver orations or essays on Graduation Day. The Salutatorian greeted the visitors and this was regarded as a great honor. The Valedictorian had the farewell message. This was the highest honor accorded any member of the class. For weeks the members of the class worked on these speeches, delivering them in Society Halls, the auditorium, the woods and anywhere else available.

Now the graduating class is not expected to take any part in the program. Their names are called when the time arrives to present the diplomas. They wear caps and gowns. College officials are arrayed in beautiful and expensive gowns and other regalia designed to add dignity to the occasion. When honorary degrees are conferred the recipients of these honors are expected to present themselves for the purpose of being bedecked in the regalia representing the designated honor. Dress has displaced the ad-dresses—but commencement is a great occasion just the same. Thirty-nine years from this date other changes will be made. There is no fixed program for youth, and styles change with every passing generation.

Thirty-nine years ago the writer had the honor of delivering the valedictory address. Many times since then he has been reminded that such an honor is usually the zenith of intellectual achievement. He has often been told that the student who makes low grades in college excels the valedictorian in after life. Why remind a man of his handicaps? I entered college with a purpose to be valedictorian of my class. Now it has always been a mystery to me why some people take such a delight in telling a fellow that his honors are symbols of portending failure. At least it does give one an explanation whether it satisfies or not.

The personal element adds interest to a Commencement occasion. If one has relatives or friends whose names appear on the program the interest increases. To our party there were not many familiar faces in the auditorium or on the campus. We were strangers in a strange land. After the benediction we drove to Burlington for lunch, and returned to Suffolk in the evening, and this journey of 418 miles, including the stay at Elon college, required only fourteen hours and thirty minutes, for the round trip.

After school days are over pupils return to their homes to take their places in life. This writer would appeal to college students to find their places in their local churches when they return home. Compared with the dignity of a college auditorium the little church may seem insignificant, and it may be difficult for the students to adapt themselves to the old order, but they will be enriched by taking an active part in the church where they worshipped in the days of their childhood.

THE ELON COMMENCEMENT.

The 47th annual commencement of Elon College was held Friday, May 21 to Wednesday, May 26, 1937. The weather was ideal, and the attendance was most gratifying. The program was one of much interest and enthusiasm from beginning to end. The commencement play, "The Importance of Being Earnest," by Oscar Wilde, was given by the Dramatics Department and directed by Miss Floyd Childs, provided an evening of wholesome and helpful entertainment. The performance was well done and well received.

The Baccalaureate sermon was delivered Sunday at 11:30 A. M. by Dr. James H. Lightbourne, pastor of the Burlington Christian Church. The Burlington congregation was invited to attend services at the college chapel. Dr. A. W. Lightbourne, the father of Dr. James H. Lightbourne, delivered the baccalaureate sermon when the writer graduated in 1910. He spoke from the text, "What I know not, teach Thou me." His son, Dr. James H. Lightbourne, used the same text, and it was a coincidence that the son of the writer was a member of this graduating class. The service was largely attended, and Dr. Lightbourne brought to his audience a very helpful message.

Monday was class day exercises which is always an enjoyable occasion. Monday evening the Elon College Conservatory presented "Sing Ye to the Lord" by Johann Sebastian Bach. This service was broadcast over WBIG.

Tuesday was Alumni Day. A goodly number of the alumni assembled at 11 o'clock to hear a message from Rev. George Washington Perry, pastor of Trinity Methodist Church, Durham, North Carolina. Mr. Perry was at the college in 1906. He did not graduate, but during his stay he made a favorable impression upon the faculty and his classmates. His message was enjoyed by all. The college had the privilege of welcoming to the campus members of the classes of 1897, 1907, 1917, and 1927. There were only two members of the class of 1897, Mrs. Stevenson, formerly Miss Clements, the daughter of the late W. G. Clements, and Mr. W. E. MacClenney of Suffolk. Mrs. Stevenson was present and entered enthusiastically into the program. The class of 1907 made an effort to have every member present. There were twelve members of the class, all of whom are still living. Ten were present, Mrs. Ella Brunk Smith, Mrs. Clara Moffitt Howell, Mrs. Flora Thompson Bishop, Mrs. Jennie Godwin Moses, Miss Bertha Isely, Professor Lucius Lincoln, Dr. J. C. Wilkins, Mr. C. E. Pritchette, Mr. Virgil Pritchette, and Mrs. Lenora Frank Summers. Mr. H. M. Loy and Mrs. Alma Newman Young were absent. It was certainly a delight to have this class back on the campus as well as members from the classes of 1897, 1917, and 1927. Following the morning exercises, a picnic luncheon was served on the campus. The business meeting of the Association was held at 2:30. Dr. J. E. Rawls was elected president and Mr. W. G. Stoner, secretary and treasurer. The Association created a new office, that of Executive Secretary of the Association. Mr. George D. Colclough was elected to this position. Reference was made to the golden anniversary of the college be held in 1940. Plans are being laid already for the proper observance of the half-century mark of the existence of the college.

The Garden Party given by President and Mrs. Smith is always an enjoyable occasion. The annual alumni address was delivered by Superintendent Frank Warren of the Durham City Schools. Superintendent Warren gave a very helpful and convincing message on "Effective Education." The annual alumni banquet was a most enjoyable occasion. Honorable C. C. Howell, Attorney, a member of the class of 1908, challenged the classes of 1898, 1918, and 1928 to have 100% attendance at the next annual commencement.

Wednesday, Commencement Day, was of course the climax of the program. The exercises began promptly at 10:15. A great audience had assembled—the greatest the writer has ever seen on Elon College campus. People came from far and near, not only to witness the graduation exercises, but to hear the speaker of the morning. Mr. Thurman Chatham, President of the Chatham Manufacturing Company, of Winston-Salem, introduced the speaker. Dr. Roger Babson delivered the literary address, and a great deliverance it was! The address was constructive, convincing, practical, and most helpful to all present, particularly to the members of the graduating class. Forty-four received the Bachelor of Arts degree, one diploma in piano, one certificate in piano, two diplomas in expression, one junior certificate in expression, seventeen certificates in secretarial practice, and two awards for reading for honors in English. Dr. C. Rexford Raymond, of Southern Pines, on behalf of Elon College, presented Bibles to members of the graduating class. The college had the signal privilege of honoring Rev. H. S. Hardecastle of Norfolk with the degree of Doctor of Divinity and Mr. Roger W. Babson of Babson Park, Massachusetts, with honorary degree of Doctor of Laws.

The entire commencement season was most satisfactory and meant much to the college.

A LETTER FROM CONCORD.

Concord is continuing its Christian work, and it has been very successful according to its attendance.

We have been having Sunday school every Sunday morning including the winter for the past few years. This is an improvement over a few years back when we only ran it in the summer on account of bad weather in the winter and the roads were so that the people could not get there. We have an approximate number of fifty on the roll and have been having a favorable attendance for the past year.

Our pastor, Rev. W. J. Andes, gives us a service every fourth Sunday night and an extra sermon on the fifth Sunday morning. He has done a great work in the church. He especially has worked with the young people to get them interested in taking a part in the church work.

We have organized a Young People's Society and they give programs at least one Sunday a month. They with the help from the older people and the children, gave an Easter program and a Mother's Day program this spring and to the large audiences they presented a fine program both times. This summer we hope to give a program more than once a month, in order to give the young people more training and more interest in the work of the church.

We are planning to have a Bible School here at this church this summer, which will be a great help in the Bible study for the children of the community. This has been quite necessary for a long time and we hope to make a success of it now that we have an opportunity.

The Ladies Aid Society has been doing great work in the church. They meet once every two weeks. For the past year or so they have been piecing and making comforts. This proves to be very satisfactory in selling, and making money. They also have socials in the summer and make money in that way. With what they make they have done, and are still doing anything necessary for the development of the church. They have paid bills, which the church itself could not pay. Besides this, they have made a great improvement in the appearance of the church building. They have painted the building, put new carpet on the floor, decorated the windows and mended the porch and steps. And we are thankful to them for the service they have given.

We hope the church will continue to grow and take more interest in its work, and bring more people from sin in the future than we have in the past.

LANETT CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

Three members of Lanett Church, and the pastor, Rev. Geo. W. Penn, attended the Southeast Convention at Jacksonville, Florida—which was a great experience to them. The Convention was very inspiring; the scenery was lovely. The people were so kind-hearted, and gave themselves entirely to making others happy, that it will be long remembered by those who attended.

On Sunday evening, May 9th, there was a vesper service on the church lawn. The delegates gave a report to the church of the Convention.

Early in the year we re-roofed the church building, and at a very early date we will paint the inside and outside walls and do some other much-needed repair.

Our revival begins June 2nd, with Rev. Alan T. Jones, of Brazelton, Ga., conducting. We often think our whole nation needs a revival of real religion and Lanett is included. There has perhaps never been a time that we, in Lanett, were more prosperous; therefore, we do not have time to attend church as we should.

Surely ours is a great Father to be so patient with His children.

GROWTH IN CHRISTIAN SERVICE.

The International Council of Religious Education has recently issued a 38-page pamphlet with the above title and a sub-title, "Suggested Pathways to More Effective Service in the Christian Cause." This might be described as a devotional guide with a very practical trend. It suggests as means of growth in Christian character and experience not only the ordinary methods of worship and private devotion, but the pathways of service in the church, in the community, and throughout the world. It deals with the experiences that one may find at the summer conference and through reading, study, the appreciation of beauty, through right social relation, and in various types of practical service. There are also blank pages on which one may write a plan of work growing out of this study and a record of what actually happened, which adds still more to the practical value of the pamphlet for use individually, or for groups in the young people's society or the summer conference.

The pamphlet has been produced cooperatively by the forty or more denominations participating in the International Council and costs fifteen cents. It may be secured from the Pilgrim Press.

TO SHARE WITH FRIENDS.

During the above mentioned visit, the Generalissimo asked Mr. Shepard to prepare 1,000 copies of selected portions from the Old Testament, and all of the New Testament, in bound leather books with the picture of Christ in the front and a statement that they were printed especially for the General. These he plans to distribute among his immediate friends. Expressing gratitude for the prayers of Christians during his experience at Sian, Generalissimo Chiang said: "I was deeply conscious of a strong spiritual support for which I extend hearty thanks to all Christians."

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

EVANGELISM IN THE AMERICAN BOARD MISSIONS.

Since 1934 Evangelism has been one of the phases of our work being studied by the Foreign Policy Committee. At its meeting on April 13, 1937, a review of Evangelism in the various mission areas was presented by the Foreign Secretaries. Brief portions of the summaries follows:

INDIA.

The dramatic announcement of Dr. Ambedkar, that he had decided to leave Hinduism and would seek to lead the 50 millions of his fellow outcasts into some other religion, came after a five-year plan of evangelism had gotten well under way in India. The first period had been given to the purifying and deepening of the life of the churches and had been effective. Dr. Ambedkar's challenge and the resulting unrest among the outcasts everywhere intensified this appeal. In the face of this overwhelming need, the Christian community realized afresh its need of repentance and rededication if it was to be prepared to lead millions of depressed people into the richer life that Christ could give them. It is under the sense of pressure of this crisis that the plan of evangelism continues. In many parts of India there are large gatherings, and these are affecting not only the depressed classes, but the study caste people as well.

The second Bulletin of "The Forward Movement in Evangelism" was published by the National Christian Council in October of 1936. It gives detailed reports from different parts of India. In the Dornakal Diocese alone, 2,457 villages were visited and about 259,000 were reached in the Week of Witness and 304 villages are asking for instruction.

The work is done in different ways. Laymen's training conferences and retreats for all workers are held. Singing bands go from village to village. Pastors go in groups on preaching missions. Gospels and leaflets are widely distributed.

The Bulletin sums up the results as follows:

"What is recorded in these pages is but a small part of the increasing volume of testimony that comes within our ken. It should beget both prayer and praise. The Spirit of God is at work and it is our privilege to be workers together with Him. These things are clear:

1. The Church is realizing afresh that the glorious Gospel of the blessed God has been committed to her trust.

2. The lay forces of the Church are coming steadily into action.

3. Evangelism is accepted as the primary concern of every branch of the Christian enterprise. Some of the most striking illustrations of evangelistic effort come from schools and hospitals.

4. The 'Week of Witness,' preceded by serious preparation, has come to stay. It has made cooperation possible and indispensable. It has also been the means under God of restoring many lapsed families to the fellowship of the Church—a most important service.

5. The need of good Christian literature is felt everywhere. Distribution must be expedited.

6. Significant as is the Ambedkar revolt, of even greater significance is the movement among the Bhils, Ezhavas, Balahis and other communities. We must watch with friendly eyes the movings of the group. Systematic instruction of inquiries must be maintained.

7. There is a new spirit of expectancy abroad and a new zest for corporate prayer.

8. There can be but one adequate motive in Evangelism—"the love of Christ constraineth me"—but the methods may be many. For example, Bible Weeks, Book Weeks and Relative Weeks have come hopefully into the scheme of things. So also has Newspaper Evangelism and Evangelism by pictures. Inter-visitation by carefully selected teams has proved a great success. Personal witness is still the most effective method.

9. While spiritual unreadiness is a bar, it is not an insuperable bar to a Forward Movement. In going out to save others the Church also saves herself and finds the grace she needs.

10. The succors of the Gospel must be carried to all who are in need, irrespective of caste, creed or colour. The time is ripe for a concerted Christian attack on illiteracy.

11. 'We must not forget the Enemy.' The open door brings with it many adversaries.

12. The Forward Movement is just beginning. The Holy Spirit is leading His people on and as the cooperate with Him the next step becomes clear. In this cooperation they discover afresh their essential unity."

It is needless to say that the missionaries and churches connected with the Marathi, Madura and Ceylon Missions are bearing their full share in this forward movement in Evangelism.

THE PHILIPPINES.

"Everywhere in the Philippines religion constitutes one of the major topics of conversation these days. The press gives liberal space to religious articles and news items. Evangelical forces are engaged in promoting a national religious awakening leading up to the world meeting scheduled for Hangchow, China, in October, 1938."

This quotation is from a special edition of the National Christian Council Bulletin given entirely to the Evangelistic Movement now going on in the Islands.

A Commission on Evangelism has prepared a large poster for the four year program calling for "An Awakened Individual, An Awakened Church, An Awakened Community, An Awakened Nation."

AFRICA.

In the East Africa Mission the work of evangelism has been strengthened through the organization of an association of the churches which previously had worked as units. Delegates from the churches first met in July, 1929, but the organization of the Association was further stimulated by Dr. Goodsell's visit in 1935 when a plan for a five year program was set up. Reports indicate that the Association of Churches is gradually working out this plan. Quarterly meetings of the Association are held. Emphasis is being placed on volunteer lay service. The Bible Training School at Mt. Silinda is being reopened.

The church at Chikore has been torn by a Zionist movement, but through careful leadership the missionaries and loyal Native workers have brought the factions together.

The church at Mt. Salinda has stressed the Week of Prayer, and teams of workers have gone out to visit in the homes.

Evangelistic work has been stressed in the schools. Students from the Mt. Silinda Institute went out on a tour during a vacation and visited 600 kraals, reaching about 15,000 people. It was estimated that there were about 288 conversions and 51 reconsecrations.

Reports from the South Africa Mission read much as reports of churches in the United States might read. Where there are strong pastors the work is going forward well. From the central area of the Mission comes the report that there are many devoted pastors who have stressed the visitations of Christian homes. Seventy-five lay preachers work in this area and the pastors and preachers are striving to meet the problems of the young people, to work among the non-Christians on the Reserves and to give leadership to classes of inquirers. Mr. Christofersen, reporting for the large area south of Durban, says that the churches show an increase in membership and in offerings, but that in a number of them difficult problems have arisen because of inadequate leadership of pastors and evangelists. The Umzumbe Church is strong and is doing a far-reaching work in this area. Mr. Abraham reporting for the churches in the large area north of Durban states that there is a more healthful situation among the churches than for several years.

The refresher course given last year for ordained pastors and evangelists at Adams and later in Johannesburg proved most successful and the plan will probably be followed again. From Inanba Seminary there is a vigorous extension work, the students and teachers going out into the neighborhood to conduct Sunday Schools.

From the West Africa Mission come the familiar reports of rapidly growing churches. The oldest church, at Bailundo, reports that more than 1,000 have been added this last year to the roll of the class preparing for full church membership. Six hundred and eight were added to the Bailundo Church as full members. The Sachikela station reports also a steady increase in church membership and extension work being carried on in the out-lying area. The Chilesso Church added 392 to full church membership. New territory has been visited and an earnest spirit of evangelism is evident in the whole church. The church in Lobito has no missionary leadership at present, but two able Native leaders are carrying on the work vigorously. The church at Galangue also reports steady progress. The major problem in the West Africa Mission is the training of an adequate native leadership for the rapidly growing Christian community.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church"

MISS EMILY CARLETON, Editor, 541 Osceola Ave., Winter Park, Fla.

SPRING CLEANING!

In spring a young man's fancy turns to thoughts of love, but since this is entirely an individual affair, let us allow our thoughts to turn to the business of "spring cleaning" in our society.

We should sweep away the cobwebs of routine sameness, and clean off the dullness and monotony which has been allowed to accumulate through the cold winter months. Each part of our program should be examined carefully and "repaired" or "cleaned" where needed, and those parts now missing should be supplied,

Get your leader to pep you up a bit! Sing an extra chorus or two, and make your singing a real part of the worship!

Preparation for the Meeting—

Have you allowed your meetings to become routine affairs with no real preparation being made—just a hymn, a prayer, a talk, offering and benediction?

"It is hard to keep them "sparkling" when the unsettled weather will cause your crowd to vary from five or six to a full group, but get your leaders together and make a very special effort to plan your next four

FINDING ROMANCE AND ADVENTURE IN GOOD READING.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC
FOR JUNE 13, 1937.

SCRIPTURE—Acts 8:26-35.

Daily Meditation—

Books come from the press by the thousands today. It is no trouble to secure a book, but it certainly requires a little effort in the selection of a good book. Too many of our young people read cheap novels of love and romance when they should be reading something which would broaden their mind and vision.

A good book opens the mind to new truth. Mystery, romance, and adventure are presented through good literature. Then why should we be satisfied with the cheap magazines or story sections of the newspapers. Emerson said, "'Tis a good reader that makes a good book." Paul sought good books. He begged Timothy to "bring the books, especially the parchments." He was in prison at the time he made this request.

We have books of knowledge which meet only the temporary needs of life. These books must be revised to keep pace with the times. There are books of power which lift the soul to new ideals. They never go out of date. Their inspiring thoughts change our lives. The Bible is first of all good books. It fires imagination and recreates life.

Something to do—

1. See that your church school has a library. Supply it with good books.
 2. Subscribe to your church paper. Get Christian Endeavor helps. Have some missionary magazine in the library.
 3. Be more diligent in your daily study of the Bible.
- To think About—*
1. What kind of literature do the people of your community read? (Why not make a survey and be sure. Ed.)
 2. What is the best guide for selecting good books?
 3. What are some of the advantages of reading a book for pleasure?

Suggested Hymns—

"Wonderful Words of Life."
"I Love to Tell the Story."

PLAYTIME AT THORSBY (ALABAMA) SUMMER CONFERENCE.

In our summer schools, young people and their leaders learn to play together, and by so doing learn the fine art of cooperation and find for themselves renewal. Much of this experience goes back into the local church when the delegates return home.

so that once again we can present to our members and visitors an attractive and helpful program.

Each of us will find varying degrees of dis-repair and dullness, so each must apply his own remedies, but much can be gained by examining critically these parts:

Pre-Prayer-Service—

Have you allowed the preprayer service to become merely a dull routine? Have you unconsciously stored it away during the winter when the smaller rooms may have been chilled?

Revive your preprayer service! Review its purpose, and ask each endeavor to concentrate on making it mean to them what it should—a real dedication of the program to God, and for the advancement of His Kingdom!

Singing—

Has your singing become listless and "draggy?"

or five meetings so that they may be presented effectively.

Presentation of the Meeting—

Have your leaders fallen into an unconscious habit of half-heartedly presenting their topics?

Do your members concentrate on what is being said or do they merely "sit through" the meetings.

Put vigor into your leading and urge your members to be part of the meetings, not merely spectators.

Offering—

Has the offering become a "collection"—just song book passed around before the benediction?

Make the offering a part of your worship as it should be!

There are many other things which cannot be included in this limited space, but you know the short-comings of your society, so get together and make a chart of those things to

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE

JOSEPH'S READINESS FOR SERVICE.

GOLDEN TEXT: Seest thou a man diligent in his business? He shall stand before kings.—Proverbs 22:29.

LESSON: Genesis 37:39-41.

The career of Joseph reads like a story book. Here was a young man, somewhat pampered by an indulgent old father, and cordially hated by his brothers, sold into slavery in a foreign country, and yet rising to a position second only to the Pharaoh himself, and in a very real sense the saviour of a nation in a great national crisis. Horatio Alger never wrote anything like it. And it is "a true story." We will do well to seek to discover some of the factors or the qualities which made this success possible.

A Young Man Who Believed in Himself.

Joseph believed in himself. Perhaps he was not just as tactful as he might have been, he was perhaps just a little too cocky in his youth, but he had one essential qualification for success then and now—he had confidence in himself, he believed in himself. He had a sense of mission.

"If you think you'll lose you're lost

For out in the world we find,

Success begins with a fellow's will,

It's all in the state of mind.

If you think you're outclassed you are;

You've got to think high to rise,

You've got to be sure of yourself before

You can ever win a prize."

A Young Man Who Dreamed.

"Joseph dreamed a dream." He saw things not only as they were, but as they might become. He had an active imagination and he put it to work. He believed the best was yet to be. He believed ideals were real. He built his castles and then worked to make them come true. Let no man discount the dreamer, the true dreamer. Let every young man and young woman dream dreams, nurture ideals, follow the gleam.

A Young Man Who Made the Most of His Opportunities.

His brothers sold him into slavery. It was enough to discourage and dishearten the young man. Worse still a false accusation resulted in his imprisonment for two years. But Joseph did not whimper or give himself to self-pity. He accepted handicaps as a challenge. He made the most of every opportunity to learn and to serve. He went from strength to strength. Like every other great man by doing the thing next to hand he learned how to do greater things.

A Young Man Who Served.

"And he served them"—this was the characteristic note of Joseph's life. He did not ask how much he was going to get out of a thing. When he saw something that needed to be done, he did it. When he had an opportunity to serve, he served. Nothing was too hard or too humble in the line of duty. And because he was faithful in that which was least, God made him ruler over many things. Service is the way to both greatness and to success.

A Young Man Who Lived by His Highest Convictions.

Joseph had high ideals and he was determined to live by them at whatever cost to himself. When his master's wife tried in one way or another to seduce him, his sense of honor and his loyalty to God stood him in good stead. Because he worshipped the true God he would not sin against Him. How desperately modern young men and young women need the courage of their convictions! As Dr. Roger Babson emphasized in his interesting and inspiring address to the members of the graduating class at Elon last week, the ultimate factors in success are spiritual qualities. There is no substitute for character. In private and in public life, Joseph's integrity of character was the saving element and the secret of his success.

A Young Man Who Had A Sense of Stewardship.

"It is not in me: God shall give Pharaoh an answer of peace." Joseph had confidence in himself as was stated in an earlier section. But Joseph knew that he did not have anything that was not given to him. What he was and what he had he held as a trust from God. And he used it for God. The truly great man is a humble man. The truly great man will hold what he has in stewardship and use it not for selfish ends and purposes, but for the advancement of the Kingdom of God.

A Young Man Who Succeeded.

We do not know how much money Joseph was worth when he died. But we do know that he was rich in character and in a good name which is more to be desired than great riches. He reached a position of eminence, like unto a Prime Minister of today. Undoubtedly he had large means. But Joseph's greatest wealth and greatest heritage to succeeding generations was his success in achieving out of the experiences through which he passed, an integrity of character which even today is a model of young men who aspire to the highest and best.

A Young Man Who Refused to Hold A Grudge.

We shall see in a later lesson Joseph's magnanimity in forgiving those who had wronged him. He was too big a man to hold a grudge. His greatness is nowhere seen to any better advantage than at this point.

A Young Man Who Had Religion.

In the last analysis the secret of Joseph's life was his religious faith. He believed in God, not so much as an intellectual proposition, but as a personal experience. He believed God was his ally in the realm of righteous conduct and humanitarian service. It could be said of him as it was said of John: "There was a man sent from God."

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
Chaplain in the U. S. Navy

MONDAY.

UNACCEPTABLE OFFERINGS.

"Ye have brought that which was taken by violence. . . . Should I accept this at your hand?"—Mal. 1:13.

The prophet complained that the people in their worship brought sacrifices of the worse sort, the lame, the stunted and the sick. We too would criticise this offering. We wonder if we see it as clearly in our own case? We give to the Lord when we think we can spare, we give that which we can cast off without sacrificing anything. We put off prayers till we are sleepy and mentally unfit to talk to any one, much less the Lord. We look after our needs, as we see them, first. Is this not like bringing the lame, the halt and the sick to the altar?

Nothing but our best is worthy of laying upon God's altar.

Prayer—Dear Heavenly Father, Thou hast given Thy best for us. What have we given Thee? Help us give our best for Jesus' sake. Amen.

TUESDAY.

WHY THE UNCERTAINTIES AND FEARS.

"Why are ye so fearful? How is it that ye have no faith?"—Mark 4:40.

It must be remembered that these words are addressed to the disciples who had been with Jesus during all His ministry. If anybody had any faith certainly they should have had, even in the dangerous storm. Jesus was still with them. They could have the faith that we think should have been actually engendered by His physical presence with them. They knew His power.

And yet, are we not just as foolish? Our lives have been crowded with evidences of God's power and His all-comprehensive goodness. Evidences of history pour upon us like an avalanche. What more do we expect? What more can we expect?

"The Lord is a buckler to all that trust in Him." "None that trust in Him shall be desolate." "He shall save them because they trust in him." "Trust in the Lord and do good, and verily thou shalt be fed." Said Job, "Though he slay me, yet will I trust him."

Prayer—O God, help us through Jesus Christ, into a supreme faith. Each day brings its trials and we need Thee. This we ask for Jesus' sake. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

PARTNERS WITH GOD.

"Striving according to his working, which worketh in me mightily."—Col. 1:29.

Paul was certain that the world could never be right without Christ. He was certain that man without Christ was nothing and could be nothing. He was certain that the world would never be what God wanted it to be until man joined Christ in the great plan of salvation. He knew most certainly that he himself was nothing without the Master.

Trusting in ourselves, we are trusting on a broken stick. Our wisdom is folly, and all of our strength comes to failure ultimately. But trusting in Him, we are able to do what He wants us to do, and where He abides there is happiness and peace. To do this, we must strive with him according to His working. His aims must be ours and then all things will be ours.

Prayer—O God, make our every action within the compass of thine own desire. Amen.

THURSDAY.

A HALF-HEARTED EFFORT.

"And he smote twice and stopped . . . (and Elisha said), Thou shouldst have smitten five or six times."—II Kings 13:18-19.

In this act Joash simply displayed one of the greatest weaknesses of human nature—discouragement when we strike and get no results. The philosophy here is, keep on. "If at first you don't succeed, try, try, again."

Like as the arrows were placed in Joash's hands, God places abilities in our hands and commands us to go into His vineyard and work, and whatsoever is right He will give us, yes, good measure, heaped up, pressed down and shaken together, will He give to those that give of themselves to Him. If we will learn this lesson, we will be beating on the ground, so to speak, day and night, till our arrows are broken or worn out and we have nothing else to beat with.

Prayer—Dear Heavenly Father, make us insistent souls. Make Thy everlasting soul to live within us. In His name, we ask it. Amen.

FRIDAY.

A KING'S DECREE.

"The writing which is written in the king's name, and sealed with the king's ring, may no man reverse."—Esther 8:8.

The seal and ring of any king is a sufficient authority for any decree. Though this authority be in the hands of a subject, no man in all the realm dares move contrary to it.

We Christians hardly realize the power we have in the name of the King of kings. It is signed with His name, sealed with the blood of His son, and empowered with the Holy Spirit. In His strength, we are called upon to go forth "conquering and to conquer." If we fail, it must be because we have not used heaven's decree.

Prayer—Our Father, make Thy Word and Thy Spirit our bulwark, our strength and our shield. Amen.

SATURDAY.

GOD'S DRAWINGS.

"He sent from on high, He took me; He drew me out of many waters."—Psalm 18:16.

The sorrows of death surrounded the psalmist like the murky waters of a stormy sea. He was in a sinking boat. The sea was about to close over his head.

But God was round about him, even as the deadly waters were round about him. God "took" him, as the sea was ready to take him. God drew him out of the waters, as definitely as they sought to draw him down into their horrid depths.

"Many waters" compass us also about for destruction. They are vast, reaching to the ends of the earth. They are deep, reaching to the confines of hell. They are strong, and a man's power is as nothing against them. But ours is the God of the sea as of the land. Can we not trust Him? Can we do less than trust Him wholly?

Prayer—Save us, Christ of the seas, for the deep waters go over our souls. Save us for Thy name's sake. Amen.
—Amos R. Wells.

SUNDAY.

THE LONG WARFARE.

"He shall bruise thy head, and thou shalt bruise his heel."—Genesis 3:15.

Ah, the age-long conflict between man and the devil! Now one is on top and now the other. Now man bruises the serpent's head, and now the serpent plants his poisonous fangs in the man's heel. There seems no end to the warfare.

Is it an equal warfare in our life? Is it a see-saw between right and

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D., Pastor.

PILATE AND THE CROSS.

"And Pilate called together the chief priests and the rulers and the people, and said unto them, Behold, I having examined him before you, found no fault in this man touching those things whereof you accuse him; no, neither yet has Herod . . . What then shall I do with Jesus?"—Luke 23: 13-14; Matt. 27: 22.

I. Pilate called together . . . the People—And since that day, whether the world itself has wished it or not, it has largely called together to consider Jesus. It was perhaps the first time a ruler had issued a general call to the people to come together for that purpose, but it was not the last time. Whenever the nations of the earth sit in conference, whether they so state it or not, they are considering the very spirit and principles of Jesus. More and more it shall be so, even as the model prayer is answered, "Thy Kingdom Come."

Luke tells us who were true: "The chief priests," "the rulers," and "the people." What a group! Headed by Pilate, followed closely by the priests, then the rulers, and last, but not least, the people! How differently they thought on almost any subject—Roman and Jew; priest and people; rich and poor; learned and illiterate—and yet on one matter, they had been molded into a common moving passion—namely, the crucifixion of Christ!

How fickle were the hearts of the people! Yesterday they sang his hosannas, today they cry his crucifixion; yesterday they waved palm trees above his head, today they strike him with the staff upon his face; yesterday they strewed the flowers of heaven in his path, today they beat his back with the implements of Rome.

While there are so many in that crowd which was called together there are some we sorely miss. Where is Nicodemus? He is an official in the court—one of the seventy judges upon the bench! Where are Peter, and James and John? The had followed Jesus into the most sacred places. Where are they? Where are scores and scores of the members of the church today? Where are they now? Why aren't they here? The people have been called together by the Holy Spirit of God himself to "consider Jesus," why have they not come? The Bride and the Spirit say come; why did they not answer in person? Where are the followers of Jesus? Too early in the morning? They had been with Him the whole night through until now! Some of them asleep at home? Those who were awake could have, and perhaps did, call them before now! The "people" had been called by Pilate, how did the Disciples escape the summons!

If I had been in Palestine
A poor disciple I had been;
I had not risked of purse or limb
All to forsake and follow him.

With the glad crowd that sang the psalm,
I too had sung, and strewed the palm;
Then slunk away in dastard shame
When the High Priest denounced His name.

Beside the cross when Mary prayed,
A great way off, I too had stayed;
Not even in that hour had dared,
And for my dying Lord declared.

But listen, my friends, while Jesus stood alone in Pilate's hall, and alone upon the Cross of Calvary, thanks be unto God, he has not had to stand alone since, for in that self-same hour the poor thief on the cross began to head an humble march of humble men which has not ceased unto this very day! When pity and fear began to reduce the mob, more courage began to be begotten in the hearts of men, and women, and even children. than this old world has been able to muster or measure; and everywhere there are those who love him, and would even now die for him.

II. "I Have Examined Him."—Pilate, at least, was a judge, and knew and honored the processes of Roman justice. He examined Jesus. Let that be said in his favor. He examined Jesus. He did not cast him aside without consideration. He did not pass him up with a haughty sneer. He did not strut along in his own way in sheer indifference. He examined him. He put his whole mind and soul into the matter of going into and through the case of Jesus. He was not trying to get religion, he was trying to get the truth. For that he humbly asked, and that he found! And when the facts were all before him he said of Jesus, "I find no fault in him." Jesus Christ had passed the examination before God and the angels in the Garden of Gethsemane, and now he makes good in a court of common justice before men!

He will make good in your court, if your court makes good! If the court of your conscience will hear all the facts, foot up all the figures, and put common ordinary faith in the truths you yourself find, Jesus will pass par in your court. But how can a man know him if he will not consider him? How can a home be transformed by him into which he is never invited? Pilate asked him what is truth? And when he was through receiving his answer, he said to the whole people, "Behold the Man."

If Jesus Christ is a man—
And only a man—I say,
That of all mankind I cleave to him,
And to him will I cleave away.

If Jesus Christ is a god—
And the only God—I swear,
I will follow him through heaven and hell,
The earth, the sea, the air!

III. "What Shall I Do With Jesus?"—Like Judas, Pilate chose the strong, well-nigh invincible crowd. Knowing more of the results than Pilate could at that time know, perhaps it was hard for him to turn down the strength and the courage of Caiaphas and his crew to side with the forsaken, homeless Peasant, who did not even speak for himself. The surface is so much before us it is hard to choose like God! "God has chosen the weak things of the world . . . and things which are despised, hath God chosen." Judas did not see much in front of Jesus and the disciples; perhaps Pilate saw far less. Judas chose Caiaphas; Pilate chose Caesar. With what results? Judas, a suicide in Jerusalem, and Pilate a suicide in Spain. The strength they chose was naught.

What shall I do with Jesus? Ignore him? Maybe! Strike him? Surely, if you wish! Crucify him? It has often been done afresh! Or love him, and serve him? But you say: The church is so weak! And I say: Was Caiaphas strong; or Rome right? The band of disciples was too weak to follow Jesus all the way to the cross, for the Gospels say: "They all forsook him, and fled," but weakness became strength, and the march of those eleven men could not be stopped by the crowd, or the cross. Humanity can never repay them, nor their Christ, for the way they and he suffered until it shall become like them, willing to suffer to the bitter, triumphant end for the sake of the right.

What shall I do with Jesus? Why, step over on his side, of course, however lowly and despised it may seem. I had rather kneel by the side of the dying, than stand by Caiaphas, or even Caesar himself.

The Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

There is no letter from the Orphanage this week, but its absence speaks most poignantly of the sorrow which the early Sunday morning news of the death of the Chairman of its Board of Trustees brought to Superintendent and children alike. Mr. Johnston was absent from the Orphanage attending the funeral of Mr. Darden on Tuesday in Suffolk, Virginia, and did not return home soon enough to get a letter for his page this week. J. T. K.

"I BRING YOU JOY."

A ninety-page book by this title has recently come to my desk. It was written by Rev. and Mrs. A. L. Kramer and published by them in New York of this year.

It is an interesting little volume dealing with the joy side of religion. Mr. Kramer was a retired business man at 38, who soon became tired of leisure. Philosophy and psychology lured him for a while, but failure to find joy in them, the loss of property, and the prayers of his wife led him to experiment with religion.

The thesis of the book is that God can and will guide those who yield to His will. Surrender of self makes possible the acceptance of the free grace of God that purifies desires, gives direction to conduct, and puts joy into successful living. The only thing a person can do, according to this book, is to desire the will of God to be done, make a complete surrender to that will, and follow the guiding Spirit. Some will not agree with the authors in many statements, but all who read will find a stimulus to surrender life that leads to happiness.

Among the fifteen chapters are these: "On Prayer," "God and Man," "We Proclaim the Gospel," "Goodness and the Problem of Sickness," "Love and Happiness," "Increasing the Area of Our Surrender," and "A Business Man's Search for God."

The price of the book is only 50c and it is well worth the price.

In Memoriam

ROBBINS.

We, the members of the Randleman Christian Church and Sunday School wish to pay tribute to the memory of S. G. Robbins, who passed away May 7, 1937.

Bro. Robbins was superintendent of our Sunday School for a number of years. He was always on the job and ready to render his service anywhere it was needed. He was loved by all who knew him. Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we are grateful for what his life has meant to us, for the peaceful, kind, and happy life that seemed to be his.

2. That we realize that God doeth all things well and, while we mourn the loss of one who meant much to his church and community, we bow in humble submission to His divine will.

3. That we extend to his wife and family our deepest sympathy, realizing that they have lost a good, kind, and loving husband and father.

W. G. LAMB,
A. P. GASTER,
ELI FREEMAN.

KLAPP.

Mrs. Ella Suitt Klapp, relict of the late lamented Rev. P. T. Klapp, died at her home at Elon College, North Carolina, Saturday A. M., May 15th, and was buried in the Elon cemetery after a funeral service in Witley Memorial auditorium, Elon College, Monday, May 17th. Mrs. Klapp was a quiet, retiring, consecrated Christian woman and at the time of her death was 58 years of age. She was a native of Rockingham County, North Carolina, daughter of the late George W. and Sarah Sharp Suitt. She was a member of the New Lebanon Christian Church, Rockingham County.

Mrs. Klapp is survived by a daughter, Miss Ruth Klapp of Elon College; two stepdaughters, Mrs. F. E. Green, Raleigh, North Carolina and Mrs. C. O. Robins, Richmond, Virginia, two stepsons, De Witt Klapp of Richmond, Virginia and Henry Klapp, San Francisco, California. Two sisters, Mrs. W. T. Moore, Reidsville, N. C., Route No. 1, and Mrs. Hardee Shelton, Rockingham County.

The funeral services were conducted by Rev. J. W. Patton of Elon College and Dr. C. H. Rowland, Greensboro, North Carolina. "This is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith."

J. O. ATKINSON.

FAISON.

Leonidas Beauregard Faison, son of Dempsey and Sarah White Faison, departed this life and went to the reward of the faithful Friday, April 23, 1937, at the age of 75 years.

Brother Faison was a native of Sussex County, Virginia, and a resident of this county all his life. He was a life-long member of the Christian Church, a charter member of Burton's Grove Christian Church, and also a charter member of the Wakefield Christian Church. Brother Faison was a loyal and faithful worker and always had the interest of his church at heart.

He was married to Miss Essie L. West, June 14, 1899, which proved to be a very happy and successful union. Brother and Sister Faison were an inspiration to all who came to know them for their loyalty to the Master's cause and for their Christ-like living. To them were born five children—three sons and two daughters, who survive them. They are: Franklin Faison, of Staunton, Virginia; L. B., and West Faison, of Roselle, New Jersey; and Mrs. Ruby Peeble, of Elizabeth, New Jersey; and Mrs. S. G. Nugent, Richmond, Virginia; one grandson, West Faison, Roselle, New Jersey. He is also survived by the following brothers and sisters: Miss Maud Faison, Mrs. Etta Lane, Mr. F. F. Faison, and Mr. R. L. Faison of Wakefield; Mr. J. J. Faison of Waverly, Virginia.

A devoted husband shall be missed by a loyal companion, a loving father shall no longer counsel and advise his children, brothers and sisters shall miss him, a church which has long been the recipient of his counsel and support shall miss him in the flesh, but shall live on in the hearts of those who knew and loved him, for he labored not in vain and truly his works shall follow him.

We therefore commend to those who mourn his departure the God of his life and the Christ of his love.

The funeral services were conducted from the home in Wakefield by the writer, assisted by Rev. R. H. Humphrie of the Methodist Church and Rev. C. C. Jones of Halifax, Virginia. The interment was in the Wakefield Cemetery.

wrong? Can we never be sure of ourselves, whether we shall please God today or displease Him? Nothing is more unsatisfactory than that.

And it need not be such an unsatisfactory life. On our side may be the only Power that can vanquish the devil and his cohorts. For our Helper we may have the One who will in the end defeat the devil. We have only to ask Him, and He will be our constant and effectual Ally.

Prayer—Make our every day a victory, O Christ. And may we have no thought but of triumph through Thy might. Amen.

What Do You Think?

WHY SEND MISSIONARIES TO NON-CHRISTIAN PEOPLE?

Aren't they happy?

Why bother them?

These questions are often asked by Church people who have a right to know the answer. This writer has sometimes wondered himself and has looked for evidences. Christians are not justified in working blindly without some reasonable assurance of what results may be expected.

The two pictures on this page show something of the evidence of Christianity at work. The one above presents the Doctor-Priest from Africa. This person is supposed to understand the gods better than anyone and to present the message of the gods to the people as well as to heal the bodies of the sick. It seems to be fair to say that the witch doctor is the final product of a certain type of religion. It is likewise fair to say that a mother and child may well be illustrative of Christianity at its best.

WHY THE DIFFERENCE?

Apparently there is a great difference between the inner experience of the persons whose pictures you now see. One face registers fear, doubt and hatred. The other is equally as full of joy, peace and hope. Why the difference in these persons? They both live in the same country with the same surroundings. The one difference is Christianity.

It may not be right to say that happiness is the ultimate goal toward which to strive, but surely the development of those inner characteristics which bring the most wholesome and lasting happiness is worth striving for. This is what Christianity does. It releases the inner springs of love and drives out fear.

When you are asked to make an offering for missions think of the differences it will make in the people who hear the message that you will help to give them by your offering.

JUNE

And what is so rare as a day in June
Then, if ever come perfect days;
Then heaven tries earth if it be in tune,
And over it softly her warm ear lays;
Whether we look or whether we listen,
We hear life murmur or see it glisten.

Every clod feels a stir of might,
An instinct within that reaches and towers,
And, groping blindly above it for light,
Climbs to a soul in grass and flowers.

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

Miss Pattie Lee Coghill has been at her home near Henderson, North Carolina, recently because of the illness of her mother who had improved at the last report.

The Virginia Valley S. S. & C. E. Convention is in session Thursday of this week at Mt. Olivet (G) Church. Rev. and Mrs. Joe A. French, of Ocean View (Norfolk, Va.), are among the guest speakers.

In addition to his large pastoral field, Rev. Roy D. Coulter is editing a Daily Short Sermon column which appears in the Northern Virginia Daily.

Our Winson-Salem (N. C.) Church has planned a two-hour Sunday morning service beginning at 10 o'clock. They will begin with class sessions, then a brief worship and then the regular church worship service.

The North Carolina and Virginia S. S. & C. E. Convention is in session Thursday and Friday of this week at the Bethlehem Christian Church, located at Altamahaw, North Carolina, on Route 54, between Reidsville and Burlington. The Pilgrim Fellowship is in charge of the Thursday evening program.

Winston-Salem (N. C.) Church received four new members during the month of May, three by letters of transfer and one on confession. They had Roll Call Day the last Sunday in the month, and of their 73 members 46 answered present in person and three by message. They report a very fine service with several visitors.

The First Christian Church of Portsmouth (Va.) held a series of services last week with the pastor, Rev. R. L. House, speaking on the following topics: "A Pillow or a Pillar?," "Addition by Subtraction, or the Sin of Being too Busy;" "I am Joseph;" "And Abram was Seventy-five Years Old When He Departed Out of Haran;" "The Keys of the Kingdom, or the Enduring Church."

Regardless of the unfavorable crop conditions in Eastern North Carolina and South Carolina for the past few years, Rev. A. R. Flowers keeps busy at some religious task. He contends that there is more than one way in which a person can render profitable

Christian service, and since having had a chance to read some of the many letters that he received from appreciative people, I am sure he is one hundred per cent right.

MORGAN REUNION.

On Saturday morning, May 29, 1937, at about 7:30, the writer left his home, 3507 Bainbridge St., Norfolk, Va., with his brother, Silas A. Morgan, and his wife and two daughters, Lucille and Ella May of Newport News, Va., for the old Morgan community in Moore County, North Carolina. We had a lovely trip out of Va. and into our home-state, with a pleasant stop in Raleigh, the State capital, and by the middle of the afternoon, we were in the old home community enjoying the scenes of the days of our childhood.

My brother, Silas and I visited that Saturday afternoon the old mill, known in our day as "The Monroe Mill," but now is known as "Brower's Mill," where I used to carry the wheat and corn to have ground into meal and flour for our family. From the old mill we went to the old home where our parents raised their large family of nine boys and four girls. Here we enjoyed viewing again the old hiding places, and other scenes of our early days. The old barn, the spring, and the sacred spot where our parents, and other members of the family are buried, brought back tender memories of long ago.

But the real purpose of this trip was the annual "Home Coming" of the Morgan family. So after a good night's rest at the home of my brother, Nealie J. Morgan, at Carthage, N. C., we went on Sunday morning, May 30, 1937, to old Tyra M. E. Church, that now stands on the ground of the old school house, where most of the Morgan family first went to school, for our "Home Coming" service. Here we were met by hundreds of our family relatives, and a day of great fellowship was enjoyed. The first hour was spent in meeting and greeting our kin-folks and friends. The next hour was spent in a service of worship in the old church. This writer being the only Morgan preacher of the gathering, was the speaker of the occasion, and brought a simple message on "Keepers of Three Homes." A trio was sung by N. J., S. A., and J. F. Morgan, entitled, "Take Time to Be Holy," and J. F. Morgan sang a solo, "The Land Where the Roses Never Fade."

J. M. Morgan, a cousin of the writer, was chairman of our committee on arrangements, and he and his committee saw that every thing was carried out properly. After the service in the church, the people gathered about the long well-filled table, and enjoyed a most delicious meal, and then visited some more, and in the late afternoon returned again to their various homes, happy over the thought of having met once more such a large number of their relatives and friends.

The committee on arrangements met in the afternoon and voted to continue these annual "Home Coming" services, naming as the date for the meeting the last Sunday in May of each year. The matter of our next year's speaker was left with the chairman of the committee.

At the evening hour of this day of happy fellowship, this writer had the privilege of speaking to a large audience in the Carthage Methodist Church, where he was again blessed with the privilege of meeting many more of his friends of other days.

On behalf of the Home Coming Committee, and all the relatives of the Morgan family, I want to thank every one who helped to make the day success. We are especially grateful for the many friends of the family, who, though not related, have done much to make the Home Coming, not only a success, but a great blessing, as well. May God bless you every one, and may we all have many other such happy days on earth ere our Heavenly Father calls us to that greater home coming on the other shore.

J. F. MORGAN.

STEWARDSHIP IN OUR CHURCHES OF THE SOUTHEAST.

The Executive Committee of the General Council of Congregational and Christian Churches has designated this bi-ennium, 1936-38, of our church as a Stewardship Period for special study and emphasis in all the churches of our Congregational-Christian fellowship. It suggests to all churches the importance and value of introducing a stewardship program in a church, say for a period of a month, when stewardship study and instruction shall have right of way in the church program and in all the departments of the church.

If such a program were carried out in all of our churches in the Southeast, there would be a real deepening of the spiritual life. Many of those inactive members would be reenlisted. The financial atmosphere in many churches would become a joy. Benevolence would be properly cared for. Methods of securing church funds would be greatly improved. Try a real honest-to-goodness stewardship program in your church for a month and see what will happen!

SUGGESTIONS FOR LOCAL CHURCH PROGRAMS

1. Preaching—Series of sermons; pulpit make it plain that Christian stewardship is a basic, spiritual, vital message of which character is the objective; a principle on which daily life must be organized in order to be fully Christian.

2. Study Classes—Whole church studying stewardship for four or six weeks; classes for all ages and groups young people, adults, women's society, brotherhood, and church officials.

1. Literature—Distribute carefully selected literature; with comment from the pulpit and in bulletin.

4. Church School—Encourage some one quarter; prepare the teachers to classes to use stewardship text-books teach stewardship.

5. Special Speakers—For an occasion; before certain groups; at a supper, five minute talks by interested laymen.

6. Pageants and Plays—Dramatize stewardship; readings; recitations; dialogues; playlets; and pageants.

7. Institutes—Local church all-day institute; small group of neighboring churches; intensive study with strong leaders; round table discussions; and forums.

8. Circulating Library—Several books of recent date interpretation of Christian stewardship; in charge of someone deeply interested who will place and follow up the books; get a book read in every home.

9. Illustrate—Charts; mottoes; bulletins.

10. Church Night Program—Dinner or buffet supper; stewardship worship service; classes for different ages; assembly period with address, stereopticon, pageant, seminar.

11. Contests—Posters; oratorical; reading with assigned material; essays with assigned book and subject.

12. Fellowship of Stewardship—Teaching of the principles of stewardship which does not lead to their definite practice is vain; definitely enlist and enroll as many as possible.

Out of such an intensive program for a month—preaching, study classes, reading, etc.—stewardship principles will become clear and a Christian philosophy of acquiring, spending, giving, using, sharing will be developed to the joy of those participating. Begin now for a Fall program in your church.

The good news is, that the Kiwanis Club International (therefore local) has decided to take a stand against such a sacrilege, which desecrates the fine and noble things of life that ought to be revered. This organization is memorializing college and high school men and women of this country to express themselves militantly against this "all wise" stand.

When it can be understood that any business using pictures and quotations of outstanding amateur and professional athletes in every sport, in a nation wide campaign obviously designed to encourage the use of such products by young boys and girls, and without detrimental effect upon athletes' wind and physical capacity, and even furthermore stating that the use of these things aid them in their accomplishments, it will then be

GOOD NEWS.

Have you noticed how liquor and cigarette advertising have turned to the fine, pure things of life in the exploitation of their products? Notice the pictures of beautiful flowers, horses and birds, beautiful girls and women, strong stalwart men, athletes, locomotive engineers; and the descriptions of "purity and beauty," "healthy nerves," "nerve control," "grand life in energy," "it's all nectar," "mellow glow," "golden wedding," etc., all used in depicting like qualities to these products and stating their purpose to be the "education of understood that such uses are a base misrepresentation and a desecration to that which is high and holy.

It is wonderfully encouraging to our optimism to believe that there is a move on foot branding such advertising as misrepresentations and contrary to established facts; that it is mercenary and unprincipled; that the righteous fathers and citizens are being called upon to oppose such a sacrilege and anything designed to encourage the use of these things.

When these advertising interests can be caused to stop using "purity and innocence" in its various forms, in telling of the quality of intoxicants and cigarette smoking, a glorious step forward will have been taken in the truth about things and in Christian usefulness to mankind. Here is hoping.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgement and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

TO THE COUNTRY CHURCHES IN N. C.

This is intended for members of country churches in North Carolina, but if you want to read it, just keep right on to the end. It is addressed to those churches because the writer is a member of one of them. He remembers being a deacon and superintendent in Mt. Bethel, and never misses a chance to go back to the home church. There is a little message he wants to give to these country friends and relatives of his this week.

Make it a habit to read your Church Paper. Sometimes it may not seem like it is worth the reading, but if you keep on reading it week after week you will find it surprising how much you learn about what the big Church of which you are a part is doing. You may often differ from what you read, but just remember that this difference of opinion is one of the fine things about your Church. Do not be afraid to read what your friends say in the Church Paper. It will do you good to read. Reading has given many opportunities that would never have come without it.

Attend not only the local church, but the conventions, conferences, and training schools in your section. It may be difficult to do sometimes, but if you work the crops right it will be possible for you to get away for just about all such meetings. In fact, you will have just as much to eat, and you will live much happier. I know, for I have tried it. If you attend the Elon Summer School of Leadership Training, the Sunday School Convention, and the Annual Conference, and such other meetings as may be scheduled for your section, you will soon know much more about the Church and the religion which you profess than you ever thought you would know. Don't be content just to work and worry, without learning and worshipping.

Take pride in your church. The building is dedicated to God. The ground is the garden of God. The people are the children of God. Never be ashamed of your church. Serve it and sacrifice for it, if that is possible. The first ten dollar gift ever made by this writer was for weatherboarding and roof for his own church. It was a little difficult to give, but that gift opened the way to greater joys and activities. Give to your church like you believe in its worth and it will give back to you untold blessings. And remember that the local membership is only a small part of the larger group in our Church and that our Church is only a small part of the Church Universal that includes all the children of God. It is a big, fine fellowship of which you are a part. And we need that fellowship. Life is too short for it to be lonely. Make friends. Love your neighbors near and far. Learn what they are doing, how they live, what struggles they have to face, and ask God to help you to be brotherly to them. In this way you will find a constantly growing list of friends. One of the richest heritages of my life is a list of friends that reach around the earth and even up into heaven. Be proud of your friends, who are members of the Church.

These suggestions are made in the most friendly fashion, because I like to think that you and I are relatives. Born and reared among the foot-hills of the old North State, we each have something in common. I wanted to write you this letter with the hope that it might help some of you to live a little happier. If you feel inclined, write to me as editor of this paper. It will be appreciated and will help. Thanks.

DIFFERENCES OF OPINION.

In recent issues of "The Christian Sun," including this one, different writers have not agreed on several matters. This is especially true concerning the relative importance of the Ten Commandments as voted by college students, and "Share-Croppers in Georgia." The editor is glad to have people express different points of view. No one has all the truth within his head. Each one must read and when we share one with the other all of us are enriched.

It is told on good authority that Judge John V. Sees, who was moderator of the General Council of Congregational and Christian Church at its last session, sought for years for a church in which he would be free to believe as best he could, a church in which every person had the liberty to think for himself. Finally, he discovered the Christian Church. It was a little church, with a little building and a little program, but one of the fundamental principles of that church states that every individual shall have the liberty of conscience concerning what is right and wrong. It is said that for years Judge Sees insisted in his church and in his conference that every person should have a right to express his own opinion and that nobody could bring charges against one because of his faith. This is a fundamental principle of the Christian Church and of the Congregational Church as well. This principle has cost those who have stood for it much suffering on occasion, and it is a heritage of which we may be justly proud.

Therefore, brethren, debate the issues involved in the Christian program as much as you like. Of course, you will stay away from personalities and personal criticisms and deal with ideas, attitudes, program, or the like. Perhaps in so doing some new idea will dawn upon the Church and progress will be made.

GIVE THEM THEIR WISH.

News reports from Monts, France, say that when Edward, the Duke of Windsor, and Mrs. Wallis Warfield had succeeded in getting both the civil and church ceremonies performed they asked for the privilege of going quietly to the place they had chosen for themselves and to be permitted to live quiet and useful lives without being in the spotlight of publicity. This is a good wish and one they richly deserved to have granted them by a curious world.

Since Edward chose on December 10th of last year to live with the woman he loved, rather than be the king of England, he and his beloved have been mercifully followed by the gaze of the world. They have had no privacy. The British Government had succeeded in doing what it wanted to do. The Church of England has preserved its dignity, and now that the lovers are safely married and have the good wishes of millions around the earth, it is time for the rest of us to attend to our own business and let them find whatever happiness may be in store for those who have defied the rest of the world in search of their personal enjoyment.

J. M. DARDEN.

The facts concerning the life of Mr. J. M. Darden have been told in the daily papers and will probably be told more in detail by other writers in this paper. He was born and reared in Isle of Wight County, Virginia, and made his home in Suffolk, not many miles from his birthplace. By hard work, business ability and good fortune, he was able to accumulate quite a bit of wealth. During recent years he has made real contributions to our Southern Church, not only by his gifts, but also by his service. As assistant secretary of missions and chairman of the Board of Trustees of the Orphanage, he has served in a fine way. Going here and there among the churches he came to know their needs, and many of those churches have succeeded in installing organs, refurnishing their buildings, or erecting new buildings because of the inspiration and contribution which Mr. Darden gave to them. He will be greatly missed in the years that lie ahead.

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER.

When Mr. Rockefeller passed quietly away just before reaching the century mark, the newspapers were very kind in their criticisms of a man who had been severely criticized by those same newspapers. Mr. Rockefeller was one of our first Americans to build up a large fortune and is said to have possessed perhaps the largest fortune in America. The methods by which he accumulated wealth were criticized severely in the days of his greatest activity, but editors now say that he was a product of his time, rather than the cruel crushing sort of person that he was supposed to have been.

There are those who like to remember that when he started out as a young man he became a tither, that through the years he was a liberal contributor to education, religion, and many types of benevolence, having given away probably half a billion dollars. The people in Ormond, Florida, will long remember gratefully "Neighbor John," and all may profit by following the example of this very rich man who, even when in travel, had time for scripture and a blessing before eating. One excellent recommendation for the character of Mr. Rockefeller is the type of son and grandsons he leaves to carry on now that he is gone.

SHALL IT BE WAR?

The civil war in Spain occasionally threatens to break over the border and include the remainder of the world, certainly Europe. The German and Italian flare-up recently threatened to break the peace of Europe and start the long talked of war. The good judgment of England and France refrain the fiery hands of Hitler and Mussolini for the time being. Americans may be grateful for this service, for it is a protection to us as well as to the people in Europe. We talk neutrality, but if Europe goes to war we are sure to be drawn into it. It is well, therefore, for our state department to work definitely for peace while another part of the government talks neutrality. If we were to spend half as much to sustain peace as we do to prepare for war, the chances are that we would get along better.

Our economic system is now in the midst of a very serious war itself. There has been bloodshed, and unless labor leaders and industrialists can learn cooperation, rather than conflict, the end is not yet. If people could learn that war never wins, whether war is in a family, between neighbors, economic groups or national units, civilization might have a chance to make progress. Until yet, we have not learned it. The capitalist fights for profits, and the laborer fights for his rights.

It is the business of the Church to bring a message of peace to those who are in conflict. It is not the business of the Church to develop hatred, conflict and carnage. It is not time for the Church to sit idly by. These should be busy days for all who know the Lord. It is the business of the Church to introduce the Prince of Peace in the councils of labor unions, industrial boards, and national councils. This is no little job, but it will answer the question "Shall there be war?"

F. C. L.

Misjudged by a fellow missionary, Livingstone gave up his house and garden at Mabotsa, with all the toil and money they had cost him, rather than have a scandal before the heathen, and began in a new place the labor of house and school building, and gathering the people around him. His colleague was so struck with his generosity that he said had he known his intention, he never would have spoken a word against him. Parting with his garden cost him a great pang. "I like a garden," he wrote, "but Paradise will make amends for all our privations here."

"Luck means the hardships and privations which you have not hesitated to endure; the long nights you have devoted to work. Luck means the appointments you have never failed to keep; the trains you have never failed to catch. Every successful man has done the best he could with conditions as he found them, and not waited until next year for better."

Were I to pray for a taste which should stand me in good stead under every variety of circumstances and be a source of happiness and cheerfulness to me during life and a shield against its ills, however, things might go amiss, and the world frown upon me, it would be a taste for reading.—Sir John Herschel.

When one door closes, another opens; but we often look so long and regretfully upon the closed door that we do not see the one which has opened for us. Defeat is nothing but education; it is the first step toward something better.—The Royal Bank Magazine.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Speaking of a great man, a devoted friend said of him: "He was so human." This description was expressed in a spirit of praise and commendation. But the speaker did not define his standard of human "human." Sometimes it may suggest a lowering of standards and making allowances for human weakness and moral depravity. What does it mean to be "human," in the ordinary use of that word? That is an important question.

Without entering into the theological implications concerning human nature, one might pass over these disputed questions by saying that Jesus Christ embodied the finest revelation of human nature in his life among men on the earth. He represented, in His life and work, the highest and best human ideals and spiritual aspirations. He was a picture of God's idea of a real man—a man with a superb human nature. The man who is "human" will have a touch of the spirit of Jesus Christ. In spite of the doctrine of "total depravity" it is not the normal function of human beings to live in the lowlands of unbelief and sin, when they may look unto the hills where the power of God is available for victorious living.

On the other hand one must study Jesus Christ to know how to deal with erring humanity. Jesus said: "learn of Me, for I am meek and lowly of heart." Jesus gave the world an example of dignity and humility, power and gentleness, judgment and mercy, punishment and kindness. He knew when to speak burning words of warning; He knew the science of human kindness to little children; and He always suited the word to the deed and moved multitudes by His greatness and simplicity. "Never man spake like this man." He was human. Yet He was divine. No person is really human until he touches the source of divine spiritual power.

This is a time when ministers are importuned to lay aside the trappings of the priesthood and dress like laymen. This revolt against the "ministerial attitude" has affected not only the matter of dress, but also the method of preaching. Many people want the minister to preach like a layman. That is to say—there is a demand for a type of preaching that does not make an appeal to the emotions, nor challenge the human will. Of course this demand does not represent the great majority of the people in the churches. But it is there, and it plays a part in moulding public sentiment. People will go to a movie and weep over a sentimental episode, and say it was delightful. But if the minister, under the spell of spiritual enthusiasm, touches the fountain of their tears, they bite their lips or turn the leaves of the hymn book to stifle their emotions, and go back home criticizing the emotional service of the church.

"He was so human." That may be a compliment, or it may be a reflection. It depends upon the definition of the word "human." A man does not understand his "human" characteristics until he finds God. Jesus Christ makes new definitions of life for those who find Him. There is an old saying: "to err is human." That is only a partial truth. To do right is human. To walk with God is human. To be a Christian is human. To hold high standards of faith and conduct is human. To be clean in speech is human. To forgive is human.

A $1,500 LUNCHEON.

Don't get excited. You will not be asked to pay this for a luncheon, nor did anyone else pay such a price, but a movement did begin at a luncheon, held at the writer's home, Commencement day, Wednesday, May 26th, that resulted in more than $1,500 for the college.

Dr. Roger Babson, Mr. Thurmond Chatham, Dr. and Mrs. H. S. Hardcastle, Col. J. E. West, and L. E. Smith, Jr., a member of this year's graduating class were honored guests. After the blessing by Dr. Babson, Dr. Babson remarked that he had read my annual report and asked if it were true that the girls at Elon College slept in double beds. I replied in the affirmative. He said that this was a disgrace and that if $1500 would provide single beds for the girls' dormitories and if we would raise the entire amount by Saturday night of that week, he would give $250. Mr. Thurmond Chatham promptly said that he did not want to see New England money go out of North Carolina and that he would give $250. Dr. Babson reminded me that the full amount must be raised by Saturday night. The full amount was raised before Saturday night, and Dr. Babson was so notified.

The following members of the Board of Trustees and friends of the college donated to this fund:

Dr. Roger W. Babson . . .	$ 250.00
Thurmond Chatham	250.00
Dr. and Mrs. H. Shelton Smith	25.00
Dr. W. H. Boone	50.00

The beds will be purchased and properly installed in the girls' rooms ready for the opening in September. This is a need of long standing, and everyone interested in the college will rejoice that it has been met.

One improvement calls for another. What a fine thing it would be if the rooms in West Dormitory could be redecorated. If there are others who would like to help with such an undertaking, any suggestion or assistance would be greatly appreciated.

Elon College is greatly indebted and profoundly grateful to everyone who has contributed to this worthy cause.

THE PROBLEM OF ABUNDANCE.

When the creeping paralysis of the depression set in, the first complaint was about the scarcity of money. But most of that which we called money, was not money, but credit based on money values. Values had changed, and being downward, had disturbed credit structures. Little money is needed when credit is plentiful. When credit disappears we resort to the use of money.

What actually happened, then, was first the shrinkage of credit due to inflated values on which credit had been too far extended. Credit, seeing the coming danger, was attempting to get back to a port of safety. This situation in turn, created a greater demand for money; and it was at this point we discovered a shortage of cash in circulation to meet our needs, many of which we had been supplying with credit. Statisticians began to show that we had more money per capita than ever. It was not in cir-culatation, and even had it been, such statements meant little or nothing to the individual who had less or none of the per person money supply. It was at this point we began inquiry as to the whereabouts of our huge amount of money for circulation purposes. Although many banks were not making loans, presumably for the lack of cash assets for that purpose, we discovered that a large per cent of our banks were actually losing money because of interest being paid on cash deposits with few places where this currency could be safely placed for reinvestment.

Thus, our first distress was the need of money. Ironically, this distress came in the midst of an abundance of money. We kept talking about the shortage of money, when in reality we had a money abundance. The machinery for its circulation had ceased to function.

Washington began to pour out public funds to help feed the hungry, while millions of bushels of wheat, corn, potatoes, and other food supplies were stored in touching distance of bread lines.

We are now getting far enough away from the picture to see the folly and stupidity of curbing farm production in a time when millions were living off husks. We plowed under growing cotton when a third of the nation was sorely in need of more clothing. We reduced acreage in foodstuffs when the army of the unemployed was half starved.

Our problem then, and our problem now, is not how to create a scarcity, but how to solve the problem of abundance. Our need is not to curb, but to increase, farm production. We must discard the economic theory of over-production. You cannot have over-production in the midst of need. We must place our thought on how to increase consumption, not through waste, but by intelligent usage. We cannot successfully fight volume production, a child of our genius. Our job is to help create a demand; supply will be governed accordingly.

With our great natural resources, inventive genius, personal resourcefulness, ambition to live better, to live happier, and our natural inclination for forwardness of enterprise, our problem is not that of creating and controlling a scarcity, but wisely distributing an abundance.

We can and we will solve the problem. Signs are now in evidence. How rapidly the solution comes and how well the job is done depends upon the wisdom of leaders we continue to choose to complete the task.

A LETTER TO THE EDITOR.

Dear Sir:

We rejoiced when an article entitled "The Share-Cropper in Georgia," by Miss Emily Dexter, appeared in the May 13th issue of THE CHRISTIAN SUN. It was just the type of article that one might expect from the pen of Miss Dexter, who, as a teacher of Philosophy and Psychology, has learned the art of expressing the truth in clear, accurate, unimpassioned English.

You will understand our surprises, therefore, when we turned the pages of our May 27th issue of THE CHRISTIAN SUN and discovered the Suffolk Letter of Dr. I. W. Johnson criticizing this article.

The fact that Miss Dexter happens to be a member of the present writer's church has no bearing upon the case. This letter is in defense of a principle and not a personality. If we state, by the way, that Miss Dexter is one of the most consecrated Christian personalities we know, we shall only be adding our testimony to the hidden evidence of her own article that this is so.

Dr. Johnson has made sweeping charges which we feel should not go unchallenged. He begins with the statement that "It is not the purpose of this writer to question statistical statements made in this article." A very excellent beginning, but almost immediately he adds, "She has given us only a part of the truth." We are a bit confused by this latter statement. Miss Dexter has confined her article to her subject "The Share-Cropper in Georgia," which has always seemed to us a most admirable trait whether employed by speaker or writer. She has made no attempt to write on the condition of the American farmer in general. That was not her task.

We shall leave the reader to decide whether Miss Dexter's article "has the spirit of hatred and bitterness . . . draws hasty and unwarranted conclusion . . . is steeped in the present day effort to create a spirit of war against the owners of property."

The real point at issue, as we see it is: Shall we sit idly by and wait for the "regenerating process" (whatever that may be,) or shall we render the critical judgments of the sensitized Christian conscience upon a world black with sins of man's own making? Shall we mildly fold our hands and leave it all to God, or shall we with the fervor of an Amos and Jesus throw the beacon light of truth upon the wicked places of the earth and pronounce a judgment of doom upon those who defy God and enslave man? Miss Dexter's position is clear on this point. So is Dr. Johnson's, for he says: "This type of pamphlet (Miss Dexter's article) has no religious value for a Woman's Society, especially a Missionary Society." What the latter part of this statement means I do not know, unless it be that missionary societies ought to confine their studies to the heathens of foreign lands. There is some danger in studying our own heathens for we may make some unpleasant discoveries. But the inevitable remark of the foreign student that "I want your Christ but not your Christianity" forced me to conclude long ago that we would do well to give some attention to our own back yard.

I throw myself whole-heartedly on the side of those who believe in Christianity as a leavening process. I am not a devotee of cataclysmic change. But unless the Christian works, as the leaven worketh, I see little hope of "regeneration."

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

I FOUND A FRIEND.

Soon after becoming Mission Secretary, beginning September, 1937, I felt impressed to call on Mr. J. M. Darden, Suffolk, Virginia, and share with him my idea and feeling about missions. It turned out to be an event, not only in my life, but in his also. Because of what has transpired since, every detail of the visit and conversation with him come vividly to memory. At the time he was an exceedingly busy man, absorbed in, and organizing, the business ventures that were to mean so much to him, to his future career and to his attitude, to the church and benevolence. Well do I remember his astonishment when in the very busy hour of the day, in the middle of the week, I asked him for a brief interview. On inquiry I told him my errand was to talk with him about missions. "What," exclaimed he, "talk of missions in the middle of the week and in business hours?" Giving him an answer in the affirmative, he granted me twenty minutes, dismissing for that long his stenographer and secretary. At the end of fifteen minutes he turned quickly to his check book and began to write. "May I inquire, Mr. Darden, what you are writing?" "I am writing you a check for $100.00 to aid in your work," he replied. "Please don't do that now, as you have not discovered my real motive and the errand on which I have come." "What have you come for?" was his inquiry. "I have come to ask you for a donation of $5,000.00, not for my sake, but to be used in helping to build up the kingdom of our Lord on earth." "That is interesting, and rather astounding," said he, "as it is a most unheard of procedure as far as I am concerned." My twenty minutes were up, but he requested that I spend the night with him, which I did, and before late bed-time, the two of us were together and alone for the evening, he had consented to give his check for $5,000.00, and thus put the kingdom of his Lord in a class with his thinking of the kingdom of his own business. This was the beginning of future magnanimous gifts from this great heart. Some years later he gave me another check for $5,000.00 for missions without my requesting it, and he had begun that career of benevolence and consideration for his church and its institutions which was to make his life memorable amongst us.

Possibly these very intimate events should not be related now and here. And yet, what else is real friendship, if it is not intimate, and to be cherished with joy and delight for an eternity? It would take more than a column of this paper to tell of the marks of personal friendship of this man to the writer, for during the remainder of his life he was the best and most considerate of all good friends. But for his keen insight and diagnosis of my own condition and physical needs, I would doubtless have been in my grave long before he went. He discovered, as even I could not, when I needed hospital treatment, and at his own charges and without solicitation or intimation on my part, sent me to more than one hospital, paying expenses, and insisting that I have the best the hospital could give. At one time he thought that an ocean trip would be helpful and sent me abroad. Landing in London, and being stricken, I was taken to a hospital there. The message came by air that the best physicians and nurses would be summoned and when I recovered sufficiently to return, he met me and upon advice of a physician insisted that I go, at his expense, to the mountains of North Carolina, until I was fully recovered. What favor had I ever showed this man to win friendship? None whatever so far as temporal, or physical welfare was concerned. I had only induced him, by the grace of God, to do something for others, to give to missions, to pour out a love offering in gratitude to God for what his Creator had done for him. I am writing intimately. How else can I write, when I think of the blessed fellowship of J. M. Darden. What a great heart. When in Florida and in a Sanitarium for a month or more last winter, he, too, was in Florida more than two hundred miles away from me, under the care of physician and nurse. Out of sheer devotion he drove that distance and we spent a few hours together in delightful fellowship, the last time I was to see his face in the flesh. I do not know how to write of him and in memory of him, except in terms of intimacy, because somehow his great heart went out in the friendship and favors to those who would share with him visions of good things to do. I have no doubt but that there are scores, if not hundreds, today who, like myself, regard this man as one of the best and biggest-hearted friends they ever found. He had a way of making one feel and realize that he was a real friend. He has laid down his life for his friends, for he wrought and labored and toiled that those about him whom he loved should be favored and blessed with his benevolences. "Greater love hath no man than this that a man lay down his own life for his friends." I can say with hundreds of others that J. M. Darden, was a real friend and as I think of his passing away a few days ago, I feel as a certain English writer must have felt, when knowing that the end of his own earthly career was now at hand, closed his last letter to his friend by saying, "Good night. I will see you in the morning."

MISS F. LOUISE ROUNDS.

Back from Sachikela, West Africa, where she has been using three languages regularly—Portuguese, the official tongue, Umbundu—the native speech, and English, Miss F. Louise Rounds of Yuma, Arizona, reached Boston on the S. S. Samaria, April 12 for furlough under the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions. She will remain in Boston for a time.

Life has been intensely interesting, if somewhat complicated by bouts of malaria, and Miss Rounds declares:

"In spite of differences in language, customs, dress and background, deep-down human characteristics make the whole world kin. Joy, sorrow, song, laughter, weeping—these are alike, I found, no matter what tongue is spoken."

The mail man, a native runner, comes to Sachikela, carrying letters, magazines and papers with a gasoline tin on his head. Thus, the American missionaries keep in touch with the outside world. More recently the radio has helped. Trips into the bush by bush-car or hammock are made by Miss Rounds without fear, for the native people feel responsible for her safety.

"I have no fear from the black people there. It is only when we get too close to a certain kind of the white man's civilization that we have occasion to fear," she says.

In the Sachikela Mission Schools where Miss Rounds teaches, the Umbundu boys and girls find their only chance for even an elementary education and often walk a week through the bush from their villages. In a land where soap is a luxury, skin diseases are apt to develop, and so Miss Rounds, ably assisted by an Umbundu nurse, trained in the Mission hospital, conducted an intensive campaign against the "itch" until her students were shining advertisements for any good soap company.

The native Christian Church, in spite of the meagre income of its membership, is standing on its own feet and financing its own local program, reports Miss Rounds. It even tried to help famine sufferers outside its area, although hard put to it to care for its own.

Miss Rounds was born in Costana, Iowa, and educated at the University of Texas, where she lived for several years. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Rounds, of Yuma, Arizona, and sister of Mrs. Dale Smith, of Lincoln, Nebraska.

Miss Rounds first went to Africa in 1927 and has been home on one furlough before this. She is the special representative of the First Congregational Church of Woburn, the Second Congregational Church of Winchester, and a group of Congregational-Christian Churches in Texas and Oklahoma, in the last named state, Tulsa, Medford, Goltry and Carrier.

DOROTHY P. CUSHING.

A REAL MISSIONARY GAVE HER LIFE.

Alice Pettee Adams, New England woman, known and loved throughout Japan as "The Mother of Social Service," and often called "The Jane Addams of Japan," died May 9th, at 618 Center St., Newton, Mass., at the age of 71. Brief memorial services were held in Boston. At her own request a beautiful Japanese flag, the gift of friends in Japan, was buried with her. Word of her death was cabled to Japan and within 24 hours replies came from Hakuai Social Center and from the Mayor of Okayama.

Miss Adams, who was born in Jaffrey, New Hampshire, served for 46 years under the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions in the slums of Okayama, Japan, where she founded the Hakuai, "Loving-All House," a model Christian social service center which, just prior to her sailing for America to retire last fall (1936), was made by Government action a corporate entity with a board of directors made up of Japanese and foreigners.

Probably no other woman, certainly no American woman, has received so many decorations and formal recognitions from the Japanese Government and people as Miss Adams, whose most recent honor was the Sixth Order of the Sacred Treasure, a decoration usually posthumous.

Shortly after Miss Adams reached America, seriously ill, His Excellency, Governor Taku of Okayama Prefecture and His Honor, Mayor Ishihara of Okayama City, sent special letters of appreciation to the American Board in beautiful lacquered boxes lined with gold leaf, bearing the insignia of the province and the municipality and tied with rich purple cords.

After graduation from Bridgewater Normal School, Miss Adams taught for a time in the Conant, N. H. High School. She became interested in Christian work overseas and decided to give one-tenth of her life, estimated at ten years, to this work. When she reached Japan and saw the condition of the slums of Okayama, she began a piece of Christian service which did not finish for 46 years.

When Miss Adams left for America last fall she was taken on a triumphal tour through the city in the special automobile of the Governor, accompanied by the Governor's wife. Thousands of school children lined the streets and everywhere people of all classes hailed their American friend. The Okayama newspapers held their presses until her departure, and one put into the space left, simply three words, "She has gone."

The last request for a gift from Miss Adams before she left Japan was from the Governor's wife, "Please, Miss Adams, give me your Bible."

Just before the boat sailed, Miss Adams received a box of satiny wood lined with white velvet in which lay a silver vase, exquisitely engraved, a gift from the Home Department of the Japanese Imperial Government. It stands nine and one-half inches and bears a suitable inscription.

At the time of the famous Japanese artist, Morioka, invented his "sculptographing," busts of several famous Japanese and Americans were made and the three Americans were Ambassador Joseph C. Grew, Col. Charles A. Lindberg and Alice Pettee Adams. A replica of this bust has been presented to the American Board by the Hakuai Settlement. Recently, funds were raised by the Japanese people for an additional building at the settlement called Adams-Kan and dedicated to Miss Adams as a permanent memorial of her life work.

The life of sacrifice lived in for Jesus Christ cannot die.

A BOUQUET FROM DR. JIM.

"Such spontaneous good nature and universal courtesy as I have met in America, I never experienced in any other place or at any other time," so declared Dr. James B. McCord, of Durban, South Africa, on the eve of sailing back for his last term of service at McCord Zulu Hospital. "It seems to me there is more Christ-like love in this country than there has ever been, but it expresses itself differently." Dr. and Mrs. McCord have been speaking before Congregational and Christian Churches throughout America. "Some people think that the churches are losing their religion; that our civilized Christian society is going to the dogs. I can't believe it . . . I see the Church of the next 50 years expressing itself differently but carrying on the work of our Lord as He wanted it carried on. This poor world needs it. The work of the missionaries has hardly begun as yet. I have faith to believe that our churches in America are going to recognize their responsibility and opportunity and respond to the needs of the world."

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Dry Run Church held its monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. Stella F. Munch, on Thursday, May 20th. There were sixteen members present and much work was accomplished with the sewing, and plans were discussed for a greater society. Mr. and Mrs. Holt, of New Market, together with the pastor and his wife, were guests. At noon a great luncheon was served to all present by Mrs. Munch. These meetings are always a great inspiration to all who attend. It is hard to understand why so many good people who do not attend these meetings should continue to deny themselves of this great fellowship in so worthy a cause. After lunch a program, well planned, was conducted by the president, W. B. Burke,

"Youth at Work in the Church"

MISS EMILY CARLETON, Editor, 541 Osceola Ave., Winter Park, Fla.

YOUTH IN ACTION.

The May 1, 1937, issue of Social Action is entitled "Youth in Action." It is a very enlightening and to-the-point analysis of the many problems which youth must face today as it sets out to build a new world.

While many of the questions discussed may at first sight seem too world-wide and deep for us to be able to do anything about them, yet definite suggestions are made for action. And preceding action, we must have facts—which this booklet gives.

The following topics are discussed: The Handicap of Poverty, The Lack of Healthy Play (including the question of "movies"), The Difficulty of Education (are our schools really free to present the truth?), The Dead End of Unemployment, and The Threat of War.

"Youth in Action" not only presents the facts about the above questions and gives definite things we can do about them, but in each case excellent suggestions are made for further reading and discussion materials.

Single copies of "Youth in Action" can be purchased for ten cents by sending to the Council for Social Action, 289 Fourth Ave., New York, N. Y.

A PRAYER FOR THOSE GROWING OLD.

O God, our Heavenly Father, whose gift is length of days, help us to make the noblest use of mind and body in our advancing years.

We bless Thee for Thy gifts, and especially for Thy presence and for the love of our friends in heaven and on earth. Grant us new ties of friendship, new opportunities of service, joy in the growth and happiness of children, sympathy with those who bear the burdens of the world, clear thought and quiet faith. Teach us to bear our infirmities with cheerful patience. Keep us from narrow pride in outgrown ways, blind eyes that will not see the good of change, impatient judgments of the methods and experiments of others.

Let Thy peace rule our spirits through trial of our waning powers. Take from us all fear of death, and all despair, or undue love of life; that with glad hearts at rest in Thee we may await Thy will concerning us, through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

HOW TRUE TO LIFE ARE THE MOVIES?

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR JUNE 20, 1937.

SCRIPTURE: Phil. 4:8; John 2:15-17.

There are two extremists who talk about the movies. One of them can see nothing good in any picture; the other holds up all pictures and makes very little effort to find the evil found within the movies. We should give credit to good pictures and not be afraid to discredit the evil found in other pictures.

The Motion Picture Committee of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America says: "The most serious defect of current films is that many of them lack meaning and dignity." Only a small per cent of the pictures have a great social urge. It is a business which is inspired by the profit motive. The majority of the movie stars are not concerned about the moral the pictures may have, if it can be shown to the public.

The movie settings are unreal—the residences shown are usually those of the more wealthy. Drinking and sex are high spots in many pictures. In many cases a girl starts out by leading an undesirable life and comes out victorious.

Over 23,000,000 young people under 21 years of age attend the theater once a week. Great impressions are made upon these lives. Read Dr. Forman's book, "Our Movie-Made Children."

We should make an intelligent selection of the pictures we patronize.

To Think About—

1. What about the goals of Hollywood?

2. Can they be accepted as guides for good character and conduct?

3. What will you see at the movie?

4. What is being done through pictures to help make better social conditions?

Hymns—

"It Pays to Serve Jesus."

"I would Be True."

"Anywhere With Jesus."

THE BROTHERLY LOVE OF JUDAH.

LESSON XI—JUNE 13, 1937.

LESSON: Genesis 42: 1-45: 15.

Do you want to read an interesting and thrilling "Short Story?" Then read the four chapters that form the background of today's lesson. No comments by others, and no listening to even the best teacher in person, will give the effect which a careful reading of these chapters will give. Especially is this true of Judah's appeal to Joseph, one of the finest things in all literature. By all means turn to your Bible and read Genesis 42: 1 to 45: 15. Take this scribe's advice on this point and find a rich reward for your reading.

The famine had laid waste the land of Canaan, and things had become desperate. Jacob, therefore, sent his sons, all except Benjamin the "baby boy" to Egypt to buy food. By one of those strange turns of fate, or perhaps it would be better to say, by one of those strange acts of Providence, these men had to deal directly with Joseph, their brother, whom they had sold into slavery twenty years before. In one way or another, a man's past always rises up to meet him, and sooner or later every man comes face to face with the sins of former times. Joseph recognized his brother and dealt rather sternly with them—but from the spirit of love. He kept them in ward three days, accused them of being spies, and finally released them and sold them food only when he had kept Simeon as a hostage. When the brothers started back home, however, they found to their amazement that the money which they had paid for the supplies had been put back into the sacks with the grain. It should have been stated that Simeon was to be kept as prisoner until Benjamin, the youngest son should be produced in person to Joseph. But Jacob would not hear to this. Even though Reuben put up his two sons as security pledging to bring Benjamin back again. Jacob steadfastly refused to give up Benjamin, his beloved son.

But sometimes the emergencies and crises of life make imperious demands upon us. The famine waxed sorer and sorer in the land, and it became absolutely to get more provisions from Egypt. Driven to desperation, and in despair, Jacob finally allowed Benjamin to go with his sons, Judah having pledged himself as security for this beloved son of Jacob's old age. Fearing the worst, and determined to make the best of it, the brothers not only took presents for Joseph, they took also double the money by way of restitution. Thus prepared they went down to Egypt again.

Joseph received them outwardly more cordially this time. He invited them into his home for dinner. Indeed he treated them so well that they "thought there was a catch in it somewhere." When he saw Benjamin he could scarce restrain himself, and he went out and wept for sheer joy. Like many another big man of business, he had a warm heart in him, and wholesome sentiment, and family affection.

Soon after the brothers had started back to Canaan they were overtaken by Joseph's steward who brought the serious charge against them of stealing his master's cup, which seemed to be useful in divination, as well as for drinking purposes. Of course the brothers stoutly denied the charge, and bore witness to their innocence by declaring that the one who had the cup should be put to death. Imagine their surprise and their dismay when the cup was found in the mouth of Benjamin's sack. In despair they returned to the city, and fell humbly before Joseph, begging mercy of him. It is at this point that Judah makes his eloquent and moving plea. In all literature there is nothing more pathetic than this appeal. He recounts in outline the story which is, of course already familiar to Joseph. He depicts vivid language the background of the whole affair. He tells how many years before the youngest and favorite son of his father had become as one dead—It was Judah himself who had suggested twenty years before that they sell Joseph and then report him as dead; how the "baby boy" the pride of his father's heart, had come into the home late in life; of the love which the old man bore the child, and the reluctance with which he had allowed him, against his better judgment to come down to Egypt with them; how he, himself, had declared his life forfeit if Benjamin was not brought back safely; and how the old man would come down to his grave in sorrow if Benjamin did not return. In a climax of impassioned eloquence, he declared that he would do anything rather than go back without the boy.

His appeal would have moved a stranger. No wonder then that it moved Joseph tied to them by blood ties. "Then Joseph could not refrain himself before them, and he unashamedly burst into tears and made himself known to them. He calmed their fears by declaring that he would do them no wrong. And he eased their conscience by assuring them that God had over-ruled their sin and had made it to work together for good by preserving him so that he in turn could preserve them. God had made the wrath of men to praise him. He had over-ruled human ignorance and sin and made it to accomplish his purpose. God's hand had been behind it all. God's purpose had been behind it all. God's love had over-come it all. In short Joseph was saying exactly what Paul was saying hundreds of years later in those immortal words "We know that all things work together for good to those who love God, to the called according to His purpose." It involves the long look, and lots of faith to avow this. But it undergirds life with new strength, and it interfuses life with new meaning to believe it and to act upon it.

It all ended so happily. Joseph "kissed all his brethren," it was an outward symbol of inner reconciliation. It was a big-hearted thing to do. And from the portrait given us in these pages from Genesis we feel that Joseph did this, not because he was rich and independent, but because he had a magnanimous spirit and a great heart. Here, after all, is one of the acid tests of greatness—the willingness to forgive those who have wronged us.

JADE FAIRY.

Jade Fairy is a little slave girl, beaten and starved by rich owners until she could no longer work. She was brought to Taiku Hospital, China, with a tubercular hand. Two fingers had to be amputated. T. B. developed in her spine and for nearly a year she was in bed. But she learned to read, to write, to knit and to sing. Here she was loved. Then 9 year old Peter Li was brought with a T. B. spine and legs paralyzed. Friends at once, the two children worked over puzzles from Massachusetts children. Christmas approached. Now Jade Fairy knew its joys and told the Children's Ward until it seethed with excitement. Maner scenes from America's Five and Ten were cut and set up. The "Itchmites," as the two youngsters with scabies were called, feared they would "get well before Christmas" and the nurses had strong suspicions that salve was scraped off in the night! When Christmas came with its fun, one sad note was there. Peter, who had wanted to see Christmas, had gone away to that land from which Christmas comes.

MONDAY.

WHEN GOD RISES UP.

"What then shall I do when God Rises up?"—Job. 31:14.

Job saw far enough ahead to know and realize that God is the ultimate, and that it is the height of folly to do anything or take a stand contrary to Him. Jesus said: "I am alpha and omega, the first and the last." He also said, that finally every knee shall bow and every tongue confess Him Lord of all.

This seems to be a lesson hard for humanity to learn. The great majority still live in defiance of His Deity. The throngs pass along as if His eyes were withdrawn. Out of selfishness and personal likes the hands of forces are raised against Him, as if His hand could not crush them at His will.

Blessed is he who has a sense of the majesty of the Most High. God is still speaking. Let all the earth keep silence before Him.

Prayer—"Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet, lest we forget, lest we forget." Be Thou ever present with us as a Guide to our thoughts, as Teacher in our way, and as Saviour from erring ways. In His name we ask it. Amen.

TUESDAY.

THE LAST INJUNCTION.

"Finally, my brethren, rejoice in the Lord."—Phil. 3:1.

Philippians has been called an epistle of joy. It was written from a prison cell, and yet it has not the slightest trace of a prison atmosphere. That cell bubbled over with the plan of salvation which Paul preached through his letters to the churches. And, after making that plan plain, and summing up every hardship and privation, first, last and always he bids them not to worry. He makes it plain that the command of Jesus, "Let not your heart be troubled" is as much a command to be obeyed as the ten commandments, and that no poverty or suffering should interfere with a saint's happiness.

And so we must rejoice. Rejoice in Christ's presence. Rejoice in His love, guidance and protection. Rejoice in salvation, the hope of heaven and eternal life.

Prayer—Dear God, our Father, make Thou our souls to sing always. If Paul could, we can. Be Thou in us this fulfilled joy. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

FOLLOWING THE WILL-O'-THE-WISP.

"We did not follow cunningly devised fables, when we made known unto you the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ."—II Peter 1:16.

Fables, falsehood, the superficial the artificial, and all that go to make up the unreal of life are poor leaders. However cunningly devised, plausible or pleasant they may be, their end is like the house built upon sand.

Yet, how vastly true it is that the majority of mankind seems to be running after this sort of thing. And although in Christ we are continually assured of the basal realities and values of the universe, which time nor fate can shake, but only render more substantial and happy; man goes on gleefully pursuing his will-o'-the-wisp bogging down, lost in the wilderness, or collapsing in disaster.

Prayer—O Lord, Allwise God, forbid that we shall be so foolish. Grant unto us Thy wisdom to live right and daily look forward to Thy coming. Amen.

THURSDAY.

THE MOST OF US FASHION THEM.

"Ye have bourned the tabernacle of your king and the shrine of your images, the star of your God, which ye made to yourselves."—Amos 5:26.

We have just listened to the coronation of King George VI, of England. We witnessed with our mind's eye the throng in the tabernacle, we saw the King at the shrine and heard him take his vows to Almighty God. We saw them present him with the golden and bejeweled implements of his great office. If it means what was indicated, thanks be to God.

But it easy to create images and tokens and accept them for what they mean, and yet forget the spirit of God. Do not the most of us fashion something of which we are so very proud that we idolize it. God who made us is not to be displaced by anything else.

Prayer—O Lord God Almighty, Thou alone art holy. How trivial are the works of man's hands, however great, compared with the manifold works of Thy Almighty and All-wise Self. Amen.

FRIDAY.

TURNING FROM EMPTINESS.

"Turn from these vain things unto a living God."—Acts 14:15.

The consequences of evil, ever before us, are a continual warning of the vanities of life. The Bible fittingly refers to these things as "Emptiness;" empty of meaning, empty of comfort, empty of help, empty of strength, empty of beauty, empty of joy or wisdom, and ultimately useless.

Paul's teaching is clear. Read the entire chapter. He would turn every one not only from sins but from everything that proves itself merely empty and merely fruitless. Lands are given us to occupy and to grow harvest. Life is not a bare stony farm, but it is to be made rich in the fruit of righteousness and happiness.

Prayer—O Thou Living God, help us to turn from the vain things of life, and to live ever with Jesus, Thy Son who is the fullness of all that Thou art and would be to man. Amen.

SATURDAY.

WHEN GOD CAN NOT BE PLEASED.

"They that are in the flesh cannot please God."—Romans 8:1-11.

Did not God make the flesh? Is it not the world and all the lovely and interesting things of the world the creation of the Heavenly Father? Why, then can not those that are in the flesh, those that live for these entrancing worldly things—why can not they please God?

Because God is not in the flesh. Because God is a spirit. Because God-pleasers must worship Him in the spirit and in truth, not in the flesh and falsity.

To be in the flesh is to be in uncertainty; to be in God is to be in sureness. To be in the flesh is to be in temporal enjoyment that soon fades and decays; to be God is to be in enduring strength and beauty. And it is these that please the strong and beautiful God whom we adore.

Prayer—Grant that our lives may please Thee, our Father. Then alone can they please ourselves and rejoice those around us. Amen.

SUNDAY.

THE COMMAND MOST OFTEN BROKEN.

"Let not your heart be troubled."—John 14:1-11.

Most men worry. And most men excuse themselves for their worry. How can they help it? they ask. Were they not born that way? Can they change their nature?

Yes, they can change their nature. God can change them if we cannot.

So we are not to allow our hearts to be troubled. As we obey any other command of God, we are to obey this command which requires our spirits to be at peace. God is over all, and God is our Father.

Prayer—May we be ashamed, O Christ, not to rest calmly in our trust in Thee, Amen.

WHAT IS SACRIFICE?

By GEORGE SWANN.

"To what purpose is this multitude of your sacrifices to me? I am weary with them."—Isaiah 1:11, 14.

Recently we entertained a missionary who is home on her first furlough after five years' work in India. I asked her a question which I find myself asking whenever the setting is right: "After a week of work and handling the problems of life, suppose you were snugly seated in a church pew; what would you like to hear preached?" I asked.

She thought a moment, moved her position, and I saw lights and shadows go over her face as if a difficult answer was calling to be made.

"Well, I think I would like to hear a sermon on 'Sacrifice.' Sacrifice is the very heart of our religion, and we do so little of it. We leave the whole matter of sacrifice to Jesus. It seems to me that I would like to know more about sacrifice; to be stirred concerning it," she finally said, and I could sense how vivid was the subject to her as a missionary to poverty and ignorance, while at home her nation possessed great, undedicated wealth.

When the Lord spoke my text through His prophet saying, "To what purpose is this multitude of your sacrifice? I am weary with them," was He speaking ironically; did He refer to what we Call sacrifices, and imply that they are mere ghosts of sacrifice; nothing more than shams? It must be that he did, for surely He could not have been weary of real sacrifices, since He Himself instituted such. Do many of us even know what sacrifice is, much less do it? A middle-aged woman said to me once:

"If ever a mother delved and slaved and sacrificed for her daughters, I think that person is myself."

Fortunately, I had known her long enough to observe the trends and motives of her life. Apparently she lives for her two daughters. For their sakes she keeps up with dress styles, and etiquettes, denies herself many things, and keeps her husband broke and in debt. She adores bridge playing, and has cultivated in her daughters a taste for it, and they spend much time in this pleasant time-killer.

The mother of whom I speak is giving up a lot for her daughters, but What is she giving up? She is giving up the Bible, the Church, religious training, broad sympathy and world-wide love. By her many polished vices she is destroying the pristine virtues which God gave to those girls as a birth-gift. Nominally she is a church member, but she is devoting neither herself nor her daughters to any holy cause.

My mother began with God, and measured everything from Him. She did not, as this mother does, send her child to the door to lie to a caller by saying that the mother was not at home. My father drove his stakes at heaven, and outlined all values with reference to righteousness; the Christian virtues were glorified; I was rebuked at the first sign of narrowness or "caste" thinking. Yes, sacrifice means to devote to Sacred purposes, and to do so in worthy measure.

Is it not high time mankind was awakening to what sacrifice is? It is the very heart of our religion, yet almost nobody is doing it. Most people have even forgotten its meaning. Glance through the Bible, and see what a large place sacrifice holds. From the first altar reared from Cain and Able to the blood-streams of Calvary, we see it, while it is kept alive now by the symbols of baptism and the emblems of the Lord's Supper. Self-denial, for holy ends, is the first demand of Jesus, without which He said we cannot be His disciples.

Who are sacrificing? Giving up a meal may not be sacrifice, but giving up a meal as a Holy example may be sacrifice. Parting with money for vanity is not sacrifice, but giving it for the advancement of righteousness is.

With a perfect physique, finely balanced mind, and high moral fiber; a fine example of American manhood, a young athlete went onto an eastern football field a few weeks ago. Rooters, knowing his skill, cheered. Within less than an hour he was taken from the field a corpse; neck broken in the game. What a pity that a life like this could not have been given to something better than a football game. This is no condemnation of sports, but why is it that millions are ready to lay themselves and their money upon worldly altars, when they are Not interested in things confessedly greater? The church's condemnation is not upon sports, but upon the public Lack of interest when men's souls are dying.

The moment sacrifice is named, there arises the thought of Giving Up something. Here is the mistake, though, of course, "giving up" has come to be a common secondary meaning of the word, yet this loose usage has confused many. We may give up everything, yet devote none of it to a holy purpose. The old mistake which Jesus met in His day still exists; He said to certain people:

Woe unto you blind guides who say, Whosoever shall swear by the Altar is not guilty, but whosoever shall swear by the Gift that is on the altar, he is guilty. Ye fools and blind, for which is greater, the gift, or the Altar which Sanctifieth the gift." Thus Jesus settles the matter that the Altar upon which we place our gifts and money determine whether it is sacrifice. I know a man who gives $12.50 per year to church, and nothing to missions, yet he spends $100.00 per year for tobacco and cold drinks. I dare almost anyone who reads this to face the fact, dollars and cents, mind you, of where his money goes; I challenge him to write down in opposite columns what God and good get, and what is spent on vanity and flesh. God works 120 days on an acre of corn; the farmer works Four twelve-hour days; but what share does God get? In other words, what part is sacrificed? The terrible fact that stands out, that most of Wealth and most of human Powers, and the Body itself are spent in such a way Problems are Created rather than solved. Will it not be a crucial hour when men meet their dollars and talents at the gates of heaven.

Nothing is sacrificed that is not put to a holy purpose; therefore, what part does God get of the things you spend? I will close with an illustrative story. A. J. Gordon invited his aged father to visit a new home which he (Gordon), had built and furnished. The father was proudly shown from cellar to garret; shown all conveniences, books and pictures.

"This is a nice home," said the father when they had returned to the drawing room, "but how is one going to tell whether a child of God or a child of the devil lives here; I don't see even a picture on the wall that bespeaks of God."

Gordon said it went home to his heart, and he immediately put in pictures and books and other things that evidenced that it was the home of a Christian. The day of reckoning is coming; will the reader forget this urge, or start Now.

The Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

Every heart was filled with grief when news spread over the orphanage campus that Mr. J. M. Darden had passed away. He was loved by every child in the orphanage and by all those who have gone out since he became connected with the institution. He was vitally interested in every child here.

It was touching to see the little children run and put their arms around his neck and love him when he came on the campus.

Mr. Darden was one of the best friends the orphanage ever had. He was a friend when we were in need, as well as at all other times.

The writer remembers well when we had a very destructive hail storm in 1918, which destroyed our crops, and left us desolate. Mr. Darden heard about it and came to see for himself. After looking over the farm, he called us all together and led in a very touching prayer. He made a beautiful talk with tears trickling down his cheeks. In his talk he said to the children: "Don't fear, God will provide for you, and you will not suffer." He went back to Virginia and visited churches in his section, making appeals for the orphanage. The churches responded to his call, and a carload of food was shipped to us, freight prepaid.

When the orphanage barn burned in 1929, Mr. Darden took the lead in building a new one and contributed liberally toward its building. When the barn was burned in 1935, he came to our rescue and furnished all the rough lumber from his farm in North Carolina. He was a liberal contributor to the building of the Baby Home and the Johnston Hall.

He visited many churches at Thanksgiving seasons, challenging churches to give and stimulated the giving by leading the way himself.

A number of times, Mr. Darden invited the Singing Class to visit the churches in his section and furnished his cars to convey the children from place to place and made effective appeals in behalf of the orphanage. But of all his gifts, we feel that the gifts of his abiding love and heart full of fatherly sympathy have made the most lasting impressions on the little children here. These gifts will follow them throughout life.

Mr. Darden was elected a member of the Board of Trustees of the Christian Orphanage in May 1920. He met with the board for the first time May 26, 1920. He was elected president of the board October 6, 1928 and was unanimously reelected each year since.

In his death the Christian Orphanage has lost one of its most loyal friends and supporters.

In Memoriam

PIERCE.

When the death angel quietly claimed Samuel W. Pierce on the evening of May 6, 1937, the First Christian Church of Norfolk, Virginia, lost a faithful member, a trustee, and deacon.

Brother Pierce had lived a long time, almost 82 years. But he had done more. He had lived well. He had reared a fine family of children, been a good citizen, and served his Church well for many years.

Now that he is gone, those of us who remain must assume the duties he can no longer perform. We accept the heritage of his good life, and pledge our faithfulness to the church he loved and served.

To the bereaved family the Board of Deacons, speaking for the church, offer sincere sympathy, which means that we take upon our hearts the sorrow of yours, and pray the blessings of the Heavenly Father upon you. Miss Louise Hyde has expressed our thoughts in a little poem which we pass on to you:

Just moved!
Not here any more!
I stood called, today,
And knocked long at the door . . .

Knocked, but all was still;
My friend had moved away
To a large house on the hill.
Just moved!

Not here any more!
The old clay house is empty;
A friend of our's is gone . . .

On golden streets in Heaven
He has a lovelier home;
The message left is just this word:
"Absent from the body—
At home with the Lord."

In this faith we join with you in the work of the Church, while we wait for the change that will give us all a place in the "house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." Your courage offers the best that it has, its sympathy, faith, courage, and love.

THE SOCIAL MANIFESTO OF JESUS.

McNeill Poteat, my colleague in Raleigh, feels that James Russell Lowell was right when the latter said, if the teachings of the Sermon on the Mount were ever illegitimately used, civilization would be blown to bits. Poteat would cross out the word "illegitimately" and include the implication of the Lord's Prayer. He feels that in the Lord's Prayer there lies latent a terrific discharge of dynamite and if construed as the social manifesto, it indubitably is and if "touched off with the spark of courageous understanding," it would let loose detonations to "rock the structure of the world" and "blow existing world states to bits."

Now there have been books galore on the Lord's Prayer. Even the author's father, Edwin McNeill Poteat, Sr., assayed a foray in an earlier day into this land of controversy. And the social view is no new one, for the late, beloved Walter Rauschenbusch saw it in the light of people's needs. But a gem always reveals fresh facets of imperishable beauty and these Dr. Poteat has perceived. Thus, originality and prophetic insights abound on almost every page of this monograph. It is a book to have and to hold.

The chapters of the book are prefaced by a fine prologue and closed by an apt epilogue. They deal with the state, government, the vote, law, property, debt, crime, and evil in Jesus's all-sufficing prayer. This is done without affectation or undue effort. The uniqueness of the thesis is equalled only by the power of its defense. Dr. Poteat presents his case ably and eloquently. He succeeds in straining neither his contention nor the reader's credulity.

The best chapter—to choose but one of a host of good chapters—is his essay on property, coming, of course, from the petition: "give us this day our daily bread" Here Poteat ascends the heights, hears indeed the "thunder over Sinai" (the title of his previous book,) and descends again to give an impassioned indictment of modern capitalism. Religion, says he, demands that the philosophy of "our daily bread" provide "for an economic system under which the instruments of production and distribution would be socially (mutually) owned and operated for daily use."

The book is scholarly, but not stuffy, popular, but not pedantic. It is important to laity and clergy alike because of (1) the fearless social note, (2) the clear reasoning in harmony with, but not subjection to, the modern mood, (3) the lucid writing in a contemporary vein, and (4) the limitless resources uncovered in a group of sentences usually taken for granted—the Lord's Prayer. I would recommend this book to minister and layman. It is important. It is excellent writing; and it is evidence that Dr. Poteat, preacher and teacher of renown, has in truth uncovered "unsearchable riches" of legendary lore.

CARL HERMANN VOSS.

LIFE NOTHING—FAITH ALL.

The diary of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek during the nerve-racking days of his imprisonment at Sian gives evidence of spiritual battles fought and won, says Rev. George W. Shepard, guest for two weeks of the Generalissimo in his country home, following release. "A man's life may be sacrificed, his person held in bondage, but his faith and spirit can never be restrained. This is due to confidence brought about by faith," declared Chiang in his Easter message to the Eastern Asia Conference of Methodists. "Never before has the Bible been so interesting to me as during my two week's captivity in Sian . . . The greatness and love of Christ burst upon me with new inspiration, increasing my strength to struggle against evil, to overcome temptation and to uphold righteousness."

THE DOOR IS OPEN.

An appeal "begging the American Board not to make any withdrawal of missionaries from Mindanao at this time," has reached Boston, signed by three Filipino Moderators and the Acting Dean of Silliman Bible School in the Philippines. At the Annual Meeting of the Philippine Mission the return was asked of Rev. and Mrs. James F. McKinley, Dr. and Mrs. Frank C. Laubach, Rev. and Mrs. Walter C. Tong, and Rev. and Mrs. Frank J. Woodward. The Government is developing Mindanao, building roads, exploiting water power, seeking mines. People are pouring into this pioneer area. "Our chance is unparalleled in any other area of the Philippines . . . Our's is the open door for the Gospel . . . We are trying our best to train for the ministry as many as we can find who are worthy, but at our present rate we are far from being able to adequately cope with the great opportunity." So wrote in their appeal Senores Bergado, Cinco, Del Carmen and Rodrique.

Weary? Try Worship!

"BE STILL AND KNOW THAT I AM GOD!"

Hearts that wander they know not where
Are full of sorrow and full of care.

Are you weary, Soul? Are you tired, nervous, irritable, discontented, discouraged? Try worship! There is an "inward Voice which ever and again calleth us away from the clamour and dusty strife of this life, into the cool, quiet groves of eternity."

"The Lord is in His holy temple; let all the earth keep silence before Him." "Be still, and know."

"It is the quiet pool that catches reflections." It is the quiet soul that mirrors in its depths the image of Jehovah. It is the still soul that fathoms the deep, powerful unfailing reservoir of the Eternal God. Into the still soul flows the great deeps of Eternity—all the limitless resources of the "unsearchable riches of Jesus Christ," riches of strength, riches of peace, riches of poise, riches of power, riches of grace. And it is the "still" soul who, from such an experience, returns to life's toil refreshed and rejuvenated in body and spirit. Vexations are a little less vexing, problems a little less problematic, care a little less of a strain to him who has in the chapel of his soul been "still" with God—to him who, in the burning glare of the noon hour, has in silence drunk deep from the Fountain of Life.

Silent fellowship with Jesus puts the balance and joy back into life. "God must have deeply loved the silence."

He speaks in silences too lovely
For our dull ears to hear—
We catch the softest whispered echo
From some far-off sphere
And try to ravel out His language
From the "great white silence of the snow,"
From silent, misty stars that "swing Across the Milky Way," from "Pearl-and-rose-flushed sunsets Stretched across Day's canvas,"
From cool, sweet twilights, fair sweet
Faces of childhood, the infinite Peacefulness of trees, and the Ever-powerful silent language
Of some lovely soul . . .

In these—and more than these—

Wherever silences are deep and true,
No sound, no strife, no violence,
God speaks His loveliest thoughts to me and you
In deep unbroken silence.

Be still, O Soul of mine, be still, and let the Life-giving, strength-renewing God whisper to the spirit. Silent fellowship with Jesus puts the balance and the joy back into life—for "they that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings, as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary; and they shall walk and not be faint" . . . "Be still, and know."

Dear Lord and Father of mankind,
Forgive our feverish ways!
Re-clothe us in our rightful mind;
In purer lives Thy service find,
In deeper reverence praise.

Drop Thy still dews of quietness
Till all our strivings cease;
Take from our souls the strain and stress,
And let our ordered lives confess
The beauty of Thy Peace.

Why I Go to Church

I go to church and contribute to the support of a church because I believe in churches. I wouldn't care to live in a city or a state or a nation in which there were no churches and no church-goers.

I would not say that all the good people go to church and that all the bad people stay away from it; but I do say that if my new neighbor has a church affiliation and respects it, the chances are greater that he will be friendly and thoughtful and more considerate of my rights and feelings than would be a non-churchgoer. For the man who assumes that all religion is a mockery and a sham is likely also to assume that all other restraining influences which would interfere with his personal pleasures may be disregarded.

I have been bored in church. I have been annoyed; I have been made angry; I have encountered in church men for whom I had lost all respect; I have heard things uttered in church which have disgusted me; but I have never lost my faith in the purpose of the church, nor in its ministry as a body. Furthermore, on the whole, I believed in the people who support the church.

I am not of the opinion that the church exists to please me. It is here for my guidance and my instruction, for my help and my comfort in times of sorrow. I do not go to church expecting to be pampered or praised. If the minister be worth hearing at all, I fancy he will now and then remind me of my shortcomings.

I go to church because I want my children to go to church. I want them to know something more of this life than business and sport. I know only one institution that will teach them that they are divine.

There is room for a difference of opinion; but the man who stays out of church entirely, good citizen though he may be, is leaving to others the care of the institution which makes his neighborhood a safer place for his children to play in.

I go to church and help to support it, not only because I think I need it or may some day need it, but also because I think the church needs me. If all of us who give money thought our duty ended there, the church would die. It exists not on dollars, but on men and women.

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

The young people of Holland, Holy Neck and Bethlehem Christian Churches met at Holland last Sunday evening for the study of the foreign mission book "Consider Africa," which was taught by Miss Lois Rabey.

Rev. and Mrs. Joe A. French report a very happy trip to the Valley of Virginia Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention and will doubtless speak for themselves through THE CHRISTIAN SUN in a later issue.

The Shady Grove Christian Church near Troy, North Carolina, will have a Home Coming Day on Sunday, June 27th. The editor acknowledges receipt of an invitation and would be delighted to share the happy occasion with them were it possible to do so.

The Elon Summer School of Leadership Training will open next Monday at 2:30 o'clock and will close at noon Saturday following. This is the last call for pastors, superintendents, teachers, missionary leaders and young people to attend. Prospects appear to be good.

Rev. Carl R. Key, pastor of Holland Christian Church, has recently purchased a stereopticon and motion picture projector which is proving to be a valuable asset to his work. During June and July he is showing the following pictures: June 6—"China's Past and Present;" June 20—"Migrant Neighbors;" July 4—"The Life of Christ;" and July 18—"Africa Joins the World."

The Eastern Virginia ministers held their annual picnic Monday, at the City Park, in Norfolk with Dr. and Mrs. Charles Eldred Shelton as the honor guests. Dr. Shelton closed his active pastorate at First Congregational Church, Portsmouth, Virginia, on June 15th. He is now pastor emeritus, and Dr. Marna Poulson is the pastor. The ministers and their families had a nice outing, a good lunch furnished by the ladies of the Christian Temple, and brought to the close the Ministerial Association activities for this season.

Dear Brother Editor:

I have just reread your editorial in THE SUN relative to country churches in North Carolina and it is very interesting to me. It is to be regretted that so many, who should read this and other articles of interest coming out weekly in our Church Paper, will never know anything about them, because they have not yet learned the value of the Church Paper.

As editor of a paper which does not reach relatively many homes in our country churches you know how to sympathize with the ministers of many of our country churches who work hard through the week preparing a sermon which is heard on Sunday by only a few. In either case, those who need the message most, hear it neither in the pulpit nor the press.

How is the Church, then, going to reach those people in the country church communities who are not sufficiently interested to take our CHRISTIAN SUN, or go to church to hear the Word. Well, something must be done to awaken an interest in the hearts of these people if many of our country churches survive much longer. How shall we reach them?

WHAT TO TAKE TO A SUMMER CONFERENCE.

It has been interesting to notice in the announcements of the various Summer Conferences in the Southeast what things have been included under the heading, "What to Bring."

All of them have a list of material things which should be brought to the conference. We can gain quite an insight into the type of conference by merely studying this list, for in some cases certain kinds of recreational materials or types of clothes are desirable. One of the most interesting lists of this kind is that found in the Georgia and Tennessee and Alabama Conferences, where a list of food is given. Thus, much of the cost of the camp may be paid in "eatables" which the delegates bring from their homes.

However, we hope that some of you have noticed the other list of "Things to Bring" to many of the conferences. These things are just as important as the material ones given above, for no conference will be successful without them. They include such things as: a happy disposition, an earnest heart, a desire to know Truth, to love Beauty, and to do Good, a willingness to serve, the spirit of cooperation, and the desire to "give" as well as to "get" while at the conference. We hope that the delegates consider the second list just as important as the first one.

HOME-COMING AND MEMORIAL SERVICES AT LEAKESVILLE CHURCH.

On Sunday, June 6th, a large crowd gathered at Leakesville Christian Church, to participate in the seventh annual service of this nature which this church has held. The lamented Rev. A. W. Andes, being the originator of this kind of service at this church, preached the first memorial sermon on June 1, 1930 and then on the first Sunday in June of each succeeding year until 1936 when, due to failing health, he was not able to be in the service and on June 23rd he passed on to the great beyond to await the final "Great Home-Coming" of the children of God. Last year Rev. W. J. Andes, son of A. W. Andes, stood in his father's place in the pulpit and delivered the memorial sermon, which was well accepted by the large congregation, and then again on June 6th of this year, he delivered another memorial sermon and conducted the services all through the day in a manner which would have been a credit to any minister of long experience. The day's services began with Sunday School at ten o'clock, followed at eleven o'clock with worship service, during which the mixed and male quartettes rendered several impressive selections. The choir sang as a special selection—"Where We'll Never Grow Old," and led the congregation in singing two hymns, the last one just before the benediction, being—"Blest Be the Tie That Binds." The pastor, Rev. Wm. J. Andes, used as his subject for the memorial sermon—"Memory and Its Consequences," which subject he handled in a very impressive and convincing way.

At the noon hour a bountiful dinner was served from the tables on the church lawn, which was also an enjoyable event of the days program.

At two o'clock the congregation, which had been augmented by more visitors, soon filled the house to enjoy an hour and a half of special selections by the choir, congregational singing, selections by the male and mixed quartettes of the church, and by short talks from visitors, one of which was the former pastor of the church, Rev. R. L. Williamson. Many visitors were present from various sections of Virginia, and there were ten from Washington, D. C., two from Pennsylvania, six from Maryland and one from Missouri, and three from Ohio.

All in all we had a great day together.

WHAT KIND OF COLLEGE DO YOU WANT?

It is taken for granted that every progressive and aggressive denomination needs and wants a college—a college owned by the church and operated by the church where its own young people and other young people who may come may receive the advantage of higher education under Christian influences. Certainly our United Church is such a denomination.

The institution of our church is located in North Carolina. This institution is just what the church has made it. It is the product of our own efforts, our own affections, and our own sacrifices. We have made it what it is. If it falls below our standard, no one other than ourselves is responsible. If it, in any way, measures up to our ideals, the world will congratulate us, provided our ideals are high and holy. Certainly in the training of modern youth, training for religious endeavor cannot be omitted. The church college is the only institution today that provides for such training, and at Elon College proper emphasis is placed upon religious instruction and upon spiritual development.

The United Church can have at Elon the kind of institution that it wants. If we want a better institution than we have and are willing to unite our efforts and our contributions to the extent required, we will have the kind of institution that we want. Our church is sufficiently strong in every sense of the word to provide for the use of its young people the kind of institution of higher learning that they ought to have. Too long and too often we have counted our losses and misfortunes in the face of great opportunities rather than counted our blessings and our successes. The most of us receive more than we deserve and too often use unprofitably that which God so graciously lends us. There are always needs in our local churches that call for what we feel that we are able to contribute. It is a strange paradox, however, that if we help to meet the needs of larger interests, our local needs are more easily met. The church that contributes to itself alone finds that its needs are multiplied. The church that has an inclusive vision and contributes to help meet the larger needs of the denomination of which it is a part, in an unexplainable way finds its local needs decreasing and more easily met. Why, I cannot say, nor do I know how it is that the man who saves his life loses it, and the man who loses his life for the sake of the gospel finds it. The Christian religion operates in a way different to anything else that we know or that we possess.

I hope that we as a church will realize that Elon College is not only our institution, but that it is a part of our denominational program and is an essential factor in the development of our constituency and a forward movement of our church.

NORTH CAROLINA AND VIRGINIA S. S. AND C. E. CONVENTION.

Eleven pastors, two Sunday school superintendents, three Christian Endeavor presidents, eighty-six delegates and two visitors, representing 24 churches attended the North Carolina and Virginia Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention at Bethlehem Christian Church Thursday and Friday of last week. Dues from Sunday schools amounted to $64.80, and $3.20 was received from Christian Endeavor societies.

Dr. W. M. Jay of Winston-Salem presided and gave a fine address as president. Reports were made on the Children's work, young people's work, the adult department, Christian Endeavor, and Religious Education. Mrs. O. H. Paris led an excellent worship service. Open forum discussions were led by Rev. Wisseman and Dr. Stanley C. Harrell on materials, finances, social action, missions, worship and organization. Dr. Trela D. Collins, Executive Secretary of the North Carolina Council of Churches, addressed the convention on "Modern Trends in Religious Education."

The Thursday evening program was by the Youth Fellowship of the conference under the leadership of the new president, Mr. Walter Cooper, of Burlington. Musical selections were rendered by young people. The major address of the evening was given by Dean J. D. Messick of Elon College on the topic "Consecration to a Purpose."

The Friday morning program included the business session with election of officers, committee reports and a discussion on evangelism with a closing meditation by Rev. B. J. Earp. The officers for the coming year are: President, Rev. W. M. Stevens, R. 2, Burlington; 1st Vice-President, W. T. Dunn, Lynchburg, Va., 2nd Vice-President, Rev. B. J. Earp, Paces, Va., Rec. Secretary, Miss Evelyn Stewart, Greensboro; Assist. Rec. Secretary, Miss Florence Smith; Cor. Secretary, Miss Margaret Earp; Treasurer, Mrs. Floyd H. Dunn, Lynchburg; Departmental Secretaries—Children, Miss Tora Rudd, Burlington; Young People, Miss Avis Dunn, Vernon Hill; Adults, Rev. C. E. Newman, Virgilina; Administration, Dr. W. M. Jay, Winston-Salem; Missions, Rev. Carr E. Gerringer, Greensboro; Orphanage, Mrs. L. E. Carlton, Paces; College, Prof. A. L. Hook, Elon College; Religious Education, Rev. W. E. Wisseman, Greensboro; Christian Endeavor, Miss Dorothy Truitt, Greensboro.

The session next year will be held at New Lebanon Church, R. F. D., Reidsville, N. C.

THE UPPER ALAMANCE COUNTY FELLOWSHIP MEETING.

The regular fellowship meeting of the Christian Churches of Alamance County was held at Long's Chapel, Sunday, May 30, 1937, at 2:00 P. M.

Rev. W. Millard Stevens, president of the association, presided over the meeting. J. M. Page, of Raleigh, spoke for fifteen minutes on the coming election, against the legalization of liquor. He called upon the religious people of Alamance County not to be deceived in the coming election. He stated that "should the County of Alamance vote for liquor, it can conservatively expect an increase in lawlessness of 75 per cent."

Mrs. M. R. Reeves, of Graham, spoke for ten minutes on "The Sunday School Teacher's Part in the Evangelism of the Local Church." She emphasized the importance of the Church in child life. Her talk was interesting and instructive, and received the endorsement of all those that heard it.

Dr. J. H. Lightbourne, of Burlington, led a general discussion of the pastor's layman's and Sunday school teacher's parts in the evangelism of the local church. Each member present was requested to express their views of the matter. Many worthwhile suggestions were made and if followed, it is believed would result in winning many souls to Christ. It being the main objective of the general discussion, to better plan a program for the purpose of winning souls to Christ.

The attendance at the meeting was estimated at over 200. Dinner was served on the grounds before the meeting, it being memorial day services at the church in charge of Rev. G. C. Crutchfield, the pastor.

Note: This meeting was the second one since the Christian Churches organized. Each meeting is held on the fifth Sunday at various churches.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgement and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

EVANGELISM.

The spirit of evangelism is an urgent and primary need in our Church. By evangelism we mean the same thing Jesus meant when He told His followers to "Make disciples" of all the nations. Disciples are learners and followers. The records of our Church indicate that we need to make "learners and followers" of Jesus.

There is a wide difference of opinion concerning the methods of evangelism. Some think it should be done one way while others think it should be done quite differently. This writer is not minded to argue about method. He does wish to emphasize, however, the necessity for winning people to the Christian way of life and to active membership in the Church. This is the major business of the Church and, if neglected, means the final death of the Church.

"The Christian Sun" invites short articles from ministers and laymen who are interested in evangelism. It may do us all good to know exactly what a revival is expected to accomplish and the methods by which this is to be done. It may be equally as worthwhile to know what the Sunday school and Christian Endeavor society should undertake in the way of winning others to Christ and the Church and how this work can be and is being done. Long articles seldom get read, but brief articles can have real value. If you are interested in evangelism, in any form whatsoever, and have an idea worth printing, send it to the editor and let him pass it on to others who may wish to read it.

ANOTHER RESOLUTION.

The Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention meeting at Bethlehem Church near Altamahaw, North Carolina, last week passed a resolution that should be considered more than "just another resolution." That convention recorded its sincere belief that our Sunday schools and Endeavor societies need the stimulation of a trained worker who will visit these schools and put new life into them. The convention passed a resolution memorializing the Southern Convention to consider the necessity for putting into the field a promotional agent who will promote all of the work of our churches, which will include Sunday schools and Christian Endeavor societies.

People here and there throughout the convention are constantly expressing their same desire. They feel the need for such help. They know of the progress in other denominations which comes because of such leadership. The call is becoming insistent. Our people are not willing to be denied the leadership which other groups have and which they sorely need.

The time is not far distant when this call must be heard by the leaders of the Southern Convention. Resolutions were passed by the Convention itself at its last session looking to this same accomplishment. So far it has seemed impossible to the leaders to make adjustments. It will mean a considerable amount of realignment, but this is not an impossible task. It can be done. Apparently the people generally believe that it is a necessity and when they believe it strongly enough something will inevitably happen. We agree with the resolution and feel that the time is ripe for necessary adjustment to be made so that there can be within the Southern Convention a united promotion which will effectively reach all of our churches. APPEAL TO 287 FOURTH AVENUE.

(An "Advertisement" in Advance.)

Every minister and most parents who are active in Congregational-Christian Churches are much disturbed by certain customs now undermining church influence. I refer to cocktail parties, Sunday night movies, playing for money, and other things which our Church heretofore has tabooed.

Unfortunately, the leaders in this unwarranted onslaught against church standards are often of families among the largest givers to the church expenses, as well as socially prominent. Hence ministers and others who attempt to check those things are subject to criticism and perhaps persecution. These ministers and laymen do not fear for their own well-being; but they are loath to disrupt the church.

It would greatly strengthen the hand of these ministers and church workers to have 287 Fourth Avenue take a definite and public stand on the questions involved. Moreover, we should not be content with one statement, but should hammer away until we get action. I realize that our national headquarters has no "authority"; but it can have influence. Our denomination is greatly in need of courageous leadership along these lines. I can add that the great majority of laymen would back up such leadership.

Congregationalism has grown because of certain outstanding principles. Among these we have taken a stand against liquor. Today we should raise our standards, instead of lowering them. The church is not a social club. Its members are expected to set the community an example and to be leaders, not followers. A church which sees these weakening tendencies creeping into its life should call a halt immediately. The sooner a cancer is removed, the easier and better for all concerned. I further believe we should now make a drive for Sabbath Observance, Family Prayers, Mid-Week Meetings, and other "working tools" which we laymen have let slip away.

But we must not lose any more ground. It would be far better to lose some of our members than to give in one inch to this latest assault. We must avoid the position where we have churches but no church. Moreover, I say this in my official capacity of Moderator of the Congregational-Christian Council.

Moderator.

An Easter Message of China's Leader

By CHIANG KAI-SHEK.

Without religious faith there can be no real understanding of life. Faith in the cause of a revolution is not unlike religious faith. Without faith, human affairs, both great and small, are difficult of achievement.

Often when face to face with opposition and possible danger, we mortals are prone to retreat and to abandon our work halfway. Such lack of confidence in ourselves is often due to the absence of a strong religious faith.

I have now been a Christian for nearly ten years, and during that time I have been a constant reader of the Bible. Never before has this sacred book been so interesting as during my two weeks' captivity in Sian.

This unfortunate affair took place all of a sudden and I found myself placed under detention without having a single earthly belonging. From my captors I asked but one thing, a copy of the Bible.

In my solitude I had ample opportunity for reading and meditation. The greatness and love of Christ burst upon me with new inspiration, increasing my strength to struggle against evil, to overcome temptation, and to uphold righteousness.

I am, indeed, grateful to all my fellow Christians who continually offered prayers on my behalf. I was deeply conscious of a strong spiritual support for which I extend my hearty thanks to all Christians, and to which, before you all today, I testify that the name of God may be glorified.

The many virtues of Christ I cannot possibly enumerate. Today, being Good Friday, I merely wish to explain some of the lessons I have derived from the trials of Christ.

His utterances from the Cross are our spiritual inheritance. Entreating forgiveness for His enemies, He cried: "Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do."

Truly great is the love of Christ! In all my meditations I find these thoughts recurring and providing me with rich spiritual sustenance.

Experience During Captivity.

To illustrate, I am going to recount some of my experiences at Sian. Before I went to Shensi on my second trip, I was already conscious of perverted thoughts and unusual activities in the army there.

I had previously received reports of intrigues and and revolutionary rumblings that were threatening to undermine the unity of the state. My immediate associates tried to persuade me to abandon the journey, but I replied: "Now that our country is unified and the foundations of the state established, the commander-in-chief of the armies has responsibilities for direction and enlightenment from which he dares not withdraw. Furthermore, I have dedicated my soul and body to the service of the state, and there can never be any consideration of my personal safety."

According to the record of the New Testament, when Christ entered Jerusalem for the last time, he plainly knew that danger was ahead, but triumphantly, on an ass, he rode into the city without anguish, without fears,

What greatness! What courage! In comparison, how unimportant my life must be. So why should I hesitate?

My fondness of my troops has always been as great as the love between brothers and this love drew me into the heart of the rebellion. Such disregard of danger in the face of duty caused deep concern to the government, worried the people and, for this, numerous prayers were offered by Christian friends. In the midst of it all my understanding increased and my love multiplied.

Following my detention my captors presented me with terms and demands, with tempting words of kindness, with threats of violence and torture and with a public trial by the "People's Front."

On every hand I was beset by danger, but I had no thought of yielding to pressure. My faith in Christ increased. In this strange predicament I distinctly recalled the forty days and nights Christ passed in the wilderness, withstanding temptation, His prayers in the garden of Gethsemane and the indignities heaped upon Him at His trial.

The prayers he offered to His enemies upon the Cross were ever in my thoughts. I naturally remembered the prayers offered by Dr. Sun Yat-sen during his imprisonment in London. These scenes passed vividly before me again and again like so many pictures.

My strength was redoubled to resist recalcitrants and with the spirit of Christ on the Cross I was preparing to make the final sacrifice at the trial of the so-called "People's Front." Having determined upon this course of action, I was comforted and at rest.

After Settlement of Sian Affair.

Following the settlement of the Sian affair, the rebels, knowing their unwise and treasonable actions, were naturally afraid.

Remembering that Christ enjoined those who sin against us until seventy times seven and upon their repentance, I felt that they should be allowed to start life anew!

At the same time I was greatly humbled that my own faith had not been of such quality as to influence my followers and to restrain them.

Ever since training the cadets and launching the expedition, I have repeated to my followers these two principles:

1. On detecting the slightest selfishness on my part, or discovering plans contrary to the interest of the country and the people, anyone may accuse me of guilt and put me to death.

2. Should my words and actions betray lack of truth and good faith, or indicate departure from the revolutionary cause and principles, any of my subordinates may take me for an enemy and put me to death.

I honestly believe that these two sayings were prompted by sincerity and grew out of my religious faith. They are in line with the spirit of the love of Christ, and the forbearance and magnanimity of Dr. Sun Yat-sen.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

A busy man sat in his office one day recently and was running over a long list of delinquent accounts. He was giving instructions to the stenographer concerning mailing out statements urging the payment of past due bills. Turning to a friend he said: "If every one would do right it would save me a lot of trouble. These people who will not look after their business worry me."

And that passing remark had in it a depth of meaning and significance. Debts sometimes do not worry debtors as much as the creditors. Think of the postage wasted by creditors seeking to collect money from debtors. Think of the trouble occasioned by unkept pledges and broken promises. It is so much less trouble to pay as you go, or pay when you promise, than to put off the settlement of an account. Debts are dangerous. And one of the chief dangers lies in the tendency to make promises that will not be regarded as sacred. That was the condition upon which the man in the office based his observation. It is not wrong to be in debt, but it is wrong to be untruthful about paying the obligation.

But this matter of wrong-doing has a much larger implication than being unfaithful in the payment of obligations. If every one was honest and upright there would be no need of jails and penitentiaries. Every jail is an example of the cost of doing wrong. Because of this spirit in humanity the state must build and maintain such an institution. Criminals must be cared for. All this is expensive, and the expense is the small part entering into the final equation. Hearts are broken; injustice is in evidence; careers are changed; hopes are dissipated; characters are wrecked; and lives are lost.

Think of the disease and ill-health traceable to wrong-doing. The wild oats were sown in the days of youth. What jolly days they were! What glorious nights! But the morning came, and the headache dulled the brain, while memory wandered into the past and brought forth empty shadows of disappearing glory. Then in a few years the flowers faded from the cheeks, the lustre of the eyes was gone, and life lost its charm. In such an hour the wreck seeks relief from some friendly physician who is compelled to give a discouraging diagnosis. Then the story may be followed with tears of sympathy and a day dream of what that life might have been, if right and love could have held sway in those beautiful days. If you live in a city such cases pass you on the street every day. What pitiful objects they are! That is one of the prices of wrong-doing.

The question of right and wrong cannot be lightly passed over without danger to every one involved. The moral and spiritual issues are the predominant factors in human life. Men may hate the ministers, despise the churches and mock the Bible, but prophets of God will remain, the churches will endure and the Bible will challenge the hearts of humanity. Society cannot be safeguarded by making money and amassing wealth. Money is more dangerous than dynamite in the hands of people who are not wise enough to use and not good enough to recognize its moral significance. The future of our country depends upon the moral character of our citizens. It is imperative that people do right if they wish to live. If they do wrong they will surely die. "Righteousness exalteth a nation; but sin is a reproach to any people!"—(Prov. 14:34.)

MR. J. M. DARDEN.

While at Ocean View, trying to find a few hour's rest after a very strenuous commencement program, word reached me that Mr. J. M. Darden had gone from us.

Strange to say, I was in Norfolk when I first learned of Mr. Darden. On invitation, I had come to what was then Third Christian Church as pastor. I met with the Mission Board of the Southern Convention in the interest of our work at that point. Mr. Darden was a member of this Board. He expressed himself as being greatly interested in the Norfolk work; also that he felt that the Christian Church should center its efforts more in our cities and that here we had an opening in a great city and that as a member of the Mission Board he was in favor of the Board assisting the Norfolk work to the extent of its ability. During the building of the Temple, Mr. Darden was greatly pleased and always willing to give counsel and assistance. Realizing that the church must pay its obligations to the bank which amounted to $16,000, Mr. Darden proposed to give $2,000, provided the church would raise the remaining $14,000. This challenge was met, Mr. Darden paid his pledge, and the amount owing the bank by the church was paid in full.

He was interested and always expressed his love for and great interest in the Christian Church. He wanted to see it grow and take its place along with other denominations in the great task of saving the world. He was interested in the institutions of the church, was great help to the Mission Board of which he was a member until his death and gave generously to this enterprise of our denomination. In addition to material assistance, he gave generously of his time and strength. He was determined that the whole church might know about the Christian Orphanage and have an opportunity to contribute to this worthy undertaking that the unfortunate children of our church might have the comforts of life under wholesome and favorable circumstances.

He was also interested in the college, was an honored member of the Board of Trustees for a number of years. He was distressed, together with other friends of the college, when the main building was burned. He offered by wire to contribute the sum $20,000 toward the rebuilding program. Later in conference with Dr. Harper, plans were worked out whereby the auditorium, one of the five new buildings, was erected as a memorial to his father-in-law, Mr. L. M. Whitley, deceased. For a period of years he was not active in the interest of the college. Recently, however, he was greatly concerned for the payment of the debts of the college that it might continue in its service of the church and of the young people of our day. In response to an appeal for new equipment for our girls' dormitories, on Friday before his death, he wired me that he would contribute $175 toward this undertaking and that the check would be mailed at once. In the mail Saturday, the check came. This was perhaps his last contribution to the institutions of his church.

Elon College greatly appreciated what Mr. Darden did for the church and for her institutions. He was a man with unbounded energy, great optimism, marked business ability, and great affection for the causes near his heart. May the Lord bless all who mourn his going.

"Life was not given us to be spent in dreams and reverie, but for active, useful exertion—eviction that turns to some account to ourselves or to others."

WORKING TOGETHER.

On the fourth Sunday morning in May, I asked the congregation of the Suffolk Christian Church to join with the pastor in prayer for an ingathering of new members into our church membership on the first Sunday in June. I followed this up with a letter to about fifty officials in the church reemphasizing the need for prayer and consecration to the task of winning others for the Christ and His Church. I indicated both in the announcement and in the letter that we wanted to bring men, women and young people into realization of the Christ, and His claim for enthronement in their lives, and have the uniting with the church as a public expression of their acceptance of Him, and His way of life for themselves. In the intervening two weeks I felt the power of their prayers, and also the result of their work. We were working together with one another, and we came fully to realize that we were working together with God.

One night, two very fine young high school seniors came to me for letters of recommendation for college. They were members of our congregation, but had never professed publicly their faith in Christ and united with the church. I gave them their recommendations. I also told them how eagerly I was praying for their Christian faith, and how I was planning to call on them for the consecration of their minds, and bodies and spirits to God. And by the way, these two fellows were outstanding players in their championship-winning team, and of noble mein and manner. They said they would come back to my study the following morning and give me their answer. They did. Yesterday they joined the church, and by the side of one of them stood also the father, mother and an elder brother.

During the year one of the teachers in our Junior high department was stabbed to death. A class of fourteen fine boys, about twelve years of age, was left without a teacher. All the active members of that class had been won to the church membership, and faith in God, save three. Yesterday we saw an example of how the works of the righteous do follow them, when the three remaining boys in Bill Daughtrey's class walked up to the altar and expressed their faith and united with the church. Bill Daughtrey was a coach and teacher in our high school and a teacher of a Sunday school class, what a great combination! Every boy in Suffolk loved him, and so did we all.

Last week I called on a well known citizen of our town, who had a daughter graduating in our high school. I quietly talked to him about faith in God, and the fact of Jesus Christ giving himself to manifest God's love for us, and I listened to all the heart hunger that this simple message unearthed in his soul. Yesterday he stood at the altar and professed his faith and trust in God, and by his side stood his youngest son, a lad in high school. During the week I followed up a business man and found him having a boat pulled up for repairs. Steaming hot, busy and perspiring, yet he had time to listen to a plea backed up by the prayers of a great congregation. He had a few days to think it over, and yesterday he answered that plea at the altar, when he was received into church.

Yesterday a wife, mother of two fine boys, the three of them members of the church, said quietly to her husband: "I wish you were going to join the church today." It was not a long speech, but it bore all the marks of genuineness. At a few minutes after twelve o'clock yesterday, those two sons rushed into their grandfather's room with the announcement that their dad had joined church that morning.

A very interesting story lies behind each of the twenty-four folks who united with the church yesterday. But a big part of that story is the prayers, work, and cooperation of the members of the Suffolk Christian Church. And may it be that under the care of the Church and guidance of the Holy Spirit the real story be only just begun.

JOHN G. TRUITT.

FIFTH SUNDAY IN BARNSVILLE PARISH.

The four Churches and the Minister of the Barnesville Parish, for many years, had thought of Fifth Sundays in terms of vacation for the pastor, and a time of leisure for the church leaders. Due to a growing conviction on the part of many that something very constructive to the parish program might be had in the form of a fifth Sunday parish meeting; it was tried as an experiment the fifth Sunday in May. Beginning as an unknown quantity this has already established itself as one of the most helpful phases of parish work.

This first attempt came, quite luckily, just at the conclusion of a week of Leadership Training in the Parish by Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, director of Religious Education for Georgia. The entire program was built around the theme of Christian Education. The Sunday school was connected by leaders from all four churches, with Rev. T. L. Leverett of Woodbury teaching the Adult class. President George C. Bellingrath, of Piedmont College, Demorest, Georgia, gave a valuable address on "Building People." Prior to the address a service of consecration of all church leaders was held.

After the bountiful picnic dinner, which was served by Liberty Chapel, the entertaining church, the afternoon session was opened by the worship service in charge of Rev. T. L. Leverett.

Each church was well represented, and each clerk gave an interesting report on "Church Highlights," the two outstanding things accomplished by the local church during the year. Bethany reported the installation of electric lights, which took place during its fiftieth anniversary year. Fredonia, at Barnesville, set the pace by reporting on the recent purchase of a six-room parsonage for the parish. Meansville's clerk told of their unique system of transporting children to the Sunday school: four members, who have cars, alternate in bringing a load of children, this has created one entire class. Liberty Chapel has been in the parish about eighteen months, but during that time it has painted both, the interior and exterior of the building, stippled the windows, painted the pews, exchanged the old organ for a piano, planted shrubbery on grounds, and purchased three dozen new hymnals. As parish projects, each church has placed their name on the front of the building, and also road markers wherever necessary; and each church had a part in furnishing the parsonage. Three out of the four are using the Cent-A-Meal boxes for missionary giving.

The meeting adjourned to meet with Bethany Church, at The Rock, the fifth Sunday in August. A play reading by Liberty Church Young People was the last item on the program.

W. T. SCOTT.

The New England Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in session in Gardner, Massachusetts, recently, adopted the following resolution:

"We note with sincere and profound regret that liquor is served within the home of the President of the United States, and that it was even served at a New Year's reception to young people within the White House. We note also that the government has recently dispatched its first shipment of rum from the Virgin Islands where it was made as a Works Progress Administration project."

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

THE GALILEAN CONQUERERS.

That which has given heart to our missionaries and all Christian missionaries in China, as nothing else has in a century, is the acceptance of Christ as his Savior by the China's Generalissimo, Chiang Kai-shek. The General's wife was educated at Mt. Holyoke College, Massachusetts, and accepted the Christian faith in its simplicity and power and has lived this faith so consistently that her distinguished husband became a convert and now the message of this man's faith is reaching all China where he is so honored and beloved. Many SUN readers have heard something of this remarkable man and his conversion to Christianity, but he delivered a sermon, or an address, on Easter Sunday that struck the deepest spiritual note he has yet uttered.

Our missionaries write nothing has ever been known like the spontaneous rejoicing of the entire nation when he was released on Christmas Day.

Every friend of Missions will find profound inspiration in this quotation from his sermon:

"I have now been a Christian for nearly ten years, and during that time I have been a constant reader of the Bible. Never before has this sacred book been so interesting to me as during my two weeks' captivity in Sian. From my captors I asked but one thing, a copy of the Bible. In my solitude I had ample opportunity for reading and meditation. The greatness and love of Christ burst upon me with new inspiration, increasing my strength to struggle against evil, to overcome temptation and to uphold righteousness.

"I am, indeed, grateful to all my fellow Christians who continually offered prayers on my behalf. I was deeply conscious of a strong spiritual support for which I extend my hearty thanks to all Christians, and to which, before you all today, I testify that the name of God may be glorified."

When he faced the journey to Sian as a clear duty, his friends had tried to dissuade him. This was his answer:

"Now that our country is unified and the foundations of the State established, the commander-in-chief of the armies has responsibilities for direction and enlightenment from which he dare not withdraw. Furthermore, I have dedicated my soul and body to the service of the State, and there can never be any consideration of my personal safety."

His concluding words were:

"Today I find that I have taken a further step and have become a follower of Jesus Christ. This makes me realize more fully that the success of the revolution depends upon men of faith and that men of character, because of their faith, cannot sacrifice their principles for personal safety under circumstances of difficulty and crisis. In other words, a man's life may be sacrificed, his person held in bondage, but his faith and spirit can never be restrained."

Such a witness challenges our average Christianity as lived in the churches of America. This man faced down death and claimed the sacrifice of Christ as the source of his complete indifference to danger and his heroic acceptance of Duty.

RURAL AMERICA FOR CHRIST.

Those who make the greatest noise often receive the most attention, but this does not prove that importance is in proportion to commotion. Mark Twain used to tell of the Mississippi stern-wheel steamer with a very loud whistle; steam was so low that every time the whistle blew the steamer's engine had to stop. American cities with their hustle and noise, their rapid transit, their factories and scare-line newspapers, usually receive more attention than the quiet rural districts, but this does not prove that cities are more important to national life than are country towns and farming communities.

For the coming year (1937-38) the Home Mission study topic is to be "Rural America." Until recently the farmers and rural villages have been unorganized and without any powerful mouthpiece so that they have received little attention. Today the Secretary of Agriculture, the Farmer's Unions and Cooperatives, such men as the late Kenyon L. Butterfield, and the Agricultural Missions Foundation, have brought the rural problems forcibly to public attention.

The study of Rural America is of great importance for many reasons: First, because of its size. One-half of the people of North America live on farms, in rural districts or in towns and villages of less than 2,500 population. Although the largest amount of taxes do not come from rural districts, neither the Government nor the Church can afford to overlook the importance of the 50,000,000 people who live outside of our cities and their residential suburbs. It is estimated that 25,000,000 American children and youth live in the country districts. These are bound to be a great factor in the life of the nation. Three hundred years ago all American life was rural; there was no truly urban population.

Second: Rural America is important, because of the variety of its people, languages and problems. The occupations include, not only the farmers and dairymen, and small town tradespeople, but the mountaineers, the miners, the lumbermen, and the ranchmen. The races include, not only descendants of the Pilgrims, Dutch and other early settlers, but more recent immigrants from Italy, Greece, Poland, Russia and other European countries; also Negroes Indians, Mexicans, and Orientals. Many religious beliefs are involved—Jewish, Protestant, Roman, and Greek Catholic, Hinduism, Buddhism, Shinto, Islam and various philosophical cults, as well as atheism and rank paganism. These present foreign mission peoples and problems at home.

Third: Rural America is important because the farms and country districts form the basis of our material prosperity. From the earth come all things that sustain life and that are used in manufacture—the food, the cotton, the minerals and oils for physical needs and for greater buildings and industrial enterprises. The land is the great God-given source of wealth.

Fourth: Rural America is important because of the character and influence of rural peoples. Here are the pioneering spirit of sacrificial toil; the prophetic vision looking toward the future; here we find greater independence of thought and action, rugged individualism and homespun philosophy. Here too, in the past, at least, have been manifested true faith and sterling honesty. The rural districts have always been the great feeders of the cities, not only in food supplies, but in population. From the country come the ambitious and stalwart youth to supply brain and brawn for industrial, commercial, political and professional activity. Abraham Lincoln and many other national leaders came from the country; so did Samuel Colgate and countless other industrial giants. D. L. Moody, America's greatest evangelist, with a world-wide influence, was a lad from the small town; so were the majority of metropolitan preachers and famous missionaries. It is not wealth and comfort, but character, hard work, and opportunity that produce great leaders.

Fifth: Rural America is important because the future of the country is inseparably linked to rural life, for good or for evil. If the farmers' families, and the small town and roadside populations, are neglected physically, intellectually and spiritually they will starve or will poison the city and national life. Keep the sources pure and virile and the nation will feel the benefit; allow these sources to become corrupt and the nation will decay.

Sixth: It is important to study Rural America, because this field has been grossly neglected. People in many thinly populated areas have been almost or wholly without religious privileges—as among the mountains, mining settlements and scattered farm lands. In other cases villages and towns have been overchurched, but undernourished and have lived, and have lived religiously at a poor dying rate. There is great need of Christian readjustment and for the cooperation between urban and suburban churches that have wealth in the midst of plenty, and the rural parishes that are weak and starving for leadership and material equipment. Let city churches assist rural parishes.

Seventh: But the greatest reason for the study of Rural America is in order that the supreme need of the rural peoples may be supplied—the need for a clear knowledge of Christ and His Way of Life; the need for Christian training for children and youth; the need for effective leadership; and the need for well-directed social life and Christian activity.

The care and prayerful study of the needs and opportunities of Rural America, and the application of these studies in practical lines of activity, should mean great blessing to America in both civic and rural life. Jesus Christ himself was brought up in a small village and spent most of His earthly life ministering to rural people in Galilee. As a rule His parables were drawn from the fields. Most of His early disciples were from the country, and when they were scattered by persecution, they went forth to preach the Gospel in the towns and villages and by the wayside.

It is clearly important that we make an earnest study of Rural America, with especial reference to discovering the ways in which Christ may have a larger and more controlling influence on the fifty million men and women and children in our rural areas. To this end the mission study books have been prepared, Rural Life Sunday is observed, and for this purpose we offer this special issue of The Review.

THE VIRGINIA STATE PREACHING MISSION.

The National Preaching Mission conducted services in twenty-eight cities last autumn, spending four days in each of twenty-four of those cities. Such enthusiastic response attended their efforts that another series of cities will be visited in the same manner in the fall of 1937. Religious leaders of national and international importance are being secured for these four-day missions which will center, so far as Virginia is concerned, in Richmond. Norfolk is being set up also as a four-day mission and the State Committee will assist in arrangements therefor. (Dates for Norfolk Mission, October 31—November 3; Richmond, November 4-7.)

At these four-day sessions it is expected that representatives from all over the State will be in attendance, particularly members of local committees preparing for one or two-day mission.

The Purposes of the Preaching Missions are: 1. To encourage the ministry of the church. 2. To restore evangelism to its central place in church life. 3. To train laymen for personal evangelism. 4. To emphasize the essential unity of all communions. 5. To resolve the division between the personal and social gospel. 6. To promote closer cooperation between churches and organized labor. 7. To bring the Christian message more effectively to schools and colleges. 8. To challenge the Church to a fresh sacrificial endeavor. 9. To stress the sufficiency of Christ for modern life.

PROGRAM

Suggested programs for the one and two-day missions will be provided upon request by the State Secretary; Address: Dr. G. S. Reamey, 1629 Williamsburg Ave., Richmond, Virginia. In general, these programs include addresses by outstanding ministers and laymen at mass meetings; at special meetings for ministers; at special meetings for women; addresses before student groups; radio addresses, seminars; noon luncheon addresses.

PLAN

Norfolk and Richmond will sponsor one and two-day missions throughout the State, these missions to be held from November 7-21st. Two-day missions will be offered to the other cities of the State, and one-day missions to the larger towns. The Virginia State Preaching Mission, it is hoped, will reach its culmination in a series of eight-day missions in every local Protestant Church during the week of November 28-December 5th, or as near thereto as possible.

HOW TO START

It is urged that local ministers cooperate with their representatives on the State Committee in definitely planning for the one or two-day missions and notify Dr. J. Manning Potts, State Chairman, 311 Methodist Building, Richmond, Virginia, or the State Secretary at once.

WHAT OTHERS SAY

Bishop Arthur J. Moore: "Last year I had the privilege of participating in the National Preaching Mission. I am very much interested in the Virginia State Preaching Mission this fall and my hope is that the preachers and laymen of the Methodist Church in Virginia will give their whole-hearted support to the move-

SOUTH GEORGIA CONFERENCE.

As this is written we are in the midst of the South Georgia Young People's Conference—and it is going over in a fine way. There are fifty of us here now, and more are expected before the week is over.

This is the first time some of us have been in a summer conference, where the food is brought and cooked by the delegates. The results are certainly fine, for the meals have been excellent and, although it is not easy to do kitchen work when others are doing more interesting things the young people have done their share cheerfully and willingly.

Rev. W. T. Scott and Rev. Carl Parker have worked together in "putting over" this conference. They have been ably assisted by Mrs. Parker and some of the women of the churches in South Georgia, so far as planning and preparing the meals is concerned. Pattie Lee Coghill, as usual in a conference, is consulted on any and all occasions and does much to make the whole conference a success. All of the classes are already showing splendid results, in active participation on the part of the students and great interest in the subjects discussed and presented. Mr. Held is in charge of recreation and the Seminoles and Cherokees are having great contests, especially in volley ball.

We feel especially fortunate in having Rev. Raymond Dudley of India as our guest missionary in the Southeast this year. We, here at South Georgia, feel that we have made a new and very worthwhile friend and we know that he will enter into the life of the other conferences when he reaches them. We are glad to highly recommend him to you.

It has been a privilege to be able to attend the South Georgia Conference and we are sure that all the other conferences in the Southeast will follow the splendid example it has set for their work this summer.

WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA SUNDAY SCHOOL AND CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR CONVENTION.

The Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention of the Western North Carolina Conference will meet this year in a one-day session, Thursday, July 1st, with Pleasant Union Church, Randolph County. A good program has been prepared and it is hoped that all churches will send delegates. The meeting will begin at 10 o'clock when the president, Rev. S. M. Penn, of Sophia, calls to order and will close with a night session in the interest of young people's department.

The Sunday school and Christian Endeavor Societies should not only be represented, but should send their contributions and a complete report. Pastors, superintendents, Christian Endeavor presidents, and others are urged to do their best to make the Convention a success.

RECREATION THAT DEVELOPS CHARACTER.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC
FOR JUNE 27, 1937.

SCRIPTURE: Col. 1:18b; I Cor. 10:31.

Daily Readings—

- June 21—Aiming at Mastery—I Cor. 9:24, 27.
- June 22—Physical Development—I Tim. 4:8.
- June 23—Recreation on Sunday—Acts 16:13-15.
- June 24—Jesus' Rest and Recreation—Mark 6:30-32.
- June 25—Learning Self-Control—Prov. 16:32.
- June 26—Jesus' Know-the-Bible Game—Luke 2:42-52.

America faces a problem today unlike that of any other age. When people work on a shorter hour schedule per day, it naturally leaves more hours for leisure and recreation. The object of this topic is to bring to our young people that type of recreation which develops character.

The National Recreation Association has set six aims for developing a recreational program to build character:

1. Substitute participation for "looking on."
2. Substitute amateur recreation for commercial.
3. Substitute neighborhood recreation for centralized.
4. Substitute organized recreation for unorganized leisure.
5. Harmonize recreation with health, safety, and economy.
6. To provide the greatest possible variety of recreational opportunities so that everyone has a chance to do many new things.

Someone has given five tests for good recreation: (1) Is it recreational? (2) Is it social? (3) Is it educational? (4) Is it spiritual? (5) Is it practical?

It's Up to You

Laugh a little—sing a little
As you go your way!
Work a little—play a little.
Do this very day!

JOSEPH'S KINDNESS TO HIS KINDRED.

LESSON: XII—JUNE 20, 1937

GOLDEN TEXT: Be ye kind one to another, tenderhearted, forgiving each other, even as God also in Christ forgave you.—Ephesians 4:32.

LESSON: Genesis 25:16-50:26.

PRINTED TEXT: Genesis 46:1-17; 50:24-26.

When Pharaoh heard that Joseph's brethren had come into Egypt he was pleased. He ordered his servants to load their beasts of burden with food so that they could make the trip back to Canaan, and he commanded them to bring their father back to live in Egypt. He furnished wagons for the women and children, and promised them an adequate living when they returned. Joseph naturally rejoiced in all this and he also added gifts of wearing apparel for his brothers and his father. Thus provided for, the brothers returned to Canaan and told Jacob, their aged father, the good news. It seemed too good to be true—"and Jacob's heart fainted, for he believed them not" that this boy was not only alive; he was the governor of a great nation. Eventually they convinced the old man that it was all true, and "the spirit of Jacob, their father, revived." Only those who have had news that a son or daughter whom they thought was dead, is alive and doing well, can really understand Jacob's emotions at this time. Perhaps, by the way, we would be a little braver and brighter if we realized that our loved ones who are dead to us are alive with Christ forevermore and doing well.

The Vision at Beersheba.

On their way to Egypt, Jacob and his party came to Beersheba. It was hallowed ground. Here Abraham, his grandfather, had digged a well and had planted a grove and had worshipped God. And here Isaac, his father, also had digged a well. There was a religious association with the place. His forefathers had had an experience of God there. It is well for children occasionally to visit the places where their fathers have had experiences of God, places where they have worshipped, and places where they have set up memorials of religious experiences. We need to be marking the course of our spiritual pilgrimages for our boys and girls.

"And God spoke to Israel in visions of the night." He was in the high mood for communion with God and God could speak to him. There came a fresh assurance of God's care and a renewed emphasis upon His promise to make of Jacob a great nation. The secret of the Lord is with them that fear Him.

A Happy Reunion.

What a dramatic moment it was when Jacob and Joseph met! They had not seen each other for thirty-seven years. Indeed, Jacob could say that this was his son whom he thought was dead, and behold he is alive again! They fell on each other's necks and wept as strong men should weep under the circumstances. It is a mistake sometimes to repress emotion. There are times when it is manly to show emotion. There is a place for wholesome emotion in religion.

Standing Before Kings.

The Egyptians looked upon shepherds as an abomination. Instead of being located in the heart of Egypt, therefore, the children of Israel were settled in Goshen, a land rich in pasturage. Thus they were afforded a means of livelihood, at the same time they were somewhat shielded from the contaminating influences of the great Egyptian cities. All of this was a part of God's plan for working out His purpose in the history of this chosen people.

It must have been a dramatic moment when Israel, the old man who had lived the simple pastoral life in Canaan, was presented to Pharaoh, the mighty monarch of the empire of that day. It was no quirk of fate that records Jacob as bestowing a blessing upon Pharaoh; it was simply a case where sheer force of character and the wisdom and dignity of age confers a blessing even upon the mighty. The man who is accustomed to stand before God need not fear to stand before earthly kings.

A Sore Famine.

The famine became worse and worse, and conditions became more acute. When the people had no money with which to buy food, they gave their herds of cattle. When their cattle were gone they gave their lands for food. Thus were they reduced to practical bondage to Pharaoh. It appears that they were hopelessly in debt to him. Perhaps they were the original "share-croppers." But acute situations demand drastic remedies, as witness war-time rules and regulations. One wonders, however, about the ethics of what the Egyptian government did. But who are we to sit in judgment on these people in the light of many of our modern practices,

A Father's Blessing.

Jacob realized that the end was near, so he called his sons to his side to bestow a father's blessing upon them individually. With keen insight he drew with a few swift strokes the character of his sons, and with sure insight he painted the future for them. Back of all these words, some of which have little meaning for us today, there is the tremendous fact of a father's blessing. Words have tremendous power. And many a young man or young woman, has been steadied and inspired by a father's or mother's blessing upon them as they left the old home place and went out into the world. And many a man remembers with thanks and joy the blessing of a father or mother about to die.

The Sunset.

At last, worn out, the old patriarch fell on sleep. He had had an eventful life, a mixture of storm and calm. He came to a ripe old age in peace. God had worked out His purpose on him, and he had been changed from Jacob, the Supplanter, to Israel, the Prince who Prevailed. And when at last he died, in keeping with the old man's wishes they carried him back to his native land for burial. How many sorrowing loved ones have carried the remains of some member of their family back to the "old burying ground," or to the family plot in the cemetery.

A Great Character.

There were many elements of great character in Joseph's life. Guilelessness, frankness, tactfulness, sensitiveness to evil, purity, humility, wisdom, filial affection, manly energy, resolute adherence to duty, prudence, self-control, sympathy, hopefulness, considerateness, courage, willingness to forgive, patience, large-hearted generosity, genuine and attractive goodness.

WHAT GRANDVIEW WILL INCLUDE.

"I will lift up my eyes unto the hills."

"How good, and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity."

"Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth."

"Oh, come, let us worship and bow down; let us kneel before the Lord, our Maker."

These Bible verses give us a picture of the activities that will take place and the spirit that will prevail there.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
Chaplain in the U. S. Navy

MONDAY.

WHAT A WORLD WE LIVE IN!

"All things are thy servants."—
(Revised version)—Psalms 119:91.

The barber said to me this morning, "I am feeling fine. I slept well. I have had a good walk to my business. I have seen nature in its fulness. The gardens are in flower. The trees are in fruitage. The air is sweet and exhilarating. All things seem to be just for me. What a wonderful world we live in."

How good it is to realize that God sits upon the throne of the universe! To feel that we are His and He is ours, and that He has created everything for us!

This understanding frees us from worry, releases us from the thralldom of fear and gives us the consciousness that everything is subject to our loving Heavenly Father.

Prayer—Our Father, we must be true to Thee! By Thy help we can. We pray for this and ask that Thou fit us in the whole scheme of things Amen.

TUESDAY.

STANDING BEFORE GOD.

"Ye stand this day, all of you, before the Lord your God."—Deut. 29:10.

One cannot realize that all things are His and that they have been made by an Omnipotence to serve Him, without realizing that he stands before God.

God also sits upon the throne of the spiritual realm as well as the physical. He is the center of all things, and from Him springs every condemnation of wrong and every issue of God. Every act, every word, every thought of ours, is before Him; and there is not a force for good that is not comparable to the forces of nature. These forces serve to lift us from what we are to what we ought to be.

How joyful are we before the face of the Lord! Who would swap it for any other station in the world? All good things can come to us.

Prayer—Dear Heavenly Father, receive us into Thy presence today with forgiveness. Receive us with some idea of the happy service we may render in this glorious world. This we ask for Jesus' sake. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

METALIC SOULS.

"Where thy treasure is, there will thy heart be also."—Matt. 6:21.

If there were nothing else in the world but beauty and goodness and every thing that contributes to our good, we would be safe. We could be a part of it all without an effort or a thought. But unfortunately this is not it. The Lord said: "I have set before you the way of life and death." The prophet brought this to our attention and said: "Choose ye this day whom ye will serve."

It is well for every one to watch his desires with the greatest care. Our cherished desires constitute our destiny far more than we realize. This does not mean that the one who earnestly desires riches shall gain the longed for wealth, but it does mean that he shall gain a "metallic soul." His heart becomes "a stamped coin." Christ expressed only a truism when He said that hearts follow treasures. To treasure the good and the beautiful, the eternal and the infinite, means to lift the heart and life heavenward.

Prayer—Dear Heavenly Father, lift us up to Thyself, and to the place where Thy infinite spirit dwells. Amen.

THURSDAY.

THE GLORY OF THE WORKER.

"He was filled with wisdom and understanding and skill, to work all works in brass."—I Kings 7:14.

Between the Hiram, the noble artisans of Tyre, and King Solomon himself who gave orders in the building of the temple, one is inclined to admire the former the most. There is a song we sing, a part of which says:

"The sword is a weapon to conquer fields
I honor the man that shakes it;
But naught is the lad the bright sword
wields,
Compared to the lad that makes it.
Then huzzah for the anvil, the forge and the sledge,
Huzzah for the sparks that fly.
If I had a cup I would straightway pledge,
The armorer, . . . that is I."

With the multitudes of college men in our country now unemployed, we are learning that college men get head learning, but a very poor learning with their hands. Never in the history of the world was there such a demand for skilled laborers. No small part of this life is the full use of our physical equipment which He has given us.

Prayer—God of the skilled universe, may our hands learn to worship Thee as well as our heads and hearts. Amen.

FRIDAY.

OUR CERTAINTY.

"Faith is the substance of things hoped for, a conviction of things not seen."—Heb. 11:1.

"Security" is a universal word these days. We have Federal security, state security, industrial security, the Townsend plan, etc. . . . who does not want security and the conviction of its certainty? That hope is the strength of our lives and when it fades away, life perishes. But usually we get on the wrong track in our search for this security. We place it in material things and feel that we are sunk without it. If faith in God first is our security, why can we not come to Him for it?

Kagawa was once asked, "What about your health?" To which we are told, he replied in evident simplicity, "My health, my health—why I never think about it. God takes care of that. I am too busy in His service." There are thousands whose experiences tally with Kagawa's experience that "God does care." "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and His righteousness and all things shall be added unto you," still challenges the faith of God's children.

Prayer—Lord, teach us to believe. May our faith be so great that we can come into Thy security. Amen.

SATURDAY.

GOD'S HURLINGS.

"God shall hurl at him, and not spare."—Job 27:13-23.

It is a strange picture, this of God hurling a javelin. We love to think of Jehovah as a God who is love, and not as a Jupiter, from whose hand the thunderbolts go crashing through the skies, to destroy disobedient mortals. But Job was a wise man, and Job saw God otherwise. He saw Him as an Avenger of the divine justice.

And surely such is our God, though He is much besides. We would not have a God who took no cognizance of wickedness, a God to whom righteousness and unrighteousness are as one. We exult in a God of law, a God of firm decisions, of invincible truth. We fasten our lives to Him as to the everlasting Rock.

When the evil is punished, we feel more keenly the safety of those that are on the side of God.

Prayer—Hurl at all the wickedness in us, our Father. We shall know that we are smitten by Thy Fatherhood, and that all Thy penalties are bestowed in love. Amen.

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D., Pastor.

COME DOWN FROM THE CROSS!

By REV. VICTOR B. CHICOINE.

Matt. 27:40.

God's Son dying and being taunted! Could any dramatist among the ancient Greeks—or Shakespeare himself—have created an imaginative scene more gripping and stark, that would have made a deeper mark on the human mind? Once in the wilderness, three years before, Jesus had been tempted to manifest His great powers in a cheap and spectacular way by casting Himself down from a pinnacle of the temple in order to win the crowd. Yet as powerful as that earlier temptation was, this one on the day He was dying was far more cogent. Then His life was not at stake—but today it was!

"Come down from the cross!" the taunt went up. It was the same old temptation again. Only this time dressed in a different garb, and far more reasonable, and therefore more potent than before! The temptation to do the cheap and spectacular act, the one which will give the maximum amount of personal satisfaction in the shortest time, instead of doing daily and continually unheralded acts that build, does appeal!

Suppose our Lord had accepted the low challenge of the crowd. Suppose for the sake of the argument that he had unloosed Himself from the spikes and then gracefully floated to earth before them in a nonchalant manner? Suppose this had happened? That would have done very little to convince them of His lordship. It would never have been lasting and satisfying proof that He was the Son of God. Even if there had been such an act, that generation, as all other generations, would have soon been crying out: "It was all a trick. We do not know how He did it—but it was a trick!" And then someone else would have most certainly made this other devastating statement: "He came down because, after all His preaching about a cross, He was not able to endure one Himself!" Be glad that no supernatural powers were used that day to release Jesus.

But other temptations, even more subtle than this taunt from the crowd, must have been coursing through the mind of Jesus. They were an ungrateful people. They had listened to His words as if they were the very breath of life to them. They had taken the food that He had set before them. They had accepted His healing power—and now this. Only a few days before they had welcomed Him to their city in glad acclaim. One would have thought that out of such enthusiasm an organization could have been built that would have overcome the world. And it had all come to this.

And these men and women, why were they so consistently dull, and apparently so permanently stupid? Could they not see that for generations they had been duped and tricked, and that now, even while He, who could have saved them for great purposes was dying, their leaders had duped and tricked them once more? It was all so plain. Why die for a crowd like that?

And there was life to be lived. There was His mother and His brothers and sisters down there. Did He not owe something to them? And there was blue Galilee; and there were the quiet hillsides—the fragrant flowers—there was life as He loved it! And might there not still be some men and women somewhere—other men and women—who were different from this crowd milling about Him—who had better stuff in them? Why not come down from the cross?

Our churches and communities are cluttered with men and women who have come down from crosses! Some have come down because they allowed sin—black, hideous, soul-searing sin—to enter into their lives. They give other excuses, but that is the real reason. Others come down, not because they have indulged in acts that are grisly and shocking, but because they allowed their souls to become fatty through crass and cheap indulgences!

And others have come down because they have accepted the challenge in a jubilant, happy-go-lucky manner. In their minds they said: "Being on a cross will attract attention. Now we will be noticed. In this place we will be somebody. And we believe that our positions can be so arranged here that we will really have a good time of it."

Then some real problem appears—some terrible issue arises. And some one, earnestly concerned with this issue, comes to them expecting earnestness in return. Then uncomfortable-ness and wavering of spirit is upon them. Maybe they have gone too far. Doubts begin to gather. Philosophy takes the place of what the world thought was a deep passion for the right. Excuses are heard. And soon you will see these persons sliding hurriedly, sometimes very ungracefully, down from their crosses. Sometimes a few of the wily ones come down in a manner that is almost unobservable. And it may be that for a long while their speech is so carefully chosen that one is not certain whether they have come down or are still up there on their crosses. But the time and events will eventually show that they are down—in spite of their well-chosen words—and that they are done with the stern business of crosses!

If one desires deeply to find a cross, it is a very simple matter. One has but to look about to see the many gaunt, and great, and unoccupied crosses there are in the world. It should not be that way but that is the truth of it. While on the other hand there are not enough of the little crosses for all who want them. The supply of little crosses, not high up, but near the ground, pleasant cross, well padded, well upholstered, has been exhausted for a long time. But the crosses that you and I are willing to occupy—these crosses—how do they stand out against the sky line of life? How do they compare with the bleak, heavy-beamed one, that once crowned Golgotha?

There should be tremendously deep reasons for one going to a cross—reasons deeper than the desire to attract attention—and far deeper than passing emotions. In the soul of Jesus there were deep and mighty reasons for His going to the cross, and for His remaining there.

He stayed there, because He knew that if He descended and argued afresh with His crucifiers the argument would be wordy and endless. He stayed on the cross, and died there, knowing that it would be an uncontrollable act of faith in God's power to carry Him through. He stayed there, because, although fully aware that justice, integrity, and love were being slain that day in Him—tomorrow this triumvirate would conquer the world!

But these words of Charles Clayton Morrison penetrate deeply into the reason why Jesus did not come down from the cross: "When I see a man bear bravely his misfortunes or his burden, and still keep his grip on God, I cannot help taking some part of his fine faith into my soul."

Jesus was given the high commis-

The Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

Since school closed several of our girls and boys have taken jobs and have said good-by to the orphanage that has given them food, shelter and a home for several years. The orphanage has given them its best since they have been here and wishes for them the best as they go out.

The writer was talking to a orphanage Superintendent on one occasion and the Superintendent said: "I cry when they come in, and I cry when they go out." The writer never cries when they come in, but after they are here from early childhood until they reach the age of eighteen, it gives us a little different feeling, and sometimes a tear will just trickle down our cheek when they go. They are going out in life to meet their own problems and meet them alone. Lions may be along their pathway, but we hope the training they received while in the Christian Orphanage will be of some help to make them brave enough to not be afraid.

We took in two little girls a few days ago, just seven years old. They are twins, and they are so near alike that it is difficult to tell one from the other. The only way the writer can tell them apart is from the fact that Helen has a wart on her hand. They are beautiful little girls and just as sweet as they are pretty.

It is quite a busy time at the orphanage. The seasons have been good. The wheat and oat crops are very good this year. We are through harvesting oats and at this writing have started harvesting wheat.

Our cabbage, beans, and other garden vegetables are coming in and if we can have seasons, we ought to have vegetables from now on.

We want to appeal to the Sunday schools that aren't on the list of givers to join—we have a number of applications that we cannot take because of lack of funds.

WILLIAMS.

Mrs. Maud Craven Williams, wife of C. B. Williams, was born October 17, 1895 and died May 22, 1937. In her teens she was converted and united with Pleasant Ridge Christian Church (Randolph County, N. C.) where she remained an active, loyal member until her death. She loved her church and served when and where she was needed. Funeral service was conducted at Pleasant Ridge by her pastor, Rev. J. F. Apple, assisted by Rev. J. M. Allred, a former pastor and Rev. B. H. Lowdermilk.

Besides her husband, she leaves to mourn their lost a daughter, Ethel, and a son, Ray, both of the home; her mother, Mrs. Rankin Craven; a brother G. C. Craven, and a host of relatives and friends.

No MORE TEARS.

"He shall wipe away every tear from their eyes."—Rev. 21:1-8.

Weeping shall endure only for the brief night of this life; joy comes in the morning of heaven. What a glorious change it will be, never to know a tear again, or an anxiety! Through the endless reaches of eternity we are to have no single instant of grief, no moment of worry.

It seems too good to be true, and yet it is true, entirely true. It is what the world would never lead us to expect, but it is exactly what we would expect from our loving heavenly Father. He plans only happiness for His children, and He has all power with which to carry out His plans.

When we look ahead with foreboding for our little life on earth, let us extend our anticipations only a short way farther, reaching out into God's tearless, endless years.

Prayer—How we bless Thee, O God, for Thy tender provisions! How we thank Thee for Thy gracious revelation of them! And how our hearts overflow in gratitude for Thy Son, through whom these joys all come to us from Thee. Amen.

VIRGINIA STATE PREACHING MISSION.

ment. I see in it large possibilities for the total program of the Church."

William R. King: "The National Preaching Mission is the greatest movement modern Protestantism has ever known."

Evangelical Messenger: "Nothing in American Protestantism within recent years had a finer effect upon the religious life of our country."

Dr. Sparks W. Melton: "I am confident it can be of inestimable value in bringing vividly before the church people responsibility and obligation."

Dr. Beverly D. Tucker: "The State Preaching Mission should enlist the enthusiastic support of all who are concerned for the revival of religion in our modern life . . . Such a preaching mission offers the opportunity . . . to discover how much greater are the interests in common than the superficial differences. I am happy to endorse the proposal and to cooperate with the leaders in any way that my services can be of help."

The magnificent response received from the ministers of the State point to a readiness on their part to do all within their power during the days of this Mission to arouse Virginia for God and the Church as she has not been aroused before.

AN EASTER MESSAGE OF CHINA'S LEADER.

The life of Christ reveals a long record of affliction and constant persecution. His spirit of forbearance, His love, and His benevolence shine through it all. No more valuable lesson has yet come to me out of my Christian experiences.

Dr. Sun Yat-sen was a Christian, and the greatest thing he received from Christ was love—love for the emancipation of the weaker races, and for the welfare of the oppressed people.

This spirit remains with us and reaches to the skies. I am an ardent follower of the revolution, and although my faith in Dr. Sun at the outset did not appear to have any religious significance, it was similar to a religious faith.

For this reason I have become a follower of Dr. Sun and his revolution based on San Min Chu I.

Today I find that I have taken a further step and have become a follower of Jesus Christ. This makes me realize more fully that the success of the revolution depends upon men of faith and that men of character, because of their faith cannot sacrifice their principles for personal safety under circumstances of difficulty and crisis.

In other words, a man's life may be sacrificed, his person held in bondage, but his faith and spirit can never be restrained. This is due to confidence brought about by faith. On this Good Friday these reflections are ours. For such is the importance of faith in the revolution, and faith in religion.

What I have just said represents my spiritual conceptions of Good Friday, interspersed with a few facts out of my own experience. I offer them as testimony, and not in any sense to exalt my own worthiness and achievements.

"A DAD TO BE PROUD OF"

By TRUMAN HOLLIS WOODWARD.

Back in the days when they made more fuss over grammar school graduation than they do today over high school commencement I congratulated a valedictorian. "You did fine," I said. "You earned all the applause they gave you. It must be a perfect evening for you."

"It would be perfect," she answered, "if mother or dad were here."

Mother and Dad in her case were entirely imaginary characters, for practically all her life had been spent in an orphan asylum.

"You know," she went on, "I have always pictured Dad as a soldier, giving his life for his country. I think he was tall and straight, manly and brave; a Dad anyone could be proud of."

"I'll bet he was all that you dream," I replied. "I only hope that I turn out half as good a Dad."

Afterwards I got to thinking what kind of a father I was; or rather, what kind of a father a good dad really should be.

I liked that girl graduate's ideal, but it seems to me now other standards are of equal, or greater importance.

First of all, I maintain, a father must be fair and impartial. The love in his heart should include every one of the children. It matters not that his family is large. His love must embrace them all. Not only bright Mary who has such perfect report cards, but blundering Bill who so often is kept after school. Not only nice Percy, the pride of his mother's heart, but roistering Tommy who spent a whole year in reform school. Human a father may be, so human he has a real preference; yet in fairness to all there will be no favorites. He will be just, square, impartial.

A second criterion by which to judge a father is, "Does he keep close to his children?" Not close in a geographical sense, though that oftentimes is imperative. But close in a spiritual way: seeing, appreciating, sympathizing, commending, counselling . . .

The third requisite for good fatherhood is—by contrast—the ability to say "No." To say it even when it's going to mean vexed, angry, or tearful children: "No, Johnny, you can't stay out after midnight. You know well that if you want to make the team in your junior year you've got to do a fair amount of study and get a fair amount of sleep."

"No, Elizabeth Ann, you can't fill up on doughnuts and fudgicle-pops."

And so it must be, time after time, quietly, firmly, with finality, till a "No" comes to be respected. In the end it will turn out a kindness. Tomorrow these same children will be men and women. Life is going to say "No" to them many times. The job they want, the wage they wish, the home they crave, the mate they hunger for—more often than not they can't have them. Properly trained, they won't sulk. They will hold up their heads and be brave, making the best of life's offerings, even when they are second best.

My last suggestions for fathers is: Encourage self-reliance. Early the parent birds push the fledglings from the nest that the little birds may use their wings and grow strong. This is not unkindness. It is for the ultimate good of the young. Children mature much more slowly than other of God's creatures. This means the parents are not only privileged but obligated to give a maximum of parental guidance and support. We do not decry this; we're glad of it. The important point is that long before they are twenty-one many self-reliant steps should be taken. . . .

I wonder what kind of a father God is. Dare we judge him by these—our earthly standards? "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father," declared Jesus, "and from henceforth ye do see him, and ye know him." I take this to mean that we are to study the spiritual qualities of the Master in order more perfectly to discover the spiritual qualities of God. Studying Christ, and seeing God reflected there, is he still the same ideal father?

Was Jesus fair, just and impartial? Who in any age ever equaled him in this capacity? He prayed for all twelve. He loved not only John who leaned against his breast at the last supper, but also Judas who pilfered the treasurer's bag and later sold his Master for thirty pieces of silver. He loved not only his mother for whose future he made plans while on a cross, but also the thief whose eleventh-hour repentance brought him promise of Paradise.

Was Jesus one who kept close to his sheep as a father keeps close to his children? Half the world knows the answer. He was the good shepherd who gave his life for them.

Did Jesus know how to say "No"? He said it with convincing power to Satan in the wilderness. He said it gently, but sadly, to Mrs. Zebedee, who sought for her sons the two best political plums when Jesus might come into his kingdom. He said it with violent outburst to Peter who urged him to turn aside from the cross. Yes, Jesus knew how to say "No," and all the world has been grateful.

What did he do to teach self-reliance? He took twelve unlettered, plodding young men and gave them two years and a half of private tutoring. He taught them faith by mighty works. He lived a prayer life so rich they asked him to share it and teach them how to pray.

If Jesus was that kind of leader, God is that kind of father: He loves all his children. He is closer to us than breathing. He is firm enough to say "No." He is wise enough to encourage self-reliance.

The good earthly father is built on the divine pattern.—Advance.

VOLUME LXXXIX.

RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, JUNE 24, 1937.

NUMBER 25.

Elon College Library 3X

REV. CHARLES ELDRED BRITT SHELTON, LL. D.

Here is the likeness of the one Congregational minister in the Eastern Virginia Conference. By unanimous consent, he has done his job well. By his culture, wisdom, wit, friendliness, and genuine Christian character, he has won a large place in the affections of the Christian Church ministers of that section, as a recent picnic in his honor testifies.

Dr. Shelton was born of Virginia parents at Mt. Pleasant, Iowa, on June 16, 1859. This son of a Methodist Episcopal minister received his education in a variety of public schools, and at the age of twenty graduated from Iowa Wesleyan University with the Bachelor of Arts degree. A few years later he received the Master's degree, and several years later received the LL. D. degree from the same institution.

In 1880 he was admitted to the Bar in Burlington, Iowa. In the same year he was married and went as an educational missionary to Brazil, where he worked fifteen months. Returning to Iowa, he became a schoolman. He served as principal of three schools and then as superintendent of the city schools of Burlington before becoming president of Simpson College, a Methodist Episcopal school at Indianola, Iowa, a position which he held for eleven years.

Becoming a minister, he came East, and held three pastorates before going to Portsmouth, Virginia, fourteen years ago. On June 15th, he retired from the active pastorate, and the church, First Congregational, elected him as pastor emeritus, a worthy honor, worthily bestowed.

Dr. Shelton has one son, Whilford H., and three grand-children. The son is head of the Modern Language Department of the University of Pittsburg.

His wide experience, including eight trips to Europe, and cultural reading, have made Dr. Shelton the kind of person one likes to claim as friend. It is not strange that Iowa, Pennsylvania, and Virginia, bid for his presence through the years to come.

APPLES CHAPEL.

A very beautiful Memorial Service was held at Apples Chapel Church the fourth Sunday in May. The Committee in charge had prepared an interesting program. Special music was furnished by a quartette and a band from Gibsonville. The pastor brought the morning message and the principal of Monticello School delivered the Memorial Address. In the afternoon Rev. J. L. Neese preached a powerful sermon. The visiting ministers present were Revs. J. L. Neese, C. E. Gerringer, and L. L. Wyrick. At noon a lovely lunch was spread on the lawn. A large crowd was present. Many beautiful flowers decorated the church and the beautiful cemetery.

INGRAM.

On the fourth Sunday night in May our revival at Ingram began. The pastor did the preaching. From the beginning the attendance was good. The churches in the near communities cooperated beautifully. Thirteen members were received. Sunday we had three services with lunch at church.

The church was beautifully decorated with flowers all during the meeting. Though it was during a busy time of the year, the choir and members were faithful to their duty. Sunday afternoon baptism by immersion was held at Carlbrook. At night a beautiful communion service brought the meeting to a close.

HINES CHAPEL.

On the first Sunday in June Hines Chapel had their Memorial Day. Attorney Hoey from Greensboro, was the morning speaker, while Dr. C. H. Rowland preached in the evening. Several selections were rendered by the Forbes sisters and a male quartette from Greensboro. The Committee in charge, Mrs. Rowland Island, Mr. Ed. Carter, and Mrs. Garland Wyrick did their work well.

A long table was filled with many things to eat, which all seemed to enjoy.

Work it out! Brooding over trouble is the surest way to hatch a new brood of troubles, or to increase the size of the existing brood. Trouble will die of neglect and inattention. Courage to keep at helpful tasks will help one to gain the mastery of trouble and to prevent it from building a nest in one's mind. Work is one of God's handmaids.

With the closing of the 43rd Annual Convention of the Virginia Christian Endeavor Union there on June 21st, Massanetta Springs launched its program of Young People's Conferences expected to attract a total of over 3,500 delegates.

The Camp for Intermediate Boys and Girls opened Monday of this week, with about 700 boys and girls in attendance.

Following the Intermediate Camp, there will be held in succession for three weeks the Presbyterian Young People's Conference, the Convention of the Epworth League of the Baltimore Conference, and the Baptist Young People's Conference.

The School of Sacred Music will be held July 19th to 25th under the leadership of Dr. John Finley Williamson, head of the famous Westminster Choir School, Princeton, N. J. This school will draw musical artists from seven or eight states.

Climaxing the week will be the Sacred Music Festival July 22d and 23d, the highlight of which will be the concert by the large Tri-State choir on Vesper Hill under the direction of Dr. Williamson. A new feature of the Festival will be the program by the Virginia Federation of Music Clubs.

During the period, July 24th to August 15th, there will be held at Massanetta the Elders and Deacons' Conference, Training School for Auxiliary Workers of Virginia, the Lutheran Church Workers Conference, the Baptist Assembly for adult workers.

The last two weeks, August 16th to 29th, will mark the climax of the season, when the Bible Conference and School for Pastors will be held. This conference presents a program of training for ministers, missionaries and Christian workers which hundreds have said is unexcelled anywhere in America. For these weeks some of the ablest speakers, both ministers and laymen, of the Protestant world have been secured. The ministers will hold a daily forum discussion during the first week on the subject, "The Church and the Modern World." A gigantic pageant on Peace is also scheduled. Dr. Williamson will again be on hand to train a ministers' choir and give several addresses on the subject of Church Music. He will bring with him the famous Westminster Quartette, composed of the solo voices of the Westminster Choir. Another interesting feature will be an illustrated lecture by Dr. John Everington, widely traveled artist and lecturer of England and America.

Among the outstanding speakers expected are Dr. Robert E. Speer, New York, Dr. John A. Mackay, of Princeton Theological Seminary, Arthur J. Moore, noted Bishop of the Southern Methodist Church, Dr. Adam Burnet and Dr. R. J. Wedderpoon, both of Glasgow, Scotland, Rev. Gypsy Smith, Jr. famous evangelist, Rev. Peter Marshall, Atlanta, Georgia, Dr. Luther W. Smith, Syracuse, New York, Dr. Francis P. Miller, Field Secretary of the Foreign Policy Association, Dr. Wm. Evans, one of the ablest Bible teachers in this country, Dr. J. B. Green, Professor in Columbia Theological Seminary, Atlanta, Georgia, Dr. J. A. MacLean, Dr. E. T. Thompson, Dr. J. B. Belk, Dr. R. L. Carson, all of Richmond, Dr. H. B. Blakely, Staunton, Virginia, Dr. J. W. Jackson, Columbia, South Carolina, and many others.

DR. D. J. BOWDEN.

D. J. Bowden, Professor of Philosophy and Religion at Elon College for the past two years was slated to receive his Ph. D. degree at Yale University, June 23rd. Prof. Bowden has made unusual record throughout his college career and is one of the most popular young Professor at Elon.

Receiving his Bachelor of Science at Virginia Polytechnic Institute in 1928 and his Bachelor of Divinity at Yale University in 1933, Prof. Bowden used for his Dissertation the title of "The Teleological Arguments for the existence of God as found in the writings of F. R. Tennant, L. T. Hobhouse, and A. N. Whitehead." Doing his graduate study under the direction of Drs. D. C. McIntosh, R. L. Calhoun, and F. C. S. Northrop. Prof. Bowden receives the Ph. D. degree in the field of Philosophy and Religion. Prof. Bowden was reared in the Christian Church, being a member of the Christian Temple, Norfolk, Virginia.

THE ELON COLLEGE LIBRARY.Col. J. E. West Donates Books.

The Carlton Library Building constitutes a very important and established unit in our college equipment. It is a three story brick building with reading room, offices, and the stacks on the first floor. The stack room is on the east side of the building and extends the full height of three floors. On the other side are private offices and seminar rooms for faculty members. The stacks are of the most modern type. The library equipment that we have at Elon College is the best that can be bought. The building, including the furnishings, was donated by the Carlton family—Mr. P. J. Carlton, deceased, Mr. H. A. Carlton, Mr. L. E. Carlton, and their sister, Mrs. T. S. Parrott. At present we have more than 23,000 volumes, in addition to a large number of magazines, pamphlets, papers, and different kinds of periodicals.

Mrs. Oma U. Johnson is librarian. From ten to fifteen students assist her in serving faculty, students, and community. These students are allowed consideration on their school expenses for their services rendered. We are required to make substantial additions in the way of books, magazines, and periodicals annually. These books may be donated, or money can be given to purchase books. The college will be glad to cooperate with any donor in providing a memorial in the way of books for our library.

On Friday, of last week, the writer received a letter from Col. J. E. West of Suffolk, Virginia, in which he stated that he was forwarding a box of books, prepaid, for the library. The college appreciated this gift by Col. West and the interest that it conveys.

I know that there are a large number who are interested in Elon College who have valuable books in their possession that perhaps have served their purpose in the home. Why not pass these books on to the Elon College Library where they will be entered as having been donated by the person sending the same and will assist numbers of young men and young women in their preparation for life. What we read has a lot to do with what we are. We shall appreciate any contribution that any reader may wish to make along this line. We want to build up our library as quickly as we can to at least 30,000 volumes. The writer will be glad for any suggestion or communication from any who may be interested.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgement and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

AN AMERICAN HITLER.

The industrial warfare now going on in America is a thing that needs serious consideration and should be settled on the basis of Christian principles. Unless Christianity does have a chance, which apparently it does not now have, our people are definitely headed for trouble. It is not the business of a church paper like this to direct economic and political affairs, but it is the business of such a paper to pass along Christian ideals for the members of churches and others who may be inclined to read concerning our major problems.

Whatever may be said against capitalists and capitalism, and whatever may be said in defense of those who feel that they need a larger share in America's wealth, the fact is that we do not need bloodshed and warfare in order to correct our difficulties. We are just now struggling out of the days when jobs were hard to get and people could not make a living for themselves and families, because they could not get work. Now an untried leader with very radical ideas is endeavoring to shut down activity in our economic world. Unless his idea can prevail, then nobody is supposed to work. Automobile plants must be closed, the steel industry discontinued, and as rapidly as may be all mass production discontinued until the idea of this one John L. Lewis can become the dominating factor in all industry.

This is economic dictatorship of the worse type. The fact that food can not be sent through the mails to men on the job adds no comfort to those who try to be non-partisan and who believe in peaceful settlement of all problems. Unless this editor is badly misinformed, the time is now here when those who love their independence and believe in a land of freedom should see to it that no economic dictator and no political dictator shall arise in this nation like Hitler came to power in Germany. This is not saying that laborers should be crushed to earth or that capitalists are saints; it is saying that freedom is a thing worth working for and that democracy may be protected while we still have it.

MY NEIGHBOR HAS GONE AWAY.

This house has been my home for years. My neighbor lived next door, only a few feet away. Only a few times did I enter his door, and I am not sure that he ever entered mine. But he was my neighbor, and a good one.

Often we walked in the backyard. The fence finally came down and only a row of flowers divided us—or did they unite us? Out by the garage and there by the flowers we talked as good neighbors do. Often he smiled at the window as I went to work. It was only a smile, the smile of an older man whose labors were done to a younger man who was busy with the burdens of life, but that smile was a benediction to the one who works.

Age and disease prevented my neighbor from working as he wished. Through many years he had done a man's part, but for a while his hands could not labor as before. His job was to read his Bible, which he often did sitting on his porch, and to add a bit of courage and cheer to neighbors and friends. "They also serve who only wait." While he waited for the great and inevitable change to come, he served well.

But my neighbor is gone away. He went away in the night, and will not return again. It was a Sunday night. He had been happy that beautiful day as he rode by the scenes of manhood's activities, and as he talked with his neighbors at twilight-time on his own front porch. Apparently he was as well as usual, or a bit better. But in the middle of the night he went away—quietly, peacefully, never to return.

Two days later they buried his body, but surely they did not put in the ground my good neighbor. It is not right to believe that "earth to earth, ashes to ashes, dust to dust" refers to my neighbor. The preacher was talking of the physical form which had failed to function longer, but through the years I shall remember, and somehow faith makes me believe that my neighbor has gone on to another home far more beautiful where there are flowers and friends and happiness and health. This is what Jesus taught, and the teachings of the good Master certainly do bring comfort when death comes to the home of our friends.

SUPPORTING RELIGIOUS EDUCATION.

Since 1918 the Southern Convention has had a board which has been responsible for developing the religious educational program in our churches. At first this board was closely related to the Mission Board and received help therefrom. For several years we had a field secretary. Miss Lucy Eldredge served for some years, then Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, and then Miss Jewell Truitt (now Mrs. A. R. VanCleave). But when the depression began to arrive it was impossible to continue a full time, trained worker for this Board.

Financial support during the recent years has so handicapped this work that the only thing possible was for the chairman of the Board to do what he could in connection with a pastorate and with the aid of a poorly paid office secretary. The inevitable result has been the slowing down of promotional work in the field of religious education.

The present needs of our churches are so urgent that a trained worker really should be put in the field at an early date. The major source of income for the Board is the offering from the Sunday School and Christian Endeavor conventions. Two of these conventions have already been held, and the money which they will be able to send to the Board of Christian Education for this year will amount to slightly more than one hundred dollars. There are three other conventions yet to be held. It is easy to see that (Continued on page 15.)

THE ESCAPE FROM SOCIAL REALITY.

DAVID L. KRATZ.

[Note: This article has in it so much clear and important thought on a pressing problem that it is "borrowed" from "The Christian Evangelist," the national weekly of the Disciple of Christ, for June 3, 1937. Read it thoughtfully. It is worth the effort. Editor.]

The so-called salvation (faith, repentance, confession, baptism) have played an important part in the history of the Disciples of Christ, providing a simple and convenient summary of what are sometimes called the acts of primary obedience. On the other hand, our experience has shown the danger common to all such simplifications. First, observance of the so-called steps becomes formal and the inner meaning of each step is ignored. Second, the steps come to be guarded as some kind of final act and produce a moral inertia of self-ease after their performance. Too many people stop growing after they have observed these principles. Too many fail to regard salvation as a life process and conceive of it rather as perfunctory obedience to these simple demands. Looking at them as first principles, we sometimes forget that a principle is not something to be recognized and forgotten, but rather a foundational attitude of mind upon which further intellectual and spiritual advance is predicated. Such attitudes defeat the real purpose of Christ to bring the essential changes in the lives of His followers and the world at large.

The danger of such superficial attitude has been amply demonstrated. The devil must get a great deal of comfort in the midst of his lustful and hate-filled world to find those followers of Christ who are commissioned to bring about a new order of life quarrelling among themselves about salvation acts that are mere gestures of loyalty in the way they are commonly performed.

Take, for instance, a group of Disciples, probably all of them thoroughly immersed, arguing about whether or not baptism is essential to salvation. At best, the results of their contention would be merely an agreed policy about how to regard others outside their group, or the rules to follow in admitting converts to their own attitudes. Certainly such argument is irrelevant to the matter of their own search for the higher life, which should be the subject of their first concern. However, these first principles, as generally understood, form a definite code, and such formulations are always necessary for the categorical hair-splitting of a good argument.

The same conditions are likewise true in regard to the first principles of social salvation. In listening to a certain class of speakers I have unconsciously begun to memorize a formula that is becoming as simple and as convenient, for the purposes of meaningless argument, as the steps of individual salvation. Certain references to race relationship, world peace, and the share-croppers are bound to be made. And, even as before, certain superficialities become glaringly apparent. Here again we hear a formula that is simple and easy to recite. Here again is a convenient statement that might too often serve as an evasion of the deeper principles of moral and social regeneration.

For quite generally the advocates of salvation suggest only what others should do to remedy the evil situation—some legislative changes that our Congressmen ought to make, some alteration in the navy or tariffs, some changes in the way Southern citizens treat Negroes or share-croppers, some new relationship between capital and labor (with changes mostly the duty of the capitalist), or something different that rich people should do with their money. And the application of the gospel appears too often to be the acceptance of some schemes of social planning over which the average person has little or no control.

There is a possibility that the race problem could be brought into personal life. We might suggest that church members go into the homes of the underprivileged and unwashed Negroes, Mexicans, and Greeks, and demonstrate Christian brotherliness by inviting a family for Sunday dinner. Here would be social action on the plane where one lives. But so far I have never heard it suggested. It is much easier to tell Congress what to do.

It becomes painfully evident that not many who are promoting social salvation let pity for the underprivileged interfere with their own comfort, social classification, or economic security.

The danger in all first principles is that we stop there and do not press on to perfection. We need these generalizations about war and race relationships to awaken us to recognize the areas of life where Christ is not worshipped or his teachings obeyed. Our first principles of individual salvation may serve a vital place in consecrating us to the service of Christ and His way of life. But now—always, but especially now—we need some definite leadership in the expression of the Christian life on the plane of the average church member: his adjustment to the competitive business world, the problems of his home and family, and the various details of his personal and social relationships. These things are not summed up in easy first principles, but are the real issues that the average man has to meet. What actual help is the church today giving him.

Sometimes religion, because of its emphasis upon the after-life, is called an escape mechanism. The charge is made that its adherents accept the present state with fatalistic indifference, getting their compensation from the hope that conditions will be reversed in the next life. And I suppose this charge is often justified.

It seems evident to me, also, though, that this condition is not always corrected by an emphasis upon the social gospel. It is possible by reciting the formulas of social change to evade the actual issues of our lives that might make our contributions to a changed world order. Here is an escape as definite as the ancient hope of heaven. By talking about world peace, industrial justice, race righteousness, we succeed in avoiding the issues of home, church, business, and other social relationships in the circle of our lives where we have the most vital contacts.

If the social problem of the church is to have any real significance, it must be based on some vital achievements in the social relationships of the local church. Here must be more than an effective organization for raising funds for missionary enterprises or for legislative lobbies. Here must be a place where the teachings of Jesus are definitely enacted in the individual lives and the social relations of its members. And here also is the outstanding weakness of the present program of the church.

Christianity in America needs a social emphasis that goes deeper than a protest against glaring political and racial maladjustments. The church needs a creative leadership in the development of new techniques and habits in the social life of the members of our local churches. If a happy experience of brotherly relations can be fostered here, based on the teachings of Jesus, a home base is established for effectively attacking the problems of an un-Christian world. Without it our reform measures are "a striving after wind."

Proponents of social salvation need to realize that their doctrines face the same danger of superficiality as do the formulas of individuals salvation. The essential goal of Christ demands the transformation of life.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The daily newspapers remind the readers of the strife and discontent. A few months ago thousands of people were pleading for work. Today the scene is changed. Scores of "sit-down strikes" indicate a spirit of unrest and an unwillingness to work, when opportunity is offered. Time alone will clear the atmosphere and arrive at an unbiased judgment of the conditions existing in the present conflict. But the situation is ominous of many possible changes in the industrial and economic life of today. Certain schools of thought, and aggressive groups of political leadership are having their day in the press and on the forum, and one may be alarmed about the future, unless the church can strike a higher spiritual note to change the temper and the spirit of the contending forces.

The solution will not be found in any system of economic philosophy. Capitalism will not satisfy the capitalist, and socialism will not pacify the laboring men. Both of these systems have been tried and both have failed, in part, to usher in the promised utopia. And the fundamental reason for the failure of both systems can be found in the fact that men ignore the spiritual laws of God in their economic life. When life is founded on principles, which are contrary to the Bible, someone must suffer. Hate is in evidence in the class struggles of the present time. The rich look with disdain upon the poor; the tenants envy the landlord; covetousness rides in the private car, sleeps in the palace, walks by the side of the poorly clad, and poisons the meal in the cottage of the peasant.

And this inner spirit of malice, envy, jealousy and hate must be reckoned with in every approach to the difficult problems involved. There can be permanent peace where the inexorable laws of spiritual life are violated and disregarded. The Bible has a message and a solution for this great crisis. The church is the divine agency and the spiritual institution to foster the spirit of righteousness. A mob runs riot under the spell of fanaticism. An evil spirit possesses the hearts and dominates the minds of the maddened mob. These same people, under the influence of dynamic love, will sing praises to God and permit their bodies to be burned at the stake or crucified upon a cross, if by such a process they may win their spiritual battles. The millions of loyal Christian, who live at peace with their fellowman, are guided by an inner spiritual allegiance.

What has the church to offer in such an hour as this? Some basis of economic justice? A new order of social adjustment? An interpretation of class relationships? The list of questions can be extended indefinitely. When all the answers are in and the round table discussion has been closed, put this one in as a postscript: The church can offer a new heart and a new spirit to this industrial and economic crisis. Capital and labor, employer and employee, rich and poor need this spirit—the spirit of love coming through the dedication to Jesus Christ. Many of these people do not know their Bibles and they need the leadership of Jesus. Where is the great Christian apostle who can fire the church with the spirit of the love of Christ? A great captain of labor, or capital, passes out an order for a strike, or a closed shop, and it is observed by thousands. Why not develop in the church a spirit of devotion to Jesus Christ, with unanimous consent to carry out His law in the spirit of love and sacrifice.

This is the time for the church to strike a new note of love and consecration. The pulpit needs a baptism of spiritual power. The pew is waiting for the pulpit to be on fire for righteousness. The world is at war. The church is at ease. Awake!—Arise! The King's business requireth haste.

I. W. JOHNSON.

WHY GO TO COLLEGE.

Some months ago I was discussing with an ambitious farmer the future of his boy. I suggested that he send him to college. The father replied, "I am not sure. If I do not send him to college and he should not succeed in life, then perhaps the cause of his failure would be laid at my door, for not having encouraged or assisted him in preparing himself for life." "But," said he, "if I send him to college, it will cost me a lot of money, and when he is out of college there is no assurance that he will find a remunerative job. There are hundreds of college graduates walking the streets or thumbing their ways on the highways. A few may have jobs, but many of these jobs could be filled by my boy without a college education.

Why should I spend from $5,000 to $10,000 in helping him to acquire a college education?"

These simple questions are floating through the minds of parents and children alike today. Youngsters by the thousands have recently graduated from high school. What shall they do in September? Should they take high school training as sufficient for life's work, or shall they assume added responsibilities in an effort to acquire college training. These are legitimate questions. Shall we answer them in the affirmative or in the negative. The answer will be determined largely by what the individual wishes to do with life. It is a fact that does not admit debate that a narrow, uniformed life cannot make extensive contributions to the society of which he is a part and in the days that are bound to come. If the individual purposes to make money and the making of money is the highest ambition in life, he may happen to make phenomenal successes in the field of business without a college education. It has been done by hundreds and thousands of people. But the making of money is far more difficult today than ever before. Success in business endeavor requires keen business insight, as well as an opportunity.

Fifty years ago, the majority of the people with whom a man had to deal in business had but little or no education. Today it is the usual thing to meet with a college graduate. Increase in education among the masses has generated a vastly different society and has brought problems in business that are acute. Most schools and colleges today offer thorough courses in business subjects: banking, merchandising, marketing, salesmanship, and many kindred subjects. These courses are designed to acquaint the student with the proper methods in all lines of business. It stands to reason that the individual who has taken the time and effort to acquaint himself with the fundamental principles of business is better fitted for the average undertaking, than the individual who starts out hoping to learn in the cold field of experience.

What if the individual is to devote himself to business and business alone, and if it be possible for him to attain successes without training, how much richer and more satisfactory would life be for him if he takes time for proper training, individual development, and broad culture. To know what has been done in the world, to acquaint oneself with the principles on which society has moved forward, to have an understanding of the relative values of life, is of unquestioned satisfaction to the individual himself. There are but few things that are comparable to the joy that comes to the individual in the widening of his mental horizon and the development of his personality. These achievements are far more likely to be recognized on a college campus than they are in the humdrum of everyday business.

Of course, if the individual desires a professional career, training is not debatable. There is nothing left for the individual but to plunge into the task of acquiring information regarding his particular ambition and fit himself for the requirements of the profession which he proposes to follow. If the parents and the child will reflect for a moment what training in school has meant to the child through graded and high school, there can be but little question as to what the advantages of college life would result in for the youngster. Poor training and poor school advantages are worth but little at any time or at any place. The majority of the colleges today are worthy of the high school graduates of our country. They all offer opportunities, which, if taken advantage of, will result in great benefit to the individual.

If permitted, I would like to offer one bit of counsel: that in selecting a school for college advantages, be sure that the curriculum of that school takes into consideration the religious life of the individual and fits itself to the task to train and develop that life equally with the mental and physical. Those who are going to college who have not already selected a school must make the choice within the next few weeks. Elon College, Elon College, North Carolina, has striven through the years to ascertain the increasing needs of high school graduates and to make full preparation for the meeting of these needs. If you desire business training, religious instruction, professional training leading to the practice of law, the practice of medicine, the practice of dentistry, the ministry, or teaching positions, our curriculum is sufficiently broad to meet your needs.

If interested, please write Elon College for information. The fall term opens September 7th.

THE CORONATION.

Now that the shouting and the tumult are over, now that the captians and the kings have departed for their far-off realms on dunes and headland, the Coronation may be seen from a perspective. Not that such a vantage point is of any avail, for the cost of that stupendous pageant is lessened not one whit. To the practical American mind (but just how "practical" is any American, after all?) the pomp and circumstances seem gross extravagance, especially so because our presidential inaugurations are so much simpler in contrast. But that is not the real issue. Far more important is the point that such medieval displays ill become any democracy, especially one so long established and so exemplary as the British scheme. The British king reigns, but does not rule; he holds together a crumbling empire; he carries on a great tradition which indubitably thrills many an Englishman to the marrow; but what price glory? Not that we want to moralize unduly, but it does seem a bit ironic that the Empire should indulge in such an orgy of twelfth century festivity and ecclesiastical clap-trap when its thickly crusted robes help feed its unemployed not one bit, nor do the piously mouthed collects succeed in changing its foreign policy sufficiently to keep Britannia from still trying to rule the waves. England will probably continue to crown kings with gusto for centuries to come, but to the American cousin, who feels he understands the organic relationship of Briton to king and the political bond between crown and Parliament, this custom of having a coronation in such over-stuffed affluence will always have about it the traits of a comic opera.

SCHOOL OF RURAL LIFE FOR COUNTRY PREACHERS OF VIRGINIA AND NEARBY STATES.

V. P. I., Blacksburg, Virginia,
JULY 12-21, 1937

The Virginia Summer School for Rural Ministers is designed to present in a concise way the current problems of rural life; to bring to those assembled the thought of a number of a number of our national leaders in regard to current issues; to give the ministers themselves opportunity to think through the relationship of the rural church to the problems of the day, and satisfy their own minds concerning the adaptations that need to be made in order that the rural church may hold its position of priority among the social institutions of the present day.

Representative ministers and church administrators from practically every denomination in the state attend this school and the various state and federal agencies which are active throughout the state will be represented on this year's program.

This is an annual opportunity for rural ministers to get a broad inclusive view of the whole rural life situation as it is being met and dealt with by a wide variety of churches and their agencies. THE ESCAPE FROM SOCIAL REALITY.

This demand is often evaded by giving a formal allegiance to the principles of change without working these principles out in actual living. If Christ's teachings will work anywhere, they should work in our homes and churches. Social reform also begins at home. Can the church today furnish any outstanding leadership or effective examples of achievement in social change inside the areas of its own life? Here is the starting point for effective social regeneration.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

VICTORIOUS LIVING.

The Social and Individual Gospel.

Rev. E. Stanley Jones, Missionary and one who is possibly doing more to preach the gospel of salvation and righteousness than any other man in the world today, gave to the public recently a book, with Scripture quotations, comment and a prayer for daily devotions. In his Introduction Dr. Jones explains "Three years ago the Inner Urge came to me to write on Victorious Living. The voice seemed to sum up what through years of dealing with inquirers has become to me a pressing fact, namely, that the most urgent necessity in human life is to be able to face life victoriously." In his introduction it is further stated "I have tried to combine the individual and the social emphases in a living blend, with a devotional spirit running through all." It is not our purpose here to review this book, but just to give one page, the meditation for June 17th. This seems to be very timely in the light of the fact that there are still amongst us some who emphasize the individual gospel and neglect the social emphasis, and others who seem to emphasize the social gospel (whatever that is) and neglect the individual. To all such the "meditation" of June 17th is very timely, the Scripture for the day being Luke 11:42; Luke 24:52, 53; Acts 17:6.

"That society is made up of individuals there is no doubt. That if you change a sufficient number of individuals, you can change society there is also no doubt. Changed men have changed society.

"But these are only half-truths. It is not wholly true that individuals make up society. Society is made up of individuals, but it is made up of inherited customs and attitudes which have become a part of the social structure and which exist apart from the will of the individual. To change the individual will may leave entirely intact this inherited social structure. To change individual slave owners did not get rid of the slave system. That could only be accomplished by what Bennett calls 'a wide-scale frontal attack.' Both in England and America slavery was ousted by the frontal attack of legislation. It is true that the converted Wilberforce was a big factor in getting rid of it, but it was only after he had persuaded sufficient people to attack it on a Parliamentary front that it was abolished. An attack on a personal front alone would have left the slavery system to this day. Parliamentary coercion for recalcitrants had to supplement personal change.

"Even where the converted individual will is directed toward the change of a system, that change will not take place unless you have this wide-scale, concerted, frontal attack. But, suppose, instead of this converted will being directed toward social change, it stops at the half-way house of contentment in the fact of its own change, then the case is still worse. This it often does. Conversion, instead of becoming the life of social change, often becomes in lieu of social change. It often makes our attention glance off either toward ourselves or toward heaven, and leaves the essential problems of life untouched. Half-conversions may become whole conversions. Conversion must be fully converted."

Prayer—"O Christ, I pray Thee to convert my conversion into the wide sweep of Thy purposes for myself and all men. Put the content of social change into my individual change. Amen."

BEREA, NANSEMOND.

The Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Society of Berea, Nansemond, celebrated their annual Birthday Anniversary on Thursday afternoon, June 9th. The Society is twenty-two years old and each year in June for the past ten years it has been the custom to observe, with a special program, the Birthday Anniversary. The meeting was held in Berea Church, and the Call to Worship and Responsive Readings were led by the President, Mrs. I. W. Johnson. After a short business meeting, Mrs. Russel Bradford led the Bible Study, "Studying the Books of Genesis," the study chosen by the Society for the year. Mrs. W. B. Warrington, a charter member of the organization, then presented a most interesting "Historical Sketch" of the twenty-two years of service of the Society. Her paper was thoughtfully prepared and was most inspiring. Little Miss Jewel Francis, a member of our Junior Society beautifully sung an appropriate solo. The speaker of the afternoon was Mrs. Harriette Moore, of St. Louis, Missouri, who brought a very interesting message of Home Missions works in St. Louis. A Bible Contest, arranged by our president, was then greatly enjoyed by all.

With the singing of a hymn and a beautiful closing prayer by our oldest member, Mrs. F. W. Winner, we adjourned to the Sunday school rooms where our hostesses, Mesdames Whedbee and Daniels served delicious refreshments. Everyone enjoyed the cutting of the Birthday cake and the special Birthday Offering amounted to $30.00

The Woman's Missionary Auxiliary of Berea is not a large Society but under the exceedingly capable and efficient leadership of our highly esteemed president, Mrs. I. W. Johnson, we are having an excellent year, which causes one to realize that with a consecrated and interested leader and a sincere and ready cooperation on the part of the members, great and good things can be accomplished.

MRS. R. T. BRADFORD.

AND LOCUSTS IN AFRICA.

When the church folk of Chilesso found they had to fight locusts on Sunday they did it by singing hymns! "How will we find an offering for the work of the Lord? Will the work go back because we cannot do more?" These are the first questions they asked as starvation loomed before them. Not their own hunger, but the work of the church came first.

EARLY LEADERS OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCHES.

Among those early leaders of the Christian Churches who have "had witness borne to them through their faith" in the union of the Christian and Congregational Churches are Rev. James O'Kelly, Rev. Abner Jones, Rev. Barton W. Stone, Rev. Elias Smith, Horace Mann, Christian Statesman and Educator, and as our patron saint of the Christian Churches of Maine, Rev. Mark Fernald of Kittery Point. These men, outstanding in their lives and influence, enlarge the pit from which we are digged.

Through such witnesses the distinctive principles of the Christian Church became dynamic among 100,000 church members and affiliations of much larger numbers:

The Lord Jesus as the head of the Church.

Christian our only name.

The Bible our rule of faith and practice.

Individual interpretation of the Scriptures, the right and duty of all.

Christian character the test of fellowship.

The union of all the followers of Christ, to the end that the world may believe.

Rev. James O'Kelly (1735-1826), native of Ireland, resident of Virginia, "had the courage and faith of an Irish patriot, and the courtesy and bearing of a Southern gentleman." He was converted at forty years of age and became a lay preacher of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He was ordained severally, a deacon and elder at the so-called "Christian Conference of the Episcopal Church" in 1784 and proved to be a preacher of vitality and power.

At the memorable conference in Baltimore, Maryland, November 1, 1792, James O'Kelly and nineteen other pastors stood for the right of appeal in the case of unfavorable appointments, a right disallowed by Bishop Asbury. As a result in the Lebanon Church, Surry County, Virginia, on August 4, 1794, the group called themselves "Republican Methodists." Rev. Rice Haggard, with a copy of the New Testament Scriptures in his hands, said: "Brethren, this is a sufficient rule of faith and practice, and by it we are told that the disciples were called Christians, and I move that henceforth and forever the followers of Christ be known as Christians simply."

In a trying time for religion and morals, when national and religious institutions were taking form, James O'Kelly was a leader of wisdom and enthusiasm, a "Pioneer of Religious Liberty," a real founder in the group of churches of the Christian connection.

Rev. Barton W. Stone (1772-1834), born in Maryland in stirring Revolutionary War Times, entered the ministry in 1793, through a North Carolina Presbytery, and held his first pastorate in Cane Ridge and Concord, Bourbon County, Kentucky. While in this pastorate, he took part in the great revival of 1801 when the "roads were literally crowded with wagons, carriages, horsemen and footmen, moving to the solemn camp." He terminated his Presbyterian connections in 1803 for in his ordination he had accepted the Westminster Confession of Faith only "so far as he found it consistent with the Word of God." He was really anti-Calvinistic in his points of view and was one of the six witnesses to the "Last Will and Testament of the Springfield (Ky.) Presbytery."

While he had fellowship with Alexander Campbell and the Disciple Churches he always clung to the name "Christian." For the last eighteen years of his life he published the monthly periodical, "The Christian Messenger."

The father of Rev. Abner Jones (1772-1841), was the first settler in Bridgewater, Vermont, where a rock pile now marks the spot of his boyhood home, though he was born in Royalton, Massachusetts, eight years before his father moved to Vermont. His "Memoirs" indicate his great "soul concern" when only eight years old. He began preaching in 1881, and was instrumental in the formation of the First Free Christian Church in Lyndon, Vermont; the second Christian Church was organized in Hanover, New Hampshire in 1802, and the third in Piermont, in 1803. Large congregations attended his itinerant preaching throughout New England.

He was ordained in 1802 by Free Will Baptists with the distinct understanding that the right hand of fellowship left him a free man, signifying the authority of "Christian fellowship."

In 1804 he preached for a time in Boston to large and orderly audiences, though they were so disturbed at times by the rabble that a petition was sent to the "Selectment of the Town of Boston." In Salem he was responsible for the erection of a building for purposes of worship, known as the Christian Tabernacle. He was always the most efficient exponent of the truth, "Character is a sufficient test of Christian Fellowship."

Our oldest Christian Church in Maine is at Kittery Point, organized November 20, 1806, by Elders Moses Safford and Ephraim Stansfield. While Elder Moses Safford "was the first preacher in Maine who styled himself a 'Christian' without any additional name" and was the first pastor at Kittery Point for nine years, Elder Mark Fernald, by his length of pastorate, being thirty-six years, and his wide travels, may be called the "Christian Apostle of Maine."

Elder Mark Fernald of English descent was born March 9, 1784, in Sir William Pepperell Mansion at Kittery Point, the son of Joshua and Elizabeth Fernald. The public school was too far away to be of much help and the mother taught her children at home. At thirteen he worked with his father, carpentering, and later spent several years at sea. He united with the church in 1807. He had much natural ability and traveled on horseback through New England, New York State and lower Canada, preaching and gathering churches. One early sermon preached from a stone wall at the close of funeral sermon, led to several conversions. His books were the Bible and a dictionary. His language was simple and forceful. He was skilled in the use of herbs and ministered to the ailments of his people. After a pastorate of thirty-six years, he was laid to rest where the shadow of the church falls across his grave.

An old record tells us: "The church gathered this evening at Sister Susannah Fowler's, containing fourteen members in the New Testament rule, led by the name of Christians. 1st. Agreed to lay aside Creeds, Covenants, Platforms, Articles of Faith, Catechisms and all isms—to take the New Testament for the rule of Faith. Believing it to be a Light to our Feet and a lamp to our Paths."

This little church had vision of faith, and its first year secured a lot, built a meeting house and held nine baptisms, four in April, 1807. Elder Safford was their leader for nine years, when his health failed, and Elder Mark Fernald became pastor. In 1842, to be in the center of the enlarged parish, a new meeting house was built on the present location. In August, 1849, it was destroyed by fire, a total loss. While the embers were still smoking, with stained faces, the people pledged money and labor for a new building and January 26, 1850, it was dedicated. It was planned by Elder Fernald, who was a carpenter. Two years later he died and the church mourned as for a father. Since then the pastors have come and

MISS EMILY CARLETON, Editor, 541 Osceola Ave., Winter Park, Fla.

OUR INTERMEDIATE SOCIETIES.

Often the value of an intermediate young people's group is underestimated—particularly in churches where no such group exists. Yet, you will find that the foundation laid by an intermediate group will measurably strengthen the senior young people's organization. Only a leader who has had experience will be able to tell you how much easier it is to build up an older young people's group, if that group has received training by means of an intermediate organization.

In many places, the senior society has undertaken the sponsoring of an intermediate (and if the church is large enough to warrant it, a junior) group as one of its most important projects. This is to be highly recommended and will have a two-fold result: you will be giving a younger group in your church an opportunity to express themselves religiously and to benefit from the inspiration and help they will receive, and at the same time you will be providing for the future of your own older group.

You will usually find that this intermediate-age group is only too anxious and willing to cooperate with you in any way in the formation of a group for them. They are just at an age where they desire to do the same thing that their older brothers and sisters and friends are doing. They will be thrilled to have the opportunity to have a group of their own where they can carry out their own ideas and express themselves.

A short time ago I had the privilege of meeting with an intermediate group, whose regular sponsor or counselor had to be away for the evening. I was amazed at the way those seventh and eighth graders carried on their meeting. The president of the society plans the worship service for each Sunday evening—choosing the hymns, a bit of poetry, a responsive reading and a Scripture lesson. One of the members acts as secretary and takes the roll at every meeting. Another member plays the piano, and though she does not always manage to hit the right keys, still the group sings excellently and she does not falter in her playing. Then the meeting is turned over to the counselor, who gives a short inspirational talk, often about the missionary project they are working on, or some similar topic. Following this, handwork is done by the whole group and this is directed by one who has that as his particular duty. The meeting is orderly, it is religious, it is inspirational. I almost forgot to mention the thing that impressed me most of all. The president called for sentence prayers and every one of those present really prayed—nothing stereotyped about them, either. They really made me ashamed of our older group on that score.

Of course, no group can be developed like the one described above unless they have a capable leader. In this case a minister's wife, who had had training in dealing with intermediates, had "brought them up in a way they should go" and I am sure that they will not depart from it.

If you have no intermediate group in your church, make it your responsibility to see that one is organized soon. They need you and you need them to make a well-rounded church program.

C. E. CONVENTION AT GRAND RAPIDS.

Byrd, Explorer and Peace Leader; President Daniel A. Poling; Rev. Fred W. Norwood of London, England; Dr. Norman Vincent Peale of New York City; Dr. Louis H. Evans, Pittsburg, "Mother Clark" and Homer Rodeheaver. The Virginia group will leave July 6th and return July 15th. The estimate cost is $75.00. DRUNKENNESS AND DIVORCE.

Drunkenness has become the chief complaint in district court divorce cases in Des Moines, Iowa, according to judges on the bench in that city.

Judge Joseph Meyer, long-time head of the court of domestic relations, said there had been a marked increase yearly since the end of prohibition, with this year exceeding previous years and that habitual drunkenness was the principal grounds for separation.

HOW A CHRISTIAN SHOWS HIS PATRIOTISM.

The makers of America cherished the ideals of "Life, Liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. If we would be patriotic, we must seek the well-being, the freedom, and the happiness of our fellow Americans. Christianity embraces these ideals. From Christ we get these words: "I am come that they might have life;" "If ye continue in my word . . . ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free;" and "If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them." To be Christian in one's dealings with his fellow-man advances the best interest of one's native land.

"To honor her flag and her status,
To ever be loyal and true
And live so the whole land is better
Because of the good we may do.

To help make our country the finest
And best ever patriot trod,
To make our lives part of its heart life,
Is being worthy of it and of God.

The best gifts we can give are those of Right living, honor, justice, and mercy."
—Anon.

For Discussion—

1. Can one be truly patriotic and not be Christian?
2. What should be the Christian's attitude toward the past of his nation?
3. What relation does the respect for the flag have to patriotism.
4. Have someone give a presentation from the New Deal standpoint.

MESSAGES FROM GENESIS.

LESSON XIII—JUNE 26, 1937.

GOLDEN TEXT: These all died in faith, not having received the promises, but having seen them and greeted them from afar, and having confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth.—Hebrews 11:13.

LESSON: John 1:1-5; Luke 17:26-32; Galatians 3:6-8; Hebrews 11:1-22; II Peter 2:4-10.

Our lessons for the past quarter have been from the book of Genesis. In swift array there have passed before us the events beginning with the story of Creation, and ending with the establishment of the nucleus of the Hebrew nation in Egypt. It has been a story begun with the wide sweep of cosmic history and narrowed down to particular a people. What are some of the messages of this book, some of the lessons which it teaches even today after all these years?

God the Creator and Sustainer of All.

The primary and central message of Genesis is that God created the world and all things that therein are. They are not the product of chance, nor of blind force, but of purposive intelligence and love. The things that are have a spiritual origin and basis. The universe is a cosmos, not a chaos. The ultimate forces are spiritual.

Man himself is a creation of God. He has been made by God; he bears the image of God, and he is capable of having fellowship with God. He has been made to have dominion over the material and animal world; he is the crown of creation, the culminating goal of the creative process.

The Devastating Power of Sin.

Let anyone read carefully the early chapters—and the later chapters too, for that matter—of Genesis and he will see the devastating power of sin, both in its individual and social consequences. Men not only suffer for their own sins, they contaminate and curse others with their sins. Sin leaves a sordid trail through the pages of Genesis.

The Unwearied Patience and Purpose of God.

Look at Genesis as a whole and see the unfolding purpose of God. He saw the end from the beginning. With unhurried and unwearied patience He moves on, sometimes temporarily thwarted by the ignorance and stubbornness of man, but slowly and steadily working out his purpose. Out of the pages of Genesis comes the steady truth that God shall not fail of His good purpose. A thousand years in his sight are but as yesterday. Eventually he shall see the travail of his soul and be satisfied.

The Answering Response of God.

It was the twilight era of the human race. The moral and spiritual sense of the race had not come to the full revelation of Jesus Christ. But even in that far-off day, men discovered that God was not far away from them, and here and there choice souls found that even as they sought him, he found them. When they called upon him he answered. When they put themselves upon him, they found his grace was sufficient. Here is the story of the progressive discovery of God, written out not only in the pages of a book, but in the lives of men.

The Secret of Character.

The source of character was to be found in religion. To be sure it was not religion with all its formal accompaniments as we have today. But in unfavorable environment, and under handicaps, men like Abraham and Isaac and Jacob and Joseph developed strength of character because they were true to the inner light. Goodness has its source in God.

Obedience Brings the Blessing.

Again and again this lesson is written large on the pages of Genesis. Righteousness does not always pay in dollars and cents, but it pays in the abiding values of life. Obedience brought rich rewards in every instance in the lives of the patriarchs.

The Influence of a Good Life.

This truth must not be overlooked. Follow the story from the general story of the race down through the story of the patriarchs and finally through Israel, to the beginnings of the Hebrew people as a nation, and you will find the saving power of a good life. By the obedience of one were many again and again made righteous. The greatest security of a nation is its good men.

The Power of Faith.

Faith to the characters in Genesis did not mean intellectual assent to a creed, but rather a personal trust. It was this faith that steadied and sustained them and ultimately gave them the victory. They endured as seeing him who is invisible. They believed God and it was not only accounted to them for righteousness, but it gave them peace and the victory.

EASTERN VIRGINIA MINISTERS' ANNUAL PICNIC.

The Ministers' Association of the Eastern Virginia Conference held its annual picnic for the ministers, wives and families at the Norfolk City Park Monday, June 14th. Lunch was served by the ladies of Norfolk Christian Temple. It was a day of social recreation and Christian Fellowship. A brief business session was held and the Association made happy by the reception of two new members—Dr. M. S. Poulson and Rev. W. W. Elder. The Association expressed sympathy for Rev. H. C. Hilliard, Sunbury, North Carolina, in the loss of automobile by fire and ordered the treasurer to send him a check for $15.00 to assist in purchasing another. Rev. Carl R. Key, Drs. J. G. Truitt and N. G. Newman were appointed to prepare a program for the meeting another year. The next meeting will be held in Suffolk, September 20th.

The highspot of the meeting was the presentation to Dr. and Mrs. Charles Eldred Shelton by their friends of a handsome silver platter as an expression of their love and appreciation of the life and labors among them for seventeen years. Dr. Shelton retires on account of his health. By his fine spirit, ripe scholarship, ready wit, and willingness to serve, Dr. Shelton has made a large contribution to the work of the Eastern Virginia Conference and has won our love and lasting esteem.

I am going to give an attendance banner to the Eastern North Carolina Sunday School Convention.

Anyone having a better record than this one, write to E. W. Neville at Chapel Hill, North Carolina, just as soon as you read this notice.

Nineteen and a half years' attendance at church and Sunday school without missing a Sunday, and only missed six Sundays in twenty-three years, and has not missed a deacon, committee, or business meeting in twenty-seven years. You must be a member of the Congregational Christian Church or Sunday school in the Eastern North Carolina Convention to answer this notice.

FAITHFUL WITH MONEY.

"If therefore ye have not been faithful in the unrighteous mammon, who will commit to your trust the true riches?"—Luke 16:11 (Read Luke 16:1-16.

This text is taken from the parable of the unjust steward, in which Christ reproveth covetousness and the improper use of money, and says that Lazarus the beggar is the richer man.

Money can be true to God and enriching to man, or it can be false to them. It is true only when working for God, and it is an unrighteous mammon when used in disregard of Him and the good of the world. Every one is responsible for the proper use of what little he has.

Let us be faithful to the dollars which God has given us. Let us dedicate each one to Him before we spend it. Let us pray over our money even as we pray over ourselves.

Prayer—O Lord God, bestow Thou upon us the true riches of God's grace to do good to the poor, bring sunshine to the darkened souls and courage and strength to the weakened. Amen.

TUESDAY.

TWICE BORN.

"Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God."—John 3:3.

The other day an emaciated specimen of a man walked into the study of the pastor and said, "Pastor, if you can't help me it is all over." "Why, what is the matter?" said the pastor. "Well, he said, 'I have drunk ten years, and I am just now coming out of a ten day's spree.'" The pastor said, "Well, I can't help you, but God can." This sin-scarred soul gave his heart to the Lord, and from that day to this he has not only had a drink, but he has had no desire for a drink.

Let us thank God for the power that saves. Christ accepted in the soul fully makes a new man, takes away sin and brings on the happiest experiences. Without this new birth there is no entrance into the kingdom of God and we cannot hope ever to see it.

Prayer—Dear Father, we know that Christ changes a life completely and we are guilty of sin that we do not trust in this new birth more than we do. God help us to live it this day. We ask for Jesus' sake. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

WEAK HANDS AND FEEBLE KNEES.

"Strengthen ye the weak hands, and confirm the feeble knees. Say them that are of a fearful heart, be strong, fear not; behold, your God will come and save you."—Isa. 35:3-4.

God has made man to walk erect, and so has exalted him among all other creatures. A man can look straight forward into ever-expanding future. He can gaze with understanding into an ever-opening heaven. He can reach out and draw unto himself vast possessions and by mere thinking accomplish the most amazing achievements.

Likewise we are called upon to be just as great spiritually; to walk erect midst the groveling world, to stand above that which is mean and low, to have visions of glorious good, and reach out unto the Most High and draw ourselves the vast resources of Almighty God.

And this is not all. We might exercise to the fullest extent all of our God given powers to minister to the feeble hand and the weak kneed around us. They cannot make the grade either physically or spiritually. This help is the noblest work known to man.

Prayer—Dear Heavenly Father, through Jesus Christ Thy Son and our Lord and Saviour, lift us up into Thy kingdom among men. This we ask for Jesus' sake. Amen.

THURSDAY.

HOW MUCH SPEED?

"The king hath commanded me a business . . . The king's business required haste."—I Samuel 21:2-8.

This text refers to a man's heaven-bestowed duty which he must perform without delay or deviation.

There is only one task before every child of God, and that is to further the aims of the kingdom of God. We may be desperately busy with our work. The enterprises of life may be all absorbing. But if God does not rule in our hearts in these things and He is not directing us, all is vanity and confusion. One of the most blessed realities about Christian living is that any work, whether cobbling shoes, sweeping floors, or superintending great industries, is a happy and successful work if God directs it.

He who is thus engaged finds life too short, and the years too few for doing what needs to be done. It is folly to waste any of our years in useless details or in flittering pleasures that do not advance our mission.

Prayer—O Lord, we are Thy servants. Endow us with Thy spirit and guide us into Thy business. Amen.

FRIDAY.

SPEED DOES NOT WIN.

"The race is not to the swift."—Ecc. 9:11.

To steadfastly prosecute one's duty does not mean that one should go too fast. It is said that brilliancy does not always mean accomplishment, neither does genius always mean excellence. We are continually seeing the swift outdone by the steady and genius excelled by perseverance.

So also is it in the life of the soul. Know a little more of the Bible each day, and in course of time you will know it all. Draw a little closer to God each day and soon you will find Him a very close companion to you. God is looking to the consecration of our wills more than He is to the speed with which we attempt to do things.

Prayer—Dear Father, be Thou our strength and help us to run the race with patience and may it be a good run. When it is over, may it have been a good fight, a kept faith, and then a crown. In His name we ask it. Amen.

SATURDAY.

REFRESHING LIVES.

"The hearts of the saints have been refreshed through Thee, brother."—Philemon 1-7.

How dull are some spirits, how dark and foggy and disagreeable! They cannot enter an assembly without lowering the temperature of its life. They throw a wet blanket over everything with which they have to do. They bring aridness with them, and weariness, and darkness of spiritual gloom.

And how bright are other souls, how gay and happy! They are exhilarating as a May morning, as cheering as the song of the thrush, as strengthening as good food appetizingly prepared. Fresh and sweet themselves, they freshen and sweeten all the meet. They are the sunshine of living.

Many that are in the first class do not know it and none that are in the second class realize what blessedness they sow broadcast. It is commonly held that no one can change from the first class to the second, but that

WORTH DYING FOR.

By REV. JOHN G. TRUITT.

"Christ also loved the church, and gave Himself for it."—Eph. 5:25.

This morning we have witnessed a very interesting sight, namely, that of twenty four men, women, boys, and girls uniting with the church. Some of them have transferred their membership from some other church in some other city, or country-side; others are professing their faith in the Christ and making a public expression of it at this altar for the first time. Fathers have come with their sons, and mothers with their daughters; and as you have come many interesting memories of talks and visits with you have come to my mind. Many are surprised to see this large number unite with the church at a regular service, without any special evangelistic meetings, and I am surprised that still others have not come forward and united with the church today.

Your action today shows that you love the church. Let me tell you in the words of my text, "Christ also loved the church, and gave himself for it". Jesus thought it worth dying for! If it is worth Jesus dying for, it is certainly worth your living for. It is not only worth your living for, but it is also worth your dying for. Jesus envisioned a people bound by the ties of faith to one another, a people reaching all over the world, and into the endless ages, bound to one another by the voluntary bond of love. And bound to God by God's love for you, and your love for him.

No one made you join the church. You did it voluntarily, because you felt it to be your decent, right, and bounden duty! You had faith in Christ, and love for his cause in the world; you had a consciousness that he was your divine friend, and you wanted to express your inner and eternal appreciation of that spiritual friendship. you wanted to have a part in the work of winning more and more territory for the eternal Kingdom of love, and righteousness, and goodness, and truth. You have expressed today by your actions one of the noblest impulses that ever comes to a human soul. May God bless you for the step and the stand you have taken.

Some day you will be tempted to think the church is small, and that it is not worthy of your continued loyalty. You will find it subject to human hands when you feel that only divine hands should lay hold on it. You will sometimes feel prone to disagree with some of its teachings, and will want to lay it aside like a used garment. But when that day ever comes just remember that "Christ loved the church, and gave himself for it". The best that the world has ever known loved the church and died for it!

Sometimes you may think that you cannot support the church with your time, or money, or talents. That you are too busy at other things, or that you know so much better what to do with your money, or that your brain and personality must be all used to other purposes. If you should ever feel like that about the church just remember that it is a divine institution, and that the Prince of peace, that the Savior of men, that the Lord of glory, thought it worth dying for, and that he gave himself for it.

Horace Pitkins, of noble birth and excellent education, went into China to tell the story of Christ's love for the church, as he waited in the dungeon for death he wrote his wife to rear their baby boy to take up where he left off. The Boxers could kill Pitkins but today the memory of his name in certain sections of China is more beautiful than their golden sunsets, and more lasting than their eternal hills! If you are tempted to neglect your attendance upon the services of your church, remember the privations endured by such men to make the church and its blessings possible to you, and pull yourself up to a finer appreciation of what the church really means to the world. Let names like Grenfel in the Labrador, Schweitzer in Africa, and the names of men and women you honor, and respect in your own circle of friends, be an inspiration to you, deepening your own love and loyalty for the church which Christ thought worth dying for.

You have this day publicly accepted Jesus Christ as your Lord and Savior, your Friend and Counsellor, fill your lives with positive help toward him from today henceforth. Ask yourself: How much can I do for my Lord, and his Kingdom on earth? Say to yourself, He died for it, what can I do for it? You may be a mother in your home, if you are remember you have one of life's greatest opportunities to be a blessing to the Kingdom of God. You may be a workman going daily to your task, if you are remember that you may so sublimate your work as to make every task you perform a blessing to God. And a part of what you earn you may definitely lay upon the altar in your church to be especially used of Him.

I knew a young man once who sat down and counted up more than $4,000.00 that he out of a medium salary had already given to the Kingdom of God by laying it on the altar of his church. And not only that, but God had had a conscious place in that young fellow's mind all the while, and had repaid him many times over for all that he had done for Him. I have know many young working women to set aside a definite portion of their earnings for the church, realizing that it had been one of their greatest benefactors, and knowing that in that way they could definitely show their gratitude to God.

"Christ also loved the church and gave himself". Some people answer the call of their church to be a teacher in one of its classes. What a noble answer! Some answer the call of their church by setting themselves the definite task of winning others to the church, and every so often they come to their pastor with a newly won prospect for the practice of the Christian faith and fellowship in the Church. Some say to themselves I can at least be faithful in my attendance upon the services of the church, and can live a correspondingly sincere and honest life outside in my daily walk. "Christ also loved the church, and gave himself for it".

You love the church. You have joined with others, countless, and courageous others, who also love the church, and daily they are living for it; and in some places they are actually facing up to the question of dying for it! For experience I know, and from experience you will learn that there is an unseen, benign presence giving those who seek to show their love for the church by doing something for it. And the best way in all the world to do something for the church is to be a real true Christian.

The casting down of our spirits in true humility is but like throwing a ball to the ground, which makes it rebound the higher toward heaven.

The Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

The seasons this spring have been all that we could ask. The rains coming so often have somewhat hindered us getting up our wheat and oat crops harvested.

Our Irish potatoe crop is very promising this season. Last year the weather was so dry all the spring season that we made a very short crop of Irish potatoes.

The children are enjoying spring cabbage, beans, beets and all kinds of garden vegetables. The vegetables are a little better when we can go to our own garden and get them.

Vacation season is on at the Christian Orphanage. We try to give all the children at least ten day's vacation during the summer months, provided we can find someone who will take those who have nowhere to go.

Of course we have some who will not get out at all unless some friend will take them.

It does the little fellows a lot of good to get to go on a vacation. I will make a list in the near future as to the number of boys and girls who have no people to take them. If some one who is interested in them wants to make them happy for a week they will be happy to accept your invitation.

We have two fine, ambitious girls, who graduated from High School this year. They want to take a business course at Elon College. They have no money, and they want somebody to lend them enough to pay their college expenses and let them pay it back as soon as they get work and begin to draw a salary—who will be so kind as to do this? This is not supposed to be a donation, but a loan to them. Who wants to have the real joy of helping two worthy girls to prepare themselves for a life career?

EARLY CHRISTIAN LEADERS.

gone, but the church has clung to its old vision and faith.

For years the need of a parish house was felt, and in 1931, in spite of the depression, it was voted to build. Seven men signed personal notes to finance it and in October, 1931, the new vestry was dedicated. On Easter Sunday, this year, the church was free from debt. Rev. Basil Harris has been pastor at Kitty Point since 1929, and the leader in building and paying for the Parish House.

Of these four, as well as other early leaders in the Christian Churches, it was most fittingly said: "These all died in faith, not having received the promises, but having seen them, and greeted them from afar, and having confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth . . . who, through faith, subdued Kingdoms, wrought righteousness, obtained promises . . . from weakness were made strong . . . these all, having had witness borne to them through their faith, received not the promises, God having foreseen some better thing concerning us, that apart from us they should not be made perfect."

—From The Maine Christian Pilgrim.

If we are really, and always, and equally ready to do whatsoever the King appoints, all the trials and vexations arising from any change in His appointments, great or small, simply do not exist. If He appoints me to work there, shall I lament that I am not to work here?

In Memoriam

HUFF.

Mrs. Grace Apple Huff died suddenly June 2, 1937, on her 14th wedding anniversary, at the age of 43 years. She was a member of Fries Memorial Church, having joined with her husband shortly after their marriage.

She is survived by her husband, J. V. Huff; three children, Helen, aged 12, Junior, aged 11, and Frances aged 8; her mother, Mrs. Alice Apple; and a host of relatives and friends.

The interment was in the Moravian cemetery at Winston-Salem, the funeral services being conducted by her pastor, Rev. H. B. Johnson, assisted by Rev. Gordon Spough and Dr. W. M. Jay.

May God bless those who mourn.

CLAPP.

Mr. Willie Clapp was born June 29, 1869 and fell asleep in Rainey Hospital in Burlington April 18th 1937. Age 68 years 10 months and 11 days.

Early in life he united with Apples Chapel Christian Church and remained a faithful and loyal member to the end.

Before the end came he assured the family of his readiness to meet his heavenly father.

He was a brother indeed and a friend to all his neighbors, and we are sure he will be greatly missed in his home and community.

The funeral was conducted by Rev. C. E. Brown and Rev. J. F. Apple with interment in Apples Chapel Cemetery.
Our love for him was expressed by the personal interest in his illness, display of flowers, and attendance at his services.
Mr. Clapp is survived by one brother and two sisters.

WILLIAMS.

On May 22, 1937, it was God's will to call from our midst a loyal and ever ready helper, Mrs. Maude Williams, president of the Pleasant Ridge Missionary Society. Her death deprives not only this society, but her church and the entire community of a loyal friend.

We wish to pay tribute to the memory of one whose going has brought sorrow to us all.

- Be it therefore resolved:
1. That we purpose in our hearts not to murmur at God's providence, by faith knowing our loss is her gain.
 2. That in her death we have lost a fine Christian character; one who was interested in the work of her church.
 3. That we bow in humble submission to the will of our Heavenly Father.
 4. That we extend our sympathy to the family and commend them to God, whose grace is sufficient in the hour of trouble.
 5. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy to The "Christian Sun" for publication, and a copy be entered on the records of our Society.

SUPPORTING RELIGIOUS EDUCATION.

unless these conventions respond to the needs of religious education in a much more generous fashion than the other two have done that even the meager work now being promoted will have to be discontinued. This writer believes, and has for some years, that the promotion of religious education in the local churches in some such fashion as the Board of Christian Education wants to do, will develop the income for all types of Christian work. He can see no other solution for our problems than to put in the field trained workers who will stimulate our local churches and guide them in their programs of education so that there may be more progressive, active, and productive local churches.

The Board of Christian Education has already voted to combine its forces with the other groups so that there may be united promotional work in our Southern Convention. Such a combination can reduce the expense of promotional work and at the same time greatly increase the efficiency of this promotion. Until this is accomplished it is very important for local Sunday schools, Christian Endeavor societies and churches to send in their quota of money for the Board of Christian Education to the Sunday school and Christian Endeavor conventions and the annual conference. It is to be hoped that local leaders will think seriously of this matter and govern themselves accordingly.

SUNDAY.

HOLY STILLNESS.

"Jehovah is in His holy temple: let all the earth keep silence before Him."—Habakkuk 2: 15-20.

God can be heard over the most terrible crashes of war, but only when He thunders in awful rebuke. His still, small voice can not reach our souls in blessing unless we listen for it, unless we keep silence before Him.

The hush of the soul hears God. The waiting attitude apprehends God. "Be still and know that I am God," says Jehovah, and no one can know that He is God if his life is full of clamor.

For our's is a God of peace. "Peace on earth," sang the angels at the birth of His Son. "My peace I give unto you," said the Son to His disciples. A disturbed life, a vexed and harassed and tumultuous life, sees not Jehovah in His holy temple, hears not the words of loving wisdom spoken from His throne.

Prayer—Enter our storm-tossed souls, O Christ, as Thou gavest Thy presence to the little boat on the raging Sea of Galilee. Speak to every tempest that arises within us, and bid it "Peace, be still." Amen.

—Amos R. Wells.

Excessive use of liquor since repeal was blamed by William I. Lacy, director of the Cleveland Humane Society, for an increased demand on the services of that organization, in his annual report. Drunken mothers were a greater problem than drunken fathers, the director asserted.

"Drink," Lacy said, "is playing havoc with homes. In 12 per cent of the general cases presented to our intake committee in the past five months, there was surface indication of increased use of alcohol."

GIRDLES

By CLARENCE A. VINCENT, D. D.

The girdle was a common article of dress centuries ago. Everyone wore one. On priests and kings it was a symbol of office. It stood for responsibility and power. Isaiah, one-hundred and thirty years before Cyrus was born, declared that God would gird him though Cyrus did not know him.

Responsibilities.

The girdles of a person are drawn tighter and tighter as age comes. The child has few responsibilities. These increase with every year. The child's contacts are the simplest with parents and playmates. A youth adds to these the contacts of school. The adult enters into the associations of business, politics, pleasure and family. The girdles of responsibility, of association, and of experience are more tightly drawn every year. The interdependence of the parts of a great building grows as its construction increases.

Opportunity.

Every hitch of the girdle is an added opportunity for an individual. The privileges of the home, the community and the church gradually open around one. In meeting these responsibilities and entering into the opportunities the mind is quickened, the emotions enriched and the will strengthened in right. Every contact of a plant with the sun, soil and rain is an opportunity.

Service.

Every hitch of the girdle is an opportunity to help others. In business, employers and employees have the finest opportunities to work together in the spirit and practices of Christ; in the home, to help one another and to train the children; in school, to train other children in character and citizenship; in church, to add our thoughts, prayers, deeds and love to the gifts of others. It is through such cooperation that the Church has power to shape individual and community life.

God Girds.

Every obedient, unselfish person's life is a plan of God. An architect makes many plans. Many things in the plans are alike but every plan is in some features different from all others. God girds every life—with power, with righteousness, with faithfulness, and with love. Through worship, prayer, service to others and in unknown ways, he girds. God girded Jesus. He girded the great leaders and as well our fathers and mothers.

Silent Forces.

Silently God's life-forces act. In the natural world—flowers and grass and leaves and blossoms and fruit come, in the human personality—the body grows, the mind strengthens, the emotions deepen and the spirit becomes more spiritual and kind and beautiful.

"How silently, how silently
The wondrous gift is given,
So God imparts to human hearts
The blessings of His heaven.

"No ear may hear His coming,
But in this world of sin,
Where meek souls will receive Him still,
The dear Christ enters in."

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

Rev. Aubrey C. Todd, member of South Norfolk Christian Church and a student the past year at Chicago University, is spending this summer as a preacher in Wyoming.

At its recent Commencement, Piedmont College gave a Doctor's degree to Mr. William T. Boulton, Treasurer of the General Council of Congregational and Christian Churches and to Governor Rivers of Georgia.

Rev. and Mrs. I. Alva Hart of Crestview, Florida, have recently returned from their vacation, part of which was spent at Demorest, Georgia. Neighbors gave them a wonderful "pounding party" on the evening of their return home.

Miss Emma G. Strong, retired Home Missionary teacher, is making her home in Demorest, Georgia, where she adds beauty and joy to the community, not only by the fine flowers she raises, but also by the good work she does in the community.

From June 21 to 26th the Congregational-Christian young people of Puerto Rico met with young people from other churches in a summer training at the Blanche Kellogg Institute. Greetings were exchanged with the summer school at Elon.

Eight Student Summer Service workers are this week busy in the churches of Virginia and the Carolinas. Several others are at work further south. Their job is mostly to conduct vacation schools but they also help the churches in other ways.

Rev. Omer S. Thomas, former Home Mission secretary for the Christian Church, had a nervous breakdown with complication of heart trouble about three months ago and is still not able to carry on his work. Friends throughout the Church wish for him a speedy recovery.

Dr. W. C. Wicker, president of the Eastern North Carolina Conference and teacher in Elon College, has been ill at his home at Elon College, North Carolina, for the past few weeks, but is now much improved. His many friends wish for him a speedy and complete recovery.

Rev. A. Lanson Granger, Jr., member of the First Christian Church,

Norfolk, Virginia, and president of the National Pilgrim Fellowship, is visiting young peoples' conferences in the Middle West. A recent card from him said that he was then in Kansas City, Missouri, and reported that he was enjoying this wider fellowship.

A revival was held at the Henderson Congregational-Christian Church June 9-20th. Services were under the leadership of the pastor, Rev. J. Everette Neese. There were seven professions and many rededications. One addition was made to the church June 6th and five came in at the close of the meeting. They have had ten additions to the church since November.

DR. P. H. FLEMING.

Dr. P. H. Fleming, one of the most widely known and most beloved ministers of the Christian Church died at his home in Burlington, Tuesday,

GOD IS WITH US.

By P. H. FLEMING, D. D.

God will be with you alway,
Faithful one where'er you roam;
Lean on Him, He'll prove your stay,
And will safely lead you home.

God will be with you alway,
Fear not though dark it seem;
Far above these vapors gray,
Soon the lights of God shall gleam.

God will be with you alway,
Strengthen, comfort you and guide;
Lead you ever night and day,
Till you cross death's chilling tide.

God will be with you alway,
Knowing this I ask no more;
Come what things soever may,
We shall meet on heaven's shore.

June 22nd, at 3:10 A. M. Dr. Fleming had been ill for practically a year. His daughter, Nellie, lived with him in the home and cared for him. Her service to her father has been devoted and most beautiful.

First of all, Dr. Fleming was a minister of the gospel, a man of great faith and unquestioned integrity. The majority of his ministerial life was spent in Burlington. He was pastor of the Burlington Church for nearly 16 years. Under his ministry the church grew and developed. He served at other important points in and out of the State of North Carolina. He was a member of the Board of Trustees of Elon College for 40 years and honored secretary from 1905 to 1937. In addition to his services as a minister of the gospel, he was Superintendent of County Welfare for Alamance County from 1919 to September 1, 1936. He resigned because of ill health. He was Superintendent of Burlington City Schools and of Alamance County Schools for a number of years.

In his death the church loses a faithful, efficient, and devoted servant, and Alamance County loses one of its most beloved citizens.

The funeral services for Dr. Fleming were conducted from the Burlington Church, Wednesday afternoon at 3:30 by Dr. James H. Lightbourne, pastor of the church, assisted by Dr. G. O. Lankford, a former pastor of the church, and the writer. A very large number of Dr. Fleming's relatives and friends came for the services. Mrs. Ethel Clements Huff was soloist. Music was furnished by the Burlington Church choir. It was a simple but a very beautiful and impressive service.

The college wishes to express its great appreciation of the faithful and untiring services of Dr. Fleming in its behalf. It has never had a more faithful and a more loyal servant. It also wishes to express to the family its sympathy and prayers in this time of loss and sorrow.

YALE STUDENT GOES TO MAINE.

A pastorate in one of the most northern reaches of the United States will be the experience this summer of Herbert G. Council, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert G. Council, Sr., of Franklin, and student in Yale Divinity School, New Haven Connecticut.

He will serve as summer pastor of the First Congregational Church of Van Buren, Maine, beginning his active duties Sunday, June 20th. Van Buren, an outpost of 5,000 people, is located on St. John's River, which runs along the Canadian border. It is a railroad terminal and has a United States customs office, and is typically a pioneering town situated at the limit of civilization.

Mr. Council has accepted the summer pastorate as an experimental venture and study, with the view of acquiring practical experience in the preaching service as a supplement to the theoretical learning. He hopes to take an active interest in the community affairs of Van Buren, and will attempt to initiate a full program of activity in his church.

A graduate of William and Mary College in 1936, Mr. Council has just completed his first year of study at Yale Divinity School, from which he expects to receive his B. D. degree in June, 1939. He was graduated from Franklin High School in 1932. Last summer he served as assistant to the pastor of Suffolk Christian Church.

Mr. Council took an active part in student activities while a student at William and Mary, serving as president of the Philomathean Literary Society, president of the Methodist Student School Class, and as a member of the Student Religious Council. At Yale, also, he has managed to take an active part in student enterprises, besides being employed in part-time work and carrying a full program of study.

Much has been heard in recent years about the utility companies robbing the public, and the government has diverted hundreds of millions of public funds to the erection of publicly-owned power plants. Yet, one fellow has figured that the public is somewhat inconsistent. The man who smokes a pack of cigarettes a day, pays a tax—federal and state—of approximately $30.00 a year, while the average annual electric bill for some 20,000,000 homes in the United States in 1935 was $33.84, which was just a little more than the cigarette smoker paid in taxes alone for his smoke. It looks like he will pay his electric bill one way or another.

PRAYER.

O God, our help in the days that are past and our hope for the days that are to come, we know that Thou art light to all who love Thee, strength to all who serve Thee, joy to all who trust Thee, and comfort to all who lean upon Thy sustaining grace.

With hearts made sad in the loss occasioned by the death of our friend and brother, a most worthy "Comrade of the Way," Dr. Charles LeRoy Goodell, we come to Thee in prayer. But though keenly conscious of our loss, our hearts rejoice in the knowledge of his victorious life, and in our faith we cherish that he has entered into a most glorious reward.

We bring to Thee, O Lord, our prayer of thanksgiving for the long, useful life and the far-reaching service of this hero of the cross in whose memory we now assemble. We thank Thee for his beautiful Christian character which was a benediction upon all who knew him and a blessing to his day and generation. We thank Thee for his zeal in Kingdom service, for his devotion to Jesus Christ, for his brotherliness which knew no creedal barrier, and for the evangelistic passion which was constantly aglow upon the altar of his heart. We thank Thee for his unusual power in public which down through the years moved untold thousands to seek the pardon of "Thy Forgiving Grace," and which moved other untold thousands to draw closer to Thee in the fellowship of sincere consecration. Truly, having turned many to righteousness, he must now be among the number who "shall shine as the stars forever and ever." Our faith makes us confident that he is among the blessed dead who having died in the Lord they now "rest their labors and their works do follow them."

We thank Thee, O God, that Thou didst give Dr. Goodell to the world, and that he gave himself unreservedly to Thee.

May the memory of his noble life bring joy and challenge to us all in the days to come as did his presence in days that are gone. May the memory of his life—so characterized by charm and power of personality—be a constant comfort to the members of his family. May the memory of his unique talents, his sincerity of purpose, his broad sympathies, his Christian loyalty, his intelligent and courageous proclamation of spiritual truths, and his faith in the Gospel of Jesus Christ as Thy "power to save" every life and all of life—ever be an inspiration to each of us to be, as was he, a true "Follower of the Gleam." May all the ministers whose lives his life has touched "carry on" with his same full measure of devotion as worthy Heralds of the Passion" of Evangelism.

In the name of the Christ whom he loved and served to the end, we offer our prayer. Amen.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgement and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

OUR INDEPENDENCE.

When representatives of the colonies along the east coast signed the Declaration of Independence one hundred and sixty-one years ago next Saturday, they doubtless did not dream that the wilderness west of them would become the nation it is now. They believed, however, that independence from British rule was necessary, in order to develop freedom of thought and activity on the part of the colonies. They believed in liberty of conscience. They believed in individual initiative. They believed in the kind of democracy that gives every person a chance to develop into his best self. In order to attain this goal, they were willing to make sacrifices. We are heir to their faith and their sacrifices.

At the end of one hundred and sixty-one years the nation is in a desperate struggle for another type of freedom. No foreign nation bids us what to do, but individuals and groups within the nation seem to be determined to give orders. The economic struggle that is now going on may easily cost as much as the first Declaration of Independence without leading to as definite and happy results. It is to be doubted that present leaders know as well what is needed, as did those in the beginning of the nation's history.

It is important, therefore, that ministers, teachers, and citizens of all types, think through state and national problems, keep informed as to what is going on, and help in every possible way to maintain the freedom given to us by our forebears, and see to it that the larger freedom be granted to all citizens alike. It is certainly important that the many do not suffer for necessities, while the few have more than they need. It is equally important that we follow the Prince of Peace in the establishment of justice and right, rather than radicals who forget God and follow the ways of war.

PATRICK HENRY FLEMING.

Rev. P. H. Fleming, D. D., was born August 3, 1862 in Warren County, North Carolina, and died at his home in Burlington, North Carolina, on June 22, 1937. He was educated in Graham Normal College, Elon College, and Antioch (Ohio). On December 18, 1889, he married Miss Ella Henrietta Sipe.

He was licensed November 19, 1882, and was ordained to the ministry November 23, 1886. Because of ill health he became inactive in November, 1936, after fifty-four years of ministerial labor. Among the churches served were Linville, New Providence, Graham, Burlington (fifteen years), Greenville, Ohio, Manchester, New Hampshire, Greensboro, High Point, Ashboro, Pleasant Hill, Haw River, Long's Chapel, and Union (for the last eighteen years).

Dr. Fleming served as Superintendent of Public Instruction for Alamance County, North Carolina, ten years; as Superintendent of Burlington City Schools for one year; Superintendent of Public Welfare for Alamance County for seventeen years; Trustee of Elon College since 1897; and Secretary of the Board of Trustees for Elon thirty-two years.

He was the author of "Mother's Unanswered Prayer," "The Christian Church," "Disciples Called Christians," and two hymns, "God is With Us," and "Faith, Hope and Love."

In the death of Dr. Fleming the Christian Church has lost one of its leaders for the past fifty years. More than that, it has lost one of the few remaining ministers of the "southern gentleman" type. Scholarly, dignified, refined, Dr. Fleming was a gentleman in every sense of the word. A long list of churches will remember his active service and the County and State of which he was a part have benefitted by his wisdom, skill, and sacrificial service. The institutions of the church have shared in his wisdom and benefitted by his service. This is particularly true of Elon College, where he served as Secretary of the Board of Trustees. Many will rise up to call him blessed, but few, if any, can take his place with the dignity and self-forgetfulness in the field of Christian service.

ELON SUMMER SCHOOL.

The Elon Summer School of Leadership Training enrolled 164 people. More than 20 ministers shared in the classes and conferences for ministers. Eastern Virginia had 55 representatives; the North Carolina Virginia Conference, 53; Eastern North Carolina, 20; Virginia Valley Central, 15; and Western North Carolina, 3 representatives. Others came from Florida to Massachusetts.

Rev. W. E. Wisseman, pastor of our church in Greensboro, North Carolina, did an excellent job as Dean. He had lined up an unusually strong faculty and was on the job from early morning until late at night. Leaders and students alike cooperated to make it a fine training school.

The organ recital, commissioning service for the Student Summer Service workers, and the Communion on Friday evening was perhaps the outstanding feature of the week's activities. Those who shared in the Commissioning and Communion service on Elon's beautiful campus that evening will never be quite the same again. Dr. James R. Clinton, Chaplain for the school, and the class in Worship, lead by Dr. E. L. Shaver, worked out a beautiful Communion Service, which reminded those present of the feeding of the five thousand, as well as the upper room communion lead by the Master.

Plans are already under way for a school next year and it is expected that even larger numbers will attend. This is one of the best opportunities for church leaders and young people to get training for the work which they do in their communities.

PREPARE OUR HEARTS FOR THE HOLY COMMUNION.

July 4, 1937.

The Communion Sunday of July of this year falls on Independence Day. At first thought some pastors will regret the double-header holiday which will put many of their congregation on the road. There may be other preachers who have patriotic sermons in mind that might not seem to fit in with the observance of the Lord's Supper. We feel that there is a very fundamental harmony in the day and that no day is more fitting for the Sacrament than the anniversary of the Declaration of Independence.

The original idea of the word, Sacrament, is that of a pledge, the oath of allegiance taken by the Roman soldiers upon enlistment, and therefore the immortal act in Independence Hall, Philadelphia, July 4, 1776, was in a very real sense a sacrament. Devoted men pledged their lives, their fortunes and their sacred honor. The day ought to inspire Christians to make a similar pledge of allegiance to Christ and the Church.

The words used by patriots on the birthday of the nation were not idle rhetoric. The circumstances put blood into their declaration. They risked their lives as they pledged. Franklin's remark, "We must indeed all hang together or assuredly we will all hang separately," was more than a jest. Had the colonies been defeated every signer would have been regarded guilty of treason with death as a penalty. They risked their fortunes. When Charles Carroll rose to sign one of the delegates exclaimed, "There go a few millions." The Maryland patriot, who placed his address after his name, threw his credit and his broad acres into the conflict for the cause. Had the cause failed all he had would have been confiscated. The members of the Continental Congress cut loose in this act from the aristocratic tory element in the land and joined with the common people in a commitment for liberty and the rights of mankind. The false sense of honor as something in blood or goods gave way to a sacred honor that devotes self to a great purpose. We are not degrading the holiest ordinance of the Christian religion when we speak of the act of the signing of the Declaration of Independence as a sacrament.

Christians should receive the Holy Communion July 4, 1937, with an equally sacred commitment of life, fortune and honor to the service of Christ. May this communion bind us through the death of Christ into a living fellowship. Let us pledge our lives at this service and go forth to make them available for the Kingdom of God. Let us pledge our fortunes and lay upon the altar our gifts to make the name of Christ well known upon the earth. Let us pledge our honor, sharing our good name and pride with the Christ who is despised in so many quarters of the world, but as we take his name as our name, let us pledge a sincerity and consistency of life that will not degrade the holy name we bear. The holiday should be for us a holy day. The ordinance ought to be to us a real sacrament in which we devote more than a gesture or fine words to the Christ who died for us. Let us become patriots of the kingdom pledging to our King and Saviour our lives, our fortunes, and our sacred honor.

FAITH, HOPE AND LOVE.

By P. H. FLEMING, D. D.

I am walking now by Faith,
To a land I do not see;
Faith grows stronger on the path,
As its trials come to me.

Chorus:

I am trusting Christ my Lord,
He loves me and I love Him;
In communion sweet we dwell,
I am His and all is well.

I am looking now in Hope,
For a brighter day to see;
Hope dispels the clouds that grope,
On the path of life for me.

I am living now in Love,
Its glad way I now can see,
Love shows me my home above,
And sweet peace it gives to me.

FLORIDA YOUNG PEOPLE'S CONFERENCE.

Over one hundred and thirty young people and their leaders are enjoying the twelfth annual Florida Summer Conference, being held at Camp Imnokalee. This is truly "camping" with all that the name implies, as the boys are sleeping in a big tent and illumination for the cabins and tents is by means of kerosene lamps. We are right on the shore of a large lake, so the problem of keeping clean solves itself.

We feel especially fortunate in having for our dean the Rev. V. B. Chicoine, who is holding down this job for the third time. He is so splendid that we fear he will not be able to get rid of this responsibility in future years.

The student group is about equally divided into three groups for classes—freshmen and sophomores in high school, juniors and seniors in high school, and an older group of college-age young people. Mrs. C. Fred Ward, of Winter Park, is again teaching courses on the Bible, and Dr. Edwin Clarke, of Rollins College, has a class for the older group this year which has to do with the practical application of Christian principles. Mr. Chicoine is teaching this same course to the youngest group. Mrs. Jockinsen, of St. Petersburg, is teaching a course on "Building a Christian Home" to the older students.

Two of the teachers in our conference are especially interesting. Mr. Raymond Dudley, one of our missionaries from India, is making the study of "World Friendship" very real to the members of his classes. Rev. Stuart Austin of the Southern Methodist Church, is teaching a course on Bible to two of the groups. We feel that we are gaining a great deal by having this contact with a leader in another denomination in Florida. Both Mr. Dudley and Mr. Austin have helped the conference by their talks at Vespers, which are held on the lake shore.

"Finding My Place in the Church" is the heading for a group of courses, where the students may choose "The Young People's Society," "Recreational Leadership," "Teaching," or "Christian Youth in Missionary Action." There are also "Interest Groups"—Personality Development, Books, Music and Worship, and Cooperatives.

One of the most interesting projects being carried on at this Conference is a Cooperative Store—"The Co-op." Mr. Leshner, the minister of our church in Jacksonville, is teaching a course on cooperatives and the class is actually putting the things they learn into practice by running the camp store, where candy, gum, films, pencils, note books, and other "necessities" are being sold on a cooperative basis.

The spirit of the Conference leaves nothing to be desired, for everyone seems to be enjoying working and playing together. The "play" is under the direction of Mr. Gerald Smith, the new minister for the West Tampa Mission, and the group is divided into the "Mohawks" and the "Seminole" for the purpose of athletic competition.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

"Lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven." These are the words of Jesus. He was interested in the people on earth. He came to live among men and to die for them. In this respect, as in all others, He surpassed all men in His profound concern for the spiritual uplift of this earthly life. The Gospel of Jesus has touched every phase of human life on the earth. Jesus awakened an interest in science, medicine, social service, health, education, philosophy and religion.

Christianity has passed through the travail of many extreme doctrines. At one time the chief emphasis was placed on the preparation for heaven. The earth, the flesh, the needs of humanity were made secondary. The hymns were about heaven. Preachers prepared their sermons, and delivered them with great fervor, pointing the way to the land of the redeemed.

It was natural for the point of emphasis to change. There was a revolt against preparing for another world, while there was so much need in this present world. Christianity became more practical. Doctrinal sermons were displaced by ethical discourses and philosophic dissertations. We have been living in this atmosphere for a number of years. The church has paid a great price for lowering its standards and yielding to the public demand for social service as a substitute for regeneration. The vilest sinner surpasses the Christian in his interest in this present world. There may be a difference of ideals—but all worldly ideals rise no higher than the out-reach and the upward look of mankind. The church vies with the world, today, in its selfish interest in this present life.

The church should have a change of ideals and a new point of emphasis. The Sermon on the Mount gives the clue which should be accepted again by the people of God. People travel today. They are pilgrims once more. One wonders where so many people come from and where are they going? Why not revive the pilgrim spirit in the church? Whence came we? Whither are we bound? If the grave is not the final adventure, what lies beyond the silent tomb? Hell for sinners and heaven for saints, is one answer. That may not be the final answer for many—but it is one—and it is the one that Jesus created for man and proclaimed in no uncertain words. He did not offer detailed explanations and His definitions are not all that one might desire. But the statements are in the New Testament and they cannot be discredited without doing violence to the words of Jesus.

Jesus was heavenly minded. He had an interest in heaven. He sought to share that interest with His disciples. It appears in His first recorded sermon. His last message, under the shadow of the cross, tells about "My Father's house and the many mansions." "Lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven." What are these treasures and where is heaven? Jesus did not go into details. He gave a command. He made an appeal to human reason and spiritual devotion. That appeal is as timely today as it was in the long ago. Human hearts need the challenge of another world. This world is too small for a human soul. It offers too little for what it receives. But it is a great world. And the soul is greater than the world in which it lives. Therefore, Jesus urged people to prepare for heaven. Think about heaven. Preach about the future life. Live in the light of eternity. That will not lessen our interest in this life. It will intensify our common place activities. Our homes will become sacred types of the mansions in the skies. Family worship will not be embarrassing when the minister visits the home. Grace before meals will have a new meaning. The plow shares, the hum of machines in shop and factory, the rush of business in the office, the noise of the saw and hammer—all these and more will bring greater joy to working men who live in the light of eternity.

ELON SUMMER SCHOOL OF LEADERSHIP TRAINING.

Elon College is the church's institution. It was founded by the church and has been directed and supported by the church through the years. It is for the church's use when and for what purposes it may desire.

The Southern Convention has a Board of Christian Education. This Board in addition to other worthwhile services, conducts a summer school of leadership training. For a number of years this school has been meeting at Elon College. Attendance has fluctuated considerably. The 1937 session has just closed today, Saturday. Everyone present seemed to feel that this is the very best session that they have yet had. There was a much larger attendance than last year. The school is inclusive; that is, all ages are included from junior age up. There was a total attendance of between 160 and 170. We were fortunate this year in having a large percentage of the ministers of the convention here, also a number of distinguished visitors connected with the General Council of Congregational and Christian Churches. The school has a very strong faculty and a very enthusiastic student body.

Among the members of the faculty who were here for the first time were:

Dr. James R. Clinton, Home Extension Board worker with headquarters in Philadelphia. Dr. Clinton served as Chaplain of the school and also taught a course in "Studies in the Christian Manifesto."

Dr. Raymond A. Dudley, missionary to India on furlough. Dr. Dudley had one evening program in which he gave a moving picture lecture on the work of the church in India. Dr. Dudley conducted a course in "Education for Missions and World Friendship."

Mrs. Joe French conducted a class in "Teaching Juniors," and Rev. J. Lee Johnson gave an expository course in "I and II Thessalonians." Mr. Johnson is an alumnus of the college, and we were very happy to have him here.

Rev. F. C. Lester was general chairman of the school, and Rev. W. E. Wisseman served as Dean. Miss Irene Cotten served as Registrar, Miss Grace E. Stewart as Hostess, and Miss Dorothy Truitt as Director of Recreation.

Such courses that combine helpful study with wholesome recreation is a great benefit to the individual who comes and must in turn be of great value to the local church. Every church and Sunday school should be well represented at these annual training schools. Here they receive information concerning up-to-date methods and the proper materials to carry on not only Sunday School and Young Peoples' work, but the entire program of the church. The devotional periods are inspirational and helpful; the class periods are highly worthwhile.

Elon College wishes to express its appreciation of the presence of this large number of our ministers, church officials, and young people. They were cooperative and sympathetic in all that the college is endeavoring to do. We shall be looking forward to the school for next year and will try to have our house in order.

L. E. SMITH,

A PROPOSED PLAN FOR PARISH ORGANIZATION.

[The following was adopted by "The Friendship Parish," Rev. W. Carl Parker, Pastor at the Williams Chapel Church, Waycross, Georgia, and is given here with the hope that it may be suggestive to other rural churches. Editor.]

We believe that rural churches unable to maintain their own full time resident minister can better fulfill the important mission of the Church by forming themselves into convenient parishes.

Realizing that friendly cooperation between our four Churches during the past six years has made it possible for this Parish to have the full time services of a resident pastor, from which has resulted a larger, better, and more effective ministry than would otherwise have been possible, we give our hearty approval of the cooperation of our churches.

Therefore, be it resolved, that we, the following Congregational-Christian Churches of South Georgia, namely: Antioch, Bristol, organized in 1899; Friendship, Baxely, organized in 1892; Union Hill, Pearson, organized in 1892; and Williams Chapel, Waycross, organized in 1890, hereby further associate ourselves and pledge our support to the following plan of Parish Organization:

Article I. Name.

This organization shall continue to be known as "The Friendship Parish of Congregational-Christian Churches."

Article II. Object.

The object of this organization shall be to provide means whereby the churches of the Parish do together the things that will more effectively promote the Kingdom.

Article III. Independence of the Local Churches.

Each church affiliated with the Parish shall maintain its own congregational independence and shall be responsible for its own property, organization, and finances.

Article IV. Membership and Representation.

The constituency of the Parish shall consist of all members of the affiliated churches and all persons living within the areas included in the Parish and not associated with an unaffiliated church. At Parish meetings each affiliated church shall be entitled to 10 voting delegates for the first 50 members and one additional delegate for each additional 10 members, but no church shall be limited to less than 10 delegates nor entitled to more than 20.

Article V. Parish Officers.

The officers of the Parish shall consist of a Chairman, a Vice-Chairman, a Secretary, a Treasurer, and a Pastor. The Pastor, elected by the churches, whenever a vacancy occurs, shall have the general oversight of the Parish, especially the spiritual ministry. He shall be in charge of the pulpits and shall be ex-officio a member of all committees. He shall make a written report to each Parish meeting.

Article VI. The Parish Council.

There shall be a Parish Council, composed of three representatives of each affiliated Church, the Pastors, Officers of Parish, and the Pastor-at-Large of Georgia, who shall serve as Parish Trustees in such matters as may be committed to it by its own officers, with the exception of the Secretary who shall be the Parish Secretary.

The Council shall be the Parish Trustees of the Parsonage or any other property of the Parish, or any property assigned to it. But it shall not have the right to buy, sell, mortgage, or lease any property without vote of the Parish.

In case of the selection of a Pastor, two members of the Council from each church, designated by the Chairman of the Council, shall together constitute a committee to recommend to the churches and Parish.

The Secretary shall report the actions of the Council to all meetings of the Parish. Approved actions shall be referred to the churches for ratification and promotion.

Article VII. Committees.

There shall be the following Parish Committees which shall work with the Pastor and Churches in promoting the various departments of the Church-life:

Christian Education, consisting of the Sunday School superintendents or a named representative; Missions and Evangelism; Women's Work; Finance and Stewardship; and such other committees as may be authorized.

A Chairman of each committee shall be nominated by the Nominating Committee, the members of the committees being appointed by the Parish Chairman. The Chairman of each committee shall report at each Parish meeting.

Article VIII. Finances.

Each Church shall raise its own funds and shall pay its own obligations, but the Finance and Stewardship Committees shall plan a Parish Budget, presenting it to the churches and Parish for ratification. Each church shall have the right to reject the suggested budget but in case of rejection shall state what financial responsibility it will assume.

Article IX. Election and Appointments.

The election and appointment of Parish officers and committees, unless otherwise specified, shall be held at the annual meeting. They shall serve for one year or until their successors are named, unless otherwise specified.

Each church shall elect three representatives for membership on the Parish Council as follows: the first year-one for one year, one for two years, one for three years, and annually thereafter one for a term of three years.

The Nominating Committee, consisting of one representative appointed by each church, shall nominate all officers and committee chairmen to be elected, sending to each church a list of nominations one month preceding the annual election. Their nomination shall not preclude nominations from the floor, and all elections shall be by ballot.

Article X. Meetings.

The annual meeting of the Parish shall be held on the Fifth Sunday preceding the State Conference session. Quarterly meetings shall be held on Fifth Sundays. Special meetings may be called by the Pastor, the Council, or by any two Churches, provided written notice is given three weeks prior to date of meeting.

The Council shall hold quarterly meetings as it may determine. Special meetings of the Council may be called by the Pastor, Chairman, or any three members of as many as two churches.

Article XI. Quorum.

Twenty voting delegates from as many as two churches shall constitute a quorum for a Parish meeting. A Majority of Council members shall constitute a quorum for its meetings.

Article XII. Amendments.

This constitution may be amended at any meeting of the Parish by a two-thirds vote of delegates present and voting, providing due notice, in writing, of the proposed amendments shall have been given to each church not less than two weeks prior to the meeting, or shall be read at a previous meeting and filed with the Secretary.

UNIVERSAL CHRISTIAN COUNCIL.

The delegates to the Universal Christian Council on Life and Work in its convention assembled at Oxford, England, this coming July, is facing the same difficulty as is the Council on Faith and Order, whose sessions are to held in Edinburg this coming August. Neither group seems destined to have any German representatives. That is apparent, because the German delegates, especially Pastors Niemoller of Berlin, and Dibelius, of Heidelberg, have had their passports to the British Isles withdrawn without explanation. This is of course detrimental to the Conferences, because they cannot achieve any measure of church "unity" without those men being present to represent their respective communions. It is far more important, however, in that it reveals to the delegates assembled in Oxford and Edinburgh the stark reality of facism. No longer is it the iron hand in the velvet glove. The glove has been discarded and the intention of the totalitarian state to completely "coordinate" the church is hidden no more. Caesar or God is the issue. Concrete questions face the conferences as they discuss the formerly academic consideration of the church and state. Now that facism of the German variety offers a new, quite attractive religion to its spiritually thirsty people in the name of "blood, race, and toil," the remainder of Christendom will match with interest the struggles of the German Confession Synod to fight off the encroachments of irreligion. Oxford and Edinburgh will be chagrined on the one hand that their ranks are depleted by the German government's arbitrary action, but will on the other hand be thankful for the crumbs that fall from the table in this prize example of dictatorship entering the so-called "spiritual realm."

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

THE HALF-TRUTH OF THE COMING OF THE KINGDOM AS ONLY SUDDEN.

Last week we gave the meditation of June 17th from E. Stanley Jones' book of Daily Devotions. Anyone reading these daily meditations will be astounded at the marvellous insight of the author into the Scriptures and the familiarity with the Bible teaching from Genesis to Revelations. No one mind could grasp the Bible and its teachings as has E. Stanley Jones, unless that mind is illuminated and led by the Holy Spirit. We commend this book of daily meditation, titled "Victorious Living," to many readers and especially any preacher who wishes to come daily in contact with a man of God and with the Book of God. The meditation for June 22nd is based on Matthew 13: 31-33; Mark 4: 26-28; Luke 17: 20-21, and is as follows:

"Modern fundamentalism in many cases has rejected the principle of gradualism and has said that in the Second Coming of Christ the Kingdom will in fact be set up. This coming will be sudden and catastrophic.

"In this they have been supported by passages in the New Testament which teach His coming as a thief in the night, by the nobleman who went into a far country to receive a Kingdom and to return to set it up, and so on. That the New Testament does teach this sudden and catastrophic phase of the coming of the Kingdom there is no doubt whatever.

"But it is a fact that the holding of this phase alone has produced a mentality that has withdrawn interest from social change by gradual processes, has made those who hold it discount those changes, and has made them look for a worsening of things in order to a final, sudden triumph at the coming of Christ. This has been a moral and social drain.

"Christian thought has moved by the dialectic from the catastrophic to the gradual and back again—thesis producing antithesis. It is now time for us to come to the synthesis. And the synthesis is this: there is in the pages of the New Testament both the teaching of gradualism and the teaching of the apocalyptic. Both are there and there are integral parts of the account. They cannot be explained away. And in the interests of the Kingdom itself they must not be explained away, for we need both phases of the Kingdom. Each is a half-truth that needs the other to complete it. We need to understand that the task is ours and must be assumed as such, and we must also see that it is God's and that He will complete it, perhaps even when we least expect it."

Prayer—O Christ, we thank Thee that Thou hast taught us that the task is ours and the consumation is Thine, and the task is Thine and the consumation ours. We shall work it out together, and together we shall triumph. Amen."

CAROLINA SUNSHINE.

I had the pleasure of going with our Elmore down to Carolina last week. We would have had a lovely trip and visit, only it was saddened by the death of one of the loyal members of Carolina Church. Our pastor went to preach the funeral of this mother who had so lived that all who knew her could look beyond the blue and know she was waiting there. Pastor Elmore preached a sermon in which he brought out clearly the fact that—"Death is the gate to life," and how God had simply wiped away all tears of disappointment. Of course no sermon can keep one from missing mother when she goes, but this was a message through which God spake peace to the soul—a message to lead the living toward life everlasting. Only through death we live. The flowers were lovely and the music sweet. I met lots of people and while they were saddened by their loss they seemed to be sure that this mother who had passed on was in a brighter Home. I was glad to find that feeling among those who knew her.

I also found a Christian atmosphere in the homes around this little church. Everyone seemed kind and sincere.

We had our lunch down by the clear, peaceful waters of a lake. Preachers have to eat as they go, and our preacher has to go quite a lot, But I don't go so much so it is a treat to me to watch the last blue rugged peak of this chain of mountains fade out behind me and fly out into the ever changing outside world. I feel like I have been let out of a cage to really live at last with the rest of the world. It had been over twelve years since I had been that far down in Carolina. In 1925 I was a scared, lonely lost mountaineer in Burlington High school. But today I think of old Burlington High as "My Old Carolina Home". I passed Elon and saw the gates open, a question I had thought was settled long ago came up once more I almost asked "Are those gates open to me?" Some one said once that when one door closed to us another opened, but most of us look so long and wistfully at the closed door that we failed to see the open one. I still can't quite tell if I am looking back to a closed door or if I am facing the open one. Friends, of course, want me to tell me to take care of myself and just be happy, but I am still too young to make a good job of taking that advice. In this age we know that women were not made to sit on a shelf, and in my case there is no shelf to put me on. So I find my mind going back to school and a future. Just dreams, perhaps, but they are sweet dreams at least. And the roads of Carolina with honey suckle on every bank, is enough to make any one dream. I saw flower gardens on every hand, I can close my eyes now and see sunshine and flowers.

VICTORIA OF THE HILLS.

GOOD-BYE AMERICA, HELLO AFRICA.

Good-bye, America, we're going to leave you now.

It's not that we want to leave, for you have given us a right royal time in the twelve months we have been here.

"I love thy rocks and rills, Thy woods and templed hills."

Yes, and I love your high and rugged mountains, your dreary deserts covered with cactus and infested with rattlesnakes; your boundless prairies covered with the waving corn; your great river, "The Father of Waters," rolling sullenly between high levees, ever a menace to the surrounding low countries, and your paved roads and your speeding motor cars, yes, and even your good-natured and helpful traffic cops and your traffic lights. They have all been a delight to my heart.

You are the land of big things, big business and big cities, big schools, big strikes, big depressions, big relief, big public debt and, in the near future, a great big recovery.

And what has impressed me as the biggest thing of all is the great big brotherly heart of the people of America. It has been a joy and a delight to travel the length and breadth of the land where I have always met with kindness and courtesy. I have come to love my countrymen as never before.

So now I am leaving, not because I want to, but because I have work to do. And I am sure that the "God-speed" of all my friends in America goes with me.

So good-bye America, may God be with you.

Hello, Africa, land of opportunity: with your large desert, the size of the United States; with your great rivers and valleys and jungles and mountains; with your wealth, beyond the dreams of avarice, buried for ages deep down in the bowels of the earth; with your still greater wealth on the surface, awaiting cultivation! Your face is black and your hair is kinky, but the sun shines as warm on you as on me. And the food tastes as good and hunger is as great.

You have many wives and few clothes and your ideas of morality are not the same as ours. But when you learn of the laws of God and have been taught to think and to reason, your ideals compare favorably with the ideals of the best of us.

Ninety-five per cent of your one hundred and fifty million people live and think and act as their forebears lived and thought and acted five hundred years ago in savage and heathenish selfishness. Each man seeks his own physical pleasure, and is interested in his wives and children as belonging to himself. He can be cruel and coldly callous to the sufferings of others. When under the influence of superstitious fear, when the witch doctor has cast over him his spell, he may become a raving maniac and kill his neighbor, his friend, or his brother, or other members of his own family without mercy. Even the raid of the slave trader left him unmoved so long as his own family or tribe was not attacked. And he would at times engage in the slave trade himself, so long as his victims were his enemies.

You are like a great big sleeping giant—have been for countless ages—ignorant of the rest of the world, and indifferent when wars are raging in Europe and Asia.

But now you are beginning to move. The long sleep will soon come to an end.

What possibilities are before you? What opportunities there are for you to develop! You have a great, big, warm heart when it is touched by the grace of God. Your emotional nature will put to shame the cool, calculating emotions of the white man. In art, music, poetry, and in the deep stirrings of the human heart, you have a great message to give humanity.

What does the future hold for you? I don't know, but I am sure it is something grand and glorious.

And I want to help in every way that I can. I cannot do much. I can still help somewhat among those who are sick and suffering. Perhaps—I hope—I can show something of the love of Christ. I can do my small bit. Others will do theirs. And you will go forward and take your place among the nations of the earth.

So! Hello, Africa! I'm coming back to you.

HAPPY AT NINETY.

The "Portsmouth (N. H.) Herald" recently gave considerable space to the life of one of our Christian Church ministers, Rev. Edwin K. Amazeen. In May he attended the honorable age of ninety. But he is not shut-in. Fewer ministers in the city conduct more funerals than this retired minister. Except in extremely stormy or cold weather he is "around town" for a considerable part of the day. If he is not in his pew at the Court Street Christian Church Sunday morning, we ask, "Where is Mr. Amazeen preaching today?" Last Sunday it was Stafford.

His eyes prevent his reading much, but the radio is a source of enjoyment and as WHEB, the local station, has at least two religious programs every day and only devotional programs on Sunday, there is considerable to interest him. He was born in New Castle, New Hampshire, a small town adjoining Portsmouth, on May 8, 1847. He attended Portsmouth High School, then graduated at our own Church School, Starkey Seminary, New York State. Then he attended our Church Biblical School at Stan-fordville, New York. Rev. Myron Tyler is one of his old friends, whom he first met there. I think though Mr. Tyler was pastor later at Portsmouth. He has preached in Colebrook, North Hampton, Stafford, Kittery Point, Stratham, and Portsmouth, all in New Hampshire, and in Lynn and New Bedford in Massachusetts and in New Jersey one year. His wife (nee Rhoda Shaw) died thirteen years ago. They had lived together 45 years. Rev. Amazeen seems to enjoy the memory of the pastorate at Stratham best, largely because it took such sacrifice to go there, as he had two opportunities at the time—one a strong church paying $1,000 salary, which was much better than the average church then, and Stratham was in a weak condition and offering only $300 salary with no parsonage. It was due to Mrs. Amazeen that he went to the more needy field, but they never regretted the choice. One of the outstanding sinners of the town was reclaimed with other less noticeable people, a parsonage was built, and a weak church made strong.

He also enjoys telling you how at Freedom the people utterly refused to have a series of "protracted meetings" or evangelistic services. So he said would they have a course of lectures? They thought that was just the thing for a so dignified and literary community as themselves. He got Rev. Lizzie Haley, a very logical, but very evangelistic speaker—also a Christian Biblical Institute graduate—and the "lectures" brought convictions and conversions just as effectively as if they had been labelled "revival meetings."

The men's class of Court Street Christian Church arranged the complementary birthday supper this year. Mrs. Pearl Foss read an original poem. I am sure Mr. Amazeen would be glad to hear from any other Christian Church ministers who are nearing his age.

He is so well known he needs no other address than Portsmouth, New Hampshire, though he resides at the Wentworth Home on Pleasant Street.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church"

MISS EMILY CARLETON, Editor, 541 Osceola Ave., Winter Park, Fla.

THE ELON SUMMER CONFERENCE.

The group at Elon this year is much larger than the one last year, and there is quality as well as quantity here. The total registration is one hundred and sixty-two, with the representation by conferences as follows:

Eastern Virginia—55.
North Carolina and Virginia—53.
Eastern North Carolina—20.
Valley of Virginia—15.
Western North Carolina—3.
Visitors—16.

The group at Elon feels very fortunate in being able to have some of the leaders of our denomination present to assist in the teaching of classes and leading in other activities. Dr. E. L. Shaver, in teaching a class on Worship, has given his group much needed information and also practical experience in the form of planning and conducting the Vesper services. Dr. Clinton, who has been in charge of the Chapel services, has given us inspiring and uplifting messages, which have improved the whole tone of the school. Dr. Tripp, of the Town and Country Department, and Mr. Walter, newly elected Regional Secretary for New England, have added to the School by their presence. The Rev. Raymond Dudley, missionary to India, has added to our knowledge of other races and to our interest in World Friendship.

It is impossible to tell in detail about the School, but the Chairman, F. C. Lester, and the Dean, W. E. Wisseman, are to be congratulated on the selection of the faculty and upon the efficient manner in which the School has been run.

ANNUAL MEETING EASTERN VA. YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Building a program for Christian Youth" will be the theme of the program to be presented at the Annual Meeting of the Eastern Virginia Youth Fellowship, to be held at the Bethlehem Christian Church on Tuesday, July 13th. This will be an all day meeting, beginning at 10 o'clock in the morning and closing around 4 o'clock in the afternoon. The young people will bring their lunch. Iced tea will be furnished.

Included on the program will be an address, "A Code for Christian Youth." The Youth Fellowship Program for the coming year will be presented at this meeting, and the new officers elected and installed.

During the afternoon session a three-act Peace play, "The Vanguard," will be presented by Miss Evelyn Savage. Miss Savage is a college graduate in dramatics, and we are indeed fortunate in having her consent to be with us in our meeting.

All young people belonging to a Congregational or Christian Church, Sunday School, Christian Endeavor, or Missionary Society within the bounds of the Eastern Virginia Conference are invited and urged to attend this meeting.

President,

Eastern Virginia Youth Fellowship.

ON ST. SIMON'S ISLAND.

June 8-15 the South Georgia Christian Life Conference was held on St. Simon's Island, one of the six Golden Isles off the Georgia Coast. It was directed by Supt. W. T. Scott and Miss Pattie Lee Coghill. Among other members of the faculty were: Rev. R. A. Dudley of the A. B. C. F. M. in India, Rev. W. C. Parker, Rev. Frederic Held, Mrs. L. E. Burnam, Rev. J. R. Clinton, and Rev. H. B. Mowbray. Three Summer Service Students, Dorothea Percy, B. F. Edleman, and J. C. Brooks worked diligently.

The South Georgia Young People who attended came mostly from the farms. Since cash was scarce they brought their own food and they and the faculty cooked and served it. The Conference aim was to prepare the delegates to lead better in their churches the work and worship during the coming year. Courses of inspiration and of practical methods engrossed the forenoons and evenings. The afternoons were devoted to surf bathing, games, folk dancing, and athletics. A tour of the island was made with explanations of the many historic places. Some contend these have greater antiquity and significance than any other place in the nation.

Until about ten years ago St. Simon's history has been obscure. But now it is ascertained that American Church history began here. It was long before Jamestown, Plymouth Rock, or San Diego. The Spanish Missions to convert the Indians on the Coast of Georgia were more numerous, had more substantial buildings, and existed far longer than did the better publicized California Missions.

In 1556 Father Martinez, sent out by missionary-minded Christians in Spain, came to Guale—the Indian NATIONALISM OR INTERNATIONALISM.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR
JULY 11, 1937.

SCRIPTURE: Acts 10: 34-43.

Daily Scripture Readings—

Monday—Old Testament Internationalism—Deut. 10:12-20.

Tuesday—Jesus' World Vision—John 4:19-26.

Wednesday—Christ, the World's Peacemaker—Eph. 2:11-22.

Thursday—In Christ Antagonism Dies—Gal. 3:27-29.

Friday—A League no Scrap of Paper—Josh. 9:3-9, 16-19.

Saturday—Good Will to the Stranger—Mark 7:24-30.

There is a nationalism of extreme type called jingoism which rests upon a deadly doctrine: "My country right or wrong." We would condemn such as un-American and un-Christian. It is a false patriotism operated by small minds. Often its method is that of misrepresentation, bringing about international troubles and wars. Someone said: "It is a clear denial of the traditional rights of the American people—life, liberty and pursuit of happiness."

Consider such questions as these: How may we end jingoistic nationalism; How may we check its publicity through the press and on the platform? How may we put in its place international neighborliness which is essentially Christian? Discover better ways of cooperating with missionary boards of the church. Discuss ways of showing friendliness to foreigners in the community. How may we create a world wide friendship? What does your church do to promote international goodwill?

The stirring words: "In Christ There is no East or West," would meet strong opposition in the mind of a nationalist.

The society should place a mission study class in the year's program.

Suggested Hymns—

"We've a Story to Tell to the Nations."

"O Zion Haste."

"In Christ There is no East or West."

GOD HEARS A PEOPLE'S CRY.

LESSON I—JULY 4, 1937.

GOLDEN TEXT: Before they call, I will answer, and while they are yet speaking I will hear.—Isaiah 65:24.

LESSON: Exodus 1:1-22; 2:23-25.

A small band had originally come down into Egypt, seventy in number. But the Hebrews were prolific, conditions were favorable, and the original band had multiplied rapidly. Joseph and his brethren and all that generation had died, and a new generation had come upon the scene. That new generation was numerous and vigorous, and the land "was filled with them and they waxed exceeding mighty."

In the meantime a new king, or a new dynasty had come to the throne of Egypt, who knew not of Joseph. In one sense that was no reflection on this king, for he could not know everything. On the other hand he was typical of many persons who so easily forget their benefactors. As a matter of fact had it not been for Joseph's foresight and astuteness, there might have been any kingdom of Egypt over which this new king could rule, for the nation might have perished during the famine. Egypt owes a great deal to Joseph, and it was just too bad that the new generation of rulers did not recognize his service and the debt they owed him. But that is typical of many people. Many a man who has risen to eminence by the help of some friend has forgotten his friend after he had risen to eminence. It is not good, whither, for one generation to forget, or to fail to learn the debt they owe previous generations.

Fear, suspicion, and race prejudice are deadly things. This new king in Egypt allowed the imaginations of his heart to run riot and he saw in the Hebrews a distinct menace. He imagined them as mightier and more in number than the Egyptians, and he imagined that if ever Egypt became involved in a war, these Hebrews would take sides with the enemy. He, therefore, announced a determined policy of exploitation and persecution. He assigned heavy tasks to them, afflicted them, and made their lives bitter with hard bondage, and instructed the widwives, who attended to the Hebrew women in childbirth to kill all the male babies as soon as they were born. It is the first recorded instance of the persecution of the Jews which has gone on in one part of the world or another in every century. This people has suffered much at the hands of bigots and fanatics, and the end is not yet, as witnessed by Hitler's policy in Germany.

"But the more they afflicted them, the more they multiplied and grew." Persecution has not exterminated the Jew, indeed it has developed a deeper racial consciousness and a stronger sturdiness of character. Out of this long history of affliction and persecution there has come a discipline of character and a capacity for suffering that has made a distinct contribution to the life of the world. It is thus also with persons. Afflictions and trouble are often blessings in disguise. Character is wrought out through them, and one is prepared for the larger experiences of life and labor.

Thwarted by the midwives who feared God and who refused to carry out Pharaoh's suggestions about killing the male babies, Pharaoh issued a royal edict commanding the Egyptians to kill all sons born to the Hebrew women. It was a stern, ruthless measure, so characteristic of the ends to which those in places, or privilege and power will go in order to insure their position. The method has become a bit more subtle in modern life, but the spirit and principle is the practically the same.

The lesson for today does not include the story of the birth and early life of Moses—that will be presented in next Sunday's lesson. But it is well enough to keep this fact in mind as we go on to consider the lesson for today. Here is a people chosen to work out a divine purpose, but now in desperate bondage, crying out to God for deliverance. And God does deliver them from bondage in Egypt. He does it through Moses, the leader of His chosen people, and the maker of a nation. But all the time we are studying this larger background, we must not overlook that wee baby tucked first away secretly in his mother's home, then committed to a small basket placed along the banks of the river with a mother's instinctive eye to results, and then finally being trained at that very mother's knee. The future of the nation was wrapped up in that babe in the bullrushes. The point is that when God leads a nation out of bondage, or desires to bring about some great purpose, he does it through a man. Perhaps now there is somewhere in a cradle one who shall lead our nation out of its confusion and turmoil. And now as then the most determinative factor in that life will be the mother's training.

The Hebrews might well have thought that their God had forgotten them. They sighed by reason of their bondage, and they cried aloud to him. And God Heard, and God Remembered His Covenant, and God Looked Upon them, and Had Respect Unto Them. Here was a God who cared, one who took upon himself the sins and sorrows of His people, one who cared enough to do something about it.

Let no man or group today think that they are forgotten by God. There are "no forgotten men" with God. But He does not choose to work by the principles of force—witness the failure of Moses when he slew the Egyptian. He is working out His purpose through the slow and orderly, but sure processes of the discipline of life and by the voluntary sacrificial service of those who take upon themselves the sins and sorrows of others. In the meantime, in fellowship with Him there is the secret source for all the woes and ills of those who are caught up in the maelstrom of modern life. God works in mysterious ways his wonders to perform. And a thousand years are in His sight but as a watch in the night when it is gone. But God summons every one of us who name His name to become workers together with Him in fashioning a new world wherein dwelleth righteousness in every personal and social relationship of life. It was just this that Jesus meant by the Kingdom of God.

MONDAY.

THY ORNAMENT OF GOLD.

"As an earring of gold, and an ornament of fine gold, so is a wise reproof upon an obedient ear."—Prov. 25:12.

Why do so many persons resent reproof? It is an instrument of delight and not a cause of chagrin. The answer must be found in the realm of conceit and personal pride. And a conceited soul is impervious to betterment.

Wise reproof is a beautifier of life; it puts loveliness in the place of ugliness. It considers weakness and lends strength. It is mercy upon impoverishment and offers enriching. It sympathizes with one's illness and offers health. Even the bitterness of unwise reproof may do good. Therefore reproof is to be treasured gratefully.

Prayer—Our Father and our God, where can we find reproof so wise as Thy Holy Word? We pray that we may be able to see that Thy Word is sweet and good in all things. Make us thankful and obedient. Amen.

TUESDAY.

WONDERFUL CREATIONS.

"God made two great lights: the greater light to rule the day, and the lesser light to rule the night: He made the stars also."—Gen. 1:16.

The earth, the sea, and the sky; the array of beauty and glory as seen in garden, field and forest; the procession of His creatures in birds of the air, animals of the forest, and man of the fields, all amaze our minds. On all things, great and small, the Creator has lavished His loving and marvelous inventiveness, and He cherishes the least and humblest of them as tenderly as the mightiest. We fall down and worship.

Prayer—Our Father, our Creator and Blessor of our souls, we would not abase ourselves, but pray for a consciousness that we are a part of Thy great scheme of things and have a part with Thee in "Thy kingdom come." Grant this unto us and enable us to walk with erect head, but with humility and reverence above all others of Thy creations. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

THE HIGHEST HONOR.

"Behold what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us that we should be called the children of God."—I Jno. 3:1.

Men have always contrived to invent honors for themselves. One of the greatest, if not the greatest, the world has ever conferred has recently been bestowed upon one of the royal sons of England. It was a wide-world affair, reaching into every city and town, and almost every home of the wide world. Men and women everywhere sat by their radios all night till eight o'clock next morning listening to the vivid descriptions of what was taking place in London.

Even the coronation of the King of England in all of its glory cannot be compared with the distinction that our Heavenly Father confers upon us in calling us His children. If we are His and He is ours, let come what will, we do not mind. We are sons and daughters of the King.

Prayer—Our Father, we share Thy throne already. We have entered Thy kingdom already, and we bless Thy name and crown Thee Lord of our hearts this day. Amen.

THURSDAY.

A CITIZEN OF HEAVEN.

"I have driven him out for his wickedness."—Ezk. 31:11.

We are put in this world for a brief time that we may become permanent citizens of heaven. It matters not where we go in the world, and how little we have, if only God goes with us, we are citizens of heaven. But in order to maintain that citizenship we must always get rid of the arch enemy of our citizenry—sin.

Sin breaks up homes, steals our peace of mind, separates us from the truth, parts us from our friendships, and, if possible, forces us from everything that makes life worth living for, and from everything that leads to eternal blessedness. Take Christ in thy soul and drive him out for his wickedness.

Prayer—Blessed Saviour, Thou hast gone ahead of us and shown us the way to live for happiness and prepared a place for our endless abode. Come Thou Lord Jesus and prepare us for that abode. In His name we ask it. Amen.

FRIDAY.

HOLDING UP HANDS.

"I have prayed for thee that thy faith fail not: and when thou art converted strengthen thy brethren."—Luke 22:32.

Aron and Hur held up the hands of Moses, one on one side and one on the other, thereby Moses was enabled to hold a steady hand till sundown. If Aron and Hur had not rendered this service, the history of the world might have been different today.

Thus Aron and Hur were true soldiers and valuable citizens. When Jesus told Peter to strengthen the brethren he was personifying this fundamental law of God, that every man must help the other and give encouragement to well doing. This is of vital importance to the kingdom of God. God is looking to you and me to be hand-holders. There is not one who cannot be a Peter, or an Aron, or a Hur.

Prayer—Our Father, we do not ask to be some one great, but only to be of service in upholding the hands of our fellow-man in good and to be thus up-holders of Thy hands. Amen.

SATURDAY.

THE JOYFUL SOUL.

"Blessed is the people that know the joyful sound."—Psalm 89:11-18.

The joyful sound is the voice of God, speaking in glad approval, speaking as a friend and not as a condemning judge.

The joyful sound may come to us as comfort in time of sorrow, as inspiration for victory in time of conflict, as guidance in time of doubt and confusion. It can come to us as the thunder, or as the still voice, in storm or in sunshine, in a smiling valley or on the raging deep.

We may know the joyful sound only as we listen intently for it, only as we become acquainted with it. The friends of God know it, in its least whisper, in all its varied tones.

Prayer—Speak to us Lord, and we will hear Thee. Whisper to us of Thy will, and help us to obey. For Jesus's sake. Amen.

—Amos R. Wells.

SUNDAY.

THOROUGHGOING EXAMPLES.

"In all things showing thyself an example of good works."—Titus 2:1-8.

Why do so many scorn the idea of being good examples to others? Is it because they fear Pharisaism? Do they dread becoming goody-goody? Do they shrink from a holier-than-thou attitude?

These are all to be deplored, but they have no necessary part in setting good examples. As soon would an accurate square be dubbed Pharisaic because it is a criterion of accuracy. It is a Christian's business to set a good example, and to set it in all things—in business life, in social life, in politics and manners, as well as in

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D., Pastor.

A CHAPEL TALK.

By DR. JAMES R. CLINTON.

Given at the Elon Summer School of Leadership Training.

TEXT: "He won the praise of all."

So Jesus cast a spell over everybody. It happened everywhere. How did it come about? What was the secret of His amazing, effortless influence over people? I say effortless, for I am more and more convinced that the charm of His personality was mightier than even His words and deeds. Gracious and powerful, though they were, it was the magnetism of His personality behind them that was mightier still.

There were some who asked for signs and wonders and mighty deeds in His day but they missed the glory. Others saw Him and inquired more about God. Those who saw Him never forgot Him. To go, then, under His spell was the entrance gate of life. He challenged young people and according to the degree of response or resistance life moved forward to ultimate issues.

For weal or woe, the coming of Jesus changes things for us all. Now if life would be strong and sweet and beautiful let us study the five-fold secret of Jesus. Watch Him building His strength and His beauty along lines that are open to us if we are seriously minded to be stalwart and attractive.

First of all, He loved nature. He loved the fields, the gardens, the streams, and the hills. He knew the mountains and the valleys. He lifted His face to the sun and the moon and the stars and the crimson clouds. He lived in the open. He taught in the open. He preached in the open. He died in the open. No wonder He could speak of the wind's blowing as they listed, but "Thou canst not tell whence it cometh or whither it goeth." No wonder the sunshine and the rain were evidences of God's undistinguishing regard for all, good and bad, the just and the unjust. The freshness of nature gave Him fresh visions of God. His love of the hills gave Him a wide outlook and a penetrating gaze. I would rather that my children had an appreciation of the Father's beautiful world than that their minds should be filled with classic lore. Their education would be deeper.

Secondly, He loved the Scriptures. He hadn't a large Bible as we are privileged to study, but He loved the Bible He had. He knew the Old Testament characters intimately. He nourished His soul in the eternal truths of Psalms and prophecies. He enriched His life in the spiritual experiences of others. As a boy of twelve, He had unusual insight; and marvelled at the dullness of mature people who had been taught the Scriptures. Let us discover what Jesus discovered—that the Bible is strong and true. It is a lamp unto our feet and a light for the path, guidance in the immediate circumstance, and illumination for the far-stretching way. Even when Jesus leaped from the grave with a new accession of duty He turned to the Holy Scriptures. What an illuminating exposition of the Bible He gave to those who depressed disciples on the Emmaus road.

Thirdly, He loved human fellowship. He was social and sociable. He shared the pilgrim road with all sorts of people. Shall we say He picked up His knowledge of human life as we all may pick up our discernments and appreciations by contacts with people? He got a first hand knowledge of men by intimacy and service. He was no recluse. He sought retirement in prayer, but he was friendly, keen on meeting people and knowing them. The charm of His humanness finds no greater authority than in the children. Have you ever asked the question: What became of the children that romped along the way with Jesus? They never forgot His play. Adults would have kept them back, but He welcomed them, lifted them in His strong, muscular arms, for he was a carpenter. I am sure that twenty years afterwards they were the young men and women who gave to us the heroic records of the early Church. They said when Paul and Peter preached and called them to life more abundant, "We remember; we can not forget that day as children on the road, and we can not keep out of this." What an encouragement and an assurance to Christian parents in training our young people in the Church and its ministry among the children, for the Christian Church is built among Christian children.

Fourthly, He appreciated human toil. He was a worker, a carpenter, and His prices, I am sure, were neither er exorbitant nor economic. He understood the labor world.

Very dear that cross of shame
Where the Saviour took our blame,
And the grave wherein the Saviour lay
Until the third day came.

But He trod the self-same road,
And He bore the self-same load
When the Carpenter of Nazareth
Made common things for God.

And lastly, He loved the fellowship of the Father. This is so marked and beautiful that we may well pause in an attempt to express our thoughts about it. What exquisite words were these: "I am not alone for the Father is with me, and I do those things that are well pleasing in His sight." Such words are too lovely for a comment. One prefers to see the red rose in all its beauty and inhale its eternal fragrance. Again, "I and my Father are one." Words too exquisite for comment. Such words are not for a theologian and dialectic. They are unveiling of the heart of Jesus. We are privileged to look into the holy of holies where love and hope and patience and courage meet. He lived in God, and His sky-blue soul had no mists of ignorance or prejudice to obscure the glory of the Father everlasting. He specified times for prayer, but His life was a prayer. "He walked with God."

These are the secrets of the strong, sweet, irresistible personality of Jesus. Study these secrets well if you would win others to the Kingdom. You must live with Christ. There is no other way.

WHAT A GRAND JURY THINKS OF LIQUOR.

One of the most amazing exposes of liquor and its effect on American life since repeal is on file from the county grand jury in Cleveland, Ohio, says the "National Voice."

"In every one of the distressing cases of death caused by a motor vehicle which came to our attention," says the Cuyahoga County Grand Jury, in a report presented by Professor Henry M. Busch of Cleveland College, "liquor was an important element, if not the chief, leading to the accident.

"The jury is strongly of the opinion that a lethargic public opinion with respect to criminal potentialities in the mixture of gasoline, alcohol, and emotional excitement, is largely responsible for the tragic situation today.

"The jury finds that liquor is an important factor in many cases of arson, burglary, sex offenses, stabbing, robbery, assault and other crimes."

The Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

It would be a great blessing to the Christian Orphanage if more of our people would remember it in their wills. People who have been richly blessed with this world's goods and have plenty and to spare would do a fine thing if they would write the following item in their wills—"I will and bequeath to the Christian Orphanage, Elon College, North Carolina the Sum of $——. for its uses.

The amount, whether large or small would be a great blessing to the Orphanage. Some people won't give small amounts because they are not able to give big amounts. When you write this important document please remember the Christian Orphanage with some amount. It will be a lasting monument to you and will be a blessing to the little children here.

Some years ago a friend of the orphanage set aside an endowment and included the orphanage as one of the beneficiaries and every two months we receive from the endowment a check for $150.00. And as long as the orphanage remains an institute of charity this amount will continue to come. This good man passed away some months ago, but the little children here will be continually blessed from year to year by his gift, and his memory will live and be cherished and kept alive on our campus for years to come.

Remember the Christian Orphanage when you write your will.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON,

MINISTERS AND STRIKES.

It is interesting to note that many ministers in Detroit and Flint, Michigan, took a "hands off" attitude in the recent strikes in those urban areas. There were, on the other hand, several clergymen in these centers who took an active part in settling the strikes. One group succeeded in warding off a proposed attack of the "vigilantes." Their terse telegram to the Police Commissioner in Flint has its effect and the vigilantes were not mobilized. Other expedients in mitigating the struggle's ferocity were found in giving the people of the churches information concerning the issues at stake, for middle class people in sheltered environments so seldom understand the struggle of capital and labor. This had a far wider influence than most people realize. When the textile workers of the South succeed in banding themselves together to make their protests heard, when share-croppers unite for effective collective bargaining, where will our Southern ministers be? On the side of the "comfortable and excellent?" Let's hope not! But a more devout hope than that is this: let them not delude themselves into thinking they must take an impartial viewpoint, a "middle of the road attitude," for when they do that they unconsciously throw their support to the group in power and are contributing more to class warfare than if they would openly espouse the cause of the working classes. Let the ministers of the South speak for the dispossessed and the disinherited! If they do not, it will once again be a case of the blind leading the blind as ministers mislead their congregations into thinking that labor struggles are wrong.

religion. A flaw in his example may spoil all his influence. He never can tell when the flaw will count for more than the excellence.

Prayer—We must have Thy grace in our hearts, dear Lord, that it may fill all our lives. Only with Thy help can we show ourselves in all things an example of good works.

In Memoriam

HOLLAND.

Mrs. Lucy Piland Holland died at her home near Holland, Virginia, June 7, 1937, aged sixty-five years. The funeral services were conducted at Holy Neck Church by the writer assisted by Dr. J. G. Truitt and Rev. Carl R. Key. The burial was in the church cemetery. Mrs. Holland was the daughter of the late George and Harriet Lawrence Piland, of Gatesville, North Carolina, and widow of Christopher Columbus Holland. She leaves five sons, Calvin and Gilliard, of Norfolk, Howard and Junius of Holland, and Gordan, of Washington; two daughters, Mrs. Elaine Smith, of Norfolk, and Mrs. Pattie Howell of Holland; six grand children, seven brothers and three sisters. She was a member of Holy Neck church—a good woman of heroic faith and courage and loving loyalty and service to her loved ones. Truly "her children shall rise up and call her blessed."

N. G. NEWMAN.

SUTTON.

We the members of Berea Christian Church, Alamance County, N. C. wish to pay tribute to the memory of our beloved member, and Deacon, Brother J. U. Sutton, who died April 22, 1937.

He was a faithful member, and Deacon from the foundation of the Church, a liberal giver to all worthy causes. His going has left a vacant pew that before was seldom vacant.

Therefore be it resolved:

1. That we pause to refresh our memory that death will come to us all, and that we submit to the will of our Heavenly Father, who doeth all things well.

2. We hold in loving remembrance his willingness, and quiet personality.

3. We extend our heartfelt sympathy to his family and commend them to God, whose grace is sufficient for them.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be placed on our Church records, a copy sent the family, and a copy be sent to "The Christian Sun" for publication.

name for the lands which General Oglethorpe, 167 years later named Georgia after George II. When Father Martinez landed, he was accompanied by soldiers. The Indians welcomed the white men. Father Martinez and the Indians managed to carry on by gestures a friendly conference. But when the Father's back was turned, the soldiers began to annoy and mistreat the Indians. When Father Martinez tried to intercede, the Indians misunderstood his supplicating arms and clubbed him to death—the first martyr on America's soil.

To St. Simon's Island in 1735 came John and Charles Wesley. They were Church of England Missionaries to look after the spiritual interests of General Oglethorpe's new Colony and to convert to Christianity the Indians. Since General Oglethorpe had his home on St. Simon's, John preached here under a live oak (still standing) and John organized Christ Church (still functioning). There is a tradition that Charles wrote on St. Simon's "Jesus, Lover of My Soul."

These two episodes, "The Martyrdom of Father Martinez" and "The Coming of John and Charles Wesley to St. Simon's" were reduced to a drama by Rev. H. B. Mowbray, and under his direction enacted at two of the Vespers.

FLORIDA YOUNG PEOPLE'S CONFERENCE.

Nearly one hundred and forty young people and their leaders attended the Florida Young People's Conference at Camp Immokalee, where they enjoyed a week of working and playing together. We really "camped" for there was no electricity and we did our washing in the lake.

Rev. V. B. Chicoine, of Winter Park, broke a "two-term tradition" by being chosen for the Dean for the third consecutive time. He is so well-liked by the students and faculty that he was again pressed into service. He was ably assisted by Pattie Lee Coghill, who was the Registrar, taught a course, and did much of the planning for the whole conference.

The young people were about equally divided into three age groups—freshmen and sophomores in high school, juniors and seniors in high school, and an older group of college-age young people. We were again fortunate in being able to secure Mrs. C. Fred Ward as an instructor in Bible and Dr. Clarke of Rollins College, who discussed "Christian Living in our World Today" with the older group. Mrs. Jockinsen's course on "The Christian Home" was very helpful to her group.

One group of courses was entitled "Finding My Place in the Church" and the students could choose one of the following: "Teaching," by Mrs. Ward; "Recreational Leadership," by Mr. Leshner; "Christian Youth in Missionary Action," by Mrs. Jockinsen, and "The Young People's Society," taught by Pattie Lee Coghill and Emily Carleton.

Two members of the faculty should be especially mentioned. We were fortunate in having a "real missionary" in our midst in the person of Rev. Raymond Dudley, missionary to India. His classes stimulated a great interest in missionary enterprises and world friendship. Rev. Stuart Austin, of the Southern Methodist Church taught courses on the Bible. The presence of a leader of another denomination in Florida was a new and delightful experience.

In the afternoon there were a variety of interest groups which offered invaluable help to the students: "Personality Development," by Mrs. Leshner; "Books," by Mr. Gantt; "Music and Worship," by Mrs. Scott, and the older group had a course on "Cooperatives," taught by Mr. Leshner. This group not only studied about the history and development of "Co-operatives," but ran a Co-op Store as a practical experiment—the results were so good that it is expected that Co-op Stores will appear all over the state.

The recreation was under the direction of Rev. Gerald Smith, new minister at the West Tampa Mission, who was counselor for boys and who soon had all of them under his spell. During the recreation period each day the Mohawks and the Seminoles waged "war" in the field of diamond ball, volley ball, track, and swimming.

The fellowship of this conference exhibited the finest spirit which could be found anywhere, and we are sure that all of those present will be eager to return next year.

The Bald Eagle

Soaring among the clouds, nesting on cliffs
Where foot of man nor mountain sheep's sure feet
Have never climbed, and in the spaces vast Where silence reigns supreme, you raise your young.
And when their wings are strong but yet untried,
You take one on your back and in the sky,
Far, far above the floor of rocky chasms
You shake him loose, and the poor bird flutters,
Tries its wings, but lower, lower falls
Toward the harsh rocks and death that yawn below—
With sweep of wings you swoop beneath your child
And carry it high into the dizzy heights,
Once and again this lesson to him give
Until he, too, becomes at home and sure,
And travels heights with courage unabashed.

SYMBOL.

Symbol of this Nation whose ideals reach
Beyond what men in history have won,
Blazing new trails and unexplored heights
Where the most daring feet have never trod
And the surest wings have never flown,
Your task, America, is new and clear
To train your children until they, too,
With daring heart and faith unfaltering
Will gather up our incompleting tasks
And live them and to their children teach
The truths that underlie all Liberty,
And steady them as they, too, learn to live
The principles that make our nation great
Until throughout the world in every land
Men shall cooperate, in justice fair,
And every person, free, within, without,
Shall make the people's reign a mighty fact.

Thus may our Flag, the Red, the White, the Blue,
Lead every nation to be kind and true.

A Prayer

*Sometimes I wish that I might do
Just one grand deed and die,
And by that one grand deed reach up
To meet God in the sky.*

*But such is not Thy way, O God,
Nor such is Thy decree,
But deed by deed, and tear by tear,
Our souls must climb to Thee.*

*As climbed the only Son of God
From manger unto Cross,
Who learned, through tears and bloody sweat,
To count this world but loss.*

*Who left the Virgin Mother's arms
To seek those arms of shame,
Outstretched upon a lonely hill
To which the darkness came.*

*As deed by deed, and tear by tear,
He climbed up to the height,
Each deed a splendid deed, each tear
A jewel shining bright.*

*So grant us, Lord, the patient heart,
To climb the upward way,
Until we stand upon the height,
And see the perfect day.*

APPLES CHAPEL.

On June 27, Mrs. J. L. Foster, of Elon College, was with us at Apple's Chapel. She came to bring us a Missionary paper prepared by Dr. J. O. Atkinson. Mrs. Foster was at her best and the people were so appreciative of Dr. Atkinson's interest in them that a motion was made by Mr. Michael that a rising vote of thanks be given and that the beautiful flowers that the church was decorated with be sent to Dr. Atkinson.

We were so glad to have Mrs. Foster with us. Her winning smile and the way she read this wonderful Missionary Message made us realize her whole heart was in this work too. Thanks, Dr. Atkinson and Mrs. Foster—you are always welcome at Apple's Chapel!

FRANKLINTON.

Last week some forty ministers and leaders met at Franklinton College (N. C.) for a leadership training school. It was the editor's privilege to look in one afternoon and evening. Apparently a fine type of work was going on. Trained leaders were giving excellent instruction to pastors and local leaders who in turn will serve local churches. Rev. E. C. Lawrence, of Raleigh, seemed to be quite at home with the prophets and led a stimulating discussion of their message. Miss F. L. Frazier, an extension, worker, presented young people's work in a very intelligent and helpful fashion. Rev. Charles F. Rush did an excellent job as chaplain. Rev. Raymond A. Dudley, our missionary to India, was there to tell about what is going on in India. Rev. Henry S. Barnwell, Superintendent of Negro work in the Southeast, talked concerning general organization and promotion. Rev. Carl R. Key presented Christian stewardship. Rev. Robert Lee House talked with the preachers on preaching and acted as dean. Several other leaders came in for helpful service. It was regretted that Mrs. Charles F. Rush was too sick to be present.

Plans were begun for advertizing the school next year so that a larger representation will be present. Franklinton has meant much to the Afro-Christian Convention and surely has a large task to perform for the now united Congregational and Christian Churches. The Southern Convention has always been interested in Franklinton and leaders from this convention, as well as the superintendent for the district of the Southeast, continue to manifest that interest. There was a fine spirit of cooperation, understanding and mutual hopefulness among the white and Negro leaders at Franklinton this summer. It is this type of cooperative helpfulness which will eventually solve the race problem in the South, for it overcomes the difficulties which prejudice and criticism merely antagonize.

"AN OLD PRAYER."

"God, make the door of this church wide enough to receive all who seek human love, fellowship, divine help, and a Heavenly Father's forgiveness; and make the door of this church narrow enough to shut out all envy, pride, unbrotherliness and prejudice. God, make the doorway of this church the gateway of Thy Eternal Kingdom."

—Prayer for People's Church,

SUGGESTED CHURCH GROUPS.

At the last meeting of the North Carolina and Virginia Congregational-Christian Conference, which met in Greensboro, North Carolina, last fall, the Home Mission Board was charged with the responsibility of formulating churches in that conference. (Page 140, 1936 Annual). The Board was called to meet at Elon College on May 10th for this purpose, but only a few of the members were present. The ministers were asked to meet with the board, but only a few of them could remain over for the meeting. There grew out of that meeting a suggestion that a called meeting of all the ministers of the conference be held in the First Congregational-Christian Church, Greensboro, North Carolina, May 31st. Twelve ministers responded to that call. The matter was laid before them and received their endorsement. The following groups were formed:

No. 1—Apples Chapel, Hines Chapel, and Monticello.

No. 2—Belew Creek, Salem Chapel, and Pleasant Ridge.

No. 3—Bethlehem, Berea, and Shallow Ford.

No. 4—Bethel, Concord, Long's Chapel, and Mt. Zion.

No. 5—Haw River, Providence Memorial, and Mebane.

No. 6—Carolina, Hopedale, (Student Supply).

No. 5—Rocky Ford, Elk Spur, and Ivy Hill.

No. 8—Union (Va.), Hebron, Liberty, and Lebanon.

No. 9—Pleasant Grove, Ingram, and Happy Home.

No. 10—Mt. Bethel, New Lebanon, Kellam Grove, and Howard's Chapel.

It is hoped that these churches will consider the suggested groups favorably and that when they come to the time to elect a pastor they will select a committee from each church and meet jointly to call a pastor as a group, and not as an individual church, seeing to it that the pastor locate in the midst of the field, or as near to the midst as possible, or at any rate, be near enough to give them more than just preaching service. Too long have our churches been content with just this, thus failing to administer to the needs of the community. Then, too, our ministers have had to stretch themselves out, spend time, energy and money in getting to their work, which has not been profitable to either church or minister, and certainly not to the growth and progress of the Kingdom of God.

There has been called to the writer's attention the fact that Haw River, one of our fine little towns in North Carolina, with a population of more than fifteen hundred, has four churches with not one resident pastor. This is a challenge, as well as an opportunity, for the Christian Church to place a minister there. What a field white unto harvest! This is perhaps an outstanding illustration, but I am sure it repeats itself in many other sections of the country. Furthermore, I am sure we could have been much stronger in many places had our churches seen the need and had the vision of placing their minister in the midst of the people, where he would have been able to have rallied the folks and lined them up with the Church, whereas, in many instances, they have been lost to both the Church and the Kingdom.

We are sincerely hoping that our churches will take a progressive perspective of this situation and give it their best prayerful consideration and act with good spiritual intelligence, keeping over in mind the growing needs of the Kingdom of our Lord and His Christ.

If there are questions which any one wishes to ask about the above proposal, the writer will be glad to receive them. He will turn the matter over to the Home Mission Board or the Executive Committee of the Conference for as favorable and as intelligent an answer as is possible to be given.

CHANGING A WORLD.

"He that winneth souls is wise," a wise man many years ago wrote into his collection of proverbs. Modern thought has modified the importance of many Old Testament sayings. If it is still true that "He that winneth souls is wise," one cannot help but wonder if many in our churches have been made wise through evangelism.

Writing on what impressed him during a recent trip to Russia, Basel Russel told of hearing some ten thousand and young people singing, "We are changing the world, we are changing the world." They showed by the enthusiasm of their singing that they believed they had what it took to change the world. What would happen if all American Christians would unite in singing, "We are changing the world, we are changing the world," and then sacrifice to make their song come true? Evangelism has to do with changing a world, changing a social order, changing the use of things. Evangelism makes bad men good and good men better. It teaches men to use the good things of this world for the good of the world. A change of this kind is much needed today. Without true evangelism this change cannot be brought to pass.

Roads, radios and refrigerators all contribute to the comfort and improving of the world, but the change most needed is in man himself. This change is made only when Christ gets hold of the heart and emotions, and claims man's will as His own. These men, impelled by their changed thought and conduct, launch out to change a world, not by a new program, but by the power of a new life.

When Jesus Christ changed the heart of young Kagawa he went to work on Japan. Through Kagawa, God is changing the life and thought of that great nation. When Jesus Christ changed the heart of Grenfell, God put him to work at the task of changing Labrador. When Jesus Christ changed the heart of Sweitzer, he sent him, one of the world's greatest interpreters of the music of Bach, a great theologian and a graduate in medicine, into the heart of Africa to use his talents and the Gospel message in changing the hearts of Africa.

When a man's religion ends with the man it ends with the man. When religion changes one's heart, the heart beats for the world. The need today is for men, as Dr. Maddrey relayed from China, for men whose hearts are hot. Evangelism is still God's way of changing a world by changing individual hearts. The world needs today an Evangelistic Church—Religious Herald.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgement and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

A YEAR AS EDITOR.

The first year as editor of "The Christian Sun" has swiftly passed and has left some few ideas, which may be worth passing on.

In the first place, the experience has shown me that it is possible to do the seemingly impossible. Without previous experience or time to do the work, it became necessary for me to edit the paper, and for at least one year we have not failed with a single issue to have something printed. When first looking at the job even this seemed to be impossible. Accomplishing this much has given the writer a new courage to undertake difficult tasks. It also gives him the daring to invite others to try that which seems to be impossible to accomplish. If the job is hard to do, the chances are it can be done.

Secondly, the paid up subscription list is practically twice what it was a year ago, although the mailing list is no larger. This means we have an active subscription list, but that we are far from having the number we should have. In this realm there is work yet to be done, for the paper has no value unless it is read by our people. No one individual can increase the subscription list to the extent that it should be done, but all the churches working together can do it. The increase so far is due largely to the fine work of the local church groups. This is as it should be. One task of a local church certainly centers around the religious education of its people, and that education ought to include the reading of the church publication.

Another evident thought is that it is not fair for a pastor of a church to edit a church paper. The paper needs more time, thought, and effort than a pastor can be expected to give. Every person needs some time for rest and recreation, but this editor has had little such time during the past twelve months except when too sick to carry on. The time must soon come when some other arrangements can be made for editorial services. The present arrangement cannot be considered as permanent, for it is fair neither to the church, the editor, nor the readers.

Another very interesting fact to the writer is that the additional work has made worry impossible. There has literally been no time for worry. The job has given new opportunities for service and acquaintance. It has taken all of the time and energy available and the result has been increased happiness. Hence at the end of the year your editor feels like saying "Thank you" to those who thrust upon him additional duties and thereby gave to him new happiness.

STUDENT SUMMER SERVICE.

For about ten years students have been sent by the Congregational Church into local churches to do summer service. These students have come from many colleges and have gone into most of the states. This summer about one hundred students will work in twenty-five states. Several of them will be in the Southeast. A larger number than usual will work in the Southern Convention, which means the Carolinas and Virginia. Schedules are not entirely complete and may have to be adjusted some more yet.

Albert Buchanon, from Milroy, Pennsylvania, is a senior in Oberlin College, and is to work with the churches at Winston-Salem, Albemarle, Asheville and Southern Pines.

Loring Chase, brother of Miss Priscilla Chase, comes from East Bridgewater, Massachusetts, graduated from Middlebury College (Vermont) in June and expects to go to Yale Divinity School next year. He assisted last week in the Franklinton Summer School, is at Christian Temple in Norfolk, and probably some other places.

Emmanuel Hedgebeth is a member of the Holland Christian Church at Holland, Virginia, is a student of Elon College, and will work at Henderson, Sanford and other churches in Eastern Carolina. He was with Rev. G. C. Crutchfield a week before the Elon Summer School.

Miss Arline Waite is a junior in Worcester Teachers College (Mass.). Her home is at Beverly, Massachusetts. She and Miss Mary Nell Eaves, a student at Elon, whose home is near Henderson, North Carolina, will work together. They are now in Greensboro and will serve High Point, Sophia and other places in the Western North Carolina Conference.

Miss Dorothy Grigsby is a graduate of Piedmont College, Demorest, Georgia, and is teaching at Milner, Georgia. Her home is in Chattanooga, Tennessee. She and Miss Evelyn Ayscue, a sophomore in Louisburg College, whose home is near Henderson, North Carolina, make a team who are working in the Valley of Virginia Conference. If the schedule planned is carried through, they will serve most of the churches in the Valley during the summer.

Arthur Wells, a senior in Brooklyn College, whose home is in Brooklyn, New York, spent last week with Rev. G. C. Crutchfield and has gone on to Georgia where he will join other workers in that section.

These students usually conduct a vacation church school and share with the pastor in doing whatever type of constructive work that may be needed in the community where they go. They are able to render a real service to the churches, and by so doing get experience which will aid them in future preparation for their chosen profession. Some of them may go into the ministry, but all of them will have a better idea concerning church work.

This work is being done through the cooperation of the Board of Christian Education and the Extension Boards. In addition to these Student Summer Service workers the Board is sending Miss Lilly Spain to Franklin, Virginia, to aid in a community vacation school. The first of August Miss Spain and Miss Edna Fulcher will go to our mountain mission churches to conduct vacation schools there. In this way the Boards are seeking to serve the churches of the Convention.

YOUTH AND COLLEGE.

Congregationalists have planted colleges across the continent. The Christian Church of the South established Elon College for the training of its leaders and later began what is now Southern Union College. The leaders of our churches through the years have believed that education is necessary for the promotion of Christianity and that this education needs to have back of it Christian philosophy. They did not expect the state to furnish this training, but established church schools to do it. It is still true that the state cannot give the religious instruction and very often does not give the Christian philosophy as a background.

This makes it very important for young people who are expecting to attend college to consider well the institution where they will study. It would seem to be wise for parents to guide their children in the selection of what is usually the first home after leaving the family. Other institutions may be excellent in scholarship and cheaper to attend, but the fact still remains that Christian education is attained in Christian colleges. The best place for Christian Church young people to be trained is in the college of their church. If this is not true then the colleges of the church should be changed so that it is true. This writer believes that in the case of young people in the Southern Convention it is true. Elon may not have everything that some other institutions have, but it does have something that many of them cannot give. It has a church background, a church connection, and offers training for service in our own church, which no other institution can be expected to give. Those young people within the Southern Convention who are planning to go to college next fall for the first time should surely give Elon serious consideration, before deciding to go elsewhere. And unless there is some distinct advantage which does not show on the surface for selecting another college, Elon should benefit by the presence of the young people of our churches who are going away to school. Only so can Elon do its best service and only so can our young people receive the advantages which the church offers them. Local churches have an interest in this matter and should do all within their power to influence students to attend our own college, so the local churches may be benefitted in turn by the students who attend church institutions. Sometime within the next two months young people will decide on the college of their choice and by so doing may largely determine their future life. Pastors and leaders bear this in mind and direct these young people in the choice of their college.

REVIVALS.

Christian Churches in the Southeast are accustomed to having revival meetings annually, most of which are held in the summer. It is a custom that is difficult to break, and there may be no reason for breaking the habit. There are criticisms of revival meetings which may be rightfully made, but every other institution and activity carried on by groups of people may be criticized also. Human endeavor is seldom ever perfect and human institutions which go through the centuries accumulate things that are not good.

It is not right to depend upon the revival for religious fervor. Those who are Christian should be Christian all the year, rather than simply through the revival meeting. There are some who get enthused during the meeting and are seldom seen at the church any other time. It is better for them to go then, than not at all, but it would be far better for them to be regular worshippers in the house of the Lord.

It is not right to depend upon the revival meeting for winning converts to the Christian religion. God is just as near in January as He is in June, and is equally as anxious to receive repentant sinners. Pastors and church people should plan their church programs with the expectation that all through the year converts will be made to the Christian religion. There may be special occasions on which emphasis will be laid upon this phase of the church work. Christmas and Easter lend themselves to this emphasis. The revival may help but it should not be the only time that people are expected to accept Christ.

Revival methods are sometimes faulty. Cheap songs, exciting stories and loud prayers may arouse considerable emotion, but it must be remembered that God was not in the fire, nor the earthquake, nor the storm, but in the still, small voice that spoke to the heart of the prophet. Becoming a Christian depends upon the will of an individual to accept Christ as his saviour and to follow in the footsteps of the Master. It is to be expected that this decision may be accompanied by aroused emotion, but it is the mind, the will that means the most in such a decision.

Having said all this, now let it be said that pastors and people may well set apart a definite period in each church year for special emphasis on soul winning. If they are to accomplish this task they must themselves first be aroused and be enthusiastic about the task. This means a revival within the experience of pastor and people. When the church becomes alive, alert, eager for the redemption of the world, those who are on the outside will take notice of them that they have been with Jesus and will doubtless want to become followers of the Master also. Workers may well study methods of approach to those who are not Christian, but methods will never take the place of loyalty, sincerity and eagerness. There needs to be enthusiasm, thought, prayer. It is to be devoutly hoped that in every church where there is a series of meetings there will be a real revival of Christian experience and an ingathering of those who are coming into the Kingdom.

Our churches need to work for new members. There is no reason why we should not win. There is every reason to encourage our churches to work for new members, and these members should come largely from that unchurched group who need to become Christians. When the summer has ended and the conferences gather, it is devoutly hoped that every church will have increased its membership by an ingathering of large numbers of those who now know not the way of the Lord.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Recently the ministers of Suffolk and Nansemond County were guests of I. O. Hill and Company on a boat trip down the Nansemond River to Hampton and return. On the return trip a sudden storm came upon us from the Northwest. The wind blew about 35 miles per hour and the rain descended in torrents. The captain decided to follow one of the large ferry boats into the harbor. The situation was very threatening for our party as it was impossible to see land, and there was a danger of collision with some other boat.

That experience is a picture of the church at the present time. The church is not lost, but it is in a storm. It is a dangerous storm. And it has been beating upon the old ship of Zion for a number of years. There are dangerous shoals and treacherous rocks, and the officers of the ship are not fully agreed as they try to chart the course for the future. That complicates the situation and disorganizes the people on board. The first great break of the storm came with the World War. Churches were importuned to convert their pulpits into public forums where ministers could freely plead for winning the war. Governments sought earnestly and anxiously to enlist the churches in the great conflict. And the churches yielded to this premeditated propaganda.

After the war was over, governments, one by one, turned away from the churches, and in many cases, disregarded and defied their leaders. Look at Russia and Germany. Then study the situation in the United States. Do state legislatures and both houses of Congress pay much attention to appeals and resolutions going up to them from representative church bodies? What is the attitude of the daily press towards the church? In many instances the church has lost its former place of importance. Why this change and what does it suggest for the future?

These are questions which cannot be answered, finally, and satisfactorily, by any person. But they must be faced. And the time has come when they must be considered seriously. It is evident that many church officials, both laymen and ministers, are trying to follow other boats into the harbor, and are not watching the chart and compass as carefully as in the former years. There are many groups of people, so-called leaders in their respective fields, who are seeking to use the churches for the purpose of creating public sentiment in favor of their pet scheme or favorite plan of public welfare. Naturally in the cross currents of conflicting personal opinions the church will find self in a dilemma under such conditions. No wonder the confusion is detrimental to real progress.

The church must find a way out for itself. And it must find a way out for the world. It is possible to still the howling wind and calm the troubled sea. When Jesus stilled the tempest He did not use dynamite, and He did not stir up another storm. He spoke and the sea was calm. He did not challenge the cause of our group. He challenged all classes. In that respect He excelled other men. Some public speakers think they must create a storm by their public appeals and enthusiastic denunciations. One wishes someone would say to such enthusiasts: "Be still and know that I am God." The way of the cross leads out of distress. That is the way for the church today. Forward to Christ and to the Cross. Spiritual life surpasses political agitation, and the distinctive task of the church is to foster spiritual regeneration. This requires much prayer and sincere consecration.

VITAL EDUCATION.

Elon College has incorporated in its curriculum progressive ideas that makes educational practical and productive, so far as the individual is concerned. During the past years the administration has been diligent and careful in locating and interesting the kind of teachers essential to a progressive program in higher education. At Elon College education is made practical and interesting in the more essential fields of study and research. Effective education consists in more than information. Individual application is necessary if the individual is to be benefitted to the fullest extent. Elon's curriculum is built on the theory that students learn by doing, as well as by knowing. The practical element must enter into effective training. In addition to usual advantages offered by a liberal arts school, Elon College has encouraged certain attractive and practical features.

THE ELON COLLEGE PRESS—In the late spring the college purchased a very good printing press for the use of interested students. In the press room they learn something of typesetting, proof-reading, the actual printing of books, magazines, newspapers and periodicals. The press is operated by the students themselves. At regular intervals publications go from the Elon Press as a part of courses in Journalism and advanced composition. The students, under the direction of Dr. Fletcher Collins, get out two significant publications, the college weekly newspaper, The Maroon and Gold, and the quarterly magazine, Elon Columnades.

MOTION PICTURES—For the benefit of the whole school and as a part of the practical laboratory work of the Department of Physics the College has purchased and installed an up-to-date motion picture outfit, including professional sound and projector equipment. This equipment is installed in the original moving picture booth in the Whitley Memorial Auditorium, and is operated by the students themselves. A full program of selective entertainment is given Friday evenings, Saturday afternoons, and Saturday evenings at a minimum cost and has proven to be a vital feature in the recreational and social life of the students, faculty, and townspeople.

DRAMATICS—In addition to weekly professional movies, Elon students are active in the production of plays, campus and public performances. Opportunities are given for fascinating work in scenery construction, lighting, costuming (in collaboration with the Home Economics Department), acting, coaching, and play writing.

BUSINESS AND COMMERCIAL DEPARTMENTS—Elon College has an up-to-date business department offering excellent advantages to all students who wish to prepare for secretarial work or administrative responsibilities in business. This department is thorough and does laboratory work not only at the college but in business establishments in the surrounding towns and cities. It is manned by three professionally trained and experienced teachers.

HOME ECONOMICS—In this department are extensive facilities for laboratory work in Dressmaking, Cooking, and Interior Decorating. Projects engaged in are alive, not bookish or impractical.

MUSIC—Elon offers superior advantages to music students. This department has its own building. The equipment for this department is unrivaled among small colleges. There is a Skinner, 4-manual organ installed in the auditorium and an Estes practice organ in a separate studio. In addition there are four music studios and a number of individual practice rooms, which are equipped with grand and upright pianos. Instruments are provided for band and orchestra students. The college choir, the band, and the glee clubs offer opportunities to all students.

Elon College is a liberal arts college, with an attractive curriculum and unusual advantages in extra-curricula activities, a good climate, good instruction, wholesome atmosphere, an inclusive curriculum, personal contact with professors, and a school that you will like.

DR. CLINTON VISITS BARNESVILLE PARISH.

June 13 to 18th was a period of rare opportunity for Meansville Congregational Church. Dr. James R. Clinton, preacher under the Home Boards, conducted a Preaching Mission which was helpful to both church and community. His approach is a timely advance over the old "High Pressure" revivals so familiar to so many of us in the South.

The attendance was evidence that the services were highly acceptable. During the six days, more than a thousand persons attended the Mission. For the last service Dr. Clinton gave a dramatic recital of Ian MacClaren's "Beside the Bonnie Briar Bush" to a crowded church.

On Sunday, June 20, Dr. Clinton was guest speaker at the Annual Home Coming at Fredonia Congregational Church, Barnesville, Georgia. The people were delighted with his timely messages, and they were happy to know he will be there for a preaching Mission in August. It was beautiful to see a hundred people join in one big circle among the trees and sing "Auld Lang Syne."

A VITAL QUESTION.

A junior in one of our larger colleges recently wrote to Allied Youth, asking the following question:

"I have heard so many pros and cons about whether or not moderate drinking is harmful that I have decided where there is so much doubt neither extreme is apt to be right. Isn't there a sane middle ground?"

J. Roscoe Drummond, Executive Editor of The Christian Science Monitor, was asked to answer the question. He does so, as follows:

"It would be idle to deny that there are large numbers of persons today who drink moderately and appear, to the casual observer, to be none the worse for it. However, alcohol is habit-forming. The use of alcohol, even in moderation, mars the capacities of all men and deters them physically and mentally from the best work of which they are capable. Moderate drinking begins this disabling process and insures no method of halting it. No one will deny that, even a few drinks may make the automobile driver a cruel menace on the highway.

"And finally, moderate drinking, even though one believes it a harmless practice, leads to excess, and therein lies its greatest harm."

ARE YOU WILLING—

To close your book of complaints and to open the book of praise?

To believe other men are quite as sincere as you and to treat them with respect?

To ignore what life owes you and to think about what you owe to life?

To stop looking for friendship and to start being friendly?

To be content with such things as you have and to stop whining for the things you have not?

To enjoy the simple blessings of life and to cease striving for the artificial pleasures of the day?

To forget what you have accomplished and to meditate on what others have done for you?

To cease looking for someone to help you and to devote yourself to helping others?

To consecrate your life to the service of an imperfect church and to remember that Christ chose twelve imperfect men to be His disciples?

To accept Jesus Christ as your Saviour and to let your life be an outlet for His joy, love and peace?

A SPIRITUAL FEAST.

The normal active soul grows hungry for spiritual food, even as the body hungers for bread. To have this hunger supplied is a real feast and a joy that words cannot express. This writer does not know the verdict of all who attended the School of Leadership Training at Elon College, June 21-26th, but that part of the school which he was permitted to attend was a feast of good things indeed. This was also the verdict of many others. Our special joy came from attending Dr. James R. Clinton's class for preachers, the subject of which was, "The Preacher's Treasure Hunt in The Psalms." This was a series of very searching and soul stirring studies in the Psalms. Dr. Clinton impresses all who hear him as one who has been a close student of the Bible during all his life, and as one who is spiritually minded in his studies, exposition and attitude. It is seldom, indeed, that one comes in contact with a man seemingly so filled with the Spirit of Christ and zealous at all times to reveal and reflect that Spirit. Surely the Home Mission Board of our Congregational and Christian Churches is making a wonderful contribution to the spiritual life of our entire fellowship in sending out this man, who like Enoch, of old, seems to walk with God and reveal the teachings of our blessed Lord as set forth in the Book of Books. Such a man and his teachings reflect the real spirit of our United Church in its quest for the best and in its desire to bring to this chaotic time, the one message that is sufficient to solve our problems, namely, the message of our crucified, but victorious, Saviour and Redeemer.

We write especially of Dr. Clinton because it was our privilege to hear him more often than time and strength permitted us to hear the others, but we heard nothing but words of commendation and gratitude for the feast of fat things for the soul that this Summer School of Leadership Training, under the direction of our Board of Religious Education of the Southern Convention, brought us at this time.

While writing of the feast of good things for the soul in our midst, comes the following line from our friend and brother, Mr. Charles S. Bates, of Exeter, New Hampshire, who at the time was enjoying a feast at Northfield, where the spirit of D.

L. Moody, the greatest evangelist of his day, still lingers. "It was the finest, most deeply spiritual Conference I ever attended. And Dr. Whale who came to deliver four addresses, was great. He came from England, and was the best I ever heard. It was a continual feast of great, deep, vital experiences; positive, definitely aimed at making Christ known. Personal Evangelism they all believed in, and I don't have to say I think so—I know—for they spoke with no uncertain tone."

J. O. ATKINSON,
Mission Sec'y.

To him therefore that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin.—James, the Apostle.

MISSIONS, AND HOW TO PUT IT ACROSS.

To me, we miss the greatest joy in religion when "Missions" is left out. In the political life, men are highly honored when the president of our country appoints them as Ambassadors to Mexico, South America, Europe, or any other country. Their's is an interest in the needs and developments of each country for a common benefit. The Ruler of the universe has appointed each of us as His ambassadors and has given definite instructions as to our work. His is a mutual interest in a lost world. No greater honor can be conferred, no more important task, no work is of more urgent need, and none gives more satisfactory returns.

"Go ye!" is not optional with a Christian, it is a very decided command. When we have accepted the gift of Salvation, we are selfish indeed to hold it within our own heart and not share it with others. In fact we were given the joy of a Saviour not to seal up in our own selfish heart, but to pass on to others and when we fail to do this we are keeping that which rightly belongs to others. We are being unfair to our Saviour, who sent Salvation to others through us. We are being unfair to those from whom it is being withheld. And we are being unfair to ourselves. We rob others of life everlasting, and we rob ourselves of the growth and happiness that come to those who share the love and faith in Him Who "So loved the World."

Missions consists mainly of love to God and love to man. It was love that brought the Son of God down from the throne of Glory to this selfish and wicked world that He might "seek and save those who were lost." While He was here "He went about doing good" and when He went back He commanded His disciples to follow His example. He said, "As the Father hath sent me even so I send you." "Go ye! and teach all the nations, and Lo! I am with you always."

The first Apostles gladly obeyed and were most zealous in spreading the knowledge of their blessed Saviour and His gracious plan of salvation. Mr. S. D. Gordon tells a very striking imaginary conversation between Gabriel and Jesus.

Gabriel, who is deeply concerned asked, "Master, you must have suffered much down there on earth?" In His quiet, humble way, Jesus said, "Yes, Gabriel." "Do they all know that you died on the cross to save them from their sins?" "Oh no Gabriel, only a few know about it yet,"

"But you died for the whole world, did you not?" "Yes, Gabriel, I died for all." "Well, then," said Gabriel, "what is your plan for letting them all know about it?" And Jesus said, "In fact, ours is not a perfect following of Jesus Christ unless we include Missions in our Christian program. "I told Peter and James and John and all the other disciples and told them to tell others, and others to tell others and still others to tell others, until every man, woman and child in the farthest corner of the world shall know of my love."

Gabriel, who knows us human beings pretty well down here, said, "But Master, what if Peter fails, James forgets and John gets too busy and the others just don't do it. What then?" The Master, in that loving, patient, sweet voice, said, "Gabriel, I haven't made any other plans. I am counting on them." He is counting on us and we must not fail. "Go ye" is our command, direct from our Captain. How shall we obey His orders?

Some of us may hear the call and break away from home ties, loved ones and friends and go as Abraham did into strange land. Give of ourselves, our time and talents. This is the choicest way. However, Jesus does not expect all to do this. We can't all be missionaries, preachers, teachers and leaders, but He does expect us to go in spirit and interest, even if we stay at home. Home Missions as well as Foreign Missions can be carried on even from our own fireside.

Prayer does more to put missions across than we can ever know. Prayer from a heart full of love for lost souls can through the majestic power of love draw the individual to the throne of grace and into the light of faith and into the knowledge of Him, Who said, "I am the light of the world." More things are wrought by prayer than this world ever dreamed of—is so true. Prayer strengthens the object and person prayed for, and feeds the soul of the one who communes with God with life giving strength. If we know Jesus in His fullness we can not conceal Him, but will be willing and anxious to proclaim His love even to the darkest jungles of Africa, unto the most remote heathen. There are other ways, that we may go, even through another by staying at home, give of ourselves in the form of money which represents our strength, energy, and mind, and as we give let's go with it in prayer, feeling that we ourselves, or this part of ourselves that was used in earning the money, is working in the foreign fields among the heathen. Each individual who would win others helps to carry on the mission program of our Lord. As we strive to be like Him, we strengthen the Home Base, and send out beacon lights that guide the lost to a safe harbor.

(By Mrs. R. E. Caviness before the Western North Carolina Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention at Pleasant Union Church, July 1, 1937.)

MISSIONS AND CHRISTIAN EDUCATION.

As there have been some suggestions about the Mission Board taking over a part of the expenses of the Board of Christian Education and also making a liberal annual appropriation to the support of a promotional or executive secretary for the entire Southern Convention I will state for the benefit of those who have not investigated that our Board desires to pay its indebtedness; deems it unwise to increase the expenses of the Board with present deficit, and does not feel justified at this time to direct mission funds to other Boards or causes, except the five hundred dollars ($500.00) appropriated annually to THE CHRISTIAN SUN, which was ordered by the Convention. The Board now hopes to pay all its indebtedness by September 1, 1938.

AN ANSWER TO W. H. FREEMAN.

Our church services seem more like a funeral service than a group of worshippers inspired by the presence and power of the Holy Spirit.

Again I have thought that we are having too much preaching and too little prayer and testimony in our churches.

There are people in our communities who do not know that they are wanted at church. A man told me that he lived some years ago in half mile of two churches the year before and there was not a minister in his home that year.

Again Roger Babson is charged with saying that his religious survey reveals that the Holiness Churches are the only group in the United States that have not shown a decided decline in attendance during recent years.

The early Church placed special emphasis on the Holy Ghost. I am wondering if a lot of our church members today would not answer as the little group at Ephesus, "We have not so much as heard whether there be any Holy Ghost." Then I am wondering if John's testimony about Jesus is out date for he declared, "He shall baptize you with Holy Ghost, and with fire." Then there would be joy and gladness, prayer and praise, a warm fellowship, a willingness to testify in the name of our Master—and others would be contrained to glorify our Father, which is in Heaven.

HERBERT HOOVER'S TEACHER IS DEAD.

At 82, Chuan Yeuh-tung, venerable "grand old man of Congregationalism in North China" is dead. He taught Chinese to the ex-President and Mrs. Hoover. He was a "stalwart among pioneer Christians." A poor boy, he was one of Yu Ying's first pupils—later he went to Jefferson Academy. His family life was a model to all about him. Four children live to honor his name; Dr. John Chuan, trained at Johns Hopkins and Harvard Medical School, is a Surgeon-General under the Government; James Chuan holds an important place in a big Chinese bank; Peter Chuan (Hartford Seminary) is in student Christian work and the daughter, an Oberlin College woman, is the wife of a prominent Peiping business man.

"IT HAS BROUGHT US . . .

fellowship and brotherhood. It has treated us with respect and it has given us self-respect. The light of Jesus Christ has shone into our hearts and minds and is illuminating us." So wrote Rev. V. S. Azariah, the Bishop of Dornakal, India, to his fellow countrymen in the Depressed Classes, about Christianity. Among the many benefits, spiritual, intellectual and material, he cites the lifting in social life, raised womanhood, removal of customs and habits that degrade, Christian marriage, happy homes, discouragement of drink, cleanliness and the improvement of "intellectual powers." "Christ enables us to give up our old bad habits and grow in newness of life."

To recognize with delight all high and generous and beautiful actions; to find a joy even in seeing the good qualities of your bitterest opponents, and to admire those qualities even in those in whom you have least sympathy, this is the only spirit which can heal the love of slander and of calumny—*F. ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

MISS EMILY CARLETON, Editor, 541 Osceola Ave., Winter Park, Fla.

VALLEY OF VIRGINIA YOUTH FELLOWSHIP.

The three districts of the Valley Youth Fellowship, of which Miss Thelma Morris is president, have recently held their Spring Rallies. The Theme in each meeting was "Creating a More Christian Atmosphere Within Our Churches and Communities."

The meeting for District A was held at Mt. Olivet (G). Mrs. Joe A. French, of Ocean View, led the opening worship service. Miss Eugenia Snow gave the welcome and the response was made by Miss Mable Higgs of Newport. Miss Minnie Dofflemeyer read a message from Miss Irene Cotten, on Missions. Rev. Joe A. French addressed the group with a message built around the theme, which was followed by a round-table discussion on this subject led by Rev. W. J. Andes. Fifty-two were present at this meeting. The following were elected as officers for this district:

President, Miss Hazel Davis, Bethel; Secretary-Treasurer, Miss Mable Higgs, Newport.

The session was closed with a benediction by Rev. Roy D. Coulter.

The rally for District B was held at Concord. The opening worship service was presented by the Bethel Choir. Miss Hazel Kenney gave the welcome and the response was given by Miss Elizabeth Bell. Seventy-five people were present. The address on the theme of the rally—"Creating A More Christian Atmosphere in Our Churches and Communities"—was given by Rev. Roy D. Coulter and followed by a round-table discussion led by Rev. W. J. Andes. This district was organized and the following officers were elected:

President, Raymond Smith, Concord; Secretary-Treasurer, Elizabeth Bell, Linville.

The meeting was closed with a selection by the Bethel Choir.

The meeting for District C was held at Winchester. Mrs. Joe A. French led the devotional period. Mrs. C. L. Whitlock gave the welcome and Miss Thelma Morris gave the response. Rev. Joe A. French gave an inspiring address to the group. Mrs. Layton Stocksdales of Winchester favored the group with a solo. The following officers were elected for this district:

President, Miss Elia Pugh, Winchester; Secretary-Treasurer, Miss

Opal Oates, Timber Ridge.

The benediction was given by Rev. R. A. Whitten.

WESTERN N. C. CONVENTION.

The Western North Carolina Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention met as scheduled at Pleasant Union Christian Church, near Asheboro, North Carolina, on Thursday of last week. Rev. S. M. Penn, vice-president, presided, as the program which had been planned by the executive committee was executed.

Ninety-six delegates were enrolled from twenty-two churches. Good reports were made of the work being done in the local Sunday schools and Christian Endeavor societies. There appeared to be not many Christian Endeavor societies within the conference. It was a busy season for the local community as wheat thrashing was going on, but the church furnished a fine dinner for the delegates and visitors who attended the convention. They also entertained for supper and overnight the guests who desired to stay.

There was evident a real interest in Christian Education. Pastors, superintendents and leaders were seeking for information concerning Sunday school, Christian Endeavor and Missionary training. Young people were in evidence and shared in the program. Miss Maple Lawrence was JESUS, THE AVAILABLE FRIEND.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR

JULY 18, 1937.

SCRIPTURE: John 15: 12-16.

Daily Readings—

Monday—Moses' Intimacy With God—Ex. 33:9-11.

Tuesday—Abraham, the Friend of God—Jas. 2:14-23.

Wednesday—Friend of the Lost—Matt. 11:6-19, 28-30.

Thursday—Our Friend At the Door—Rev. 3:19-22.

Friday—Close Friends of Jesus—Luke 10:38-42.

Saturday—God's Intimates—Heb. 11:4-8.

Jesus had many friends when He was upon earth. Not only was His friendship established among His disciples, but many other friends shared the hardships of His life, witnessed the events connected with His death, and spread the glad tidings of His resurrection. They gave us an imperishable gospel record.

Young people should know that Jesus is an available friend, altogether dependable and trustworthy. He is more ready than any human friend. He understands, comforts, and supports those who call upon Him.

For Discussion—

1. The Christian religion involves the practice of friendship with God.

2. The Christian religion involves the practice of friendship with our fellowmen. Christian Endeavorers may discuss ways and means for bringing about such friendship.

3. How is Christian love to be distinguished from the romantic love, parental love, and filial love?

4. How would you express to a person, who did not profess Christianity, the effect which Jesus has on your life?

5. If Jesus were to drop out of a Christian's life, what qualities of character and personality would drop out also?

6. Plan ways to observe the Quiet Hour so that friendship of Jesus may become more effective in your life.

Suggested Hymns—

"What a Friend We Have in Jesus."

"Saviour, Like a Shepherd Lead Us."

"O Jesus, Thou Art Standing."

GOD PROVIDES A LEADER.

LESSON II—JULY 11, 1937.

GOLDEN TEXT: Come now therefore, and I will send thee.—Exodus 3: 10.

LESSON: Exodus 2: 1-22; 3: 1-12.

The story of the baby Moses in the little ark among the bulrushes is one of the most familiar stories in the Bible. And one of the most appealing. Here is set forth in a homely way the ingenuity of motherly love, and the strange ways of God. It was not a mere chance that Moses' mother became his nurse-maid during the formative years of his life. God had a great purpose for this child, and Moses could not be prepared for that great purpose in the luxurious atmosphere of the Egyptian court. God saw to it that Moses' mother had him during the those early, impressionable years which were so important in character building. There was built into the warp and woof of this boy's life great ideals of character that made him a chosen vessel in God's hands for delivering his people. Let every mother in this land take care during the formative years of their children's lives, seeing to it that right habits, right attitudes, right ideals become an integral part of child life. Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it.

God had to show Moses that the way of deliverance for his people was not by force and bloodshed. With the hot-headed enthusiasm of youth, Moses slew the Egyptian who strove with one of his fellow-Hebrews. Force and violence are not the way out of our industrial situation, or our international affairs. God would have his people choose the longer but surer way of arbitration, understanding, cooperation, and mutual sacrifice.

A long period at his mother's knee, the finest training that Egyptian Universities and the royal court could give him—these were the informal and formal factors in Moses' education in early life. But there was still another course in his education which was more determinative and vital—there was the long period that Moses came to know God, that he came to understand God's purpose, that he heard God's call. Perhaps there would be stronger and more able men in places of leadership today, if there was a place for the discipline of silence in our educational processes. It was undoubtedly in the long periods of silence while watching the flocks, it was out of quiet meditation that God spoke to Moses, and prepared him for the arduous duties of leading his people out of the bondage and welding them into a nation. The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom. The simple life is a builder of both body and mind, and of character.

And then came the call to his great life work. In a way all that had gone before was simply preparation. And because this young man had refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter, choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season, esteeming the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures of Egypt—short because he put the rule of God first in his heart, God made his way known unto him.

What matters it how the call came! What if it seems strange to us that a bush was on fire and yet did not burn. What if it is out of the ordinary for God to speak out of a bush! Back of all of these strange phenomena there is the spiritual fact that this man Moses knew that he was in the presence of God, that God had spoken to him, that God had set him to a chosen task and commissioned him and prepared him for it, that he accepted this God-given mission. God does not always call men in the same way, or under the same circumstances. The important thing is that he calls them, and that when he calls, men recognize his voice and heed his call. There is nothing that so steadies and stimulates men as to know that they have been called and commissioned by God.

"The God of thy father, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob." There was a definite link here with the past. This God had already demonstrated his fidelity in keeping covenant with his people, he had already shown that he was slowly working out his purpose for his people, he had already met the deepest needs of those who put their trust in him. Let us moderns remind ourselves occasionally of the God, not only of the Biblical characters, but the God of Luther and Wesley and Kagawa, to say nothing of the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ.

"I have seen, I have heard, I know, and I am come down"—for heaven is not deaf to the cry of oppressed peoples. God sometimes seems to move slowly in the affairs of peoples and nations, especially in the case of his elect. But he looks down with compassion upon them, and in his divine plan there is deliverance. Sometimes this deliverance waits upon the hearty cooperation of man.

"I will send thee up to Pharaoh that thou mayest bring forth my people, the children of Israel out of Egypt." Here was an humble, unknown shepherd who was to stand before kings, and to deliver a nation. God often chooses the seemingly weak to confound the mighty. One man with God is more than a whole army.

This man Moses, having come through the period of callow youth when he felt adequate for anything, now felt a sense of insufficiency, as he realized the work to which he had been called. Like every truly great man, he felt his sense of dependence on God. In true meekness there is strength.

"Certainly I will be with thee." That is sufficient. If God be for us, who can be against us? It is told that a certain general once said to Abraham Lincoln, "Mr. Lincoln I hope that God is on our side." Lincoln replied, in effect, "I am far more concerned as to whether we are on God's side." When a man knows that he has been called of God and sent for God, he can be sure that God will be with him. If he knows that, nothing else matters much.

"This shall be a token unto thee." God gives tokens and evidence that he is with those who fear him and do his will. It is not a matter of material blessings or even freedom from suffering, but the secret of the Lord is with them that fear him, and with those who remember his commandments to do them.

THE TALE OF A SHIRT.

Mfino was blind—in his eyes but not his soul. He studied at Mt. Silinda School, South Rhodesia, Africa, and then went to do Christian work in another section. One day he bought a shirt. He asked the storekeeper if he could speak with the boys working there. He was kicked out with uncomplimentary words following him. Back home he found he had been given two shirts instead of one. It was 24 miles back to the store but Mfino went the next day. When the store-keeper realized the error he called all his boys and said: "I want this man to have a meeting with you. If the Mission does this for a boy, I want you all to learn." Since then a meeting a week is held in the store.

HYPOCRITES.

Yet no one has a word to say

MONDAY.

SHALL I, OR SHALL I NOT?

"My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge, because thou hast rejected knowledge, I will also reject thee."—Hosea 4:6.

The Lord is having a controversy with His people and He is very plain in making them understand what shall happen to them for their sins. The truth taught is, that knowledge of the right sort is life; and the right sort is "the heart sort." This is the sort that touches His love and lifts us up into the realm of joy.

How can we get this knowledge? Answer to this question has been stated in a very unique manner by an unknown author. He said: "This knowledge is obtained in the school of prayer. In the College of the Bible. In the University of faithful service. There are no tuition fees and no entrance examinations. The doors are open to all comers and school is always in session. We may matriculate any time."

Prayer—Dear Father, we would know Thee, whom to know is life eternal. Day by day teach us knowledge and may we be good students. This we ask in the name of Jesus. Amen.

TUESDAY.

THE POWERS THAT BE.

"The powers that be are ordained of God."—Romans 13:1.

Paul is talking about Christian respect for the law. But there is another law which we need to respect as well as we need to respect the law of the land. There are powers within us as well as the powers bestowed upon a magistrate. Every one of us has some power of authority, however small, but a power and an authority which has been bestowed upon us by God. Every one of us also has personal contacts with a certain circle of people who respect us, who obey us, and who look up to us. It is our duty to look well to these powers to see to it, that what we do and say are ordained of God. Let us magnify these powers. Let us increase them by diligent use, let us make them ever more worthy of Him who gave them to us.

Prayer—O Thou Most High God, we glory in the gifts which Thou hast given us. Make us more receptive to Thy law and make our influence more nearly like His. In His name we ask it. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

A GLOWING WITNESS.

"Having many things to write unto you, I wouldn't write them with paper and ink; but I hope to come unto you, and to speak face to face."

—II John 4-12.

Letters between friends are fine and affectionately cherished. But friendships are not based on letters. It takes the tender eye, the speaking face and warm lips to make friendships.

John would tell us that the most glowing witnesses of the Lord are those who speak their hearts to one another. The face to face method of salvation breaks down barriers, lets the light through like a window to the morning sun, and sends the message of living salvation to dying men.

Prayer—O our Saviour, we pray for Thy love in our hearts—that love of Thine that never wrote, but spoke and won the souls of men. May we be a little like Thee. Amen.

THURSDAY.

THE GREAT PULL OF THINGS.

"The cares of the world choke the word, and he becometh unfruitful."
—Matt. 13:22.

The thirteenth chapter of Matthew is Christ's little sermon on the power of "things." And he says that there can be no harvest in a man's life who has given over his life altogether to "things."

To be over-busy with affairs crowds out thought. Things banish devotion. Things ruin the fineness of our lives. Things pull down and thwart achievement. Things crumble into dust from which they came, however attractive and glittering they may be, leaving a pitiful withered soul to go through eternity. Beware of things.

Prayer—O God, give unto us the fascination of the lofty things, the exhilaration of noble things, the stamina of growing and enduring things, things that will go with us through an endless life. Amen.

FRIDAY.

HEARTS ARE TRUMPS.

"Let us lift up our hearts with our hands unto God in the heavens."—Lam. 3:51.

It is easy for us to cheat ourselves in His service. We can be busy with our hands and think that we lift our hearts unto Him. We can be filled with emotions of awe and think that we worship. We can feel remorse and take that for repentance. And in it all we may be mistaken.

Our hearts must be first in our work, for the work to be acceptable unto God, or we are none of His. "We cannot serve God and mammon." God's call unto a soul is first for the heart. "Son give me thy heart." "Where thy heart is, thy treasure will be also."

Prayer—O God, we would like to offer our whole being unto Thee, body, soul and spirit. And whatever accomplishments, may all the praise be thine. Amen.

SATURDAY.

LANDMARKS.

"Cursed be he that removeth his neighbor's landmark."—Deuteronomy 27:11-19.

Landmarks are precious things. They stand for right and justice. They say to would-aggressors: "Thus far and no farther." They confirm us in our possessions and give us abiding-places on this earth. Where landmarks are neglected or removed, law is despised, order is scorned, and anarchy is near.

Even more precious are the landmarks of the soul. It is good to have a settled faith. It is good to recognize the bounds of truth. It is well to have respect for our neighbor's conscience, even as we desire him to have respect for ours.

Let us cherish these landmarks of the soul. They are all to be found in the Bible. As we study its golden words, as we fix them deep in character and embody them in action, we are establishing more firmly in our lives the eternal landmarks.

Prayer—Thou art from everlasting, to everlasting, O our God. May we have an everlasting faith in Thee. Amen.

—Amos R. Wells.

SUNDAY.

OUR NUMBERED STEPS.

"Doth He not see my ways, and number my steps?"—Job 31:1-8.

To some, the thought of God's omniscient presence and omniscience is oppressive. They put it out of their minds. They do not want all their ways observed, all their steps numbered. They want to be left alone, to do what they will, unnoted by their Father in heaven.

To others the knowledge that God is ever with them, their constant companion overseeing all their work and play, is an unmixed comfort and joy. To them, as to Christ on the cross, the thought that they might be forsaken by God is the most terrible of all thoughts.

Thus is it in the life of a Christian. They rejoice that Christ follows all

CONCERNING SUMMER.

By REV. JOHN G. TRUITT.

"The harvest is past, the summer is ended, and we are not saved."—Jer. 8:20.

These are the sad words of a great people. These are a bitter song sung by those who had in times past sung so many triumphant songs. These are the words of God's chosen nation, uttered out of cringing, cowardly fear. What is wrong? It should not be so? What would be your suggestion of what is wrong? We know who these people are. Their great history, now hundreds, even thousands of years old, is well known to the very well-read school boy. We know they were great? Why this pitiable cry?

These people are the proud possessors of most of the best in the fundamental laws of civilization. Their Moses had already handed down from Sinai the Ten Commandments. Already their writers and seers had written their sacred Scriptures. Already they had sung David's songs, and David had given them a great nation. Solomon had builded them their matchless temple, and Isaiah had prophesied the coming of their Messiah, and the redeemer of the world. They had been told the very large place they were to play in world-redemption, and promises had been made them by the one and only true God giving them eternal prestige. Now like a whipped cur, they cry "Summer is past, and we are not saved." Why are they not saved? Saved from what?

Their enemy nations have already carried many of their fellow-citizens away into captivity, and other foes stand ready any moment to strike death and destruction to what remains of their former glory. They had hoped that the summer would bring them deliverance, and safety. How they looked forward to the open season, when God might give strength to their failing troops, to fight their battles as in former years. But now "The harvest is past, summer is ended, and we are not saved" had become their cry. Why, what is wrong? Something is wrong. Do we feel in our hearts that God has deliberately turned them down? Will not God go more than halfway to make their history still more glorious? How have they defeated God's great hope in them? What has come to pass to make their strong, young prophet, Jeremiah become a prophet of 'Lamentations,' of broken heart, and of great sorrow?

Let me call to your memory a few words: "The word came to Jeremiah from the Lord, saying, stand in the gate of the Lord's house, and proclaim there this word, and say, hear the word of the Lord, all ye of Judah . . . Amend your ways and your doings, and I will cause you to dwell in this place . . . oppress not the stranger, the fatherless, and the widow, and shed not innocent blood in this place, neither walk after other gods to your hurt; then will I cause you to dwell in this place, in the land that I gave to your fathers, for ever and for ever. Behold, ye trust in lying words that cannot profit. Will you steal, murder, and commit adultery, and swear falsely, and burn incense unto Baal, and walk after other gods whom ye not know; and come and stand before me in this house, which is called by my name, and say, we are delivered to do all these abominations? Is this house, which is called by my name, become a den of robbers in your eyes? Behold, even I have seen it, saith the Lord . . . Obey my voice, and I will be your God, and ye shall be my people: and walk ye in all the ways that I have commanded you, that it may be well unto you. But they harkened not, nor inclined their ear, but walked in the counsels and in the imaginations of their evil heart, and went backward, and not forward."—(Jer. 7.)

What was wrong? Answer: Sin! Give it a new name if you can find one that suits it better, but by whatever name you call it, it brings ruin and wreckage in its wake. It changes triumphant leaders of all the ages to come into cringing cowards, it changes glory into infamy, and it brings the sad cry: "Of all sad words of tongue or pen, the saddest are these; It might have been sin."

But that was many centuries ago, in distant lands, and of another race, and under far different circumstances. Why bring it here today? This is a congregation of people who love the Lord. This is a large congregation of Christian, God-fearing, home-building, peace-loving, honor-guarding, charity-showing, vision-seeking people. Yes, I mean it, with all my heart I mean it, and I am fully aware of exceptions, and fully aware that we all stand before such sacred words with bowed heads, but nevertheless, our hearts within us are aflame with the very real desire to be good and true! This is a fact, and a glorious fact. We do love God, and we do seek to honor him. So why bring up this text and this subject this morning?

Neither is the harvest even come as yet, and the summer is only just begun! Why bring it up? What reason would you suggest? Summer is just begun. You are a great people, with a great tradition, yours is a great and good and true culture, most of the best of civilization, and the finest of the Christian faith is yours. Thus far you are much like the ancient Judah of Jeremiah's day. With all my heart I bring you this little message today that at the close of the summer every single one of you may look across the beautiful weeks and months with real joy in your souls rather than any cry of pitiable defeat. Now, before the summer has come to full glory, and long before what looks now like a bounteous harvest has come from God's hands, let me bid you put God first throughout all the days thereof.

Let the days bring re-creation, not 'wreckreation,' let the days bring healthier, finer bodies, cleaner, holier aspirations; truer, better friendships; and bigger, broader souls. It will be so if we put God first! Why forget God during the summer? Why leave off our daily prayers? Why stay away from public worship? Why forget our church duties, and dues, and obligations? Not so, God's people. We may by circumstances worship in other places, meet other folks, enjoy other scenes; but let us be true to all that is best within us, and when we sing our harvest song in the autumn it will be with triumph instead of tears.

their steps. They exult in their Father's comradeship. They would not be separated from Him for an instant, well knowing that such a separation would be the most direful of all disasters.

I will have no secrets from Thee. My every act and thought shall be glorified with Thy gracious presence. Amen.

The Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

Twenty years ago the Christian Orphanage farm produced seventy-five bushels of wheat and less than one hundred bushels of oats. The land was poor and unproductive. At that time the orphanage had only one plow and one two-horse team, and a few other farm implements.

Since that time the land has been continuously built up and put in a better state of cultivation and made more productive, and now we get a better yield of anything we plant.

This year just twenty years later our orphanage farm produced 857 bushels of wheat and 805 bushels of oats. Quite a difference from twenty years ago.

During the year modern farm machinery has been added, including two tractors, two fine teams of mules, and new land added.

Twenty years ago the orphanage had two milk cows, today it has 40 head of milk cows and young stock. Twenty years ago the cows stood in an open shed, today they have a modern dairy barn where they can be sheltered from the cold in winter and be warm and comfortable. Twenty years ago they were not tested as to health. They are now tested and we hold a government certificate showing that they have met the necessary requirements which gives us an "A" grade of milk.

Our progress has been slow, but steady. Today the orphanage has one of the best farms in the community, and we are trying to improve it year by year.

In our financial report this week we have reached and passed the $8,000.00 mark. We only wish we could have reached ten thousand dollars at this time. Prices of everything we buy are high but our income has not increased to meet it.

In Memoriam

WHITE.

Mr. R. M. White was born December 6, 1857, and died March 26, 1937. In middle age Mr. White was converted and joined the church, coming to south Georgia from the north. In later years he moved his membership to the Ambrose Christian Church, and remained an active, loyal member until death. Funeral services were conducted by his pastor, Rev. W. C. Carpenter, Tifton, Georgia. Besides his wife, he leaves one son, Murl, to mourn his going.

"A dear one from us is gone,
A voice we love is still;
A place is vacant in our hearts
That never can be filled."

BOGGAN.

On April 28, 1937, in the midst of sorrowing friends and loved ones, God called to our friend and co-laborer, Mrs. C. D. Boggan, Sr., and bade her come up higher and receive her eternal reward. Ambrose Christian Church has lost a faithful and devoted member, she being a charter member of the church. She joined the church in early childhood and was faithful until death called her. She was born March 29, 1859, making her 78 years, one month old when she died. To her union were born four children. One baby died in infancy. Three children are left to mourn her death: W. F. Boggan, C. D. Boggan, Jr., Mrs. Reba Philips, and nine grandchildren. The funeral was conducted by her pastor, Rev. W. C. Carpenter, Tifton, Georgia.

elected to plan for a meeting of young people some time during August so that the Youth Fellowship may begin more active work.

Coltrane; Assistant Secretary-Treasurer, Miss Ruth Helen Devers; Departmental Superintendents: Elementary, Miss Lola Farlow; Young People, Henry J. Overman; Adult, Rev. John Pugh; Teacher Training, Rowland Farrell; Christian Endeavor, Rev. M. A. Pollard; Missions, Mrs. R. E. Caveness; Orphanage, Geo. T. Gunter; College, Miss Maple Lawrence.

WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA.

The Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention for the Western North Carolina Conference was well attended by young people from the various churches. At the close of the morning session the young people from the Pleasant Ridge Church led the worship service, which gave the right note to the end of that session. In the evening the young people of the Albemarle Church, under the leadership of their pastor, Rev. Arnold Slater, had charge of the evening session. The theme of this service was "Talents" and was very forcefully brought out in the talk by Mr. Slater. All of the young people in the group from Albemarle had some part in the meeting, and the result was all that could be desired. The young people of Pleasant Ridge and of Albemarle are to be thanked for their part in making this Convention a success and to be congratulated upon their fine spirit of cooperation and helpfulness.

It was decided to have a rally for the young people of the Western North Carolina Conference at some time in the near future, for the purpose of reorganizing the Youth Fellowship organization there and creating an interest in this work on the part of the young people of all the local churches. Miss Maple Lawrence of Seagrove, was elected as chairman of this rally and is already making plans, in cooperation with Rev. S. M. Penn and George Gunter, for this meeting sometime in August. It is hoped that all of the churches will take it upon themselves to see that at least one of their young people is present at this rally.

LEARNING FROM A LAD OF TWELVE.

The late Dwight Morrow was, with his wife, sight-seeing in the town of Rugby, England, and wandering through the streets realized that they had lost their way. Seeing a little lad of about twelve years, they stopped him and asked: "Could you tell us the way to the station?"

Well," answered the lad, "you turn to the right there by the grocer's shop and then take the second to the left. That will bring you to a place where four streets meet. And then, sir, you had better inquire again." The incident made a lasting impression upon Mr. Morrow, becoming, we are told a part of his philosophy of life. His biographer, Harold Nicolson says: "This answer came to symbolize for Dwight Morrow his own method of approaching complicated problems. It implied a realistic skepticism regarding the capacity of human intelligence. The human mind is a small vessel and cannot, at any moment, hold too much. It was, in the second place, an object lesson in the inevitability of gradualness. And in the third place, it was a parable of how, when the ultimate end is uncertain, one should endeavor to advance, if only a little way, in the correct, rather than the incorrect direction."

Morrow was considered not only a great statesman, but a financial wizard, and it is related that he often referred to this story in negotiations where it seemed impossible to get participants to agree, with the result that many "big deals" were saved from collapse.

A Temple there has been upon the earth, a spiritual Temple, made up of living stones; a Temple, as I may say, composed of souls; a Temple with God for its light, and Christ for the high priest; with wings of angels for its arches, with saints and teachers for its pillars, and with worshippers for its pavement. Wherever there is faith and love, this Temple is.

Advance or Retreat

By C. B. RIDDLE.

The futility of our struggles to help right the world's wrongs began to dawn upon us when the World War ended. With great enthusiasm, emotion, limitless resources of money and men, we had returned from a never-to-be forgotten voyage to help save the world for democracy. The loss of money and men did not begin to strike home to us so forcibly until the smoke of battle had cleared away. Not until we began to count our momentary resources did we realize how we had all but drained them. As for our grief, that was deepened when we were constantly reminded that poppies were growing on the graves of our fair sons, the sacrifice of whom excelled all material outpourings. The years of 1918 and 1919 were sobering periods for us as a nation.

Then came a voice from the Middle West bidding for national leadership. "Let us return to normalcy." These words had a psychological effect upon our people at a most opportune time. Warren G. Harding, the author of these words, was swept into power because we really believed we could return to normalcy. We tried in vain to return to normal conditions, and while we did so in our thinking, the upheaval of a world's troubles had pushed us ahead more than a decade. We undertook to go back when there was no normal period with which we could make connection. Old ideas and antiquated methods had passed away.

For several years we had traveled in the opposite direction of impending dangers which we should have faced courageously. One day we found ourselves at the wrong end of the road. This was in the closing days of 1929 when we suddenly discovered we had been traveling without a compass. The fact that we had been going in the wrong direction so long made our discovery more painful and our adjustments more difficult. We learned one great lesson—that one cannot go contrary to the ever adjusting and leveling of currents of social and economic affairs without paying the price of folly.

Today we are again hesitating—hesitating on the question of going forward or accepting the fallacy that we can return to the simple ways of individual living. We cannot afford to ignore the lesson learned by our attempted retreats between 1919 and 1929. We should write those years down as a Lesson Decade.

Measures advocated by leaders in other eras appeared at that time to be radical to many conscientious people. Remedies for present-day problems may also appear to be radical. If we attempt to let conditions heal themselves without guiding hands we will pay and pay heavily, for our fallacy of thinking that the affairs of men will automatically adjust themselves. The "radicals" in one age become the benefactors of, and for another.

This generation's issues are inescapable; and this is true of every generation. No political party can change the human side of life; and since this human side cannot be changed, no man has a patent to the answer to humanity's needs.

Only the partisan-minded, blinded by the failure of self-adjustment in an ever changing society can fail to see that governments cannot remain static and correctly serve ever changing human needs. To oppose change is to oppose progress. And herein lies one of the weakest spots of national planning: Conditions force us to change when we should plan ahead to care for sure and certain changes and adjustments.

The fight today on the national political battle-front is which order to accept—forward now, or retreat, to be compelled to advance later.

Lost! An Altar

The chief losses to the most of us are not in stocks and bonds, or land and lots. The biggest loss of all is in the realm of the moral and the spiritual, and no greater loss has come than the loss of the altar of prayer.

Many American homes are well equipped with telephone, electric refrigeration, automatic oil heat, brilliant lights, hardwood floors, radios, weather-stripped windows, streamlined and air conditioned comforts, and in many of these homes there is no altar—no altar of prayer. Many children growing up in these homes have never heard or seen their parents pray. Real vital, pious praying has passed out of style with the most of the people.

One of the mightiest factors in the life of Abraham was the altar. You could trace the travels of this man in his wanderings over the desert sands by the altars he built when he pitched his camp. And when the crisis came, he had access to that altar, and did some mighty praying for his wayward nephew, Lot, who forgot God down in the big city as he equipped his modern home and left out the altar of prayer.

The first act of Noah after he found the dry land was to build an altar unto the Lord and establish communication with Heaven. The altar was a necessary and an important thing then, and it is now.

Many homes and hearts have broken communication with Heaven. They no longer tune in with their Redeemer. The static of the world drowns the voice of God calling to their souls. The altar is broken down.

We need to find the lost altar of prayer. We must tune in again with God. The first great drive in the second chapter of the Crusade ought to be a united effort to restore the lost altar of prayer. If we do that everywhere, our moral and spiritual recovery will be certain.

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

Rev. H. E. Rountree, U. S. Navy Chaplain stationed at San Diego, California, has been sick recently. His many friends will wish for him complete recovery.

Our Greensboro (N. C.) Church has just closed a vacation school in which Misses Arline Waite and Mary Nell Eaves, Student Summer Service workers, shared. The report is that they had a fine school.

The revival at Apples Chapel will begin July 25th with Rev. Stanley C. Harrell, D. D., president of the Southern Convention, the visiting preacher. The same church will hold its quarterly conference on the 24th.

Rev. A. R. Flowers, a well known lecturer and worker in the cause of Christian education, in several states, is spending a few days in Wake, Durham, and Granville Counties, mostly in the interest of students for Elon College.

Dr. W. C. Wicker, treasurer of the Southern Convention, says that a hospital examination assures him that he has no serious trouble and may expect a complete recovery. This is good news which will be enjoyed by many who know him.

Eighteen member have been received into the Ingram Church since the last annual conference. Dr. S. T. A. Kent, a long time active member of the church, was able to attend the Sunday school recently by use of a rolling chair. Fifty people attended their prayer meeting on June 30th.

The Christian Temple, Norfolk, Virginia, is in the midst of a vacation school. Mr. Loring Chase, a Student Summer Service worker, aided the pastor, Dr. H. S. Hardeastle, in setting up the school during the first week. Mr. Chase is this week working with our church at Holland, Virginia, in a similar school.

The Franklin (Va.) Christian Church has just closed a two week's vacation church school which was held in cooperation with the Methodists of the community. Our church had the Beginners and Primary departments while the Juniors and Intermediates met at the Methodist Church. Miss Lilly Spain, a teacher in the public schools of South Norfolk, aided in the vacation church school.

MASSANETTA MUSIC FESTIVAL.

The annual Musical Festival at Massanetta Springs just four miles east of Harrisonburg, Virginia presents a program of varied musical interest. New thoughts, new ideas and new music are presented each year. One year the Management brought to Massanetta Springs singers and players of American Folk Music from the nearby Blue Ridge and Alleghany Mountains. Another year they presented competitive auditions for choirs, with private criticisms given the Director by Dr. John Finley Williamson, authority in this field of music.

This year one of the new features will be the program of the Virginia Federation of Music Clubs on Thursday evening, July 22nd. Some of the music to be used on this program will be the original music of the mountain people, presented in its newly harmonized form. Among the music of Virginia composers which will be presented will be several numbers arranged by John Powell, noted pianist and composer. Mr. Powel will personally conduct the chorus of singers who will participate in this program. No section of the country is richer in Anglo-Saxon music than Rockingham County in which Massanetta Springs is located.

Friday, July 23rd, will be rich with musical interest, beginning at 11:00 A. M., with an address by Dr. John Finley Williamson and closing with the extraordinary concert by the great Festival Choir, of about 150 voices, singing on Vesper Hill at the setting of the sun.

CHAPLAIN ROUNTREE HONORED.

Rev. Hersey E. Rountree, Chaplain U. S. Navy, has recently been elected President of the President's Council of Civic Clubs, San Diego, California, for the ensuing term of six months. This Council consists of all the Presidents of all the Civic (or Service) Clubs of San Diego, representing eighteen in number. They meet once a month for the purpose of coordinating mutual interests and for fostering civic activities. Chaplain Rountree is the only member whose term does not expire, since he is appointed by the District Commandant as the representative of the Navy personnel. It is a distinct honor for him to be chosen as President of this group, since by virtue of his position he represents only one angle of civic life—the Navy interest. During the past year Chaplain Rountree has been particularly interested in fostering the Navy Negro Social Welfare in San Diego, through the Council and other city organizations. Last week the members of the President's Council were guests of Chaplain Rountree on the U. S. S. Rigel.

HAW RIVER.

A very beautiful home coming and memorial service was held at the Haw River Christian Church the third Sunday in June. The committee in charge had prepared an interesting program. Special music was furnished by the Haw River male quartette. The pastor, Rev. E. J. Sanderson, brought the morning message and then a nice memorial window was dedicated to the memory of Rev. C. C. Peel, the first pastor and builder of the church. Among the visitors from other states were Mrs. C. C. Peel from Washington, D. C., and Rev. Roy C. Coulter from New Market, Virginia.

At noon a lovely lunch was spread in the dining room of the church, where many friends gathered and spent a happy hour together. In the afternoon Rev. Roy D. Coulter preached an excellent sermon. We then said good-bye, hoping to meet another year.

MISS EMMA THOMAS.

FRANKLINTON.

Two weeks ago a group of Negro young people from North Carolina and Virginia met at Franklinton for the purpose of study and training along various phases of religious work. Most of them represented Christian Churches, although some of them came from Congregational Churches. Among the group was Clara Stanley from Alabama, who is one of the nine Negro Student Summer Service Workers being sent out in the Southeast this summer.

If any of these young people should happen to be working among the Negro Churches in your community this summer, it would be a fine thing to invite them to tell about their work at one of the young people's meetings. Last summer the young people of the Greensboro Church did this, and they not only gained greatly by it, but in so doing helped the spirit of understanding and cooperation grow between the people of these two races.

A CHRISTIAN—WHAT IT MEANS.

Every relationship in life that carries with it privileges and blessings also places us under obligations. Christianity brings many blessings and enjoyments in its wake, but it also lays a responsibility on our shoulders that must be borne if we are to continue to enjoy its blessings. Being a Christian calls for a very definite relationship between God and one's self.

In the first place, the matter of becoming a Christian is a very definite process. One does not become a Christian simply because he changes his attitude about right and wrong. Nor does one become a Christian because many of his attitudes are in sympathy with the work that the church is seeking to accomplish in the world. One may be an upright citizen in his community, deal justly with his fellow man, sympathize with every move for securing a higher moral civilization, and yet not be a Christian.

The Bible teaches that there are two great antagonistic kingdoms on the earth—the kingdom of Satan and the kingdom of God. No one can be in both of these kingdoms at the same time; we are members of one or the other, but never of both at once. Before one becomes a Christian he is a member of the kingdom of Satan, sometimes called the "kingdom of darkness." When one becomes a Christian, he ceases to be a member of the kingdom of Satan and becomes a member of the kingdom of God. God delivers him "out of the power of darkness" and translates him "into the kingdom of the Son of his love." Hence, there is a change of relationship that takes place.

This change of relationship is produced by means of the new birth. "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." By means of the new birth one is translated out of the kingdom of darkness into the kingdom of the "Son of his love." A new relationship is effected between the individual and God by means of the new birth. And notice that Jesus said that a man cannot enter the kingdom of God except he be born again. If Jesus says he cannot, how can he?

Paul expresses this change of relationship by various figures in his epistles. He expresses it by the figure of adoption in Rom. 8:15; by the figure of marriage in Rom. 11:24; by the figure of a translation from one government or kingdom to another in Col. 1:13. In all these passages it is very clearly taught that a definite action is required of those who would leave the kingdom of darkness and become followers of Christ. When Jesus referred to the process of entering the kingdom by being born again, he was using a figure of speech. When the apostles told men, without using a figure of speech, what to do to get into the kingdom of God, they told them: "Repent ye, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ unto the remission of your sins." Here we have in simple language what God requires of a man in order for him to become a Christian. It is a very definite process, and there is no way of becoming a Christian without obedience to these requirements. In New Testament times no one was recognized as a Christian, except a baptized believer who had repented of his sins and acknowledged Christ as his Saviour. When one obeys these commands and becomes a Christian, he assumes a new relationship to God, enjoys new privileges and blessings, and acquires new responsibilities.

The newborn Christian enters a new relationship with God and finds new obligations. He recognizes God as Father and Lord and consequently is ready to obey him in all things. There is no possible way for men to get along with God unless they obey him. Jesus said: "If ye love me, ye will keep my commandments." "If a man love, he will keep my word." Love does not choose with commands to obey and which to disregard, but willingly obeys them all. All of God's commandments are for our good. God's wisdom knows what is best for us, and the only proper attitude for us to assume is one of complete obedience to his will. God has always required this of his people, and always will. There is nothing greater that we can do than to obey, and obedience is the basis of all acceptable relationships with him.

Another obligation that every one assumes who becomes a Christian is that of self-sacrifice. Cross bearing is the law of discipleship. After Peter's public confession of Christ as the Son of God, at Cesarea Philippi, Jesus announced in clear, unmistakable language the sacrifice that he should make on the cross. "From that time began Jesus to show unto his disciples, that he must go unto Jerusalem, and suffer many things of the elders and chief priests and scribes, and be killed, and the third day be raised up." But this announcement was far from welcome to his disciples. They did not understand how he could be the Messiah and yet submit to such ignominious treatment. So Peter rebuked him, saying: "Be it far from thee, Lord; this shall never be unto Thee." Jesus recognized the subtlety of the temptation that Peter's suggestion brought to him, and replied: "Get thee behind me, Satan; thou art a stumbling block unto me." Immediately after this Jesus said unto his disciples: "If any man would come after, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me." Just as if Jesus had said: "Not only is it necessary for me to carry a cross, but every one who becomes my follower will have a cross to carry also." There is no way of following Jesus on any other terms.

The cross that Jesus refers to his disciples carrying is not the ordinary burdens and sorrows of life. Such burdens and sorrows are borne by all men, whether Christians or not. But Jesus means all those hardships and persecutions and self-denials that are voluntarily assumed for his sake. The apostle reminds us that all who live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution. Surely if Jesus, who is our Master, suffered persecution, his followers shall not expect to be exempt. Jesus would have us understand very clearly that following him means bearing a cross, and that there is no other basis on which we can be his disciples.

But let us turn our attention now to some of the blessings that arise out of this new relationship that the Christian sustains toward God. They are, of course, too numerous to be mentioned. Even our imaginations cannot bring to our minds all the things that God does for his children. So we attempt to mention only a few of them.

God is merciful to us. Our past sins were taken away when we obeyed the gospel. But his mercy hovers over constantly. John says: "And if any man sin, we have an Advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous." There is scarcely any blessing that one can think of that is greater than God's mercy. In his praise for Jehovah's mercy David sang: "As far as the east is from the west, so far hath he removed our transgressions from us. Like as a father pitieth his children, so Jehovah pitieth them that fear him. For he knoweth our frame; he remembereth that we are dust."

And then there is the privilege of friendship that the Christian has with God himself. Jesus said to his disciples: "Ye are my friends, if ye do the things which I command you." Great men of faith in olden times had this privilege, and it is also open to the

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgement and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

A BANKER'S ADVICE.

The president of a bank is one of my neighbors. Sometimes we walk down town together. Recently this happened when I had a copy of "The Christian Sun" in hand and the conversation turned to its publication. The banker friend inquired immediately concerning the cost of publication and the number of subscribers. The figures quickly impressed him that the church must carry a deficit on this publication and he said, "Why not get the Men's Bible Classes to sponsor a campaign for new subscribers? This is what my church has recently done successfully." He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Richmond Christian Advocate has felt recently the impulse of enthusiastic Men's Classes working in its interest.

Well, why not take this banker's advice and follow the leadership of our Mother Church? We have recently had a campaign for subscriptions, led largely by the women. So far as this writer recalls, the men of our Christian Churches have never put on a campaign like this in our history. It may be that we have left too much for the women to do. There are Men's Bible Classes in our churches, although we hear but little of them. Activity and responsibility are good for them, we are told. Your editor is passing on this suggestion of a banker friend with the hope that some member of a Men's Bible Class will read, consider it, and act upon it. If followed up and put into practice, it could mean the stimulation of the classes and the success of "The Christian Sun"—two very good and important things to be accomplished.

VACATIONS AND CHURCH EXPENSES.

Those churches that have summer vacations are quite often familiar with summer deficits. From October to June the churches are busy and the people support them, not only by attendance and service, but also by contributions. Then comes summer, with a less active program, many of the members on vacations, and often the pastor away for a rest. It is at this season that the treasurer has his hardest time, for only too often the members leave without thinking that the church must continue its service while they are gone.

It is a simple matter to leave a check or a contribution, which will be equivalent to the amount that would be placed in the hands of the treasurer, before going away on a vacation. There are some who think enough of the Church and are Christian enough at heart to do this kind of thing. For them, Church

Treasurers are devoutly grateful. There are others who spend more on a vacation than they give to the church for an entire year. They forget to put in their contributions before they leave and do not have it to give when they return. This means it difficult for the church to continue its service and would take a million years to impress the world that Christianity is very vital. Vacations are often necessary and are certainly delightful, but it can hardly be said that they are more important than the continuous activities of the Church.

This is a gentle reminder to those, like the editor, who may be planning to spend a few days away from the regular routine and who will miss some Sunday services of the church which they have agreed to support. Others will remain at home, and will need the ministry of the Church. Visitors will come to the community and should have the joy of the open church door. The services of the Church and its expenses, as well, continue through the entire year and call for the consideration and liberality of all of the membership. Vacationists will please remember their churches and the church in the community where they may worship, for the expenses go on and the liberality of the worshippers is a testimony to their faith.

OUR YOUNG PEOPLE.

This week the Eastern Virginia young people held a day's conference concerning their work, and the Eastern North Carolina young people conducted the evening session at the Sunday School Convention. Recently other young people have held similar services and in weeks to come still others will be busy with programs and plans. This is a comparatively new thing in our churches. Of course, young people have had their chance through the years, but they have not had conference organizations of their own until recently. The denominational organization is just one year old. Our young people across the country are beginning to get acquainted, to share in similar programs, and to feel that they are one united group. Rev. A. L. Granger, Jr., first president of the Pilgrim Fellowship, is spending the summer visiting leadership training schools in the West and Mid-West helping to build this united consciousness and co-operative program.

This new type of work is interesting and challenging. It is an interesting fact that young people, when given a chance to organize for Christian service, set for themselves the task of "Building a New World." This is no small undertaking, but of course they will have it to do, for a new world is always in process of being made. It is a challenge worthy of the best to undertake to make this new world Christian. That is what our church young people want to do. At least it is what many of them want to do. Unfortunately, there are some who have no vision, no dreams, but the church may be very grateful to those who dream and visualize, for those who believe that the world can be made better. Jesus said, "According to the faith so be it unto you."

It has been the pleasure of the Board of Christian Education in the Southern Convention to counsel with these young people of ours and to aid them in every possible way in the promotion of their own plans. When necessary money has been furnished for their work. The Board believes that in these young people is the hope of the church; that the most productive work can be done with the growing generation. It is eager to see them have their chance and to offer whatever counsel it can in directing them to be workmen of God, who need not be ashamed.

PASTORATES.

The freedom of democracy practiced by our churches has often been very expensive. This freedom is a heritage which we want to maintain, but we may have paid too high a price for some of it. It is perfectly obvious that pastorates should be so arranged that ministers can live near their people and share with them the life which they must needs live. It costs money to drive cars long distances and most of our rural churches pay small salaries.

The conference which is recommending pastorates composed of churches closely related is certainly to be commended. It must be understood always that the conference has no authority to legislate or to demand of any church or group of churches that they form such a pastorate. On the contrary, it must be understood also that the churches which compose the conference should seriously consider the advice of the leaders that they have elected, and the votes of the conference itself. It may be that some of the pastorates suggested are not the best combinations, but the churches concerned should consider carefully the matter of forming pastorates.

There are difficulties involved. Churches now have pastors and many of them may want to continue those same pastors. Ministers may like their people well enough to want to stay. Ties of long standing and personal friendships will unavoidably enter into the picture. There may be bits of misunderstanding between nearby churches, or even rivalry of a sort.

But the business of the Church is to overcome difficulties. Sin is the world's greatest difficulty and the Church proposes a plan to eliminate that from human life. The church that is bold enough to undertake that certainly should be able to overcome the minor difficulties connected with forming pastorates closely enough related so the minister can serve without too great cost and can do a much better grade of work. It is to be hoped, therefore, that the churches concerned will appoint leaders to confer with each other, and see what can be done so that when the pastor for the coming conference year is to be called, the pastorates may agree on a plan of procedure and necessary adjustments made, so that the coming conference year may have a much better alignment of churches in pastorates. Incidentally, this may mean the development of a higher grade of Christianity, because so many personal desires will have to be sacrificed for the benefit of the larger group.

F. C. L.

IN FAVOR OF A "FEELABLE" FAITH.

By Vance Havner.

One of the churches' leading prejudices today lies in a grudge against emotion in religion. Our feelings have been denounced and discredited and pushed out the back door of our spiritual lives like an unwanted step-child. If a preacher warms up in the pulpit and moves about freely, he is accused of preaching in the energy of the flesh—as though energy of the flesh were the same thing as energy of the body! Modern public speaking, together with the radio, has produced a statuesque type of speaker, who leaves us wishing another John Knox might come along to "ding the pulpit to blads." It would be a good thing for some preachers to forget their delivery and work up what Whitfield called a "pulpit sweat!"

And emotions are berated in Christian experience as though we should flee from them as from the bubonic plague. I know that they are dangerous, but so is anything worth having. Any experience that doesn't get tangled up with feeling isn't worth having. Think of love, patriotism, music without emotion! Man has intelligence, will, and emotion, and a real Christian experience will affect all three.

I grew up in the hills where old-fashioned revivals used to get mixed up with heart-strings and tears. You could tell when you had a revival in those days. The Heavenly Dynamite got under the topsail of superficial dignity and blew up roots of bitterness, and along with moans of repentance there were hallelujahs of rejoicing. There were some extravagances now and then, but the very fact that the devil threw in some counterfeits proved that the actual was there! There was emotion in those awakenings of other days, but blanched-faced sinners trembling at altars of prayer are always enough to stir feelings; and God knows we need to see them now! Very few adults are being converted nowadays and we excuse our failure to reach them by ridiculing emotion. Some little professors tell their classes that "as intelligence grows, emotion decreases," then go to a ball game to yell themselves hoarse in a downpour of rain whooping it up for the dear old alma mater!

We sit on the lid of our feelings in things spiritual, and "amens" are as scarce at church today as though they cost ten dollars a piece. It is true that faith rests on facts instead of feeling, but it is just as certain that real faith will stir the emotions as that faith without works is dead. We have let the devil run away with a monopoly on emotion. When David returned to Jerusalem dancing before the ark, his wife despised him and was smitten with barrenness. The happy Christian today will find more than one Michael, already smitten with spiritual barrenness, to throw ice-water on his zeal.

We enter a plea for a return to what used to be called "heart-felt religion." We need more of it ourselves and crave to find more of it in a cynical, bitter, and disillusioned world. We boast of modern smartness, but some of us would gladly see it all exchanged for a little of the old-time religion that "makes us love everybody."

A double-dose of old-fashioned, revival-meeting, brush-arbor repentance and rejoicing will do us Baptists more good than all our clever schemes and wordy discussions. If we could lock up our church office desks awhile and visit the mourners' bench, we might be telling a different story. For all our advantages and improvements we have not the fervor of our fathers. Somewhere along the road we lost more than we have gained. Let us not quench and grieve the Spirit, but yield ourselves to the Holy Fire, and things will begin to happen!—BIBLICAL RECORDER.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The Bethlehem Christian Church, near Suffolk, Virginia, sustained a loss recently in the death of Mr. W. B. Byrd, who has been Superintendent of the Sunday school for a number of years. He was a son of Mr. and Mrs. William Henry Byrd, and was born March 7, 1879. He died at his home near Nurneyville, Virginia, July 6, 1937, at the age of 58 years, 3 months and 29 days.

He is survived by three daughters: Mrs. C. R. Taylor, Mrs. N. H. Bradshaw, and Miss Margaret Byrd of Nansemond County, Virginia; two sons: William Jordan Byrd and Stanley Byrd; his parents; four brothers: N. W. Byrd, J. P. Byrd, J. L. Byrd and D. H. Byrd of Nansemond County, Virginia; two sisters: Mrs. J. A. Ellis of Suffolk and Mrs. C. L. Harris of Norfolk, Virginia, and nine grandchildren.

He united with Bethlehem Church when a small boy and remained faithful until death. He loved his church, and gave to it his best service and sincere devotion. He developed the plans and supervised the remodeling of the church several years ago, and this work stands today as a monument to his faithful service. As superintendent of the Sunday school he showed ability as a leader and as an executive. The church is grateful for his efficient leadership. As a recognition of his service the church voted two weeks ago to elect him Superintendent Emeritus of the Sunday school.

Several months ago he was badly hurt in an automobile collision. Since that time he has been a great sufferer. He bore his sufferings with patience and submission, and passed to his reward, loved and respected by a large number of friends.

Surely a man of this type deserves space in his church paper when he passes away. In a time when so many people do not find time for the spiritual work of the church, it is refreshing and encouraging to know that others are willing to spend their time and strength in the service of God. And this service of love should be appreciated and recognized by every agency of the church. Consecration increases the talents of people who are willing to pay the price. "Give and it shall be given unto you" is a law that is true in the field of service. Think what power the church would have if every member would give to it his best service.

Heaven is the final goal of those who follow Christ. But the Christian religion seeks to bring heaven down to earth—and reveal a foretaste of the heavenly life to those who faithfully follow the Master. The hope of everlasting life should bring into this life sunshine in the place of shadows, comfort in bereavement, encouragement in time of despair, strength in weakness and joy in sorrow. The Christian life is the life worth living, not only because of the promise of heaven at the end of this mortal life, but because of the compensation which comes from living for others. This opportunity is offered to all who will accept the way of life revealed in Jesus Christ. "Come unto Me—I will give you rest."

I. W. JOHNSON.

WAS IT YOU?

In the early morning hours a picnic sailed out of an improvised harbor for a day's outing on the river. In the afternoon friends, relatives, and neighbors gathered at the harbor looking for the return of the boat that left in early morning. They were crowding the pier. Presently there was a scream of distress. A child had fallen overboard. A lad in the rear, quite a ways from the river's bank, heard the scream. He seized a long rope, tied one to his belt, threw the other end to a member of the party standing on the pier, plunged into the river and caught the child just as she was going down for the third time. He tucked her under his arm with head up, for he had been taught how to rescue a drowning person, and turned to signal the man on the pier, but alas, the man had dropped his end of the rope!

Many years ago the Christian Church launched Elon College as its supreme effort in the field of Christian higher education. The sailing has always been a bit stormy, but the church never lost hope of its success until the recent depression swept down upon us without warning. The college was pushed overboard. The church aroused itself and went to the rescue. Two years ago, June, 1935, after many discussion, long hours of conferences, and tireless efforts, the college was finally halted in its downward sweep and the signal was given but, alas, some one had dropped his end of the rope! Was that someone you?

PREACHING MISSION AT HENDERSON.

During the week of June 27th to July 2nd, Dr. James R. Clinton conducted at the First Congregational-Christian Church, Henderson, North Carolina, a preaching mission, which proved to be of great spiritual value to both church and community. His simple gospel message and the marvellous way by which it was presented caused Dr. Clinton to win undivided attention of his congregation.

Thursday evening after the regular service Dr. Clinton conducted, at the insistence of the Finance Committee, seminar on Finance during which he presented many, many helpful and timely suggestions.

Friday night at the closing service, Dr. Clinton presented his Dramatic Recital—a selection taken from Ian Maclaren's "Beside the Bonnie Briar Bush." This recital and its presentation was the most marvellous thing of its kind I have ever seen.

After the Recital Friday night, twenty-two volunteers met in a class room to listen to an explanation of the "Christian Campaigners" work of personal evangelism. This group will soon perfect its organization and begin active work.

It was a pleasure for us to have Dr. Clinton; we sincerely feel that the interest and enthusiasm which he stimulated will never die.

For renewed interest and enthusiasm, I suggest to every church that it secure the services of Dr. James R. Clinton.

Throngs of young people are expected to convene for the second Labor Day Week-End Youth Rally at the Moody Bible Institute, Chicago, from Friday evening to Monday evening, September 3 to 6. The 4,900 registered guests of last year, from sixteen states, Canada, and the District of Columbia, will doubtless be greatly exceeded in number, judging from the zeal and interest that marked last year's convocation.

CHARLES LEROY GOODELL.A Good Minister of Jesus Christ.

[Memorial address delivered at Northfield, Mass., by Dr. Charles E. Schaeffer, Secretary of the Department of Evangelism of the Federal Council of Churches.]

Whenever the leaders in Israel desired to rally their followers to fresh loyalty and devotion to their ideals, they pointed them back to their fathers. The heroic deeds of valor and the feats of victory in the past were the wells out of which they drew fresh water for the inspiration of the present. The writer of the letter to the Hebrews was especially fond of recalling the names and the memories of those who were pioneers of the faith. In grand procession these pilgrims of God march before our eyes and their lives inspire us to nobler action and deeper devotion. "Remember your leaders" writes this unknown author, "the men who spoke the word of God to you. Look back upon the close of their career and copy their faith."

We are met here amid these hallowed surroundings to remember one of our leaders, one who spoke the word of God to us, one whose victorious and unusually useful life came to its close on April 26th of this year and whose great faith is most worthy to be copied. In a sense, it is indeed difficult to describe adequately the character and the career of Dr. Charles Leroy Goodell. He was no ordinary man. He towered above his contemporaries like an Alpine peak towers above the lesser hills. His life was so many-sided and his work was so manifold. He combined in himself the elements of greatness and goodness and graciousness which endeared him to all who were privileged to move within the charmed circle of his gracious personality. But in another sense it is comparatively easy to trace the lineaments of this man. While he had secret places and deep reserves in his nature, he had no secrets. He was an open book, known and read of all men.

He had first of all the advantage of having been well born. In Dudley, Massachusetts, on July 31, 1854, a man child was born to Warren and Clarinda Goodell. They were a sturdy New England family, pious and frugal who laid good foundations of physical, mental, and moral qualities in their children. Those of us who were close to Dr. Goodell often heard him speak of the old home in which he was reared. He said: "It was bounded on the east by supplication and on the west by thanksgiving." How often we heard him tell his audiences of the way in which the Sabbath day was spent in his boy-hood home. "Morning prayers a little more spiritual than on other days, and then the singing of the great hymns of the Church with the family grouped around the Melodeon or the piano. Then the ringing of the bell high up in the country steeple. After Church and Sunday school were over it was not so bad of a summer afternoon to lie amid the clover with the fragrance in your nostrils and watch the fleecy clouds as God drove them like spotless flocks in azure pastures; or to count the swallows as they circled to their homes in the chimneys or their nests under the eaves, and then, if you had been good all the week, there was the promised trip to the graveyard." Upon such foundations of most beautiful Christian home influences, he faithfully built the superstructure of his great life and work. His native and acquired qualities peculiarly fitted him for his chosen profession—the Christian ministry.

After studying in a number of New England schools, he was ordained as a minister in the Methodist Episcopal Church in 1879 and assigned to a small parish at Acushnet, where he served for one year. Then followed eight years of ministry in three churches in Providence, Rhode Island, eight years in two churches in Boston, then six years in Brooklyn, eleven years in Calvary Church, New York, and five years in St. Paul's Church, New York. From 1919 to 1935, a period of 16 years, he served as the efficient and beloved Secretary of the Department of Evangelism, making a total of 55 years in active service in the ministry, of which 39 were spent in the pastorate.

He was indeed "a good minister of the Lord Jesus Christ. No one ever mistook him for anything else. In his appearance, in his attitude and bearing, in his walk and conversation, he never concealed nor betrayed his high and holy calling in the Church. With St. Paul he could say: "I magnify my office."

He had the advantage of size. Nature had dealt very generously with him in his physical framework. Like Barnabas "he was tall and towering." Of Phillips Brooks they said that "when he walked across the campus at Cambridge it looked as if a walking tower was approaching them." When Dr. Goodell walked down the Church aisle in front of a procession of recruits whom he had won for Christ and the Church, or when he mounted the pulpit platform, his physical presence at once commanded attention and inspired the confidence and assurance of all present. His ample chest sheltered a large and loving heart. In it he found room for every worthy cause and call and when his hand was offered, and yours went to his, his completely covered yours.

In spite of his being before the public most of his life and being privileged to address audiences of great size and quality, he was the most timid and backward of men. "More than once," says he, "have I walked around a city block before I could get up courage to go to the door and talk to a man about his soul's interest." With a temperament that shrank from notoriety, he would stand on the steps of the City Hall of New York City and preach, or standing on the seat of an automobile in Wall Street under the windows of J. P. Morgan's office, he would proclaim the unsearchable riches of Jesus Christ to a surging crowd.

He was gifted with a voice that was resonant and vibrant. Its rich tones were ample to fill the largest church, or auditorium, and when he spoke he carried conviction in the very accent of his words. His audiences hung with rapt attention upon his well constructed sentences, and he moved his hearers like the wind sways the treetops. He spoke the words of wisdom and truth. His utterances were steeped in scripture and were couched in the choicest literary form. He was a master in his art. He was an artist in the field of diction. "Craftsman's art and music's measure for God's pleasure" did he design. He had coined many phrases and sentences of pith and point which ever stood ready to do his bidding. It seemed as if he could just reach out somewhere into space and call them in at will and weave them into the fabric of his discourses. His sermons and addresses were mosaics of rich and beautiful patterns. He knew biography and seemed to walk in the company of the celestials. Wesley and Whitfield and a host of others formed the goodly fellowship of saints who attended him on his way. He knew Bunyan's "Pilgrim's Progress" almost by heart. We shall never forget how once in this very place he quoted the words of Mr. Valiant-for-the-truth: "My sword I give to him who shall succeed me in my pilgrimage; my courage and skill to him who can get them; my marks and scars I carry with me to be my witness that I have fought His battles who will now be my rewarder." Or those other words of Bunyan in which he describes the preacher with "His eyes are uplifted to heaven, the open Bible is in his hand, the word of truth is upon his lips and

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

WHAT IS THE MATTER WITH THE METHODIST CHURCH?

Writing in the North Carolina Christian Advocate July 8th a correspondent, J. J. Boone, asks the question given above as the heading of his article. We wonder if Mr. Boone didn't ask a question that is pertinent to our Congregational - Christian Church and to the other churches of our day? Then that which is more to the point in the opinion of this scribe, Mr. Boone answers his own question in these words: "It seems that we have lost our passion for souls. We do not any more suffer over the sins of other people." We may talk all we wish about the morality and the immorality; social justice and injustice and all the rest of it as much as we will, but the history of the past as well as the Holy Scriptures teach that the one hope of the church, and of society is evangelism, a passion for our souls, a suffering and an anxiety on the part of those who have accepted Jesus Christ as the Way, the Truth and the Life, for those who have not done this vital thing. But without commenting further we quote in full Mr. Boone's question that he puts to his own people and his comment thereon, which is in full as follows:

"We have never had a more efficient ministry intellectually. The church has never had better buildings and equipment than now. Our Sunday schools never had better trained teachers and workers. Our churches and various organizations were never better organized. Never before did we have more conferences, schools, and get-together meetings than we are now having.

"In spite of all this efficiency we can feel our foundations slipping. A few years ago we were first in every field. Today we stand in percentage way down the line. During 1936 the Baptist denomination gained in membership 140,308. The Reformed Church gained 81,958. The Lutherans gained 43,905. While the Methodists gained 41,798.

"For the last fourteen years our church has lost out of her Sunday schools 150,000 students.

"There has been a shameful loss in our missionary offering. It seems that we have lost our passion for souls. We do not any more suffer over the sins of other people. We are in a large measure dead to moral and social issues. In the counties in North Carolina that have voted for legalized liquor, more than 50 per cent of our ministry did not make a vigorous protest.

"Please tell us what is the matter with us. Is it our system, our educational institutions, or the stage of our growth and development?"

THE GIFT REVEALS THE GIVER—A MEDITATION.

"God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life."—John 3:16.

This verse tells of the greatest gift the world has ever known. Other passages from God's Word march in procession before the mind:

"In this was manifested the love of God toward us, because that God sent his only begotten Son into the world, that we might live through him."—I John 4:9.

"Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends."—John 15:13.

"Without shedding of blood is no remission."—Hebrews 9:22.

"Wherefore he is able also to save them to the uttermost that come unto God by him."—Hebrews 7:25.

"No man hath seen God at any time; the only begotten Son . . . he hath declared him."—John 1:18.

The mind clings to the thought, God's Gift, even Jesus, reveals God to me; then is it not true that my gifts reveal me to God?

Jesus, God's Gift, reveals to the human heart far more of God than mere paper and ink can ever convey. Four characteristics of God the Father are definitely revealed in His Gift and are all suggested in the words of John 3:16.

1. GOD'S GIFT REVEALS GOD'S LOVE—

"God so loved . . . that he gave his only begotten Son."

"God commendeth his love toward us, in that, while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us."

2. GOD'S GIFT REVEALS GOD'S VISION—

"God so loved THE WORLD that he gave his only begotten Son."

"Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature."

3. GOD'S GIFT REVEALS GOD'S WISDOM—

"God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him SHOULD NOT PERISH."

"The wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord."

4. GOD'S GIFT REVEALS GOD'S POWER—

"God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but HAVE EVERLASTING LIFE."

"He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life."

If Jesus, the Gift of God, reveals to us God's love for us, God's vision of the needy world, God's wisdom in providing a way of escape from sin, and God's power to save, surely our gifts also reveal us to God.

Take a backward look at your gifts of the past year, to test yourself by them. Center your thoughts on the gifts which you plan to bring in the coming year as gifts to Him, week by week and month by month. Ask yourself: What do my gifts reveal of my love for Him who gave all for me, of my vision of this sin-stained world, of my knowledge of the way of salvation, and of my faith in God's power through Christ to save all men everywhere. If you are not sure that the revelation made through your gifts is in line with what you feel in your heart, will you sacrifice even more, until you are confident that, seeing the gifts, God will know the depth of your love. Then you will know the secret which Jesus sought to disclose, but which has been kept from many of us:

"It is more blessed to give than to receive."

CHARLES LEROY GOODELL.

the world is upon his back." Like a diver he would plunge into the Bible or into some sacred literature and bring forth pearls of rarest charm and beauty—hidden manna which nourished his own soul and the souls of his hearers. Some of those treasure trovers he would delight in like a merchant man dealing in goodly pearls. Can we not still hear him say? "Sayest thou this of thyself or did another tell it of me?" "The well is deep and thou hast nothing to draw with." "If thy heart be like my heart, give me thy hand." "It matters little how excellent the fuel if the fire is out?" He was especially fond of quoting Birrel's words that Wesley "traveled more miles to bring the gospel to the lost than any other man who ever bestrode a beast" and Wesley's own words, "My heart was strangely warmed." In his volume of sermons "Pathways to the Best," published in 1907, occurs this sentence: "The need of the hour seems to be not so much more light as more sight." I presume he made use of that expression and others of equal pungency and power thousands of times in his public utterances, as well as in his writings.

Dr. Goodell's temperament was poetical, rather than philosophical. Dr. Richard Green, the historian says of Edmund Burke, the great statesman, "The ground work of his nature was poetic; his ideals, if conceived by the reason, took shape and color from the splendor and fire of his imagination." Dr. Goodell was a poet, rather than a theologian. He conceived truth sentimentally and poetically rather than speculatively and philosophically. "It is the heart that makes the theologian" to quote Paschal. Logic often leaves one cold, but truth passing through the emotions carries with it warmth and radiance.

An open heart and hand,
A noble life, a single faith
These are the lovely litanies
Which all men understand.

Another characteristic of Dr. Goodell was his catholicity of spirit. He belonged to no class and kept aloof from petty party lines, a fearless champion of the truth, and a dauntless advocate of the principles which he cherished. He was tolerant of the views of others, and any difference which existed in no wise estranged him as a personal friend and brother. All circles claimed him, for he had the wit to win. He drew a circle and took them in.

This catholicity of mind and heart and this conciliatory attitude came to noble expression when he became the Executive Secretary of the Department of Evangelism of the Federal Council. He entered into this general field of Evangelism when the old methods were being repudiated and when Social Service and Religious Education were putting forth their rival claims for major emphasis in the program of the church, but he never had any serious quarrels with their advocates. He might have easily wrecked the whole house of Evangelism if he had been more of an ecclesiastical iconoclast. But his irenic and conciliatory nature and attitude enabled him to steer safely through this Scylla and Charybdis which lay in the path of Evangelism. With him it was not "either-or" but "both-and." By this policy he disarmed his opponents and silenced his critics, and "those who had come to scoff remained to pray."

Time will permit me only to make mention of two other phases of his ministry. The one was that through the printed page. He wielded a facile pen, and was a ready writer. His first book, "My Mother's Bible" was published in 1891 when he was 37 years of age. More than a dozen other meritorious volumes followed—nearly all of them bearing on some phase of evangelism.

As a crowning feature of his long and useful career came his radio ministry. The winds were his messengers and the waves of ether the bearer of his messages. Literally millions of people in near and distant parts of the earth "listened in" while this Shepherd of the Air discoursed on divine things. Thousands of letters of appreciation and inquiry came to his desk, and perhaps his Sabbath reveries were more widely heard than the voice of any man who has ever lived.

Dr. Goodell was a good man in every sense of the word, full of faith and of the Holy Ghost. The Shunamite woman, watching Elisha, said, "I perceive that this is a holy man of God that passeth by us continually." "He was a burning and a shining light" and we were happy to walk in his light for a season.

On April 26th he quietly and peacefully passed on into the great Beyond. He once wrote "Death is only crossing a seam in the carpet, passing

EASTERN VIRGINIA S. S. AND C. E. CONVENTION.

The Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention of the Eastern Virginia Conference will be held with Liberty Spring Christian Church, near Suffolk, Virginia, on Tuesday, July 20, 1937.

A worthwhile program has been prepared, and it is hoped that every church in the conference will have a representative delegation.

The work carried on by this convention is essential to the growth of our constituency, and it is essential that our local churches support it both by having a full representation present and by their financial assistance.

HOME AGAIN, WHAT NOW!

The Elon Leadership Training School is over, and numerous young people have returned to their local churches and societies to undertake the responsibilities of putting new life into their activities. Those were happy and enriching days at Elon. They were filled with courage and new experiences. The pleasant memories of study, of worship, of play, and of fellowship together will linger on in our minds. I feel sure that our delegates have a better understanding of the brotherhood of man and the Fatherhood of God. From the boundless and courageous good will of the School there is no doubt in my mind but what some of the following are the greatest assets throughout a lifetime: friends, health, sterling qualities of character, and a highly developed spiritual insight. It was a privilege to share in the experiences of our leaders who possessed such qualities and who were of a high calibre. We were inspired by their leadership, their dynamic personalities, and their wealth of spiritual contributions. With renewed strength in our hearts, our minds, our bodies, and our souls, what shall we do, young people? Shall we endeavor to carry on, or shall we let our enthusiasm die? Where our leaders left off, do we have a responsibility to carry on? If so, what is it to the church, to God, and to man? A poem entitled "The Better way," written by Miss Dora Byrons, of Pomona, Florida, in 1935 while attending the Elon School and under its inspiration, leaves us in a thoughtful mood. Which way will you seek?

Two men once walked side by side, behind the Christ who trod
A hillside path to Calvary,
To suffering, and to God.
One man walked but with the crowd, followed where it led;
The other saw an humble cross
far ahead,
With the crowd one soon returned,
weary from the day,
But in the darkness one remained to watch and pray.

We also walk a hillside path, a path that Christ has trod
A path of life that leads us up to suffering, and to God.
Do we but follow like that crowd, follow where it led;
Or do we glimpse an humble cross
far ahead?
And when the darkness in our lives
covers up the day,
Will we go downward with the crowd,
Or seek the better way?

PUTTING CHRISTIAN IDEALS INTO OUR FRIENDSHIPS.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC
FOR JULY 25, 1937.

SCRIPTURE: Prov. 17:17; 18:24;
John 15:13.

Daily Meditations—

Monday—"Think On These Things"—
Phil. 4:8.
Tuesday—"Friend of Publicans and Sinners"—Matt. 11:19.
Wednesday—"What Do Ye More Than Others?"—Matt. 5:43-48.
Thursday—"Be the Friend of God"—
Jas. 4:4.
Friday—"Love"—I Cor. 13.
Saturday—"True Friendship"—Prov. 17:17.

We recall how that in discussion of last week Jesus was and is the friend of all. He was called "the friend of publicans and sinners." He is a true friend because He is ever ready to help in time of need. We call to mind the proverb: "A friend in need is a friend indeed."

The only real way of understanding people is to be friends. Probably we do not like certain traits about people. But can you realize that all of us have some traits which are not so desirable? The ideal of friendship is to overlook faults of others and be true to people. It is said, "A friend is one who knows all about you and still loves you." This being true, we must necessarily love some people who are a bit unlovely.

To an abiding friend, we must be trustful. We cannot listen to idle gossip and become busy-bodies who delight in carrying rumors about other people's names and character and still bear the ideal of friendship.

To Think About—

1. How will a true friend act?
2. How may friendship be proven?
3. Does selfishness have any part in friendship?
4. Is true friendship something that is easily broken?

Suggested Hymns—

"What a Friend We Have in Jesus"
"The Touch of His Hand on Mine."
"Love Divine, All Love Excelling."

A SUGGESTION TO PREACHERS.

One of the easiest faults for the preacher to indulge in is that of pouring forth words into space, to an audience in general. During the D. L. Moody Centenary, observed this year, the evangelist's power over an audience is constantly mentioned. One admirer records: "His listeners waited on his words in a spirit of eager expectancy, and no man living in America, in those days, could hold an audience with a firmer, surer hand than Dwight L. Moody."

While Moody preached before thousands, he always addressed an individual. "He would pick out this or the other person in the audience," says Bradford, his biographer, "and fire his quick words at him."

The effect of this method upon the rest of the audience was electric. Frequently the individual would not know he was being addressed. It is probable that generally he did not know it. And certainly the congregation did not. But the electricity was there just the same. Preachers! try it some time. And ask the Spirit of God who is the Spirit of power to bless your effort. The suggestion comes from the practice of Moody.

Beware what you set your heart upon. For it surely shall be yours.

GOD ENCOURAGES A LEADER.

LESSON III—JULY 18, 1937.

GOLDEN TEXT: The Lord will give strength unto his people.—Psalm 29:11.

LESSON: Exodus 3:13-6:1.

Beyond the mount of vision there lies the valley of service. God had revealed himself to Moses in the burning bush; now He commissions him to go back to Egypt to deliver his fellow-countrymen from their bondage. Every privilege involves responsibility. God gives that we may use. God empowers that we may act. God demands much of those to whom he gives much.

Moses might well hesitate in the light of the great task. Who indeed was he, a fugitive criminal, and an unknown herdsman, that he should stand before the mighty Pharaoh of Egypt, and lead a people out of bondage? There is quite a difference in the spirit of the young man who hastily struck down the Egyptian who struck down his fellow-Hebrew, the chivalrous youth who defended the daughters of Jethro against the shepherds, and the man of mature judgment who now stands abashed in the presence of his great task. It was not false modesty; it was the instinctive sense of insufficiency which every truly great man feels when he receives a divine commission from God. Moses' forty years in Midian had helped him to see the larger significance of the moral enterprise to which he had been called. It had also made clear to him that it was not to be by high-handed violence and bloodshed that social problems of his day were to be solved. Only patience and indiscourageable purpose, aided and abetted by the divine presence and power could solve the problem. Many a modern high-handed labor leader can learn a valuable lesson from this man Moses.

"Certainly I will be with thee." The assurance of the divine presence and help—that is all that any man can ask, and it is all that he needs, as he undertakes a great commission. Let a man be sure that he is within the divine purpose, and it does not make much difference who is against him, or the odds that are against him. If God be for us, who can be against us?

"Thus shalt thou say I am hath sent you." God is a personal spirit, self-existent, a living presence. Our modern world needs to recapture the sense of God as a person, as a Living, Loving Person, a Spirit and a Presence, over and above and beyond things and other persons. An impersonal god or mere idea will not meet the need of hungry hearts today or any day.

"The God of your fathers . . . the God of Abraham and Isaac and Jacob . . ."—There were sacred associations and great experiences connected with these names. This was the God who had made a covenant with the forefathers of this people, and who had kept his promises and manifested his presence to their children. Happy is the young person or the boy or girl to whom the God of his or her father means something, in whose mind God stands for a reality.

Leaders may be called of God, commissioned by God, and assured of God's presence, but there come times when they need to be encouraged. The spirit is willing but the flesh is weak. Physical weariness, bitter resistance, ingratitude, a sense of futility—a hundred and one things rise up to haunt and harass them. But God will not leave them or forsake them. As he gave Moses unquestionable evidence of his presence and his power, so will he quicken the lagging spirits of those whom he has called to his work. God will not leave his children without his witness.

"O my Lord, I am not eloquent, neither heretofore, nor since thou hast spoken unto thy servant, but I am slow of speech, and of slow tongue." Moses was not the last man who thought that eloquence was a prerequisite of the servant of God. There are still those who think that the ability to speak with the tongues of men and of angels is the most important thing in the world. To be sure it is desirable that one shall be able to use chaste words and beautiful language, that one may be able to speak with persuasion and ease in behalf of the Kingdom. But there have been, and are legions of men and women, slow of speech, and not eloquent at all, who by integrity of character and faithfulness of service and humility of spirit, and sheer goodness of life, have done great things for God. Many a minister who is eloquent is not to be compared with some quiet, faithful shepherd of the sheep. And many a Sunday school teacher who can speak glibly and fluently is not nearly as fruitful as is some modest, quiet spoken man or woman with love in the heart. Though we speak with the tongues of men and of angels and have not love, we are become as sounding brass and tinkling or clanging cymbals. In like manner, impassioned orators and eloquent agitators are not doing nearly as much for labor and social justice as are those who patiently and sacrificially are working for the coming of the Kingdom. The Kingdom does not come by eloquence but by sacrifice.

Moses and Aaron—God's team of workers, the one the compliment to the other in his work. Thus it has so often been. Jesus himself sent out his disciples two by two. Paul and Barnabas, Barnabas and Mark, Paul and Silas. And how true it is in the so-called secular relations of life. Many a man, and many a woman are incomplete in themselves, but in each other they find that which completes their lives. And God uses them in a far more effective way than simply as two individuals.

The darkest hour is just before dawn. There are meanings in God's seeming delays. Things never looked blacker for the Israelites than just before Moses appeared to lead them out of bondage. Pharaoh had doubled their labors in mere spite and hate and their burdens seemed more than they could bear. But God had seen and heard and cared and He was about to deliver them. He waited only until his chosen servant had come to the day of visitation, when out of the experiences of his early youth, and his life in the desert, and his experience of God, he should go forth to carry out the will of his Lord. In the fullness of time God sends forth his man. Out of the welter and the chaos of these times there will come a deliverer for God's people. Even now there stands in the background some one whom God has purposed as his chosen leader for these troubled times. Let us wait on the Lord and take courage.

A CONFESSION BY DR. D. L. MOODY.

"Friends, before beginning tonight, I want to confess that I yielded just now to my temper, out in the hall, and I have done wrong. Just as I was coming here tonight, I lost my temper with a man, and I want to confess my wrong before all of you, and if that man is present here whom I thrust from me in anger, I want to ask his forgiveness and God's. Let us pray." Moody's son, in his biography, informs us that the man referred to had grossly and deliberately insulted his father. But Moody's confession reflects not a hint of excuse or self-vindication for resenting the insult, and the meeting that followed was a scene of unusual blessing as a result of such a straightforward Christian confession.

MONDAY.

FROM FOUNDATIONS TO TURRETS.

"Him that is weak in the faith, receive ye . . . for one believeth that he may eat all things; another, who is weak, eateth herbs . . . Let not him which eateth not, judge him that eateth, for God hath received him."—Romans 14: 1-10.

This text is the gospel of ministry of love and of toleration. Paul, the great theologian, would no more teach theology to new beginners than he would give strong meat to babies, or calculus to kindergarten. He had a great sense of fitness of things and of due proportions.

The Christian worker must have an equal sense today. And the new Christian must likewise learn first principles and build upon them Christian character. Many a young Christian has backslidden because he has never built this way. If one in the beginning has to correct misinformations and go into the elements of faith and doctrines, he will make but one progress. First, make the foundations sure and then build the walls through daily faith and practice.

Prayer—Heavenly Father, we revere Thy truth as it is in Jesus Christ. Grant unto us Thy wisdom that we may know how to build our characters up in Him and likewise may we know how to impart the same truth to those whom it is our privilege to teach. Amen.

TUESDAY.

OUR MIGHT.

"This is the work of the Lord . . . not by might, nor by power, but by my spirit, saith the Lord of Hosts."—Zech. 4: 6.

One of the greatest lessons of Christian experience is the failure of our own resources and the success of God's. How often, Christians everywhere testify how they have failed in their plans when they have forgotten God, and how often they have succeeded when they have taken God with them.

The history of Israel gives us many pictures of great victories in wars; but only when God was with them. All powers come from Him and they must be guided by Him to happy conclusions. The great will of the Lord today is not that men shall fight at all, save that bloodless battle against sin. But we shall never conquer of our own strength, nor by fighting. He is our Commander. He stands by our side. Obey Him and we shall conquer.

Prayer—Make us courageous, O God, but make us courageous for Thee. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

GOD STANDING BY US.

"The words that I have spoken unto you, are spirit and life."—Jno. 6: 63

The weaknesses of our flesh often remind us of that ridiculous saying "Here goes nothing." This life of the flesh is truly only a vapor that is soon gone like a mist. And yet, how great is this nothingness if God is standing by!

Today we are told that the words of our Saviour are spirit and life. If we have His Word in us, the light of our life, we have Him in us, and we have all that He can mean to a believing soul. In this God is always standing by.

Prayer—Dear Heavenly Father, spirit of all life, come to our hearts and abide there, and bring with Thee Thy life, Thy light, and the glory of heaven. Amen.

THURSDAY.

AMBITION FOR OUR KING.

"In every place incense shall be offered unto My name, and a pure offering."—Mal. 1: 11.

The world is hearing a lot these days of international relationships. Pan-Germanism, etc. . . . why shouldn't we have a greater emphasis on Pan-Christianity?

To be sure we don't blame earthly monarchs for being eager about their countries and their interests in other countries. We do not blame Americans for being one hundred per cent Americans. But even so, every one should be enthusiastic for the King of kings, and ambitious for His rule in the hearts of men. Christians: let us make ourselves more enthusiastic for the winning of souls to the glory of the King of kings.

Prayer—Dear Heavenly Father, forbid that we shall be laggards in Thy kingdom. Help us to make Thy kingdom our own. Help us to be exalted with it, in the name of Christ. Amen.

FRIDAY.

THE WORK OF PATIENCE.

"Let patience have its perfect work, that ye may be perfect and entire, lacking nothing."—James 1: 4.

Patience is very sadly imperfect. It is hard for us to wait for anything in this tense age. Above all it lacks the love that "bears all things."

Notwithstanding the imperfection of patience, it is one of the most potent factors in the perfecting of character. To whatever extent we are able to exercise it, it shines with a soft, steady and wonderfully harmonizing glow. And, if we are to understand our text, it is the agency that makes perfect, "lacking nothing."

There is much to make us impatient—disappointments, failures, pain, defeats, injuries, losses, waitings, desire to achieve, and delayed results. Yet, whatever our condition, Christ calls upon us to contemplate how beautiful it is to be serene and trustful. As the Holy Spirit may dwell in us we can draw from His infinite resource this dauntless peace and purpose.

Prayer—Forgive us of our impatience, Our Father, who art so patient with us. In the name and patience of Jesus we ask it. Amen.

SATURDAY.

LOFTY RIGHTEOUSNESS.

"Thy righteousness also, O God, is very high."—Psalm 71: 9-19.

Every sincere soul is humbled when he thinks of his sins. His failures are many. His shortcomings are shameful. His weakness and wickedness drag him down to the ground.

How blessed then, to remember that God's righteousness is very high! It is infinitely above the possibility of evil. It is so resplendent, so vast, that He can share it with all the creatures He has made.

No soul, however debased, but can reach up and clasp the righteousness of God, and be lifted by it above all his meanness and foulness, and his despair, and his sin.

Prayer—Thou art never too high for us, O Thou that sittest in the heavens, though we sit in the slime of the pit. For Thy love, O God, can reach from the loftiest height to the most terrible depths. Amen.

—Amos R. Wells.

SUNDAY.

IN OUR OWN COUNTRY.

"For Jesus himself testified, that a prophet hath no honor in his own country."—John 4: 39-45.

The Son of God met with no honor in His own country. He was driven from Nazareth. He was crucified in Jerusalem. And if He, the world's Redeemer, was thus ill-treated by the

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D., Pastor.

A RICH HERITAGE.

By REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D.

[Preached by the sixth pastor of the Suffolk Christian Church upon the occasion of its 76th anniversary.]

Our Suffolk Christian Church was established in November, 1860. So rich is our heritage I deem it worthwhile to review a few things in the history of our church. When the government of the United States was thirteen years old, Rev. James O'Kelly and about thirty other ministers began the formation of the Christian Church. That was 144 years ago. In the year 1794, two years later, they met at Old Lebanon Church, in Surry County, Virginia, and adopted the principles for which our church has stood from that day to this. At that time they numbered about 1,000 members, scattered well over Virginia and North Carolina.

Fifty-three years later, in 1847, the "Southern Christian Association" was organized to embrace all of the smaller organizations and conferences. This gave place to the "Southern Christian Convention" which was organized in Alamance County, North Carolina, in October, 1856, at Union Chapel. Rev. Edwin W. Beale, whose name is well known by many in this congregation was one of the lay delegates to that Convention. The Rev. Dr. W. B. Wellons, who later became the founder and first pastor of this church, was one of the leading spirits in the organization of that Convention, and became its first president.

May I quote from the words of an Eastern Virginia Christian Conference minister, Rev. R. H. Holland, grandfather of Dr. Gilmer G. Holland, of Holland, Virginia, a passage which will show something of the spirit with which our forefathers worked in this great Church of ours in the days before the Suffolk Christian Church was organized. "I was in company with a number of delegates to the first Southern Christian Convention which was to meet at Union Chapel, Alamance County, North Carolina. Among the number present there were the aged and venerable ministers, Uriah Rawls, and Mills Barrett. On our way we stopped at the well known, and popular "Yarboro House" in Raleigh. During our short and pleasant stay there Dr. Wellons secured the accommodating proprietor a large and convenient "Upper room," and proposed a short season of prayer and a pleasant interchange of thought about the contemplated work before us, that we might arrange and systematize our efforts, and work understandingly—We thought the circumstances of the occasion, the business that had called old and infirm veterans of the cross from their homes, was of too much importance to enter into unaided, or without asking and having some assurance of Divine wisdom, direction, and strength.

"Our deliberations together for the good of our Zion, the solemnities of that hour, the pleasant and sacred emotions that came over me as we entered that room, and as the tender, mellowing, yet solemn tones of Dr. Wellons' voice was heard, are still fresh in my memory. When he reverted to the fact of our separation from our families, the laying aside our business, and our cares, and our starting out on a grand mission to convene on such an occasion without a precedent in our history, and none before so fraught with such weighty considerations, we felt the need of a short season of prayer—of holy communion with God, importunate pleading for assisting grace, and the evoking of the Divine direction, in this time of special need. Whereupon the Rev. Uriah Rawls, the aged servant of God, decrepid by affliction, led us in a most fervent, feeling and solemn prayer . . .

"In my imagination I can now see Dr. Wellons as he led us, and as we ascended the stairs, as he opens the door, as he then stood up in our midst with his manly form, in his peculiar posture, easy gestures, and his well known voice broke the silence of that hour, as he, in a short and appropriate speech, spoke of the object of the meeting and how we should feel, and act. And well do I recollect as Rev. Uriah Rawls, that old veteran of the cross, with his whitened locks, stood up to pray (as he could not kneel from the effects of disease) as his face was turned heaven-ward, and his uplifted hands all distorted and drawn by severe affliction, were held in earnest, holy pleading, and his strong and well modulated voice greeted our listened ears, in simply holy utterance, and "as our devout solicitation went up to Him who heareth and answereth prayer, and a new inspiration was gathered from that sacred hour."

I have just read you a very interesting page from the Life and Labors of W. B. Wellons by J. W. Wellons and R. H. Holland. This passage interested me because of the many things I observed from it: (1) The spirit of real earnestness and zeal with which they went about their work, (2) The fact that it meant several days away from their families, and business did not keep these ministers, and lay-delegates from attending the important sessions of the church councils, (3) The fact that since they had a night to spend in a hotel they engaged a reception room, and spent part of it in conference and prayer, (4) The fact that some very old ministers, drawn and suffering from rheumatism and old age were in that company, and (5) The fact that there was at least one very young man, Edwin W. Beale, only 23 years of age, in that company as a regular lay delegate, and considered one of the "leading laymen" of his conference. Thus, our church is living true to a noble tradition when we have both the young and old in important positions in our church. One of those delegates, a very old minister, was the first president of the Eastern Virginia Conference, which was organized at Cypress Chapel, May 25, 26, and 27th, in 1819, which was 38 years prior to that time—that delegate was the Rev. Mills Barrett. Dr. W. B. Wellons was elected the first president of the Southern Christian Convention.

Let us look briefly at one of the important dates in the life of the founder of this Suffolk Christian Church.

Rev. W. B. Wellons, D. D., was born in Sussex County, Virginia, November 9, 1821. He lived to be only a little more than 55 years of age, having died February 16, 1877. He was ordained a Christian minister at a session of the Eastern Virginia Conference held at Cypress Chapel, 1846, at the age of 25 years. He organized Bethlehem Christian Church when he was 26, and he organized the Suffolk Christian Church when he was 38, in October, 1860. Dr. Wellons organized several others of the churches of the Eastern Virginia Conference. At the age of 32 he founded the Female Seminary at Holy Neck, with $2,000 he received at Conference for that purpose; at 34 he became editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN. At 39 he was pastor of Suffolk, Bethlehem, Berea, Cypress Chapel, and Antioch, besides being editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, president of the Southern Convention, a leader in his Conference, and the

The Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

The cry of the little children still comes to the Christian Orphanage for help. Mothers in distress come and plead for the Christian Orphanage to take the little fellows that they cannot provide for. It is often really pathetic. But the orphanage can only do a limited amount of work with the small income it has. The larger the income the more children we could care for.

We took in three little children sometime ago and they were so frail and their little bodies were so thin they looked pathetic. They are bright in mind and active too, and with the proper food and milk to drink, we hope to build them up to be strong and healthy.

We wish we could come to the rescue of all worthy appeals when need and distress has visited a home and the children are left helpless, but it is impossible. We do try and reach the most needy cases where it is a case for the Christian Orphanage to handle.

To invest in children is one of the finest investments we can make.

A CHRISTIAN—WHAT IT MEANS.

Christian of today. Abraham was called "the friend of God." The Scripture tells us that "Jehovah spake unto Moses face to face, as a man speaketh unto his friend." But if this friendship is to be ours, it must be through blameless and holy living. God cannot sin; and if we walk life's way with him, we must make our lives holy, as he is holy. To be a friend with God is life's greatest privilege, and it is worth sacrificing everything else that life holds to attain.

Then think of the blessed hope that God promises to his people. Hope enabled Paul to endure the trials and persecutions of enemies and false brethren and refer to them as "our light affliction, which is for the moment," and then go on to say: "For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." And many other blessings does our heavenly Father have in store for those who accept the responsibilities of the sons of God.

Marriages

THOMASSON-WILLIAMSON.

At the home of the bride near Buffalo Springs, Virginia, at 11:00 A. M., June 14, 1937, Mr. Willie Floyd Thomasson and Miss Estelle King Williamson were united in marriage by the writer, pastor of the bride. The ring ceremony of the Christian Church was used. Mr. Thomasson is the son of S. R. and Grace Gillespe Thomasson of Mecklenburg County, Virginia, and is a banker of Clarksville, Virginia. The bride is the daughter of brother and sister W. P. Williamson. She was graduated from Clarksville High School and Farmville State College, and has taught for several years in her home county. It is just a little over thirty-two years since I officiated at the marriage of the father and mother of Mrs. Thomasson. Just after the marriage and the serving of a delightful luncheon Mr. and Mrs. Thomasson left for an automobile trip through the mountains of North Carolina and Tennessee. On their return they will be at home to their friends in Clarksville, Virginia. May heaven's blessings attend them.

PRICE.

We, the members of the Missionary and Pastor's Aid Society of the First Congregational-Christian Church, of Richmond, Virginia, was made sad by the passing of our friend and co-worker, Mrs. Nolie Price.

She was a charter member of our Missionary and Pastor's Aid Society, and was generous in her giving, untiring in her efforts and a lovable Christian character.

She was the mother of one our most active member, Mrs. Claude W. Woodward, and of three sons. Many members of our church were closely related to her, thus the working together of members for the same cause of God's kingdom bind our hearts together so that when one suffers, we all suffer with them. We know that God doeth all things for our good, therefore, in the going of our friend, we bow in humble submission and hope to meet her again in that home not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we are thankful for the remembrance of her devotion and cherish the memory of her faithful service.

2. That we extend to her family our sincere sympathy and commend them to our loving Father's care.

3. That we try to comfort them and walk in Christian love and fellowship with them.

4. That a copy of this memorial be sent to the bereaved family, a copy to "The Christian Sun," and a copy be placed on our records.

Respectfully submitted,
Mrs. P. J. KERNODLE, through an open door," or "only a change in one's post office address."

Just as the sun in all his state
Illumined the eastern skies,
He passed through glory's morning gate,
And walked in Paradise.

Had he lived until July 31st, he would have celebrated his 83rd birthday. On April 28th appropriate funeral services were held in the Marble Collegiate Church where he had often preached, and his body was laid to rest near the old family home in Dudley, Massachusetts. "They laid the pilgrim in a large upper room, whose window faced to the east and there he slept till break of day and the name of that room was peace."

He rests from his labors, but his works do follow him. The influence of his rare and radiant personality will continue to live among us. The alabaster box may be broken but the perfume of his noble life and work fills the whole house.

When Dr. John Henry Newman ceased preaching at St. Mary's, Oxford, Principal Shairp said: "When the voice ceased and we knew that we should hear it no more, it was as when, to one kneeling at night in the silence of some vast cathedral, the great bell, tolling solemnly overhead, has suddenly gone still."

"My father, my father, the chariot of Israel and the horsemen thereof."

When this "Herald of a Passion" at last hushed his voice and entered heaven, The saints smiled gravely, and they said, 'he's come!'

And Christ came gently with robe and crown,

For Dr. Goodell while the throng knelt down,

He saw King Jesus, they were face to face,

And he knelt a-weeping in that holy place.

world He ransomed, how can we complain if those of our own household neglect us and scorn us?

It is hard indeed when those nearest and dearest to us turn away from us. It is their loss, however, infinitely more their loss than it is ours. Prophets, and all who carry prophetic hearts, are approved of God, and the glory that God gives them is enough.

Prayer—If we are not honored in our own country, Our Saviour let us remember that it is also Thy country. If Thy servants are despised, Thou art despised with them. Amen.

SUN'S PULPIT.

Eastern Virginia Sunday School Convention, a national figure in the cause of Temperance, and besides all this he is reputed to be the founder of the Farmer's Bank of Nansemond, and the promoter of peanut culture in this country. In 1872 he founded the Suffolk Collegiate Institute, and carried the business responsibility of that institution until his death, which institution is in reality the fore-runner of Elon College, of which one of Dr. Wellons' successors was non-resident president for 11 years. The Suffolk Christian Church has always had a very noble part to play in the founding, and life of Elon College, which is to be expected as Suffolk is really the birthplace of our educational work in the Christian Church of the South. We have mentioned just enough of the life of Dr. Wellons to remind us that this church was founded by a very great man, one who was really outstanding in our denomination, a man of great personal power, vision, and foresight.

(Concluded next week.)

What Is A Christian?

D. L. Moody is said during his life-time to have asked over a million people the question, "Are you a Christian?" In a sense there is no other question—unless it be the further inquiry, What is a "Christian?" If we are interested simply in asking who is a Christian, we go to a census, or to a denominational Year Book, for the answer. The denotation (extent) of the term (as the logicians say) is fairly easy to determine—it is the connotation (content) that comes hard. Names are always cheap. Away back in the first century a group of people in Syrian Antioch were "called Christian" either by Jews as a term of scorn, or by Roman officials as a convenient administrative classification. Ever since the best people in the world have been trying to live up to that title. Formalists, imposters, prevaricators, have been many, but in every age the "Jesus Way" has been trodden by men—all too few in number—of whom the world is impelled to say They are the real things!

In the question What is a Christian? we italicize the "is" in order to stress the factual nature of the Christian experience. That alone is genuine living. We deal too much in words and definitions while our nerves are scant of life. sometimes it seems a pity that the term "Christianity" was ever invented, for that is an abstraction, whereas what we ought to mean and want is Christness. (The converted pagan has a sure intuition when he calls a believer a "Jesus man.") In much of the preaching today the person of Christ is not presented, and a drive is noticable to delete the very term "Christian" from many titles or institutions. This is a step not just in the direction of looseness of falseness. Only in Him is the light and the life of men. We need to get beyond adjectives to substantives—finding "Christian" to be Christ.

The early Christians (Christ-men) were by no means perfect, but they exulted in a sense of the realness of their faith in a supreme person. Some of their critics (and it may be secret admirers) called them "crickets of the night," because, whenever their sleep was interrupted, they immediately began to sing. In their consciousness ("con," "sub," or "super" they were in touch with reality—which meant the core of all being. Times, but not truths change. The realities of the first century are the bed-rock of this age. "Christianity" may vary as a theoretic expression, but Christ still calls to men. Jesus of Nazareth "passes by" but never away.

The twelve "Apostles" visualized Christ—we must realize Him. Men of the modern world will never be converted by falsetto notes of sentiment, poses and pagentry, statistical exhibits, church suppers or picnics, but by people who are in the deepest sense Christians. Service and serenity are the end-products of such a vital religious experience. One of the Church Fathers, in a letter to a friend, has left on record a picture of his own evil times, strangely prophetic of conditions today. He tells of robbers on the highways, devastated villages, loathesome lust, famines and floods, crime, corruption, and confusion everywhere. And yet (he continues in his epistle) in the midst of all this riot, bloodshed, and rapine, I see a band of people who are calm, unmoved, serene, and happy in a heaven-fed faith. There are the "Christians," my friend, and I am one of them!

Amid all the rigors and riots, distractions and confusions of modern life we, like the old-time Jesus-men, must know where—in whom—to find reality.

OPPORTUNITY.

They do me wrong who say I come no more
When once I knock and fail to find you in;
For every day I stand outside your door,
And bid you wake and rise to fight and win.

Wail not for precious chances passed away;
Weep not for golden ages on the wane;
Each day I burn the records of the day,
At sunrise every soul is born again.

Laugh like a boy at splendors that have sped,
To vanished joys be blind and deaf and dumb:
My judgments seal the dead past with its dead,
But never bind a moment yet to come.

Though deep in mire, wring not your hands and weep,
I lend my arm to all who say, "I can."
No shamed-faced outcast ever sank so deep
But yet might rise and be again a man.

Dost thou behold thy lost youth all aghast?
Dost reel from righteous retribution's blow?
Then turn from blotted archives of the past
And find the future's pages white as snow.

Art thou a mourner? Rouse thee from thy spell!
Art thou a sinner? Sin may be forgiven;
Each morning gives thee wings to flee from hell.
Each night a star to guide thy feet to heaven.

—HON. WALTER MALONE.

PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

Miss Patie Lee Coghill will leave for her home in Henderson on July 25th for a month's vacation.

Rev. J. F. Morgan, of Rosemont Christian Church (Norfolk) assisted Rev. C. E. Newman in evangelistic meetings last week at Virgilina, Virginia.

Dr. E. A. King and family, of Miami Beach, are spending the months of July and August at Fairview Inn, Fairview, North Carolina. Dr. Kerison Juniper and family of Ormond, Florida, are spending the summer months at Tyron, North Carolina.

THE SUN learns with deep regret of the passing away of Mrs. Warren H. Dennison of Dayton, Ohio, on Friday, July 16th. Mrs. Denison had been an invalid for some time, but at this writing no details as to the immediate cause of her death had been received.

The Norfolk, Suffolk and Wakefield (V a.) Leadership Training Schools for this year will be held October 10-29th, each lasting for one week. The leaders are working hard to make these schools a success. Plan now to attend and to get others to do the same.

Newport Sunday School, near Shenandoah City, and Leakesville, near Luray, Virginia, had successful vacation church schools recently. Newport enrolled 33 and Leakesville, 31. Misses Dorothy Grigsby and Evelyn Ayscue and the pastor, Rev. W. J. Andes, were leaders in the schools.

The friends of Rev. and Mrs. Arnold Slater, of Albemarle, North Carolina, heartily congratulate them upon the arrival of baby Elizabeth West Slater ("Betty," for short) on June 27th. The father states that Betty was most considerate and arrived at 4:20 P. M. on Sunday, instead of at sermon-time Sunday morning.

The Board of Christian Education has just received from the Department of Leadership Training a supply of two pamphlets: "The Price of Being a Leader" and "More and Better Workers." If you would like copies of this material, write to the Board at 514 S. Main Street, Norfolk, Virginia. If the Board can help you in other ways please let them know.

The Epic of the Inner Life—A series of sermons on the problem of suffering in the drama of Job has recently been published by Dr. Elisha A. King, minister of the Community Church Miami Beach, Florida, in a series bearing the imprint of the Personal Help Library. It is an illuminating and helpful interpretation of the great problem faced by Job. These sermons must have been most helpful to the listeners and are clear and stimulating to the reader.

Rev. Miles McLean, of Hampton, Connecticut has accepted a call to the church of Ft. Myers, Florida, his pastorate to begin early in the fall. Mr. McLean is a native of North Carolina, a graduate of the University of North Carolina, and of Yale Divinity School. Mrs. McLean is a graduate of the Connecticut State College for Women, at New London. The parsonage at Ft. Myers was originally built as an auditorium and apartment combined. This is being rebuilt into a two apartment house, and the pastor and his wife will occupy the first floor apartment.

Gardner T. Gillette, son of Dr. and Mrs. E. C. Gillette, and Miss Ann Merrill, of Jacksonville, were married at the Church of the Good Shepherd of Jacksonville on the evening of July 10th, Dr. Gillette sharing with the rector of the church in the ceremony. The young people chose for their wedding trip a tour of the historic places in Virginia, and the scenic drives of the Virginia Valley. The evening before the wedding Dr. and Mrs. Gillette celebrated their thirty-fifth wedding anniversary.

The Rev. C. Ramsey Swain, Hillsboro, North Carolina, and recent graduate of Vanderbilt University (B. D. and M. A. degrees), also graduate of Elon College, was guest speaker at Holland Christian Church, June 27th, using as his topic: "The Christian Answer to Life's Inevitables." He also preached in the evening for Dr. J. G. Truitt at Suffolk Christian Church. Mr. Swain left the next week to do Student Summer Service work in the Congregational Church, Corbin, Kentucky, where it is expected he will remain as active pastor at the close of the summer months. He was the roommate and close friend of the pastor of the Holland Church during college and seminary days and it was a great pleasure to have him visit there.

From New Hampshire comes the following: A monument has been recently erected in front of the Wolfboro (N. H.) Church and dedicated to Elder Mark Ferrald who founded that church, Kittery First Church, and many of the churches in this section. Three of the Portsmouth deacons went up and reported that it was a very pleasing and appropriate service. Elder Ferrald's great-grand son gave the monument, which is a boulder with a tablet bearing Elder Ferrald's profile and name. Rev. George Galeucia of South Berwick Christian Church (Me.) gave the address and Rev. Archie Webb, a former Wolfboro pastor, conducted the dedicatory service. The Wolfboro Young People's Society paid for the work connected with setting up the boulder.

VALLEY CONFERENCE TO MEET.

The Virginia Valley Central Congregational-Christian Conference will meet at Mt. Olivet (R), located 3 miles east of McGaheysville, Virginia, on the Spotswood Trail or Highway No. 4. Rev. Roy D. Coulter is the pastor, and anyone desiring information as to the location of the church may write him at New Market, Virginia. The Conference will convene at 10:00 A. M. on August 4th and at 9: A. M. on August 5th. The Wednesday (Aug. 4) night session will be in charge of the Youth Fellowship of the Conference under the leadership of Miss Thelma Morris.

Since the Conference only meets for the two days it will be necessary to make a very concentrated program including Committee reports and inspirational addresses. The President, Rev. R. L. Williamson, is hoping for a large attendance and for an interesting program. The Program will appear in the next issue of THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

REV. W. J. ANDES,
Secretary.

HOLLAND CHURCH ANNIVERSARY.

The Holland Christian Church will observe its Eighty-Fourth Anniversary Sunday, July 25th, at 11:00 A. M., with a special service. Dr. James H. Lightbourne, one of the former pastors will deliver the Anniversary Address. All former pastors, former members and present members and friends are cordially invited to be present. A special invitation is extended to all the Ministers in this Conference to attend.

Every man should be able to give a reason for the hope that is in him; and I do not believe the man lives who can give a reason for his hope beyond the grave, who is a stranger to the Blood.—D. L. Moody.

THE PRESENT SITUATION IN THE RURAL CHURCH.

Attendance—A fair estimate based on experience shows that approximately twenty-five per cent of the members of our rural churches attend. It is often found that more young people than adults are present. In some sections the attendance of both young and old is small, while in others it is larger. The condition and location of a community are factors to be considered. We are all well aware of the lack of a sufficient number of active members to carry on a complete church program.

Religious Life—Each church seems to have its nucleus of faithful, interested members. But even of those who attend regularly, it appears that a considerable proportion "do not expect their religion to do them any greater or immediate good." One wonders if they ever really pray or truly worship. There is certainly a dearth of private or family devotions and personal religious living. Scripture reading is sadly neglected. It seems difficult for the churches to hold their own families, to make their message carry from one generation to the next, and more difficult for them to reach those whose family background has not been religious.

Fundamentally the rural folks are largely spiritual-minded. They mean to be religious. But due to social and economic conditions the average rural person does not see the church functioning to meet his needs of every-day life. The methods of the church and clergy have not changed enough to meet the increasingly new demands of a new age. A part of the problem is intellectual. New wine is needed for the bottles. A new approach is needed to get people concerned about being tight with God. The church was once the center of the social, charitable, and religious life of the rural community. But these are being lost to other agencies, except the religious life. Deeper sincerity in devotional periods, greater enthusiasm and depth of conviction are needed.

Moral Consistency—Situations vary largely, of course. The salt of the earth is still to be found among the followers of Christ. But compromises have crept in. People no longer want to be called "good." Goodness, beauty, and the truth are regarded too lightly. Those in close contact with varying groups of men say church membership goes a very short way as evidence of integrity, sobriety, and purity of heart and motive.

Breadth and Reality of Service—Modern convenience, inventions and communications have helped the rural population to develop a new concept of life. This has turned some away from the church. About one-tenth of the membership are ready and anxious to serve. Some have caught the broader vision of service and stewardship. To have taken the church vows and placed one's name on its roll is coming to mean more than "my church." It is more than a social distinction. It is more than listening to a "hell-fire-and-damnation" sermon. It means the complete application of Christian principles in all areas of experience. Such a concept of service demands that more time be given to Kingdom work.

If the church is to give the broad community service now urged upon it, and at the same time to be effective in its spiritual ministry, the amount of work which needs to be done is prodigious. A minister serving three or four charges can hardly do a thorough bit of work in pastoral service, preaching, teaching, recreation, boys and girls clubs, farmers meetings, etc., at the same time. It may be that some experimentation should be made in leaving off old responsibilities for new. Some Sunday school work, for example, seems to be ineffective, that the concomitant training seems to be away from Christian ideals, not in their direction.

Vision and Training of Leadership—There is reason for hope here. Conferences and training schools of the highest type are being held to which larger numbers of leaders go for instruction. People are anxious to learn. The "other sheep" are hungry and ready to be fed. Improvement in social and religious life follows upon the heels of leadership training. The great need for the country church is a consistent program to educate both clergy laity to the fact that the country field is an important and honorable field of service. Younger men with better training and broader social vision are appearing in positions of leadership. It is time. It has been difficult to secure an evangelist who had any fair understanding of the intellectual difficulties of modern times, and any grasp of the social implications of the spirit and teachings of Jesus. Much of the preaching has been about issues which were live ones two thousand years ago.

Attitudes of Young People—Their attitudes all too often reflect those of their parents, which are unfavorable. The parents are largely responsible for lack of attendance, non-participation, misunderstanding of present-day social issues, lack of religious ideals and philosophy of life on the part of the young. When encouraged they are anxious to be helpful and are seeking to practice the presence of God and serve Him.

Young people always respond to the leadership of one who is capable, farsighted, tactful and approachable. They are ready to do any amount of work under wise supervision. They are anxious to explore and pioneer when the challenge is made and the vision supplied. But a larger number of genuinely concerned young people are needed. Many attend church for social reasons. Some take part in their meetings, but give little thought to the topic under discussion. There are fine exceptions, little groups who are growing in Christian life and influence, but the larger number seem all to little touched by anything which could be called a vital and intelligent and growing Christian experience.

Attitudes Toward Interdenominational Cooperation—The spirit of unity and cooperation is growing. Tactful approach and education are necessary. Many plead for consolidation of all churches. A United Church of Christ can stand in the face of any onslaught of adverse forces. A divided church of the world will surely fall.

Finance—Economic insecurity and misunderstanding of Christian Stewardship has created a bad situation. Too few members bear the brunt of church finance. Each one should be taught to give. Systematic giving is greatly needed in most cases. The Every-Member Canvass and weekly envelope are preferred above any of the older methods.

(Note: This is in part the finding of the Rural Church Committee of the National Ruritan Club, compiled by Rev. Carl R. Key).

At the time of the religious meetings held in Dublin, Ireland, by the evangelists, Moody and Sankey, any effort to burlesque their work was met with marked disfavor.

It is told that during a pantomime at one of the Dublin theatres, a clown entered and said, "I feel rather Moody." His companion rejoined, "I feel rather Sankeymonious." Upon this, the gallery hissed them, and then, not content with a negative form of expressing respect for the Christian evangelists, someone started "Hold the Fort, for I am Coming," and according to an English journal, the whole assembly in the higher gallery joined in the chorus, and the curtain fell until the hymn was concluded.—Exchange.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgement and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

SUPERINTENDENTS' PROBLEMS.

At a recent Sunday School Convention a leading superintendent talked concerning the problems of superintendents. He discussed several of those problems. No attempt is made here to follow his outline or suggestions. These people who carry the responsibilities of religious education in our churches certainly have problems and deserve the prayers and cooperation of those who believe in the Christian religion.

One of the problems is to secure effective officers and teachers. Whether these teachers are elected by the school or appointed by the superintendent makes little difference, for it is the job of the superintendent to see that there are workers in the school who do their work well. If the secretary does not keep his record right, reports cannot be made of the work accomplished and it is difficult to discover whether the school is making progress or going backward. There needs to be a treasurer who will handle funds in such a manner as to keep the confidence of the school and those from whom purchases are made. But most important is the corps of teachers who are to present the facts of the Christian religion in such a way as to win the allegiance of all to the Christ and His Church. It is the business of the Superintendent to guide the teachers, so that there is a continuous process of growth on the part of the pupils. Every promotion from one group to another should indicate progress in the development of the child's life. Hence, every teacher should know his station along the highway and what he is supposed to do. It is the business of the Superintendent to inspire the teachers so they will want to study, and then aid them in getting to the training schools and finding other methods of development. Finding and developing trained leaders is no easy task. It is the business of a school man and every Superintendent should feel the responsibility which is his and seek in every possible way to accomplish his best.

A second problem of the Superintendent concerns literature. Teachers and pupils should have the best possible literature for study. Naturally, they look to the Superintendent for guidance in this field. Many of our churches do not use our own literature. They say it does not meet their needs. It sometimes happens that they do not know all the materials published by our church. The Board of Christian Education, at 514 S. Main Street, Norfolk, Virginia, is glad to help schools with this problem. Superintendents will find the Board to be very friendly and may be able to get the needed help. Our Baptist and Methodist friends seem to have little difficulty in getting their literature used in their school. They build strong denominations and one reason is that their people know about their church and what it is undertaking to do. They are not content to know simply about the fundamentals of Christianity, for these principles are to be practiced in large working groups within the church. If our church is to become large and effective, we too must learn to work cooperatively and use the literature produced by our group.

A third problem of the Superintendent relates to worship. It is his business either to lead the Sunday School worship service or to get someone else to do it. Many children and young, as well as a large number of adults, never go to any other worship service other than that of the Sunday school. Unless the Superintendent can direct this worship effectively, a large number of American Protestants will never engage in cooperative worship.

All the training schools offer courses in worship. Books, periodicals and magazines are on the market to aid in this work. The Board of Christian Education can also be helpful by lending material. Superintendents who recognize their opportunities along this line can do much for the betterment of Christian experience, but those who fail to study and plan this phase of their work will never develop the souls of men as they should.

In order to accomplish these things it is necessary for the Superintendent to have the cooperation of his Sunday school. He needs to be a good organizer and education is too much for one man. It must be shared by the group. Officers, teachers, and pupils need to cooperate and must do so if effective work is to be done.

The other problems of superintendents can find a solution, if he can have the cooperation of the entire school.

BUILDING A BIG CHURCH.

Building a big church in the Southeast is the business of Congregationalists and Christians in this area. Our leaders apparently have not been bitten by "the big bug." We have been too content to appreciate the presence of God "where two or three are gathered together" rather than to work at the idea of making disciples of all the nations. Indeed, progress does not depend entirely upon numbers for God and one man are still the majority. But greater progress can be made with greater numbers.

There is no reason why Congregational and Christian Churches in the Southeast should stay little. There are many reasons why they should grow to be large. Littleness is nothing to be proud of. Growth is a thing greatly to be desired. Growing churches, like growing people, indicate health and give promise of the future.

This writer would like greatly for members of churches, as well as pastors and leaders, to get the idea that there is no sin in developing big churches, undertaking big programs, and accomplishing big tasks. He would not have them undertake the totally impossible, fail, and become discouraged, but he certainly would encourage them to undertake more than they can accomplish with their own strength. This will throw them back on the resources of God, which will develop a higher type of religion as well as bring success.

This is a day of bigness in everything except the Church. We have big farms, big houses, big automobiles, big schools, but seemingly take some pride in having little churches. This ought not to be so. These little churches ought to grow to be big churches, and this can be accomplished if we set ourselves steadfastly to the task and stay steadily at it under the leadership of God.

DISCUSSION WELCOMED.

A correspondent this week says he wishes that the columns of the paper were open for the discussion of Evangelism. He makes some fine suggestions of his own on this subject. The editor is glad to say that such a discussion will please him greatly. He will be delighted to hear what laymen and ministers have to say concerning the matter. All he asks is that the discussion be positive, not critical. We need to think together about our united work. One editor, or a group of editors, cannot have all the good ideas. They should not. And they do not. Many of the members of the churches have fine ideas about all phases of church work. "The Christian Sun needs these thoughts in order to develop not only the paper but the Church. Think things through, friends, and write them for your paper. And thank you a thousand times.

EASTERN N. C. CONVENTION.

The Eastern North Carolina Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention met in annual session at Fullers Chapel Christian Church on Tuesday, July 13, 1937. Rev. R. T. Grissom presided and Mrs. M. B. Newman did the work of secretary. Twenty Sunday schools were represented. Eighteen Sunday schools and four Christian Endeavor societies made reports.

The church entertained royally by serving both noonday and evening meals on the church lawn and opening their homes to those who wished to stay during the night.

During the morning session, according to the program, President Grissom brought a message, Dr. L. E. Smith spoke on "The Pastor's Relation to the Sunday School," Rev. J. Everette Neese discussed "Music in the Sunday School," and Mrs. Neese lead in a demonstration of worship in the Sunday school.

In the afternoon Mr. R. C. Ausborn of Liberty (Vance) discussed the Superintendent's problems, Rev. J. Lee Johnson presented the characteristics of a good Sunday school teacher, and Mrs. E. M. Carter lead a discussion on "The Problems of the Sunday School."

The evening service was in charge of the Youth Fellowship and consisted of a worship service, a dramatization entitled "The Symbol of a Cross," presented by the young people of Liberty (Vance), and an address by Rev. T. J. Whitehead, former president of the North Carolina Christian Endeavor Union.

The Banner for Progress was won by Amelia. Two new banners were presented to the convention by Bro. Neville of Chapel Hill. The Atkinson Banner goes to the church giving the most money in proportion to membership to missions, the Orphanage, Elon College, and the Board of Christian Education. This banner was won by Wake Chapel. The Neville Attendance Banner goes to the school having the highest average attendance per membership, and was presented to the Henderson Sunday School.

The convention showed signs of progress and a hopeful spirit seemed to be in the minds of those present. Next year the convention will meet with Amelia Christian Church.

Officers were elected as follows: President, Rev. J. Everette Neese; Vice-President, Mr. J. Edward Branch; Recording Secretary, Mrs. M. B. Newman; Corresponding Secretary, Miss Susie Hight, and Treasurer, Mr. C. H. Stephenson.

"WHERE THE RACE OF MEN GO BY."

It is early Sunday morning and I sit by America's Highway No. 1 and watch "The race of men" go racing by. A cool spring and fresh fruit, with an invitation to rest a while, inspired Sam Walter Foss to write the beautiful poem from which the title of this article is taken. He was thinking of the types of people who pass—"They are good, they are bad, as good and as bad as I."

This morning my meditation turns not alone to the type of people who pass, but also to the speed with which they go. They are white, they are black, they are rich, they are poor, but whatever their station in society, they move with terrific speed toward some unseen goal. Fifty years ago, ten miles per hour was rapid travel, except by train. Twenty years ago, forty miles was fast enough for anyone. But now those who travel the highways feel that they are losing time unless they make a mile a minute.

This change of speed must inevitably change the whole of life. Greater distances are travelled. Wanderlust is indulged more often than formerly, and greater knowledge is available for everyone. The human nervous system is geared to a higher pitch and a more rapid pace. Whether the nervous system will stand the strain is still to be determined. Many have cracked under it. After years of adjustment, a new generation may be able to live normally, but undoubtedly the present generation will suffer seriously. This is true both of those who "fly through the air with the greatest ease" and those who sit by the highway of life and try to be a friend to man.

What is the destination of these men who go rushing by? Perhaps it is a home awaiting the return of parents or children. It may be relatives in some place, who have not seen their families for a long while. Business may be calling. More likely the Goddess of Pleasure is calling these early Sunday morning speeders to some resort. After all, it is the destination which matters most, and not the speed at which they go. But all too often, apparently, there is no worthy goal to which they go. They are here today and gone tomorrow.

In a little while this revery will end and the writer will join the procession of those who are going, going, going. In a new kirk by the side of the road he will stop to worship. Only a few will be there, but those who are will see more clearly the ultimate goal toward which they go and will move with happier, steadier hearts, as they again join the procession of those who go rushing by.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Rev. R. H. Peel and his wife and daughter Miss Katherine of Barker, New York, arrived in Nansemond County, Thursday, July 15th, for a few day's visit with relatives. Mr. Peel is a native of this County, and was formerly a member of the Eastern Virginia Conference where he held pastorate for several years. For a number of years he was a pastor in New York state, and retired from the active pastorate two years ago, after a period of continuous service covering forty-two years. He is now living on a farm near Barker, New York.

On Friday afternoon the relatives of Mr. Peel gave a picnic at Ocean Beach to give an opportunity for the members of the family to have a brief visit. Eighty-two persons were present and enjoyed the delicious and bounteous supper. About ninety relatives live within easy reach of Suffolk, and only 13 were unable to be present. This is a fine record and shows the high esteem in which this minister is held, and is a manifestation of the great appreciation of his presence in the community. It really was a great occasion.

Mr. Peel has made a commendable contribution to the Christian church by his faithful ministry and consecrated life. He is held in the highest esteem wherever he has labored as a pastor. His attitude towards other ministers has always been friendly and fraternal, never jealous of their gifts nor envious of their places of honor. Willing to labor wherever the providence of God might lead him, he has been faithful to his high calling. Such a life and such service deserves a larger appreciation than is usually accorded one in this life. He belongs to a family distinguished by church loyalty and high standards of personal character. Liberty Spring church knows the value of this large and influential family, and the Christian denomination has been greatly enriched by the contributions made to the kingdom of God through sacrificial service.

Although past three score and ten years, he appears to be in good health at this time, and his heart yearns to spend more years in the Christian ministry. He is capable of rendering efficient service, in spite of the number of years, and some church should have the benefit of his ministry and counsel. It would be fine for some church to secure his services.

It is fine to show a spirit of appreciation to people while they are living. A few flowers and happy occasions make life sweeter, while one is able to enter into the spirit of the fellowship. Flowers on a casket cannot be appreciated by the dead. But a kindness rendered, a friendly gesture expressed by a good dinner, a gathering of friends for fellowship and social intercourse—all these enrich the living and remain as precious memories. It is so much better to speak a kind word than to give expression to acrimonious criticism. A helping hand is much better than a vicious kick.

If people of all classes in every community would support the church of Jesus Christ as faithfully as the people who attended this family picnic supper, and live as friendly as they live, Congress might adjourn for the summer, the President could go on another fishing trip, John L. Lewis could call off the strikes and disband his labor organizations, and the country would be at peace with itself, and prosperity would blaze forth with unexpected glory. This country needs more of this plain old-fashioned living. And this comes only through the preaching of the Gospel of Jesus Christ and the loyal support of the Church by consistent living. It is fitting that such an occasion should have the recognition of a church paper.

EASTERN NORTH CAROLINA SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION.

There is still an interest in Sunday school conventions in our church. The Eastern North Carolina Convention met Thursday, July 13, with Fullers Chapel Christian Church. Fullers Chapel is located near Henderson, N. C., and it is a good, strong country church. It is the church in which Miss Pattie Lee Coghill grew up. Her parents are still members and enthusiastic supporters of the church. It is always a pleasure to visit this congregation and in this community. Fullers Chapel was among the first country churches to subscribe its quota in the College Campaign. Rev. E. M. Carter is the pastor.

The convention was a day and night session. The program was planned by Rev. R. T. Grissom of Buies Creek, President. Everyone appearing on the program was present and performed his duties well with the exception of Dr. S. C. Harrell. Dr. Harrell was at that time engaged in evangelistic services with Mt. Auburn Church. The program dealt with topics calculated to increase interest in the Sunday school and to multiply its efficiency and usefulness.

The President in his message urged upon the Sunday schools represented faithfulness and loyalty to the church and great diligence in winning individuals to Christ. After all, this is the purpose of the Sunday school—to inform children and adults about God, about Christ, and about the Christian message as contained in the holy scriptures and the messages of the prophets of the churches through the years, and ultimately to bring them to a definite decision for Christ and His Church. The Sunday school has rendered a great service to Christianity and to the church. The writer spoke briefly about the pastor's relation to the Sunday school, emphasizing the fact that the pastor is just as definitely the pastor of the Sunday school as he is the church and that he should have constant contact and intimate relations with the Sunday school in all of its work and in all of its departments, reminding all present that the devotional element of the Sunday school is essential to the discovery and the culture of the individual Christian life. Rev. J. Everette Neese of Henderson, N. C., brought to the convention a message on "Music in the Sunday school," urging and demonstrating the significance of the devotional use of hymns in the opening and closing exercises of the Sunday school. In the absence of Mrs. Neese who was to have brought a message on "Worship in the Sunday School," Mr. Neese also presented suggestions that would make our worship periods more impressive and more effective. Rev. J. Lee Johnson of Fuquay Springs, N. C., presented "The Teacher in the Sunday School." Brother Johnson is a thorough student of the Bible and in his message enjoined upon those who teach, themselves, to become masters of the earth. He gave a very effective message. Rev. F. C. Lester of the Board of Christian Education and Editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, together with Miss Emily Carleton, Editor of the Young People's Page, Miss Hyde, the assistant pastor of the First Church, Norfolk, and his mother, arrived for the afternoon service. Mr. Lester is faithful in attending all young people's meetings and is a very helpful spirit in such conventions. The convention was glad to have Miss Carleton and Miss Hyde with them. They always add to a program.

It is the opinion of the writer that in our Sunday School Conventions there are possibilities of great good and further, that we are not using these organizations to the greatest advantage. Such organizations afford excellent opportunities for instruction to superintendents, departmental workers, and leaders of organized classes. Many years ago there were a number of Sunday school experts who could be had for the annual meetings of conventions and other young people's organizations. These experts were used with profit. Following this period of intensive instruction on annual occasions, there was a decided growth in our schools and evidences of efficient work. Of recent years, interest in such meetings has subsided. The work of our Sunday school is not aggressive. In some sections we are losing instead of gaining. We lose in the face of increased population. Our opportunities and responsibilities are greater, but our efforts seem to be less aggressive and less effective.

Holding one-day, instead of two-day sessions has, in the minds of some, minimized the importance of the convention and lessened its appeal. It is unquestionably true that a very good piece of instruction in all lines of Sunday School endeavor cannot be done in one day, particularly when interests other than the Sunday school are always clammering for a place on the program. They get in, whether the makers of the program assign them time or not. Personally, I think it is time to consider the importance of the Sunday school, its present needs, its future program, and begin to prepare to meet these needs and to encourage the whole program for Sunday school work as we face the future.

The suggestion was made that the next session of the Eastern North Carolina Sunday School Convention be extended over a two-day period. This suggestion is good, provided a constructive program along Sunday school work is planned and that efficient leaders be secured for the presentation of vital subjects appearing on the program. I am for an enlarged program and an increased interest in our Sunday school work.

SOPHIA PARISH.

We have conducted two meetings (preaching missions) in the Sophia Parish during the late spring and early summer, and one more to hold. The first was held with the First Christian Church, High Point, North Carolina. The services continued for two weeks. The preaching was by the pastor during the first week. Rev. C. E. Gerringer came to us for the second week. Three members were received into the fellowship of the church. We are to baptize, by immersion, the third Sunday.

Beginning the first Sunday in June, Brother Gerringer assisted us in a meeting at Sophia Church. The attendance and cooperation encouraged us. This meeting resulted in added interest and the acceptance of five new members (four by confession and one by recommendation). And we had a surprise on the Fourth of July, instead of a decrease in Sunday school, we had an increase.

The Flint Hill Church has planned to conduct an evangelistic campaign, beginning July 11th, to continue through July 18th. Rev. C. E. Gerringer will preach for us in this meeting. He seems to appeal to our people.

The pastor of the Sophia Parish would like to consider one church, which may anticipate calling a pastor, to be added to, or be served, under the same ministry, if there is an opening in the Western North Carolina Conference near enough to the Sophia Church. He could give pastoral service and conduct preaching and worship services two Sundays per month.

This is not to violate any grouping plan which may be worked out by the Conference. I am in accord with such a plan.

ADULT STUDY BOOKS
FOR 1937-38.*

By JOHN LESLIE LOBINGER.

[The books and pamphlets mentioned in this article are publications of the Missionary Education Movement, the Council of Women for Home Missions, and the Committees on the United Study of Foreign Missions, separately or in cooperation. Any or all may be purchased from the Pilgrim Press, 14 Beacon St., Boston, or 19 S. La Salle St., Chicago.]

Three missionary themes will challenge our attention during the year ahead: The Church and Rural America, World Peace, and the Moslem World. These subjects are chosen not by our own denomination alone, but by a score of denominations in cooperation. Each year a homeland theme and a foreign theme are selected and sometimes a third that is neither (or both) home and foreign. Interdenominational committees choose authors and plan reading books, study courses and leaders' guides and these become the product and property of our united Protestantism.

Why do we consider these three subjects? The rural situation has been much to the fore of late, catching the attention of the city as well as the country. Conditions and problems change with the years and their effects are felt on the rural church. The future of the country church and the rebuilding of rural America constitute a major home missionary question.

World Peace is a perennial issue. In the midst of our upsidedown world one wonders when the future will spell war, when peace. We have not always recognized the intimate connection between missions and world peace but we need to be brought face to face with this relationship.

The Moslem World is a changing world. Those who knew it a generation ago do not necessarily know it today, for many of the nations in which Islam is strong have changed almost beyond belief. A quarter of a billion people call themselves followers of Mohammed. This is a vast section of the world about which we need to be informed. Christianity has touched it for centuries, sometimes as an enemy, sometimes as a friend, and today it continues its contact with new problems and difficulties and opportunities.

These are the themes which the cooperating denominations have chosen for study during the year ahead. And the materials?

Rebuilding Rural America, by Mark A. Dawber, is the reading and study book on the first theme. Mr. Dawber is Superintendent of the Department of Rural Work of the Methodist Episcopal Church. In eight chapters he discusses the changing countryside and the church. More church members in America are engaged in agriculture than in anything else and 75 per cent of all the churches in the United States are rural. This in itself is justification for study. The book touches on the cooperative movement, church federation, the Larger Parish plan, rural religious education, actual and potential leadership. It magnifies the rural church and paints a program for its future.

When this is used by a study group the leader will want the leader's guide, The Church and American Rural Life (25 cents), by Benson Y. Landis. This is planned for a three months' course so that it can be used as an elective by adult classes of the Church School. Dr. Landis is a rural sociologist, Secretary of the American Country Life Association, and connected with the Federal Council of Churches.

World Peace and Christian Missions (35 cents), by Harold E. Fey, is a new six-session unit—the first of the new "Study and Action Series" for adults, planned by the Missionary Education Movement. Mr. Fey, a former missionary to the Philippines, is now Secretary of the Fellowship Reconciliation. This is not simply a course on peace: it goes deeper than that to show how intertwined are the peace movement and the missionary enterprise. It portrays Christianity and nationalism as rivals, refutes the claim that missions is tied up with imperialism, and stresses the contribution of Christian missions to the world community idea.

What is This Moslem World? (cloth, $1.00; paper, 60 cents), by Charles R. Watson; and Mecca and Beyond (cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents), by Edward M. and Rose W. Dodd, are the two major books of the year on the Moslem world. By design the former is more advanced, the latter more popular. Either may be used as a text by a study group, but it is better to have copies of each available for reference. Dr. Watson is President of the American University at Cairo, Egypt. Dr. and Mrs. Dodd have done outstanding missionary service.

ILLS AND THE CURE.

There are many things in the world today which are calculated to give us grave concern. The conflicts between labor and capital, the constant increase in the manufacture of implements of war, the international jealousies and misunderstandings, the enlarging use of intoxicants, the increase of crime, and the breakdown of family life—all are indications of modern trends which threaten the peace and happiness of the world. If we should permit ourselves to dwell upon these modern trends, we would all tend to become pessimists. Indeed, I would be a weeping Jeremiah if I did not believe that there is a remedy for society.

In the World War, President Woodrow Wilson called our American youth to arms and across the seas four million strong. He called them with the slogan—"We must make the world safe for democracy." What we need in our new emergency in America, where the dangers are from within rather than from without, is a democracy which is safe for the world. If we are to have such a democracy, our citizens must be intelligent and trustworthy. We are spending millions of money to make our citizens intelligent. Never has the world seen such another adventure in education as is found in our great public school system—from the little one-room school houses to the great universities. We are discovering, however, that crime grows apace, and that educated criminals are a greater menace than those who are illiterate. Education alone will not guarantee us a democracy which is safe for the world. All our citizens might be as highly educated as Aaron Burr, and yet democracy would fail. We might have miraculous power to transform the machines of war into implements of peace, or alcohol and narcotics into water and harmless drugs as a recent play by H. G. Wells shows, but unless there were some power to change the characters and motivations of people and to make them trustworthy, their selfish civilization would prove a failure.

We believe that the Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ is the one dynamic that can change men and can rightly motivate them. As the Apostle Paul says, "I am not ashamed of the Gospel: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jews first, and also to the Greek." What the Gospel will do for the individual, it will do for society. Our need in America, where we have so many ills and so many nostrums offered as a cure, is that we as a people become Christian not merely in name but in reality. But no nation was ever made Christian by attempting to make it Christian in the cities alone. The crying need of the hour is to make the people of America Christian at the sources. We cannot have clear and beautiful rivers from muddy springs. We cannot have a Christian America unless the sources of society are Christian.

The country communities are the sources of society, because here a large number of children are born and reared.—Missionary Review.

A LETTER TO THE EDITOR.

Dear Mr. Editor:

Over against the interrogation closing the last paragraph of Mr. W. H. Freeman's article, in your June 17th number, "How Shall We Reach Them?"—the unchurched people who have no interest in their own Christian welfare, something should not only be said, but done.

We have been hoping that a symposium, or forum, would be opened on this very, very important problem, one of the most important confronting the church of Christ, and the kingdom of God.

The problem will have to be solved in very large part by our Christian laymen the greatest undeveloped resource of spiritual power—by men like Mr. Freeman, men whose lips have been touched by the fire from off the altar; whose hearts have been visited by the Spirit of God and thus given the spiritual urge to pass it on to their fellow-men. John 15th, "I am the vine, ye are the branches." The branches are the fruit bearing parts of the vine. Therein is the great responsibility of discipleship. "Herein is my Father glorified that ye bear much fruit: so shall ye be my disciples." "Ye are my friends if ye do whatsoever I command you." We haven't the space to enlarge upon these references. Our apathy and indifference amount to a virtual denial of the duty, and the responsibility, placed upon us, assumed by us as followers of our Lord and Master.

The very excellent article in your July 8th number by Mr. J. J. Carter, is suggestive. The apathy of many churches—the observed absence of the Holy Spirit, too little prayer and testimony; and consequently the absence of the bubbling over joy characteristic of life in Christ.

Was the leaven we were given not good? Has the salt lost its saltiness? Has the light been so long under some sort of a bushel that it has gone out? It is true that the lethargy and the coldness of many religious people give the lie to their profession, and the ungodly worldling says those people have nothing more to be elated over than we have. And yet it is as true as ever that souls that have come into saving contact with the Christ of God whose shed blood in redemption and salvation from sins sends them forth freed souls on their way singing His praises evermore. A soul whose sins have been forgiven and blotted out by and through the crucified Son of God cannot keep still. The story must be told to others even in the face of prison, or death.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church"

MISS EMILY CARLETON, Editor, 541 Osceola Ave., Winter Park, Fla.

THE YOUTH FELLOWSHIP.

The Eastern Virginia Youth Fellowship held its eleventh annual meeting July 13, 1937, at Bethlehem Christian Church, using as the theme "Building a Program for Christian Youth." There was approximately one hundred and twenty-five, representing sixteen churches.

The Executive Committee recommended that the name be changed to the "Eastern Virginia Pilgrim Fellowship," because the National Fellowship, to which the Eastern Virginia Youth Fellowship belongs, is "The Pilgrim Fellowship," also that Pilgrim has a greater meaning than Youth. The name was changed.

Miss Irene Cotten discussed our Missionary Program for next year. She told of materials which would be of much benefit to each Missionary Society, and material was distributed. The Key Workers of each church told the best thing their young people had done the past year. From these reports the young people of Eastern Virginia are doing great work.

Miss Mary E. Snead presented the new program for the coming year. The Damascus Young People had charge of the Morning Worship Service, "Charting the Way."

Everyone enjoyed a picnic dinner on the grounds.

The following officers were nominated and elected for the coming year:

President, W. B. Williams, 1235 24th St., Newport News; 1st Vice-President, Charles E. Heath, Jr., 203 Lee St., Hampton; 2nd Vice-President, Miss Norma Phipps, Ocean View; Sec'y., Miss Mary E. Snead, 1219 48th St., Norfolk; Asst.-Secretary, Miss Margaret Hopkins, Hampton; Treasurer, Miss Margaret Byrd, R. F. D. 3, Suffolk; Sup't. Devotional Life, Mrs. R. L. House, No. 3, Arlington Apts., Portsmouth; Sup't. Missions, Miss Frances Everett, Holland; Sup't. Leadership Training, Charles Parker, 1530 Barron St., Portsmouth; Sup't. Social Action, Allen Piland, Holland; Sup't. Publications and Reporter, Emily Harrell, R. 1, Suffolk; Pastors Counselors, Rev. F. C. Lester, 514 S. Main St., Norfolk, and Dr. J. G. Truitt, Suffolk; Lay Counselor, Irene Cotten, Dendron.

Rev. Carl R. Key was in charge of the Installation of officers.

Rev. H. S. Hardeastle gave an address on "A Code for Christian Youth." He brought out many fine points which we, as young people, should follow.

A very inspiring three-act drama by Katrina Trask, "In the Vanguard," was presented with Miss Evelyn Savedge of Surry, Virginia, as reader.

The Oakland Young People were in charge of the closing Worship Service, "Our Responsibility."

EASTERN N. C. SUNDAY SCHOOL AND CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR CONVENTION.

The Eastern North Carolina Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention, held last week at Fuller's Chapel was well attended by the young people of that Conference.

The Christian Light Quartette, composed of young people, sang in the morning and in the afternoon and thus added greatly to the program.

The evening session was in charge of the Youth Fellowship. Grissom, acting president of the Eastern North Carolina Youth Fellowship, presided, conducting the opening worship service and summarizing at the close of the program, the results that the whole program should have in local groups.

Seven young people from Liberty Vance presented a religious drama entitled "The Symbol of a Cross." The scene was laid in Palestine during the time of Jesus and the effect of His life was shown upon one family of that day. The young people worked hard in preparing this play and the message was much appreciated by those present.

The message of the evening was brought by Rev. T. J. Whitehead of the Henderson Methodist Protestant Church, who was introduced by Mr. Madren. His topic was "Meeting Life's Needs Through Young People's Organizations and Programs." Among the important needs he gave were: to bring within individuals a Christian philosophy of life, the Christianizing of our communities, the stabilizing of modern homes for the present and for the future, and leading the young people to a better understanding of citizenship in the world in which we live.

It is always a privilege to be in such a convention as this, and particularly enjoyable when a program is planned and presented by the young people.

THE UNIVERSE GOD MADE.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC
FOR AUGUST 1, 1937.

SCRIPTURE: Gen. 1:1-8; Ps. 8:
3-4; 19:1-2.

Daily Readings—

Monday—"In the Beginning—the Word."—John 1:1-5.

Tuesday—"God Seen in His Works."—Rom. 1:18-20.

Wednesday—"Framed by the Word of God."—Heb. 11:1-3.

Thursday—"Majesty of the Creator."—Isa. 40:12-26.

Friday—"The Unknown God."—Acts 17:22-31.

Saturday—"Christ As Creator."—Col. 1:12-20.

This meeting comes at a time of year when we discover the beauties of God in the universe which He made. We look upon our world and are compelled to say, "Things too wonderful for me." It is true that we do not understand all about the world in which we live, but we are convinced that the Divine hand controls it.

As the laws by which nature and the world operate are discovered, there may be a tendency to rule our God. Someone has said, "To explain a mystery does not eliminate the reality behind the mystery." The God who made the universe also made the laws which control it.

God is revealed through nature. Yet this is not enough. We need the experience of God in our lives. We need the revelation of God through Jesus. In studying the universe, the Christian feels a closer contact with the ultimate cause for the existence of all things.

Plan an outdoor meeting and discover more of the beauty and power of God.

For Discussion—

1. How may one listen for the "still, small voice" of God?
2. What do the words "God is the Ruler of the World" mean to us?
3. What happens when we refuse to recognize Him as Supreme Ruler?
4. Who are those who are helping to defeat the purpose of God?

Suggested Hymns—

"The Doxology."

"This is My Father's World."

"Dear Lord and Father of Mankind."

GOD PREPARES A PEOPLE.

GOLDEN TEXT: The Lord thy God hath chosen thee to be a people for his own possession.—Deut 7:6.

LESSON: Exodus 11:4-12:36.

Things have happened since last Sunday's lesson. In an impressive, and somewhat devastating way, one plague after another had fallen upon the land of Egypt and the Egyptian people. Under the duress of these calamities, Pharaoh had promised to let the people go, but when the pressure was released he forgot his promise and kept them under bondage. Thus, it is that again and again, men who make sacred vows to God in time of trouble and storm, often forget them in time of prosperity and calm.

We read in the story that "God hardened Pharaoh's heart." It is only another way of starting an unalterable and inexorable law of life. He who refuses to obey the known will of God increasingly hardens his heart. He who refuses to walk in what light he has, inevitably comes to the place where he cannot even see the light. He who says "No" to God today, will find it much more difficult to say "Yes" tomorrow. There is a note of urgency in the Biblical injunction "Today if ye hear his voice, harden not your hearts. The more one resists God, the harder becomes his heart."

The final act in the drama was about to take place. Only drastic methods could meet degenerate men. God informed Moses that he had pronounced final judgment upon Pharaoh and the Egyptians—on a certain night every male child, the first born of both high and low, bond and free, would be stricken. Only the Hebrews would be exempt, and they on only one condition. They were to take the blood of a lamb which they had killed and dressed according to instructions, and with a branch of hyssop, sprinkle this blood upon the lintels and the door posts of their homes. Thus, the avenging angel would be able to tell the people of God, and would "pass over" all such homes, sparing the first-born in those homes. To be sure this looks like an arbitrary and vindictive thing. But it was simply the early working out of the eternal principle that the wages of sin is death. The way of the transgressor is hard. And the innocent have to suffer for the sins of others.

Furthermore, the Hebrews were not to go out empty-handed. They were to "borrow—without any intention of paying back of course—jewels of silver and jewels of gold, and the Lord gave them favor in the sight of the Egyptians so that they "let" unto them such things as they required. This proud people eventually were constrained not only to let the people go, but they provided the very things that made it possible for them to go. In the divine plan there will be a day when there will be a fairer distribution of the world's goods.

The birthday of the nation was to be a time, not of dissipation and noise, as is so often the case with the celebration of our nation's birthday, but a time of religious significance and spiritual meaning. It was to be a day of thanksgiving and prayer.

As Dean Brown writes "the joy of the churchmen and the enthusiasm of the patriot were as the right and left hands of a common satisfaction. By an act which was as impressive then as it seems strange now, this people were to prepare their hearts for this great event which marked the birthday of a nation, and the charter of economic and political deliverance. And through the centuries, even to this day, pious Jews keep the passover which was the religious ceremony held in connection with the exodus from Egypt."

Each family—in cases where the family was small, too small to consume an entire lamb during the night several smaller groups were to be considered a unit—was to kill and dress a lamb according to minute rules. The blood of the lamb was to be sprinkled on the door-posts of every Hebrew home as a mark of identification to the Death Angel who was to pass through the nation striking down every first-born of every Egyptian family. The family, standing with loins girded as if ready to march were to eat the lamb, or to burn what remained until morning. No leaven was to be eaten, or to be found in the house for seven days. It was all significant and symbolic. Without the shedding of blood there is no remission of sins. That lamb slain for the original passover was typical of the Lamb, slain from the foundation of the world. Christ himself is our Passover. Just as the blood of the lamb on the door-post was the secret of delivery and redemption, just so through the blood of Christ, that is through His sacrificial offering of himself, men have found deliverance and redemption. And just as the leaven had to be taken away, just so must we keep the passover, not with the old leaven, neither with the leaven of malice or wickedness, but with the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth.

It was a memorable night. Everything had to be done according to schedule and with utmost secrecy. How strange it must have seemed to the adults and how much more strange it must have seemed to children. How impressive it must have been to see the family groups meeting at night around the table, with loins girded for flight, partaking of the simple passover meal. What feelings must have stirred within their hearts. To be sure they did not know the meaning of it all. But there had been abundant evidence that powers not man-made were working in their behalf. And they knew that they were on the threshold of a new experience, and that the day, or night of march had actually come. Undoubtedly their hearts were full of both faith and fear.

And as they huddled quietly in their homes partaking of the passover meal, word came that the judgment of God had visited their oppressors. "There was a great cry in Egypt; for there was not a house where there was not one dead." Here was something with which Pharaoh with all his vaunted power could not deal. In desperation he called for Moses and Aaron and bade them begone. This time there was no delay. Grabbing their kneading troughs with the dough as yet unleavened, and "borrowing" jewels of gold and silver from the Egyptians, they marched forth into the moonlight and moved quickly away. It was the birth pangs of a nation. History was being made that night. And today after all these centuries the world is still feeling the impact of the ultimate outcome of that epoch-making event. For he it remembered that this was the beginning of that nation as a nation which gave the world of antiquity its highest moral conception of God, and ultimately gave Jesus Christ. It was a long journey on which they embarked that night—many of them never reached "journey's end." But thanks to the wisdom and the courage of their great leader they did not turn back.

MONDAY.

GIVE ME A MAN.

"Give me a man that we might fight together."—I Sam. 17:10.

Goliath thought of the might and courage of physical manhood. Apparently he thought nothing of that higher type of manhood that abolishes physical combat and substitutes spiritual conflicts—that manhood that was to come forth and wage a war against sin till the last one is destroyed even the enemy death.

David represented more than his people Israel. He represented the great spirit of the oncoming Christ going forth conquering and to conquer till the last enemy has been overthrown. The Christian sees his sins and is alert every day and every hour to challenge them and to plunge the Sword of the Spirit into its heart.

Prayer—We shall not fear, dear Lord, for Thou art by our side. and Thou art our strength. Amen.

TUESDAY.

STEADY ON THE RUDDER.

"That we may no longer be children, tossed to and fro and carried about by every wind of doctrine."—Eph. 4:14.

We have been on the bridge of a ship in a storm and listened to the commands of the captain to the Quartermaster at the wheel. "Hard to port," "left rudder," "right rudder," "easy," and then when coming into calm, when the storm had passed, the point of the compass is indicated for the course, and then the command, "steady on the rudder." It is a marvellous performance.

Christians are not to be tossed about by every wind like a ship on a storm-tossed sea without a rudder. We are to be like a majestic ship in full command of the rudder. We are to take our stand firmly here and there against every tempest of temptation, opinions, or wrong teaching. We are to battle them with understanding faith and courage. We are to keep the ship of life headed on the right course and keep steady on the rudder.

Prayer—Dear Christ, we would be fixed in Thee, the Rock of Ages. Make our loves so mightily bound up in Thee that no storm can shake us. In all experiences make our souls steady in Thee. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

ALMOST BUT LOST.

"And Agrippa said unto Paul, almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian."—Acts 26:28.

One of the saddest pictures in Christian experiences is that of an intelligent person acknowledging the rightness and the glory of Christianity and almost yield to its graces, but, like the rich young ruler, turning away—"Almost but lost." Perhaps it was Agrippa's pride that held him. It was doubtless preposterous that a prisoner at his bar should lead him to such an acceptance. Perhaps Paul thought that he might win a judge.

But far greater triumphs than this have been won more easily. They are seen every day when a man switches to the side of right and truth. And we agree with the saying that it is "no credit to an intellect to be hard to convince of the saving power of the Son of God."

Prayer—Dear Father, we yield ourselves to Thee. We would do Thy will and we would do our best for Thee. In His name we ask it. Amen.

THURSDAY.

ETERNALLY RADIANT.

"They looked unto Him and were radiant; and their faces shall never be confounded."—Psalm 34:5. (R. V.)

Radiance is a common word today—radiant streets, radiant show-windows, radiant homes, radiant gardens, artistic effects—all a foregleam of a radiant future.

Likewise there have been, and are, foregleams of heavenly radiance. These foregleams have come from the radiant souls. Moses talked with God and his face shone with dazzling glory. Our Lord talked with the Father on Mt. Hermon and He was transfigured before his disciples in amazing glory.

Always the wise and holy among men have known the secret of spiritual radiance. So may we be, if we do as they—use freely and fully the blessed privilege of a prayerful life and a consciousness of God. Then we shall know His radiance and men will take knowledge that we live with Jesus.

Prayer—O Lord, our Father, give us Thy glory that Thy love and wisdom may shine through us and may cast their rays along our path. Amen.

FRIDAY.

BLESSED MEDICINE.

"He that hateth reproof shall die."—Prov. 15:10.

Reproof is unpleasant, either to give or receive; but its fruits are blessed, for it checks, corrects error, enlarges vision, increases efficiency, sweetens and strengthens the life. The sting of reproof often blinds us to these blessings, and that results in placing ourselves on the wrong side, disease, and death. It is like the cancer patient, fighting at the surgeon's knife that would heal the malady, thereby rendering the remedy useless.

Back of wise reproof there is always love. The wise understand this and will still love. Loving and firm reprovers are among the greatest benefactors in life.

Prayer—O Heavenly Father, Thy Word is a constant reproof to us. Thy Spirit follows us to prompt us the right way. Our consciences check us from fall. Make us attentive to these friends, and obedient to Thy will. Amen.

SATURDAY.

IGNORANT DESIRES.

"Who knoweth what is good for man in his life?"—Ecc. 6:7-12.

Men make clear their folly by the oft-repeated moan, "If I could only live my life over again!" Looking backward discloses many errors. Vainly we wish that we had used more care in looking forward.

We have not known what is best for us. We have chased shadows. We have sought for poison, that we might eat it and drink it. We have gained our goals, only to find them places of misery.

But there is One who sees the end always from the beginning. His choices for us never err. He wishes only the best for His children and His wisdom is ever available for their use.

Prayer—Infinite Wisdom, we will draw upon Thy reservoirs of knowledge. Grant us Thy wisdom, O Omniscient One. May we seek for ourselves only what Thou dost seek for us, O Lover of our souls. Amen.

—Amos R. Wells.

SUNDAY.

A SABBATH FOR THE LAND.

"In the seventh year shall be a sabbath of solemn rest for the land. A Sabbath unto Jehovah: thou shalt neither sow thy field, nor prune thy vineyard."—Levit. 25:1-7.

The laws which God gave the Israelites through Moses are intensely practical as well as gloriously spiritual. They understand the importance of letting land lie fallow as well as our modern farmers understand it.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

A RICH HERITAGE.

By REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D.

[Preached by the sixth pastor of the Suffolk Christian Church upon the occasion of its 76th anniversary.]

Let us now look briefly at the Suffolk Christian Church which he founded. It was organized in October, 1860, with the following charter members: W. B. Wellons, Sarah B. Wellons, Rives Chapel Wells, Julia A. Wells, James A. Parker, Lucy Ann Parker, Robert B. Brinkley, James Pugh, Frances Pugh, Mary A. Higgins, Sarah E. Norfleet, James A. Turrentine, Thomas J. Kilby, Ann M. Kilby, Willis S. Riddick, Mary Ann Riddick, James A. Norfleet, Emma Norfleet, Caroline V. Riddick, Thomas S. Kilby, Annie E. Cutchins, Louise Norfleet, W. T. Duke, Louisiana Turrentine, and Elizabeth Ward.

At the first meeting of the church, Rev. W. B. Wellons was elected pastor; Thomas J. Kilby, and R. C. Wells, deacons; Robert B. Brinkley, secretary; Willis S. Riddick, collector and treasurer; and Josiah Smith, sexton. Dr. Wellons served the church 16 years, received 447 members.

Rev. Jesse T. Whitley succeeded Dr. Wellons and served the church for three years, receiving 15 members into its membership. His successor was Rev. W. T. Walker, who served the church for three years and received 20 members into its fellowship. Rev. Mr. Walker was succeeded by Rev. W. W. Staley, D. D., who served the church for 41 years as active pastor, and nearly nine years as pastor-emeritus, or a total of about fifty years. He received 1,238 new members into its fellowship. Dr. Staley was succeeded by the Rev. H. S. Harcastle, who served the church for nearly ten years, and received into its fellowship 331 new members. The Rev. Mr. Harcastle was succeeded by the present pastor, who has served the church three years and has received 182 new members into its fellowship.

There is an interesting sidelight on the pastors of the Suffolk Christian Church. Dr. W. B. Wellons ordained three of his successors to the Gospel ministry! In other words this church has had seventy-six years of history, and the hand of Dr. William Brock Wellons has been stretched across seventy-four of them. If you turn to the Lives of Christian Ministers by Dr. P. J. Kernodle, page 261 you will find: "In 1871 he (Dr. Wellons) attended the Conference at Berkley, was secretary, and as chairman made the report of the committee on Education. He also served on the ordaining presbytery which ordained the Rev. J. T. Whitley." If you turn to page 359 of the above book by Dr. Kernodle you will read again: "We recommend that D. A. Long, R. C. Tuck, W. T. Walker, and J. W. Hatch be ordained . . . The ordaining presbytery was composed of the Revs. T. J. Fowler, A. Isley, J. N. Manning, and W. B. Wellons. The ordination sermon was preached by Rev. W. B. Wellons, of the Eastern Virginia Conference." That was in the year of 1868, and in a church only a few miles from my home, and the Rev. W. T. Walker was the pastor of my home church, Mt. Bethel, when my mother was a little girl. Again if you turn to The Christian Annual, year 1890, page 19, you will find a photograph of Dr. Staley, and a biographical sketch, in which we read: "Having proved his gifts as a preacher, he (W. W. Staley) was ordained to the office of Elder in the Christian Church in the Conference held at Hanks' Chapel in Chatham County, North Carolina in 1874. Revs. W. B. Wellons, D. D., Solomon Apple, and Alfred Isley constituting the ordaining presbytery." Thus you see Revs. Whitley, Walker, and Staley were three ordained by Dr. Wellons. It is interesting to remember that Dr. Staley was an ordained minister with a college training, and four years of experience as a preacher, when Dr. Wellons resigned his Suffolk pastorate, and thus might have been his direct successor.

This church is very proud of all its former pastors, Dr. Wellons for being its founder on such broad, great and liberal lines; Rev. Jesse T. Whitley as being a personal friend of Dr. Wellons and one whom he wished to see succeed himself; of Rev. W. T. Walker, because he was a direct decendent of James O'Kelly, the great founder of the Christian Church; Dr. W. W. Staley for the preeminence with which he built this church into prestige and power throughout the entire denomination, and his very long and brilliant tenure of office; and Rev. H. S. Harcastle for his outstanding achievement in the additional building program which he developed, and the very gracious way in which he helped to make the closing years of Dr. Staley's life such a benediction to this church, city, and community at large. Their names will ever be linked inseparably together.

Permit me to say I feel very humbly my unworthiness to follow in the footsteps of so great a line of preachers and leaders, but knowing your history, and your rich heritage as a church, I feel encouraged to do my best, realizing that you will bear me up to the throne of God, daily beseeching Him to give me grace, and strength, to minister to you as I should ministers. Your oyalty to the church and its very enterprise, the great amount of work which you voluntarily render your church, and the liberal way in which you personally support its program, speak full well of your own unstinted devotion, and of the excellent leadership you have gathered yourselves across the years.

Many of the lay leaders of the Southern Convention for the three quarters of a century have come from among your own membership and you may be justly and humbly proud of the leaders in every walk of life today that are listed on your present church membership roll. The place you have won requires of a necessity that you do great things, that you keep your eyes on the cross of Calvary, that you rest not on your oars, but rather push valiantly forward, setting a pace for the years yet to come. In no way, whatsoever, let us drop behind, but in every way and for every enterprise of our church, let us go forward. God has blessed you. He has blessed you with consecrated leadership from both young and old, rich and poor, learned and unlearned, in your membership throughout all these years. God has, indeed, given you a rich heritage. He has entrusted us with a rare stewardship. He is counting on us doing our part.

These are days when the church is tested. How the world yearns for leadership, real, spiritual, soul-satisfying leadership. Here, in our place, may God grant you, and all of us, the blessed comradeship of our blessed Christ, enabling us to work worthily of Him whom we serve, and those we are.

THE END.

Too be in the pink of condition physically and mentally, and ready and willing to do anything that needs to be done, is a great substitute for genius.—Exchange.

The Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

We are experiencing some of the hottest weather we have had this year. In fact it is so hot that it is really dangerous to work the mules. Several days the thermometer stood from 90 to 100 degrees in the shade.

We have put up swings in the shade of the trees at all of the buildings, so the little children can be out in the open where the air is more pleasant in the shade and they can swing to their soul's satisfaction. We have more small children in the orphanage at this time than we have at any one time in a long time. It seems that nearly every application we have had during the last eighteen months has been for small children. We have taken in small children till our campus would make you think we were running a kindergarten school. But they are bright and healthy and it is a real pleasure to work with them.

They grow up from year to year, reach the age limit and go out to make their own way. We had some girls working in a manufacturing plant sometime ago. We had two others who wanted work at the same place. The manager said if they were as good as the ones he had he would give them a job. We carried them to his office and he talked to them for a few minutes and told them to report for work the next day.

We had a boy to graduate at Elon College in May. He got a position with a large manufacturing concern in Elkin, North Carolina. We received a card from him a few days ago saying that he had been promoted to a new position where the chance for advancement would be much better and the salary would increase. We remember well the day this boy came to the orphanage really without a chance in life. You through your gifts to support the orphanage give him a chance. He has made good. Someday he may be a high official in the company he is working for. Who knows.

FAMILY ALTAR.

Not only do bodies and minds need rest during the night and on the seventh day, but the fields also must have their rest. A razor that is used day after day soon loses its sharpness; it will shave much longer and better if used alternately with other razors.

In all we do we must observe the law of "solemn rest unto Jehovah." It is not enough to be idle; there must be a divine purpose in the cessation of work; it must have as its aim the better doing of the Lord's work.

Prayer—Command Thou our toil, our Saviour, and our rest from the labor as well. Be with our sleep and recreation as well as with our work. For Thy name's sake. Amen.

In Memoriam

WELLS.

Mrs. Betty Wells, age sixty-eight, departed this life at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Samuel Barnett, Roxboro, North Carolina, on June 1, 1937. She was the daughter of J. M. and Caroline McAdan of Semora, North Carolina. In 1896 she married James Ollie Wells, who died in 1911. There are four surviving children, Harvey and McAdan Wells, of Williamson, West Virginia, Mrs. Harvey Barker, of Semora, North Carolina, Mrs. Samuel Barnett of Roxboro, North Carolina, thirteen grandchildren, and one sister, Mrs. Kate McLane of Newport News, Virginia. Sister Wells joined Lebanon Christian Church when young and was a very loyal member. She loved her church and supported all its enterprises, both local and general. For a number of years her home had been in West Virginia with her sons. Each year she would visit in her old section, usually at the time of the annual meetings at her church. Her health had failed for quite a while, and it was while on a visit to her daughter, Mrs. Barnett, she grew worse and was taken to Duke Hospital, but medical skill could give but temporary relief from her sufferings. She suffered much for the last few weeks before answering the call to depart and be with Christ which is far better.

The funeral was from her church by her pastor, assisted by Rev. Coffin and Rev. West of the Baptist Church and Rev. Williams of the M. E. Church. Burial was by her husband in the Church Cemetery.

C. E. NEWMAN.

PETERS.

On March 22, 1937, it was God's will to call from our midst Mrs. Laura Emory Peters, a loyal and devoted member of the Ladies Aid Society of the Franklin Congregational-Christian Church. We wish to pay tribute to the memory of one whose going has brought sorrow to us all. Therefore be it resolved:

1. That know our Heavenly Father doeth all things well, therefore, we bow in humble submission to His will.

2. That in her death we have lost a noble Christian character, and one who loved her church and was devoted to her family.

3. That we extend our heartfelt sympathy to her companion and children and point them to God, whose grace is sufficient in the hour of sorrow.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be entered upon our records in loving memory of our departed friend, a copy be sent to the family and to "The Christian Sun."

Mrs. E. P. JONES,
Mrs. E. L. BEALE,
Mrs. C. O. BYRD,
Committee.

VINCENT.

We, the members of the Ladies Benevolent and Social Union of the Suffolk Christian Church, wish to pay tribute to our beloved member, Mrs. J. E. Vincent, who left us to be with Jesus on June 14, 1937.

Although she was a shut-in for several years, she was always interested in all the work of the church, supporting it with her prayers and substance.

Her life was a benediction to all with whom she came in contact, and to those of us who visited her, she was a bright ray of sunshine with her sweet smile and winning ways.

We bow in humble submission to the will of our Heavenly Father who doeth all things well, and extend our heart-felt sympathy to her companion and children.

We recommend that a copy of this tribute be sent to the family, a copy to "The Christian Sun" for publication, and a copy be recorded in our minutes.

Mrs. W. H. ANDREWS,
Mrs. B. D. CROCKER,
Mrs. ANNIE STALEY CALHOUN,
Committee.

JOHNSON.

On the 13th day of April, 1937, the death angel knocked at the door of one of our homes to bring sorrow and heartaches to all who were left when He took from our midst Mr. Julius C. Johnson, a much beloved member of Mount Carmel Christian Church of Walters, Virginia. In his going we greatly miss one of our oldest members. His many years of service and the friendly hand-clasp made him but the more endeared to the hearts of those who had experienced the joy and the privilege of serving with him. He loved the work of the Kingdom of God, and all who knew and loved him will miss his faithful presence.

He was the faithful Senior Deacon in the Church, a member of the Official Board, and taught a class in the Sunday school. His going has left a pew that was seldom vacant.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we express our great appreciation for his blameless life and character, his self-sacrificing service, unflinching devotion to his duty, his Christian stewardship, and his loyalty to the Kingdom of God.

2. That we recognize that his was a life of high ideals, great faith, optimistic spirit, loving friendship, wise counsel, trustworthy judgment, child-like tenderness, Christ-like spirit which won the confidence and appreciation of the poor and rich, and made for him a trusted friend of all who knew him.

3. That we honor his life not only with our lips, but by living true in service to the cause he loved and served.

4. That we extend our deepest sympathy to the family and remind them of the words of him who said, "In my Father's house there are many mansions."

5. That a copy of these resolutions be entered upon the church records, a copy sent to the family, and one to "The Christian Sun" for publication.

By Board of Deacons,
E. W. BEALE,
Chairman.

GARNER.

Mrs. Mamie Garner, before marriage Mamie Isley, was buried at Hines Chapel on July 8th, at 2:00 P. M. She joined Hines Chapel Church when a girl. She leaves a father, Mr. Thomas Isley, her husband, a sister, several brothers, and four children.

The funeral service was conducted at her church by her pastor, assisted by Revs. G. C. Crutchfield, C. E. Gerringer, and R. A. Helsabeck.

May God comfort her loved ones.

B. J. EARP.

ALLRED.

Whereas death has removed from our midst our fellow-deacon, beloved brother and friend, William E. Allred; and

Whereas, as deacon, church secretary, and teacher, he served efficiently for a long time; and

Whereas, as a man he was upright, modest, unselfish, obliging, kind-hearted and true;

Therefore, be it resolved by the Deacons of Pleasant Ridge Christian Church, Randolph County, N. C.:

1. That in Brother Allred's death our church has lost a loyal deacon, a competent and conscientious teacher, and the community a useful citizen, who won and kept the friendship and affection of his fellow-citizens.

2. That we are grateful for his Godly life, which has been a blessing to us.

3. That we extend our deepest sympathy to his wife and children, and commend them to God who alone can give them comfort and consolation.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be included in our church record, a copy sent to "The Christian Sun" for publication, and a copy sent to the family.

This the 26th day of June, 1937.

The Land of Beginning Again

By CLARENCE A. VINCENT, D. D.

It looked as if David's life was a permanent wreck. He had committed the three worst sins in the category. He repented and began the life of faith, purity, and fidelity to his life tasks. The most useful part of his life and the writing of the Twenty-third Psalm followed his repentance. The wonder of life is that we can begin again.

So I wish that there were some wonderful place
Called the "Land of Beginning Again,"
Where all our mistakes and all our heart-aches,
And all our poor selfish grief
Could be dropped like a shabby old coat at the door
And never put on again.

THE SINNER

God says to the sinner, "Come, let us begin again! I will forgive your sins and will make you a 'new creature.'" Freedom from the shackles of sin shall be yours. Jesus is God's loving Voice calling us to the abundant life.

Softly and tenderly Jesus is calling,
Calling for you and for me;
See, on the portals He's waiting and watching,
Watching for you and for me.

He saved Matthew, Mark, Luke, John, Andrew, Peter and Saul of Tarsus, the dissipated Augustine and he became a saint, the sin-depressed Luther and he became a free man and started the Church into a vital life and activity. Millions have answered God's call and have been redeemed.

THE INDIFFERENCE

God says to the careless follower of Jesus, "Come, let us begin again." God's Spirit works with a weak and imperfect disciple and a worldly and imperfect church patiently to win the person and the church and to perfect them in character and activities.

Who is the saved person? It is he whose entire life is in harmony with Jesus and His teachings. His motive is right, he is loyal in thought, and he lives as helpfully as did the Master. To do this as Jesus did, takes a life-time and probably an eternity. We often fail, but God says, "Come, begin again!" Two questions will show you whether you are living a Christian life: Are you fearless for the right? Are you easy to live with?

THE DISHEARTENED

In the sorrows and trials of life a Christian faith is the Land of Beginning Again. Often we feel that we cannot take up the work of life. Death robs us of our companions, financial losses daze us, but God does not leave us in the pit of despair. He says, "Come, let us live again!" Paul answered the summons and learned that "all things work together for good to them that love God." Mrs. Browning was weak and ill much of her life and her father treated her brutally, but she could sing:

Oh, the little birds sang east, and the little birds sang west,
And I said in underbreath—"All our life is mixed with death,
And who knoweth which is best?"
Oh, the little birds sang east and the little birds sang west,
And I smiled to think God's greatness flowed around our incompleteness—
'Round our restlessness, His rest.

Clement, of Alexandria says, "Christ turns our sunsets into sunrises. There is a budding tomorrow in every Midnight."

The Christian should be courageous and joyful. Life does not ring down for him. The best is yet to come. For us as for David the most useful part of our lives awaits us if we are penitent, and responsive.

Each day is a beginning,
The new follows the old.
Spring comes with buds and blossoms
After the winter's cold.
Life with its sins and failures
Through faith can be left behind.
New life follows with fruitage,
God is exceedingly kind!
Faith is a Land of Promise
Where we begin again.

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

The executive secretary of the Eastern Virginia S. S. and C. E. Convention, Rev. Carl R. Key, wishes to express his appreciation to all officers, departmental secretaries, and all others taking part on the convention program last week for their fine work.

Rev. R. D. Coulter, of New Market, Virginia, says that Miss Evelyn Ayscue is doing excellent work with the Vacation School at Mt. Olivet (R), and that he is in a fine revival meeting at Joppa. At the end of the writing six additions had been made to the Joppa church.

Good reports are coming from Student Summer Service workers all over the Southern Convention. Their service will surely mean much for our churches and Sunday schools. Mr. Loring Chase began work with First Church, Norfolk, last Saturday and will be there for about for weeks.

Rev. William T. Scott, Pastor-at-Large for Georgia, says that the Summer Conference at Camp Viola, Mountville, Georgia, held the first week in July, was most successful. This conference was for the young people of north and middle Georgia, and the churches were well represented.

The new Christians who become members of the Church should become readers of the Church Paper. This will help them to become good church members. Don't you think so, brother pastor and evangelist? Why not help them start right? A subscription to THE CHRISTIAN SUN is only two dollars for a year.

A series of prayers from the pen of Rev. Everett B. Leshar, pastor of Union Congregational Church, Jacksonville, Florida, begins this week. The editors hope and believe that a study of these prayers will be helpful both to those who lead public prayer and to those who feel the need of prayer. Why not turn now to page five and study the prayer for this week?

For the next two weeks Miss Edna Fulcher, office secretary for the Board of Christian Education, and Miss Lillie Spain, a teacher from South Norfolk, will aid Rev. O. E. Elmore in Vacation Schools in our mountain mission churches in Virginia. The young people of our Reidsville church are helping to pay the expenses of these schools. This is one place in which the Board of Christian Education and the Mission Board work cooperatively.

A letter from Miss Lucy Eldredge says that Rev. A. Lanson Granger made an excellent speech to the International Christian Endeavor Convention in Grand Rapids, Michigan, on July 9th. At that time he had visited thirteen young people's summer conferences and was scheduled for three or four more. He is to preach during August, and to rest at home in September. It is a busy and useful life this young preacher is living.

The Board of Christian Education of the Southern Convention wishes to thank the Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Conventions for their recent contributions. The Board promises to return to the churches just as much service as possible. The total from the conventions is much less than a thousand dollars, a sum inadequate to meet the needs of religious education, but the servants of the Church will spread the service as far and effectively as they can.

President J. E. McCauley and Rev. J. H. Dollar had to travel long distances in order to take their part on the S. S. Convention program at Liberty Springs last week. The former drove from Altamahaw, North Carolina, where he was helping Rev. G. C. Crutchfield in a revival at Bethlehem, and the latter from Henderson, North Carolina, where he was aiding Rev. S. E. Madren in a revival at Liberty. They did their convention duties well, even at great cost, and returned to the revivals that night. Such loyalty to duty is inspiring.

A HISTORY OF HOLLAND CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

Hebron Christian Church, out of which came the present Holland Christian Church, was organized at Carrsville, Isle of Wight County, Virginia, October, 1853, by the Rev. R. H. Holland with the following charter members: Rev. R. H. Holland, Alfred Cobb, William Odom, and James R. Holland, with the following "Form of Agreement" binding them together:

"We, whose names are hereunto annexed, members, as we trust, of the body of Christ, having exercised repentance toward God and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ, being desirous of associating ourselves together as a church, agree to be governed by the following principles:

1. Christ is the only head of the church.

2. The name Christian is the only appellation by which we will be known to the exclusion of all party or sectarian names.

3. The Holy Bible, or the Scriptures of the Old and New Testament is our only creed or confession of faith.

4. Christian character, or vital piety is the true spiritual test of fellowship and of church membership.

5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

It was admitted into the Eastern Virginia Conference that same year, in session at Cypress Chapel Christian Church, November 4, 5, 6, 1853. The Conference met with Hebron Christian Church, October 30, 31, and November 1, 2, 1861; October 30, 31, and November 1, 2, 1872.

The Rev. R. H. Holland, a son of Holy Neck Christian Church and founder of Hebron Christian Church, served as its pastor for twenty-six years, as clerk for a number of years and always stood by in all matters concerning progress and maintenance. We find that he was also active in Conference and Convention affairs, known, loved and revered by a host of friends. His portrait hangs in the auditorium of the present church and he might properly be called its patron saint.

FORMER PASTORS OF THE CHURCH

The following pastors served the church while located in Carrsville:

Rev. R. H. Holland, October, 1853, to January, 1877; Rev. C. J. Ralston, January, 1877, to January, 1880; Rev. J. T. Kitchen, January, 1880, to March, 1882; Rev. W. M. Butler, March, 1882, to January 1883; Rev. H. C. Moore, January, 1883, to January, 1884; Rev. M. L. Hurley, January, 1884, to January, 1886; Rev. R. A. Ricks, January, 1886, to January, 1888; Rev. C. C. Peele, January, 1888, to September, 1890.

At the September conference of 1890 a committee was appointed consisting of Eli Daughtrey, Allen Daughtrey, James H. Butler and Rev. R. H. Holland for the purpose of considering a more convenient location for the church. This committee reported at a call conference held October 27, 1890, with Dr. W. W. Staley, presiding. It recommended Holland as the most suitable place. The Hebron Church building was dismantled and removed to Holland in the spring of 1891 and rebuilt by J. E. Daughtrey, one of its members. It was dedicated as the Holland Christian Church the second Sunday in August, 1891 and at the conference of June 26, 1897 plans were submitted for enlarging the church, which was done. The Eastern Virginia Conference met here October 30, 31 and November 1, 2, 1894; October 30, 31, and November 1, 2, 1906; October 30, 31, and November 1, 1923 and will meet here again November 3, 4, 5, 1937.

The following pastors have served Holland Christian Church: Rev. R. H. Holland, October 27, 1890, to March, 1892; Rev. R. D. H. Demarest, March, 1892, to October 31, 1893; Rev. J. W. Rawles, October 31, 1893, to October 31, 1896; Rev. W. S. Long, D. D., October 31, 1896, to October 31, 1897; Rev. W. J. Laine, October 31, 1897, to June 9, 1898; Rev. I. W. Johnson, June 9, 1898, to October 31, 1906; Rev. N. G. Newman, October 31, 1906, to October 1, 1913; Rev. B. E. Black, October 1, 1913, to September 1, 1918. Rev. W. M. Jay, September 1, 1918, to October 31, 1920; Rev. J. P. Barrett, D. D., October 31, 1920, to September 1, 1921; Rev. J. H. Lightbourne, D. D., October 1, 1921, to September 1, 1927; Rev. W. C. Hook, September 1, 1927, to October 1, 1930; Rev. W. M. Jay, D. D., October 1, 1930, to June 1, 1935; Rev. Carl R. Key, September 1, 1935, to the present.

It was on April 1, 1918, that the first ground was broken for the new building, the old one having been previously removed. Notwithstanding the scarcity of labor and the difficulty in getting material the work of the building slowly but steadily progressed so that it was ready to be opened for regular worship on the second Sunday in July, 1918, and it was with depth of gratitude that the Building Committee, composed of J. P. Dalton, chairman; L. J. Daughtrey, secretary; W. Q. Peele, treasurer; I. A. Luke, Jobe G. Holland, J. Frank Holland, R. E. Hedgebeth, R. H. Reidel, builder, Joe E. Holland, W. V. Leathers, W. H. Howell, D. J. Jones, B. W. Council, W. J. Holland, and J. R. Holland, declared the building ready to be dedicated to God and His divine worship.

The dedication Service was held on Sunday, December 14th, 1919, at 3 o'clock P. M. The following order of service was used: Organ prelude, Doxology, Invocation, Hymn—"The Church's One Foundation," Responsive reading, Gloria, Anthem—"O Be Joyful in the Lord," Scripture lesson, Prayer, Quartet, Offering, Historical Sketch, I. A. Luke, (valuable in compiling this document), Solo, Dedication Sermon by Rev. J. O. Atkinson, D. D., Dedication Prayer, Hymn—"The Son of God Goes Forth to War," Benediction and Organ Postlude.

The present edifice is built of brick with pressed brick on all four sides. It was constructed of the best material and equipped with modern conveniences. The pipe organ, costing $1,800, was purchased and presented to the church by the Ladies' Aid Society. The art glass windows were donated or presented in memory of departed ones by members of the church. In the fall of 1936, a new heating system for warming the building in winter and cooling it in summer was installed.

In the spring of 1920, when Holland and Holy Neck became full time pastorates, joint ownership of the parsonage was discontinued and this church sold its half to Holy Neck for $3250.00. It then became necessary to erect a parsonage. The Building Committee was composed of Rev. J. H. Lightbourne, chairman, J. P. Dalton, A. T. Duke, R. E. Hedgebeth and R. H. Reidel. Work was begun in the spring of 1922.

This church has property valued at $35,000.00. It is well organized and doing good work in all branches of activity. It has a membership of 400, with an average attendance of about 105 in the winter and 110 in the summer. It employs a pastor for full time service.

CARL R. KEY,
Pastor.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgement and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

BOARD OF CHRISTIAN EDUCATION.

The Board of Christian Education of the Southern Convention is one of the most necessary and neglected enterprises of the Convention. It was begun in 1918 for the purpose of promoting religious education within the bounds of the Convention. Three Field Secretaries—Misses Eldridge, Coghill and Truitt—have served the Board, and the churches still feel something of the impetus of their service. Records show progress during the period they served. Since then there has been a decline in the religious educational work among our churches, or at least there appears to have been.

For financial reasons only the Board discontinued the service of one who could go to the churches, Sunday schools, Christian Endeavor societies, and other organizations within our convention with helpful suggestions and service. The work is badly needed. At present we have no one who is expert in this field to counsel with local churches and youth leaders who has the time to do the needed service. Sunday schools and Christian Endeavor societies do the work of religious education in our churches. Superintendents, teachers, and leaders need guidance in the selection of literature, in training leaders for today and tomorrow, and in planning an effective educational program. Our church is not now furnishing this expert leadership. Until we do we need not hope to compete with other churches about us that do furnish such leadership.

The Board does do a considerable service. With an office at 514 South Main Street, Norfolk, Virginia, supplied with a variety of books, periodicals, and other literature, there is a constant stream of helpful service going to the churches. Hundreds of requests for help are met annually. Counsel is given to program committees, teachers, and young people. An office secretary is ever alert to supply every possible service. The editor of this paper, who is also a pastor, acts as executive secretary and does what he can (gratis) to guide and help with the work. Actually a surprisingly large amount of work is accomplished, but it is far from what is needed.

Financial support for the Board makes proper service impossible. The Sunday School Conventions give all the money they have except enough to run themselves. This will amount to about eight hundred dollars this year. The Southern Convention has placed the Board on its Apportionments to the amount of $1,500.00, and has said that offerings from Sunday schools and Christian Endeavor societies made during July and August can be counted by the church on Conference Apportionments. If the total amount could be raised, the work could be much more effectively done. Last year not quite half of the amount was secured. The Board must pay $250.00 annually for the support of "The Christian Sun." All of which means that there has not been more than about twelve hundred dollars for the promotion of religious education in two states during the past several years. This is just enough to keep from going out of business, but not enough to do effective service.

There is a way out of this difficulty. The churches can raise and pay all of the Apportionment for Christian Education. The amount for each church is very small. The Sunday school and Christian Endeavor society may share in raising this fund, or they may raise all of it. But every church surely can clear this item on the Apportionment. That will be a good start. But it will not be enough. In order to do effective work, there must be an office, and there must be a full-time, trained worker who can travel to the churches. This will cost more than is now available if all apportionments were met in full.

Recently a business man who reads this paper and who is interested in making investments that produce results in human progress talked with the writer about this matter. He thinks there may be those who would like to invest in this type of work. He feels that the future of our church depends upon the training of the children and young people. He says that there should be trained leaders at work in this field in our church, and that he is willing to help put them to work. This conference gave new hope to the writer, and made him believe that maybe even our young people, our teachers, and our busy local leaders may have the help they so greatly need and so richly deserve. It may be that some who read this will be sufficiently interested to investigate the needs, and make some contribution so the Board can do that which it greatly desires to do, namely: put into the field at least one expert religious educational worker.

HUMILITY.

There is a fable which says that one day a prince went into his garden to examine it. He came to the peach tree and said, "What are you doing for me?" The tree said, "In the spring I give my blossoms and fill the air with fragrance, and on my boughs hang the fruit, which men will gather and carry into the place for you." "Well done," said the prince. Then to the chestnut he said, "What are you doing?" "I am making nests with my leaves and spreading branches," well done," said the prince. Then he went down to the meadow, and asked the grass what it was doing. "We are giving up our lives for others, for your sheep and cattle, that they may be nourished;" and the prince said, "Well done." Last of all he asked the tiny daisy what it was doing and the daisy said, "Nothing, nothing. I cannot make a nesting place for the birds, and I cannot give food for the sheep and the cows—they do not want me in the meadow. All I can do is to be the best little daisy I can be." And the prince bent down and kissed the daisy, and said, "There is none better than thou."—F. B. Cowl, in Sunday School World.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION FOR YESTERDAY AND TODAY.

An Address Before the Eastern Virginia S. S. and C. E.
Convention.

By REV. J. E. McCauley, President,
JULY 20, 1937.

Since the Christian Church first emanated from the hand of its Divine Founder, education has been her chief cornerstone. When the Church's Christian educational program has been paramount, its impact upon the community and nation for morals, ethics, and a spiritual uplift has always been felt; but her influence always ebbed when its educational program was dormant. A brief review of the Christian era will enable us to see the importance of that often neglected portion of our church's work.

Early Christian Education.

If we accept Matthew's account of the activities of Jesus as valid (as we should) we find the Master placing primary emphasis on training. "And seeing the multitude, he went up into a mountain and when he was set, his disciples came unto him: and He opened his mouth and taught them saying."—(Matt. 5:1,2.)

We call this the sermon on the Mount. To Jesus it was the imparting to his followers the fundamentals of the kingdom. We call the first few verses the Beatitudes. But to Jesus it was the way of life. Call it what you will, or think of it as you please, we have in this event the basic principle for Christian training.

The early Church was not bound together by any ties other than the common brotherhood of man in Christ. They had no organization and felt little if any need for such. It was the general belief of many that Christ would soon return and the world would end. In Charles C. Boyer's book, "History of Education," he says: "The most conspicuous motive in early Christianity was the almost universal belief in the nearness of the second advent of Christ. This ardent emphasis is upon the moral and future life—other-worldliness, as George Elliot calls it—instead of the earthly and present, which had so long been overemphasized in the pagan world."

The early Christian teaching placed a new emphasis on human life. There was a great change in philosophy. There was soon to be a great change in the mode of teaching. "There was," as Karl Schmidt so eloquently says, "a great withdrawal of man within himself into that part of his nature which unites him to God, and that belongs not to the perishable, but to the imperishable; not to the visible, but to the invisible world. The supernatural laid hold of men's minds with a mighty energy; man as the Son of heaven became a stranger upon this earth, and esteemed the splendor of this world as of little val-

OUR PRAYER.

By REV. EVERETT LESHER.

We thank Thee, O Lord God, for the assurance that if we seek we shall find, that if we ask anything in Thy name it shall be given unto us. We have believed and have become happy in the thought of a loving Providence. And yet, O Lord, in our deeper moments we know not what to ask. We lack the understanding; our knowledge is too partial; our finite minds cannot see the ultimate consequences of answered petition.

What shall we ask? We dare not ask for power, for we may need to become weak that we might feel the need of God. We dare not ask for riches that we might be happy, for in the light of Thy understanding we may need poverty that we might become wise. We dare not ask for the strength to achieve, for in Thy sight we may stand in need of weakness, that we might learn to obey. Dare we ask for health to do great things? But it may seem best for us to be given infirmity that we might do better things.

O Lord, we know not what to ask. We know not how to ask. We simply yield ourselves to Thee that there may be wrought within us the things that seemeth best, even such things as we have not yet learned to acknowledge as good. Thou alone knowest the deep necessities of our souls. Thou art wiser than we. Behold our need and do for us according to Thy tender mercy for our own enrichment and for Thy glory in the world. Amen.

[Note: At the request of the editors Rev. Everette B. Leshner, pastor of the Union Congregational Church, Jacksonville, Florida, has prepared a series of prayers which will be printed from week to week. We believe that these prayers will be spiritually helpful to the individual readers and will afford rich material for the devotional services of the church. Editors.]

ue. The world in all its beauty had been tested by antiquity, and had not afforded the lasting peace promised of it. Heaven now took its place, and the citizens of heaven displaced in a measure the citizens of earth."

Such a Christian doctrine with its changing emphasis on the way of life, came into a Roman world which had already passed its zenith, and challenged almost everything for which the Roman world stood. The following sins were the order of the day: loyalty to the state, no matter how corrupt, present pleasures and pamperings never regarding the results, satisfying the senses, tolerations of slavery with all its baseness, corrupt family life, infidelity, divorce, and infanticide; all these evils and more characterized the social order of the privileged classes. Christians dared to substitute clean living for the current sins; they dared to teach the brotherhood of man, and to place the major emphasis on the importance of the life to come.

The method of attack to change the order of the day and reveal the religion of the Christ was oral teaching. This became the first method of systematic Christian education. The Christian Jews would become personally responsible for certain individuals or groups of individuals. These were sometimes taught in the homes, again in the synagogues, or at other convenient places. Sometimes the pupil was being instructed for the eventful day when a decision for Christ would be made. Again the individual had already made the decision for Christ under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit from hearing one of the men of God deliver a message of Christ, but needed instruction as to how to become an intelligent member of the Church. This method of oral instruction held sway for the first century. As the Church grew and made its inroads into the better educated classes a new demand naturally was made. The demand for better methods of teaching and better organized thought.

The first system of education that supplanted the old oral system was the Catechumen Schools. As soon as conditions were made possible by increase in numbers and more favorable conditions generally the children were provided with teachers of special fitness to provide them with the proper kind of education. This was only an enlargement of the first oral system. At first the instruction was individually. Now it was for children of believers who were preparing for membership. It also included Jews who wanted to become Christian, and those who would turn from Paganism to Christianity. The training consisted of the Ten Commandments, Lord's Prayer, Apostles Creed, some Psalms and other articles of faith. The course lasted anywhere from a few months to several years, generally about three years.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Two very good friends of the writer are ill. They are in the prime of life. Under normal conditions they should expect to live ten years or longer. Physicians say they have organic heart disease. Their chances of recovery are doubtful. There seems to be an increasing number of people who are afflicted in a similar way. High tension living and the urge of unrestrained energy are taking their toll of health and life. Heart disease is a 'dangerous malady.

The church members of this day are not immune to heart disease. Many expert diagnosticians are trying to discover the cause and suggest a remedy. All kinds of suggestions have been made in an effort to explain the small congregations, the lack of interest in missions, the failure to enlist new members and the apathy towards the general development of the church and the kingdom of God. The preacher is blamed, the lack of efficiency is deplored, the antiquated methods of church finance are criticised and a general attitude of hostility indicates that the church is in a furious battle for its very life.

What is the chief trouble? The trouble is in the heart. And this is universal. That was the diagnosis Jesus made of the people who lived in His day. That was not the only trouble to be corrected. But when the heart is right, other things will take care of themselves. Jesus staked everything upon the regeneration of the heart of humanity. When the heart is wrong every other organ of the body is affected. When the heart is normal other organs of the body are responsive unless they are diseased. A bad heart threatens the whole body.

The devil is working in the heart. In the meantime Satan is diverting the attention of the church to other possible causes of spiritual sickness. He has convinced many leaders that the revival is harmful to the church. Evangelism, especially the mass form, is out of date. The Prince of this world is trying to taboo all emotion and suggests that sermons be more intellectual and less appealing to the feelings of the congregation. He would build a concrete wall around the heart and keep religion out of that inner fortress, while a multitude of evil spirits take up their fiendish abode therein to direct the will and control the life.

Under such conditions many church members need a rest cure every Sunday from 9:00 A. M. until noon. After lunch they may need to refresh themselves by playing golf, fishing and attending the ball game, and going to the movie. They would almost faint if they dared to attend Sunday school, and preaching. And it is out of the question for them to think of going to church on Sunday night. They are so nervous. The strain is too great. They must have rest.

Why not go to church? Many excuses are given by church members and non-members. There is one excuse not usually found in the list, viz.—“My heart is wrong.” That is the real reason—the real explanation—of the indifference and unrest of this age. Sin is in the heart of humanity. Somehow the church—in Sunday school and sermon—must return to this zone and deal with human hearts. Men must become conscious of sin in their hearts. And the preaching of the Gospel should reach these hearts with a message that brings a sense of relief from sin, and leaves an experience of Christ in the inner life. The Holy Spirit is the only Power adequate for that task. Why not have a crusade for Christ and the Holy Spirit in our churches and Sunday schools? That is a panacea for spiritual heart trouble.

THE ANNUAL CONFERENCE. 1936-1937.

The annual session of the Virginia Valley Central Conference will be held August 4th-5th with Mt. Olivet Church, located near McGaheysville. This conference always meets in advance of the other conferences constituting the Southern Convention. The annual conference is an occasion. At least 75 per cent of the delegates are regular attendants at these annual gatherings. The membership of the conference is so nearly the same that a strong friendship often develops. This is true of all of our conferences. The value of the conference, aside from social and fraternal, lies in reports and plans. Reports are necessary. It is helpful to know what a church has accomplished, to know something of the local church's problems, and to know how that church has dealt with such problems; but the vital thing of a conference aside from its reports and inspirational values is its vision of the future and its determination to accomplish fully its mission in the days that are ahead.

I long for the day when our annual conference program will break away from the regular routine that has characterized these programs all through the years. One accustomed to attending these annual sessions can write down from memory practically every item that will be considered. Of course, these are essential things, but can't we tackle our problems with some originality, to say the least? I think that our conference officials who are charged with the responsibility of formulating a program for the annual sessions might do well to consider some of the things vital to the life of the church itself.

For instance, could we have a seminar on prayer? It might be helpful to think for a moment of the value and place of prayer in the life of the individual Christian and in the life of the church as an organization, to remind ourselves of some of the things that have been accomplished by prayer, then to consider our present situation and future responsibilities, and honestly to determine if prayer would be of value to us and to the church. Perhaps we might discover that prayer is still the Christian's vital breath.

Then, too, I think that evangelism might receive definite consideration in our conferences representing the local churches. When we apply the yardstick to our numerical strength, we may be amazed to discover that the trend is backward instead of forward. It isn't because opportunities are less, that population is decreasing and that there are fewer people to be sought and won. The opposite is true. The population is increasing, and the unchurched masses continue to multiply. The church is still the evangelizing agency of the Kingdom. Political forces are most earnest in their evangelistic endeavors. Socialism has its advocates. Communism has its propagandists. Christianity must have its preachers. The church must arise and assert itself. It is the command of God that we seek and save that which is lost. Not only does the salvation of those outside of the church depend on the evangelistic efforts of the church, but the very life of the church is at stake. Whenever Christianity ceases to seek the lost, in reality it ceases to be Christianity.

It is the earnest hope of the writer that our dear church may at an early date be moved from within and be baptized with the spirit of sacrifice and of aggressive evangelistic endeavor that the church may accomplish what God intended for it to accomplish.

It would be well, I think, for the church to take a careful inventory of the present state of the Sunday school. The Sunday school has been the prime factor in the interest of the church. It has been its instructive force. It has been its recruiting agency. It is still its most prolific field. The church as a church cannot easily deal with childhood and with those who are far beyond the reach of the church, but through the Sunday school, the most unlikely may be reached, interested, and enlisted. By far the greater part of the present membership of the church found its way into the Kingdom through the doors of the Sunday school.

We might also with profit deal with the many problems of youth from the standpoint of the church. We have multiplied our organizations for our young people, and I fear that in such multiplications we have lost some of our Christian Endeavor Societies, we have our Youth Fellowship organizations, and we have our Missionary Societies. What is our church to do with such a multiplicity of organizations? If we could simplify our organizations, we might decrease our problems. After all, the one great purpose is to reach and enlist the youth of our church in the program to win the world for Christ.

The minister, of course, occupies a conspicuous position in this forward movement of the church. We have a number of excellent ministers who are doing unusually good work. We need more of that type. We do not have as many full-time pastorates as we should. Our church in the South is predominately rural. We should consider more seriously the grouping of our rural churches into convenient pastorates so that the minister could give time to the local church other than for Sunday services. The minister should live with his people so that he could, in the truest sense of the word, serve as the shepherd of his flock and minister to his people in their individual and personal needs, whether these needs be physical, social, or spiritual. I fear that it has been too much the practice in our church for a minister to give himself to interests other than the pastorate. We have a number of good men who apparently are unwilling to desist from efforts outside of the ministry as a means of earning money. They farm, they write life insurance, they have odd jobs, they do one kind of business or another. No man can be his best in the ministry who divides his thoughts and efforts. We need men who can and will say, "This one thing I do."

Could we, in our annual conferences, give some consideration to the opportunities of the ministry and our great need as a church for young men to enter the ministry? The harvest is ripe and the laborers are few. We need, therefore, to pray the Lord that he would send forth laborers unto his harvest. We do not have enough capable young men preparing for the ministry to supply the needs that are bound to come within the next few years.

I, for one, would like to see the makers of our conference programs deal with things more vital and problems that knock at our hearts for solution.

SHALLOW FORD.

The week of July 11-16, 1937, was the period of evangelistic services at Shallow Ford. The pastor preached the opening sermon on Sunday morning. At the night service Rev. L. T. Barber of Palmetto, Florida, brought a very inspirational message. His presence and fellowship were very helpful and pleasant throughout the meeting.

Rev. H. E. Crutchfield came to us on Monday at 3:00 P. M. His message was highly scriptural and informational to the earnest Bible student. All who expressed their response to his sermons greatly enjoyed them. He made many new friends while here. Many old acquaintances from nearby churches came to renew their old relationship with their former pastor. We wish for him and family at Windsor, Virginia, great joy and success in his labors of love.

There was an increased number in attendance at each service. The church was inspired to continue the fight for righteousness. There was a beautiful cooperative spirit manifested. (Continued on page 11.)

EVANGELISM—TWO LETTERS

All of us, no doubt, highly favor evangelism in one form or another, but many of us do very little about it or have any fixed plan for ourselves or our congregations. As three recent letters appearing in THE CHRISTIAN SUN, by W. H. Freeman, J. J. Carter and Edward F. Green, respectively, clearly indicate, there is a deep seated desire for evangelism. Some laymen feel that the pastors take upon themselves the whole task of evangelism and do very little to enlist the co-operation of their laymen in the evangelistic task. On the other hand, there are pastors, one finds, who feel, or say, that laymen are unwilling to undertake the task of personal evangelism, that is by word of testimony from individual to individual about the saving power of Jesus Christ.

It has recently been pointed out that the emotional, or wholly evangelical churches, such as the Holiness group of churches—Pilgrim Holiness, Pentecostal Holiness, Church of the Nazarene, Church of God, etc., are increasing and growing with amazing rapidity, whereas other churches that are less emotional and lay less emphasis on evangelism are hardly holding their own, and in some cases are decreasing in members.

However the case may be, all of us can agree that there is necessity for more emphasis on soul winning in the church; of sharing by word of personal testimony our knowledge of and experience in Jesus Christ our Saviour and Redeemer. In the matter of evangelism, which is one with missions, there are two letters before me from which I quote. One is from our well-known friend, Mr. Charles S. Bates, who is spending and being spent for personal evangelism here in the home land and in fields afar. Now the other is a personal letter which Mr. Bates hands me from a missionary who by chance saw a recent article in our church paper Advance by Mr. Bates. These letters are so timely that I present portions, to wit:

Friend Atkinson:

Again a line about "personal Witnessing for Christ by word to Individuals."

If every church had a group in action, waves of deepening spiritual activity would start rolling throughout our whole church body, sweeping hundreds of thousands of precious souls into the Kingdom of God on earth; filling our churches with new members, showing to the outside world that the Gospel is the power of God unto salvation to them that believe. And this is a work of righteousness. We talk of Peace; world peace, industrial peace, social peace, soul peace; "And the work of righteousness, quietness and assurance forever." I can see no way to true peace of any kind anywhere in the world, country, nation, tribe, state, county, city, village or family, but through the work of righteousness which is of God by faith in Jesus Christ.

BATES.

A MISSIONARY'S LETTER TO MR. BATES.

"I am very proud to have the honor as well as the privilege of writing you these lines of deep gratitude and heart-felt appreciation. I am confident that God has guided me to write you this letter and make you acquainted with the religious and educational activities which I am carrying on in this part of the world.

"With a keen interest and great satisfaction, I have read your very suggestive and inspiring article, "The Greatest Need of Every Church Today," appearing in Advance, January 1, 1937. You are in this article very properly emphasizing the inevitable fact that "The greatest need of every church today is an organized group of members who will actively serve as personal witnesses for Christ, by word, to individuals." Through this wonderful article of yours you are pointing out one of the greatest needs of the church which we have as pastors omitted. This year I have been able to organize such a group in my church and have been blessed very richly and fully.

"I trust you will be interested in my work and my personal circumstances. I am for the last ten years working as a pastor in this American Evangelical Church, functioning in a very large refugee settlement with a refugee population of about one hundred thousand refugees, and situated under the shadow of historical Parthenon and at the foot of Mars Hill upon which St. Paul delivered his well known message to the people of Athens about 19 centuries ago. In connection with our church and school activities, we have preaching services and mid-week prayer meetings; a C. E. Society with a membership of 100 young men and young women; a Sunday school both for children and grown-ups with an enrollment of 200 scholars, and also a day school attended by 150 pupils.

"I am a young minister of the Gospel handicapped by total blindness. In spite of my physical limitation, the good Lord is using me in His glorious kingdom for the cause of Jesus Christ. For all my restrictions and financial difficulties, I am pressing on with courage, faith in God, and hope for better days.

"Fraternally yours
"K. DEMIRJIAN,

NATION WIDE STUDY OF RURAL AMERICA.

Throughout the country in 1937-1938 mission study groups will be concentrating on the church in Rural America. Dr. Mark A. Dawber, outstanding authority on the rural situation, is the author of the study book for adults, "Rebuilding Rural America;" cloth, $1.00; paper, 60 cents. The supplementary course which has been prepared for use in connection with the study of "Rebuilding Rural America" has been prepared by Dr. Benson Y. Landis, secretary of the American Country Life Association. This course is entitled "The Church and American Rural Life;" paper, 25 cents. In Young People's groups the emphasis will be upon the Southern Mountain situation, one phase of the rural problem. Mr. Edwin E. White has written a book which describes vividly the situation which has developed in the Appalachian Mountains since 1930. Mr. White is also preparing the leaders' helps for this book.

Another special emphasis in the rural situation will be the Migrant labor problem. A book is being prepared on this subject for the use of study groups; paper, 35 cents. Many will wish to use this in connection with the study, "Rebuilding Rural America."—Missionary Herald.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION.

The second organized effort for a better educational program was in the Catechetical Schools. This type of school arose at Alexandria. It was the normal school, a training school, a minister's seminary, so to speak. Its purpose was to prepare teachers and leaders for the Church; and to successfully combat all prejudice against the Church, among the great and learned. These schools grew and flourished at Antioch, Athens, and many other points. It was not long before they actually grew into Cathedral schools or theological schools proper. According to Cubberly, schools were the moral regeneration of society. The daily teaching of morals and religion made it possible to revitalize society.

By the Edict of Milan in 313 Christianity became a legal religion. At the accession of Theodosius in 376 Christianity was the recognized legal religion in the empire. This transformation made Christianity popular and many pagans wanted to join the Church. By 380 church membership was compulsory. At this almost unexpected change the influx of pagans was so great that the Church could not train them. The Church was now on easy street and there was little if any effort made toward Christian education.

For more than a thousand years—476 to the Reformation—there was little effort made to properly instruct the majority of people in religious education. The reformation was largely an effort to revamp the lost art of properly instructing the old and the young in the Word of God and the principles of Christ.

The two most outstanding characters in the reformation were Luther and Calvin. Their most important work was not in preaching sermons, as important as that was and as strong preachers as they were. Their strength was in the work of religious education. The catechism for children and adults, the translations of the Word into the vernacular, and the hymns represent the major portion of their greatness. Like the early Church, this movement was outstanding for its intelligent, devout Christians it produced.

In the early days of our nation daily religious instruction was prevalent. Then in close succession we had the organization of the Sunday school, the Christian Endeavor, and then the various youth movements. All of these movements were steps in the right direction. They were re-lighting a torch which had been extinguished. But the defects which followed have at times almost thrown the modern world back into a pagan state. When the Sunday school was organized and became an auxiliary of the Church, it was not long before the Church relegated to the Sunday schools the major part, if not the whole, of its teaching work. This was, and is, an impossible task. As has already been shown the early Church had daily religious instruction. The local church that has followed that plan has forged ahead down through the ages. What the early Church did in seven days we have tried to do in our American way in 30 minutes on Sunday. What they tried to do with the best teachers that could be mustered we have tried to do with volunteers. The world at large is demanding a change in this prevailing condition.

Conditions of Today.

The present scientific method is expanding man's knowledge of his physical environment to such an extent that we hardly realize that we are living in the same world that we were a quarter of a century ago. Dr. Kenneth Scott Latourette, in his book, "Missions Tomorrow," says "Some of us now only in middle life can look back upon discoveries which have been made since, in our teens or twenties, we had our first training in the sciences. When we were introduced to chemistry and physics, the world within the atom—with electrons, protons, and the quantum theory—was not in our textbooks. Our university courses in astronomy then said nothing of relativity. We did not dream that our sun was a member of a huge spiral nebulae. Nor were astronomers talking of a universe whose distant portions appear to be expanding at a rate which may indicate an explosion."

We, and our grammar grade school children, are faced with philosophies that our fathers knew nothing of. Behaviorism, communism, Nazism, Facism, and many other isms are common conversation to the youth of our day. In our foods we become accustomed to vitamins. These terms are perfectly familiar to the younger children. What is to be our attitude toward them as a church school? Some would have us wink at them and dismiss them.

We are also face to face with selfish racial prejudice. A return to a pagan nationalism is staring us in the face. Wars and rumors of wars are threatening the peace of the world. A selfish materialism is the order of the day. As in the days of Rome the sacredness of the family life is being threatened. The Christian religion is being questioned. What will the Church have to say? Our mission enterprise, holy as we have thought it to be, is being questioned by a modern world.

There is an answer to these questions. There is a salvation to these present day problems. The answer, I believe, is in Christ Jesus. The Church, especially its leaders, must first live Him. The foolishness of expecting our Sunday school to do all the teaching must cease. The Christian home must assume its part. Week day religious education must come back. Personal and mass evangelism both must be given their rightful places in an effort to win the unreached. The fanaticism of laying all the emphasis on either this life or the life to come will have to cease. It is not on either one. It is on both, and I hope the day is not far distant when we shall rediscover the art of Christ in teaching. His was an art of self-surrender to his Father. His was the best and highest type of acquiring and presenting knowledge. His was a constant attempt at his undertaking. The present day has a right to insist on this. It is our privilege to work at and follow the Light wherever found until we perfect the way.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

PROGRAM GUIDE.

The officers of the Eastern Virginia Fellowship have recently worked out a Program Guide for distribution to each local young people's group in the conference. This booklet represents much careful preparation on the part of the leaders, and its usefulness is self-evident.

After the introduction, which gives the purpose of the organization, the membership, how it is financed, and the goals for the coming year, we find definite program suggestions for each month during the next year, beginning with August. These have been so carefully worked out that they include all the phases of activity for a young people's group—study, missions, recreation, worship, social action. In cases where special programs for certain days are suggested, materials suitable for these programs are listed. If the leaders in any other conference would like a copy of this booklet, in order to secure ideas for use in their own work, you may secure a copy by writing to 514 S. Main St., Norfolk, Virginia.

We are taking the liberty of printing here the suggestions which the Eastern Virginia Fellowship is carrying out for August:

1. Begin plans for fall and winter activities.

2. Christian Endeavor Societies hold prayer meetings throughout the year with pre-prayer service before each meeting. Each first Sunday is to be observed as consecration meeting.

3. Observe one Sunday as Mission Sunday or hold a regular monthly meeting. Complete your study of the American Negro. If your group has not contributed to Missions, see that an offering is sent this month.

4. Make special effort to have young people observe the "Morning Watch" or "Quiet Hour" daily. Give each member a copy of "Religion and Life," a daily devotional for three months, which costs 5c.

5. Hold a communion service in your meeting and use Junior deacons who have been instructed by the minister, or have Junior deacons from your groups aided by the church deacons to assist at a regular communion service.

6. Stimulate character study and building through reading.—Suggested test: "Twelve Tests of Character," by Harry Emerson Fosdick.

7. Hold mid-week study class out of doors, studying nature passages in the Bible.

8. Arrange a visitation campaign to contact members and prospective members in preparation for the fall work. Make a survey of the church roll for prospective members.

9. Take a group of aged people or underprivileged children for auto rides.

10. Secure subscriptions to the "Pilgrim Highroad."

11. Have a swimming party or a hike.

12. C. E. Societies plan for Founder's Day, September 12th.

E. M. C.

A CODE FOR CHRISTIAN YOUTH.

1. I will regard my body as a temple of the Holy Spirit.

2. I will preserve my self-respect.

3. I will be myself.

4. I will regard my life as a stewardship.

5. I will look upon myself as a school.

6. I will respect personality in others.

7. I will make my religion socially effective.

8. I will exalt the Church of Jesus Christ.

9. I will try to make my religion attractive.

10. I will follow Christ.

PLEASE NOTE.

Mrs. Grace E. Stewart, 419 So. Eugene St., Greensboro, North Carolina, will appreciate it greatly if the person who borrowed "Funology" from her room just before the Summer School closed at Elon will return it to her. The book belongs to Mr. W. B. Truitt. It is easy to get books mixed, and it is nice to return those that belong to someone else. Thanks for looking, and for returning the book, if you find it.

What religion needs today is not more flying with God, or leaping with God, or jumping up and down with God, or going into spasms and convulsions and epileptic fits with God. What religion needs today is more walking with God.

GAMBLING, A RACKET.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC
FOR AUGUST 8, 1937.

SCRIPTURE: Exodus 20:15; Matt. 27:35.

Daily Readings—

Monday—The Gambler Fails at Last—Prov. 13: 5-11.

Tuesday—Resist the Gambling Gangsters—Prov. 1: 10-16.

Wednesday—Work vs. Gambling—Prov. 28: 19.

Thursday—When Conscience is Dead—Isa. 59: 1-8.

Friday—The Gambler's Fate—Jer. 6: 10-13.

Saturday—The Better Way—Prov. 16: 8.

The word gamble means to risk something of value upon a chance. It is discovered in hundreds of forms, at fairs, carnivals, shows and many other public places; the menace is ruining the life of many. It eats as a cancer at the moral fibers of human life. The man who spins the wheel at the circus does not intend to lose. To gamble is not to play a game of chance with fairness; it is to be a sucker for vicious men who prey upon society.

Something to Think About—

1. Is it true that "you can't beat the gambling game?"

2. Does the winner usually save what he has gained or does he continue to gamble?

3. If he continues, how many times out of a hundred does he win?

4. Does he lose anything besides money?

5. When one person wins, how many lose?

6. Does a Christian have a right to anything he did not earn, unless someone gave it to him?

7. Are we becoming more accustomed to gambling practices as a part of one's right of indulgence?

8. Is entering our name for the "jack pot," in an effort of chance, honest?

9. Does this method weaken our moral characters?

Suggested Hymns—

"Crown Him Lard of All."

"Jesus Calls Us."

"Rise Up, O Men of God."

GOD LEADS A PEOPLE.

LESSON V—AUGUST 1, 1937.

GOLDEN TEXT: The Lord will guide thee continually—Isaiah 58:11.

LESSON: Exodus 13:17-15:21.

The day, or rather the night of march had come. Six hundred thousand men, with women and children, and some household goods, had slipped away at night and started to "the land of promise." It was an auspicious beginning, but little did those people realize what was in store for them. Like so many people, who when they profess religion, think that is the end, or so many young people who graduate from high school or college and think they are educated, these people thought that mere deliverance from Egypt was the main thing. But God had other plans and purposes.

The Peril of Short Cuts.

"God led them not through the way of the Philistines, although that was near." God knew the peril of short cuts. He knew the people were soft, callow, unprepared to meet a rough, war-like people like the Philistines. God tempers the wind to the shorn lamb. He does not ask us to run before we can walk, or to walk before we can crawl. God was interested in developing a nation with character. Three must be the long discipline of the desert, the cultivation of a sense of dependence on Him, the growth of spiritual stature. God cannot give us "promised lands" outright; they must be earned. God cannot give us His blessings immediately; we have to be prepared to receive them. Education comes only by the discipline of the mind; physical prowess comes only by exercise and wholesome living; character comes only as an achievement, by the discipline of daily living. Our modern world with its emphasis upon speed should learn the danger of short cuts.

Keeping Faith With the Dead.

"And Moses took the bones of Joseph with him, for he had straitly sworn the children of Israel, saying, God will surely visit you; and ye shall carry up my bones away hence with you." With simple faith and inspired insight Joseph had predicted that God would some day lead his people out of the bondage into political and spiritual as well as economic freedom. And with true homing instinct he had asked that his bones be carried back to "the old family burying ground." In the hustle and bustle of getting away from Egypt Moses did not forget the dying request of Joseph. Here is a touch of sentiment in the midst of the practical. It is well enough to be progressive; it is a mistake to let the hand of the dead past rest too heavily upon us; but there are certain sentiments that have a legitimate place in the practical world of affairs of even our twentieth century life.

The Cloud by Day and the Fire by Night.

"And the Lord went before them by day in a pillar of a cloud, to lead them the way; and by night in a pillar of fire to give them light; to go by day and by night." It is just another way of saying that they went forward conscious that they were being led by the Divine Presence, that God was guiding them. Even now God guides those who give themselves to do His will. The meek will He guide in judgment and the meek will He teach His way. He who doeth the will of God walks in the presence and companionship of God.

Pursuing Enemies.

Let any man or group set themselves to follow the gleam and they will find many hostile forces to vex them. In the case of the Israelites Pharaoh had no intention of letting an abundance of cheap labor get away from him. In spite of his promise to the people—and he was not the first or the last to make glib promises to labor when forced into it—he summoned his chariots and warriors and started after the departing Hebrews. He thought he had them for they were apparently hemmed in from both sides, and from the rear, while before them stretched a seemingly impassable arm of the Red Sea.

Murmuring and Complaining.

How fickle humans are. As long as everything was going smoothly the Hebrews felt that they were sitting on top of the world. But when they saw the Egyptians coming and realized that they were going to face opposition they began to murmur and complain. They wanted freedom without paying the price of freedom. They "could not take it" as we say in our modern slang. How many there are of us who murmur and complain when things do not always go just like we would have them to go! How prone we are to find fault and to be satisfied with the easier and lower things, rather than to face life and its issues and to play the part of men.

A Time to Pray and a Time to Act.

"And the Lord said unto Moses, Wherefore criest thou unto me?"

There is a time, of course, for prayer. The fact of the matter is that we do not pray enough. But there are times when one must stop praying and act. Only one night this week I was reading the life of Sir Wilfried Greenfel and it was stated that he did not believe in praying for anything that one could get for himself. We sometimes put too much responsibility in God. There are times when we need to get up off our knees and move about on our feet. We must help to answer our own prayers.

Forward March.

"Speak to the children of Israel that they go forward." It seemed ilke an impossible command. Mountains or swamp on either side, an armed host in chariots to the rear, and the waters of the Red Sea in front. And yet the command comes to go forward. It is God's way. There is no retreat in His plan. His trumpets do not know how to sound a retreat. Through or around or over obstacles He leads His people. And as His servants obey His command He opens the way. Jesus said "Follow me." He goes before, He opens the way.

Through the Waters.

"But the children of Israel walked upon dry land in the midst of the sea." The account frankly states that the Lord caused the sea to go back by a strong east wind. What trouble does to us depends upon what trouble finds in us. The Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of the temptation, and to deliver them in trouble.

Men cannot labor on always. They must have intervals of relaxation. They cannot sleep through these intervals. What are they to do? Why, if they do not work or sleep, they must have recreation. And if they have not recreation from healthful sources, they will be very likely to take it from the poisoned fountains of intemperance. Or, if they have pleasures, which, though innocent, are forbidden by the maxims of public morality, their very pleasures are liable to become poisoned fountains.

MONDAY.

IN THE SHADE OF THE BAD.

"And the bramble said unto the trees, if in truth ye anoint me king over you, then come and take refuge in my shade."—Judges 9:15.

This scripture sounds like the act of one who has his price for the selling of his character. It is the picture of one holding out the hand to be filled and offering therefor the compensation of the soul. Read this chapter (verses seven to twenty-one) and gather strength for thy soul from the pictures there of those who would not sell their souls even to be king.

Whom do you anoint as king over you? The world is full of brambles who want to be king. They claim our price every day. Test every claim. Hold fast only to the worthy.

Prayer—Dear Heavenly Father, Guardian of our souls, we trust in Thee. May we never fall to the temptations of the bramble. Protect us and preserve us. In Christ's name we ask it. Amen.

TUESDAY.

NEVER SAY "LOST."

"There is hope for thy latter end, saith the Lord."—Jer. 15:17.

This text is just another way of saying "He that turneth from all the sins which he hath committed shall surely live." The only limit ever placed upon this is that of sin against the Holy Ghost. And the sin against the Holy Ghost has been described to be that of sinning so long that one cannot break the shackles which it has bound upon him. There comes a time when the filthy will remain filthy forever. Abraham could not help Dives, once he was in hell.

The Lord encourageth repentance till the very last. And every sinner turning to God will find Him waiting to bless him even as the prodigal found his father waiting for him.

Prayer—Dear Heavenly Father, remove every vestige of unbelief there may be within us, and help us to enter into that life of God that is beyond the grasp of sin. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

AGAIN "NO."

"He upraided them with unbelief and hardness of heart."—Mark 16:14.

Again our Lord tells us that we are never beyond hope. This reproof was administered after the resurrection and administered because they would not believe even what they had seen. Thousands still find it hard to believe what they actually see in Christ.

Unbelief hardens one's heart. Faith cannot enter a heart of unbelief any more than water can enter granite or steel. There is nothing more devastating to belief and to the kingdom of God in the future than the custom of multitudes to bring up children without instruction in Christian principles. This is done with a view that when the children reach the age of responsibility they may choose for themselves without prejudice. But to grow up without this training is to grow up in unbelief. We are not born with hardened hearts. The hearts of children are soft and may be trained in anything. Parents usually see that they are trained in everything but religion. To leave God out breeds a generation of infidelity. We harden them ourselves. That is why Christ upraided his hearers with their unbelief.

If we want faith we can have it. Faith in God's greatest gifts. As the love of God softens our hearts, belief springs up into glory.

Prayer—O God, in the name of Jesus, give us unbounding faith and a rejoicing in that faith. Amen.

THURSDAY.

CONTENT WITH WORD-WISDOM.

"Not in wisdom of words, lest the cross of Christ should be made void."—I Cor. 1:17.

To understand the uselessness of surface wisdom and the necessity of the deeper wisdom read this reference—verses seventeen to twenty-five. Christian living must pierce down into the realities of life. If we love only the wisdom of words, we shall always lack the guidance so much needed. It is tragic that we so often miss the heart of things.

Christ's was never the wisdom of words; if it had been He would have never gone to the cross, and Christianity would have been found long ago to be but a myth. They who worship Christ must worship Him in spirit and in truth.

Prayer—Our Saviour, save us from the superficiality and insufficiency of mere words, but give us Christianity through and through. Amen.

FRIDAY.

SLACKNESS.

"How long are ye slack to go in to possess the land, which the Lord, the God of your Fathers, hath given you."—Joshua 18:3.

Like the Israelites, we are too slow to go forward into what God reserves for us, and the coming of the kingdom of God in its fulness is being delayed thereby. There is the land of health, the land of beauty, the land of wisdom, the land of happiness, the land of strength, and the land of holiness. And we are resting supinely on our own and taking it easy. How disappointed God must be with us! Let us believe and launch our all on an undaunting faith.

Prayer—O Eternal King, as befits thy children to bring in Thy kingdom, may we slacken not, nor procrastinate. In Thy name we ask it. Amen.

SATURDAY.

3,200 MILES FOR A SERMON.

"Arise, go to the Euphrates, and hide it there in a cleft of the rock."—Jer. 13:1-9.

Jeremiah had time enough to prepare sermons that made lasting impressions. To furnish the one illustration of the decayed girdle, setting forth the decay of Judah because of her sins, he traveled at least 800 miles (and on foot) from Jerusalem to the Euphrates and back again, and he did it twice, 3,200 miles in all. Who would do that today for the sake of emphasizing a sermon?

And yet to get any truth of God into people's hearts is worth all imaginable toil and trouble. We are laboring for Him who holds a thousand years but as a single day.

Why may we not also get into step with the patient continuance of Jehovah?

Prayer—Give us the strength and firmness, our God, that are necessary to accomplish all Thy will for us and through us. In Thy name. Amen.

Amos R. Wells.

SUNDAY.

THE LINEN CLOTH.

"He left the linen cloth, and fled naked."—Mark 14:44-52.

It is thought to have been Mark who thus ran away when the Saviour was arrested. He was young, as we know, and was not stout of heart, as we learn years later when he became the assistant of Paul on the first missionary journey. It is not surprising that he cast off his linen sheet and fled naked from the soldiers.

Mark afterwards became bolder, courageous enough to win the sincere approval of the soldiery Paul. He learned to keep his linen sheet and face any foe that might assail him. But it was evidently a slow evolution.

So we can learn from John Mark a

BIRTHDAYS.

By REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D.

"Ye must be born again."—
John 3:7.

Young people and children like birthdays! All of us have them. Some of us have them right often, or they seem oftener to some than others. Some time ago I had a birthday, and on it I received a card from a Baptist minister friend. The card said: "Cheer up, it doesn't show!" How nice! But I was telling this to a deacon friend, and he remarked: "Yes, but if you put enough of them together they will show!" And there-by hangs the question of this message: What will they show?

It is interesting to put the above text along side our birthdays. Of course we know that Jesus was not talking of the common run of birthdays when he told Nicodemus that Ye must be born again. Let us say that that meant the accepting of the Christian program of life. As I was saying it is interesting to think of other birthdays, and to come to saying "Yes, we must be born again, and again!" In other words, there are birthdays and birthdays!

The first day at school when a little fellow walks out of the house, never to walk back again just like he was; the little country boy's first sight of the city, his heart leaps up in his throat when he sees so many, many houses so very close together, and the great and tall buildings—well they make another birthday; his first office in church as a Sunday school boy; his first day away from home in preparatory school; his first day in college; his first day with his first position; his first sermon, or address; his wedding day; the day a long-looked-for baby is placed in his arms; and somewhere along the road his first great sorrow. Yes, indeed, ye must be born again, and again, and again!

As I have been talking you have been calling up in your minds days of new beginnings, and the new days of first beginnings. Every one will recognize some days which were decisive in their lives; some days after which they could never be the same. In a measure we may call them birthdays, and let us hope that they were stepping stones to higher and holier days. They may not add an extra candle on the cake, but if we take God into account they will add extra usefulness, extra happiness, and extra joy throughout all the years to come.

A new experience if we have Jesus as our friend can, indeed, be a day of new worth to ourselves and to the world. God has placed the days of crisis on our road hoping that they will be evaluated in the light of his wisdom, and love, and mercy; and that we may be sweeter, finer, better for having known them. So many of you in this congregation will recognize that the lines I am about to quote were written about my father-in-law. Please pardon anything amiss in them, but as I have known him bed-fast for so many years, and seen the sweet smile on his face, and the inexpressible joy as his friends have told him what an inspiration his life has been to them, I have thought of his birthdays, when he has been baptized with experience of pain and suffering and I have sought to express it in the following simple lines:

Not in long years, but in ardent love,
He found the measure and meaning of life;
Not in loud boast, but in brave toil,
A victory and mastery over strife.

Not in cringing fear, but courageous faith,
In overcoming odds and ends;
Not in saying how little, but seeing how much,
He could do for his neighbors and friends.

Faithful to fields, and flocks, and herds,
He loved the soil and the sun;
And when he stopped at the end of the day
A dozen men's work had been done!

Faithful to home, and school, and church,
Forsaking or forgetting not one,
And when he finished doing his part,
A man's full share was done.

A fortune in sons and daughters he made,
Cultivating his soul, and his sod;
And when he has gone on it can be safely said,
A good man has gone home to God!

If you put enough birthdays together they will show. Yes, but what will they show? As I say, that is what I am concerned about. I am concerned about it myself, and I am concerned about it for each of you. Will they show only years? Methuselah's birthdays exceeded all the rest. He lived thirty times as long as Jesus. For every year that Jesus lived Methuselah lived a whole life-span as long as the life of Jesus. A single sentence served to tell of the birth and death of Methuselah; untold volumes have been written about Jesus, and library shelves are bending under the load of new books coming out every year to tell the story of His "going about doing good." One of the first of the multitude who have taken it in hand to tell about him said, "And there are also many other things which Jesus did, which, if they should be written everyone, I suppose that even the world itself could not contain the books that should be written."—John 21:25.

What will your birthdays and mine show? Graying heads, and stooping shoulders, and faltering steps? What will they show? The mark of the calendar, or the mark of the Christ? Will they show that we are growing finer, better, broader, kinder, gentler, holier, and nobler; or will they show that our souls are becoming more wrinkled than our face? Will they show a wealth of patience, or a growth of criticism? Will we be looking farther and farther ahead into the future, or will we be turning more and more surely back into the dead past? Will we see the possibilities in the powers and graces of young people, or will we let their petty sins and idiosyncracies blight our hopes for their futures? Will we grow to be more and more their dear and trusted friend, or will we be more and more shunned for our lack of sympathy and understanding? Yes, the years will show; but what?

I have sought a word to end this message with—one long, fine word to express a lifelong wish, as to what the years may show. What word will you choose? As for me I choose the one word: Sharing! Let me share the best, the best I have, and the best that I can be!

lesson of confidence, even if we are hesitant, awkward, and likely to run away in life's battles. If we stick with Peter, Paul, and Barnabas long enough, we may yet fight with them, side by side.

Prayer—But not without Thy spirit possessing us, our conquering Leader! Enter our souls, we pray Thee, and abide. Amen.

Amos R. Wells.

When young men are beginning life, the most important period, it is often said, is that in which their habits are formed. That is a very important period. But the period in which the ideas of the young are formed and adopted is more important still. For the ideal with which you go forward to measure things determines the nature, so far as you are concerned, of everything you meet.

The Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

The writer has often heard it said that you have to take the bitter with the sweet. Several weeks ago we put up a number of swings for the little children so they could be out in the fresh air in the shade of the trees.

They had been having a good time and enjoyed their swings very much and had no accidents until Friday, July 23rd, when little Ida Belle White (Patsy as we call her), the baby in the Johnston Hall, fell and broke her wrist right short in two, both bones. But as soon as she gets well she will be on the swing again.

The orphanage has had quite a bit of bad luck. It has had its own system of pumping for a number of years, our well has been furnishing all the water we needed for our plant; but the town ran short of water and had to dig another well and it seems that the town must have struck the flow in the orphanage well as our well has greatly decreased in its flow of water so low that it has become necessary for the orphanage to dig deeper. This will put the orphanage to quite a lot of extra expense this year when we don't have the money to spare. "It's the bitter with the sweet."

We don't know when we start drilling through rock just how far we will have to go to get a water supply and people who drill wells don't work for love; but for the profit there is in it. The upkeep on a plant like this is quite an item. Buildings to repair, painting to be done and a hundred and one things to do that those who are not on the job would not think about.

But remember it all goes in the service rendered in giving the little children in our care a home and training.

How much have you invested in the orphanage this year?

MR. HOPKINS FACES A DIFFICULT TASK.

Congress is putting the finishing touches on a relief appropriation bill which will provide a billion and a half for another year's continuation of the WPA. The bill, as it is about to be passed, puts on Mr. Hopkins and his subordinates one of the most difficult tasks of an administrative nature ever to be placed on government officials. Strictly speaking, it doesn't provide even the full billion and a half for relief, for about a tenth of the total is already earmarked for agencies other than WPA. That leaves Mr. Hopkins with only $1,350,000,000—and that granted only after a stiff fight in the Senate in which

In Memoriam

PIERCE.

Clara Judson Pierce was born February 1, 1884, and died July 17, 1937, aged eighty-nine years, five months and seventeen days. In October 1865, she joined Union Creek Baptist Church. Her husband died more than twenty years ago. She is survived by three sons, Oscar, Tiler, and Coma, and one daughter, Miss Edna Pierce. There are twelve grand-children and two great grand-children. Sister Pierce was in normal health until her last illness, which was just for a few weeks.

She was devoted to her children and they to her. Two, Coma and Miss Edna, remained at home with her. The funeral and burial were conducted by the writer at Liberty Christian Church on Sunday, July 18, 1937. The church was filled with loved ones and friends.

C. E. NEWMAN.

TUCK.

Lena Dare Tuck, daughter of Henry M. and Beulah Bray Tuck, was born February 14, 1925, and died June 25, 1937. She is survived by her father, mother two brothers: John and Edward and three sisters: Margaret, Nannie and Julia Alese. Lena was an unusual child, loved not only by her home people, but by her gréat number of friends. She joined Liberty Christian Church at an early age and loved to attend Church and Sunday school.

Shortly before her death she was taken to Richmond, where she underwent a serious operation for sinus and mastoiditis, but passed away a few days later. The funeral and burial were at Liberty Church on Saturday, June 27, 1937. The flowers were beautiful and so symbolic of the beautiful life she had lived.

May God ever bless and comfort the parents and others of the home.

C. E. NEWMAN.

GLASSCOCK.

Little Daniel Glascock died in his third year on June 28, 1937. He was the son of Brother Willie and Sister Maud Morris Glascock. There are surviving, besides the parents one sister and five brothers. It is a great grief to the family to lose Daniel. But they are Christian parents and believe in Christ's promises for this life and in the heavenly home where there is to be a reunion of the broken family circle.

C. E. NEWMAN.

ROTHGEB.

Mrs. George W. Rothgeb, age 73 years and 7 months, died at her home in Luray, Virginia, after only a brief serious illness. She had not been in the best of health for several years but she was stricken with a heart ailment on Tuesday, July 13th, from which she never rallied. At four o'clock the following day, Wednesday, she passed on to her reward.

Mrs. Rothgeb loved her home, her children, her church. She and her husband have lived happily together for the past fifty-four years. She leaves to mourn her loss her faithful husband, 7 children, 18 grand-children, one great-grand-child, 3 brothers, and two sisters. All of the children were able to come home for the funeral except Mrs. M. J. W. White of the Virgin Islands.

The services were held at Léakesville Christian Chorch, where she had been a member since the age of 13 years. The writer conducted the services, assisted by Rev. D. L. Fringer and Rev. J. E. Childress.

She was truly a great Christian Mother and wife and a Saviour unto every one. Truly her name is written in the Book of Life.

W. J. ANDES.

JOHNSON.

Whereas it has pleased Almighty God, in His infinite wisdom and mercy, to remove from our midst our beloved brother and deacon, Joseph G. Johnson, who departed this life December 16, 1936, and,

Whereas he was a consistent and devoted member of Mt. Carmel Christian Church from early childhood, having served as deacon for several years, the church wishes to express its appreciation of the life and services of the deceased in the following resolutions:

1. That we bow in humble submission to Him who doeth all things well and careth for His own;

2. That in his death the church has lost a loyal and devoted member, but our loss has been heaven's gain;

3. That his standard of living made him an asset to the community, and it was a pleasure to associate with him;

4. That a copy of these resolutions be entered on our church records, a copy be sent to the family of the deceased, and a copy be sent to "The Christian Sun" for publication.

J. C. JOHNSON,

R. T. BOWDEN,

Committee.

NEAL.

Nannie Davis Neal, daughter of Hard and Becky Jane Davis, died at her home near Buffalo Junction, Virginia, July 4, 1937, at the age of eighty-four years. She had been a member of Hebron Christian Church since a young girl and was a sincere Christian. She married Mr. Neal about 1880. To them were born six children Mrs. Ida Ladd, Sudie, Ada, Ellis, Clarence and Willie. There are eight living and seven deceased grandchildren.

The funeral was held at the home by the writer and the burial in the family burying ground not far away. There was present to give evidence to the esteem in which she was held one of the largest crowds ever seen in that section. The floral offerings were immense.

HOPKINS' DIFFICULT TASK.

such administration wheelhorses as Senator Robinson and Senator Harrison fought the request of the President. In other words, the appropriation has gone through Congress by such a narrow margin that Mr. Hopkins knows he hasn't much chance of being able to go back for additional grants later on. He must make his relief program fit his $1,350,000,000. That, in terms of past WPA experience, means that he can take care of approximately 1,687,500 persons. It is believed that the number on WPA payrolls at the middle of the present month will be about 1,665,477. This is inside the new WPA budget, to be sure, but it is also at the peak of the seasonal occupation period. Relief demands are almost certain to mount rapidly when cold weather returns. Moreover, there is always the chance that further rises in the cost of living will throw out of balance the WPA estimate of $800 per year per worker. The margin within which the federal relief administration must operate is a terribly narrow one. At the same time, the demands which the administration must meet are not to be ignored. These are, in the main, three:

First, there is the demand of taxpayers that the costs of relief be reduced.

Second, there is the demand from states and cities that none of the costs be passed along to them.

Third, there is the demand from the otherwise unemployed that they be saved from social slaughter.

We do not envy Mr. Hopkins his next twelve months.

It Pays To Be Good

By FREDERICK A. EARLE

The day woke up with a sort of a frown,
And dark clouds in his eyes.
So cross was he that he had said to the sun,
"Go, hide within the skies.
I'll get some rain and a great big wind
To blow it everywhere
And picnics spoil; and if folks get wet—
Well, let them—I don't care."

A bird just then in the apple tree
Began his morning song.
His bright eyes watched, and he couldn't make out
What kept the sun so long.
The flowers, wet with the crystal dew,
Looked sadly at the sky,
For when the day is all misty-moist,
How can their tresses dry?

Dressed spick and span with their baskets filled,
The children hoped 'twould clear,
As they looked up and the day looked down,
Then something happened, queer.
A little tear in each blue eye,
He did not think to find;
And sorry then, he said to himself,
"I guess I'll change my mind."

The frown, it grew to a happy smile;
The clouds fell in the sea.
And lo! The sun with his face all washed
Was bright as he could be.
Said everyone, "What a lovely day."
And when the west turned red,
Day said, "It pays, it pays to be nice."
And, glad, he went to bed.

God, Who Touchest Earth With Beauty

God, who touchest earth with beauty,
Make me lovely, too;
With Thy Spirit recreate me,
Make my heart anew.

Like Thy springs and running waters
Make me crystal pure;
Like Thy rocks and towering grandeur
Make me strong and sure.

Like Thy dancing waves in sunlight,
Make me glad and free;
Like the straightness of the pine trees
Let me upright be.

Like the arching of the heavens
Lift my thoughts above;
Turn my dreams to noble action—
Ministries of love.

God, who touchest earth with beauty,
Make me lovely, too;
Keep me ever, by Thy Spirit,
Pure, and strong, and true.

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

The editor has been spending some time recently with our workers in Carroll County.

Rev. and Mrs. Carl R. Key, of Holland, Virginia are spending their vacation with Mrs. Key's parents at East Northfield, Massachusetts.

An excellent revival service was held recently at Pleasant Grove, Virginia, under the direction and preaching of Rev. W. Millard Stevens, pastor of Union Alamance Church. Many members expressed their appreciation of the fine services at the meeting.

The bulletin of our Suffolk Christian Church for July 25th carries announcements of the church program for September. They open after vacation on Wednesday, September 1st, with a discussion of "Our Church"—brief talks concerning men, women, young people, Sunday school, and choirs. This preliminary announcement indicates that the church really expects to do business after the pastor, Dr. John G. Truitt, returns from vacation.

None of Rev. A. R. Flowers' old school mates or playmates ever heard him using profanity or telling smutty jokes; and we are not surprised at the efforts that he is putting forth to break up these evil practices that have been so much on the increase among young people during the last fifteen or twenty years, especially among young women. He is calling on the clean-minded young men and women in our high schools and colleges where he goes to use their influence against this thoughtless unholy practice. He is to be commended for his position.

MISS COGHILL'S CAR.

About three months ago we joyously reported that friends had made it possible for Miss Pattie Lee Coghill to have a new Chevrolet. Pattie Lee was very proud of her new car and it was adding greatly to the joy of her service. But the car has come to grief through no fault of hers. It was loaned to one of the Student Summer Service workers to go from a summer conference to one of the rural churches in Georgia for a preaching appointment. The young man was not familiar with Georgia clay roads and ran into a cloud burst and the car skidded off the bridge and was very badly damaged. The student's life was miraculously preserved and he was not even seriously injured. It has seemed best to turn in the car and get a new one. It calls for $325.00, but we cannot turn to the old friends to replace the car. We are hoping that contributions will come from churches, young people's societies and friends of Miss Coghill in our southeast area. Anyone wishing to make a contribution, however small, should send it to Rev. Edwin C. Gillette, 117 W. Forsyth Street, Jacksonville, Florida.

YOUNGSVILLE.

As my meetings progress, I find that I would like to give a bit of news concerning our field. My first meeting was at Youngsville. Rev. S. E. Madren did the preaching for us. We had good attendance and splendid interest. Brother Madren endeared himself to the hearts of the people. The women had just had the building painted inside, had put down new floor, and put in new windows. We received one member by letter.

Our next meeting was at Mt. Auburn—this was a union meeting with the other churches in the community. Dr. Stanley C. Harrel was the preacher. The attendance increased each service. Much good was accomplished, with six members received for three of the churches. Dr. Harrell was at his best and the people were stirred by his preaching.

The meeting last week was with the church at Fuller's Chapel. Rev. J. Everett Neese of Henderson did the preaching. The meeting, as we would judge, was a great success. The congregation increased in number till the last night, when we had almost a house full. Brother Neese preached a good sermon every time, as the attendance and interest showed. At the closing service the pastor's car was loaded with lots of things (good) to eat; for which he is indeed grateful.

This week we are in a meeting with the church at Moore Union. Rev. S. M. Penn of Sophia is doing the preaching. On Sunday the Sunday school sponsored a Children's Day program, which was attended by a large congregation.

On Sunday night it was my happy privilege to worship with Rev. J. R. Denton and his people at Grace's Chapel. This is a fine community and they have a splendid new brick veneered building.

BETHANY CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

A few miles off the highway between Suffolk and Smithfield, Virginia, back in the woods by a country road, there stands an old Christian Church. The walls are broken and lack paint, the doors are not so good, and everything about the building shows something of long use and neglect. The people who worship there seem to be interested, and many of them are young people. They are black and poor. But they want a beautiful building in which to worship the Redeemer. They are hoping and praying and working for this new and worthy building. A letter from deacon J. L. Edwards says that he remembered how Dr. Atkinson asked a man for $5,000.00, and got it. He tried the same plan, and—but let him tell the story:

"I asked him if he would give me $6,000.00 for my church. He looked down, then away off, and then at me. He said to me: 'You work yourself to death for that nigger church. When are you going to get your pay?' I said to him: 'God will pay me.' He said: 'Why didn't you ask God for the $6,000.00?' I said to him: 'I did, and he sent me to you because you owe the money to Him.' He said if I would raise $6,000.00 he would give me $7,000.00. I'm out for it."

A later note says that several churches have helped, and that Mr. Roger Babson has sent a check for ten dollars. Deacon Edwards has been sick, but his heart is set on that new church for the glory of God and the good of the Christian Church Negroes of Virginia. It may be that some readers of THE CHRISTIAN SUN will want to help with this very worthy enterprise. If so, they can send any contributions to Deacon J. L. Edwards, R. 1, Smithfield, Virginia. Such contributions will greatly encourage a struggling people in their upward progress.

A LANGUAGE WITHOUT PROFANITY.

The Japanese language is the only language in the world, says the Christian Union Herald, in which there is not a profane word. Although thousands of expressions and phrases have been absorbed from other languages, the native tongue remains clean and wholesome. To be profane is the worst thing that any man, over there can do. He realizes it, and knows that if he indulges in profanity picked up from foreigners, he will be ostracized by his friends, his neighbors and his own family.

CHRISTIAN UNITY.

Dear Editor:

The question of the unity of the Church of Christ has so many different phases that you could not touch all the important ones in two short editorials. We are living in 1937. We should have—and I think generally do have—more breadth of fellowship than in 1790. Maybe the leaders could not have more theoretically, but the rank and file of the Church have practically.

The present groups: Baptist, Methodist, Presbyterian, Congregational, etc., are not of our generation, or even of our fathers' generation. A new grouping is in the offing. It seems to line up as Liberals and Conservatives—Liberal being in italics. These two types can and do worship together in the same local church. But one group or the other must be in the majority. It does not look as if the next generation—and surely not our generation, will see one organic body of Protestant believers—in spiritual fellowship.

Our fathers who founded a group of over 100,000 people in their efforts to be free Bible Christians certainly were pioneers as to Christian fellowship. They hardly expected to see the detailed plans for 150 years in the future. They could not give us those. As an English Congregational preacher, a Rev. Palmer, said at Old Orchard some years ago, "The Church has borrowed its machinery from a lost world," (referring to ritualism and to combines).

As one who has lived 15 years on the foreign field, I can testify that I went out believing that better work could be done for Christ if there were one great Protestant Mission Board. I returned feeling that such a policy would do great injustice and accomplish less for the Kingdom of God than even the present arrangement, which is admittedly not ideal. Other missionaries do not agree, though many do.

In every great religious system, as in political systems, there are workable groups within the main group—Mohammedism, Buddhism, Roman Catholicism, etc. That is not because of "warring, unfriendliness, or rival camps" primarily. It is because human nature needs latitude—room in which to express itself. Christ is not wounded when we work for a needed independence, for that is what he would have us possess. He is much more hurt by dictators and by borrowing worldly machinery which does not fit. A non-Christian who will not accept the Christian life, says to his Christian friend, "You are holier than I, are you?"

And the larger church groups say to the Holiness and the Nazarene groups: "Art thou holier than we with our traditions of martyrs and saints?" But "wisdom is justified of her children"—yes, independent churches and all!

The New Hampshire State Convention of our Congregationalist friends recently met in Portsmouth. Of course many good things were said, but in this connection the pastor of the Court Street Christian Church reported the ministers' meeting. It was brought out most forcibly that laymen are staying away from church because there is a lack of positive preaching.

Then the pastors were exhorted not to be too liberal in preaching—neither too conservative—that is, to play politics with the preaching and aim to "offend nobody and reach nowhere," which is just the reason why the laymen are staying at home!

The Court Street pastor thought it no basis for his sermon if he understood the point of the discussion—and he is usually keen enough. It is not our Congregational friends alone who are blindly groping for "a glorious mean" and forgetting Rev. Palmer's challenge. "The Church is never useful to God unless she believes intensely." M. A. TRUE.

SWEAT AND TAXES.

With the Federal government ending its fiscal year, and Congress passing tax and appropriation bills, it is time to stop and take stock again.

At the present moment, the federal and other governments are more than $54,000,000,000.00 in debt. Which means that each man, woman and child in the land owes $420.00. By the time that debt and the interest on it are paid off, it will reach the unbelievable sum of $106,000,000,000.00 or $840.00 per person.

Where does all that money come from? Well, first it comes from people who buy government bonds. The banks are loaded with bonds. No less an authority than Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, Secretary of the Treasury during the Wilson administration and an outstanding authority on banking, says that if the value of those bonds was to drop substantially below par, we would have a banking collapse of inconceivable magnitude.

The banks, of course, get the money from depositors who earn it by the sweat of their brows.

Now it is awfully nice to sit back and accept money from governments and think we don't have to pay for it. But we do. Some of us, perhaps, think that the "temporary" nuisance taxes enacted in 1932 and just extended another two years to raise half a billion dollars a year don't affect us. But those taxes are collected from everybody who eats or wears clothes or lives under shelter. Just like all taxes are.

The late Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes put it this way: "Taxes, when thought out in things and results, mean an abstraction of a part of the annual product for government purposes, and cannot mean anything else. Whatever form they take in their imposition, they must be borne by the consumer, that is, mainly by the working-men and fighting-men of the community. It is well that they should have this fact brought home to them, and not too much disguised in the form in which the taxes are imposed."

When you spend, you pay; when your government spends, you pay too.

BETHEL HOME COMING.

Brethren, former Brethren, former pastors and friends of Bethel Church; on August 22nd we extend a cordial invitation to you to come worship and have fellowship with us. We are setting apart this day for the renewing our faith in God and friendships with brethren and friends.

To renew your faith in God we offer for morning program a new Bethel Children's Day service and the afternoon an inspiring sermon by our beloved pastor, W. J. Andes, and short talks by former pastors whom we hope to have present.

To renew your friendships at noon we promise an "Old Bethel" all day service with dinner, all you can eat, on the grounds.

In years past since some of you have been with us many hardships have been endured and problems solved and unsaved souls saved, and to our sorrow lost. The church site has been moved and a new building erected, and other progress made. Our greatest loss, however, was last year when our beloved pastor A. W. Andes passed to a greater fellowship. His son, "Billy," as you may know him, truly follows in his steps. Your visit to hear him will pay for your trouble and expense. May we urge you to worship at Bethel Christian Church on August 22nd.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgement and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

EASTERN VIRGINIA S. S. AND C. E. CONVENTION.

About three hundred people attended the Eastern Virginia Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention held on July 20, last, at Liberty Spring Christian Church, eight miles south of Suffolk, Virginia. The general opinion seemed to be that this was one of the best conventions within recent years. A light rain during the morning made entertainment a bit more difficult for the church as the dinner had to be served indoors, rather than on the church lawn, but the feeding was a much less job this time than it was some ten years ago when 900 people attended the convention for two days in succession. Dr. I. W. Johnson and his good people know how to entertain their friends whether these friends come to their homes or to their church.

Rev. J. E. McCauley, of Richmond, gave a good presidential address and Rev. Jesse H. Dollar, of Newport News, presented many good thoughts concerning the teacher for the new day. Dr. H. S. Hardcastle, Dr. John G. Truitt and this writer led forums dealing with adult education, week-day religious education and evangelism. Departmental superintendents met with local church leaders to study local departmental problems.

Reports indicated that the Sunday schools are in healthy condition, although little progress as to numbers is being made. The amount sent to the convention was practically the same as last year. The convention voted $25.00 to the Virginia Council of Religious Education and $550.00 to the Board of Christian Education of the Southern Convention. These contributions are greatly appreciated by the recipients.

The Convention voted that next year the Christian Endeavor societies shall report to the Pilgrim Fellowship. If this plan is found to be feasible a constitutional amendment will be made so it can be continued. The convention will meet at Waverly in 1938, and the work will be directed for the year by Rev. J. E. McCauley, president. Mr. W. H. Baker, recording secretary, Rev. Carl R. Key, executive secretary, Mr. J. W. Folk, treasurer, and the departmental superintendents.

VACATION DIFFICULTIES.

The praises of vacation are sung by many. Both pupils and teachers anticipate the time when school closes and vacation comes. Office and industrial workers plan and save for the vacation. Even pastors and churches look forward to vacation and plan for its enjoyment.

But vacation has its difficulties. Usually the work must go on. One cannot shut up the shop and leave without a thought of tomorrow. Plans must be made for the work to go on while the vacationist is absent. There is often quite a scramble in getting ready to go. At the last minute there are many unforeseen things to be done, and those who go away often leave in confusion that would not have developed under the regular routine.

Vacations often become a mere sight-seeing orgy. Rushing from one place to another there is neither time for the enjoyment of beauty nor relaxation for rest. The American people have lost the ability to relax and enjoy. Thrills and excitement have taken the place of these more permanent elements. Most of us need to cultivate those things that will build physical endurance, mental alertness and moral stamina. Vacations may do this but often they do not.

On returning home a vacationist usually finds extra work to be done to make up for the lost time. Tired almost to exhaustion from running hither and yon, he must undertake to do the regular and catch up on the back work.

These, and other difficulties make one feel almost like saying to the luring vampire, vacation, like one of old said to his enemy, "Why should the work cease while I come down to thee?" And yet we all yield to the call at every opportunity, always hoping that this vacation will be better than the last.

CLIMBING.

In and out and round about the road winds its way up the Blue Ridge mountains in Ole Virginia. A haze envelopes the hills as a protection against the scorching heat of an August sun. Cool breezes come from somewhere to comfort us as we ride along over hill and hollow, but from whence they come and whither they go we know not. Pilgrims from far and near pass on the highways, or we pass them. In comfortable cars, horse-drawn carriages, and with packs on their backs we see them go—these pilgrims of the way.

One thing they have in common, the desire to climb. Whether peasant or prince, they are climbing. Up, and up, and up they go. Why? It is the call of the Divine. It is the call of God to come up hither. Some may never hear the message as given to Moses, but those who listen and look will know that God is in this holy place on this beautiful Sunday morning. "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills. From whence cometh my help? My help cometh from God, who made heaven and earth" and put into the human heart the desire to climb ever upward.

Southern negroes and some white people sometimes sing about climbing Jacob's ladder and finish by saying "children of the King." Mountain men and women, as well as those from prairie and plain, feel the urge to climb to moral heights. Along by the highway are their churches where they yield themselves to their moral leader. Here in Carroll County are some of our Christian churches where the principles of Jesus are taught by our own leaders. These people in the mountains have joined with those down by the sea in climbing the heights of morality and religion as taught and practiced by Jesus of Nazareth who lifted up his eyes unto the hills and went into the mountains to pray.

THE NEW TEACHER FOR THE NEW DAY.

At the Eastern Virginia S. S. and C. E. Convention,

By REV. JESSE H. DOLLAR.

New times demand new measures and new men;

The world advances and in time outgrows
The laws that in our fathers' day were best;
And doubtless after us some purer scheme
Will be worked out by wiser men than we,
Made wiser by the steady growth of truth.

In concluding this address we shall endeavor to give a partial list of the qualities we feel every new teacher for the new time should possess, but for the present we wish to make some general observations.

No greater challenge confronts any person today than that which the teacher in the church school faces. His is the task of taking the child for one half hour on Sundays and placing before that child the principles of the Christian way of life in such clear-cut challenging ways that the life of the child will be guided in the years to come by the principles which it is the duty and privilege of the teacher to draw from the life of Christ.

Any person who, by age or habit, has forgotten how he acted and reacted as a child, or has forgotten how to play important games, can never be an efficient coach for boys and girls who must be taught to play the game of life according to the rules of Jesus.

Our teaching today must be Christ-centered, that is, Christ must be the central theme, the dominant personality and the lesson plan. Christ must be the heart of the Christian message, but the spirit and reality of the Christ must emanate from the heart of the person who stands before the class that half hour on Sundays.

Although we shall come to this point again it is necessary now for us to give one of the indispensable qualities of the new teacher for the new day. He must be a person of vision. The first vision he must see is that of his commission to teach the Word. Then, he must see a child, though there may be a large group before him, he must see the individual child; a life, a mind with power to reach decisions, a soul—the spark of the Eternal God—an influence going out from that life that will touch and influence other lives. Then, this new teacher for the new day must see the subject matter before him as a means of endowing that life with ability to make right choices and follow these choices with unflinching loyalty to the end that the possibilities hidden there may be developed in the largest possible way to achieve the largest possible good,

Cynthia Peare Maus, in her book on "Teaching the Youth of the Church" has this to say: "The task of the teacher in the development of personality is to help open the windows of the soul (these windows she calls the five senses) to guard what goes into the inner life or mind through the senses, and to educate the pupil to the best use of the senses." Again she says, "We must not only provide proper stimuli; but we must build into the heart and life of youth such ideas and ideals as will insure a negative reaction to the wrong stimuli. The primary aim of Religious Education is not to teach the Bible, especially the life and teachings of Jesus, as an end in itself; but always as a means to the end of producing followers of Christ heroic enough to try to live daily the ideals of Jesus. The goal of Christian Education is Christ-like character.

OUR PRAYER.

By REV. EVERETT LESHNER.

Infinite Father, who ever sendest the light that in darkness shall make us wise, the peace that in tumult shall make us serene, and the life that in gloom shall make us glad, cleanse and purify our hearts of all things that separate us from Thee, that we may receive these infinite blessings of grace. Thus we, being filled out of Thy fullness, may live all the days of our mortal life triumphantly, creatively, worthily, with power to rise above evil habits, enfeebling prejudices, the fear of man, and with faith to overcome all doubts, all disillusionments, all discouragements. And when the discipline of this life is over and we are freed from the bonds of the flesh which so often encumbers us, may it please Thee, O most gracious Father, to count us worthy enough to receive the crown immortal through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

The day has come, we believe, when promotion of pupils must rest upon ideals established and the habitual practice of these ideals rather than the age group promotion. Promotion in the Church School should rest upon results obtained in training for living and practicing the principles of the Christian social order, even as pupils in our grammar and high schools receive their promotion because they show progress. If this were done it would save many heart-aches on the part of the pastors into whose churches they come for membership only to join their parents, who, in too many cases, have never even so much as heard that there is a Holy Ghost, and for just that reason they are the dead heads of the church. You may say that such a system cannot be established in the Church School; that it would be the cause of too many children dropping out. We must remember that not every one who starts in the first grade graduates from High School, but those who do graduate are credited with showing gradual improvement in the acquisition of knowledge of the given subjects. And even if it is hard to evolve such a system of promotion in the Church School as we have suggested it certainly would mean that the church membership would have a prize on it and would result in a better prepared constituency, and, if there is anything in the world that should represent a measure of achievement it is church membership. And church membership is supposed to be the recognition of the fact that the individual has achieved the knowledge of the pattern by which he should build his life, which, it seems to me, is the purpose of Religious Education.

But, before we can make any change as has been suggested it is necessary to train our teaching forces to a point where they can present the lesson materials so that they may count most in the direction of achieving the goals set forth in the foregoing paragraphs. The day of Saturday night preparation for the teaching of the lesson Sunday morning has passed. The teacher whose interest in his high calling does not provide a time during the preceding days of the week to prepare for those precious moments of character building on Sunday morning should resign. That may seem harsh, but there is no use mincing words when the evidence of such teaching in the past is stacked up so high against its continuation.

But the fault is not all to be charged to the teacher who goes to bed on Saturday night with Sunday school quarterly in hand and prepares the lesson for the next day by the light of bed lamp. Perhaps she is doing it only because the Superintendent asked her to teach until someone else could be found, and no thought of preparation on the part of the person who is to teach was entertained—somebody, just anybody to keep the class quiet.

The teaching task of the church is not only to give out information about the Christian way of life, but it must become the stabilizing forces for all the information that comes into the life and mind of the child. What he learns in literary school those five days he goes between Sundays must be made to count toward producing a Christ-like life. The State requires the teacher who stands before the child in the literary school to make long years of preparation in order that he may efficiently present the

SUFFOLK LETTER.

A party went to Virginia Beach yesterday afternoon. If the number of cars parked along the streets, is a fair indication, it seemed that many other people were seeking the seashore for rest and relief from the oppressive heat. Of all the sights to greet the eyes the old Tabernacle used for the Baptist Encampment in other years made a deep impression. This building was also formerly used by the Christians as a place for holding the Seaside Chautauqua and School of Methods. Yesterday the building was closed, weeds growing around it, and a sign advertising a wrestling match was nailed on the door of the office and on the door of the main building. Evidently the building is not being used for the purpose for which it was erected.

This building, at the present time, is suggestive of the decadence of human life. Millions of people are living, today, in bodies—yea, in temples—made for the indwelling presence of the Holy Spirit. The human body should be the temple of God. When God is not allowed to dwell in this holy temple, another takes up his abode and directs the life. Think of the door of a tabernacle having a wrestling match advertisement nailed upon it as a substitute for a religious school program! Such a scene chills the blood in one's veins. What shall one say about the human mouth, which was made for praise, but emits profanity and vulgar speech, and becomes a smoke stack, or a space for receiving alcoholic liquors into the stomach to cloud the brain and debase the soul?

If signs are trustworthy, many men and women have lost their way and missed their true place in life. It should be normal to be a Christian. Every one should cherish ideals worthy of the God who created man. Goodness should be enthroned in every heart, and find expression in every life. Human hands should toil and be used as instruments of moral and spiritual uplift. But hands are used to defile and destroy. Sin is defined as—"missing the mark." Human powers and talents are misused. When one misuses money belonging to another, society brands the offender as a defaulter, or as dishonest. And God sits in judgment upon people who disregard His law and debauch their bodies and souls in worldly indulgences.

The radio, the daily newspapers, the flying machine and the automobile have made it possible to create public sentiment and intensify the appeal of insidious propaganda in a shorter time than in former years. Some people cannot understand why smoking and drinking have become so popular in a few years. Superficial observers blame this landslide on prohibition, over the radio, messages setting forth the satisfying virtues of cigarettes and drinks. Glaring advertisements in newspapers and magazines catch the eyes of the young. Every thing one hears and sees affects the thought and judgment. No wonder people smoke and drink. These things have been popularized by ingenious propaganda. People do not think in terms of moral and spiritual laws. They base their opinions and select their courses of conduct upon the example of their fellowmen. And "all we like sheep have gone astray" if we have allowed ourselves to fall from the high standards of the Word of God. Where are we living and whither are we drifting?

I. W. JOHNSON.

THE ELON COLLEGE COMMUNITY CHURCH.

There is a church at Elon—not a distinctively church building, but a chapel set apart for the religious services. The Elon College Community church meets in the chapel for worship. It is called the Community church. This, however, does not mean that it does not belong to the Congregational-Christian Conference. It is a member of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference and is answerable in every particular to the conference. It has a pastor. The writer serves as pastor and is obligated to preach once a month and to supply the other three Sundays with ministers. We have the privilege of hearing a number of the leading ministers of the country during the year. For these services the church pays $900.00 a year. Music for all worship services during the college year is furnished by the Music Department of the college which insures a very efficient and inspiring musical program for all worship services, all of which is without cost to the church. The church has its usual offices, trustees, deacons, treasurer, clerk, etc.

It also conducts a Sunday school. The Sunday school meets in the the college Christian Education Building and has the use of the most modern equipment. The Christian Education Department of the college cooperates with the members of the church in the conduct and work of the Sunday school. The Sunday school is well attended, well organized, and is doing a very good grade of work.

The church has a very active Woman's Missionary Society, Young People's Missionary Society, and Cradle Roll Missionary Society.

The church is out of debt and meets its obligations promptly. It administers to the college and community. It constitutes a very definite part of the religious program of the campus and community. Its membership is made up of all classes. We worship a common Lord at a common altar. Our services are more or less formal, yet decidedly evangelistic. The above plan does not suit all and perhaps never will. However, we do get some things done for the church and the Kingdom. So far we have been able to meet every financial request of the conference and convention. Our apportionments are always met in full. We do not pay the askings of one interest and leave the other unprovided for. We are constantly having additions to the membership of the church. Since the last conference we have received a total of eighteen members into the fellowship of the church—some on confession of faith, and some by letters of transfer.

Rev. LeFrande Moody, member of the Biblical Class and a senior in college, supplied for the college church during the summer months. He is a young man of marked consecration and of unusual talents. He was born and reared in the Methodist Episcopal Church, but feeling that there was need for his services in the Christian Church, on last Sunday morning at eleven o'clock he transferred his membership to this denomination and became a member of the local church. Unless some misfortune befalls him, he will have a very fruitful ministry in our church.

As a rule the attendance at our summer services is rather small. This summer has been quite different. A good audience greeted Mr. Moody for every service that he conducted. The entire community enjoyed and was blessed by his ministry.

Students entering Elon College have unusual opportunities for the enrichment of their Christian experiences and the development of their Christian lives. At Elon College much emphasis is placed upon religion. Religious instruction is given and practical opportunities for religious work are offered. Elon College believes that a young man or a young woman should seek during their college days to strengthen his faith and to better fit himself for the service of the church when college days are over. If religious training means anything, it certainly means much during these years. If the mind needs training and developing, if the body needs training and protection, certainly the spirit needs to be nurtured and guided. Elon College stands for the development of the whole of life.

FOUND—THE REALLY "FORGOTTEN MAN!"

By GEORGIA ROBERTSON.

What a pity the discovery of the really "forgotten man"—including women and children—was not made until thousands of them had been laid in their graves during the last four years!

What an appalling sight if their graves were side by side. Would it arouse us to do something really effective to save other "forgotten" ones who will otherwise be in their graves before the dawn of another year?

If the President had peered thoughtfully into the future seeking for the forgotten man, before he and Secretary Farley wielded the "big stick" of "no relief money" over the governors of the various states, requiring the President's wish obeyed, he might have discovered the really forgotten ones who would pay for what he demanded with their lives!

How useless it is to repeat day after day that "recklessness and speed cause more automobile accidents and deaths than anything else," and then to continue the legalized sale of the very thing which—more than anything else—makes people drive recklessly and at high speed. The alcohol in a bottle of beer or in one or two cocktails not only makes one reckless, but also unconscious of his high speed, and the danger from it; while at the same time it increases by a split second the time it takes him to stop his car, during which it will travel several feet. Scientific tests prove this to be true, but the Government wants the liquor revenue, though it is soaked in blood and death.

Where is the justice in letting our people be maimed for life, doomed to racking pain, or killed outright because the Government wants the liquor revenue for lavishing spending, boondoggling, and partisan patronage for votes; and also in letting liquor dealers thickly dot our cities, towns, villages, and even highways with drinking places, and allowing alcoholic beverages to be sold at all eating places, drug and grocery stores; and also in allowing advertising of liquor over the radio, the press, and on bill boards, and even mailing appeals to us personally, and thrusting them also under our doors to create new customers who do not now want alcoholic drinks, as well as to increase the drinking of those already addicted to it.

Where is the justice in taking about $2,500,000.00 of the taxpayer's money to establish in the Virgin Islands a Government distillery to flood the United States with "Government House Rum" to debauch and destroy our people for revenue?

Now we know this to be true. How much longer are we going to submit to this terrible killing, and also the moral degradation of young womanhood and manhood, and the mental, physical and also financial ruin of multitudes of our people through legalized liquor for revenue?

Protestants, Catholics and Jews all know God has not repealed the Sixth Commandment, "Thou shalt not kill." They also know repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment has caused, is causing, and will continue to cause thousands to be killed by automobile drivers who have taken only a small amount of alcoholic liquor, or those crossing the street after they themselves have been drinking. Alcohol mixed with gasoline has filled our streets with death cars.

Are not the voters in our country responsible for deaths resulting from the legalized sale of intoxicants? How much longer are we going to submit to being partners in this crime which is staining our souls also with the blood of our fellow-men?

CHRIST FOR THE CRISIS.

By DANIEL A. POLING.

[Excerpts from the Presidential Address by Dr. Daniel A. Poling, Philadelphia, Pa., before the 36th International Christian Endeavor Convention, Grand Rapids, Michigan, Friday evening, July 9, 1937.]

The World Situation

Your president's world tour, which carried him into 46 countries or islands, emphasized the strategic position of the Far East in the Christian task of the generation and century immediately before us . . .

My overseas visitation brought to me the disquieting conclusion that no country and no race has escaped the inoculation of fear and distrust. Today over the world statesmen play bloody chess, war captains maneuver, and always youth marches. We would not lift our voices in blame tonight, for all have sinned.

But in the light of the facts that constitute the world crisis, what of the church?

Protestant Christianity far from being in position to conduct a successful offensive against the powerful forces opposing the church may be presently unable to maintain her own positions.

Out of an impression of division, and not of unity, that Protestant Christianity now gives the world generally, has grown an indifference upon the part of intellectuals and youth.

United Forces Opposing the Church

Shintoism, from having been for promise made by its proponents has two generations a reverence of ancestors and patriotism, has become through the Japanese Empire a militant and coercive religion. And Shintoism is not divided.

Hinduism, not only in India under the inspiration of the Mahatma Gandhi's spiritual leadership, but in Burma, in Siam, and in certain of the Dutch East Indies, challenges Christianity at the very heart of the missionary enterprise, and demands that the making of converts cease. Hinduism is comprehensive, all-inclusive—and it is not divided.

Buddhism has over the world taken unto itself the very equipment of the Protestant church. It sings our evangelical hymns, takes over our youth activities, and organizes educational programs. Buddhism is not divided.

The militant religion, Mohammedanism, shaking itself free of age-old superstitions, facing in statesman-like fashion its devitalizing weaknesses, is today definitely on the march. And it is not divided.

The German Christian movement, so-called; Communism, which is both a religion and a social order; totalitarianism in any form, are fundamental and prophetic unities.

In the lands of these great new experiments, as well as in the more ancient civilizations of the East, questions have been raised that Protestant schism cannot answer. Always for intellectuals and youth of the soul quest, the traditions that divide us, the mere ecclesiastical values that enamor us, the shibboleths that again and again set us against each other, have nothing save only the spirit of division. But these intellectuals and these youth, indeed all men, and women who today seek the more abundant life, want none of our divisions and come presently to despise their spirit.

Should we discontinue our support of denominational programs? Should we withdraw our service and our money from the churches of our Christian faith?

No! Let there be no misunderstanding here! Already we have added too little and withdrawn too much. There can be no unity, spiritual or otherwise, without units. By starving the churches and their far-flung enterprises we would only defeat Christ's purposes and His plan.

What, then is to be done? First, thank God for all that is being done. I would have been blind had I not seen the foreign missionary enterprise on the march—valiantly, sacrificially and triumphantly on the march, toward a vitalized and a world-vitalizing Christian unity.

United Protestantism

Within a generation the number of united churches in America has grown from a few isolated instances to more than 1,600. In the first three decades of this century more than a score of communions, embracing at least half the total Protestant constituency in the United States, have entered into and continued a federated relationship—the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America.

Almost startling progress has been made in organic union in America. Eleven mergers have been completed in the last 30 years. Even as I speak, three great bodies of Methodism are performing organic union, and surely we pray for the more complete understanding and unity of all others of this great family.

But the eventual unity of Protestantism must be a unity, not of creed nor ritual nor arbitrary government, but rather a unity so comprehensive and complete that it would include us all. It would make possible and practical a world program in which would be preserved and honored every vital principle, every worthy tradition of the several parts.

Anticipating such an organic union, and long before it can be completed, we must find and develop common tasks. In great cities and in rural communities we must unite upon projects. Whatever else Christ left behind him on Olivet, he did leave one company—not one hundred, less or more. Surely there is no debate among us on the proposition that he desires the members of that company to be at one.

World Peace

We shall continue to promote the program for world peace launched two years ago. I believe we can meet the greatest peace opportunity offered any organization. Our principle of unity as against uniformity is now generally recognized by peace organizations and advocates. The Emergency Peace Campaign has been and is a practical demonstration of this principle. Our purpose is to have a part in uniting all organizations and all peace-makers of all shades and degrees in support of those measures that represent the full length of our common agreements.

Temperance

The growing menace of liquor is a challenge to Christian citizens in every state of the Union, in every city and on every countryside. Repeal has been and increasingly is a tragic, monstrous failure. Every promise made by its proponents has been broken. Every hope of its friends has died. Sweeping us toward social disaster is the rising tide of liquor consumption, law violation, drinking among men, women and children, slaughter on the highways, juvenile delinquency, and a new approach to political corruption through new ventures in liquor control.

The open sale of alcoholic beverages has reached scandalous proportions. In tens of thousands of the 473,000 places of liquor sale in the United States, minors of both sexes are served freely. Young women for the first time in modern American history are employed as barmaids. Again and again, these places are inexcusably worse than the old saloon.

Once again, youth with all its resources must engage in the struggle for a sober nation. A world largely mechanized cannot afford to mix alcohol and gasoline. A democracy confronted by economic and social ordeals that all but overwhelm us dares not unsteady the hand and becloud the mind. . . .

We call upon our young people everywhere to enlist in such activities as those of Allied Youth and to unite with all other agencies of like mind and purpose to promote total abstinence by choice of the individual, prohibiting every unit (large or small) that can be captured by free votes of the people, and for the complete destruction of the liquor traffic conducted for profit.

Justice and Peace Need a Passion

Economic justice and world peace without a higher purpose are themselves cold—nationalism and war passions. Only a mightier passion can overthrow both selfish nationalism and armed conflict.

Fundamentally a "world headed straight for self-destruction" may have many needs, but it is confronted by only one imperative—power sufficient to turn it around. For this achievement there is only one formula, the formula that is the Cross. Nothing short of the plan of Jesus for a society of men in the Fatherhood of God will prove sufficient. Here every hunger is met, every quest accomplished.

THE NEW TEACHER FOR THE NEW DAY.

subjects of the three R's. Is it any wonder then, that when these same youngsters come to the Church School on Sunday and are put in a class, the teacher of which has had little or no special training for the herculean task of placing before them the fundamental plan of successful Christian living, that Johnnie throws spit balls and Jimmie pushes Mary off the chair? Is it any wonder that as soon as they reach the age when they are not sent to Church School they drop out and are lost to the church.

The teaching mission of the church is its most potent force, and if the church fails in its teaching it will be found failing all along the line.

To what, then, shall we liken the New Teacher for the New Day?

I. A personal experience of Christ, the daily walk with Christ and the impelling of the Divine commission to train men for Christ is, it seems to me, the first qualifications of the New Teacher for the New Day. The purpose of the Church School teacher is not only to teach right and wrong, but to help the individual live right in the presence of wrong. And for this purpose we often find an impossible combination, especially in our adult class teachers. Too often a person is chosen as a teacher because of his legal training or his natural gift of gab, with no consideration of the life he lives when outside the class room. Of course, we would not infer that because a person has legal training he would not be a splendid teacher, but rather, we are saying that even though a person have the gift of logical presentation of the lesson, unless his logic finds root in his own heart for the thing he presents, he has only the gift of gab.

II. Then the present day teacher must have an understanding of the methods Jesus used to make simple the "Mysteries of the Kingdom of God." That understanding is given only to him to whom there has been revealed the Holy Spirit through prayer and a passionate desire to receive the revelation that he may make it known to those whom he teaches.

III. The conviction that there can be no substitute for what Jesus taught. Suppositions and "perhapses" have no place in the vocabulary of him who would teach Christianity as a way of Life and Jesus as the pattern for that life.

IV. Then, there is Vision, to which we have already referred. In addition to seeing the individual before him, his life, a soul, and influence and its effect upon others, the teacher must be able to see through the printed page and visualize the life toward which the word lesson points. The teacher who sees only a leaflet or a book is blind. He must see and feel the impact of the life behind the lesson plan. Dr. Edwin L. Shaver, in his book, "Shall Laymen Teach Religion" makes the following observation: "Formerly we taught the Bible as so much content. The children were supposed to absorb its ideals; in most cases, rather, its words only. But now, what we are aiming to accomplish is to have those Biblical principles which embody the ideals of Jesus become a part of the driving power of the child's daily life and conduct." It is then, and only then, that the teacher has taught.

V. Again, the new teacher for the new day is measured by his willingness to change his method of teaching from those in use in the days when he was taught, to those which no longer stress memory verses from the Bible for the purpose of repeating them from memory, but he must teach their meaning and application to present day needs and experiences and show the principles they follow. In discussing the new courses Dr. Shaver speaks: "The development of these new course materials should be a challenge to every follower of the Great Teacher who is in turn seeking to lead his pupils to love and to serve him. It is a challenge to better teaching, to the use of materials and methods which are worthy of the cause and its leader. If those there are who feel their lack of skill in the better ways of teaching, let them see in the very use of these better courses a means of growth in the high art of Christian Leadership."

VI. The teacher of the present day must Love his teaching—love and respect for the principles taught and the pupils whom the message is designed to help. He must love his work well enough to go to the trouble to know the home life of each child, the opportunities he enjoys or lacks and earnestly endeavor to adapt the lesson materials to meet the specific needs of the child.

VII. Then, lastly, the teacher of today must live the message he would teach:

No printed word nor spoken plea
Can teach young hearts what men should be
Not all the books on all the shelves,
But what the teachers are themselves.
For education is making men!
So it is now, so it was when Mary Hopkins sat on one end of a log,
And James Garfield sat on the other.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church"

MISS EMILY CARLETON, Editor, 541 Osceola Ave., Winter Park, Fla.

CAMP VIOLA CONFERENCE.

The North and Middle Georgia Young People's Conference was held at Camp Viola, Mountville, Georgia. The conference group was small, but was a representative group and the results were very gratifying. Camp Viola was a new place for the Georgia group to meet, but it was a lovely place and the Georgia young people are looking forward to returning there next year.

The Morning Watch each morning was conducted by some member of the faculty. The Student Summer Service group made an especially fine contribution to the conference by the high level of their Vesper Services. The members of this group were: Eleanor McMaster, New York; Kathleen Rawles, Illinois; Betsey Jean Ford, Ohio; Arthur Wells, New York.

During the first period in the morning the younger group gained much from their study of "Appreciation and Use of the Bible" taught by Dr. Mowbray of Demorest, while the older group had a fine presentation of "Jesus and His Teachings" by Rev. W. T. Scott, pastor-at-large. Following that the whole group enjoyed—as so many of our groups in the Southeast have done—the course on "World Friendship" as presented by Rev. Raymond Dudley, missionary to India. The course on "Finding My Place in the Church" worked out in a splendid way. It was under the direction of Rev. D. W. Shepherd of Barnesville Parish, who taught the phase of "Worship and Friendship," "Teaching in the Church School" was taught by Rev. John H. Knight from LaGrange, and "Social Action" was taught by Rev. Alan T. Jones of Braselton. The group met together for the first part—the introduction to the whole course—then divided into groups for special study, then returned in a whole group to hear the findings from each section.

Much of the success of the conference was due to the excellence of the leadership, which included: Dean, Rev. R. Wiley Scott of Atlanta; Business Manager, Rev. Alan T. Jones of Braselton; Registrar, Miss Pattie Lee Coghill; Counselor for Girls and Nurse, Mrs. D. W. Shepherd, Barnesville Parish; Counselor for Boys, Arthur Wells; Recreational Director, Rev. Frederick Held, Columbus; Dietician, Mrs. Alan T. Jones; Conference Sermon, Rev. T. L. Leverett, Woodbury; Pianist, Kathleen Rawles. Dr. J. R. Clinton was very helpful in many ways and presented special evening programs in his inimitable manner.

The offering on Sunday was spent for games for Mr. Dudley to take back to India—a book of singing games, Helma (Swedish), Wari (African), and Nine Men's Morris (English)—the last three played with boards and marbles.

The whole conference was conducted on a high level, and some of our leaders who have attended several conferences this summer pronounce the Camp Viola Conference the best.

EURE'S YOUNG PEOPLE.

The Young People's Missionary Society of the Eure Christian Church reports a very good year's work under the guidance and leadership of Miss Louise Eure as Superintendent. They have a membership of forty-four and are expecting to put on another membership drive soon. They have regular meetings in the various homes, using the miscellaneous type of programs and the attendance has been good. They have met the requirements on the Standard of Excellence by giving a public program, an increase in membership, reports sent in regularly, and apportionment raised. They also sent six dollars and fifty cents to the Silver Anniversary fund.

The officers of this society are as follows:

President—Atmill Felton.

Vice-President—Miss Elizabeth Bullock.

Treasurer—Curtis Green.

Secretary—Mrs. Cleamon Eure.

This society expresses thanks to Dr. and Mrs. W. M. Jay for organization about two years ago and they have proven that it was an effort worth while. They are getting a joy and thrill out of their society and are rendering a real service.

HOW MUCH MORAL FIBER DO WE HAVE?

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC
FOR AUGUST 15, 1937.

SCRIPTURE: Mark 10: 38-39;
Luke 9: 57-62.

Daily Readings—

Monday—Dare to Be a Daniel—Dan.
6: 10-12.

Tuesday—If I Perish, I Perish—Esther
4: 13-17.

Wednesday—Sublime Courage—John
18: 28-37.

Thursday—Courage Needed—Philippians 1: 27-30.

Friday—Firm, Moral Fiber—Hebrews
11: 23-26.

Saturday—When Courage Failed—II
Timothy 4: 10.

This meeting may not be able to decide to every person's satisfaction just what is right and what is wrong. However, it should give young people courage and stability to defend their moral principles and to live up to such principles regardless of what it may cost. Have convictions of your own and stand by them.

There are many wise people who will admit that the greatest crisis of our modern times is the "crisis of character." A crime wave is sweeping our country among the youth of the land. The number of 19-year old persons arrested in America in 1934 outnumbered any other single age group. A sad fact is that a large majority of them were charged with major crimes.

Something to Think About—

1. What is morality? When is a thing moral?

2. Are young people today stronger or weaker morally than their grandfathers were? What evidence do you have?

3. In deciding between right and wrong which has more to do with our moral action: What we know about the matter, or how we feel about it?

4. When the conversation becomes unclean, and the crowd begins to gossip, what will a Christian do?

5. Do we say "no" to a sinful suggestion or do we follow the crowd? Which has greater influence on our moral power?

Young people have the finest of all opportunities today to become leaders in their communities and clean up sin spots as drinking places, pool rooms, vicious magazine stands, gambling places, etc. Every Christian should have an adopted creed by which he strives to live at his best. Howard Arnold Walker wrote as his creed the Hymn: "I Would Be True."

Suggested Hymns—

"I Gave My Life for Thee."

"Yield Not to Temptation."

"Draw Thou My Soul, O Christ."

GOD FEEDS A PEOPLE.

LESSON VI—AUGUST 8, 1937.

GOLDEN TEXT: Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above coming down from the Father.—James 1:17.

LESSON: Exodus 16:1-17:7.

More Murmurings

God's people then, like God's people today, were great complainers. They were ready to murmur on the least provocation. They forgot past blessings and mercies in the presence of new difficulties and new demands. They magnified their troubles and minimized their blessings. They seemed to prefer bondage with material things to spiritual freedom. They were not willing to undergo the discipline necessary to character. They murmured and complained and whined. Their complaint would be comic if it were not so tragic. "Would God we had died by the hands of the Lord in Egypt, when we sat by the flesh pots, and when we did eat bread to the full! for ye have brought us forth into this wilderness, to kill this whole assembly with hunger." Eat bread to the full indeed! Not a word about their slavery, about their beatings they received because they did not make their toll of bricks, about the injustice of the Egyptian courts, about the death of their little children, about their sufferings and their sorrows in Egypt. Alas they thought only of the satisfaction of physical appetite. There are those today whose god, as Paul says, is their belly, who do mind earthly things. There are those today who refuse to seek spiritual freedom because they are not willing to give up the things of the flesh.

The Loneliness of Leadership

Leadership has its rewards but it has its price of loneliness. How lonely Moses was at times. How little the people knew the burden of his heart. And Jesus knew the same loneliness. He had many things to say to his disciples but they could not receive them. Nor could they enter with sympathy into many of his deeper experiences. This is true of every man of spiritual insight and vision.

The Miracle of Food

There is only one explanation of the feeding of the Israelites during the wilderness journey—it was a direct act of God, an expression of his concern and his generosity and his power. Every day there was enough manna and enough quails for every one to have sufficient. There was a miraculous element in it. It is to be noted that the people had to gather the food themselves. God did not feed them; he simply furnished the food for them, and they had to gather and prepare it. God does not do for us what we can do for ourselves. But we are fed even today by his bounty. Back of all our modern methods of production and transportation of foods, there is the primary activity of God. Man apart from God could not do anything—it is God who gives the increase. Come to think about it, it is not difficult to understand or accept this story when one thinks about how the world is fed today. As some one has said: "The bread upon our tables does not depend only upon man's labor or ingenuity, but every slice of bread points to the great truth that man himself is, in many ways, a helpless creature, and for the very sustenance of his body he must look to the providential arrangements of a merciful and beneficent God."

Enough for All

"And the children of Israel did so, and gathered, some more, some less, and when they did measure it, he that had gathered much had nothing over, and he that gathered little had no lack; they gathered every man according to his eating." There was to be no hoarding, no profiteering. There was enough for all and all were to share. If men go hungry today it is not God's will that it should be so. The fact that men and women and boys and girls go hungry and are cold while others have more than enough food and clothing is due to man's greed and selfishness and ignorance. God provides, but man profiteers. God confers his blessings for all, but some men corner them for themselves.

A Day of Rest

"Six days ye shall gather it; but on the seventh day, which is the sabbath, in it there shall be none." But there was enough to tide them over the sabbath day. "Those who went about to gather on the sabbath day found none." God has ordained that a man can make enough by working on six days to provide for his needs for seven days. The story would seem to teach that those who voluntary labor the seventh day for their own enrichment, do not have any more than those who really observe God's day. To be sure our modern life makes necessary some forms of labor as "works of necessity." But our modern world has gone far from the divine ideal in the matter of commercializing the sabbath. Whatever else was involved in the original sabbath day legislation, it was to be a day of rest.

A Memorial

"Fill an omer of it (the manna) to be kept for your generations; that they may see the bread wherewith I have fed you in the wilderness, when I brought you forth from the land of Egypt." It is a good thing to have some reminder of God's goodness to us. It is a good thing to preserve things and places that have a historical spiritual association. Plymouth Rock and the Church at Jamestown ought to be objects of pilgrimages—they stand for something worthwhile in the spiritual history of our country. A wedding ring on a woman's hand—and on a man's too for that matter—has value. Let no man hold the past cheaply. Let us beware lest we forget, lest we forget, God's goodness and grace.

More Murmuring

With actual evidence of God's providence before them by day, the people began to murmur again against Moses and against God. There was no water for them, and what is worse there was no faith in them. They still believed that God brought them out into the wilderness to let them die. They lacked simple trust in God. Like so many of us, they could not trust God for the needs of daily life. He has told us that if we seek first his kingdom and his righteousness, we shall have the necessities of life. Failure to be thankful for blessings already received may keep us from appreciating and appropriating blessings yet to come.

Water From the Brook

"Thou shalt smite the rock, and there shall water come out of it that the people may drink." God reveals himself in most unlikely places and provides for his people in most unlikely ways. In this story of the water there is a foreshadowing of him who is the Bread and Water of Life. He is able to supply all our need according to his riches in glory by Jesus Christ.

WHAT IS A HOLY LIFE?

A holy life is a life lived in union and communion with Jesus Christ as Lord. This is the simplest and most comprehensive definition of a holy life with which I am acquainted—a life in which Jesus is Master, in which all things are deferred to Him, in which He shares our thoughts and shapes our ideals, in which every realm and sphere is controlled by Him, the government being upon His shoulders, the reins in His pierced hands, and His will our chiefest delight.—J. Stuart Holden.

MONDAY.

A GREAT MAN.

"Hath not God chosen the poor of this world rich in faith, and heirs of the kingdom which He hath promised to them that love Him?"—James 2: 5.

The writer has just finished reading an article in the present Cosmopolitan regarding King Edward VIII and the woman he loves, Mrs. Wally Simpson, in which it is represented that Edward is one of the greatest men England has ever had and that his abdication is the result of political intrigue and of his own honesty and fairness with his people.

This article closes with a story which indicates the greatness of the man. It is said that it was the King's custom to visit hospitals unannounced. When leaving a hospital one day he asked if he had seen all the patients. He was told that he had seen all but one. That patient's face was so horribly disfigured that it was feared that it would affect the king. Edward demanded to see him at once. When he approached the bed of the sufferer, he leaned over and took him in his arms. The man asked, "Who is this?" Edward replied, "It is only your king."

We would represent Edward as a saint, but this act is a symbol of a rich man so lowly in heart that the curse of the rich does not apply to him. True riches and genuine power are with the poor at heart.

Prayer—Dear Father, infinitely kind, withholding nothing from us, make us Thy humble children in deed and in truth. Amen.

TUESDAY.

A SURE TEST OF CHARACTER.

"Reprove a scorner and he will hate thee. Reprove a wise man and he will love thee."—(Revised version.) Prov. 9: 8.

To make an easy test of a person's character try the method given by this scripture. Select a fault of the person, a fault serious enough to be pointed out, and if you point it out in a kindly and tactful way, and he receives your words with gratitude, he is a wise man; but if he receives them angrily, and rejects both you and them, he is a foolish man and a scoffer.

Lesson: Train to receive reproof. Seek the judgment of the wise and segacious. In this one becomes wise and segacious himself.

Prayer—Our father, Thou art the all-wise and the all segacious. Thou art the great judge. Daily we seek of Thee our strength and our reproof. This we ask for Jesus's sake. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

LIFE WITHOUT UPS AND DOWNS.

"The Lord of peace himself give you peace always by all means."—II Thess. 3: 16.

To say that life has no ups and downs is a statement contrary to fact. On the other hand Paul says that true peace, the peace of the soul, has no ups and downs. He would picture it as that force in life which the Bible refers to as like "a river the stream whereof makes glad the city of God." And Paul certainly knew what it was to have peace midst tumult.

Out of the depth of Paul's experience he tells us that this peace is given by the Lord Jesus Christ Himself, and only from Him can we obtain it.

Prayer—O Thou great God of the Universe and the God of our souls, graciously bestow upon us heaven's peace for the life that now is and that which is to come. Amen.

THURSDAY.

LIFE NEED NOT BE WEARY.

"The everlasting God, the Lord, the Creator of the ends of the earth, fainteth not, neither is weary."—Isa. 40: 28.

We are almost too weak in our human frailties to arise to a firm realization that worries do not affect us. But we have seen a few persons who never worried. They had a power within that overcame life's annoyances. All of us know of some few characters like this. They are living examples of life without worry. In fact they speak in living tones the words of the prophet: the children of the everlasting God must not worry.

God is omnipotent and untiring and give us His strength, if we let Him. "Cast all thy care upon Him for He careth for you."

Prayer—Our Father, be with us this day, and life will be no task; and its problems will be no worry. This we ask for Jesus's sake. Amen.

FRIDAY.

NEVER QUITE CERTAIN.

"Be surety for thy servant for good."—Psalms 9: 122.

A surety is one who is stronger than thyself and stands for thee to make thee complete in thy efficiency. He is a guarantor. Our government is undertaking to become surety people in their old age. A great deal is being said about this security. It is an effort to make man confident of the victory in life. It proposes to give aid and unfailing strength where needed in days of decline.

Life is so uncertain. There is so much good of the world that seems to be precarious in its existence, doubtful in its extent, and uncertain in its quality. We seize it and we lose it. We are quite certain.

God is surety for us for all good. In Him there is not an instant of doubt. There is not a moment in which we are not conscious of His blessedness; and there is no change or fading away, but a growth unto a more perfect day.

Prayer—Our Father, forgive us for our lack of faith. We know no other. Be Thou our Surety forever. Amen.

SATURDAY.

A MEAL OF DEATH.

"He hath swallowed up death forever."—Isaiah 25: 1-8.

Christians are slow to grasp the great truth that their Lord has done away with death. By His glorious resurrection, and by His atonement for the sin which is the eternal death, He has broken the power of man's chief enemy. To fear death any longer is to be untrue to Christ, to disbelieve the work that He has done for mankind.

It is not an incomplete victory, this which our Redeemer has accomplished for us. It is thorough. It is lasting. Why then should we go mourning all our days? Why not lift up our heads and walk as children of the light, of the endless day? We are not to descend into the dark. Our dear ones are not to be swallowed up forever. There is no more room for reasonable fear, for sensible dread.

Prayer—Our risen Lord, we trust in Thee. We would make every day an Easter. Buried with Thee to sin, we would rise with Thee into the ceaseless and blessed existence. For Thy name's sake and in Thy strength. Amen.

CAMPAIGN.

By REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D.

"I am the vine, and my Father is the husbandman . . . ye are the branches."—John 15:1-5.

Huddled together in the face of tragedy, and under the grim shadow of the cross a campaign was being planned. A campaign to make the world over again. A campaign to lower barriers and lift brotherhood, to change hate to love, and to change the fear of all gods to the love of the one true God. A campaign to tune life on earth to life everlasting. It was the most momentous campaign ever planned. It has not been fulfilled, but in spite of all our fears it still lives, and every man has his own opportunity to give his own answer as to its success, and final outcome.

More and more it was dawning upon the minds of these disciples that they were to be important factors in this new movement, but one of their questions would surely be: How shall these things be? And we can hear Jesus explaining to them: 'I am the vine, my Father is the husbandman . . . and ye are the branches.' What a set up! God . . . Jesus . . . his followers, and aided by the presence of the Holy Spirit! They were to bear fruit, more fruit, and much fruit for that campaign of Christian brotherhood.

I.

You have heard the expression, "There is more in the man, than in the land." In other words a very great deal depends on the gardener. And Jesus was giving these followers His final word on who was the Gardener! "My Father is the husbandman!" So the One back of this enterprise is entirely competent! There is nothing lacking about the husbandman, the tiller of the garden. Proper care and proper keeping is assured. The right nourishment, and the right pruning is certain. With all the resources of the universe no better gardener could be found! If anything is lacking it will not be on the gardener's part. Go work, says Jesus, and be assured that your work shall be aided, developed, enlarged, and made beautiful by the gardener.

II.

Again, Jesus is saying to them, "I am the vine." What a statement that is, too! In a manner we may say: All depends on the vine. The nature of the fruit, the vigor and growth of the vine, its species and breeding. Will the proper nourishment to the branches be assured, looking on Jesus? Has he the qualities of life, and endurance? To these disciples Jesus could have said no more assuring thing. They had seen him, known, loved and learned of him. They could count on him, and with the passing days, and years they would know better and better how completely they could trust him.

What a strong chain was being forged! The first link—"My Father;" the second link—"I am the vine." Locked and interlocked from all eternity! Stronger than the eternal hills. Jesus had not failed his Father, nor his followers. His own will had been completely given over to his Father's will, and how well he stood the test the world well knows. These disciples could never, never forget his faithfulness, goodness, his tenderness and love to them! They would know well that the 'vine' was sufficient! And when they found him resurrected from the tomb, and received his further commandments that link would be incomplete, indeed!

III.

Reassuring, yes, but also tremendously challenging! No wonder the historian wrote concerning them later, "Men that have hazarded their lives for the name of our Lord Jesus Christ"—(Acts 15:26). So in brief they were huddled closely together to hear Jesus say: It is a three-cornered campaign; it is a three-linked chain; and you are one of the links. No greater honor could there be in all the world than to be taken into that fellowship: "I have chosen you." "Ye are the branches." There could be no greater joy than they were to have! But they must not fail, and they did not!

They had their weaknesses. But the 'husbandman' had seen to that. He had sent, according to the promise of Jesus, the Holy Spirit to accomplish them! Fail, there is no such word, with that combination. God, and Jesus, and a Spirit-led church. You or I may fail to keep our part of the program, and miss the blessing; but not God, and not Jesus, and not the body of the Christ.

He brought them together in his high priestly prayer after he had given them his farewell address. And he prayed the Father to keep them, for after all, the coming of the Kingdom depended on them, and their followers, for the branches bear the fruit. The vine, its very life and existence, depends on the gardener; so also the branches—it is one life, and one fellowship. The dead branches are pruned away. The live branches are tilled, and nourished, that they may be made more and more alive! They would be the third link in the chain that would bind the world together in a Christian fellowship of love.

You and I are definitely assigned places in that program, just as definitely as were they assigned their places: "Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word; and they may all be one; as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us." Feel, my friends, the force of Jesus' prayer for you as you gather about the communion table today; and renew your love and allegiance to him as you sup with him at the table; and then go forth to help win the world into the Kingdom of eternal fellowship and love with God the Father!

FAMILY ALTAR.

cause David's heart did not fail, though all the hearts around him trembled, the hearts of millions since have been more courageous.

Philistines beset every man, and many of them are of gigantic stature. Yet they are to be slain, though with no mightier weapon than a pebble from the brook.

The denial of fear is man's one glorious denial. Fear shackles the soul; shackle fear, you stand out a freeman.

Prayer—Thou alone canst conquer fear for us, thou Hero of heroes, the incomparable Christ! Be our Exemplar, our Leader, and guide into the eternal bravery. Amen.

Amos R. Wells.

All usefulness and all comfort may be prevented by an unkind, a sour, crabbed temper of mind—a mind that can bear with no difference of opinion or temperament. A spirit of fault-finding; an unsatisfied temper; a constant irritability; little inequalities in the look, the temper, or the manner; a brow cloudy and dissatisfied—your husband or your wife cannot tell why—will more than neutralize all the good you can do, and render life anything but a blessing.

The Orphanage
CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

On August 15, 1925 a little boy (Lynn Dorsett) was admitted into the Christian Orphanage family. He was always faithful in doing whatever task that was assigned him. Always ready, always willing, never a word of complaint it mattered not how hard the task might be. He graduated from High School two years ago and when he reached the age limit we let him work in the dairy department at the orphanage to pay for room and board. He borrowed money to pay his college expenses, and got two years in Elon College. He asked the writer a few weeks ago to see if I could find him a job. I wrote to the President of a large manufacturing concern and asked them to give this young man a position, telling them of the good qualities this young man had. Lynn received a telegram to come at once. A position was open for him. On Thursday of July 29th after being a member of the orphanage family for twelve years, Lynn bade us good bye.

He leaves a record here no other boy has ever made! He has never been corrected or punished. He has never uttered an ugly word. He was honest in every particular. He was a gentleman in every act and deed. He was loved by every member of the orphanage family, and when the time came to say goodbye, his eyes filled with tears and so did the eyes of the writer.

The writer has been dealing with boys for quite a number of years, but Lynn Dorsett came the nearest to living a perfect life of any boy we have ever had in our care. We feel sure he will make good in his work and we hope someday to see Lynn Dorsett stand at the head of some department in the company he has gone to serve.

INSPIRED BY AMELIA EARHART.

Dr. William T. Boulton, Treasurer of our Home Boards, in an address at the Piedmont Commencement, recited the following poem. He acknowledged the authorship of it and said that it was written under the inspiration and the thrill of the courage of Amelia Earhart as she was about to start on her flight to England. In view of the deep interest and sorrow in the tragedy that has come to this high spirited and brave young woman, we reprint the poem, as it has a challenge for us all:

I swear the oath of man's best breed
Through storm-wracked skies, 'midst hell-blown seas:
By the Eternal God of Grace
I'll look disaster in the face,
Defy Earth insecurities
Then let the iron in my soul
Be fortitude, when troubles chafe,
Be courage strong, when dangers lower
And signal "Tis my zero hour—"
For the secret of life is not to be safe,
But to be Unafraid.

It is in the breakdown of religious training in the home, in the church, and in the school that we must look for the present cause of crime.

In Memoriam

LASSITER.

When the death angel quietly claimed Mrs. Lucy A. Lassiter on the evening of July 3, 1937, Damascus Christian Church lost one of its oldest and most loyal members.

Mrs. Lassiter was confined to her bed for almost seven years. Even though she was confined to her bed, she was always happy and met you with a smile when you entered her room. She loved her Bible, church, and church paper. Mrs. Lassiter read her Bible and "The Christian Sun" until the end.

Mrs. Lassiter was 83 years, eleven months, and 28 days old. She leaves to mourn 8 children, 28 grand-children, and 8 great-grand-children.

The funeral was conducted at the home by Dr. I. W. Johnson, Rev. J. M. Jolly, Rev. Ira Harrell, and the writer, with interment in the family cemetery.

May God bless those who mourn.

H. C. HILLIARD.

If a man will begin with certainties, he will end with doubts; but if he will be content to begin with doubts, he will end in certainties.—Bacon.

THE UPWARD PULL.

The road to full recovery is a steep one. It takes teamwork to pull up it. Every time the horses pull in opposite directions, the climb is stopped.

To put it another way, recovery is like the ripples that spread across a still pool when you drop a rock in it. If you give a man a job, he is able to buy things that other men have to produce. That takes more jobs. The jobs eventually pile up one upon the other.

But there is something else that can happen. If you deprive a man of a job, he must, after his savings are gone, stop buying things he used to buy. And that deprives other men of jobs. That is what happens when strikes take jobs away from men. The reason most commonly mentioned is that the workingmen should get more money.

That idea is sound to the extent that the more money you give to everybody the better off everybody will be. There is, however, the important fact that the real value of that money—what it will buy—must not be depreciated or you gain nothing.

Let's take a look for a moment at the figures just compiled by Nathaniel H. Engle of the Department of Commerce Business Research and Industrial Service.

Engle finds, for example, that in the first three months of 1937, large corporations earned profits amounting to 80 per cent of what they earned in 1929. But the factory payrolls had risen to 88 per cent of their 1929 level. Thus, the amount of money paid to workers is increasing much faster than profits. Which is just another way of saying that workers are getting an increasingly larger share of the national income.

If the worker's share is increased too rapidly, the increase can come from only one place—the consumer, who is himself a worker, pays. And your upward climb is stopped right there.—I. P. S.

A LETTER FROM THE FIELD.

The Daily Vacation Bible School, conducted at Liberty (Vance) from July 12 to 23rd under the leadership of Mr. Emmanuel Hedgebeth was very successful. There were enrolled 40 pupils. Four helpers from the church assisted Mr. Hedgebeth.

Rev. Jesse H. Dollar of Newport News, Virginia, assisted me in a meeting during the week of July 18th. Mr. Dollar's messages and winning personality made a deep impression upon the community and was manifest through the intense interest shown throughout the meeting. The number who will unite with the church has not been determined.

Rev. E. M. Carter of Youngsville, North Carolina, assisted me in a meeting at Mt. Gilead during the week of July 4th. A good meeting was the result of the week's work and four additions were made unto the church.

BOOK REVIEW.

"Christ of the Countryside," by Malcolm Dana, Cokesbury Press, Nashville, Tennessee, 1937. Cloth, $1.00.

Dr. Dana, who for many years has been the director of the Town and Country Department of what is now the Church Extension Division of the Board of Home and Missions of the Congregational and Christian Churches, is the author of this book. "Christ of the Countryside" is a well-written little volume containing twenty-three helpful meditations on the "rural" passages of the Gospels. Many of these studies were first used by the author as chapel talks in Yale Divinity School where he is a teacher of rural church work.

Some of the chapter headings will suggest the scope of the book. "In a Stable," "Country Disciples," "Open-Air Pulpits," "God of the Sparrow," "Wind and Weather," and "Outside a City Wall" are a few that are typical.

Dr. Dana opens his introduction by saying that "the Bible is essentially a rural book; and within the Gospels themselves can be found what might be termed a rural gospel." "In the Four Gospels," he continues, "the life and teachings of Jesus possess an environment of highways, hillsides and lakes; while his thoughts are expressed by means of multitudinous references to nature and to the nature world." The book carries out this thesis in an effective way.

Pastors, Sunday school teachers, young people's leaders, and parents should find this volume rich in suggestions for preaching, teaching and worship materials. Individuals seeking inspiration for their private devotions will use it with profit to themselves. No other book of its kind is available on the Scriptures that will be so useful to rural pastors.

T. A. TRIPP.

"I am profitably engaged in reading the Bible. Take all of this book upon reason that you can and the balance by faith, and you will live and die a better man . . . The best book which God has given to man."

Must The Evangelist Respect Academic Culture?

A TALK TO MINISTERS AT ELON

By Rev. James R. Clinton

Evangelism as a term has suffered in vague and casual use in recent years. Evangelism is preaching the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ to the unconverted with the avowed aim and purpose of winning them to Him. It is New Testament propaganda. It involves both method and message. The message is all that we mean by the Gospel in its pronouncements upon, its cleansing and renewing and transfiguring power in and through the whole life of man—individual, communal, international, until

Jesus shall reign where'er the sun
Doth His successive journeys run,
His Kingdom spread from shore to shore
Till moons shall wax and wane no more.

The method which, of course, is capable of infinite variation is always that of direct presentation and appeal. The Christian Church was born in Evangelism. The first Christians experienced the power of the Gospel, and then went out forthwith to give a presentation of that Gospel to the unevangelized masses. The Church was not only born in Evangelism, but has thrived upon it ever since—or else she has languished without it!

Many of the 18th century Evangelists, however, were scholars before they became Evangelists, and in becoming Evangelists, they did not cease to be scholars.

What, then, is the relationship of Evangelism and intellectual training and refinement? In many minds they are incompatible. To say it bluntly—we become more and more cultured the less evangelistic we are, and alternatively, we can only increase our evangelistic zeal by respecting our academic culture. Can the scholar be an Evangelist? Must the Evangelist be a scholar? While you ponder over these questions, let me say: beware of sophistry!

Evangelism and culture are not mutually dependent or exclusive. One represents the presentation of a message—the other, the training of the mind. Witness the history of revivals and find men of every type used by God. The essential qualities are not so much of the mind as of the heart. In Evangelism, character counts much more than intellect. Erasmus with his brilliantly critical academic mind failed to bring in the Reformation—Luther succeeded.

"God moves in a mysterious way."

Read also the records of glorious revival ministers through Harvey Drummond—refined and lovable, and Dwight L. Moody—rugged and just as lovable. So without laboring the point, Evangelism and scholarship have, in a certain sense, so little in common that it is difficult to place them side by side, even by way of contradiction and opposition. Nevertheless:—

Academic culture may hinder Evangelism. This is possible, but not inevitable. It all depends upon the education. Every system of education aims at some total view of life. Here I present a few questions and ask you to test them and reach your own conclusions. What is your view of the present system of education in Russia? in Italy? in Germany? and in America? What is the significance of Matthew Arnold's criticism of the universities of his day: "We are teaching our youth to live like Christians and think like pagans."

While you think over these questions, I shall proceed to say that a false humanism is a real foe to Evangelism. A view of life on an evolutionary philosophy of inevitable progress to "the superhuman"—makes no room for the Evangelist with his simple message of sinful humanity, needing a Saviour.

There is a type of culture that will not have the Cross, and there is no Evangelism apart from the Cross. The earnest evangelist of the 18th century—to whom, by the way, such men as Augustine Birrell of England and Einstein of Princeton take off their hats and say "the fervent Evangelicals have the secret"—was dubbed an enthusiast by the Deists of his time, who had rationalized religion into mere respectability.

In rationalising, ritualizing, socializing religion today, should we halt occasionally and ask another question—how about the winning of men—the transformation of personality?

On the other hand, intellectual training may, should and does help Evangelism. There is no virtue in ignorance—no value in crudeness.

God does use "the weak things . . ." to confound the mighty . . ." therein is manifested not the folly of men, but the wisdom of God. G. K. Chesterton, in his own winsical fashion finds a big argument for Christianity "in the number of fools that tackle it." So, in the very crudeness, we may find an argument and apologia for Evangelism! Whether we like it or not, God is constantly using those who have little or no educational advantages, in bringing the message of transfiguring love to the careless and indifferent.

But remember they are used not because of their negative gifts, but because of their positive gifts—not because they lack knowledge, but because they possess passion. How much more effective they would be if they had knowledge added to their zeal. Even Jerry McCauley, of Water Street Mission, New York, felt his need of knowledge and gave himself assiduously to self culture—through his study of good books and his association with refined people. Great Evangelists have never ignored or despised learning and training.

The essential thing, however, is the flaming heart. Study well Jowett's phrase "The Passion for Souls." But to the flaming heart there may and ought to be added the trained mind. Nor need the one be required at the expense of the other. I am convinced, the need of all our churches today is the revival of effective Evangelism. It is not enough to leave the stupendous task to those who are set aside to the work of Evangelism and specially trained. Effective Evangelism does not involve culture in the academic sense—though the academy may greatly enrich the Evangelist. It does mean an intelligent grasp of the Eternal Verities of the Gospel of Christ, and with that, a sympathetic understanding of human needs. No inferiority complex regarding either lack of educational opportunities or expert training should hinder any member of the Christian Church from winning his fellow men to Christ.

Cultured and uncultured alike must find their way to the Cross where the Pilgrim laid down his burden and thence made good his Journey to the City of God.

Life Surprises

Success we never dreamed of:
A blessing all unsought;
In lonely hours a new friend came
And inspiration brought!

One gloomy day a radiant joy
To us was freely given;
Just when we needed it, there came
A gift direct from Heaven!

And so we learned this lesson—
In unexpected ways,
God sends many a sweet surprise
To help us through the days!

PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

Rev. B. J. Earp reports that the revival at Apple's Chapel closed July 30th. Dr. S. C. Harrell preached some great sermons. There were nineteen additions to the church. It is felt that there has been a great renewal of spirit in the church, and that the revival was a success throughout.

During the week of July 4th, Rev. J. Everette Neese was with Rev. C. E. Newman at Liberty Church (Virginia). There were 27 professions and many additions to the church. During the week of July 18th, Mr. Neese was with Rev. E. M. Carter at Fuller's Chapel (Eastern N. C. Conf.). There were nine professions, nine additions to the church, and twenty-five re-dedications. Mr. Neese reports that there was a splendid interest manifested at both places.

VIRGINIA LETTER.

The writer is home after consecutive meetings of one week each held at the churches of his charge—Hebron, Liberty, Union, and Lebonon. We were faithfully assisted by the following ministers: Revs. H. E. Crutchfield, J. E. Neese, J. F. Morgan, and Millard Stevens. While visible results are not as were hoped for, good was done. Thirty-four have been received into the churches and a larger number renewed their vows. It is a great pleasure to have fellowship with brother ministers and a delight to work with them in the kingdom's interest.

The writer is expecting a vacation for part of the month of August and to attend again the great Bible Conference at Massanetta Springs to be with Dr. I. W. Johnson and other brethren.

C. E. NEWMAN.

MT. OLIVET (G) CHURCH.

Under the direction of Miss Dorothy Grigsby, a week's vacation Church School was held at the Mt. Olivet (G) Church from July 26th to August 1st. The closing program was given after Sunday school on August 1st. A large group of parents came for this program. There were thirty-eight enrolled in the school and there was an average attendance of thirty-six. Those receiving certificates for regular attendance and faithful work numbered twenty-nine.

Five certificates were given for completing three or more years of good work.

Local helpers in the school were: Miss Thelma Morris, Miss Marguerite Morris, Miss Naomi Snow, and Miss Winona Morris.

On Wednesday night the Christian Endeavor had a "get-together" in order that Miss Grigsby might meet the older members of the church. Miss Grigsby led a short worship service. After this the group of about sixty people assembled outside the church and played games under the leadership of Miss Thelma Morris. For all between the ages of the ten-year olds and the grand-fathers and grand-mothers who attended it was an enjoyable affair. There was a general feeling that more of this is needed in our churches today.

NEWPORT.

The work at Newport continues to progress nicely under the capable leadership of Rev. W. J. Andes as pastor.

Our Sunday school has been doing a good work this year; Brother Grover Stoneberger is superintendent. We organized a cradle roll and Home Department at the beginning of the year which has added interest.

We had a two weeks' Bible School this summer, conducted by Misses Dorothy Grigsby and Evelyn Ayseue, and our own pastor, Rev. W. J. Andes. They did a good work which has helped our Sunday school and church.

We have a missionary society which is trying to keep alive the missionary spirit in our church.

It was our happy privilege to entertain the Woman's Missionary Conference of the Valley of Virginia Thursday, July 28th. There was a good attendance and much interest shown.

We feel fortunate in securing the services of our present pastor for another year. He had done a splendid work the past year, which we have tried to appreciate.

We are planning to hold a revival some time this fall. Pray that there may be a great revival in His work.

WORLD TRENDS TO BE DISCUSSED AT MASSENETTA.

The Bible Conference which is to be held at Massanetta Springs, four miles east of Harrisonburg, Virginia, August 16-29, will be especially rich this year in speakers who are in a position to interpret the religious trends of the world. Dr. Wm. E. Hudson, who is the Conference Manager, says: "Inasmuch as the world is now a neighborhood and no nation is isolated, the church is forced to think in terms of the world." With this thought in mind, Dr. Hudson has been most fortunate in his choice of speakers.

For example, Dr. John A. Mackay, President of Princeton Theological Seminary, and Dr. Luther Wesley Smith, Pastor of the First Baptist Church, Syracuse, N. Y., will come to Massanetta Springs directly from the World Conference on Church, Community and State, which is being held at Oxford, England.

Bishop Arthur J. Moore, Oriental Bishop of the Southern Methodist Church, has just returned from a trip to the Far East and can give the religious viewpoint of the Oriental Nations, and the opportunity of the Church in those lands. Chiang Kai-Shek, the Generalissimo of China, gave Bishop Moore a contribution of $1,000.00 for the cause of benevolences in the Southern Methodist Church.

Rev. Frank W. Price, son of the ex-Moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, U. S., and a professor in Nanking Theological Seminary, Nanking, China, will come to Massanetta Springs almost directly from China, and hence will be in a position to give fresh information concerning the Japanese and Chinese relations and the religious condition in those countries.

Dr. R. J. Wedderspoon, pastor of the Pollokshields East Church, Glasgow, Scotland, will also be on the Bible Conference program, and will be able to tell of religious conditions in Scotland, England and, probably, the nations of Europe.

Dr. Robert E. Speer, one of the greatest authorities on the subject of World Missions, and one of the leading laymen of America, Executive Secretary of the Foreign Mission Board, Presbyterian Church, U.S.A., will be in a position to give information concerning the missionary work of the church in foreign lands, as well as the opportunity of the church the world over.

Speakers on the Conference program, besides those mentioned above, will include Dr. William Evans, one of the ablest Bible teachers of this country; Dr. Francis Miller, probably best known as the successor to Dr. John R. Mott in the International Y. M. C. A. work; Rev. Peter Marshal, Dr. E. T. Thompson, Dr. J. A. McLean, and many others.

THE OXFORD CONFERENCE.

On a recent Sunday afternoon Dr. John R. Mott, world-famous leader of Christian Youth movements, spoke over the radio from Oxford, England, summarizing the things accomplished at the "Conference on Church, Community, and State," which had just been concluded there. He stated that this was the largest conference of its kind held in this century, with forty-five nationalities and over a hundred Protestant Denominations—the Congregational-Christian Church being one. Among the group were one hundred leaders of Christian youth movements. High ranking church officials were present from various denominations, and leading laymen were there, too. The following paragraphs are quotations from Dr. Mott concerning this "Oxford Conference."

"This conference was preceded by three years of preparation on the part of the leaders, and was the result of much careful thought and planning. It was based on the premise that although confidence had been withdrawn from many pillars of our civilization in recent years, still Jesus Christ remains as firm and outstanding as before. Nothing has happened in these recent tragic years, which has invalidated a single claim of Jesus Christ. 'I am the way' and 'I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me,' are still true statements in the midst of this changing world.

"The central and organizing idea of the whole conference was the Christian Church in the midst of a changing world." In order to establish the position of the Church, the group was divided into five sections: Church and Community, Church and State, Church and the Economic Order, Church and Education, and Church and World of Nations—the latter with a sub-section on War. The final report of each section was presented to the whole group. These reports will be available in three forms: a comprehensive report giving the reports in full, a brochure containing the important developments, and a series of volumes dealing with specific problems. It is impossible to forecast the results, but these reports will be commended to the serious and favorable consideration of churches throughout the world. They contain clear definitions of the major issues confronting churches everywhere in our modern world.

"Not only were the major issues discussed as they exist at present, but we arrived at a general agreement as to be taken by the church, if critical issues confronting it are to be met. We could not always see the end, but could agree on the direction in which we should proceed.

"Still more significant, and possibly the most significant thing, was the fact that we came to see far more clearly than ever before that we must not only agree as to the next steps, but as to the next steps we must take together—we of so many widely different beliefs. The most important action was the plan for a World Council of Churches. When formed this will have five sections: Continent of Europe, British Isles and her possessions, the United States of America, the Eastern Orthodox Churches, and the younger churches of Asia, Africa, and Latin America. This Oxford Conference was an example of a visible and audible world fellowship which must be preserved."

NOTES FROM GEORGIA.

The Middle Georgia Association held its annual session at United Church, LaGrange, Georgia, Saturday-Sunday, July 24-25. Rev. John H. Knight, the pastor, and his people provided well for the delegates and ministers. The churches were well represented and practically all ministers were present. Rev. Frederick Held, Columbus, presided over the session, and officers for the coming year were selected as follows: Moderator, Mr. Rufus L. Farrar, LaGrange; Assistant Moderator, Rev. T. L. Leverett, Woodbury; Registrar-Treasurer, Mrs. C. W. Bankston, Meansville. Barnesville Parish, Rev. D. W. Shepherd, pastor, will be host to the Association in 1938. Helpful addresses by Dr. James R. Clinton were heard by the Association. Others appearing on the program were: Rev. D. W. Shepherd, Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, Rev. John H. Knight, Rev. C. W. Hanson, Rev. T. L. Leverett, Mrs. Chester Bankston, who represented the women of Middle Georgia, Rev. Wm. T. Scott, and others.

Plans are under way for the revival of the oldest Christian Church in Georgia—Providence Chapel (Red Hill), near Richland. This old church was organized around 1835 by Rev. Jubilee Smith and the deed, written by Dr. Smith is dated April 12, 1858. The plan is to group this church with First Church, Richland, and two other former Congregational churches, the minister living in the parsonage in Richland. The pastor-at-large has preached at Providence Chapel twice during the past two months. Mr. J. C. Brooks, a Student Summer Service worker, is to be at the church for two weeks during August, and Rev. E. M.

Carter, former pastor, will conduct a revival meeting there beginning on the third Sunday of August. "Richland-Doerun" Parish will offer an excellent opportunity for service to an energetic minister.

The North Georgia Association met at Duncan's Creek, Buford, Georgia, July 20th. Rev. Alan T. Jones, pastor of Macedonia Parish, was Moderator for the session. Every minister in the Association was present and only one church failed to be represented. The outstanding feature was the appearance of Rev. Raymond A. Dudley, Missionary to India, in two helpful addresses. Officers for the coming year were elected as follows: Moderator, Dr. H. H. Walker, Demorest; Assistant Moderator, Mr. Carl Butler, Oxford; Registrar-Treasurer, Mr. James Mahaffey, Hoschton. The 1938 session will be held at Central Church, Atlanta.

This is "revival meeting" time in Georgia, and Dr. James R. Clinton has contributed much to the season by appearing in Oak Grove Church, Chipley; Meansville; Woodbury; LaGrange and United. Reports indicate that almost every church in the state is receiving new members. Rev. John H. Knight, United Church, LaGrange, assisted by Rev. Alan T. Jones at Macedonia Church; Rev. R. Wiley Scott, Central Church, Atlanta, was with Mr. Jones at Duncan's Creek. Dr. Clinton will be with Rev. David W. Shepherd at Fredonia Church in August.

The churches and ministers of Georgia were saddened by the recent announcement of Rev. Henry B. Mowbray, beloved pastor of the Demorest Church, that he would retire in September. Mr. Mowbray has faithfully served the Demorest Church for seven years. He and Mrs. Mowbray plan to make their homes in Winter Park, Florida. Fitting tributes to Mr. Mowbray were made at the recent session of the North Georgia Association.

The following young people are doing fine service at Student Summer Service in Georgia this summer: Arthur Wells, J. C. Brooks, B. F. Edleman, Misses Dorothea Percy, Kathleen Rowles, Eleanor McMaster, and Betsy Jeanne Ford.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgement and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

THE EDITOR TAKES A REST.

Your genial editor has just departed for a well-earned vacation. By now there are hundreds of miles between him and this office. So it is that a somewhat abashed Student Summer Service worker finds himself with the church, a Church Vacation School, and "The Christian Sun" all sitting in his inexperienced lap. We ask your most generous indulgence until such time as the regular editor shall reappear, refreshed and rejuvenated. The Summer Worker has the same sort of feeling that he once had in a sandlot ball game. With his team one run behind in the ninth inning, with a man on third base, he was at bat. (And he might as well confess that he struck out that time). This job of filling Mr. Lester's shoes gives the worker the same feeling of inadequacy. Figuratively speaking, the shoes which he is trying to fill are so large that he has to take five or six steps before he can get from the heel to the toe and start the shoe moving.

MORE ABOUT STUDENT SUMMER SERVICE.

If you have a copy of "The Sun" for July 8, 1937, you will find there an editorial entitled "Student Summer Service." This gives something of the nature and the history of the work.

There is a great deal more to this work than appears on the surface. For those of us who come from a different part of the country, there is a new diet, a new way of thinking, a new way of acting to which we must accustom ourselves. Soon, however, the worker finds that friendliness is the one neverfailing approach to every situation. Not one worker have I known who has not been delighted with the southern people; their hospitality, their genuineness and their deep faith.

As we travel about, spending from a week to a month in a place, we gain a perspective which is quite unique. We see the same strength, and the same weaknesses repeated time after time in the churches in which we serve. It is from this somewhat detached viewpoint that the present writer will attempt editorials.

ELON—HERE AND THERE.

After three years at the Elon School of Leadership Training, I feel as though I were somewhat of a veteran. With my position as an S. S. S. worker, I have become well acquainted with both the faculty and the students. The events of the past three years crowd together in a sort of a kaliedoscope . . . the outdoor communion service this year; the questionable veal salad and its consequences which three years ago so bound us together as friends in adversity; the minister who broke his toe while wading in the brook; the "Polecats" and the "C. C. C.'s" fashion show; Pattie Lee and the folk games which were so successful in making portly ministers forget their dignity; the missionaries from Africa, the Phillipines, and India; the group meetings out in the moonlight.

However, the conference lasts but for a week each year. What happens the rest of the year? During that glorious week we saw that some went for play, and some for work. Many found time for both. Some threw their personalities into the conference, thereby adding so much more spice. Others remained on the outside throughout, not quite knowing how to enter into the spirit of the affair. It was like the two boys I knew who were on a tramp in the mountains. It was early spring; the frost had not been out of the ground for too long, and patches of snow still lingered in the shadows. We came to a pool in the brook we had been following. Both boys disrobed. With a joyous yell, a gasp, and vigorous splashing one of the boys jumped into the icy water, having a glorious time. The other boy sat on the edge, with his toes in the cold mud, and shivered; he dipped his fingertips gingerly into the clear water and drew them down across his body, shuddering with every drop that fell on him.

And now I'm out seeing these Elon-trained young people at work in their local churches. It's an inspiration to watch some of them take hold and work. They see what needs to be done; they now feel themselves prepared to help, and they dive in, maybe with a gasp at first, but soon they all splash merrily along at their work. Some of the others . . . and it's those who were in the outer ring of the inactive at the conference . . . sit around the sidelines, giggle, chew their gum, and shiver at every particle of responsibility that comes their way.

There is no doubt as to the real value of the Elon Leadership Training School. And there is no doubt as to the far greater potentialities of this school with regard to the work of the young people in the local churches. These potentialities can be realized if the churches will select their delegates with great care in years to come. Send those who like to splash.

DO YOU APPRECIATE YOUR MINISTER?

These words are for the eyes of the laymen. From three years of working with the ministers of the Southeast, living in their homes, listening to their problems, has grown in the writer a tremendous respect for their courage, their ability, and their character.

Suppose for an instant you were faced with these problems: Suppose you had to speak three or four times a week, perhaps more. Perhaps you feel yourself qualified to do this, but consider; you must choose your topics relative to the local situation and local problems. You must bring to your audience a realization of their individual shortcomings, yet you must antagonize no one. You must speak simply enough so that your words will pass by no one, yet you must be profound enough to avoid insulting the intelligence of the more intellectual members of the congregation. Each time you speak, you are expected to present a new point of view, a fresh slant, novel ideas, yet you are given very little time to meditate or to read. Too many other details interfere. There is the planning of the worship services, a job which cannot be rushed if it is well done. If the minister prepares a bulletin, he uses a day in that task. You, if you were a minister, would be expected to attend most of the meetings of the church organizations, whether by your presence you can help or not. You are frequently called on at short notice, or with no notice whatsoever, to "make a few remarks" or to "say a few words." You will be asked without warning to pray. People who would not think of asking you to go before the President of the United States without first preparing for your ideas will not hesitate to ask you to speak to God without forethought. And if you refuse . . . !

You will be flooded with all sorts of requests for aid. You must patiently sort those which arise from genuine need from demands which have as their origin sheer laziness. People will bring to you personal problems, often so involved that a solution seems impossible. You will probably know more and feel free to say less about family relationships than any other person in the community.

Your time will be taken up by broader fields than the local church and community. You will be responsible to the conference of which your church is a member. You will attend its meetings, prepare papers and services and programs. You will be asked to serve at special meetings in other churches, to teach at leadership training schools.

If you were a minister, could you keep all the social groups in the church in harmony? Could you make the rich feel the responsibility which their property entails, and yet could you give to the poor a realization of the dignity of honest labor? Could you keep family jealousies from causing strife in the congregation, and yet secure the proper people for the various responsibilities of church offices? Would you know how to restore the spiritual strength of those whose bodies are infirm with sickness and age? Could you comfort those who mourn and cause them to remain constant in faith? Could you call every person in the community your personal friend?

You see, your minister has plenty to do. His position is not an easy one when he is attending to his regular duties. Yet, I have seen a minister called on to taxi service for his parishioners, to attend meetings where his presence adds nothing whatever, to assist at funerals of people whom he has never met, to do work which should be cared for by other church officers and committees. I've seen parishes which grumbled that the minister should take a few weeks during the year to rest, because the "devil never takes a holiday." The minister is trying to use his life where it will count for the most. A fire-hose is of little value if pins are stuck into it throughout its length, likewise a minister finds his effectiveness decreased if he is constantly called on

OUR PRAYER.

By REV. EVERETT LIESHER.

O Lord God, the fountain of all goodness, by whose word alone all things receive, increase, and are brought into perfection, unto Thee do we bring the life of our church. We offer unto Thee praises and thanksgivings that Thou hast brought us as a church through the circuit of the years and that we have been spared to labor in the interests of the Kingdom. Forgive us if we have left undone things which we ought to have done. And if we have done anything of merit, we beseech Thee to look with favor upon us. We need Thy blessing, Lord. This church needs it. We need the continual promptings of Thy Spirit to uphold us in moments of temptation to neglect Thy Work. We need to be delivered constantly from the temptation to make our church life a mockery and an empty show. Forbid that we should ever let this church degenerate into a casual assemblage of religious frauds and loafers.

To this end we pray that Thy Holy Spirit will enter more and more fully into our church life, that Thou wilt guide us day by day, that Thou wilt make the members workers, the officers of the church leaders, the finances a system, the Sunday school a mighty stream of power proceeding from a working church, directed by consecrated lives. Amen.

to attend to matters which are not his business.

So, members of church, next time you decide to ask the minister to take you to the nearest city; next time you think of dropping in on him and spending all Saturday evening of a busy week; next time you ask him without previous notice to "say a few words," ask yourself if you are helping your pastor use his life where it will count for the most.

THE VALLEY CONFERENCE.

The eighty-ninth session of the Virginia Valley Central Conference of Congregational-Christian Churches met with the Mt. Olivet Christian Church in Rockingham County, Virginia, on Wednesday and Thursday of last week. This nice country church was well filled at all sessions, and the program was fine. Some of the churches that had not been reporting were represented. There was a serious and hopeful note in all the deliberations. Mt. Olivet church entertained royally. The Youth Fellowship had charge of the evening program, and did a good job. Visitors who shared in the program included Superintendent C. D. Johnson, Rev. F. E. Hyde, Miss Irene Cotten, Mrs. W. B. Williams, and this writer. Three ministers joined the Conference by letter of transfer. At a later date there will be a much more complete report of the Conference in a special issue of THE CHRISTIAN SUN. At present the editor just wants to say that it was an inspiration to share the fellowship and work of this excellent session of a great Conference which was organized ninety-nine years ago. All who were present this year, and many more, will surely want to be present next year when they celebrate the hundredth anniversary.

THE NEW EDITOR.

Most people never think about an editor taking a vacation. But editors sometimes think of it, and try to find a way to join with those who rest. But it is not easy to lay down such responsibilities and get away to rest, for the paper must come from the press so the subscribers can read it. When the editor is also a pastor and has duties in directing the religious educational work in five Conferences the problem really becomes complicated.

But even then there is a chance to rest and to live. Thanks to Student Summer Service, the editor is able to take a few weeks away from the regular duties. Mr. Loring Chase, brother of Miss Priscilla Chase and Mrs. Carl R. Key, is now conducting a Vacation Bible School in First Christian Church, Norfolk, and is also editing this paper. Mr. Chase graduated from college last June and expects to enter Yale Divinity School next fall. He is a busy man at present, but will probably find that to be a minister will always mean to be busy. All news items and material for the paper should be mailed to the regular address. The work goes on regardless of where the editor may be. After a bit of rest in the mountains and among friends, your editor hopes to return to his duties with renewed energies and enthusiasm. He is deeply grateful to Mr. Chase and the others who share in keeping the paper going while he is away.

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Liberty Spring Christian Church lost a very faithful member on August 4, 1937, when Mr. Fairlee Flavius Brinkley, son of the late L. Parke and Mrs. Sarah Rodgers Brinkley, passed to his reward, at the age of 66 years, 7 months and 14 days. He was the efficient secretary of the church for a number of years, served as assistant teacher of the Bertie Johnson Sunday School Class, and chairman of the Cemetery Committee.

He united with this church on Saturday, November 30, 1912. That was the time for the regular meeting of the church's quarterly conference. He came out to the church, called the pastor aside and said: "I have decided to join this church, if I may join today." The pastor replied: "We will be happy to accept you into our fellowship." He was received and baptized on that date, and was active in the work of the church until he was confined to his room by illness about six weeks ago. He made preparations to attend church on the last Sunday before he was confined to his room, but sent a message to the pastor: "Tell the pastor I would like to go, but I find I cannot do so, but my heart will be there."

On April 22, 1914, he and Miss Mary Culver were married in her home near Baltimore, Maryland. His pastor officiated. He is survived by his widow, one son, Parke Culver Brinkley, one sister, Mrs. B. W. Ashburn and several nieces, nephews and other relatives. At the time of his death he was a member of the County School Board, and took an active part in the interests of the County.

He was quiet and unassuming in his manner, but possessed qualities of leadership which won for him a prominent place in the community where he spent his life. He was hospitable in his home and rejoiced in the privilege of entertaining his friends and neighbors. He was a man whose judgment was respected, and his counsel was sought by a large number of people who knew him. He has been helpful in many ways, and he will be greatly missed in the church and community.

The funeral service was conducted in Liberty Spring Christian Church, on Thursday, August 5th, and the large congregation and the beautiful flowers bore unmistakeable evidence of his popularity, and the sympathy of the community.

Life is a wonderful gift of God. People who consecrate their talents to the Lord find many opportunities for doing good. Life is worth living, if it finds its place in the church and in the kingdom of God. Woe to any man who does not open his mind and heart to the spiritual uplift of Christianity. The Christian life is the only life worth living. There is comfort for bereaved hearts when memory gathers up the virtues which were treasured in life. And there is a blessed hope of reunion in the sweet bye and bye for those who follow the way of Jesus.

CHOOSING A COLLEGE.

There are hundreds and thousands of young men and young women graduating from high school every year. A large number of high school graduates are ambitious for college training. There are scores and hundreds of fine colleges located in different sections of the country. These young people are prepared for higher educational advantages. These colleges were built to meet their needs and to inspire them to higher and better things in life. The prospective college student is anxious to enter the college best suited to his needs. The college is anxious for the best student available. Education in its progressive plans is always striving for the best and is anxious to give the best. Here, as in every other instance worthwhile, the prospective college student must make his choice. This is more true than ever before.

Some years ago parents chose the college for their children. More recently the two together selected the college to which the child was to go. Today it is more or less in the hands of the child himself. About the only thing the parent has to say or do about it is to determine the amount of money to be spent at college, and it often happens that these calculations are misleading.

I think perhaps the first and last methods of choosing a school are wrong—that the idea of the parents and the child discussing together the course to be pursued in life, preparations necessary to make life a success in this particular field, and the place and conditions under which this preparation is to be received, and then together choose the college, is the more ideal way of determining where the youngster shall go to school. The college to be chosen is to be determined, of course, quite largely by what the prospective student wishes to do in life. However, the name of a college may be somewhat misleading. One would assume that if you are to be a teacher, you should go to a teachers training institution. All institutions are teachers training institutions as most learned professions are for the purpose of teaching. Many of our liberal arts schools today are among our best institutions for training for the teaching profession. If the prospective student is to be thoroughly prepared for his chosen profession in life, it is essential that a broad and comprehensive foundation be laid for his professional training. Twenty-five to fifty years ago, specialization began with the completion of high school work. The prospective teacher would begin the study of pedagogy and other problems related thereto. The prospective physician would begin the study of medicine. The ministerial student as a rule would begin the actual ministry. Custom has changed and requirements have become more exacting. At present at least two years of college training is required before specialization begins. Ultimately the Bachelor of Arts Degree or its equivalent will be required as a foundation upon which to construct training for the major professions open to experts today. The purpose of a college, however, must not rest primarily upon its scholastic curriculum. The average college today is prepared to do a good job in the field of education. They have the equipment, the curriculum, and the teachers. More and more, however, it is demonstrated that a successfully trained person has been trained in fields other than the usual college curriculum. In other words, more than classical subjects enter into the complete training of the individual. He may know Shakespeare, Browning, Tennyson, as well as being a thorough student in the other classics, but if he has no idea of what is correct on social occasions, he will be ill at ease when a cultural education is really required. Years ago the statement was made by a prominent educator that no man is thoroughly educated until he knows the English Bible. As a result of that declaration, Senator Beveridge of Indiana set himself to the task of mastering the scriptures and wrote his famous book, "The Bible Is Good Reading."

The Holy Scriptures do enter definitely into this question of training. A thorough study of the Scriptures is not sufficient. It is necessary that the Scriptures themselves wield their intended influence over the life of the individual. The future will reveal the fact that religion is a vital factor in the development and guidance of the individual life. The most fruitful age for instruction in religious matters in the college age. I would not for a moment minimize the training of the child religiously, but the individual reaches his conclusions and determines his course in life during college age, and if that life is to make its maximum contribution, God and religion must have a part in these conclusions and decisions. It is tragic for matters that are religious to be left out of the training of the individual during his college days.

The church institution or the church-related school is the fruitful field for such opportunities and such advantages. As members of the Christian Church have children ready for college, there should be no question as to where they should go. We have a school at Elon College built for the purpose of administering to the homes of our church and to the young people of our constituency. No member of our church need feel any necessity of apology for the equipment, the teaching staff, or the work done at Elon College. We stand here to serve the members of our church first and all young people who may come. We are ready and prepared to render the type of service desired for most of the professions open to ambitious young men and young women today.

L. E. SMITH.

A PASTOR STEPS DOWN.

On Sunday, August 1st, the Holy Neck congregation was given its greatest shock in recent years when Dr. N. G. Newman called the members into a business session, invited Dr. John G. Truitt to preside, and then proceeded to offer an item of business that for a moment held everyone breathless. He was tendering his resignation as pastor of the church. Although the brief statement which he read was firm in phrase and tone no one seemed to believe that this could actually be the end of his long ministry at Holy Neck. When the acting-chairman called for action on the matter it was moved that a committee be appointed to confer with Dr. Newman, whereupon he came forward and in gentle tones earnestly requested that the resignation be accepted at once. He further stated that declining health and inability to serve the church as forcefully as he felt that it should be served made it necessary for him to give way to a younger man. After some discussion the resignation was regretfully accepted, effective November 1, 1937. Thus, it seems, ends a long and successful ministry. However, we trust that Dr. Newman may still be of great service to the Kingdom through the exercise of his extraordinary talent as a teacher and writer. Perhaps, after a period of needed rest, he might find it possible to again carry on as an active minister. As we suggested on the occasion of his resignation, "This is the third time he has been with us; if we will consent to let him go now, maybe he will come back again."

A DELIGHTFUL OCCASION.

It was my pleasure to attend the family reunion of B. B. and Margaret Hite Talley at their home near Buffalo Lithia Springs, Virginia, on July 24, 1937. This was held on the 82nd birthday of Brother Talley. There were present his five sons, sixteen of the 20 grandchildren, five of the seven great-grandchildren, one sister, Mrs. Bettie Talley Glasscock, who is 87 years of age. The one other sister, Mrs. Janie Talley Overby of Boydton, Virginia, could not be present. A splendid supper was served at six o'clock in the evening in the grove of the home. Brother Talley has been a faithful member of Hebron Christian Church for 46 years. During the recent meeting, the 4th week in June, he was not able to attend on account of his health, and at his request, Rev. H. E. Crutchfield preached one evening at his home. A large crowd was present and it was a beautiful service.

May Brother Talley and his companion be spared to enjoy the reward of their faithful services given in the interest of home, loved ones, church and community.

A DIVIDED CHURCH.

WHEN THE CLOUDS WILL LIFT.

"A divided church has little moral authority in a divided world. We (of the churches) must adjust our differences or abdicate our moral leadership." The above is a quotation from E. Stanley Jones in "Victorious Living."

I quote further: "I asked a missionary how they ever got hold of such a lovely piece of property, and received this reply, 'The man who owned it built such high and expensive walls around it that he went bankrupt building the walls and had to sell the property.' Bankrupt building the walls! Is that not dangerously near the history of the Christian Churches today?" And then Dr. Jones declares, "We have so exhausted our resources in putting ecclesiastical walls between ourselves and others, and in keeping them in repair, that we have little left to use in helping redeem a world. If the time and intelligence and soul-force which we have expended in proving that we were right as against our brethren had been expended in united action against the problems that now confront the world, they would not now be so far from solution. And we would be leading the procession of events instead of being led by them."

"These divisions," continues Dr. Jones, "have brought a cloud over our religious life—dark, rainless clouds, clouds that presage storms of revolt, clouds that produce fear. God is today speaking out of that cloud and His voice is of old: 'This is my Son, hear him.' And what does the Son say: 'Father I will that they may be one.' When we become one, the clouds will lift, but not till then."

These words of E. Stanley Jones are timely indeed for our day, and should be heeded by those who, having built ecclesiastical walls about themselves would sunder and divide the household of God. "Father, I will that they may be one, even as I am in thee and thou art in me."

J. O. ATKINSON,
Mission Secretary.

"GO YE."

[Reporting a recent meeting of Congregational ministers of the New York Metropolitan area.]

"If your's is one of the churches dead to foreign missions, what is the cause?"

This was the clear-cut question asked of a group of ministers in the New York metropolitan area. Ships to the far parts of the world were at their wharves only a few blocks away; perhaps they were carrying a missionary or two. The committee of inquiry quite removed from the rushing city, was unhurriedly and snugly housed in a hotel meeting room. Seventeen ministers, three secretaries, and two missionaries were there to interrogate and to express convictions concerning the Gospel in the lands beyond the sea.

"The American Board wants to know if it has failed you. Or have you forgotten the Great Commission of our Lord? Have church people succumbed to, or been befuddled by a trend? Does the printed literature present the wrong material? Are you out of contact with missionaries?"

One thing was plain: any church or minister which goes at it in a big way, or even attacks the problem modestly, will obtain results in some measure. Beneficial changes can take place with surprising speed.

Just see what has actually happened! Two years ago nineteen hundred Congregational and Christian churches were giving nothing to the missionary enterprise. But last year nine hundred of these joined the ranks of givers.

So was a further condition generally agreed upon: that the deeply rooted concern of years ago, whereby Christ's people felt they must save the lost, is not weighing as heavily now on the conscience. Why not? The following reasons were offered:

"Young people have another point of view. Missions are for the older and more conservative."

"Then, the missionary aim was all for conversion. Now, the broader aim is less compelling as motivating urge toward giving or awakening interest."

"Radios and ships have made our world smaller. The far away heathen are now people and neighbors. Consequently, the former mystery of remoteness has disappeared."

"Local troubles and needs absorb sympathies. 'There is plenty to do at home.'"

"We are in a new and transient period of uncertainty and it doth not yet appear what we shall be."

"In the modern type of women's organizations the separate missionary society with its educational program is gone. The new may be less effective. The men of the Church have no plan of missionary education."

Are there other factors in the church that are working against the cause of missions?

As each availed himself of the opportunity to speak, came one by one: the pastor himself is often indifferent to the call of Christ for the world; as a result of the depression officers of the churches are apt to demand that when money is needed at home none should be sent outside; to present in a church the "general" cause has been a mistake, a specific project should be set for the support of givers who become interested in all the special work to which their gifts may go. Not all were in agreement about the latter.

Certain additional conditions were described that may or may not be prevalent in our churches: Congregational churches, especially suburban ones, were often initiated as community organizations, and the former members of the other denominations frequently remain aloof from missionary affairs; furthermore, many young parents do not attend church until their children enter Sunday school, at which time they are out of touch with what the church is doing.

The inquiry now happily faced in the other direction. For more than a hundred years our churches have responded to the spiritual command,

"Go ye into all the world." Individuals and great churches do give of their wealth to speed the Gospel on its way. Why have they done it? Why do they continue to do it? What shall a sermon contain that presents the whole Kingdom?

"In the export of commercial products no distinction between the useful and the detrimental has ever been made. Much harm has been done to the peoples of the world through material sold to them. Disease, suffering and sin have sometimes resulted. It must be the business of the church to send its product which is the best our civilization has to offer. That is, Jesus' way of life."

"The world is on its way to become Fascist, Communistic, or Christian. Let us see to it that the last is chosen."

"There is one great aim for all nations: peace. Christianity's dynamic is the only hope. Foreign missions have always advanced peace and brotherhood through Christ's Kingdom."

"The love of neighbor, with the love of God, is the center of our message. Who is our neighbor? The whole cause of missions answers by pointing toward work that is being done."

"Concrete methods must be used. The project's the thing."

"We must not fail to reach the world with Christian civilization before it is taken over by destructive and degrading influences that work to spread their blight."

"We must know that we possess a way of life that is without parallel among men. We either have a message or we have not. Every Christian should make that choice. Then he has cleared the deck and is ready to move forward."

"Compare your faith with that of the Seventh Day Adventist. Is giving to be regarded as a test of faith? He gives $42.00 per year to the cause of missions. One begins to wonder whether one actually believes. Know what you believe and then preach it."

"Attain understanding of what we are supposed to be doing. What is our work? Find out. Have joy in doing it."

"The passion to save the world for Christ is the heart of Christian spirit."

The last topic discussed was missionary publicity and these methods were considered important: personal contact of church people with missionaries; moving pictures from the field; the presentation of one whole field of work; leaflets on new methods of approach; pamphlets written for people unacquainted with the work, to be distributed Sundays; the missionary-syndicated material in the various state papers.

Then there is the Missionary Herald, to which all should subscribe.

VIRGINIA VALLEY CENTRAL WOMAN'S MISSIONARY CONFERENCE.

The Virginia Valley Central Woman's Missionary Conference met at Newport Christian Church on July 29th. The morning worship service was conducted by the Leaksville Society, in charge of Mrs. R. O. Rothgeb; the afternoon worship service by Rev. R. L. Williamson.

Mr. C. W. Louderback, one of the deacons at Newport, gave such a cordial welcome address, that it made all of the guests feel at home and happy to be present.

The following churches had representatives present: Antioch, Bethel, Leaksville, Linville, Newport, and Winchester. The following were represented by pastors only: Concord, Dry Run, Island Ford, Joppa, Mayland, Mt. Olivet (G), Mt. Olivet (R), Palmyra, St. Peters, Timber Ridge, Woods and Whistlers Chapels.

The pastors present were Revs. W. J. Andes, R. D. Coulter, R. A. Whitten, and R. L. Williamson.

Reports were given by the superintendents of Women's Work, Young People, Cradle Rolls, and Literature.

Mrs. R. A. Whitten gave a very interesting talk about a missionary friend of hers in Africa.

Rev. Roy D. Coulter gave a challenging address on missions. Rev. Mr. Coulter is a new minister in our conference and wins friends wherever he speaks.

The young people from Linville gave an interesting play.

The treasurer's report showed a total of $417.51 raised for this year.

During the business session it was planned to have a traveling library again this year. The secretary orders several, perhaps a half dozen different books and sends one to each society, to be read and sent on to the next society. This gives a chance for each society to know about the different books.

The following officers were elected: Mrs. K. H. Sale, president; Mrs. A. W. Andes, vice-president; Mrs. B. F. Frank, secretary; Miss Verdine Showalter, treasurer; Mrs. John Miller Cradle Roll superintendent; Mrs. E. L. Depoy, Woman's superintendent; Miss Helen Showalter, Young People's superintendent; Miss Minnie Dofflemyre, Literature superintendent; Miss Charlotte Hilyard, Spiritual Life superintendent.

An inspiring installation service was led by Rev. R. A. Whitten, assisted by Revs. Williamson and Andes.

MRS. B. F. FRANK.

DENDRON'S WOMAN'S SOCIETY.

The Dendron Woman's Missionary Society so far has held each monthly meeting with an average of two-thirds its membership in attendance.

Thanksgiving, Prayer Week, World's Day of Prayer and the Silver Anniversary have been observed. Nine members attended the Silver Jubilee held in Suffolk, and an offering representing twenty people was sent.

The Waverly District Meeting was held in the Dendron church on April 8th and was very successful. Nearly all societies in the District were represented.

"Congo Crosses" has been studied by the society, and plans are being made for several societies in this section to meet with the Dendron group one afternoon and evening for the study of "The Story of the American Negro."

MRS. E. M. RICHARDSON,
President.

MRS. B. J. INGRAM,
Secretary.

NOT ASHAMED.

In the stone work a young man was suddenly sent to do a piece of carving. The man on the job had been taken ill, and the task had to be finished on time. The young man did not know what the stone was for, but he went at the work in his accustomed painstaking way. He chiseled out a stem here, a leaf there, and flowers above. The master workman approved the job and the stone left the workman.

Some months passed. Then one day a young man was walking through the great and beautiful building that the city had just completed and opened. He came to the most prominent pillar, a handsome lily work. "Why," he exclaimed, "that's my bit of work!" And taking off his cap, he gazed at it and said reverently, "Thank God, I did that job well."

When I overheard that young man's remark, and saw the light in his eyes, and he told me about it, I knew if I had never known before, that work is a holy thing. Right wages and just treatment for workmen are proper adjuncts, but above and beyond them your bit of work is holy to you.—From Christian Life.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church"

MISS EMILY CARLETON, Editor, 541 Osceola Ave., Winter Park, Fla.

ADVANTAGES OF LEADERSHIP TRAINING SCHOOLS.

It was my privilege to be selected as a delegate to the Leadership Training School at Elon College for two years. Only those who have been so fortunate as to be sent to this school know the joy and inspiration of meeting other young people who are desirous of taking courses in Leadership Training. To be a leader in church work, one must have efficient training, and this can only be secured from men and women who are making it their life work to spread the gospel.

To be a leader, one must be a sincere, vital Christian. One must have a thorough understanding of the meaning of Christianity and of the conditions of the present time. The Bible must be studied and rightly interpreted.

First of all, such a school provides the training for various positions in the local church. So many young people in the churches are failing, as they have had no training in leadership, and just now this is one of the things most needed in our churches. At such a school young people are developed spiritually, mentally, physically, and socially—meeting the needs in the lives of our young people as nothing else can do. It gives them something worth while to do, keeping them from temptations which continually surround them. Through these courses, boys and girls are able to conduct their own services in their local churches.

The young people are learning about missions and our missionaries; they are taught the origin of the Bible and many other facts which will make them intelligent church workers of tomorrow.

Parties, picnics, and all social activities are planned by the young people themselves, under the supervision of adult counselors, and these fill the need for social contact and wholesome fun.

The program of Christian Social Service is teaching our young people to be thankful for their own blessings, to sympathize with others, and to desire to help the unfortunate.

Our conference at Elon was not all work. We had regular hours assigned for study and recreation. In the morning at eight o'clock classes began. There were numerous types of courses to choose from, and there were courses for ministers as well as for young people.

Each morning chapel services were conducted by Dr. James R. Clinton of Philadelphia. After lunch we all went to our rooms for the purpose of studying and resting. Following this the students were allowed to play baseball, tennis, ping-pong, horse-shoes, and many other games. After supper, Vesper services were held on the campus, conducted by Dr. Shaver's class on Worship. Usually, when they were over, the students would have time to chat with one another until time for the evening program. One of the evening programs consisted of a movie on Elon College and its different activities. There were group meetings, too, held in the evening at 9:45. At 10:30 sharp, lights were extinguished.

The boys and girls of today are the men and women of the church of tomorrow, and unless they are properly trained, the church will be a failure.

THE GENERALISSIMO'S MORAL LAW.

These rules by General Chiang Kai-shek, for Chinese soldiers are printed on a little card and distributed under the auspices of the Officers Moral Endeavor Association:

1. Thou shalt not covet riches.
2. Thou shalt not fear to die.
3. Thou shalt not advertise thyself for vain glory.
4. Thou shalt not be proud.
5. Thou shalt not be lazy.
6. Thou shalt not commit adultery nor gamble.
7. Thou shalt not smoke.
8. Thou shalt not drink wine.
9. Thou shalt not borrow money.
10. Thou shalt not lie.

HONESTY THAT MAKES NO EXCEPTIONS.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC
FOR AUGUST 22, 1937.

SCRIPTURE: Acts 5: 1-11; Heb. 13: 18.

Daily Readings—

Monday—Deal Honestly.—Rom. 12: 17.
Tuesday—Give Honest Weight.—Deut. 25: 13-16.
Wednesday—Honest in Speech and Deed.—Ps. 15: 1-5.

Thursday—Honest Administration—II Kings 12: 9-15:

Friday—Favoritism—Acts 6: 1-4.

Saturday—Pay Your Debts—Rom. 13: 7-8.

Honesty is a much-emphasized principle or virtue, but it is carelessly observed by many, even by Christians. Little acts of dishonesty are ignored as if they "do not amount to much." If a person will make honesty a cardinal virtue of his life there will be no exceptions. One will be devoted to goodness and truth under all conditions. It means that he will be honest with himself, honest with friends and associates, and honest with God.

Something to Think About—

1. Which of the following reputations do you desire most?—"He is a shrewd business man;" "He knows his facts;" "His word is as good as his bond;" "He is making money by leaps and bounds."

2. Does honesty simply mean tell the truth when you are asked a question? Suppose your mother thinks you are at some particular place, and instead you go somewhere else. She does not question you. Are you completely honest if you do not tell her where you went? On the other hand, is it honest to pretend that you were at certain places to keep your parents from saying anything about it? Are "white lies" justifiable under certain conditions?

3. What are some of the forms of dishonesty that are common in your community? What are the fruits of dishonesty? What are its rewards?

THE BETTER WAY

It is better to lose with a conscience clean
Than to win with trick unfair,
It is better to fail and to know you've been,
Whatever the prize was, square,
Than to claim the joy of a far-off goal
And the cheer of the stander-by,
And to know down deep in your inmost soul
A cheat must live and die.
You will hate the thing when the crowds are gone,
For it stands for a false deed done,
And it's better you never should reach your goal
Than ever success to buy
At the price of knowing, down deep in your soul,
That your glory was all a lie.

GOD GIVES LAWS TO A NATION.

LESSON VII—AUGUST 15.

GOLDEN TEXT: Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind . . . thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.—Matthew 22: 37-39.

LESSON: Exodus 19: 1-20: 21.

Man cannot live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God. The Israelites did not know that, and they needed to learn it. They had seen evidences of the power of God in their delivery from Egypt, and evidences of the providence of God in the way in which they had been fed and been given to drink in the desert. It remained for them to know the moral majesty of and His ethical demands on them as touching their attitude toward Him and their relations with their fellowmen. Thus it was that He led them to Sinai, the "mount of God."

Sinai.

Sinai was admirably adapted to be the scene of the giving of the law. Here was a huge mountain rising suddenly and precipitately out of the level plain or desert—it looked like a huge altar itself, a visible reminder of the place of worship. It made a profound impression upon these people, accustomed as they were to the flat country of Goshen and the desert through which they had passed.

Furthermore the place was subject to terrific storms. The wind howled through the rocks like the blast of a trumpet. Black clouds rested upon its summit as if some heavenly visitant veiling his glory in the thick darkness had ascended upon the Mount. The fierce flash of the lightning, and the roar of the thunder gave the inspiration of supernatural power. The place conspired to make an indelible impression upon the people, and they stood in awe and reverence at its foot, while Moses went up into the Mount and talked with God. When he came down he bore with him those elements of the moral law which stand as the expression of the divine will.

Basic Principles.

What we call the Ten Commandments or the "Ten Words," as they were called, represent the basic principles of civilization. Here in brief compass are the general laws governing a man's relation toward God and toward his fellowman. Here too are the principles of righteousness in their social implications. Let no man think that the Ten Commandments are outgrown. To be sure they need interpretation as applied to our modern life. But they embody in essence the law which Jesus announced in summary, to love God and to love one's fellowman.

The Israelites were to have no other gods, save the One who brought them up out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage. Here was Monotheism, belief in one God, a discovery that came only by inspired spiritual insight. They were to guard the sacredness of that faith in an Unseen Deity by the avoidance of all idolatry. No graven image was to be made as a likeness of Him. By faith they were to endure as seeing him who is invisible.

His name was to be held sacred by never uttering it profanely, and what is more to the point, lightly or flippantly. Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain, means more than simply profanity; it is a prohibition against the idle or the flippant use of God's name. Many a person who does not swear takes God's name in vain.

They were to set apart one day in seven for rest and worship, thus sanctifying not only this one day, but making sacred all the time. Jesus admitted that the sabbath was made for man and not man for the sabbath, but one has a suspicion that amounts to a conviction that our modern Sunday or Lord's Day has lost much of its original meaning and has been prostituted to lower ends and aims.

From the things touching man's attitude toward the divine, the Ten Commandments pass straight on to the fundamental human relations, the things concerning man's relation with his fellowman. Briefly they may be summed up as follows:

Family ties are sacred—Honor thy father and thy mother. It is to be noted that this is the only commandment with promise—Paul calls attention to this in his letter to the Ephesians.

Human life is sacred—Thou shalt not kill. But there are ways of killing that are more subtle than taking an axe and chopping off a man's head. In our modern world this commandment has a wide application and strikes deeply.

Purity between sexes is sacred—Thou shalt not commit adultery. Human beings who are married belong to each other. Those who are not married to each other are under obligation to regard sex relationships as sacred. There can be no enduring civilization unless the respect for the personality of others is kept sacred.

Property is sacred—Thou shalt not steal. Society cannot endure unless property and property rights are regarded and respected. A man does not have any right to take what belongs to another without the consent of the owner. But to be sure there is more than one way of stealing.

Truth is sacred—Thou shalt not bear false witness. Words are signals. When a man tells a lie he displays a false signal. There can be no security or confidence in life unless men hold truth sacred, unless their nay is nay and their yea is yea.

All the interests of others are sacred—Thou shalt not covet anything that is thy neighbor's. Inordinate or unlawful desire—it must be repressed, or better still replaced. Covetousness is a subtle and widespread sin. And it must be said that it is very much an unnamed sin. One does not hear many sermons against covetousness.

Here in summary are the basic principles of enduring civilization. They need to be interpreted in the light of Him who came not to destroy but to fulfil. They stand as the genuine expression of a moral order, august, cosmic, eternal, under whose beneficent rule all men and movements for industrial betterment and for social solidarity must be brought if they are to reach the land of promise.

MORMONS LAY NEW PLANS.

During the first week in April, 12,000 delegates to the 108th annual conference of the Mormon Church met in Salt Lake City, with one of the most ambitious programs ever undertaken. This included $1,350,00 in educational projects (50 per cent increase over 1936), purchase of a site in Los Angeles for a $350,000 temple, another at Idaho Falls, Idaho, for a $250,000 temple, erection of a score or more chapels in the United States and abroad, and intensification of their worldwide missionary work. The Mormon hierarchy, to obtain funds, enforces the old-time tithing system, collects from each member, in addition, for the relief emergency, the cost of two meals per month.

The church borrows no money and mortgages none of its vast properties, which include sugar beet and other factories, mines, hotels, newspapers, buildings and mercantile establishments.

MONDAY.

WHAT DOTTH GOD KNOW?

"Thou sayesth, what doth God know? Can He judge through the thick darkness?"—Job. 22:13.

Man is still asking, "Who, What and Where is God?" He is still asking what God knows. Modern science has enabled him to penetrate into unimagined achievements and distances. The immensity of time from an unknown beginning to the far stretches of an eternal future stretches out far past our feeble understanding. Midst this greatness man himself reduces to such infinitesimal minuteness, that he feels impelled to ask, "Can God know me?"

If this is the reaction, it is wrong. The bewilderment should bring no despair. We should not be bewildered. It is God. God is there, working out His will and pleasure. Christ came, lived and died that whosoever believeth on Him should not be bewildered. In His light we shall see the light, and instead of being shut away from Him, we shall know more of Him.

Prayer—Dear Heavenly Father, we thank Thee for the unspeakable gift of Jesus, who is our Teacher, our Light, our Spirit, and our Hope. Amen.

TUESDAY.

VALID PRAYER.

"And when ye pray use not vain repetitions, as the heathens do, for they think that they shall be heard for their much speaking."—Matt. 6:7.

Elijah on Mt. Carmel praying said, "Hear me, O God, hear me, that this people may know that thou, Lord, art God." Jesus taught that prayer is to be free from pride and ambition—also is to take no thought of self. The prayer of Elijah and the prayer of the publican, who fell down upon his knees in the dust and cried, "Lord have mercy upon me a sinner," had no semblance of a selfish boast. Each wanted it known that he was the servant of the Lord, and whatever is done at the will of the Lord and for the good of mankind.

This is the spirit in which our own prayers shall be valid. We believe that if such is our sincere petition, God will grant them.

Prayer—Dear Lord, remove far from us all vain glory. May our life's purpose be, "Thy Kingdom Come." Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

TERRIBLY LOVING.

"Our God, the Great, the Mighty, and the terrible God, who keepeth covenant and mercy."—Neh. 9:32.

The word "mercy" in this text is translated in the revised version "loving-kindness." This makes it read "God is terribly loving." Is He?

A God who is weak and whose word could not be trusted would not be a God sufficiently helpful and could not be known as supremely loving. The fruit of unrighteousness is death. That is terrible. And yet, who would trust in a God who had it otherwise? Our God is the mightiest of the strong, and doeth all things well to them that love and serve him, even to the extent often of causing evil to serve Him. Therefore the fear of the Lord is wisdom and in that we can love and trust Him supremely. We know that He is powerful enough to keep all of His covenants, and by the same token we can hold on to our covenants with Him. God is terrific in His love and mercy.

Prayer—Our Father in heaven, our strength rests in Thee. Our greatness lies in Thy gentleness, and our peace in Thy promise. We thank Thee. Amen.

THURSDAY.

REVEALED GOD.

"God hath revealed them (the things which God hath prepared for them that love Him) unto us by His spirit: for the spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God."—I Cor. 2:10.

We stood in a garden of palms, and from one spot we caught a glimpse of the lighthouse in the bay. That light had been there all the time but we had not seen it before.

Friends, how often have sodis lights been obscure from our vision by untoward circumstances or by the more sordid things of life enshrouding our lives? The "Bright beams of our Father's mercies" shine always. They are there forever. If we consecrated more, if we prayed more, if we read more of Him, if we entered into His life, how much more would we catch the gleams of His lights, and we would be safe evermore.

Prayer—Our Father, we confess that we often miss the mark and we make it impossible for the guidance of thy blessings. Forbid that we shall turn our faces the wrong way, but may we ever search for Thee and Thy light. Amen.

FRIDAY.

THE GOD OF THE LIVING.

"God is not the God of the dead, but of the living."—Lk. 20:38.

God lives. If God did not live everything else would be dead. In life He is unto us a God of deliverance, and unto Him belongeth escape from death. In His hand is the soul of every living thing, and the breath of all mankind. That is life.

A living God requires His living creatures to know Him, and in proportion that we have His life in us, we are His children, and He, our Father, rejoices with us. But "in the midst of life we are in death."

Sin is our deadly foe, and the soul that sinneth shall die. We are not born so to live. We are born to live to be filled with His Spirit, His Wisdom and Power, and as living beings to be vital, seeking life, giving life, using life, and surrendering life to God; living so as to be always to sin.

Prayer—O God, come Thou and live within us each and from day to day. Fill us with the fulness of life. Amen.

SATURDAY.

CHOKED OUT.

"He that received seed among thorns is he that heareth the word; and the cares of the world, and the deceitfulness of riches, choke the word, and he becometh unfruitful."—Matt. 13:23.

We do not have to go into the jungles to find unfruitful lands which have been made so by jungle brush or stony ground. The lawns of our front doors are sometimes destroyed by a foreign growth, and always so when neglected. Constant care and labor are needed to keep them what they ought to be. Vast acres in Southern California near San Diego have been laid off in streets and sidewalks, paved with cement and developed otherwise. But, alas, now they are overgrown with a tangled mass of wash, weeds, and cacti.

We are threatened continually by the things of this world that would destroy our spiritual life. God has appointed us to keep the sacred soil of our souls free from invasion of sin. We have to watch and labor with diligence to preserve that life in an acceptable manner. "Watch and pray, lest ye enter into temptation."

Prayer—Our Father, give us Thy saving grace. We commit our souls to Thy keeping for this day. May we GREATNESS OF GOODNESS.

By REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D.

"Run ye to and fro through the streets of Jerusalem, and see now, and know, and seek in the broad places thereof, if ye can find a man, if there be any that executeth justice, that seeketh the truth; and I will pardon it."—Jeremiah 5:1.

A search was going on in old Jerusalem. A herald was commissioned to run its streets in answer to a prophet's prayer. Jeremiah had held his home town up to heaven, and begged that it might be spared destruction.

Precious and sacred things stood in jeopardy. Beautiful Jerusalem founded on its five high hills, 2,500 feet above sea-level; Solomon's temple built of great stones, enduring hard-woods, and gold and silver; the golden vessels, the divine altar, the Holy of holies, all trampled before trespassing armies of Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon. But more precious still were the promises of God to a great people, and the faith of a great race. All is in jeopardy.

The young patriot and prophet Jeremiah's question rises to God's throne: Why? And God tells Jeremiah to answer his own question: "Run to and fro through the streets of Jerusalem . . . if ye find a man . . . I will pardon it." Find a man! Manhood was wasted, true worship had failed, and the people had gone after other Gods. Find manhood, and I will pardon it! What premium God places on goodness!

Your city has gold, but gold without God is dangerous; your city has great walls and fortresses, but walls and fortresses without faith are futile; your city has men, but it lacks manhood!

God send us men of steadfast will Patient, courageous, strong and true;
With vision clear and mind equipped,
His will to learn, his work to do.

God send us men with hearts ablaze,
All truth to love, all wrong to hate;
These are the patriots nations need,
These are the bulwark of the State.

Lot looked in the wicked city of Sodom for ten men; Jeremiah looked in the sacred city of Jerusalem for one! Sodom would have been spared for ten; Jerusalem for one. Jerusalem's sins, in the light of blessings which God had bestowed upon her, were as great if not greater than the sins of Sodom.

True, these are doings of the ancient past, musty you may say with dust of the years! Yes, past history, but, my friend, the lessons they teach will still be unlearned by many in the years to come. They are old facts with fresh truths for every worshipper in God's house today.

Sin is death-dealing; goodness is life-giving. More specifically, a good man is saving-salt to any community! Good men are like the salt of the earth, they are the light of the world. There are not any good men apart from good women. By good men I mean good people of whatever race or sex, or clime or creed. Our social world is held together by their goodness.

"There was a man sent from God . . .," and that has been the opening line of all earth's triumphs; that has been the victory over oppression, tyranny, and despotism down across the years. God intends that we should be real men, and real women, divine images of our Creator. Jesus said when ye pray say, "Our Father . . .," claim your birthright, and your kinship.

"There was a man . . .," whether it be John the Baptist by the waters of the Jordan, or whether it be George Washington in prayer in the wilderness of Valley Forge; or Livingstone in Africa or Grenfell in Labrador, a real manhood meets the measure of the test. It may be Florence Nightingale, saint of modern nursing, or Clara Barton, founder of the Red Cross; it may be Frances Willard, or Jane Addams; or Edith Cavil, or your own mother; but the day has been saved a thousand times by virtue of real womanhood, or real manhood.

Boy, write it down for your guidance
The whole of your journey through:
Men may be richer and wiser,
But none can be cleaner than you.

Some may be stronger in body,
The great feats of life they may do,
But even the genius can never
Be fairer and squarer than you.

You may be weak in your labor,
For that is a physical test,
But in all the strong virtues of manhood
You can equal the greatest and best.

If it is said you were cheerful and kindly,
If it is said you were honest and true—
No more could be told of a monarch,
For the best has been spoken of you.

For honor and truth have no shadings,
No differing parts, or degrees,
And in virtue the humblest can equal
The mightiest man that he sees.

You may not be clever, or skillful,
You may not be strong as the few,
But if you've a mind to be honest,
There's none can be straighter than you.
—Edgar A. Guest.

Now let me go one step further with this message. There was one time when a herald hunting the streets of Jerusalem might have found a Man, good and true! He who touched blind eyes and broken bodies, and beaten spirits; forgave sins, and freshened faiths; walked Jerusalem's streets, and found its haunts of poverty, and sin, and woe. But they put Jesus of Nazareth out. Outside the city wall they nailed him to a cruel tree. Jerusalem was desolate indeed. Jeremiah's Jerusalem, David's Jerusalem, Jesus' Jerusalem was desolate. They had put out the one Man that could have lifted it to the skies, and brought down a New Jerusalem from the heavens above!

Do not put Jesus out! God may be in search of manhood in you! You will need the manhood of the Master shed abroad in your own heart and life! The best we are, or ever can hope to be is nothing beside Jesus; looking on Him we cry, "There is none good, no not one," knowing that He alone was without sin. But we may have Him, both now and evermore! Amen.

SUNDAY.

THE SERMON THAT FALLS SHORT.

"Not with the wisdom of words, lest the cross of Christ should be made of none effect."—I Cor. 1:17.

No sermon is ever preached and no life is ever absolutely satisfactory. There flash ahead of us vistas of eternal glory which, achieve as we may we never reach. "God marches on." Christianity is beyond human mastery. It takes the Grace of God through our Lord Jesus Christ. "It is not by might nor by power, but by my spirit, saith the Lord."

Prayer—Dear, Heavenly Father, we are helpless and lost without Jesus. We pray for the filling of our lives by His grace this day. Amen.

Prejudice, ignorance, bitterness and, above all, selfishness are the great obstacles to peace in people, groups and nations.

The Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

Since the writer of this note has been in one way or another connected with the issuing of THE CHRISTIAN SUN—about sixteen years altogether—Mr. Johnston has missed his weekly letter three or possibly four times. In each instance this was caused by sickness or death. This week he fails again to have a letter, but it is not from lack of interest, but because of the press of other matters which have taken him from his post of duty. First, the Valley Conference, and then other business in another part of Virginia.

Will you not surprise and make him happy when he returns to the Orphanage by having sent in an unusually large offering for the boys and girls this week? He will appreciate it, and they will, too.

THE HARVEST TIDE.

The hearts of all Christians in our State must be constantly cheered at the good news at this time of harvest. Reports of great ingatherings are coming all the time. Here is one from a little church: after services day by day in the hottest week of the year, thirteen were received and baptized, about half of them mature men and women.

How much interested was our Lord in the harvest! For Him the fields were always white for it and He was seeking laborers for it. He sent out first the Twelve and then the Seventy, and He labored with His own hand. So greatly was He interested that His parting word was a commission to go into the harvest field, and remain there, preaching the Gospel to every creature.

Leaving metaphor aside, we are glad that our Baptist preachers in North Carolina are not at all attracted by the voice of the gain-sayers who sneer at the idea of conversion and regeneration, but go on preaching the Gospel of repentance and salvation by faith. They are making heaven glad—there is joy in heaven over one sinner that repenteth—and they are making North Carolina and its people glad. We do not believe there is a man or woman among us with heart so dead that it is not quickened with joy at the news of salvation coming to so many houses. "Blest river of salvation, pursue thy onward way."

In Memoriam

FLETCHER.

James Alvah Fletcher, son of Mr. and Mrs. James S. Fletcher, was born July 17, 1915, and died July 26, 1937, aged twenty-two years. His death was caused by injuries he sustained while in an automobile accident near South Boston Virginia. He leaves besides his father and mother one brother and five sisters.

The funeral was conducted by the writer, from the home near Virgilina, Virginia, on Tuesday afternoon, July 27th, and the burial was in the family cemetery. A large crowd was present. The floral tributes were beautiful and in abundance.

An excellent young man has been taken from us. When he was eleven years of age, I received him into Union Christian Church. He was deeply loved in home and community. The heart of the entire community goes out to the devoted Christian parents and other members of the family. Home to them cannot be as it was; but the heavenly home is nearer and dearer.

C. E. NEWMAN.

MRS. WARREN H. DENISON.

Mrs. Abbie Burnham Denison, wife of Dr. Warren H. Denison, Assistant Secretary of the General Council of Congregational and Christian Churches, died at Dayton, Ohio, July 16, 1937, at the age of sixty-two years.

Dr. and Mrs. Denison finished their education at Antioch College in June, 1896, and were married June 22, 1896. They went to the Troy, Ohio pastorate and served there eleven years. During this time their four children were born; Paul S., now in business in New Orleans, Louisiana; W. Harold, Columbus, Ohio, on the State Area Staff of Ohio Y. M. C. A.'s; Mrs. Martha D. Rondieau, Glenco, Illinois, Director of Religious Education and Drama; Mrs. Mary D. Fiebigler, Albany, New York, wife of the pastor of the Second Congregational-Christian Church.

Brief funeral services were held at their Dayton home July 19th under the direction of their pastor, Rev. Frank J. Wright, and their son-in-law, Rev. Judson E. Fiebigler; also at the Troy Church in charge of the pastor, Rev. Archie H. Hook, and Dr. Frank G. Coffin, and the burial was in the Riverside cemetery at Troy.

Dr. and Mrs. Denison served as pastor at Troy, Ohio, Huntington, Indiana, and Norfolk Virginia, for twenty-two years before moving to Dayton in 1918 where for the last nineteen years, Dr. Denison served the denomination in national secretarial positions.

Mrs. Denison was Treasurer of the Woman's Board of Home Missions of the Christian Church from 1908 to 1922.

She was chairman of the Organization Committee that planned the union in 1921 of Woman's Board for Foreign Missions and the Woman's Board for Home Missions of the Christian Church into the Woman's Mission Board of the Christian Church. She was the first President of this new Woman's Mission Board from 1922 to 1926, retiring on account of ill health.

Mrs. Denison served on the Continuing Committee that helped to work out the union of the Woman's mission work when the Congregational and Christian Churches united.

She has served as Associate Moderator of the Ohio Conference of Congregational and Christian Churches and was a member of its Board of Trustees until illness caused her to tender her resignation a short time ago.

THE TAX STRETCH-OUT.

Experts of the Twentieth Century Fund compute that the working population of the United States would have to labor 308 days steadily to pay off the public debt of $36,000,000,000. That would be seven days a week for ten months, or, with Sundays off, six days a week for more than eleven months.

On the same basis of computation, America's working population will have to work fifty-seven days out of the year to maintain our Federal Government, on the basis of its current budget of around $7,000,000,000. That will be one day a week for fifty-two weeks, and seven days more.

With workers already assigned to one day a week to support the Federal Government, and permitting Sundays off, that leaves them five days a week to support their families and their State, county and municipal governments.

Or if the five-day week becomes standard, that will mean two days off each week, one day working for the Federal Government and four days for the family and the State and local governments.

Any way you look at it, it's a stretch-out for the hours of labor that go into taxes. And that's not all. Federal taxes aren't bringing in enough money to pay for Federal spending. The Treasury makes this report for the first twenty-four days of the fiscal year:—Receipts, $327,689,892.46; expenditures, $532,335,419.74; deficit, $204,645,527.27.

Which, roughly speaking, adds another day and half of indentured labor to the working population's hypothetical task of paying off the public debt, not to mention a few more hours added to the annual grind of paying the running cost of government, due to added interest charges on the public debt—New York World-Telegram.

FACTORY WAGES SET RECORD.

American factory wages, in terms of buying power, are higher today than ever before in history, it is revealed by a recent study made by the Machinery Institute. The average factory worker is 6 per cent better off today than he was in 1929 and about 46 per cent better off than in 1914, according to wage and cost of living indexes, the report showed.

Figuring the purchasing power of factory workers to obtain a given article, the study showed that:

Clothing for a family of four which in 1914 cost the earnings of 709 hours can be purchased today with the earnings of 349 hours. The average pair of shoes used to cost 9 hours 15 minutes of work in 1914. Now it cost 3 hours and 24 minutes.

To purchase 100 representative articles of home furnishings required the earnings of about 405 hours in 1914 but today only 279.

An automobile in 1914 cost the earnings of considerably more than a year's work whereas a greatly superior automobile today can be bought with the earnings of less than a thousand hours. The average automobile tire in 1914 cost 46 hours work compared to 9.5 hours of work today.

To earn enough to paint the average two story house in 1914 would have required 59 hours work, but now requires only 25 hours. Although a representative collection of drug and toilet articles which cost $1 in 1914 cost $1.39 in 1936, the time required to earn them dropped from 4 hours in 1914 to 2 hours 12 minutes in 1936.

The factory worker today can buy as much tobacco with earnings of an hour and 48 minutes as he could with earnings of more than 4 hours in 1914.—I. P. S.

For All Dusty Souls

About this time o' year, dust "rides the highways." Like a pale grey Blanket it covers field and foliage—clinging, choking, blurring, blinding—hiding the lovely gleam of yesterday's shining leaves and petals. Morning noon, and night it hovers like a blight across a world of beauty until God "washes the world."

Souls are like that! Young, middle-aged, old, souls that go up and down the highways of life know what it is to feel on the surface—clinging, stifling, depressing—the accumulated dust of the road. One, who felt rather keenly some of that dust, "saw God wash the world last night," and reverently, beautifully, exclaimed:

Ah, would He had washed me
As clean of all my dust and dirt
As that old white birch tree.

Drifting, leaderless souls are apt to have about them a goodly quantity of that dust. Even purposeful, serving souls involuntarily collect more than their share of these powdery particles of earth—these earthen particles that cling and stifle and blur the spiritual beauty, and mar the fragrance of the soul.

At the road's end He waits, and sooner or later every prodigal must come back to Him. And eventually, as the hot, dusty hart pants after the water brooks, so every conscious soul-dusty pilgrim will cry out to Him who alone can cleanse, "Lord, if Thou wilt, Thou canst make me clean!"—will say with Lew Sarett:

Oh, I can hear you, God,
Above the cry of the tossing trees—
Rolling your windy tides across the sky
And splashing your silver seas
Over the pine,
To the water-line
Of the moon.

Oh, I can hear you, God,
Above the wail of the lonely loon—
When the pine-tops pitch and nod—
Chanting your melodies
Of ghastly waterfalls and avalanches,
Swishing your wind among the branches,
To make them pure and white.

Wash over me, God, with your piney breezes,
And your moon's wet, silver pool;
Wash over me, God, with your winds and night
And leave me clean and cool.

Having thus spoken, the listening ear will hear the Master's soft, sweet answer, "I will! Be thou clean!"

NUMBER 33.

Three-Score Years and Ten

The colored dawn arose beyond the east
And stretching westward out across the lake
It plucked with ruddy fingers at the shroud
Of low swung clouds that hid the mountain there;
Then bit by bit the mists were torn away,
And lo, the morn had passed, and it was day.

And when noon came, the mount stood forth in might,
Bare, towering, grim, and unattainable.
Throughout the day he frowned in majesty;
But as his shadow stretched across the lake
The mists began to rise; a velvet light,
Soft, purple, rich, bespoke the coming night.

And now in wistful tenderness he stood,
His craggy face was gentle, soft, and dim.
About his head a crown of glory shone.
He looked back toward the east, whence day had come
And smiled at noonday pride. Night came at last.
He faded to a shadow of the past.

LET THERE BE LIGHT

PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

During the week of August 1st, Rev. J. Everette Neese was with Rev. E. Carl Brady in a meeting at Pleasant Grove Christian Church, Randolph County, N. C. There was a fine attendance and a good interest prevailing throughout the meeting. The meeting closed with twenty-five professions and nineteen additions to the church.

Miss Katherine Macon of Henderson, N. C., was seriously injured in an automobile accident on Sunday night, August 8th, near Greenwood, S. C., where she has been visiting. She is in Greenwood Hospital, where she may remain for a long time, and would appreciate messages from her friends. We are sure that they are all eager for her quick recovery.

The First Church of Richmond has been holding union services with the Boulevard Methodist and Westminster Presbyterian Churches during the Sunday evenings of July and August, as has been customary for several years past. One of the ministers of the three churches makes it his business to be present for the service which is held in some other than his own church. Visiting speakers have supplied at the morning services of our church when Mr. McCauley has been out of town.

LONG'S CHAPEL.

The revival meeting began at Long's Chapel the second Sunday in July. Rev. J. E. McCauley of Richmond, Virginia, was with us and did the preaching to our delight and satisfaction and spiritual uplift. His work does not need any detailed account, for all who know him know it is of the highest order. His sermons were Scriptural and pointed, carrying with them weight and conviction. He was heard by large congregations. Throughout there was a deep interest manifested. The church was much revived, and much new life was manifested. As a visible result of the meeting alone with that I have already mentioned, there were eight additions to the membership, all of which were and, I am sure, will be valuable to the church. These are fine folks to work with, always showing a fine spirit of appreciation and kindness not only to their pastor, but to every helper that comes to work with them. God be praised for all that was done.

BETHLEHEM.

The third Sunday in July we began our revival meeting at Bethlehem. Brother McCauley was with us there. His work was very acceptable with these good folks. Needless to say, the congregations were good, for it is always so with Bethlehem. As a visible result of the meeting, the church was much revived and four additions were made to the membership.

Bethlehem is one of our largest rural churches in the North Carolina and Virginia Conference, but has never as yet caught a vision of her own strength and resources. She could, and ought to be one of the

THE GOLDEN WEDDING DAY.

The Golden Wedding! But once it comes!
And comes that once too few.
How hallowed are the memories
This day invokes for you.

Golden thoughts of golden deeds,
And golden dreams come true;
A golden life of Joy complete
Is passing in review.

What words are fraught with all things good
Could human tongue employ,
To tell of such a day as this,
But gold without alloy.

It stands for things eternal, pure,
Enduring quality;
It symbolizes God's best gifts
To bless humanity.

'Tis so we think of you, dear friends,
This Golden Wedding Day;
Lives Golden-crowned with all the best
That Heaven has, for Aye.

So may the years that lie beyond
Bring open, golden ways;
Long sunlit paths to lead you on leading churches in the Conference, as no church in my knowledge does equal her in many respects. I am quite sure there are better days ahead and in the near future you will be hearing from her with good results. While there is much work to do and more that needs doing in that the membership is scattered far and wide, yet in the main these are good folks to work for and be with.
To Heaven's unending days.

G. C. CRUTCHFIELD.

PASTORS SHOULD DO IT.

There is a continual shift of members who move from one community to another. In many cases they are lost to the church from which they move and to the church in the neighborhood to which they go. They drift into another denomination or out of church life altogether. Pastors could stop this source of loss if they would take time to do it.

In visiting in my own parish I frequently find a person, and in many cases families, who have moved to Newport News from other towns or country churches. In almost every case they have either lost interest in church life or have joined other churches and it is almost impossible to coax them elsewhere for membership. This situation is serious in my judgment; it should be remedied and the pastors should do it.

I have on my desk now a card from Rev. Carl R. Key, pastor of our Holland, Virginia, Church, giving the name and local address of a family that has moved here from his field. It is most thoughtful of pastors who will take a minute and spend a penny to save a family to membership of our church. On the other hand I have written pastors for church letters of people who desired to transfer membership and never so much as hear from them. Brethren, we are too careless about such matters, we should set about remedying the situation without delay and the resulting loss of members to Congregational-Christian Churches throughout the Southeast. It is up to the pastors. Let's begin now to correct it.

JESSE H. DOLLAR.

AN ANSWERED PRAYER.

By Miss ELWOOD.

Lovely little Lotus Flower in her gown of shimmering blue is quite a big girl now. We wonder if you remember her? The child who visited us so regularly, when we were at camp in her village, until punishment and threats of further beating prevented any further intercourse with her. It is now our joy to tell you that the prayer request we sent forth at that time, namely, that same day the door into her own home might be opened to us, has been abundantly answered.

A Wayside Rest House.

After many years, we were camped again in the same wayside resthouse. Other little children came to and fro, but never a glimpse of Lotus did we see. We feared to ask or to inquire too closely of her whereabouts, lest in some way it might defeat our end. But one day as we walked along by the great forbidding wall that shut off her home from the outside street, we spoke of the earnest prayer that had been made, and the request that had been sent home to you, so many years before. And we wondered when it would be possible to make our way through that heavily barred door.

"Let us try now," said the Bible-woman; so without further ado, in we went, although a trifle fearful of results, we must confess. But to our great surprise the stony silence of the utter contempt of other days had given place to something that almost resembled a smile. So we took courage, and went boldly in. After the usual preliminaries and several attempts to tell the Gospel story the conversation turned to Lotus Flower. We appeared to be as disinterested as possible, in the hope that she might be allowed to see us. But no, she had gone to school, so they said. Another little child, covered with sores, in very real need of attention, was swinging in its tiny cradle, and wailing pathetically. We offered the necessary medicine, and it was arranged that Lotus Flower should come to the chattram for it. We were fearful of this arrangement, and made a mental note that we would need to come again ourselves, if the tiny sufferer was to be relieved. But no! to our great surprise, the mother was true to her word. The child came, but she did not stay; and we did not press her. Just a day or two later she came again. And this time there was no limit to her staying. The ointment had worked wonders; the baby had ceased its plaintive cry, and Lotus Flower was free to come and go. She took full advantage of her freedom. And it was really amusing to see her coming and going, each time with another small child, a new one since my last visit. After I had become well acquainted with her little brood, we began to revise the gospel stories and texts she had memorized so long ago. And to our great delight the one that had impressed itself most upon her memory was "The blood of Jesus Christ His Son cleanseth us from all sin."

Couldn't Find Her Text.

Lotus Flower goes to school now. She reads quite well. So we gave her a little Scripture Gift Mission booklet of texts. She received it with great joy, but came back a little later to tell us, quite dejectedly, that she could not find her text. We very soon found it for her, and she ran off again, with great joy, happy in the possession of her new treasure. We commend her to your prayers once again, that she might, with her household, come to know the Lord Jesus as her own personal Saviour. And we trust that as you rejoice with us in the incident related above, it might be an encouragement to continue in prayer, "for ye know that your labour is not in vain in the Lord."

AFTER FIFTY-SEVEN YEARS.

Fifty-seven years ago on August 17th, Jacob Joshua Faison was united in marriage to Miss Alice Rebecca Brooks by Rev. Thomas J. Drumwright of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. This young couple went to live in a house not far from the highway in Sussex County, Virginia, only a few miles from what is now the town of Waverly. For fifty-six years they lived in this same house. A year ago they moved across the road to live with a son.

The life of this couple has been closely united with Spring Hill Christian Church, where Mrs. Faison has taught Sunday school and otherwise shared in all the life of the church, and Mr. Faison led the singing for fifty-five years and served as a deacon of the church and superintendent of the Sunday school for many years.

Mr. and Mrs. J. J. FAISON.

Mr. Faison has held positions of honor in the county and state. He has been commissioner of revenue, sheriff, chairman of the county Democratic committee, a member of the electoral board and state prohibition inspector.

Mr. and Mrs. Faison have three children: C. R. Faison and J. D. Faison of Waverly, and Mrs. William F. Danforth of Petersburg, Virginia. There are eight grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. These members of the immediate family, many other relatives and a host of friends wish for Mr. and Mrs. Faison much happiness as they rest in the lengthening shadows and come toward the sunset of life. Fifty-seven years is quite a long time, but this devoted couple say that it seems only a brief moment when it is past. They believe in the kind of love that lasts and are among those who have "lived happily ever afterwards." THE CHRISTIAN SUN greets them and gives them its good wishes for many more happy years of married bliss.

Considering the times in which we are living and the conditions that exist, I am more and more inclined to believe that what the church needs to do is to page the politician. Not to heckle him, nor necessarily to condemn. Rather to study his methods. To say, or at least to infer, "You, sir, have succeeded where we have failed. Let's take a look at your technique."

And living in a town where one man, the party boss, is all powerful, I have come to feel that, perhaps, he has something to contribute. For while his organization is militantly strong, our church organization is weak, weak in moral and civic influence, static in membership, and meager in church attendance. This, too, in spite of the fact that our own town, lying in close proximity to a city, is rapidly becoming suburban.

The most illuminating revelation, our specially called town meetings, when some of us church people, grudgingly attend, exclaim as we see the steam roller working, "Well, what's the use?"

Is it better school conditions we are struggling for? The politician cogitates. That would raise taxes. The children do not vote. And if taxes must be raised, let the increase go for good roads. So he packs the Town Hall and we who are working for the children's interests go down in humiliating defeat. Then, as, thoroughly aroused, we file out of the overcrowded room, we ask disdainfully, "Where do these people come from? We never see them except at town meetings." Yet, since they are on the voting lists, we know, of course, that they must live somewhere in our beloved community. People of another world, they seem. The poor, the ignorant, the rough and uncouth, all coming at the beck of the politician to vote exactly as he dictates. Indeed, some of them carrying in their greasy pockets ballots carefully made out for them.

So, it seems to me, the question that must confront us as we think the thing through is simply this, "Why aren't we as church people acquainted with these folks?"

The politician knows them intimately. He shakes their hand. He calls them by name. Visits them in their homes several nights a year. If

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgement and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

DEDICATION.

A child comes to us shrouded in mystery . . . "trailing clouds of glory" as Wadsworth said. Little by little, we begin to see the personality of the child unfold until ripening to manhood he becomes forceful, positive character, at times making mistakes, sometimes overbearing, often flushed with the vanity of worldly wisdom. At last, however, there comes a period of mellowness, of thoughtful retrospection, of sober judgment based on past experience. It is to these our friends who stand sanctified in the light of the sunset that we dedicate this issue of "The Christian Sun."

A child is appealing because of his helplessness. There is a fragile beauty which is soon outgrown; the child passes through the "difficult age" and emerges into ripening young manhood or womanhood, strong of body and sprightly of spirit. With such a display of energy it is difficult to discern the true personality, to measure the depth of the soul. Amid a whirl of activity there is little time left for meditation, but small chance for careful formulation and expression of opinion.

As the years pass, the step loses its spring; the hand loses some of its quickness; the eye, some of its lustre. Some try to disguise the passing of youth, flying false colors; some postpone age longer than others, but it comes. The fragile beauty of childhood is long past; the physical beauty is largely faded, but now we see:

The mists begin to rise; a velvet light,
Soft, purple, rich, bespeaks the coming night.

It is the beauty of the soul which now shines; the beauty of kindness and serene assurance. One feels that storms have been met and weathered; that sorrow and joy, happiness and suffering have intermingled to make life rich and full. We, who are at the beginning of our journey, will do well to listen to those who have gone before. We can see that it matters greatly not so much what we encounter, but how we meet life's experiences as they come. We must admire the calm and stability of our older friends. We notice their avoidance of all senseless destructive measures . . . a carefulness which is not founded on hopelessness of bettering the world, but on a sound knowledge as to methods which will fail to build something new which is better than the old which was destroyed. We see that their loyalties are built on persons, not on names. We see that they have a calm, confident, joyous religion; a religion that is built on personal experiences; a religion that has been tested and found strong.

We pause and bow, and sit awhile to ask what you would have us leave as it is, and what you would like to have us change, if we can. Tell us, please. Tell us so that we must listen. Tell us so that we must go and do.

FIFTY-SEVEN VARIETIES.

By I. A. BARNES.

Wednesday, June 16th, was the 57th anniversary of our wedding, also it was the 77th anniversary of the birth of my bride of 57 years ago. She has not changed much in all these happy busy years, although her once glorious crown of gold has turned to a beautiful silver. But her Irish eyes are still the color of the sky in June, and her lips are still kissable, as of old. As for me, I am still a young man although now in my eightieth summer. We call years of mutual love and labor and happiness "57 varieties" (with apologies to H. J. Heinz) because each one differed from the others and each anniversary has been a new variety. Thomas G. Strickler, of Pennsboro, was the "best man" at the wedding and he and his wife often come to see us on these anniversaries. We hope they come this year; I married them 41 years ago.

We began our housekeeping about the first of December, 1880, in a little four-room parsonage at Independence, in Preston County. We lived that first year on love and buck-wheat cakes, and we are still in love and eat buck-wheat cakes for breakfast. Although the thermometer registered 18 below zero in January, we were comfortable, well-fed, and happy. The next year was varied by the coming of a little daughter to brighten our home and add new interest and joy to our lives. But her going away at eleven years of age gave us a new variety of sorrow and heartache that we had never known before.

The coming of our first boy gave us a new sense of importance and dignity. What father has not stood a little straighter, and stepped a little higher when he could say, "This is my son." But when that boy said "good-bye," and went with the U. S. Marines to, we knew not what, in the World War, we had a new variety of experience which we could neither analyze nor describe. Our lips may have trembled a little, but we held back our tears until he was out of sight. He now knows how hard it was for us to see him go.

Four years of sacrificing service in Weston, West Virginia, resulted in the organization of a little mission in the building of a substantial house for worship and the developing of a congregation of one hundred members. And there was enough variety in these years to make it interesting, if not very remunerative. We received $300 a year and paid $60 for house rent. But we lived and left no debts behind us. The coming of two more boys gave more variety as well as greater responsibility and expense.

Four years of noise and dirt among the honest working people of Grafton (you know everybody works at Grafton) were four different varieties, for no two years were alike. But we were happy here until the death of our daughter cast a shadow of grief over our lives. But in after years, like Job of old, God gave us double for what had been taken, but the other two daughters could not take the place of the first born who had gone to heaven, as she told us she was going, before she left us.

The happiest six of the 57 were spent among the good people of Morgantown. They were the busiest also, and the most prosperous of all our wedded years. In addition to my pastoral work, I was a registered student at the university for five years, and my average day's work was sixteen hours, but I have never been afraid of hard work, and still like to learn something new each day. Fellowship with the faculty and the student body of the university and the Christian and pastoral fellowship with the church people of the city, was a stimulant to both the intellectual and spiritual life which I never found anywhere else. And the friendships formed in these years have outlived the lives of many who have crossed over the river and are resting beneath the shade of the tree of life. Morgantown people forty years ago were friendly, sociable, kind, and hospitable. We loved them, and love their memory still.

We left Morgantown to take an important, historic church on Fifth Avenue, Pittsburg. Among city surroundings and city people we found plenty of stimulus, but it was of a different kind from that which we had enjoyed at Morgantown. And we often hungered for the fellowship of dear old Morgantown. While at Morgantown we had built a comfortable and commodious home, although we sold it when we left, yet Morgantown always has seemed like home to us. And in going away we felt like we were leaving home.

Our years in Pittsburg were characterized by an intensity of service, under high pressure, which tested our strength and vitality as no other years had ever done. But they were not without their fruitage, and they enriched our lives with beautiful friendships which still endure. Each of these years had its variety of experiences and all of them left us pleasant memories. We saw life's activities in a larger way than ever before, and learned to keep step with the procession, even if the pace was more rapid. While there, we participated in the greatest mass revival we have ever known. As a result of this movement which was directed by Dr. Wilbur Chapman, more than six thousand members were added to the Protestant churches of the city.

But the green hills and smiling valleys of West Virginia beckoned to us, and a call for service brought us back into "God's Country," to spend the evening of our lives "under our own vine and figtree." And now that the children are all married and settled in homes of their own, we are quietly and happily dwelling in the old homestead where we did our lovmaking and where we plighted our troth to each other. "So long as ye both shall live." We are still lovers sitting in the golden glow of the setting sun, watching his magic fingers painting the beauties of a glorious tomorrow on the evening sky. The same kind of lovers as when we walked, hand in hand, through the beauties and wonders of the morning when love was young.

In looking backward over the 57 varieties of experience through which we passed there are some things to regret, and others which we might wish had been different. But taken altogether there has been more of sunshine than of clouds; more satisfaction than disappointment and more, much more happiness and peace than unrest and trouble. And we are deeply impressed with the conviction that life has been good to us, and through it all we see the guiding hand of a wise and loving Heavenly Father, to whom we daily give thanks for the "goodness and mercy that have followed us all the days of our lives." And we confidently look forward to the new experience after the sunset, when we "shall dwell in the house of the Lord forever."

Any of our friends who may honor us with a call will be gladly welcomed.

(The wedding anniversary is now in the past tense. A note from the bridegroom says that all the children were present and there were many visitors. A member of the legal profession in West Virginia says that the finest thing about the story printed above, which has been printed in other papers, is that "such things can be said about life experiences." Not all of real life is sordid, but much is sublime with love and devotion. It is devotion to Christ and each other that can make a true marriage romantic in quiet places).

A PARABLE.

It is a witty parable that one of the fathers hath, of a man that had three friends two of whom he loved entirely, the third but indifferently. This man, being called in question for his life, sought help of his friends. The first would bear him company some of the way, the second would lend him some money for his journey; and that was all they would or could do for him; but the third, whom he least respected, and from whom he expected the least, would go all the way, and abide all the while with him; yea he would appear with him, and plead for him. This man is every one of us; and his three friends are the flesh, the world, and our own conscience.—Spencer.

It is foolish to underestimate the power of Satan, but it is fatal to overestimate it. There are people who talk too much about the devil, and too much about his power. His power is mighty, but it is not almighty; he is powerful, but he is not all-powerful. He is an absolutely defeated foe. Christ is the Stronger Man, and He has bound the strong man, and has despoiled him of his goods. As the representative Man in the wilderness, He met the devil, and He won a decisive victory over him; and He won it in the only way in which you and I can win that same victory. He was led into the wilderness filled with the Holy Spirit; and His only weapon was the Word of God.—Ruth Paxson.

If I have been buried with Christ, then God's purpose is that the self-life shall be so submerged that only Christ henceforth is seen in me. If I have been raised again with Him, then God's purpose is that day by day I should live and walk in newness of life. If I have been redeemed and seated together in the heavenly places in Christ Jesus, then God's purpose is that that position should be enjoyed in ordinary everyday experience. . . . You say: "That is all very well as a matter of theology, but the trouble is that my self-life is not dead." No, quite true, and for that very reason God says: "Reckon" it dead; and then the fact becomes real in experience as you lay hold of it by faith.—Wallis.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

"Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship." These words are a part of one of the Five Cardinal Principles announced by the founders of the Christian Church. The pioneer leaders of our church were more forward looking than they knew. Not only were they forward looking, but they were great idealists. No church has yet reached the ideal implied in that sentence. But the Christians of the world are on the way, trying to reach new heights of conquest.

Character is the basic element in human life. Education, training and social service are essential in this day of multiplied and complex social activities, but there can be no substitute for dependable character.

Without character every effort to redeem society must fail. In conversation with a distinguished jurist, recently, mention was made of a man who has had many opportunities and much encouragement to make good in his chosen field of work. This jurist said: "That man has had a good opportunity, and I have given him every opportunity to redeem himself, but he cannot be trusted." This man has had a good position of prominence in the community. He has, in the past, received a good salary. For months he has been walking the streets hunting vainly for a job. If he could be trusted, if he would keep his word, if he had a high sense of honor, scores of people would be delighted to help him find a good position. The community would forget his past record if he had the spirit of integrity and the will to develop character.

This is the money making age; and many people have the false theory that making money is contingent upon dishonesty and moral laxity. A few gamblers and thieves and defaulters get rich, but the great majority of them end their careers in poverty. It is common place for some people to use every available method to deceive sellers and buyers in the business world. They think anything is justifiable if it is profitable. It is right in their opinion, to lie if it pays big profits. This abominable spirit is so widespread that both young and old are caught in its treacherous meshes. Consequently people throw moral questions to the wind and our social fabric is rotten at the core. This is not a new condition, but it is as old as human history. Hoary with age, it has great vitality, and depraved character is the greatest destructive and demoralizing influence in modern life.

"The just shall live by faith." And so shall the unjust arise from a sickening death bed, if society anticipates a substantial recovery.

In the home, in the school, at the carpenter's bench, in the office of the business man, in the factory where the hum of machinery is heard, there should be a greater emphasis upon character. People should tell the truth. They should be honest. They should not make debts they cannot pay. They should not make promises they cannot keep. A man's word should be worth face value everywhere. He should not try to take advantage of others. Hypocrisy would be outlawed and sincerity be OLD AGE.

Age is a quality of mind:
If you have left your dreams behind,
If hope's grown cold,
If you no longer look ahead,
If your ambition's fires are dead,
Then you are old!

But—if from life you take the best,
If in your life you keep the zest,
If love you hold—
No matter how many the years gone by,
No matter how fast the birthdays fly,
You are not old!

appreciated and emulated, if only we could return to the teachings of Jesus concerning social and business standards of life. Every jail, every penitentiary, every penal institution—and every corrective organization, are a protest against irresponsible character. And everywhere there is an urgent call for good character.

In such an hour, in such a threatening crisis, the only force that can meet the situation is the Christian religion. The Cross has the message and the Holy Spirit has the power. When the church awakens to its opportunity and responsibility; and when the world listens to the message of the Gospel and cries out in penitence for forgiveness and a new heart, a new day will dawn for civilization.

But the church must set the example, not only in teaching, but in living a real Christian life.

CHOOSING A CAREER.

Does an individual choose what he is to do in life, or is the choice made for him? Jonathan Edwards declared that there is a divine plan for every life and that if the person discovered that plan, his life would be a success and a joy; that if he failed to discover that plan, his life would be a failure and a regret.

There is something rather comforting about the idea that the responsibility of choosing a career rests upon shoulders other than your own, but does it really work out this way? Beyond a doubt, individuals are different in their dispositions and inclinations. They have different talents, and, of course, are innately fitted for different tasks in life. There are diversities of tasks to be performed, and we have individuals who are suited for every task. The responsibility of discovering your own talents and then choosing the field in which you may most beneficially employ those talents is by no means a negligible responsibility. After all, it amounts to choosing a career. Positions and professions in life have been brought to their present state of efficiency and productiveness by individuals who have been particularly fitted for such positions or professions and have, themselves, been thoroughly trained for the responsibilities entailed.

The young person today looking into the future for a profitable situation in which to spend his life is immediately confronted with the question, "Am I prepared for the position that I covet?" The responsibility of choosing a career rarely confronts the individual until he begins to approach the closing years of his teens. As a rule, he goes through high school rather carefree, without sensing the responsibilities that are really his. When he reaches college age, he begins to realize his individual responsibility for his own life and for the contribution that that life is to make to society. The imperativeness of thorough preparation descends upon him with convincing force. Once for all he realizes that he can never make the contribution he should make without discovering the talents that are within him and training himself for the fruitful use of these talents.

This has been the trend of society through the years, resulting in a rather complete system of education with the college as the finishing unit in the system. Experience has convinced society that the institution is superior in its training to the old apprentice or tutorial system. There are literally thousands of young people today who have recently emerged from high school and stand on the threshold of decision. What are they to do with their lives? Is it worthwhile to spend four or seven years in college, or is it profitable to fling themselves into the task of living without further efforts to develop their individual abilities. These are the questions that are confronting the young men and the young women of our church and of other churches. A moment's reflection should convince anyone that much more can be accomplished after we are thoroughly trained than can ever be accomplished without training.

If you have decided what you are going to do in life, then prepare yourself thoroughly for the requirements of the position or profession. If you have not decided what you are going to do in life, then take the life that you have and begin to enrich it. It won't be long before an inviting opportunity will confront you.

Elon College is our institution for the training of the young people of our church. The 1937-'38 session will open on September 7th. We invite you to join our student body.

CHURCH AND RURAL WELFARE.

What is the place of the Christian in the rural community? The present situation calls for the restoration of the morale of country people. They have suffered heavily. They lost the value of their crops, their purchasing power, their farms, their homes. If they should lose their courage and their hope, the church will lose its life and we will be in some measure responsible. On the other hand, if we can help them to maintain their faith in God, in themselves, and in rural society, if kept secure, they can rebuild even better than before. This helping to keep the morale is the prime function of the Christian in the community. It is and should be, the duty of the Church as a whole. But since the Church is composed of those who are suffering and those who will suffer from this situation, it is up to the preacher, as a fearless man of God, to stick by his guns and in the face of all the enemies that the situation brings to the church, the preacher and the preacher alone—in some instances—will be left alone to lead the way to a better civilization and a better day. If he wins, he will be as great a martyr to the Cause as any in the past. If he loses, he will have fought a good fight for what he thought to be right,

It is a missionary obligation. It is a social obligation. It is important to the rebuilding of the national morale. The rural church and its ministry should be given a larger recognition. Better me, better Christians, better churches, better materials with which to work in an obligation of the church denominations.

The Christian must take his place in this social and economic reconstruction; it must be the mediator of a living faith which will be of basic importance to the development of a new morale.

Let us think of some of the things that hinder rural welfare: Selfishness; quarrels among neighbors and members of the church; indifference; radio; breaking down of home life—time was when most of the social life was home centered—visitation, picnics, quilting parties, church socials were home affairs. These activities that continue are commercialized in road houses. Youth's ideals are unsatisfied, because of these disintegrating influences. Small families (the small family loses social sufficiency); Changing mode of farming (the new implements of farming have caused a lack of cooperative experience in labor. Time was when neighbors would help each other. Now they have less and less to do with the other's business socially or religiously. While new machinery has done away with drudgery, it has also exposed the family unit to a diversity of conflicting interests. The sum total of these changes is a different psychology that has brought with it a new social and religious problem. There is a loss of the sense of unity and authority that was one of the noble characteristics and high values upon which the church could build its program).

Automobiles have hindered in that they are able only to travel on the better roads. (In the days of the horse and buggy, every home was (Continued on page 15.)

SOCIAL ACTION IN MISSIONS.

By RUTH ISABEL SEABURY.

I find myself amazed, though perhaps naively so, at the frequent debate heard here and there across the land as to the relation of Missions and Social Action.

In the last few weeks my thoughts have turned again and again to the philosophy by which I, as a Christian, live and do my work; for me at least the roots of both impulses are one and the same.

I believe in Social Action for the very same reason that I believe in Missions. I have given my life to the cause of Missions for the very same reason that today I am increasingly conscious of the social implications of Christianity and am ready to give my life more and more in Christian social action.

I can find no difference between the two services, no fine distinction of motive, no change in philosophical outlook so far as I am concerned. To me certain sentences characterize the Christian:—

He hungers and thirsts after righteousness, for himself, his community, his world. He is a peacemaker. He accepts all the costs in "mourning," persecution, misunderstanding, starvation, all the consequences up to and including a cross, in order that God's will may be done on earth and His law be the law of men.

He seeks constantly for the truth in order that the truth may give him freedom.

He loves God with all his heart and soul and mind and strength. He loves his neighbor so continually and so purposefully that he finds in him glories that he never saw except in love. He is swiftly responsive to his neighbor's need and responsible for the condition in which his neighbor lives.

He takes upon his shoulders the sin, the suffering, the sorrow, the greed, the war, the spiritual hunger, with which the world struggles. He makes them his cross.

He regards the message of Jesus and the Kingdom of God as a matter of leaven and himself a part of it. So he works tirelessly, never accepting defeat, but never frustrated by the slowness of the progress of that Kingdom.

He regards himself as salt: as salt he finds it his business to heal, to disinfect, to cleanse, and above all, to flavor. He must put a different flavor into life because he is a Christian. The attitude of men toward each other and toward God he must change.

He regards his Master as The Light of the World. That light—pitiless often, kindling always, points out the sin of the world. By that light he moves forward trying to lead men to its source in God the Father.

Now to me there is only one consequence from all that: if I am to be called a Christian and worthy to be a part of the Fellowship, I cannot dodge the issue of my own responsibility.

Are any hungry? There must I be. Do any feel cut off from the love of God? There is my place.

Are any exploited, lonely, sick, bent down by the sin of society or of themselves? There I find my work, my mission.

Have any groped toward God never to find Him, or to see Him only imperfectly? There must I make my testimony and give my witness.

And what is true of me is true of any Fellowship which I elect to join. I join myself with other Christians in a church not only in order to worship, for that I can do alone, but that I might give effect to the great, dynamic, changing creative spirit that must come to rule the world.

Such a sense of mission called me in to the cause of Missions. Believing in peace; believing in a world where every man, woman and child is a child of God with a true opportunity for abundant full life; wishing, in other words, to make that kingdom come, I find in the missionary cause the sure, permanent way of achieving it.—Missionary Herald.

WHAT SEVEN CENTS DID.

A MISSIONS STORY FOR CHILDREN.

When the oranges are ripe in sunny California, hundreds of Mexican boys and girls, men and women, work day after day in the orange groves. They pick the golden fruit, and pack it to send all over our country. Mexico, the country from which they have come looks on the map like part of our country, and it really is part of America, but not part of the United States. The people speak a different language; many of them are very poor; they do not have schools like ours; the country is full, not only of boys and girls, but of men and woman, who can not read or write; neither do they know anything about Jesus.

In California there are missionaries who have schools and churches for the Mexicans who are there. In a letter from one of these missionaries he tells about a church that had its meetings in a house. A little boy seven years old, likes to come to the Bible school to hear about the heavenly Father who loves him and watches over him. This little boy wanted to have a real church, but his people were poor, and he knew that it took a great deal of money to build a church. He knew that even a little boy could help, so he decided to earn some money himself. Perhaps he had to give his father all that he had earned in the orange grove, but he went down to the corner and shined shoes for some men who passed by. He made seven cents, which he joyfully carried to the missionary.

The missionary took the seven cents as a precious gift for Jesus. When he told the people about it they said, "We want to help too." At last there was money enough for the church, and all because a little boy gave seven cents.—The Sunbeam.

When the poet, Longfellow, wrote those lines insisting that things are not what they seem, he might have had Washington and Congress in mind. Or maybe in his day, legislative bodies weren't as susceptible to pressure by lobbyists and organized mind-readers as they are today.

EVANGELISM AND WORSHIP.

A Round-Table Conference at Bel Air, Maryland.

By ROY C. HELFENSTEIN.

Fresh from the inspiration of their Lenten and Easter Programs and experiences, eager to give and eager to receive any contribution of thought that would help to discover and utilize the Educational Aspects of Evangelism and Worship, sixteen men representing the work of the Congregational-Christian Churches in North Carolina, Virginia, Delaware, the District of Columbia, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and the state of New York, met at Bel Air, Maryland, for an important Round-Table Conference, personally conducted by Dr. Frederick Fagley, under the auspices of the Commission on Evangelism and the Devotional Life.

If the Conference revealed how little one person's opinion counts in the face of a pronounced diversity of opinion, it also showed how valuable each person's opinion is in arriving at a common ground of appreciation and evaluation. Pooling the opinions and experiences of a group in this manner gives a consensus of opinion and judgment which is far superior to the best thought of any single individual of the group, and thus offers material of unique value.

The theme for consideration was, "The Educational Aspects of Evangelism and Worship." The objective of the Round-Table was:

"1. To discover in the present educational technique those principles which are of most worth in religion;

"2. What materials do pastors need in addition to what is already available for religious teaching?

"3. Define suggestions of practical helpfulness to pastors concerning the preparation of young people for the worship and work of the church; and

"4. What can the pastor do at the point where the formal religious education program ends on a group basis and becomes individual?"

Various questions arose in the discussions which naturally every pastor has to face—such questions as:

1. Should there be a minimum age limit at which time children would be permitted to unite with the church?

2. Or should the personal equation of the boy or girl—their background, their home-life, their religious tendencies, their mental and spiritual appreciations and alertness, their dependableness, etc., be the determining factor as to whether or not they should be granted the privilege of uniting with the church?

3. Should the catechism be ruled out as a method in religious education? Or should the values of the catechism be conserved with the use of a modern content in the questions and answers?

4. Should membership in our churches be based upon Infant Baptism or only on personal decision?

5. What is the best plan for conducting "A Pastor's Class," and is "The Pastor's Class" the best method of preparing boys and girls for church membership, and also what should we expect to happen in "The Pastor's Class" as regards to "religious experience and religious decisions?"

6. Where should the program of re-

OUR PRAYER.

By REV. EVERETT LESHER.

O Thou loving Shepherd, who never leavest us, who will not suffer us to be cast down nor forsaken, look upon us as a family united in our need of Thee. For one another and our absent friends we would pray.

In infinite pity restore those who have wandered into a far-country of malicious values. Grant them the moral dignity and the spiritual liberty of the pure in heart who see God.

Lift up the light of Thy Countenance upon all who are careworn and weary, on all whose path seems to be perpetually up-grade, on the poor and the rich, on the careless and the drifting with their wasted purposes, on the old and the young.

Watch over all who are struggling against temptations, whose hearts are filled with deep sorrow, and whose minds are baffled by perplexity. O merciful Father, our Refuge and our Strength, teach them that their extremity is Thy opportunity, their need Thy door. May they learn through prayer that prophetic patience which bears all gladly, suffers all hopefully, and waits in quietness for the return of the light.

Through the years of our lives Thou hast cared for us and upheld us, O God. Do Thou uphold us as we cross the threshold of a new week. May the benediction of Thy Presence rest upon the child in his play, the father in his business, and the mother in all the varied activities of household management. In the name of Jesus we voice our common prayer.

Amen.

religious education really begin—with the boys and girls of the church school or with their fathers and mothers—especially their mothers who, by virtue of their relationship to the child can do more for the religious nurture of the boy or girl than can the entire church school and the pastor included? And on the other hand, if the mothers fail to accept their religious responsibility toward their children, they can, by their mere religious indifference easily undo whatever the church school may try to do.

7. Should there be a minimum requirement of Bible knowledge before boys and girls are received into the fellowship of the church?

8. Should personal religious experience and personal religious living be a requirement of those engaged in religious teaching?

9. Should religious education be considered a substitute for evangelism?

10. How can a proper appreciation of the significance of the privilege of uniting with the church be created in the thoughts of boys and girls and young people?

Space will not permit recording the findings, but secretaries were appointed to perform the task of marshalling together the most important responses made to the many questions arising, and their findings will be very likely be given general circulation in a pamphlet.

Three or four conclusions may fittingly receive brief mention here:

1. It was the consensus of opinion that the question of age limit had been overemphasized by many churches which had a hard-and-fast rule that boys and girls must have reached a certain age—12-14 or 16 before they could unite with the church. Some children by reason of their background, their home-life, their natural tendencies, their religious interests, etc., are more qualified for membership in the church at seven years of age than are some other children at the same age.

2. Regarding the use of a catechism, though some of the group were strongly opposed to this "antiquated" method of religious instruction, others of the group, though believing strongly in the modern educational technique, felt that the church might well consider the fact that the old catechisms, regardless of their theological impossibilities, did result in giving the boys and girls certain definite religious knowledge which is so desirable for everyone to have. Many men and women who have been and are spiritual heroes and heroines received their early religious knowledge from a catechism. There is this to be said for the use of the catechism—the quality of Christian lives they helped to produce has not been surpassed, as yet, by the use of any other method. And would it not be possible to have a catechism which would be modern in content and character so as to give boys and girls some definite religious knowledge in concise statement, and not leave their religious knowledge in such a religious state?

3. Religious education should not be considered as a substitute for evangelism, but as the most valuable aid to evangelism. Any religious education which is not evangelistic in spirit

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church"

MISS EMILY CARLETON, Editor, 541 Osceola Ave., Winter Park, Fla.

VALLEY VIRGINIA YOUTH FELLOWSHIP.

The Youth Fellowship of the Valley Virginia Central Congregational-Christian Conference held its annual meeting on Wednesday, August 4th, in connection with the Annual Conference. Many of the churches were represented by large delegations and much interest was shown.

The business meeting was held in the afternoon. At that time the following officers were elected: President, Minnie Dofflemyre, Elkton; secretary, Irene Hensley, Elkton; vice-president, Dana Nelson, Winchester; assistant secretary, Amy Louderback, Shenandoah. Superintendents: social action, Helen Showalter, Harrisonburg; leadership training, Ruth Strickler, Elkton; devotional life, Alfred Dofflemyre, Elkton; publications and reporter, Goldia Dofflemyre, Elkton; missions, Anna Lou Showalter, Harrisonburg. Pastor Counsellors: W. J. Andes, Harrisonburg; R. A. Whitten, Winchester. Lay Counsellors: E. W. Cather, Winchester; R. R. Hosaflook, Linville.

At this business session Miss Irene Cotten, Superintendent of Missions of the Southeast Pilgrim Fellowship, presented in a very interesting way the cause of Missions to the Valley young people and distributed literature to the different key-workers.

Plans for the ensuing year were discussed and visiting leaders were presented and welcomed. These were Mrs. W. B. Williams of Newport News, and Rev. F. C. Lester of Norfolk. Both are Southeast Pilgrim Fellowship Counselors and had parts on the evening program.

The business session and evening program were presided over by the retiring president, Thelma Morris. The latter opened with a very impressive vesper which was in charge of District A, with Hazel Davis, the district president, leading. After a short get-acquainted period, a quartet from the Eastern Virginia Pilgrim Fellowship rendered a very enjoyable number. After the president made a few remarks concerning the Elon Leadership Training School, Rev. F. C. Lester spoke to this large conference congregation, using as his subject, "Planning for Our Young People Within Our Local Church." He strongly recommended that definite plans be made to meet the needs of the young people in each church. As a climax to the service Miss Cotten conducted a very inspiring and challenging installation service.

For a few minutes before going home the group thought of less serious things at a watermelon social or informal "get together." Mrs. Williams led the games which the group enjoyed thoroughly.

The program had many high lights and showed that the youth of the Valley are organizing for some real work.

THELMA MORRIS.

FORMATION OF GEORGIA PILGRIM FELLOWSHIP.

One of the most vital things done at the recent North and Middle Georgia Young People's Conference was the formation of the Georgia Pilgrim Fellowship.

The following officers were elected to guide the group for the first year:

President, Charles Dunaphant, Atlanta; Vice-Presidents, Bobby Stephens of North Georgia, Howard McEachy of Middle Georgia, Emma Moore of South Georgia; Secretary, Constance VanNostrand; Treasurer, Lowell Smoot; College Representative, Collins Seymore; National Representatives, Dorothea Percy and Mabelle Cole.

It is interesting to note that the three vice-presidents are each president of the Christian Life Conference in their own association.

These officers were installed in a closing candle-light service which was very impressive and beautiful.

We wish a great deal of success—and by success we mean the formation of a consecrated, working group—to the newest Pilgrim Fellowship organization in the Southeast.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S SOCIETY.

During the Vacation Bible School, which was conducted from the 2nd to the 8th of August at Ambrose Christian Church by Miss Dorothea Percy and Mr. B. F. Eddleman of Demorest, Georgia, a young people's society was organized. Officers were elected as follows: President, Miss Carolyn Moore; Vice-President, Mr. Harold Ragsdale; Secretary and Treasurer, Miss Melba Vickers. Advisors and Committees were appointed as follows: Advisor, Mrs. J. M. Dees; Program Committee, Miss Jeannette Royal, Miss Nellie Ragsdale, and Mr. Billie Dees; Social Committee, Mr.

Howell Dees, Miss Vannie I. Lane, and Miss Bernice Durden; Decoration Committee, Miss Emma Moore, Miss Elizabeth Durden, and Miss Ozalee Bates. Thursday night was set for the regular meeting.

STANDING UP FOR THE RIGHTS OF OTHERS.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC
FOR AUGUST 29, 1937.

SCRIPTURE: Gen. 37: 21, 22; 44: 18-34.

Daily Readings—

Mon. "The Right to Work."—Eph. 4:28.
Tues. "The Right to Rest."—Exod. 20:10.
Wed. "The Right to Speak."—Acts 5:29.
Thurs. "The Right to Choose Our Religion."—Josh. 24:15.
Fri. "The Right to Think."—Phil. 4:8.
Sat. "The Right to Use Our Gifts."—Rom. 12:4-8.

We live in a world that is filled with a lot of selfishness in lives and hearts of individuals. The motive of life should not be to promote our own interests alone. The rights of others should always be respected and given their due consideration. "No man can live unto himself," and since he cannot, he should seek to develop a spirit of association which is Christian in purpose as well as practice.

Is it Christian to be friendly and love only those who are friendly and love us? Jesus said, "Sinners do this." Look about you for some unprivileged or unfortunate person who needs your help. You will be serving the Christ to help such a person enjoy a better life. The story of the "Good Samaritan" teaches that we should assist even the foreign born and live brotherly with them, even though they are out of our race. God loves them, and why should we hate them?

To Think About—

1. Are we helping to bear the burden of others when we associate only with select friends?

2. What are some of the common rights of mankind? Do we realize these rights in the lives of men?

3. To what extent have they been denied to underprivileged groups in our own land?

4. What can we do to help all people realize these rights in their lives?

5. Are we as zealous for the rights of others as we are our own?

Suggested Hymns—

"Help Somebody Today."

THE PLACE OF RELIGION IN A NATION'S LIFE.

LESSON VII—AUGUST 22, 1937.

GOLDEN TEXT: Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord.—Ps. 33:12.

LESSON: Exodus 25:1-25; 29:43-46; 29:1-38.

Since last Sunday's lesson many detailed rules have been given for regulating the social and civic life of the Hebrew people. Today's lesson deals with the making of the "ark of the covenant," with the building of the tabernacle, and with the consecration of the priests and the tabernacle itself. Too much material is included to do anything more than to touch the high spots.

Giving Willingly.

"Speak unto the children of Israel that they take for me an offering; of every man whose heart maketh him willing ye shall take my offering." God does not want the offering that is given grudgingly or of necessity. But he does the cheerful giver. But how can a man refuse to give at least something, when he calls to mind the goodness and the grace of God to him! There is all too little giving on the part of Christians. And much of what is given is not acceptable to God because it is not given willingly.

It might be noted in passing that all of the gifts did not have the same material value—there were to be gifts ranging all the way in scale of values from gold and silver and precious stones to mere oil for the lights. Gifts to God are not measured by material value. God looketh on the heart. He hath regard for the spirit in which it is given, not the amount.

A Sanctuary.

"And let them make me a sanctuary that I may dwell among them." To be sure God dwelleth not in temples made with man's hands. But it has pleased God to make himself known in places built for him and dedicated to him. There is value in places of worship in towns and cities and country-side—they are visible evidences of God's invisible presence in the life of the community, they are the places devoted primarily to the high office of keeping alive in the hearts of men true worship. Men can worship God anywhere, but it is usually the case that those who do not worship him in "His House" do not worship him anywhere.

According to the Pattern Shown Thee in the Mount.

"Let them make it according to all that I show thee . . . according to the pattern which I shewed thee in the mount." God has given us the ideal for personal righteousness in Jesus. God has given us the ideal for social righteousness in the Kingdom of God teachings of Jesus Christ. Our personal lives are to be built after the pattern of Christ, and our social order is to be built after the pattern of Christ's teachings about the Kingdom.

Justice and Mercy.

In his instructions to Moses about the tabernacle and its furnishings, God begins at the heart of things—with the ark of the Covenant. That ark was to be placed in the Holy of Holies and was a symbol at once of both the justice and the mercy of God. In the ark which was covered within and without were the tables of stone or the law, representing the revealed will of God. God is a God who demands obedience to His righteous will. That stands at the center of religion. But over the ark there was the mercy seat"; and even as the cherubim covered the ark with their outstretched wings, so does God look down upon his children with mercy and love. The law came by Moses, but grace and truth came by Jesus Christ, said John in his gospel.

All the other furnishings of the tabernacle had a significance, the shewbread a symbol both of one's offering to God and a symbol of Him Who is the Bread of Life; the candlestick symbol of the Light that lighteth every man that cometh into the world; the laver with water symbolic both of the need for cleansing as we come before God, and of God's willingness and power to cleanse; the altar of incense symbolic of the offering up of prayer and the giving of self in worship and service. It is all very beautiful and symbolic, and deserving of more time and space than can be given to it in these Notes or on Sunday morning in one lesson period.

God With Us.

"I will dwell among the children of Israel, and will be their God . . . I am Jehovah their God." God is not some being dwelling remote or apart from men; God dwells among and in His people. The angel in announcing the coming of Jesus said that He should be called Emmanuel, which being interpreted, is "God with us." And He is a covenant keeping God. Jehovah was the God of the Hebrew people who as Jehovah had made a covenant with them.

There shall not fail us one of His promises, if we keep His commandments and do His will.

Priests.

"Aaron and his sons will I sanctify, to minister to me in the priest's office." God has called and set apart men and women who are to be His ministers in holy things, men and women who can teach others about Him and help others to find Him and know Him. Priests have no authority of themselves. They are mediums through whom God makes known His will and His love. In a special sense priests are different. But in another sense all of us are priests unto God, at least in the sense that we have immediate and full access to God through Christ who is our High Priest.

The Glory of God in the House of God.

"And the glory of God filled the tabernacle." When the people had done as God had commanded them, His glory filled the tabernacle. When men and women prepare their hearts to seek God, whether in private or in public, He comes with glory and with grace, and their hearts are warmed within them.

It is for every minister to seek to make his services of worship a means whereby God can reveal His glory and fill not only the tabernacle but the hearts of the people. But the people have a part too. All too many worshippers are guilty in that they do not prepare their hearts to worship the Lord in spirit and in truth.

RELIGION IS FOR USE.

In his annual report, "Religion is For Use," Superintendent S. W. Keck, of South Dakota said: "Early in 1918 a New York editor was writing about the Allied Armies. He said, 'The Allied Armies are strategically competent but dynamically ineffective.' Would that statement apply as to the state of the Church today? There is no shortage of church buildings, for they are found in abundance in every village and hamlet. There are more than enough ministers, for many are either without work or have other employment. Yes, we are strategically competent, but how often we have been dynamically ineffective in doing the work of the church!"

"We face this threatening situation not because we have been silent concerning the church. God knows that if preaching could save the world it would have been saved long ago. Our trouble has been that we have talked about our religion but haven't PATIENCE.

"Jesus Christ, the same yesterday, today, and forever."—Heb. 13: 8.

The daily newspapers bring us fresh amazing stories of the construction of the earth and of the mystery of the earth's glories. Astronomers tell us that it has taken aeons of time to evolve our universe and that there are evidences that it is not yet complete. They tell us that the beautiful stalagmites and stalactites in Carlsbad Cavern took millions of years to build. Botanists tell us that it has taken God over a thousand years to grow one Redwood tree in California. It took thousands of years of work with the human heart to prepare for the coming of Jesus Christ. What patience!

Let us not grow impatient with God, but do our best, however small and simple the way. Anything short of this is unworthy of us.

Prayer—We thank Thee, our heavenly Father, that we live in a world of order and not blind force. Create within us an instinct of harmony with Thy great purpose and Thy infinite love. Amen.

TUESDAY.

THY HOUSE TO THEM.

"What have they seen in Thy house?"—II Kings 20: 15.

There has never been found a substitute for a happy home. It is also a fact that a healthy, happy home is Christian. He who rules God out of the home weakens the ties than bind and destroy it's alluring charms. This is the law of life.

Thy home is surrounded by many other homes and thy life with many friends. Thou doest owe to these a home where mutual affections abide. Lives of kindly words, thoughtful deeds and everyday living about which choice memories cluster.

The resources of God are at your command.

Prayer—Our Father we cannot build with Thee. Help us each day in our home. In Christ's name we ask it. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

HOW FAR HAVE WE COME?

"That ye may be filled unto all the fulness of God."—Eph 3: 19.

Life presents an aspect of ambitions many of which are never realized. Not the least of these ambitions is the ambition of spiritual atonement and we look at this often in about the same light that we look at our other ambitions. We see the beginnings, but the development of it has failed or perhaps we have been rather easily satisfied.

"How far have we come?" If we really ask this question earnestly and sincerely, we can answer adequately by checking the things we are interested in. What is it that gives us supreme joy? What is our capacity for sacrifice? With what vision and aim is our pursuit? In his desire for fulness of experience, Paul said: "this one thing I do." His continual desire was for a full measure not only of God's spirit but of human capacity.

Prayer—Our Father, we thank Thee for the glorious possibilities of a Christian life. Forgive us for our lack of spiritual aspirations. Looking to Jesus, help us to press forward to the highest mark. Amen.

THURSDAY.

A YELLOW LEAF.

"The wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life."—Romans 6: 23.

Lord Byron wrote:

My days are in the yellow leaf,
The flowers and fruits of love are gone;
The worm, the canker, and the grief,
Are mine alone!

Life indeed is made up of a great many colors, some good and some evil; joy and sorrow, hope and despair, life and death. But for the most part, we are the ones who determine which shall have the ascendancy.

Prayer—O God, each day presents to us many responsibilities of Thy rich gifts. May we so choose that at last we may receive the crown of eternal life. Amen.

FRIDAY.

DOWN BUT NOT OUT.

"Create in me a clean heart, O God; and renew a right spirit within me."—Ps. 51: 10.

David had made a tremendous mistake and disgraced himself. But the thing to be remembered is he did not let this mistake get him down nor did he let it prevent him from making good. In fact, it so awakened his manhood that the greatest work of his life was done after that.

We all make mistakes but all do not come back like that. "It is human indeed to fall, but it is divine to rise." And the divinest thing of life is that we can forget the past and come back. Let us try it.

Prayer—Merciful Father, we thank Thee that we can be forgiven. We thank Thee for the grace that reaches to the lowest depths. Lift us up to the greatest heights in Thy love. Amen.

SATURDAY.

SOBERING THOUGHTS.

"What is your life?" It is a vapor, that appeareth for a little time, then vanisheth away.—James 4: 14.

It seems to be human to take ourselves seriously and sometimes we develop quite a bump of conceit. But every now and then something happens to flatten us out. Things that sober us and "keep our feet on the ground" are a needed ministry. We have no reason to be proud of this old earth on which we trod. It has been trodden by untold millions before us and will be trodden by innumerable hosts after us. However good we are, there are those who are better and millions to come that will be just as good.

Our little three score years and ten, after all, is only a puff of wind. We never get out of sight of the day of our birth. Yet, thanks be to God that this vapor of life is more eternal than the earth or sky.

The stars shall live for a million years,
A million years and a day;
But God and I will live and love,
When the stars have passed away.

Prayer—We thank Thee, O God, for Thy everlasting arms underneath us. Help us to lean on them and to so live that we may feel eternal life within us. Amen.

SUNDAY.

GOD IN LIFE.

"I have come that ye may have life and have it more abundantly."—Jh. 10: 10.

"God in life" is certainly an arresting phrase. All Lot's children agree that Christian life is an essential quality of good living. Christian life is described to be qualities of love, joy, peace, patience, temperance, kindness, gentleness, self-control, courage, sacrifice, etc. These are the qualities of God as seen and vivified in the life of Jesus Christ. To take him in our life means to take these qualities in our life, and taking Jesus as the "author and finisher" of our faith, we experience a continual inspiration to live the "more abundant life."

Prayer—Dear Father, we hunger and thirst for the life abundant. Save us from little living. This we ask for Jesus' sake. Amen.

DECORATIONS.

By REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D.

"Let it not be that outward adorning . . . but let it be the hidden man of the heart, in that which is not corruptible, even the ornament of a meek, and quiet spirit, which is in the sight of God of great price."—I Peter 3:3-4.

Oriental have an eye to beauty. Especially do they love pretty apparel. Gorgeous colors, grace of drapery, richness of texture, and art of combination appeal to them. Jesus wore a seamless robe of matchless beauty, so pretty that it is frequently referred to by those who wrote the Gospels. The Apostle Peter is writing to many who loved adornment, and who relied much upon it. Taking that as a vantage point he talks to them about beauty of spirit within.

Let the beauty of Jesus be seen in me,
All His wonderful passion and purity;
O, Thou Spirit divine,
All my nature refine,
Till the beauty of Jesus is seen in me.

All of us like pretty clothes, or most of us at least. What beautiful colors and combinations one may see in a day's travel! What quiet, restful richness and refinement of apparel many have learned to wear; and then how sprightly and airy are the pretty clothes of others. Clothes without affect the mood within; and the spirit within affects the clothes we wear. Appropriate dress is a mark of good taste, and good breeding; and it is a joy and a pleasure to all. In dress spirit counts more than coin; cleanliness more than colors; and rightness more than richness. One does not have to spend a great deal to be well dressed, very inexpensive clothes well appreciated by the wearer and worn by one with true culture and character will pass par any where.

The portion from which this text is taken says: "Let it not be the outward adorning of plaiting the hair, and wearing of gold, or of putting on apparel." Now there are some who throw away their jewelry when they read that text, but they retain their clothes; some perhaps read it, and seeing that it says: 'Let it not be putting on of apparel' throw away their clothes, and keep their jewelry; and so on we may read the Scriptures and arrive through piece-meal procedure to perfect prudery, and silliness. Peter is not arguing against gold, but in favor of God within; he is not saying go without putting on apparel, but he is commanding the putting on of righteousness. Beauty without, yes; but beauty within at all cost!

Old Simon Peter's clothes might not have been much to look at, but his words are beautiful, indeed! Listen at them: "Let it be the hidden beauty of the heart." Let it be hidden beauty, almost a contradiction, but how effective. Hidden beauty! The art that conceals art! You have heard of the beautiful gate, the beautiful temple, the beautiful painting, the beautiful sunset; but Peter is saying the beautiful heart beats them all. Peter had seen, known, and loved Jesus! He would be able to speak about beauty within.

Look again at Peter's language: "That which is not corruptible." Clothes may wear out, but never the hidden beauty of the soul! Gold may be worn away, or it may not have been pure gold when it was bought for jewelry—it is corruptible—in other words, but is temporal. When I was pastor of the First Christian Church, Norfolk, Virginia, the church gave me a gold watch, and chain for a Christmas gift. Yesterday the chain wore completely into pieces, and the links are nearly all worn out. It was a lovely gold chain, too much gold, indeed to stand for fourteen years! The watch is still good and I prize it very much, but eventually it too will wear away, and be gone. The spirit that prompted the kindness can never die, and my appreciation of the generosity will live as long as memory lasts. It is 'not corruptible!'

Peter adds: "Even the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit." They are real decorations! "Meek as Moses" who measured the world with his mind, and laid the keel of the ship of law and order for all time to come! Do not think 'meek' means anything negative, and do not think 'quiet' means without life. Dr. John Urquhart Newman, teacher of New Testament Greek at my alma mater used to say we could learn the meaning of meek from the fact that Xenophon used it to compliment the charioteer on his most excellent horses when driving like fire, and with perfect obedience and control, he remarked to the driver, "Your horses, sir, are very meek this morning." Docile, obedient, swift to do the will of the master, 'not my will but thine be done,' that is the best meaning to the spirit of meekness.

How we need spirit today. Ears open to God. I love a horse. A good horse keeps his ears open to the rider, or driver. I have driven a favorite horse which when I gave the slightest cluck of a command he was away, and he sensed the speed desired, if he went beyond it a soft command pulled him down to it. Ready to do his master's will.

Peter had had some excitement! His words ring with a glory which thrills me as I think of his experiences! He says: Be beautiful, yes, but remember that beauty of spirit, beauty within is the thing. And what does God think of it? Peter says, "Which in the sight of God is of great price!" The wealth and beauty of this world is great. Its fertile soil, its great forest, and beautiful trees, its running streams, its mighty oceans, its internal wealth of minerals and oils, its arching skies, and glowing sun, and its myriads of stars at night, are all beyond measure! God made them and they are great. But the "ornament of a meek, and quiet spirit is in the sight of God of great price" and beyond them all!

Yes, let us seek beauty until the "beauty of Jesus is seen in us."

A RELIGION OF JOY, OF HOPE, OF VICTORY.

Where are the men who went everywhere preaching and turning the world upside down? What has become of those messengers who feared God so much that they could not fear man? Where is that expectancy of success that sent men on long, hard journeys in order that they might help bring in the kingdom?

It seems that we have lost much of the passion of those men "who through faith subdued kingdoms, wrought righteousness, obtained promises, stopped the mouths of lions." The old spontaneity is gone. The zeal that "eats up" a man or woman has departed. The heroic days of Christianity are no more with us. Men love ease, rather than the joys of a great enthusiasm in some holy cause.

Shall we ever live at such a poor dying rate when great tasks lie out ahead of us, when the needs of the world cry, "Come over and help us"? Christian men and women with a deep-seated passion born of love could bring in the kingdom of God with a speed that would surprise them.—N. C. Christian Advocate.

The Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

The showers continue. The sojah bean, lespeveda and corn crops on the orphanage farm look good. We have the best prospect for a good crop that we have had in several years. Last year it was extremely dry in this community, and our crops were poor. So far this year the Lord has blessed us with abundant rain.

The orphanage has the finest tomato crop we have ever produced. We have already canned 500 gallons and expect to can 600 more gallons if nothing happens to our crop.

We canned 500 gallons of peaches and 300 gallons of beans. The bean beetles destroyed our second planting of beans and we did not get any.

I give you this information to let you know that we do all we can here to help in our own support. It takes a lot to feed nearly one hundred children. Most of them have good appetites. It takes money to buy clothing. This and a hundred other things are needed in running an institution of this kind.

Prices on things we buy this year are higher than last year; but I am sorry to say that the churches and Sunday schools have not increased their offerings. I believe that if our people could visit some of the business offices and see the splendid positions some of our boys and girls are holding, and realize that once they were entirely dependent on others, they would feel happy that they had had a hand in giving these young people a chance.

We would call your attention to the fact that we have nearly one hundred bright little fellows in our care here now who are looking to our church for a chance in life. Are you willing to invest in them. It will be a fine investment.

RELIGION IS FOR USE.

done very much about it. As a result it has grown up as a tender plant, and when the scorching heat of doubt and indifference came, it withered.

"The last few years we have heard much about the Council for Social Action. Personally, I am ashamed that it ever seemed necessary to organize the C. S. A. The only reason for doing it was because we had failed in giving definiteness and direction to our Christian faith. Now the C. S. A. is seeking to give emphasis and expression to a phase of our religion we had greatly neglected. Dr. Frank Crane once said: 'We have just as much religion as we use.' No amount of preaching and teaching is sufficient; for the circuit is not complete until we put into practice the convictions of our faith. The state of the church will always be determined by the religion we use."

In Memoriam

LASSITER.

On July 3, 1933, God in His infinite wisdom, saw fit to remove from our midst one of our faithful members, Mrs. Lucy A. Lassiter. She was a loyal member of Damascus Christian Church despite the fact that for many years she had been an invalid. Mrs. Lassiter bore her afflictions patiently and without complaint.

We, the members of the Missionary Society of Damascus church, desire to express our devotion to her, our appreciation of her worthy life, and our grief at the loss sustained by her departure, therefore, be it resolved that;

1. We bow in humble submission to the will of our Heavenly Father, remembering that "He doeth all things well."

2. That in her death, Damascus church and the Missionary Society have lost a consecrated member and her home a loving and beloved mother.

3. That we extend to the bereaved family our deepest sympathy and may their memory of their sainted dead be a blessed inspiration.

4. That these resolutions be made a part of our minutes and a copy sent to "The Christian Sun" for publication.

CHURCH AND RURAL WELFARE.

more or less accessible, now only those living on the improved roads are able to be reached—at least this is true during the winter months).

The lack of respect of the Good Earth. "The earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof." The church should teach the sacred stewardship of the soul.

Loss of Community Loyalties. (The transient and part-time laborers is the cause of this).

Corporation farming. (If this continues it will create a social revolution. It destroys the family-type farm, obliterates rural skills and traditions).

Increase of Productive Capacity. (This makes rural life less worthy. It creates class consciousness. We must strive to keep the farm families on the farm. One way would be to always praise its virtues to all).

Now let us think of some of the things that help rural welfare:

Community Center. (Where plays, movies, parties, group interests may have means of expression).

Community Libraries—C o o p e r a t i v e s. (Banks, stores, farming, etc.).

Farm ownership. Appreciation of farm values. (The public domain). A new philosophy of life. Finding new ways of unity for its social, economic, political, and religious life.

Evangelism is making the good news known and effective in the lives of folks. This is the task of the Church. Christian education is the same thing. All have the aim of making men like Christ. It is the business of the whole Church to preach the Gospel. If they cannot do it, then they must hire a pastor. The work must be done in order that the Kingdom may come. We should encourage each person, agency and institution, and practice to help men live more nobly.

ROY D. COULTER.

EVANGELISM AND WORSHIP.

and in purpose is not true religious education. Likewise, any evangelism which is not educational is not true evangelism.

4. Uniting with the church should be looked up as a matriculation experience rather than as graduation. Church membership should be only for those who purpose to "grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ."

5. In all our work of religious education, whether in the church school proper or in the Pastor's Class, more use should be made of the new method used in general education—that of stimulating questions in the mind of the learner, rather than merely preparing him to answer the questions pronounced by another.

6. All who seek to lead childhood and youth into a conscious religious experience should ponder well the deductions of two great modern Educators—Principal L. P. Jacks, of Oxford, who declared that "It is a question if ever from the beginning of time anyone has ever reasoned his way into a religious experience;" also the statement of Dr. Glen Frank—"More people live their way into religious thinking, than think their way into religious living."—In Advance.

they are hungry, he has the selectmen send food. If they are sick, a doctor is called. If they get into trouble with law, he intercedes for them. And no sooner does a new family arrive than he is at their door.

Building up a political machine. Yes, I grant you. One so strong that no revolt has yet been able to shake it. A machine that has sent him year after year to the legislature and that has been the means of obtaining for one of the fattest jobs in the state. His bread and butter, yes. Being friends his stock in trade.

Being friends. And I think of our Master talking with the wicked Samaritan woman. Healing the lepers. Dining with Zaccheus. Not limiting his activity to the synagogue and his interest to the members of the Sanhedrin.

Surely if he were walking our streets today, he would know these people the politician knows. He would be welcome in their homes. He would aid them not only physically but spiritually. He would sympathize.

His church. Is our church that? We call it so. Yet, year after year goes by and these people go unheeded. Taverns increase by leaps and bounds. Children steal and get drunk.

We storm and decry conditions. A few of us go to church regularly. Our minister preaches splendid sermons on world peace and the necessity of better factory conditions. We have many church suppers. We send money to home and foreign missions. We sew and give plays.

But none of us knows, or seems to care to know, the people who are really in control of the destinies of our town.

Is it too much to suggest then, that we page the politician?

—A. Laywoman, in Advance.

Growing Old Gracefully

"Softly, O softly the years have swept by thee
Touching thee lightly with tenderest care—
Sorrow and death they have often brought nigh thee,
Yet they have left thee but beauty to wear.
Growing old gracefully
Gracefully fair.

"Far from the storms that are lashing the ocean,
Nearer each day to the pleasant Home-light,
Far from the waves that are big with commotion
Under full sail and the harbor in sight.
Growing old cheerfully
Loving and bright.

"Past all the winds that were adverse and chilling,
Past all the islands that wooed thee to rest
Past all the currents that lured thee unwilling,
Far from thy course to the land of the blest.
Growing old peacefully
Peaceful and blest.

"Never a feeling of envy or sorrow
When the bright faces of childhood are seen;
Never a year from the young wouldst thou borrow,
Thou dost remember what lieth between.
Growing old willingly
Thankful serene.

"Rich in experience that angels might covet,
Rich in faith that has grown with thy tears,
Rich in a love that grew from and above it,
Soothing thy sorrows and hushing thy tears.
Growing old wealthily
Loving and dear.

"Hearts at the sound of thy coming are lightened,
Ready and willing thy hand to relieve,
Many a face at thy kind word has brightened,
It is more blessed to give than receive.
Growing old happily
Ceasing to grieve.

"Eyes that grow dim to earth and its glory,
Have a sweet recompense youth cannot know,
Ears that grow dull to the world and its story
Drink in the songs that from Paradise flow.
Growing old gracefully
Purer than snow."

A Young Man's Prayer

God make me a man—
Give me the strength to stand for right
When other folks have left the fight.
Give me the courage of the man
Who knows that if he wills he can.
Teach me to see in every face
The good, the kind, and not the base.
Make me sincere in word and deed,
Blot out from me all sham and greed.
Help me to guard my troubled soul
By constant, active self-control.
Clean up my thoughts, my speech, my play,
And make me pure from day to day.
O make of me a man!

PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

Rev. J. O. Atkinson, D. D., has spent some time recently at Virginia Beach.

Southern Union College, Wadley, Alabama, is happily anticipating the use of their new dormitory when the school opens in September.

If the label on your paper indicates that your subscription has expired, please send in your renewal, so the editor and the printer can be paid and the paper can continue to come to you.

Rev. Joe A. French, pastor of the Ocean View and Berea Churches, and his wife are spending their vacation visiting their people in Alabama and Tennessee. They are expected to be back in Norfolk and ready for work shortly.

Student Summer Service Workers are finishing up their summer work and retiring to their homes. Good reports are coming in from all of those who served in the Southern Convention. Further information concerning this work will be given at a later date.

The editor enjoyed a delightful vacation in the mountains of Virginia and the hills of North Carolina. It was his privilege to speak at the Valley Conference, in Antioch, Mt. Olivet (G), and in his own home church, Mt. Bethel. These churches all have a forward looking and fine group of young people.

In just a short time hundreds of young people will be going away to school. Our own people will receive a hearty welcome in our own colleges, and it is sincerely hoped that the children of the church will attend the colleges of the church so they may have the blessing which only the church can give.

Mr. Loring D. Chase, Summer Student Service Worker, has completed his work in Norfolk, and returned last Saturday to his home in East Northfield, Mass. The editor is very grateful to him for carrying the responsibilities of THE CHRISTIAN SUN this week and two weeks previously. Mr. Chase is to be congratulated on the fine work accomplished. The best wishes of THE SUN go with him as he enters Yale Divinity School in September.

Dr. and Mrs. Clarence A. Vincent have had six weeks' change on their farm at Henniker, N. H. Four of their children have spent a part or all of that period with them. Dr. Vincent preached for the twenty-sixth season the sermon at the meeting of the Friends of New Hampshire and for the fourth year read from his Nature Poems at the State Forestry and Bird Reserve Meeting. They return to Miami Shores and the young church there with strength and anticipation.

The many friends of Dr. L. E. Smith will learn with regret of his continued illness which has handicapped him during the past month and is forcing him, on the advice of his physician, to leave the college for a week or so to try and find relief from his suffering. Dr. Smith was afflicted, the latter part of July, with what he and his friends thought was a crick in his neck and would pass away after a few days. Rather than passing away, the affliction has spread and has handicapped the use of his arm as well as causing severe pain.

Inadvertently the financial report of the Orphanage got on the Missions page this week, and part of the papers were run that way before it was discovered. We reprint the report in its proper place on page 14, and also run the "Missionary Offerings" on this page.

NEW INSTRUCTORS AT ELON.

George Beecher, Stamford, Conn., has been added to the Science Department to take care of the increase in the number of students in that department. Dr. Beecher, who holds his Ph. D. Degree from Yale University, will also assist Dr. J. D. Messick in the Department of Education. President Smith says that it looks as if it will be necessary to employ another teacher in the English Department. For the last three years new professors have been added to take care of the increase in the student body which has grown from less than 250 in 1932, to over 500 at this time.

Miss Ilma Johnson of Akadelphia, Arkansas, has been added to the Department of Home Economics and will assist in the Department of Dramatics and Public Speaking. Miss Johnson holds her A. B. Degree in Home Economics from the University of Arkansas and M. S. Degree from Iowa State College.

Dr. Howard L. Gravett of Urbana, Illinois, will be added in the Department of Biology and Zoology. Dr. Gravett holds his A. B. Degree from James Milikin University and M. A. and Ph. D. Degrees from the University of Illinois.

Mr. W. W. Howell, who holds his A. B. Degree from Elon College and M. A. Degree from the University of North Carolina, will be added in the Department of Business Administration and Mathematics.

A NEGRO IN BRONZE.

A bronze bust of Dr. George Washington Carver, the negro wizard of agricultural chemistry, is to be presented Tuskegee Institute, Alabama. Dr. Carver is still alive and busily engaged in the tasks that have made him famous the world over.

Dr. Carver was born a slave and in childhood was traded for a horse. He massaged athletes to help pay for his schooling at the agricultural college at Ames, Iowa.

The United Presbyterian epitomizes his work with the peanut as follows:

"His experiment with the peanut from which he has extracted milk, chemical oils, rubber, paper, ink, and 200 other products, has not only brought him into great prominence in the chemical world, but has made him a public benefactor, by wonderfully increasing the value of this southern commodity. He has shown that peanut oil is of great value in infantile paralysis. He has turned all of his products with the secret of their production over to the medical fraternity without cost."—N. C. Christian Advocate.

THE BURDEN OF THE NON-CHURCH-GOING PEOPLE AND LAYMEN OF THE CHURCHES OF MOORE COUNTY.

Somewhat over two years ago a Ministers' Association was organized, and is known as the Ministers' Association of the sandhills. All ministers of the county, by virtue of residence in the county, became members of the Association.

One of the great objects of the Association was to find out the percentage of inhabitants in the county who attended neither church nor Sunday school. Consequently, a religious survey of the county was undertaken. Letters were sent to all ministers, and to all Sunday school superintendents, in the county, asking the ministers to report the number of people attending each church, and the superintendents to report the number of Sunday school scholars in the Sunday schools. The numbers were added, then the total subtracted from the white people residing in the country according to the United States census. The discovery revealed that some forty-five per cent of our people attend neither church nor Sunday school.

There the problem was presented: In a country that some people term a Christian country, and yet very nearly one-half of our people drifting into paganism—and that status of affairs religiously while there are strong self-supporting churches in our towns, and seemingly enough church organizations throughout the county, if they but functioned to take care of all the non-church-going multitude.

The survey exhibited some fifty-five churches in the county with twenty-five active pastors serving them. Some of the pastors served five churches; some served four; others served three; some served two; several pastors served but one. Should the burden of reaching the non-church-going folks be put upon the burden of the pastors? That would be the easiest path of least resistance—a way of side-stepping the responsibility on the part of the churches if it could be worked. But what would be the use of asking pastors now serving two to five churches to undertake more work while many of them have more work already than they can properly care for as ministers. The percentage of non-church-goers is as high in the towns where the churches are strongest as in the rural areas, and people left to heathenism within easy reach of those churches.

But we said let us begin at the circumference and work from the outlying points toward the center. Really, and in order to get at the matter systematically, and be able to put the work emphasis where there was the most urgent need, a more minute end detailed survey was suggested.

Meanwhile we were led to believe that if our splendid laymen should be shown the real situation religiously in some quarters they would respond and in the name of our blessed Christ tackle the jobs and under the leading of the Holy Spirit seek to take light into the dark corners.

We took the matter up with the American Sunday School Association, and asked if a man might be put to work in the county getting the facts in detail, and meanwhile rounding up the thus far neglected people into gatherings in school houses, or rural church houses and thus prepare the way for our laymen to meet and begin work with the people thus gotten together. The Sunday School Association replied that a man could be secured to do the work, but his salary would have to be paid, etc., travel expenses, and room with boarding. We had no money for him, much as we would like to have had him. While we were thinking of these difficulties, we learned that Duke University allows to each of a number of young men some four hundred dollars each year for doing the very kind of work we desired to have done. Through the kindly offices of the president of our Association and Dr. Ormond of Duke, a young man was secured to spend ten weeks with us in the rural survey work. He began work. At the end of each of two months he made oral reports to the Association, and said he found conditions that were simply staggering. He left, however, without giving a tabulated report of his findings, thus leaving us about where we were when we started. The plan was to have him tabulate all persons as to church affiliations, or none, make diagrams of their whereabouts, so that there could be a follow up. The object of our endeavor thus far was defeated in that the whole work will have to be done over again. While he was on the field he did some work in getting people together for week night meetings. Some of our ministers backed him up and conducted revival services, and a good work was thus begun, but the more stable work we sought to do lapsed because of our lacking the knowledge of the real conditions of the areas in which work was to be done. But by whom and how?

Our country is favored in having some very strong Men's Bible classes. There are two of them in Carthage; two others in Aberdeen; one in Pinehurst, and also one in Hemp. There are men enough in those classes to turn this whole country up-side-down religiously. We spoke to some of the men concerning the work incumbent upon the churches, and especially upon the men. They said they would like to do the work, but hated to break in. They didn't know conducting Sunday schools in farm houses, or in brush arbors, or in school houses could be done; the informality of the whole procedure staggered them.

The whole of the outreach of the representatives of the kingdom of God comes back upon the pastors of our churches. The model is suggested by Luke 10:1, 2, and 17; John 1:40-42, or John 4:7-15. It resolves itself into prayer that the members of our churches may be filled with the Holy Spirit, a pentecostal outpouring, an inner urge, that will take our men anywhere, and over all indispositions of theirs to do our Lord's will.

If our men cannot be motivated by a personal loyalty to a personal, crucified Redeemer and Saviour, the unchurched will be lost; so will the churches.

The seventy returned with joy bubbling over because they had learned, by practicing the laboratory method, that the teachings of their Lord, and ours, were true. If our men would but undertake personal work for Christ, and engage in leading others to Him, they, too, would learn of the vitalizing, victorious, indwelling Spirit of Christ, and theirs would be the joy to be got in no other way than by active work for Christ.

We would like to call attention to the work done, and being done, by two laymen Bible groups. One is the Vanguard Bible class of the First Presbyterian Church of Raleigh. Those men in their enthusiasm for Christ have swarmed several times, and have gotten together, by their urgency, more than one church child to the older Mother church. They enjoy religion not so much as living for Christ.

The second group of men is in Charlotte, and is known as the Laymen's Christian Evangelistic Association. Those men meet on Friday nights for supper in the Y. M. C. A., when reports are made by the teams that were sent out the previous Sabbath. Teams of two, or maybe three, are at that meeting arranged for the next coming Sabbath to go to any place where a hearing may be gotten to proclaim the blessed Gospel of our Christ. Some thousands of converts have been led to Christ through the testimonies and the prayers of those

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgement and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

ANNIVERSARIES.

How annoying it is when the speedometer on your car breaks—not that it hinders your advance in the least, but somehow without that indicator of progress before you, the journey seems pointless and uninteresting. We've always felt sorry for people who through extreme touchiness refuse to recognize their birthdays. We know we're always surprised on the few birthdays we have had, to find that really we feel no older than we did the day before, but still there is a consciousness of progress in the serious business of growing up. The classic example of the thoughtless husband is he who forgets his own wedding anniversary. Anniversaries and memorial days of all sorts give us an urge to take stock of ourselves; to look back over the road traveled, and to look ahead and ponder over the possibilities which the future may hold. As we consider these things, we seek the strength to travel on—onward and upward.

In the observance of anniversaries and holidays there is the ever-present danger that we will forget, in the excitement of the event, the origin of the observance. We forget the simple humility of the first Thanksgiving in an orgy of gastronomic acrobatics; in our frenzy to buy gifts—and to receive gifts—at Christmas time, we forget the deep spiritual significance of that first Christmas in the Bethlehem stable.

Church anniversaries, like any other special observances are times when we should turn our eyes back and view our past achievements, noting and checking for future avoidance our past errors; they are times when we turn our eyes ahead to see where we are going; and times when we take a cold, objective view of ourselves as we are at the present, noting our strength and our weakness, determining to use our strength and to correct our weaknesses.

To the two churches that have so recently celebrated significant anniversaries, we extend our heartiest congratulations, and our best wishes for continued good work in the service of the Master.

AS THE NEWS COMES IN.

Each morning the mail brings a certain number of news items. The first week these came in from the various churches, we felt that we were being introduced to the workers in those churches. Letters came in from the Valley, from North Carolina, from the Piedmont, from the Tidewater section. The second week we were here, the letters came in again. We were introduced to some new people and renewed our acquaintance with those of the week before. It was like saying hello to the people in a church after preaching there for the second week. Brief notes come in from ministers whom we have met at Elon, from ministers with whom we have worked in previous summers. Now and again notes come in from other people whom we have actually met. That is a thrill. It was especially gratifying to receive from Albemarle, N. C., a booklet commemorating their twenty-fifth anniversary. We have spent considerable time working in the Albemarle Church during the past two summers, and to see the names of our old friends appearing in this booklet was almost as good as shaking hands with them.

AND THEN THE LEG GAVE WAY.

On the other side of the office there stands an unfortunate chair, bottom up, leaning against the wall. One leg, the left hind leg to be explicit, is broken off at the knee. It happened in this way: The other day the substitute editor was seated on this chair, and it was the most comfortable chair in the office, too. Now, the occupant of the chair was pondering the affairs of the world, and as he tried to think, the unusual effort caused him to balance the chair on this left hind leg. This chair was so built that when the weight of the person seated thereon was evenly distributed on all four legs, the chair was perfectly secure, no matter how plump the occupant. As we were saying, happily we teetered on the one left hind chair-leg, trying to think of a sermon illustration, when there was a crash—a decided let-down. And now, bottom-side-up, the chair stands on the other side of the room, leaning disconsolately against the wall. Only one-fourth of the total number of legs is broken, but the chair is useless save for the doubtful function of ornamentation, which it might be fulfilling now as it poises on its back there across the room.

But why all this? Committees were meant to bear burdens, and when a committee, be it in a church or elsewhere, becomes so tipped that the responsibility falls on one member of that committee, the one member may fail to stand up under the strain—he breaks, and the usefulness of the entire committee is ended, even as this little moral tale is now ended.

PUNCTUALITY.

Perhaps it's the continuous movie that has something to do with it, I don't know. You can come in when you like, see the end and then the beginning, and piece the two together. It bothers no one except those who have to stand as you push your way into a seat. The actors are merely images of light, quite insensitive to the audience.

Or maybe it's the radio. You can tune in on a program at any stage of its development, and no one is the wiser. You merely turn a dial or two, and the words or the music comes forth.

Or maybe people just never did like to be on time. In an orchestra concert, there are three essential features; the music, the orchestra, (Turn to page 7.)

ROSEMONT CHRISTIAN CHURCH.By REV. J. F. MORGAN.

[Delivered at the Thirty-fifth Anniversary of the organization of Rosemont Christian Church, on August 15, 1937.]

On a warm Sunday afternoon, on August 14, 1902, a number of earnest souls gathered in the little building in which they had been worshipping and holding Sunday school for some time. This building stood on the ground now covered by the present building. The meeting of which we now speak was for the purpose of organizing the Rosemont Christian Church. The minister in charge was the late Dr. J. P. Barrett, under whose leadership the church was effectively organized. The following persons composed the charter members of the church: Mrs. Mary F. Morrison, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Morrison, Sr., Mr. T. O. Morrison, Mrs. Sallie Roane, Mrs. H. L. Bondurant, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Gibson, Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Gibson, Mr. B. H. Gibson, Miss Maude McCloud, Mrs. J. B. Doughty, and Mrs. O. S. Mills. Mr. O. S. Mills, who was ill at the time of the organization and hence could not be present, became a member soon after, and should be recognized as a charter member, making a total of fifteen charter members.

During the process of the organization, J. R. Morrison, Sr., O. S. Mills, and B. H. Gibson, were elected the first trustees of the church.

The church has had three buildings, the first being erected by interested persons in the community about 1900, or some two years before the organization of the church. The second was built the latter part of the year 1915, and was opened for services of worship in January, 1916. The first and second buildings were put together and used as one building for some fifteen years.

At the dedication services of this second building, held on June 22, 1919, the then pastor, Rev. G. O. Lankford, spoke in part as follows: "With the building of communities and the coming together of groups of families in neighborhood life, arises the need for new enterprises for the public good, chief among which is the church of Christ. Not many years ago the sections of land about us were devoted almost entirely to agricultural activities, but natural conditions were such as to determine that these fields should be no longer laid off by the plowman's measure, but by the surveyor's line and compass, and that industry must take the place of agriculture. So this community came into being, and with the birth of the community was born the religious needs and possibilities thereof.

"It was out of this need and responsibility that this church came to be. The land on which the church now stands was given by Mr. John L. Gibson, now of sainted memory.

"The history of the churches has often been a history of struggle. This church has been no exception in that case. Periods of sunshine and shadow have come and gone. At times failure has seemed almost inevitable, but out of the clouds the sun would shine again, and out of these alternating experiences has come at last a day of growth and progress. A spirit of earnestness, enthusiasm and optimism at present so pervades the

OUR PRAYER.By REV. EVERETT LESHIER.

Father and Friend: In the glory of this Sabbath morn we would turn away from the transient and uncertain values of earth and rise above the confusion and contradictions of life. So hush our hearts that we may hear within the song of eternal harmonies. Walk through the corridors of our minds and raise up thoughts and desires which Thou dost ever delight to satisfy. Breathe through our souls Thy coolness and Thy balm. Take us, unworthy and ashamed, and make our lives centers of Divine loveliness.

We were made for Thee. Thou art our life Thine is the comfort which lifts sighing and sorrowing from us. Thine is the love which restores the penitent. Thine is the truth that makes us free. Thine is the beauty that enchants us.

O Lord, without Thee we are nothing. Without Thee we could not live one short hour. Thou art our all, the beginning and the end. So do we beseech Thee, who hast made us for Thyself and for Thy fulfillment, to make plain to us that life shall ever be empty except Thou be the breath of our souls, Thy truth our light, Thy presence our joy. Amen.

membership that a still larger and better day in the future in the Master's service is assured.

"After some years of toil and sacrifice mingled with a measure of faith and prayer, it now gives us pleasure to present this building, with its furniture and fixtures, unto Him, who is the author of every good gift, to be dedicated in the honor of His name, and to the cause of truth and righteousness in the earth."

Thus we have the picture of that dedication of the second building of Rosemont, from the pen of perhaps her most beloved pastor, spoken on June 22, 1919, some eighteen years ago.

Our church has been served by the following pastors: Revs. J. W. Harrell, J. W. Barrett, W. D. Harward, C. C. Ryan, McDaniel Howsare, D.

A. Keys, W. H. Denison, G. O. Lankford, W. C. Hook, B. F. Black, and the present pastor, J. F. Morgan, who became pastor September 1, 1925.

After our present pastor had been on the field for more than a year he began suggesting the need of a better church plant in order to meet the needs of the growing congregation. After a friendly and most helpful discussion of the subject of a new church in our regular quarterly conference, held June 29, 1927, Mr. O. F. Smith arose to his feet and declared that he would be chairman of a "New Church Fund" Committee, whose duty it would be to raise $15,000.00 with which to begin a new church before we started building. The suggestion met with the approval of the conference and a motion prevailed electing Mr. Smith chairman of the committee. The other members of the committee chosen were H. L. Bondurant, A. L. Guynn, D. A. Dennis, and R. W. Bondurant.

On July 10, 1927, this New Church Fund Committee offered the following resolution: "That we give to the New Church Fund as the Lord prospers us, for three years, and that at the end of that time, if we do not have the $15,000.00, the money be returned to the donors." A large number of the members of the church and Sunday school came forward and signed that resolution in a great consecration service on that warm July Sunday morning. We think of that service as one of the most helpful ever held in the Rosemont Church.

This New Church Fund grew slowly, but steadily, for about two and one half years. At the annual business meeting of the church held in October, 1929, we discussed plans for putting new life into the raising of our New Church Fund. In this meeting one of our members challenged the church by stating that if the members would raise half of the $15,000.00, he and his wife would give the rest. This greatly inspired the church. The challenge was accepted. The New Church Fund Committee was enlarged, and Mrs. O. S. Mills was made the new chairman.

Under the leadership of this new committee, a campaign of special services was put on February 2 to 6, 1930, in the interest of the building fund, at which J. M. Darden, Rev. F. C. Lester, Dr. L. E. Smith, Dr. H. S. Hardeastle, L. C. Ferebee, M. D., and Dr. Charles E. Shelton, were the speakers.

At the close of his message on Sunday morning, February 2, 1930, J. M. Darden inspired the children by offering to give them all the peanuts Massanetta Springs Bible Conference is in session this week. For the tenth consecutive year the writer has been granted a vacation to attend this conference. Mrs. Johnson has shared in this privilege and opportunity. The churches of our charge have been very gracious in giving this time for rest and study.

Revs. E. T. Cotten of Cincinnati, Ohio; E. T. Hyde of Sanford, N. C.; C. E. Newman of Virgilina, Va.; J. F. Morgan of Rosemont, Va., and O. D. Poythress of South Norfolk, Va., of the Congregational and Christian Churches are also attending this year. At the hotel and in the conference, the fellowship of this group has been very cordial and happy.

Brother Hyde is the only single man in the group. He has the sympathy of the others for he is lonely; but he is humbly awaiting the time when he will be as happy and contented as a married preacher can be. Cotten is so cheerful and youthful that the young people wonder if he is married or single. He speaks of his wife and daughter so often there can be little doubt as to his position in life. Brother Newman is dignified and thoughtful. He is perfectly at ease in a Presbyterian Assembly. In some way the management discovered that Morgan is a good song leader. In the absence of the official music director, Dr. W. E. Hudson called on him to conduct the worship at the opening session of the conference. The fine tenor voice of Poythress was discovered in this service; and last night a program of "Spirituals" was rendered by the "Morgan Quartet" in the "Hotel Lobby." This quartet is composed of Morgan, Poythress, the writer—with Mrs. Johnson as accompanist.

Well, the program was unique to say the least of it. Poythress was the leading star, and his solo, "The Last Round Up," provoked enthusiastic applause. A number of ladies (grey haired) gathered around him after the "concert" and requested him to autograph their note books. He deferred this till tomorrow, either to give him time to improve his handwriting, or to go home before the appointed time arrives.

The Bible Conference has a good program for ministers. The central theme for the week was "The Modern World and the Church." It is conceded that the church faces a great task. It is fighting for its own life. It is being awakened out of a long sleep of indifference and self-satisfaction. When persecution comes the church prospers. That experience has come for the church in a large part of the world. If the church can recover its spiritual experience by faithful prayer and sincere consecration, the glory of the Lord will again be revealed, and the hungry hearts will cry out for the bread of life.

May the church in America fall upon its knees and recover its former power and appeal to the unsaved.

ELON COLLEGE BEGINS ANOTHER YEAR.

The nineteen thirty-seven - thirty-eight session of Elon College will begin September at eight o'clock with a faculty meeting. At this meeting, new members of the faculty will be introduced. The curriculum for the year and other details will be considered.

Freshmen will arrive on Tuesday, September 7. A special program of orientation for the remainder of the week has been planned. Upperclassmen will arrive Wednesday. Assignments will be made Thursday and classes will be organized Friday. The orientation program will close Sunday with the eleven o'clock service of worship in the auditorium. This service will also mark the beginning of our church activities. This is the occasion when the community, the faculty, and the college students come together in their first worship service for the year. This is always a great occasion. The writer will be the speaker. The church services at Elon College are always an inspiration and a great benefit spiritually to the ones who attend.

From all indications this will be the greatest opening that Elon College has ever had from the standpoint of students. To date we have on file in the Registrar's office approximately 450 definite applications. These are all regular college students without any specials. I have just had a conference with Mr. Colclough, our Field Secretary, and he reports that the indications are that our enrollment will reach the 500 mark shortly after the opening; that is, if we can provide rooming facilities. It has been the custom and the rule of the institution not to permit students to room and board in the community. We are compelled to limit our enrollment or increase our faculty. We are compelled to do the former until financial conditions improve. We have increased our rooming facilities materially. We can accommodate about 350 boarding students. Our day-student enrollment regularly stands at 150 to 160. This will give us a total enrollment of 500, which is all that we can accommodate with our present teaching force and rooming facilities. This is most encouraging indeed.

There is one disappointing feature about our student body. We have far too few students from our own church. Patronage from the church is increasing but not as rapidly as it should. We are endeavoring to improve the college consistently and continuously, hoping that eventually it will be of sufficient importance to attract the attention of our own people. The college is here. It is ours. We have built it. It is exactly what we have made it, and we solicit and urge constructive criticism.

Morally, religiously and scholastically we have an excellent institution. The atmosphere of the school and the spirit of the campus are of the very best. The fruits of Elon College will go out to bless the church and the nation. We covet the sympathy, help and cooperation of our entire church.

You are invited to our opening exercises, September 7 to September 12, 1937.

CHUNKS OF TRUTH.

What role do you suppose the gossip will play in eternity?

There are some people who try to carry water on both shoulders.

The best cure for all our troubles—is the Truest Cure. Trust in God!

Ingratitude is one of the meanest sins in the human family.

People do not think much about the crown hereafter—it is the crown here they are after.

God never undertook a failure. If it was a failure, it was because of some human indiscretion.

The punishment planned for others by their foes usually recoils upon their own heads. Hayman was hanged on the gallows he had erected for Mordecai.

There is only a film that separates us from the spirit world. And yet we are so stupid that we cannot understand that a vast army for the right are ever at our side.

and the audience. Both the orchestra and the audience are necessary that there be the communion with the infinite which the composer intended. The orchestra generally begins and ends together. The audience straggles in and out throughout the concert. One famous conductor of a great symphony orchestra decided to teach his audience a lesson. At the scheduled time, only a few musicians were in their places tuning up. Afterwards, more straggled in, and they began to play the program. By the time half an hour or so had passed, every player was there, although as each player came he was not too careful about disturbing the others. Half way through the last number, a trumpeter put his instrument in its case, slammed it shut, and walked off. One after another the rest followed, until only a few miscellaneous instruments were emitting the last struggling notes. The audience, of course, was furious, but the next concert the people were in their seats on time.

For a minister to take so drastic a step as to order the choir to wander in over a period of half an hour, for the minister himself to come in ten or fifteen minutes late, and then to turn around and whisper to the soprano soloist sitting behind him, for many in the choir to hold their music in their hands but not to sing, such would be a sacrilege; but is there ever a time when the members of the congregation behave no better? Worship is not an entertainment, not a show by the minister and the choir; worship is a venture into the eternal in which every member of the congregation must take his part.

HARMONY AND PROGRESS.

Necessity, as we all know, is the mother of invention. For example, when our forbears decided they needed to get places a little easier and a little faster, they invented the wheel.

Politicians in that respect are just like other people. When they need to promote their personal progress they look for a wheel—or, as some would put it, for a crutch. It is only natural therefore, that they should try to build up straw men upon whom they seek to lay the blame for their own failings and shortcomings.

As probably was to have been expected, politicians lately have found an excellent straw man, variously described as the "haves" and the "vested interests" and so on ad infinitum. The straw man is blamed for the depression, for the present continued unemployment, for governmental deficits, for droughts, for peace and for wars.

Unfortunate part about all this is that the straw men do not have a habit of talking back for themselves. They are too inclined to concentrate on their own jobs and let the politicians have their say and get by with it. But we who stand on the sidelines and watch can see things that neither the critics nor the criticized can see.

For instance, why does the United States now have the highest living standard in the world? Why do American factory workers ride to their jobs in automobiles while those of other nations trudge through the dust? Why are there more radios, more automobiles, more telephones, more bathtubs, more of all the necessities and luxuries of life in the United States than in any other nation in the world? Did politicians create those things? The answer is obvious.

We know, too, that a lot of people fighting among themselves cannot progress. The old saying "United We Stand, Divided We Fall," is just as true as it ever was. So-called "class hatreds" are destructive.

Isn't it about time we buried a lot of these hatches and blame-placers and establish a rule of reason and logic rather than hatred and emotion?

—Exchange.

A woman took her little one in her arms to hear a famous preacher. The loud voice on the platform awoke the child and made it cry, and its mother got up and was leaving the church when the minister stopped her by saying, "My good woman, don't go away; the baby does not disturb me." "It isn't for that I leave," she replied with innocent sarcasm, "It's you disturb the baby."—Exchange.

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

DR. RAWLINSON KILLED.

All of us who met and heard Dr. Frank J. Rawlinson, missionary on furlough from China, in many of our churches and homes, in Virginia and the Carolinas, the past year, read with deepest sorrow of his tragic death in Shanghai, as reported in the Associated Press of August 16th. Added irony to the tragedy is given in the fact that it was a bomb dropped from a Chinese airplane, either by accident or aimed at invading and hostile Japanese soldiers, that caused the sudden and unexpected death of this good man and long time friend to the Chinese. For to many of them he had carried the Gospel of the Prince of Peace, whose ambassador he was. Dr. Rawlinson was a man, a real Christian, of pleasing and affable manner and disposition, and held in highest respect by our Foreign Mission Board. He was really one of us to all who heard him in sermon or public address, or entertained him in their homes.

Mrs. Atkinson's verdict at the time was that she had not had a guest in our home in a long time that she enjoyed quite so much as she did Dr. Rawlinson.

Dr. Rawlinson knew China and he knew America, and one of the constant surprises he had in visiting our churches was that we in Carolina and Virginia, like those of the churches elsewhere he visited in the United States, seemed so indifferent and unconcerned about our Christianity and our church membership. His observation was that at our well-attended services there was an average of one-fourth of the church membership present. He had hoped and expected to see a better average than this here in the South, but found we were about living up to the average in other parts of the United States.

In one church, especially, the pastor was gratified at the large congregation present at the 11 a. m. Sunday service to hear him. The observant Doctor counted and found nearly 300 present, and then asking the pastor what his church membership was, found that it was practically four times the number present, even at this "well attended service."

It was quite different in China, said Dr. Rawlinson. The Chinese Christians take their church membership more seriously and practically all members of a church can be counted on to be present at a regular preaching or worship service.

Dr. Rawlinson was the distinguished editor of the Chinese Recorder, a monthly magazine of considerable proportions, carrying church and general news to thousands of Chinese homes. This writer subscribed for this magazine and has found it a publication of real interest, with editorials and other matter of religious significance both to Chinese and American Christians.

Dr. Rawlinson was eager to be back in China and with the churches and peoples there that he had learned to love even as those of his native land. He was quite zealous and enthusiastic over the progress of Christian missions in Shanghai and other sections of the great empire in which he had preached the Gospel of Jesus Christ, the one and all sufficient Saviour.

In the untimely and tragic death of this good man and faithful ambassador of our Lord, our Board certainly sustains a great and irreparable loss. He was indeed fighting a good fight, having obtained a good report through faith. It is now left for us who remain to make him perfect by carrying on the work to which he had dedicated his life and for the Christ in whose name and for whose sake he died.

OXFORD CONFERENCE DELEGATES SEND GREETINGS TO CHRISTIAN CHURCHES.

At the close of their deliberations, the delegates to the World Conference on Church, Community and State, assembled at Oxford, England, from July 12 to 26, 1937, sent out the following message to the churches of Christ throughout the world:

"In the name of Christ, greetings.

"We meet at a time when mankind is oppressed with perplexity and fear. Men are burdened with evils almost insupportable and with problems apparently insoluble. Even in countries which are at peace unemployment and malnutrition sap men's strength of body, mind and spirit. In other countries war does its "devil's work," and threatens to overwhelm us all in its limitless catastrophe.

"Yet we do not take up our task as bewildered citizens of our several nations, asking if anywhere there is a clue to our problems; we take it up as Christians, to whom is committed "the word of reconciliation," that "God was in Christ reconciling the world unto himself."

"The first duty of the church and its greatest service to the world is that it be in very deed the church—confessing the true faith, committed to the fulfilment of the will of the Christ, its only Lord, and united to him in a fellowship of love and service.

We do not call the world to be like ourselves, for we are already too like the world. Only as we ourselves repent, both as individuals and as corporate bodies, can the church call men to repentance. The call to ourselves and to the world is to Christ.

Our Unity of Spirit.

"Despite our unfaithfulness God has done great things through his church. One of the greatest is this—that, notwithstanding the tragedy of our divisions and our inability in many important matters to speak with a united voice, there exists an actual world-fellowship. Our unity in Christ is not a theme for aspiration; it is an experienced fact. We can speak of it with boldness because our conference is an illustration of it. We are drawn from many nations and from many different communions, from churches with centuries of history behind them and from the younger churches whose story covers but a few decades; but we are one in Christ.

"The unity of this fellowship is not built up from its constituent parts, like a federation of different states. It consists in the sovereignty and redeeming acts of its one Lord. The source of unity is not the consenting movement of men's wills; it is Jesus Christ whose one life flows through the body and subdues the many wills to him.

"We have much to encourage us since the conference at Stockholm twelve years ago. The sense of the unity of the church in all the world grows stronger every year. We trust that this cause will be yet more fully served by the World Council of Churches, proposals for which have been considered by the conference and commended to the churches.

"We have tried during these days at Oxford to look without illusion at the chaos and disintegration of the world, the injustices of the social order and the menace and horror of war. The world is anxious and bewildered and full of pain and fear. We are troubled, yet we do not despair. Our hope is anchored in the living God. In Christ, and in the union of man with God and of man with man, which he creates, life even in face of all these evils has a meaning. In his name we set our hands, as the servants of God and in him of one another, to the task of proclaiming God's message of redemption, of living as his children and of combatting injustice, cruelty and hate. The church can be of good cheer; it hears its Lord saying, 'I have overcome the world.'"

MISSIONS AT MT. CARMEL.

As our year is nearing its close of the Woman's Missionary work, at Mt. Carmel, Zuni, Virginia, it is our desire for the friends and readers of THE SUN to know a little about our work.

First of all, we are truly thankful to our Heavenly Father for the Missionary spirit that dwells in the hearts of our members and we feel that under the leadership of our consecrated and devoted President, Mrs. Blanche Bradshaw, we have accomplished something worth while for our Savior and ourselves as well.

During the year we have held each monthly meeting with a good average attendance and our spiritual Life Leader, Mrs. W. T. Cox, with the cooperation of our members, has rendered a spiritual life program at each meeting.

We took our part in the Silver Anniversary Jubilee at Suffolk and are thankful that we could have part in such a worthy cause. We liked the playlet given by the Suffolk ladies so well that we invited them to our church to give it for the benefit of our people who could not go to Suffolk. They came and I feel that it caused the missionary light to shine brighter after dramatizing this little play before the eyes of our people. We are indeed thankful to the ladies of Suffolk and also to all those who took part on our program.

This society is not only endeavoring to reach its goal as an honor roll society, but it has taken up some home responsibilities. Our church is badly in need of a new carpet, therefore someone had to make a start. It was the members of the Woman's Missionary Society that started this move. During this year we have raised $100.00 on this fund.

With these few items to press, you see that this year's history will not be one of idleness or pull-back, but one of prayer, work, and cooperation.

MRS. F. H. JOHNSON.

THE GREATEST GIFT.

The greatest gift is what he gave
Eternal life for all,
And pardon for our many sins
Though they are great or small.

The greatest gift—eternal life!
How thankful we should be
And praise him for his sacrifice
That makes us ever free.

The greatest gifts that we can bring
Are souls redeemed from sin
All freed at last from every stain
As hearts asked Christ within.

The greatest gift is what he gave
And yet, we too can give
By teaching others of his love
Then in this peace to live.

and sugar with which to make candy that they could sell, and challenged them in this way to raise $500.00. This challenge was accepted, and in a few months the amount was raised. Mr. Darden came again to help the children celebrate their victory, and told them that if they would raise $400.00 more, he would give them $100.00, thus making one thousand dollars for the children's part in the campaign for funds for the new church. This goal they also reached.

The New Church Fund Committee pressed its campaign to a glorious victory, and on June 30, 1930, the thrilling announcement was made that "we are over the top"; and the $15,000.00 was in hand. The new church building was assured.

In the regular quarterly conference of the church, held July 2, 1930, the following Building Committee was elected: A. L. Guynn, W. H. Farrow, Dr. L. C. Ferebee, J. R. Morrison, Jr., H. L. Bondurant, Mrs. O. S. Mills, Mrs. E. H. Cuthrell, O. F. Smith, and H. R. Morrison, with J. F. Morgan, member ex-officio.

At the first meeting of this Building Committee, held on Monday, July 7, 1930, Mr. O. F. Smith was unanimously elected Chairman, and the work of the committee began in earnest. At subsequent meetings all plans were discussed, Mr. B. F. Mitchell was chosen as our architect, and in cooperation with him, plans and specifications were soon worked out that were agreeable to both the Committee and the church.

Bids were opened in the office of architect Mitchell September 4, 1930. Mr. J. L. Abbitt, Norfolk contractor, was the lowest bidder, his bid being $21,500. The Building Committee recommended to the Church that we give the contract to build the church to him, and this recommendation was approved at a special called meeting of the church on Monday night, September 8, 1930. Work on razing the old church began September 15, 1930. The first dirt in preparing the foundation for the new church was removed by the pastor (J. F. Morgan) September 24, 1930. The pastor also laid the first brick for the new church building, October 2, 1930. Rebecca Guynn gave the first $1.00; Mildred Morrison bought the first brick.

The corner stone was laid on Oct. 31, 1930 by Rev. H. S. Hardecastle, then president of the Eastern Virginia Conference. Mr. Hardecastle was assisted in this service by other officials of the Conference.

The new building was completed by February 15, 1931, and on the afternoon of the February Sunday, was formerly dedicated to the service of the Lord, by Rev. W. W. Staley, in the presence of a large and interested congregation.

On February 11, 1934, through the kindness of Mr. and Mrs. O. F. Smith the church was presented with a new pipe organ. The organ was given in sacred memory of Carl Smith (brother of O. F. Smith) in particular, and to the memory, in general, of all those who have transferred their names from this church to the roll of the Church Triumphant. The organ was formerly dedicated by the pastor at the morning service of worship February 11, 1934.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

VIRGINIA PENINSULA RALLY FOR CHRISTIAN YOUNG PEOPLE.

Hampton Normal Institute, Hampton, Virginia, August 14, 1937.

The writer had the great privilege of attending the First Virginia peninsula Rally for Christian Young People held at Hampton Normal Institute, Hampton, Virginia, August 14, 1937. To acquaint the reader with the purpose of this Rally, I shall quote their aims as presented to us. They are as follows:

1. We would promote a spirit of fellowship and cooperation among all Christian young people, through wholesome recreation, sound instruction, and deep inspiration together.

2. We would promote a mutual understanding and respect for those of another color, in letting members of either race see and realize what the best in the other really exemplifies.

3. We would present discussions of lasting value on the typical problems that youth faces today, and would supply a Christian approach to them.

4. We would raise aloft Jesus Christ as Lord of life. We acknowledge our failures without Him in a confused and chaotic world, and would proclaim Him as the one way of salvation so necessary to that world.

The theme for this Rally was "The Eyes of Men are Turning". Following is the program for the day:

9:00 Registration in Ogden Hall.

9:00 Tour of Hampton Institute (conducted in groups from Ogden Hall by colored students).

Address by Rev. A. E. Acey.

Closing Announcements, and Benediction.

The setting for such a Rally was one of inspiration within itself. The day was a beautiful one, and through the various activities of the day we felt the presence of the Christ of all races, colors, and creeds. When approximately one thousand young people, both white and colored, gather for the one purpose, that of promoting fellowship, one feels the true spirit of Brotherhood.

A NEW CAR FOR MISS COGHILL.

Probably most of you have heard of the fate of Pattie Lee Coghill's new car—in case you haven't, we'll repeat it in brief. Some friends in New England made it possible for Pattie to have a new car this spring. Last month in Georgia one of the Student Summer Service workers used it to go to a church where he was to preach. On the way back, in the rain, and not used to Georgia clay roads, the car went off of a small bridge. Fortunately, the boy was not hurt badly. However, the car was damaged so badly that it seemed best to turn it in towards a new one, rather than try to repair it.

The young people of Georgia have volunteered to raise $125 toward the purchase of this new car. The young people of Florida are attempting to raise another $125. We all know how essential it is for "our Pattie Lee" to have an automobile, and the Boards have no funds to use for the purpose of purchasing one. If there are young people who feel that they can send one dollar, or young people's societies which can make some contribution, it will be greatly appreciated. This may be sent to the editor of this page, or to Dr. E. C. Gillette, 117 West Forsyth Street, Jacksonville, Florida.

THE DIGNITY OF HONEST WORK.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR SEPT. 5, 1937.

(Consecration Meeting.)

Scripture—

I. Cor. 3:13, 14; Eph. 4:28; II. Thess. 3:10-13.

Daily Readings—

Mon. "The Law of Labor,"—Ex. 20:9-11.

Tues. "Wealth by Labor vs. Cunning,"—Prov. 13:11.

Wed. "Work vs. Talk,"—Prov. 14:23-4.

Thurs. "Egypt's Labor Troubles,"—Ex. 5:1-9.

Fri. "Roots of Labor War,"—Jas. 5:1-6.

Sat. "Oppression Breeds Revolt,"—Ex. 5:10-19.

Dr. William Hiram Foulkes, in his book, "Youth-ways to Life," makes the following statements concerning the Christian's conception of the dignity of honest work: "We may not be bodies, but we have bodies; and to feed, clothe and shelter them is an essential and immediate responsibility. . . . The Christian youth, like the youth of the whole world, must learn the lesson of honest, persistent, rewarding toil. . . . The Christian youth, unlike the youth of the non-Christian world, has at his hand the true philosophy of work, the dynamic example of the world's Master Workman, the inheritance of a priceless enthusiasm which Jesus engenders, and the outlook upon the ultimate meaning of toil which only Jesus can give—immortality."

Scores of people today are getting big salaries without work, while, on the other hand, thousands of people are laboring without a living wage. There is too much dissatisfaction about our present economic order. What is wrong?

It would add dignity to your church if a group would meet to improve its surroundings by planting additional flowers or shrubs. What part do you share in beautifying your church?

In choosing a vocation, should we spurn those which require hard mental or physical energy?

Jesus said: "Whosoever would become great among you shall be your minister; and whosoever would be first among you shall be your servant." What did he mean?

Suggested Hymns—

"Work, for the Night is Coming."

"To the Work."

"O Master Workman of the Race."

"O Master, Let Me Walk with Thee." S. E. M.

GOD CONDEMNS INTEMPERANCE. THE SOCIAL APPROACH TO THE DRINK PROBLEM.

LESSON IX—AUGUST 29, 1937.

GOLDEN TEXT: Wine is a mocker, strong drink a brawler; and who-soever erreth thereby is not wise.
—Proverbs 20:1.

LESSON: Leviticus 10:1, 2, 8-11;
Proverbs 31:4, 5; Isaiah 28:1-8;
Romans 14:21.

There are four temperance lessons in this Sunday School Year. We have already considered two of them: The Economic Approach to the Liquor Problem, and The Scientific Approach to the Liquor Problem. In the last quarter we shall consider The Moral Issue in the Drink Problem. The lesson today considers the matter from the standpoint The Social Approach to the Drink Problem. It is well to keep in mind that the drive against alcohol is not based on wild hysteria, but upon sound and sane and scientific grounds, and from the standpoint of personal efficiency and social welfare, as well as on moral and spiritual grounds.

Personal Drinking or Social Drinking—Which?

We often hear the term social drinking." Is there, in fact, any other kind of drinking. No man liveth unto himself. No man drinketh unto himself. A man's personal drinking becomes a social concern. In our modern world men touch men in intimate social contacts, and the things which affect a man's personal life at least indirectly affect the life of society. For instance, to take a conspicuous case, a drinking driver—to say nothing of a drunken driver—may think that it is nobody's business whether he takes a drink or not. But a man who takes a drink and then drives a car becomes a social problem, he becomes a social menace. If he takes a drink and does not drive a car, he lowers his efficiency and thus robs society of his life at its best. If he drinks at all it helps to support the whole liquor traffic which is essentially anti-social. As a matter of fact, except for the "hermit souls who live apart" there is no such thing as personal drinking. It is not until one recognizes this fact that he can make any intelligent approach to the liquor traffic problem.

Abstinence for Ministers.

"And Joseph spake unto Aaron, saying, Drink no wine or strong drink, thou, nor thy sons with thee, when ye go into the tent, of meeting . . . that ye may make a distinction between the holy and the common, and between the unclean and clean." A minister should be sensitive to spiritual things. Alcohol dulls the moral and spiritual efficiency and for the sake of his spiritual influence he ought to be a "teetotaler." A man's life speaks more effectively than simply his spoken word. Let every minister take heed unto himself that he live honestly before God that he might have power with men.

Abstinence for Leaders.

"It is not for kings, O Lemeul, it is not for kings to drink wine, nor for princes to say, Where is strong drink, lest they drink and forget the law, and pervert the justice due to any that is afflicted." Those in positions of leadership in state as well as in church should also abstain from drink. At least that is what God's word says. Of course, if one listens to the distillers and the brewers and these who make profit out of drink, they will hear otherwise. One cannot get away from the feeling, however, that God's word throughout frowns upon drinking, warns against it, condemns it. With inspired insight the writers knew that strong drink has a tendency to dull the sensibilities of men, deaden their highest faculties, warp their moral nature, kill their highest spiritual sensibilities. They evidently intuitively realized—or perhaps they observed it in contemporary life—what science has irrefutably established; that alcohol is a poison and not a food, a narcotic and not a stimulant, a harmful enemy and not a helpful ally.

The Wages of Intemperance.

In a dramatic and convincing paragraph Isaiah vividly portrays the evils of drinking among the masses. The verses from the 28th chapter which compose a part of today's lesson show the ultimate fruitage of drinking on the part of a nation. One of the most powerful factors entering into the degeneration of Samaria and the Northern Kingdom was the increasing drinking and drunkenness on the part of both the leaders and the people. "Woe unto the crown of pride of the drunkards of Ephraim . . . to them that are overcome with wine." It was the old, old story of a people who thought they would take a drink, but who found out that a drink had taken them. As one writer has said: "Smitten, beaten, knocked down with wine as with a hammer and laid prostrate on the ground, where they lie fixed to it, not able to get up.

The liquor traffic is a menace to our country, not so much in what it is actually doing now, as in what it threatens to become. One thing is certain, although a great many people completely overlook the fact, the brewers and distillers are concerned about, and engaged in promoting the sale and use of their products. They are not trying to promote temperance or to reduce drinking; they are concerned with profits, and profits depend upon making more and more sales and more and more sales mean more and more liquor being drunk. And aiding and abetting the liquor interests is liquor itself. It is a habit-forming thing, the desire for it always grows stronger, not weaker. Read for instance the successive yearly reports of the Virginia ABC Board and see how alarmingly the sales of liquor have mounted each succeeding year. And those who say that this is because the bootleggers have been eliminated are simply talking "baloney." When the American people made liquor legal they let loose a monster that will wax larger and larger and larger and stronger and stronger and worse and worse. A great many people who voted for repeal are beginning to see this. And some good day, please God, enough of us will see it and will do something about it. Eventually the thing is doomed. But America will have to pay a fearful price for her folly.

Abstinence for the Sake of Others.

Paul's ultimate appeal was to a man's sense of responsibility to his weaker brother. It is not simply a case of whether a man can't take a drink or leave it alone. It is a case of whether he is willing to forego his personal pleasure for the sake of others.

A vexation arises, and our expressions of impatience hinder others from taking it patiently. Disappointment, ailment, or even weather depresses us; and our look or tone of depression hinders others from maintaining a cheerful and thankful spirit. We say an unkind thing, and another is hindered in learning the holy lesson of charity that thinketh no evil. We say a provoking thing, and our sister or brother is hindered in the day's effort to be meek. How sadly too, we may hinder without word or act! For wrong feeling is more infectious than wrong doing; especially the various phases of ill temper—gloominess, touchiness, discontent, irritability—do we not know how catching these are?—F. R. Havergal.

OPTIMISM.

"Be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee a crown of life."—Rev. 2:10.

Our newspapers bring to us glowing stories of crowded holiday throngs at resorts, ball fields, stadiums and national parks. They also bring to us stories of strikes and disorders, filling the country with bitterness and often shame.

Notwithstanding, from almost everywhere we find hearty Americans, stalwart people of the old-time faith, intent on forwarding healthy interests in the activities of youth; manifestly home-loving people, neighborly people, church-going people, persisting in efforts to save humanity from what it is to what it ought to be.

It is heartening to realize that what was said to Elijah is true, that there are thousands which have not bowed unto Baal, and that there are still multitudes trying to live by the old standards.

Prayer—Our Father, lift up our eyes that we may see the hills—the hosts of heaven from which cometh our strength.

TUESDAY.

LIFE'S TAIL WINDS.

"Ye have received the spirit of adoption, whereby . . . ye are heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ."—Rom. 8:15-17.

Air minded people understand what it means to an air pilot to have a "tail wind." It means that the air currents are with him and help him marvelously.

Do you realize how life has favoring winds for you and me, though we seldom think of them? There is a way, of course, which is easy, which leads to destruction. It is the way of easiest resistance. It is a happy-go-lucky way of disregard for superior values. It is a way of gratifying desires without regard of consequences.

But there is another way of favoring winds we seldom think of. It is the way of Christian homes, Christian communities, and Christian friends. We have back of us sustaining and driving us on, all of the forces of Godliness which have been built up and thrown around about us during all the past generations. The most of us would make very poor progress and probably never reach our destination but for these conditions.

Prayer—Dear Father, we thank Thee for everything good, for everything that has made living easy, for making heaven a brighter hope. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

UNDERMINING PUBLIC TASTE AND STANDARDS.

"Give attendance to reading."—I Tim. 4:13.

As we walk the streets of our cities, we are overwhelmed with the array of magazines in the racks of newsstands and drug stores. As we examine them we are more overwhelmed for the most of them are trash or worse. It is believed that they outnumber more than ten to one the decent publications, and there they are on sale, and they are there because the people demand them. People buy them and read them.

If this is true, it is further believed that more persons read trash than there are those who read good publications. Add to this the reading of popular novels, literature of questionable character and the irreligious, and also add the influence of wholesome and demoralizing motion pictures, and we realize a condition that should make us pause and contemplate the undermining of public tastes of high standards and moral stamina.

Prayer—O Lord, we pray to be saved from soiled minds and we pray for the courage and grace to repudiate anything that spoils the soul. Amen.

THURSDAY.

GOD'S GIFT OF FRIENDS.

"Ointment and perfume rejoice the heart; so doth the sweetness of a man's friends."—Prov. 27:9.

When leaving for a journey, it delights our souls to have the ministry of friends gather to see us off. The realization of such friendship is heartwarming and inspires one to the best that is in him.

When we arrive at our destination, whether it is a distant city or home, we are greeted by friends and again our hearts are warmed to noblest living.

Does this mean anything to you in terms of life's journey and the home beyond which Christ has gone to prepare for us? When we leave to cross that unknown sea, friends gather to say farewell. And at the end of the journey we believe there will be awaiting us, with smiles and welcome, loved ones and friends who have gone on before, who have long since been waiting for us and whose faces we are glad to see.

The voyage of life midst friends is sweet, but the sweetest of all is the latter.

Prayer—Our Father, we are longing for Thy Home resplendent with the life of Thy love. May we not miss it. Amen.

FRIDAY.

TOLERANCE, PEACE, AND GOODWILL.

"Behold how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity."—Ps. 133:1.

William T. Ellis tells of an incident in his life as follows: He was speaking for a friend, a pastor, who once saved him from drowning. He says that because he did not take the current emotional position of pacifism (he was speaking on peace), one hearer wrote a note to the pastor expressing regret that he pulled him out of the sea.

Dr. Ellis says that this bloodthirsty pacifist did not understand that without tolerance there can be no peace. "War cannot be prevented by exterminating those who do not agree with us." Peace is possible only in good will.

Prayer—Our Father, make us kind toward all who differ from us and help us ever to speak the truth and only in love. Amen.

SATURDAY.

A JEALOUS GOD.

"I will be jealous for my holy name."—Ezk. 39:25.

There is no one but God who can guard the honor of God. To preserve that honor requires a might that extends through all the universe and throughout the exigencies of human life, including the passion and impulses of man. That is why God must be jealous for his own character.

Did it ever occur to you that that is why God punishes evil and rewards the good; that that is why He insists upon consecration and obedience to Him? If God is holy, he must have a holy people and we believe that we would not have it less.

Shall we be as jealous for Him as He is for us?

Prayer—Our Father, we are jealous for ourselves. Help us to be more jealous for Thee and Thy cause and devote our whole lives to it. Amen.

SUNDAY.

YOUR GUEST.

"That Christ may dwell in your hearts through faith,"—Eph. 3:14-21.

THE SECOND MILE.

LORING D. CHASE.

"And whosoever shall compel thee to go one mile, go with him two."—Matthew 5:41.

Once there was a little child, who was given a board, in which was a small round hole. He was told to find something which would fit this hole. First, the child tried a square peg, but this would not fit, for the hole was round. After a time, the child grew wiser, and put a round peg in the hole. As time passed there came more round holes in his board; holes of many different sizes. The child seeing the success of the round peg, made other round pegs, each peg for a particular hole. Some of the pegs began to wear out, some of the pegs were lost, and others were broken. Finally he hit upon the idea of constructing a cone, with a base bigger than any of the hole, and an apex that was sharp enough to fit the tiniest pin-prick in the board. At last he had solved his problem; he had found one object which would fit all the holes in his great board.

So it was with man. At first he found himself confronted with single, isolated situations, and he made laws to take care of them; but as man grew older, the situations became more numerous, of varying importance. He had multitudes of laws, as anyone reading the first few books of the Bible can see. Some of these laws began to wear out, some were lost, and others were broken. Then came Jesus, with the great single principle of Love and Service . . . a single principle which took the place of the petty laws, and fitted each situation, no matter how trivial or how important.

The principle of the Second Mile is one expression of this great ideal of Love

Suppose we start at home. The principle of the second mile, although it is fundamentally great, should not be neglected in the trivialities of life. It should be seen every day in the relationships of the home. It would mean that when the man asked his wife to sew a button on his shirt, she might look over his other clothes also. It would mean that the husband would not only eat his wife's cooking without comparing it to his mother's, but that he might now and then wipe the dishes as well. And the daughter will not only sweep the front porch when requested, but will clean the back porch, too. When the father asks a son to wash the car windows, he might well give the entire car a bath. The happy home is built on the principle of sacrificing love . . . on the principle of the second mile. I think that you are all in agreement. Home is the place for such services. But outside the home? In business?

Do you remember J. Pierpont Morgan's observation in the recent income tax investigations? Very cleverly, Mr. Morgan's lawyers had sought and found loopholes in the federal laws regulating income taxes. Through clever handling, Mr. Morgan kept his own pockets full of huge sums of money which the government regarded as its own. When the ethical side of the affair was raised, Mr. Morgan boomed forth that this was business, and that ethics had nothing whatsoever to do with it. If the government was stupid enough to leave its income tax laws vulnerable, and he was smart enough to escape through them, that was his good fortune.

I worked one summer at a tourist hotel. For a time I was clerk. While I was there the manager gave me all kinds of good advice on how to make guests happy . . . how to smile at them, how never to argue with them, how to do the little courtesies which delight them. Was this because the hotel manager was a friend to man? No. I never saw a more complete misanthropist in my life. He seemed to hate his guests; the help he overworked and underpaid. His only interest was parting guests from their dollars, and courtesy was one of its best crowbars.

Christian service is founded in an intense interest in the problem of other people. One day a freshman went to President Elliot's office to borrow fifty dollars from the Student's Loan Fund. The loan was granted. "Then I made my heartfelt thanks and started to leave," said the Freshman, "when President Elliott said, 'pray be seated.' Then he proceeded, to my amazement, to say in effect: 'I am told that you cook and eat in your room. Now I don't think that is at all bad for you if you get the right food and enough of it. When I was in college, I did the same. Did you ever make veal loaf? That, if made sufficiently mature and sufficiently cooked veal, is one of the best things you could have, because there is no waste. This is the way I used to make it.' He then told me how to pick the veal, how to cook it slowly, with such evaporation that the soup would turn to jelly later, then how to cut it up and press it with one pan in side another and eat it cold" President Elliot was a very busy man. His time was valuable. He had to go the first mile when he consented to interview the student concerning the fifty-dollar loan; but he won a sincere friend and admirer when he went the second mile and told the Freshman how to make veal loaf.

But our text is this: "Whosoever shall compel thee to go with him a mile, go with him twain." At another time Jesus said: "If ye love them which love you, what reward have ye? Do not even the publicans the same?"

Dr. Henry C. Link, a prominent psychologist, tells of a young woman who came to him with her problem.

Dr. Link explained that her inadequacy with people she liked was due to her failure to practice friendliness with people she did not like. Dr. Link advised her to accept every invitation she received during the next six weeks and then to report her experiences. Three days later she called Dr. Link on the telephone and asked: "Did you really mean that I should accept any invitation?"

"Certainly, I meant just that. Why?"

"Well," she said, "a young man has invited me to dinner and to the movies, and I don't think I ought to accept."

"Why not? Is he a criminal? Has he been in jail? Does he mistreat his mother? Is he a gangster? Is he out of a job?" To these and a few more questions, the replies were all favorable.

"Then, what is wrong with him?"

The explanation was that he was not very well educated, was not too perfect in his English, was only an auto mechanic, and was a little uncouth.

"Perfect!" was Dr. Link's reply. "Suppose you try to make this young man's evening as pleasant for him as you can. Since you have nothing to lose, it should be easier for you to practice being a good companion. You are bound to learn something from this experiment which will help you to be a better friend in the next. Call it self-sacrifice if you will, but the ability to make and to hold friends comes in another way."

Thus we see that the principle of going the second mile is one which fits

The Orphanage
CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

The farm work at the Christian Orphanage is moving along very nicely. We have been able to can over a thousand gallon cans of tomatoes; and also have begun to cure and put up soy bean hay. Our silage corn will be ready to be cut in another week. We have nearly a hundred acres of hay to cut, cure and store away for the winter. A hundred and twenty-five tons of silage feed to handle makes a mountain of work ahead of us for the next six weeks.

In addition to our farm work, we have two car-loads of coal coming in which will have to be unloaded and hauled to the different buildings. Since so many of the larger boys have gone out of the institution this summer, it makes it mighty hard on the ones who are left; since almost all of the boys now in the institution are rather young for this type of work.

In order to handle our crop of hay, we decided it was necessary and almost compulsory to purchase a hay loader, a piece of machinery that we have been needing for a long time but felt that we were not able to buy it; however, necessity forced us to it.

The weather has been very pretty for the type of farm work that we have been doing and it makes it very encouraging to us.

Our financial report brings us up to $9,612.19 this week. We had hoped very much that the month of August would run us up to $10,000, but unless some unforeseen offering comes in soon, I'm afraid that we will not reach it. This would make us half-way to our yearly goal. We hope that our churches and Sunday schools will see to it that we reach this by September 1st.

men. Drop into the Friday night meeting sometime and meet those men. They are flesh and blood, as we are, and more—they are filled with the Spirit of Christ.

Must I go on empty-handed,
Must I meet my Saviour so?
Not one soul with which to greet Him,
Must I empty-handed go?

It is up to our pastors to teach and of our churches to go forth prayerfully into the highways and hedges, and by their very persuasive urgency bring the lost to Christ.

In Memoriam

DR. P. H. FLEMING.

Desirous of giving expression to both her deep sorrow at his death and her profound appreciation of his character and works, the First Christian Church, Burlington, N. C., authorizes this statement of sympathy and recognition to be spread upon the minutes of the Church and copies sent to the Christian Sun for publication and to the family for its comfort.

As he lived so he died; quietly, peacefully in the faith. In his death the family lost a devoted and kindly father, the state a righteous citizen and a useful official, and the Church a noble son and sacrificial minister.

Saintliness characterized Dr. Fleming. The qualities of a true consecration, the ideals of a firmly established faith and the beauties of the presence of God graced him and made holy his quiet but effective ministry.

In Alamance County as Director of Relief, in the local Churches of his pastorate as minister, in the Conference and Convention as official, he served faithfully and constructively. His long life was a procession of years of consecrated service and faithful labors in behalf of his fellow men and for his God; both of whom he loved with the love of a knowledge of Jesus Christ as Redeemer and Lord.

As pastor of the First Christian Church of Burlington he served at a strategic hour in the history of the Church and under his wise counsels and gracious ministry the Church prospered and grew, and foundations were set upon which the progress and development later realized were built.

HOLLAND.

On June 7, 1937, it was God's will to call from our midst Mrs. Lucy Piland Holland, a loyal and ever-ready helper of the Woman's Missionary Society of Holy Neck Christian Church. Her death deprives not only this society but her church and the entire community of a loyal friend. We know that God doeth all things for our good, therefore in the going of our friend and co-worker we bow in humble submission to the will of our Heavenly Father.

Therefore be it resolved:

1. That we are thankful for the remembrance of her devotion and cherish the memory of her faithful service.

2. That in her death we have lost a most valuable member, one who was generous in her giving, untiring in her efforts, and a fine Christian character.

3. That we extend to her family our sincere sympathy and commend them to our loving Father's care.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy to "The Christian Sun" for publication, and a copy be entered on the records of our society.

THE NEW ELON COACH.

In mid-summer Coach D. C. Walker, who has been coaching athletics at Elon College for the past ten years resigned to accept the position as head coach of Wake Forest College. The executive committee of the Board of Trustees, on recommendation of the committee on Faculty Budget, elected Mr. Horace Hendrickson of Duke University as Head Coach to succeed Coach Walker. Coach Walker has rendered most efficient service, and we are grateful for what he has done for Elon. However, we feel that we have been most fortunate in his successor.

Mr. Hendrickson was a star player on Duke University teams for three years. Coach Wallace Wade declares that Mr. Hendrickson is the most brilliant quarterback that he has ever had the privilege of coaching. Mr. Hendrickson's abilities and personal qualifications were of such that Duke retained him as freshman coach for the past three years. In addition to his football activities, he played varsity baseball and basketball at Duke University. He has served as assistant varsity basketball coach for the past three years. In addition to his coaching experiences, he has been one of the principal factors in the intramural sports program on the Duke campus.

Personally, Mr. Hendrickson is a man of clean habits, high ideals, and strong convictions. We are anticipating the continuance of an excellent program of campus and intercollegiate sports as a part of the work at Elon College, and it is a pleasure to present Mr. Hendrickson to the admirers and supporters of Elon College. He certainly understands college sports and has sufficient experience and force of character to execute such programs.

What rejoicing, what wonder, what exaltation would come to your house if the Lord were to arrive there in the flesh, to be your guest! That can not be, but something better than that can be. The Saviour may dwell in your heart through faith.

Thus He can come much closer to you than He came to Mary and Martha and Lazarus. Thus His very soul can make contact with your soul, and "spirit with spirit will meet."

Faith is the agency through which this marvel is accomplished, this infinite blessing is gained. How earnestly we should strive to increase our faith! How persistently we should struggle against whatever diminishes it! For faith is the vehicle which brings the heavenly Guest.

Prayer—Our Saviour, we can not live happily or worthily without Thee. Thou wilt enter, and all glory enters with Thee. Even so, come, Lord Jesus. Amen.

both the large situation and the trivial. I have cited comparatively trivial instances because they are more common. This principle is not spectacular. Perhaps if it were it would really be less important. But it does enter into our daily lives, and should be a vital factor in our relationships with our friends, with our family, with our business associates, yes . . . and with those whom we dislike.

A REAL MAN

By DR. FRANK CRANE

You may never get to be President of the United States, son; you may never be head of a big business and sit at a mahogany desk and clip coupons; you may never be a hero in a war or a fad in literature; but you can be greater than any of these, you can be a Real Man.

And the beauty of it is that, in regard to this one important attainment in the world, you actually have the whole matter in your hands. You can be a Real Man if you wish. Nobody can stop you. Heredity cannot trip you. And the circumstances in which you are placed make not the slightest difference.

There's a chance and luck in everything; in everything but one. You can be a Real Man if you want to hard enough, and all hell, and heredity, bad luck and misfortune cannot defeat you.

Isn't it a comforting thing to know that there is one thing in this world that's a certainty? And isn't it doubly heartening to feel that this one thing is the greatest and most worth while of all things?

What is a Real Man?

A Real Man is a man who honestly tries to live up to the best he knows. That's all. You see, its simple. Like all great things of life, it is plain as a pikestaff.

Just to know what is best is not enough; many a cad and coward knows; but he doesn't do it. And to feel, to realize, to appreciate, to love the best, does not signify that you are a Real Man. Many a drunkard and many a profligate is a mighty feeler.

A Real Man is one who responds nobly to circumstances. The harder the knocks, the more discouraging the situation, the brighter he shines. A Real Man respects himself. Self-reverence comes very close to God-reverence. A Real Man has certain personal sanctities of body, of thought, of feeling; the fine flavor of reverence is always about him.

A Real Man is just as honest alone, in his own room, as he is in public. A Real Man is loyal to his friend and guards his reputation as his own. A Real Man is dependable; his simple word is as good as his Bible oath.

A Real Man honors a woman, any woman, physically, morally. He sticks to his wife. He can be loyal, even when it becomes impossible to love.

A Real Man is glad to live and not afraid to die.

A Real Man is the finest, best, noblest, most refreshing thing to find on all the green earth, unless it be a Real Woman.

The Hands of Toil

Old hands that bear the mark of toiling with the centuries

Have come to rest, at last—
Rough, gnarled, twisted, weatherbeaten hands,
Hardened, wrinkled, warped,
Full of deep furrowed valleys
And high blue ridges,
Where Toil has chiseled deep
In merciless crudity of line.

Tired, faithful hands that have battled for earth's sustenance—

Yet underneath their rough exterior,
Such tender, soothing, understanding,
Compassionate hands they are;
Their clasp is a benediction.

Hands like these bear a silent, glorious witness
To duty conscientiously performed.
Some day they'll win
The Master-Workman's hard-earned tribute,
"In all things faithful!"
Beloved hands,
"Well done!"

PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

Churches that have had vacations will now be going back to their regular schedules. THE CHRISTIAN SUN wishes for each pastor and church a very successful fall and winter program.

First Church, Norfolk, had a camping party on the beach last week. Thirty-one members of the church, mostly young people, shared in the three-day camp at the Y. M. C. A. Camp. They liked it so well that they are going to go again next year.

Berea (Norfolk) Christian Church is in the midst of a revival meeting with Rev. Jesse H. Dollar, pastor of our Newport News Church, assisting the pastor, Rev. Joe A. French. Services began last Sunday and will probably continue for another week with a service each evening beginning at 7:30 o'clock.

Rev. W. A. Redfield, former principal of the Pleasant Hill Academy, Pleasant Hill, Tennessee, paid THE SUN office a pleasure call recently as he and his family were on their way to Marion, Alabama, where he is to be principal of one of our schools there. They have been sightseeing in Virginia after spending some time in summer schools of leadership training.

Leadership training schools are being planned for Norfolk, Suffolk and Wakefield. Newport News and Lynchburg join in community schools. The Board of Christian Education is eager to help any local church or groups of churches in planning for a leadership training school this fall. Requests for help should be sent to the Board at 514 South Main Street, Norfolk, Virginia.

Mrs. Nellie C. Poulson died suddenly at her home in Portsmouth, August 23rd. Mrs. Poulson was the wife of Rev. W. S. Poulson, pastor of the Shelton (First Congregational) Church. Funeral services were conducted at the Shelton Church by the Rev. Robert Lee House, assisted by Dr. Charles Eldred Shelton, pastor emeritus of the church. Mrs. Poulson was a capable woman in her church and community and was affectionately known as "Mother Poulson."

The Norfolk newspapers last carried the announcement that Rev. Aubrey C. Todd and Miss Dorothy A. Grigsby are to be married at Chattanooga, Tennessee, the home of the bride, on September 21st, with Rev. M. J. Sweet officiating. After the ceremony the happy couple are to visit in the home of the groom in South Norfolk, Virginia, and will later study in Chicago University. Their many friends of THE CHRISTIAN SUN family will wish them much happiness and good success.

The last Sunday in September is the time for promotion in the Sunday school. On the first Sunday in October all pupils should go to their new classes and be ready to start on the new year's work. Officers and teachers can do much for Christian education by properly grading and promoting pupils. The beginning of the new school year is also the opportune time to consider new literature. Our own Church publishes such a variety that surely every church can find its need met by the Christian Publishing Association, Dayton, Ohio, or the Pilgrim Press at 14 Beacon St., Boston, Massachusetts. The Board of Christian Education is eager to counsel with other churches concerning promotion and Rally Day literature and other problems. The Board has some literature suitable for use which it can lend.

NEW LEBANON CHURCH.

The revival at New Lebanon Christian Church near Reidsville, North Carolina, was held in July, beginning the second Sunday and continuing through the week, closing on Friday night. Sunday morning Earl F. Dodson, a local minister under appointment as a missionary to Brazil, brought the message, which was a real feast to all. In the afternoon Rev. O. A. Elmore of Carroll County, Virginia, our mountain worker, came and preached in the afternoon and throughout the week. Rev. Elmore is a good man and brought to our people some real gospel messages. The church was really blessed. There were many progressions and rededications; fifteen new members were added. This was a week well spent in the service of our Master.

Rev. J. L. Neese, our pastor for the past six years, has already been called to serve us for another conference year. During these six years our church has continued to grow. We are indeed fortunate in being privileged to have one so deeply interested in the services of our Lord. For all that we have accomplished we give thanks unto our Saviour and go forward into a new year anxious to do more in the vineyard of our Lord.

CONSTITUTION DAY THIS YEAR.

It is both a paradox and a tribute that in this, the 150th year since the signing of the Constitution, it should be undergoing its most severe test. A paradox because while an officially created government sesquicentennial commission seeks to rekindle a devotion to the Constitution, others seek to prostitute it to their own grasping for power. A tribute because it has stood for 150 years in defiance of all attacks.

One of the most common and insidious attacks has been that the Constitution is being used by a minority of the people to defeat the will of the majority. But, as a matter of fact, protection for the minority is and has been the heart and soul of the Constitution.

Those who wrote the great document had history behind them. And they knew that majorities could always take care of themselves, because they were the most numerous. The Constitution was intended to prevent this majority from riding roughshod over their weaker brethren. The Bill of Rights was added to strengthen this protection. The Constitutional Amendment was provided to permit the will of the many to prevail.

Thus, so long as the Constitution stands, there can never be persecution of any religious group or other minority, by the majority. The minority can speak its mind publicly without fear of arrest and imprisonment. Property can not be taken from the humblest or the richest citizen.

September 17th this year will mark the anniversary of something more than just another historic occasion.

KINDNESS PAYS DIVIDENDS.

Beware of easy ways to progress. During your lifetime you will see many false prophets, hear many offers of something-for-nothing. Maybe somewhere there is another path to quick success. But whenever any such a way is offered to you, ask yourself one simple question: "Whom will it harm?"

Remember that your security and your progress often depend on how well others succeed.

Through those long years behind us it was invariably the man who tried to profit by harming others who found himself losing what he had hoped to gain.—Contributed.

MASSANETTA CONFERENCE CLOSES.

The series of eleven inspiring Conferences at Massanetta Springs, Virginia came to a close Sunday night August 29th, with the impressive Peace Drama, following a program of addresses and special music long to be remembered in the illustrious annals of the famous Bible Conference.

Large crowds heard such speakers as Dr. John A. Mackay, President of Princeton Theological Seminary, Dr. Wm. Evans, one of the ablest Bible teachers in America, Rev. Peter Marshall, pastor-elect of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, Washington, D. C., and Wyatt Larrimore, once the "king" of gambling and bootlegging interests in his state. The large audiences were inspired by the beautiful singing of Mrs. LoRean Hodapp and the members of the Westminster Quartet under the direction of Dr. John Finley Williamson. They sat enrapt as the mammoth Peace Pageant was unfolded before their eyes last night by the the 200 characters and singers. It was declared by many to be a day of great privilege and high resolve, when hundreds made a rededication of their lives to the Master and His work.

It was estimated that there had been on the Massanetta grounds this summer 4,000 young people for a period of a week, and a total attendance of approximately 70,000. There have been, during the past sixteen years over three-quarters of a million people attending the various Conferences. There have been a large number of professions of faith and thousands and thousands of reconsecrations and life dedications. "As its name dedicates," says Dr. Hudson, the Conference Manager, "Massanetta is a 'place of vision' and has become sacred soil."

The great Bible Conference this year was declared to be the most effective in point of program, personnel of the speakers and attendance, of any put on during the past sixteen years. There was manifested a deeper spirit of consecration and life dedication than ever before.

Dr. John A. Mackay, President of Princeton Theological Seminary, spoke on the "Parable of the Sower." "The most crucial moment in a man's life," he declared, "is when he is confronted with a great truth." Taking the varieties of soil given by the Divine Teacher as illustrations of the souls of men, he stated, "Truth is the revealer of souls, as seed reveals soils. Here are seen the unrecovering of souls by the Word and the attitude toward it. Repentance is making God the center of life, when heretofore the center has been self. Description of the souls of men who listen to the Word, we find the insensitive, hardened by sinful, selfish habits; the shallow souls, with certain personal reservations; the divided soul, most characteristic of all in modern life today, needing the 'centrality of Christ' to bring all disturbing loyalties under one loyalty; and the good soul, prepared for a rich reception of the Word."

Dr. Wm. Evans, outstanding Bible teacher, in speaking on the subject of "Prayer," stated, "Prayer is possible because of the revelation of God which Jesus brought to the world. He spoke of God as being Almighty—One with whom nothing is impossible. What

OUR PRAYER.

By REV. EVERETT LESHER.

O Divine Redeemer, in whose fellowship all things receive their meaning and function in this Sabbath quiet we yield ourselves to Thee. Show Thyself unto our souls, and fill every corner there with the comfort of Thy glory. Rouse and shake off our sloth; increase and blow up the flame of devotion within us; awaken the spirit of expectancy that miracles of grace may make us rich in virtue and fruitful in good works. Come, Heavenly Gift, descend upon us and let Thy completion surround our incompleteness, Thy perfection surround our imperfection.

This alone is sufficient for us, this our sure defense. No temptation shall confound us, no calamity shall dismay us so long as Thou dost encompass us. Thy presence alone is our strength and courage, our wisdom and perfection, our teacher of truth, our solace in trouble, our resolver of doubts, our balm for life's wounds, our banisher of fear, the spring that washes and purges our polluted consciences. We are fit for nothing, useless and unprofitable, apart from Thee. Be pleased, therefore, O Lord God, to give us evermore of Thyself that we may abound in all things excellent and be forever worthy of eternal life and happiness. Amen.

we call the 'laws of nature' are not chains binding God. They are servants doing His will; and He will make use of them, if necessary, when He wants to answer the prayers of His children. Even men can so utilize the laws of nature to their own purposes and do things which seem contrary to these laws. It is the nature of water to run down hill, but we can get water on the one hundredth floor of a modern building, so it must go up hill in some way. We are told that according to 'natural law' nothing heavier than air can stay up. But the heavy bombing plane does. We are told that according to law nothing heavier than water can float, but the 'Queen Mary' with her seventy-five thousand tons, floats all right. We may say that all this is because man now understands the 'laws of nature' and can utilize them for the good of man. True; but do you mean that God cannot do what mere man can do? Get a bigger God, my friend!"

Sunday afternoon, Wyatt Larrimore, of Chattanooga, Tennessee, from the National Men's Evangelistic Clubs, and brought to Massanetta by the Evangelistic Clubs of Virginia, spoke to a packed auditorium. Mr. Larrimore was converted five years ago. Formerly the boss gambler and bootlegger of the South, through the prayers of his little daughter and the invitation of an evangelist, he gave his heart to God. Today he is Chaplain of Hamilton County.

He laid down a fortune of two hundred thousand dollars when he turned from the world to God.

Rev. Peter Marshall, of Washington, closed the auditorium program Sunday night with a sermon on, "Trumpeters for God." Mr. Marshall who is one of the new lights on the religious horizon of this country, said, "Something has gone far wrong in our world. Terrible things are happening. We need a tremendous gospel to meet a tremendous need. It is not the Sermon on the Mount that will save us, but the sacrifice on the hill."

Protestant pastors locked horns again with the National Socialist regime when the Prussian Brotherhood Council issued instructions not to obey two ordinances issued by the Reich Ministry of the Interior. One of these ordinances forbade collections without official permission. The other prohibited reading out the names of those who have left the church. A writer in the New York Times explains: "The ordinances in themselves were not all-important. Money for the synods can in fact be found without taking up formal collections. It is not essential that names of those who abandon the church be read from the pulpit. The question is one principle. The issue is one that every German tries to avoid as long as possible. It is, namely, the issue of where the limits of the State's authority are to be found." Several oppositional pastors were arrested for defiance of these edicts, but the struggle goes on with no evidence that either the Protestant clergy or the Catholic priesthood is in the least terrified or intimidated by the threat or experience of persecution for conscience sake.

The smallest actual good is better than the most magnificent promises of impossibilities.—Macaulay.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgement and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

IT IS GOOD TO BE HOME.

The mountains may lure one from the seashore and the seashore call one from the hills for a time of rest and renewal, but home is the best place one can be. A vacation is enticing and helpful but happy are those who are permitted to turn again home to the regular tasks, the daily grind and the work that means life. Your editor has had his stay away among friends and relatives. In the mountains and by the sea he rested and relaxed and is now happy to be back for regular routine work with the church, the Board of Christian Education, and "The Christian Sun" to call forth the best that he may have in the way of wisdom and ability to serve. Home among friends with plenty to do—that is the best heaven earth has to offer.

THE CHURCH AND LABORERS.

Labor Day next Monday reminds us that there are workers in fields, mines and factories. It should also remind us that there are workers in schools and offices. The artist toiling at his task in a studio is as worthy a worker as the man digging coal in the mine. The teacher of a class who does his job well labors no less than the man who runs a machine in a factory. The employer often works longer hours and carries greater responsibility than do those whom he employs. Even an humble editor at his desk is likely to spend more units of energy than the farmer does in his fields. It is easy for those in one group to believe that those of another group have the advantage. As the poet has said:

It's natchurl enough, I guess,
When some gits more and some gits less,
Fer them-uns on the slimmest side
To claim it ain't a fare divide.

But it must be borne in mind that workers are found in all stations of life from those in the humblest hovel to those who live in a mansion.

The past year has seen considerable conflict in the realm of organized labor. The organization itself has been torn apart and a new leader seemingly determined to replace those of longer standing and apparently of greater wisdom. This aggressive branch of labor has introduced a new weapon of warfare—the sit-down strike. Those who know the facts must evaluate the success or failure of the C. I. O. But surely it is permissible for one who only looks on from the outside to say that strikes are industrial war and that taking possession of a manufacturing plant so that the owner can not operate it is not within the realm of right. It can be justified only as war is justified.

There is considerable debate as to the position the Church should take when labor and capital are not agreed and when industrial war breaks out. It seems to be logical to believe that the Church should always take the side of right and peace. Certainly every man who toils honestly is entitled to a fair and living wage. The Church should stand for this right and remind employers of their duty toward those employed. It seems to be obviously as true that the employed should give honest labor and try to cooperate with the employer in the accomplishment of the task to be done by both employer and employee. It is as much the duty of a renter to care for property rented as it is for the owner to furnish good living quarters for the renter. These rights and duties the Church should stand for to the best of its knowledge and ability. The Head of the Church, Jesus, has been called the Prince of Peace and His methods were the methods of peace. Hence, it seems to be reasonable to believe that the Church should stand for peaceful settlement of all economic relations.

The Church is composed of workers. Some of them work for other people, some for themselves, and some direct the labors of others. The Church can not be composed of those who will not work. It takes work to carry on the Church itself. The Master was a worker and those who will not work have no place among the followers of Jesus. Only a few of them ever get into the Church and they are quite uncomfortable. Regardless of what type of work the individual may do for a livelihood it still remains that they are all workers and should be friends without class distinction. This group of cooperative workers can probably do its best service in the economic realm by constantly promoting the ideals of Jesus concerning the dignity of work itself, the necessity for honest effort and the equal rights of all mankind. If these ideals are maintained in the Church relations and promoted by Church members in their industrial contacts it is safe to believe that industrial problems will become less acute as the years come and go.

WHY CONFERENCES?

Some members of local churches seem to feel no responsibility whatever for the conferences. They do not care to attend the annual sessions of conference, neither do they wish to make contributions either to the conference itself or the institutions promoted by the conference. If the ideals of these persons were to prevail there would be no conference and no conference institutions. Why then do we have conferences?

Certainly not simply to impose a burden upon local churches. The reason for the Christian Orphanage is not that Sunday schools may be imposed upon by asking for a monthly offering, but rather that the churches cooperatively may furnish a home to the children who would not otherwise have it. Jesus talked about teaching the world the way of life and our church has established colleges in which to do the teaching and elected boards of education to direct religious training in local churches and larger groups. The Master commissioned disciples to bear his message to (Continued on page 7.)

LABOR SUNDAY MESSAGE, 1937.

[Issued by the executive Committee of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, through its department of the Church and Social Service.]

On this Labor Sunday, dedicated to a consideration of the meaning of the Christian Gospel for our industrial life, we remind ourselves of the spiritual insight of the prophets of Israel who saw that the God who rules the universe is also the God of justice in human affairs. God, as revealed in the Bible, calls us to share in His concern for all. As Jeremiah said of King Josiah, "He judged the cause of the poor and needy; then it was well. Was this not to know me? saith the Lord."

On this day we remind ourselves also of the compassion of Christ for the poor and disinherited. That compassion, in a day when poverty was inevitable, becomes for us in our day, when poverty can be abolished, a demand for justice in the distribution of the product of industry. From the perspective of Christianity it is intolerable that masses of men, women, and children should be denied the opportunities which comfortable people regard as necessities. God did not create wage-earners to be mere instruments for the making of money for others; the welfare of all must be inherent in the end for which all the processes of production and distribution are carried on.

Religious Significance of Labor Relations.

It is because of the concern of religion for justice and for social welfare that church bodies have for thirty years officially declared for the right of employees as well as employers to organize. Back of these declarations has lain a conviction of the sacredness of human personality and of the dignity of the common man, which is born of the teaching of Jesus that all men are children of God. Such a belief issues in a demand for democracy, both in political and industrial relations. This leads to the organization of workers in order that they may have a recognized voice in determining the conditions under which they live and work. Experience has shown that since industry is often organized on a national or even wider basis, labor unions of corresponding scope are needed if workers are to be adequately represented in truly democratic relations, and if industry-wide standards are to be maintained.

Many industries in this country have been organized over a long period of years. It has been demonstrated that it is possible for organized employers and organized employees to maintain harmonious relations, and to adjust their differences through joint conciliation without recourse to strikes or lockouts during the terms of their contracts. The past year has been marked by a significant advance in wider organization of workers. Of great importance was the evidence of industrial statesmanship on the part of a great steel corporation which

A PRAYER FOR LABOR*

O God, Thou art Thyself the Master Workman, skilled Creator. Hast Thou not revealed Thyself to us in Jesus the Carpenter, whose roughened hands bear eternal testimony to the dignity of toil?

We sense Thy presence in the labor movement, in the upward surge of the masses, who with the awakened self-respect of children of God, have through the centuries cast off the shackles of slavery and serfdom, and stand now gazing toward the dawn of a greater freedom.

We praise Thee for those two brave spirits who have led the way; who have dared to risk even their children's bread in organized endeavor to improve the lot of all; who for their unselfish devotion have been condemned as outcasts of society; suffered contumely; endured prison; sacrificed their lives as martyrs to the cause.

Help thou the labor movement of our day to be worthy of its heritage. Unite in high purpose the workers in the factory and on the farm. Preserve them from temptation to selfish complacency in partial gains for any favored craft or race or nation. Guard their leaders from lust for personal power. Guide them in the service of the common good.

Help the workers of all lands to stand shoulder to shoulder for justice and peace among the nations. Save them from contamination with the sin of selfish nationalism. Keep them from supporting national armaments under the false illusion of providing work or special privilege for themselves, while they betray the workers of the world for a mess of pottage.

Grant to labor the wisdom to seek a world of peace and plenty by means of organization and the ballot, keeping their movement free from the hate and violence, building into the cooperative commonwealth those spiritual values which alone can make it endure.

Bring at last, all workers by hand or brain into world-wide brotherhood; into closer fellowship with Thee, O God, the Father of us all.

*From Prayers for Self and Society by James Myers—Association Press.

reached and agreement with a union without the necessity of a strike. The decision of the Supreme Court validating the National Labor Relations Act marks a wider and more far-reaching recognition in law of labor's right to organize and bargain collectively.

As yet only a minority of American workers are organized, and it must be recognized that annual wages of many skilled workers are still below a comfort level of living, while the wages in many industries, both urban and agricultural, are grossly inadequate for a decent standard of living for an American family. Many millions still can find no work. We are convinced, therefore, that thoughtful Christians will welcome the contemporary gains in status and economic welfare on the part of the labor as in line with the social ideals of Christianity.

In the growing complexity of society many of us have been so cut off from the lives of the industrial workers that we are tempted to think of them not as neighbors, not as persons whose welfare in this world is as important in the sight of God as our own, but as strange masses. While there are millions of wage-earners in our churches, yet many of our congregations have drawn their membership, by reason of location and association, chiefly from the more comfortable middle classes. Many church members see the world from a point of view quiet different from the point of view of the laboring masses. As a result of belonging to a class that is relatively secure, many of us tend to fear the very social changes which we should welcome because of the ethical demands of our Christian faith. While protesting against anything that accentuates class consciousness, we fail to realize that our own point of view is largely controlled by the bias of class. Our first need is for self-knowledge and repentance, and sincere desire that the same mind may be in us which was in Christ Jesus who counted not privilege and power as things to be grasped, but emptied Himself in the service of man.

Wider Issues Involved.

There are many parties to industry. The demand of the hour is for greater tolerance, understanding and fair play among them. Voices have been raised among employers urging modification of the older attitudes of many toward organized labor. Leaders of labor should realize that with increasing power, the labor movement must accept greater responsibility, not only filling its traditional ideal of a fair day's work for a fair day's pay, but also taking a broad view of the economic scene as a whole. The achievement of increasing industrial wages alone will not solve the total problem. A balance between agriculture and industry must be attained. Prices to consumers must be taken into account. Labor and consumers in many countries have been quick to grasp the advantages of consumers' cooperation as a vital part of the movement toward a better day.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

We returned from the Bible Conference at Massanetta Springs, yesterday (Aug. 27th). It was a great privilege to spend two weeks of our vacation in this Bible School. This writer gained five pounds in weight, added much to his mental storehouse and had the inspiration of a fellowship spiritually uplifting. We have attended this Bible Conference for ten consecutive sessions and reservation has been made for next year.

One comes home from such a Conference with mingled feelings of joy and deep anxiety. The fellowship makes one's heart glad. But the larger outlook upon life intensifies the realization of opportunity and responsibility. One faces tomorrow. For tomorrow one will go into the pulpit again. Church members will be present. Hungry hearts and tempted souls will need the comfort and strength. Unsaved sinners may sit before the preacher and scan his message for some ray of peace and hope. What can the minister offer to his congregation? Will his message and his life be equal to the occasion and adequate to the needs of his hearers?

What of tomorrow? That is the question. Thinking people are compelled to ponder over its meaning and consider the possible eventualities of the future. No man liveth unto himself and no day cometh alone. Every life is related to other lives and every day is the companion of the past and the forerunner of tomorrow. One would dare, if possible, to ask the present day about tomorrow? Are church members living in the high expectancy of a better tomorrow?

A survey of present conditions in the world is challenging to the faith of the followers of Jesus Christ. For a generation the church has been leisurely and lazily drifting with the tide. The days have been easy for many people in the church. But the tide has turned. War and greed and worldliness and luxury have arisen in their might and are united in their effort to overthrow the power of the church and wipe Christianity from the face of the earth. Governments are saying that the old idea of majority rule shall prevail. Autocracy is taking a part in this pagan theory of government. Democracy, in political government is based upon the rule of majority. Christianity is in the minority in every great nation of the earth. It stands for the protection of and uplift of the minority as well as the majority. Strange as it may seem Christianity must defend itself, in the near future, against the attack of democracy, autocracy and dictatorship throughout the world. Greed and selfishness should be more considerate of the power that has been seeking for twenty centuries to save the world.

Christianity should become more missionary in facing tomorrow. It should be the object of every pastor and every church member to cultivate the spirit of missions in every department of the local church. For the missionary spirit and objectives will be the salvation of the church and civilization in the great tomorrow of human destiny. Political leaders may remain neutral in time of world war. But church people cannot save themselves by being neutral to the plea for deeper spiritual life and intensive missionary effort for the world. The world of tomorrow calls for the consecration of life and service in the cause of world missions. There is no escape from foreign war. And there is no way out of the task of foreign missions. Pray for the church of tomorrow. Live for the people of tomorrow.

PLEDGING.

To pledge or not to pledge seems to be the question with many Christians. When approached for support of the Church, her institutions and enterprises, to the answer often given is, "I never pledge. I don't believe in pledging. If I should pledge, I might be unable to keep it, so I prefer to give as I can," and this is advanced as an evidence of Christian honesty and personal consecration.

Does not the Christian life begin with a pledge? Are we not commanded to do certain things with the assurance that when we do, God will in turn vouchsafe certain blessings to us? The Christian life can begin with nothing less than the pledging of oneself. Are the earnings of an individual more sacred and to be guarded more safely than the individual himself? Which is worth the more, the man or his money? If he can give himself to God, cannot he at the same time divide his living, and since the giving of self involves pledging, can we not have the courage to pledge our money? If we will look back over the years that we have lived the chances are that we will discover that pledges have been the risers in the stairway by which we have reached our present station in life. In all probability we began by obliging ourselves to someone older than we who had already attained a measure of success in life. Having experienced the pleasures of success in a small way, we venture a bit farther, increasing our liabilities and pledging our all as security. Now a great many people have been declared success in life because of individual achievements and monetary accumulations, neither of which could have been attained had it not been for the pledging and individual integrity back of the pledging.

Whenever we make a purchase of any kind without paying in full, we pledge to complete the payments. When we insure against loss by fire, the policy is of value because of our pledge. When we take out a life insurance policy we pledge the company issuing that policy certain annual payments. To maintain our vitality and safeguard our health, we pledge ourselves to nourish our bodies. Our entire existence is due to trust, either voluntarily or involuntarily made. Trust involves pledging. If God should withdraw His pledges to us, life could not continue. Why should a Christian man or woman hesitate to pledge himself and a legitimate part of his earnings for the support of the cause of righteousness in the earth and the ongoing of Christ's kingdom.

It won't be long now before local churches will be confronted with the responsibility of making up a budget of expenses and of work for the ensuing conference year. When these budgets are completed, it is usually the custom for the church, in an official way, to approach individual members for definite pledges in order that the local church's budget may be assured. Can't we go a step farther and put ourselves on the plane of faith, facing the requirements of our church for advanced service, pledging to the extent of our abilities, God being our helper, to give a definite portion of our time and a specific part of our income, not only as an expression of our gratitude but as an evidence of our faith in the goodness and generosity of God Himself. Those who, by faith, have put God to the test, have seldom been disappointed.

"Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse . . . and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it."

L. E. SMITH.

WHY CONFERENCES?

the ends of the earth and make disciples of all the nations. Hence, the churches have mission boards to carry out this commission of the Christ. So it goes with all the organizations and institutions of the Church. The conference does not undertake to impose burdens heavy to be borne. It is not an outside organization dictating policies within local churches.

On the contrary the conference is composed of delegates from local churches who come together for fellowship, inspiration, personal help and to work together to do that which the local church can not do. Not many churches could establish an orphanage and run it successfully. Neither could they send out their own missionaries and support them adequately. Certainly they could not publish their own literature and run their own college. These things are best done cooperatively. For these reasons we have our conferences and the conferences decide on the type of thing that shall be done together.

It is only reasonable, therefore, to expect that every church endeavor honestly to carry out the plans formulated by conference. Delegates should be elected who will attend the sessions of conference and share in the discussions and vote. Conference apportionments should be paid in full in so far as it is reasonably possible to do so. This should be considered a privileged rather than imposition. Taken item by item it is not much that any church is asked to do. THE CHRISTIAN SUN, therefore, sincerely hopes that the coming conferences in the Southern Convention will be well attended, that the progress will be stimulating, and that financial reports will be such as to do honor to the local churches and make possible future progress in the institutions of the Church.

LABOR DAY.

Jesus, thou divine companion,
By thy lowly human birth,
Thou hast come to join the workers,
Burden bearers of the earth.

They who tread the path of labor
Follow where thy feet have trod.
They who work without complaining
Do the holy will of God.

Jesus, thou divine companion,
Help us all to work our best.
Bless us in our daily labor,
Lead us to our Sabbath rest.

—Henry Van Dyke.

THE RIGHT TO WORK.
A THOUGHT FOR LABOR DAY.

Recent activities of John L. Lewis and his Committee for Industrial Organization have developed some queer incidents. At one point a group of girls of the Mennonite Sect, who were prevented by their religion from joining a union, were told that as long as they paid their dues they need not belong to the union.

At Hazelton, Pennsylvania, 1,137 of the 1,425 employees of a silk company, where a strike had been forced through violence, presented a petition to the mayor demanding the right to return to work with proper protection. And the United Mine Workers' local chapter, having to do with the silk industry but being the union of John L. Lewis, replied with a full page newspaper ad. One paragraph read as follows:

"Any member of the United Mine Workers' who has a wife, daughter, sister, brother or son, who is a signer of this petition should, and will pay strict attention to this statement, for on it depends his membership in the United Mine Workers of America. This organization will not permit any of its members to continue to hold memberships, who allows any member of his family to scab in an open shop, such as the Duplan Silk Mill. Let every mine worker beware, for he will not be allowed to enter any mine or colliery if he permits any member of his family to return to work in the Duplan Silk Mill, unless signed by a legitimate labor organization."

Can this be America in which we live?—Exchange.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

DR. RAWLINSON OF CHINA IS WAR CASUALTY.

[Note: This article is of special interest to our "Christian Sun" fairly because Dr. Rawlinson visited many of our churches last fall.]

The madness and tragedy of war are epitomized in the death from a Chinese bomb last Saturday in Shanghai of Dr Frank J. Rawlinson, editor of the "Chinese Recorder," and leading missionary to China for more than thirty years, and Robert Karl Reischauer, born and reared in Japan and a lecturer in Japanese subjects at Princeton University. There is a certain ghastly appropriateness in the fact of the first three American casualties of the Sino-Japanese war one should be a distinguished and devoted friend of China, and another an almost equally distinguished and devoted lover of Japan. That the bomb was dropped by accident—whether because the aim of the pilot was defective or because he had been wounded and his plane damaged—only adds to the irony of the tragic episode. It is doubtful where Frank Rawlinson will be more deeply mourned here or in the land which he had so thoroughly adopted as his own. He had become from every point of view one of the most useful men in China. A missionary first of the Southern Baptist Church and later, when that church dismissed him because of his refusal to work within rigid denominational lines, of the American Board, he was an impressive example of all that a missionary should be. He was a scholar in no respect inferior to Robert Morrison and Timothy Richards and "other giants of the old days" among missionaries in China, but Rawlinson's scholarship was of the sort that kept him in close touch with the life of the Chinese nation and aware of and informed about her problems. His article, which it is our privilege to present in this issue, reveals the fineness of his great sympathy with a struggling people and the firmness of his grasp upon the service which the Christian Church may hope to render to it. When "The Christian Century" first set up its staff of news correspondents, it turned to Frank Rawlinson as the man ideally fitted to be its representative in China, and this paper suffers a direct and irremediate loss in his death.

BEYOND THE HILLS.

For two weeks now we have been in a Vacation Bible School at Elk Spur, also at Rockyford and Ivy Hill. Miss Edna Fulcher and Miss Lillie Spain, both of Norfolk came to help with the schools. One hundred and eighteen have been enrolled this year and for "work time" in the hills this is good indeed. Wild berries were ripe and people had to harvest grain, too. There were those who could not come and we are sorry about them, but the school was a great help to all perhaps, for seeds sown here may spring up in unexpected places and in ways we least expect. Fortunately most of our school was young people or children.

Our pastor, Rev. Elmore, taught the adult class and as we dug into the Bible he lifted our minds from this earth and helped us to see beyond the hills. The Land that is fairer than day seemed nearer this earth, as little children sang praises to God.

Miss Fulcher had a hard time trying to teach me to select hymns that were more appropriate for the worship than the ones we had been using with so much in them about sin. It does seem sad indeed since I come to think on the subject, to have little sin-free children sing—"I was sinking deep in sin"—It suggests the wrong ideas to the young minds. The power of suggestion is mighty, we do know, still we don't take time to think and plan right suggestions and create an atmosphere in which people can worship at church. We come into the house of God and swing into some hymn that comes nearer filling our minds for another war rather than for quiet consecrated worship. I don't wonder that some denominations dance and yell in the church. They may use our hymn books. Of course these hymns are good in their place, but we get them out of place so much.

Then we had a very beautiful and inspiring climax for our Bible School Sunday, when about 35 people from Mt. Bethel Christian Church about 20 miles out from Reidsville, North Carolina came to give us a program. Mr. L. P. Rippey had charge of the program, which was filled with the spirit of Christian fellowship. Mr. Lester also of Bethel Church, brought a message and the others brought a message in song. Our old hills rang with the glory of God. I can't remember all the names of the visitors, but I do recall the Farrars as they had quartets and duets. Also Mr. Clayton who sang through almost everything and never did get tired. At the lunch hour there were singers scattered all over these hills. The older ones climbed part of the way up the hills, the younger ones climbed all the way to the top of the three thousand and a few thousand feet above sea level. One young man was like Jack who fell down; only this one didn't break his crown, but only tore his clothes I learned. Maybe he will tell you about it. I failed to get all the story. But it is tough to be in the Blue Ridge Mountains of Virginia with only one pair of trousers. However, I didn't get excited for I have seen lots of people with less than a whole suit on. There was a time that a fellow considered himself lucky if he was of the hills and had a whole pair of trousers, one suspender, red socks, brogans, and a hound dog. I guess the trouble with the young man from Mt. Bethel was, he was not of our hills and didn't understand quite how to take his fall.

But seriously we surely enjoyed having these friends come up and hope to see them again. We want to thank them for coming.

We also want to thank the teachers who came to hold our Bible School. Those who have made it possible for us to have the school have done more than can be summed up in a few words, and the teachers who gave themselves showed a wonderful spirit. May we be worthy of all that was done here. Lend your prayers for our workers here.

God bless you.

D. L. MOODY'S "RULES" FOR PRAYER MEETING.

Mr. Moody was a master of the means of holding the interest of his audience. Whether the audience was large or small he valued the attention of the last man. His dynamic personality, eagerness, and determination to be a faithful ambassador for Christ were calculated to rivet the attention of old and young. Something of the Moody technique is found in his published rules for conducting prayer meetings:

Begin and close punctually.

No prayer or remarks to exceed three minutes.

Not more than two prayers or addresses consecutively.

No tracts or papers to be distributed in the room.

No announcement of meetings to be made, directly or indirectly, except by the chairman, at his discretion.

No solicitation for money allowed.

HOLLAND.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Holland Christian Church observed its Silver Anniversary at its February meeting, at which time a very interesting program was presented by the program committee, with Mrs. G. G. Holland chairman. It consisted of the following program:

"Forward Through the Ages"—

Mrs. I. H. Luke.

"Twenty-five Years of growth and Service"—Mrs. Ryland Darden.

Solo—"Are You Able?"—Mrs. Carl R. Key.

"History of the Local Society—Complied by Mrs. J. G. Holland and Mrs. R. H. Reidel, read by Mrs. Reidel.

Poem—"Twenty-five Years"—Mrs. G. G. Holland.

At the concluding part of the program, the twenty-five candles on the birthday cake were lighted and the members came forward with their silver offering.

The Society gave its public meeting on the fifth Sunday night in May. The devotional period was conducted by Mrs. A. J. Holland, using "Prayer" as a theme, which was followed by a most instructive illustration lecture on the Missionary Work in China. The pictures were shown by the pastor, Rev. Carl R. Key, accompanied by a lecture given by Mrs. Key.

Twenty-two members attended the mission study classes taught in Suffolk on December 18th.

According to the usual custom the World day of prayer was observed jointly with the Holy Neck Society.

Under the capable leadership of Mrs. H. B. Everett, the Society has had a most successful year. Program Committees, serving for six months each, have prepared very interesting programs and a social hour has been enjoyed at the close of each quarter.

MT. CARMEL.

The Junior Missionary Society of the Mt. Carmel Christian Church has had a most successful year and is looking forward to being an honor society. Their motto for the year is "Work Conquers Everything" and under their faithful leader they have endeavored to carry it out. They have held two public meetings with well prepared programs and a good attendance. A great interest was manifested in the Silver Jubilee Meeting and they hope to raise all their quota by conference time. Mrs. Myrtle Johnson sends us the above information and is one of the Society's helpful members.

Comprehensive collaboration of all groups is urgently needed. Employers, labor, consumers and the government must work together to provide for the economic needs of the people. We must create also such cooperative relations among the nations and such access to raw materials for all as shall promote international peace.

As industrial and economic life becomes more complex we discover increasingly urgent need for more personal consecration of individuals to the religious life. For religion will always be indispensable not only for the soul of the individual, but also as social cement to hold any society together in the bonds of peace. Selfish struggles for prestige or power on the part of individuals or groups can become divisive forces in any society. There must, indeed, be such a reorganization of our economic life as will remove the fear of economic insecurity on the part of men and nations which now leads to interclass and international conflicts, but there may still remain in individual lives those destructive and socially divisive forces of sin and selfishness, of jealousy and pride and intolerance which would tend to tear apart any social order. The church must therefore continue to serve society by proclaiming Christ's gospel of justice, love and reconciliation and by insisting that both individuals and economic and political institutions shall conform to the will of the God of justice and love.

Farmers and Farm Labor.

The net income in cash and in kind from farm production per farm operator, considering values at the farm, averaged $579 during 1935 (Studies of the National Industrial Board—the latest available report).

The percentage of all farms operated by tenants increased from 25.5 per cent in 1880 to 42.4 per cent in 1930, according to the Federal Bureau of the Census.

The wage rates of hired farm workers on April 1, 1937, according to the Bureau of Agricultural Economics were as follows:

Per month with board	$ 23.38
Per day with board	1.16
Annual rate with board	280.56
Per month without board	34.16
Per day without board	1.58
Annual rate without board	409.92

Sample studies during recent years of wage rate and annual incomes of migrants, child-workers in agriculture, share-croppers, have indicated that insecurity is very great among these workers and that annual cash incomes are even lower than those for farm laborers of the nation as a whole.

The U. S. Bureau of Home Economics estimates that an annual food budget, based on March, 1937 prices in large cities, providing even a "minimum cost adequate diet" for a family composed of a "very active man," a "very active woman," an "active boy over 15 years," a "boy 9-10 or a girl 11-13 years" and a "child under 4 years" would cost $683.80. A "liberal diet" is estimated at $1,229.80. Note that this is for food alone, and that the cost of rent, clothing for all the family, household expenses and other items must be added to estimate the cost of living of such a family, bearing in mind that millions of workers do not even enjoy the fifty-two week's work per year on which above wage estimates are based.

WORK.

Work thou for pleasure.

Paint or sing or carve

The thing thou lovest,

Though the body starve.

Who works for glory

Misses oft the goal,

Who works for money

Coins his very soul.

Work for the work's sake,

Then, and it might be

That these things shall

Be added unto thee.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church"

MISS EMILY CARLETON, Editor, 541 Osceola Ave., Winter Park, Fla.

NO MEETING FOR SOUTHEAST OFFICERS.

In Jacksonville last April, when the Southeast Pilgrim Fellowship met in conjunction with the Southeast Convention, it was proposed that an executive meeting be held at some time during the summer, preferably the latter part of August. Because of various contributing factors—notably the belief that another method would result in more effective work at present in the Southeast, as well as the fact that many of the officers would be unable to be present and that it was difficult to secure a satisfactory meeting-place—Earle Ward, the president of the Southeast Pilgrim Fellowship, decided not to call the meeting.

It seems that the only way in which the Southeast Pilgrim Fellowship can be effective is in strengthening the local Conferences in their young people's work. This can best be done through the various departments. Therefore, this fall, emphasis will be placed upon the various superintendents building up the work in their fields. It seems that time and money expended in that way will have more far-reaching results than an officers' meeting, at this time. Each one of the superintendents will have to work out the program for his department, and in a group meeting this could be accomplished. Several of the superintendents have already done excellent work, reports of which will be given in more detail later.

We urge all leaders, whether they be Southeast or Conference officers, Key-workers in the local churches, or counselors, to do their best in carrying out the suggestions of the various superintendent, to make suggestions whenever possible, and to answer letters that they receive concerning the Pilgrim Fellowship work.

A TRIP TO THE ORIENT.

Last Christmas the young people of Ohio, aided by friends in other parts of the United States, presented Miss Lucy Eldredge (Young People's Director for the Congregational-Christian Church) with money for a trip to the Orient. The Board readily assented to give Miss Eldredge "time off" from her office in Dayton, in order that she might have this opportunity to visit our mission stations in the Far East.

Miss Eldredge made many friends last winter in her visit to different sections of the Southeast, and still others in North Carolina and Virginia have known her since her days at Elon College and as Field Worker in the Southern Convention. Therefore many will be interested in hearing the details of her trip. To quote "Miss Lucy":

"I am planning to leave Dayton, Thursday evening, August 12th, going by train to Flagstaff, Arizona, where I shall arrive early Sunday morning. There my sisters, who are driving to the coast to help me start, properly, will meet me, and we shall drive the rest of the way, stopping long enough to see Grand Canyon, Boulder Dam, Los Angeles, and San Francisco, and what comes in between.

"On Saturday, August 21st, I am scheduled to sail from San Francisco in the Taiyo Maru, N. Y. K. Line, which I am told by Dr. Minton is an excellent Japanese boat. The Hacketts are returning to Kobe College on this boat. From then on Angie Crew proposes this:

Sept. 7—Arrive Yokohama.

Sept. 8-11—Sight-seeing in Tokyo, Nikko, Kamakura, etc.

Sept. 12—Nagoya.

Sept. 13-15—Kyoto, visiting Doshisha and seeing sights.

Sept. 16-20—Kobe College.

Sept. 21—Visiting Zenrinkwan and other social work.

Sept. 22—Visit Glory Kindergarten and Mrs. Jo's work in Kobe.

Sept. 23—(Holiday) Trip with Angie Crew to Nara.

Sept. 24-27—Matsuyama Girl's School and the Night School.

Sept. 28-30—Okayama. Visit Dr. and Mrs. Olds, Miss Adams.

Oct. 1-3—Back to Kobe. Trip to Ise. Sight-seeing on canal boat.

Oct. 4—To Tokyo.

Oct. 5-7—Sendai and environs.

Oct. 8-9—Tokyo.

Oct. 10—Kobe.

Oct. 11—Depart for Korea.

"The trip was originally planned includes time in Korea, Manchuko, and China from October 11th to November 17th when my ticket says 'Sail home from Shanghai.' This will be changed as conditions demand, but anyhow I plan to arrive in the U. S. A. again when the Taiyo Maru sails

HOW JESUS REVEALS GOD.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC

FOR SEPTEMBER 12, 1937.

Daily Readings—

Monday—Jesus Reveals God by Interpreting Nature—Matt. 6: 25-34.

Tuesday—God Revealed in Jesus' Healing Ministry—Luke 4: 16-21.

Wednesday—Jesus Revealed God as Spirit—John 4: 19-21.

Thursday—Jesus Revealed God's Attitude Toward Men—Luke 15: 1-10.

Friday—Jesus Revealed as Master Workman—John 5: 17.

Saturday—Jesus Revealed in the Old Testament—Matt. 22: 23-33.

Millions of people would like to know what God is like. Philip did not know just what the likeness of God was when he said, "Lord, show us the Father, and it sufficeth us." Jesus said, "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father." To discover God, we must see Christ. Jesus Christ reveals the mind and purpose of God. In Christ we discover what God is like and what God is doing. Jesus draws back the veil so that the discerning spirit can discover God in a new form.

We no longer think of God as a war-God or a national or racial God. Through Jesus we discover a God who is a Father to His people. A loving Heavenly Father who cares for people and seeks to bring them in relationship with himself. A Hindu, when asked what appealed to him most about the Christian idea of God said, "You have a God who seeks for His children."

A curiosity seeker cannot behold the Father; a cold intellectual mind cannot know Him; neither can the natural man receive Him; but the honest believer in Christ can receive Him. Jesus declared, "He that receiveth me receiveth the Father." To know Christ is to know God.

For Discussion—

1. How is God revealed through the circumstances of Jesus' birth? In the events of His life? In his wonderful teachings? In his relationship with his disciples? In Jesus' attitude toward others?

2. What do Christians mean when they say they believe in a Christ-like God?

3. Is Jesus' revelation of God as strong today as it was when he made personal contact with the men in the flesh?

Suggested Hymns—

"O Worship the King."

"How Firm a Foundation."

GOD REQUIRES SOCIAL JUSTICE.

LESSON X—SEPTEMBER 5, 1937.

GOLDEN TEXT: As ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise.—Luke 6:31.

LESSON: Leviticus 19:1-18; 32-37.

The law recorded in Leviticus 19 are a repetition or summary of certain laws which had been given before, but which need repeated emphasis because of their importance. Some of them deal with things which are somewhat foreign to our life today in its practical aspects, but in every case back of the letter of the law there is an abiding principal and spiritual emphasis.

The Basis of Holiness.

"Ye shall be holy; for I the Lord thy God am holy." We have a holy or righteous God. There is no flaw or blemish in His character. We are His children. Because He is holy we are to be holy. We are to live in such a way that we shall honor Him. The motive of our obedience is not to be fear, but love, a desire to please Him, and to reveal Him to the world. Putting it in another way ethics must be rooted and grounded in religion. Goodness is god-likeness. We are to accept as our ideal to be perfect even as our Father which is in heaven is perfect.

Honoring Parents.

"Fear every man his mother and father." Parents are to be respected and honored and obeyed in the Lord. They are properly constituted authority. Indeed they are God's representatives to the children. This puts a sacred responsibility both upon parents and children.

Keeping the Sabbath.

"Keep my sabbaths: I am the Lord your God." One day to be a day of rest and worship, sacred unto the Lord, as a means of sanctifying the other days, and as a means of ministering to that in man which cannot live by bread alone.

Shunning Idolatry.

"Turn ye not unto idols, nor make to yourselves molten gods." God is Spirit and those who worship Him must worship Him in spirit and truth. He is not like unto anything that man can make. He is not to be pictured in material form. The Creator, not the created is to be worshipped.

Sharing With Others.

The law of gleaning cannot be strictly enforced today, not even in the country, let alone the city. But the principle of sharing with others, or of bearing one another's burdens can still be applied to modern life. There is enough for all in God's world. Those who lack do so because of their own shiftlessness or because of man's selfishness.

Living Honestly With Others.

"Thou shalt not steal, neither deal falsely, neither lie to one another." Old fashioned, simple integrity, but not out of date. Religion, true religion makes a man honest and truthful and dependable.

Looking out for those who cannot help themselves.

"Thou shalt not curse the deaf, nor put a stumbling block before the blind." One can hardly think of men doing these things. But alas, men do even worse. Back of this old law there is the positive command to

THE MASTER'S MAN.

My Master was a worker
With daily work to do,
And he who would be like him
Must be a worker, too;
Then welcome honest labor
And honest labor's fare,
For where there is a worker
The Master's man is there.

My Master was a helper,
The woes of life he knew,
And he who would be like him
Must be a helper, too;
The burden will grow lighter,
If each will take a share,
And where there is a helper
The Master's man is there.

—William G. Tarrant.

take care of those who cannot take care of themselves, an appeal to the finer sensibilities and sympathies of life.

Accepting A Man As A Man.

"Thou shalt not respect the person of the poor, nor honor the person of the mighty, but in righteousness shalt thou judge thy neighbor." The true worth of a man is not determined by the amount of money he has or by his social standing. A man is to be judged by his character. There is to be no special privilege for the favored few. We are to treat all men as men. The poor man is to be treated with the same respect as the rich man. There is no respect of persons with God. There ought not to be any with men.

Avoiding Gossip.

"Thou shalt not go up and down as talebearer among thy people." A loose tongue is one of the most deadly weapons in the world. Early in the history of his people, God charged them to beware of going about as a gossip. James goes so far as to say that the man who allows his tongue to run loose is not religious, no matter how much he may profess to be so.

Avoiding Hate.

"Thou shalt not hate thy brother in thine heart." Already the law gets behind the outward act. It is wrong to harbor hate in one's heart. And it is dangerous, both for the person who harbors it and the person against whom it is harbored. The spirit of hate is the spirit of murder.

Refusing to Hold Grudges.

"Thou shalt not avenge, nor bear any grudge against the children of thy people." It is often foolish to keep a grudge; it is always wrong. God's people are not to pay evil in kind. They are to return good for evil. They are to overcome evil with good. To pay evil for good is brutish. To return good for good is human. To return good for evil is divine.

Loving One's Neighbor As Ones's Self.

"Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." That is in the Old Testament. Jesus said that it stood along with the first law, Love God. It is not wrong to love one's self. But we are to love ourselves last. The divine order is love God, love one's neighbor, love one's self.

Respecting Old Age.

"Thou shalt rise up before the hoary head and honor the face of an old man." Old people do not always look attractive and they are not always lovable, but old age is to be honored. Be on your guard against the person who is not respectful to old age.

Broadening One's Sympathies.

"And if a stranger sojourn with thee in your land, ye shall not vex him. Thou shalt love him as thyself. Christians are to overcome the artificial barriers of race and creed and color in a common brotherhood.

Putting Religion into Everyday Life.

"Just balances, just weights, a just ephah, a just hin, shall ye have." Religion is to be applied to our everyday life. It is to manifest itself in business. It must not be kept in a watertight compartment, it must be a saving influence in all of life's relationships.

MONDAY.

FRUITLESS LIVING.

"Ye have sown much, but bring in little."—Hag. 1:6.

All of us are familiar with the story of the five foolish virgins who, in physical and spiritual makeup, were quite as well prepared as the five wise ones. However, these virgins preferred to have a good time, and their time was spent in search of that time. Consequently, when the hour struck, they were unprepared and were excluded from the party.

We may profit by this illustration. The glory of a tree with all its spreading bows and glistening leaves is a poor boast of a tree if it is of no use. But this tree serves well the heavens that bathe it and the earth that bears it. It is not only useful in its flower, fruit and shade, but it yields oil of medicine for man, and is an object of glory and beauty.

Prayer—Our Father, forbid that we shall live so fruitless that we shall be cast away. Come now and abide in us and may we abide in Thee forever. Amen.

TUESDAY.

THE NEED OF AN INSIDE CONSCIENCE.

"The meditation of my heart shall be of understanding."—Ps. 49:3.

Queen Victoria, we are told, once attended a chorus of three thousand voices singing Handel's "Messiah." The vast audience was to rise when they struck the "Hallelujah Chorus"; but she was instructed that it was not becoming for her to rise. When the chorus was struck, she attempted to sit still but could not do so. She felt an inward desire to stand as the representative of her country, reverencing God.

We need to pray continually for God's guidance. "He that abideth in the secret places of the Most High, shall abide under the shadow of the Almighty." Conscience is the soul's sense of right. It dictates well when we live with it much.

Prayer—Our Father, give us an understanding of the true life in all of our meditations. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

INTRODUCTION TO GOD.

"Know thou the God of thy father and serve Him with a perfect heart and a willing mind."—1 Chron. 29:9.

One can give reasons for believing in God, for being conscious of a supreme power ruling the universe, and for a consciousness of God in personal life, and yet be absolutely without an intimate knowledge of Him.

This intimate knowledge in the life is the greatest privilege man has, and to impart this intimate knowledge to another is the greatest responsibility imposed upon a Christian. No one is going to come to Christ until he feels that there is more in God of what he wants than he has yet found.

Prayer—Dear Father, sanctify our souls to this responsibility and open the way this day for giving someone the life. Amen.

THURSDAY.

BE NOT FOOLED.

"Take heed that ye be not deceived (led astray)."—Luke 21:8.

This text is one of the most far reaching of Christ's utterances. Evidently Christ looked clear through the ages and foresaw that there would be thousands of people who would undertake to cheat, delude, and deceive his people. He also saw that thousands of people would be too stupid to discriminate between the false and true.

Salvation is intended to save everyone from the false. In Christ we should be prepared and willing to detect any imposition. If you have a dear friend, the most skilled actor could not deceive you and make you believe that he was that friend.

Prayer—Our Father, we would know Thee better every day and know Thy friendship. In return, we offer Thee our lives, however unworthy, that we may be a little more nearly what we ought to be. Amen.

FRIDAY.

TRAINED SENSES.

"There is a way which seemeth right unto man; but the end thereof are the ways of death."—Prov. 14:12.

A sensitive conscience is a most valuable asset to any person and it takes a sensitive conscience to overcome that way which seemeth right and yet is wrong. Some of the most horrible deeds of history have been perpetrated by those who, lacking a trained conscience, thought they did the will of the Lord. Paul thought he did the will of the Lord when he persecuted the Christians.

We must not trust our own thinking. We must have the spirit of Christ, the guidance of the Bible, and the Holy Spirit. He is the way, and to have Him in our souls instructs us. Other ways are not to be followed, however right they may seem.

Prayer—Our Father, take all of our conceit away and make us humble followers of Christ, Thy son. Amen.

SATURDAY.

SALVATION BY YOU.

"Ye shall receive power after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you; ye shall be witnesses unto me."—Acts 1:8.

We all are troubled and disturbed today because of political and social upheaval. We are also disturbed greatly because of the instability of moral standards and, most of all, we are beset by a feeling of personal hopelessness.

It seems to be the modern idea to organize in groups and fight the enemy in masses because we feel that wrong is on a too vast a scale for mere individual amendment. We wonder if this is God's way. The world is a collection of single persons. The New Testament standard is personal. The method of salvation is individual, and each individual is to enlist others. Christ's way is "one by one" and we believe that this blundering world is to be made over just that way.

Prayer—Endue us, O Lord, with our own individual responsibility of standing valiently for Thee at all times and in all places and help us to win others for Thee. Amen.

SUNDAY.

HYPOCRITE FURNITURE.

"Man looketh on the outer appearance."—I Sam. 16:6-13.

A group of friends had been to dinner in a new and beautiful hotel. The lobbies were filled with attractive stuffed chairs and couches. The ladies exclaimed over the artistic character of the rooms.

One of us is a furniture manufacturer, and he confided to me that the furniture is really of poor quality, its defects being covered up by the beautiful upholstery. Those chairs and couches are really hypocrites, making an outward profession without inward quality. "The only way to be sure of getting good stuffed furniture is to buy the product of a manufacturer of integrity."

Ours is a religion not only of appearance, but of sterling inner worth. It demands "truth in the inner parts." It seeks to be, before it seeks to seem.

Prayer—We want to be true through and through, our Father. Make us sterling Christians, built for the eye of Him who seeth in secret. Amen.

GOD AT WORK WITH THE NATIONS.

By DR. J. G. TRUITT.

"It shall come to pass that I shall gather all nations and tongues; and they shall come and see my glory."
—Isa. 66:18.

God has not completed his work. He is still working. We may be impatient, and sometimes discouraged, but God is patient, and he is working still. Nations may be armed themselves to the teeth, and wars may be raging in more than one place in our little world, and there may be fighting and bloodshed in the very land whose soil has been made sacred by the footprints of the Lord Jesus Himself, and yet God will bring his glory to bear upon all nations and tongues.

Already the nations of the earth are troubled about Jesus, and his teachings. His golden rule haunts them in high places, and his Calvary towers about their selfishness in every land. Already his influence is at work in the great nations of the earth. Not one of them can escape it. All of them have had glimpses of his idealism, and all of them are more or less troubled by his challenge. Already his name is above the names of most of their gods, and slowly and steadily the work of the eternal God goes on.

When I was in school at Princeton I sat down with young men from several nations and races about the Table of our Lord. Young men from the East and the West; young men from the North and the South; young men from India, China, and Japan; young men from Canada and Korea; young men from Australia and South Africa; and from England, Ireland, and Scotland. Not all races and nations, but enough of them represented to see how we were all mastered by the majesty of our Lord Jesus. To each of us he was a Savior and a Friend. To each of us he seemed near, and to each of us he seemed near to the others. By him we were bound together, in a common, sacred bond,

What vastly different experiences lay in the background of each of our lives! Here was a boy who knew the hills of North Carolina, and there was one with him who had come from the fishing ports of China! Japanese and Canadian, Irishman and Indian—all such lines were forgotten as we heard the words: "This is my body which was broken for you"! What meant such distinctions under the spell of the divine insight of Jesus, and his marvelous mastery over our lives. We looked at one another and thought, not of one another, but of Him! We saw his love for us, and we became brethren, going out for him to help heal the world's hurt, and to bind up its wounds.

What was thus done there on a small scale was at that very time being done on a larger or lesser scale in many, many other places in the earth. Like heaven that sort of thing alone is doing its mighty work in God's world. Men who have sat together in such places have a sort of understanding which they cannot forget when they face each other about counsel tables in later years. They may stray away, and fail of the fine things that glowed in their lives in such moments, but enough of it, and something is going to happen to the world. Something glorious is going to happen! Understanding, which becomes understanding at the feet of Jesus, is very powerful, indeed. And it may not do all we wish it to do in our day, but God's work will be done eventually! His promises, his prophecies will surely come to pass. How we do not know, and when we cannot tell. But God does not turn back.

You have recently been studying about Joseph. God has done much work with the nations since Joseph's day. Why in Joseph's day the twenty-third Psalm had not been written. Why, just to get that psalm to sing itself forth from the soul of an humble shepherd lad was a good day's work! In Joseph's day Jesus had not been born in Bethlehem! To move that far forward was a great day's work. The touch of Jesus had never been felt and pardon from his lips had never been known. Now it has been felt, and now his pardon has been known. Never had a dying thief ever been promised Paradise before—death, nothing but death hitherto! Never before had any Calvary ever cried "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do". God was at work with the world, and a long way has been traversed since Joseph's day.

In Joseph's day the "little flock" to which it is the "Father's will to give the Kingdom" had not yet been appointed, or started. Simon, Peter had not cried, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God"; and Jesus had not said: "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature"; and upon the little flock in Jerusalem the flaming tongues of divine fire had not yet fallen. The kingdom had travelled a long way, and the little church has gone about the world leaving the sweet words of Jesus in an untold host of human hearts. And where those words have been heard they have been hard to forget, and from them have grown thousands upon thousands of altars in every land.

There is wickedness and sin still, and as I said in the outset we may be discouraged, so great is it; but God is at work with the nations, and even today men really feel in their hearts that there is something to the Gospel of Jesus Christ, and somewhere somehow it is going to prevail. In Joseph's day the great discoveries of unknown continents had not been made, nor the marvelous inventions in the realm of science; somehow God will use these things to bring the nations to sit down together about his Table. Even the World War brought the nations together in such a manner as has never been dreamed of before. Terrible, of course, but God can take the wrath of men and make it to praise him. Out of the war nationalism has grown and oftentimes a very ugly nationalism it has been, but nationalism comes before internationalism; and men must come together before they can shake hands!

Let us who believe in God, and who believe that God still works with the world join in, and devote our lives to Him, and do our best to be like His Son in bringing the nations together in love and understanding! our prayers our faith, our deeds of kindness, and mercy, and love will make us-workers together with God; and we shall know something of the meaning of Jesus when he said: "My Father worketh hitherto, and I work."

THE GOSPEL OF LABOR.

This is the Gospel of Labor—

Ring it, ye bells of the kirk—

The Lord of love came down from above

To live with the men who work.

This is the rose that he planted

Here in the thorn-cursed soil—

Heaven is blessed with perfect rest;

But the blessing of earth is toil.

—Henry Van Dyke.

The Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

Our income for the last month from our Sunday schools has been the most discouraging that we have had for years. I believe in twenty years.

Let us figure with you just a little. In the issue of THE CHRISTIAN SUN August 5th our report showed an income of $146.84 and of that amount the Sunday schools sent in $24.64. August 12th the report showed an income of $188.45 of this amount the Sunday schools sent in $123.95. August 19th the income was $208.18 of this amount the Sunday schools sent in $84.13. August 26th our income was $130.17, of this amount $14.17 came from the Sunday schools. If my memory serves me right the Sunday school offerings for the week of August 26th is the smallest for any one week in twenty years. To tell you the truth it makes my heart ache. It is discouraging to say the least.

Nearly one hundred children to feed and clothe and send to school and help give them a chance in life. It cannot be done on $14.17 per week.

The several denominations in North Carolina invest thousands of dollars in their orphanage work each year. They have their orphanages and are glad to support them and give the fatherless a chance with the less unfortunate.

Do the Congregational-Christian denominations have their orphanage? Are we as a denomination willing to sacrifice for it? Through the years we have built a plant that the church may well feel proud of. We have 93 beautiful little boys and girls here looking to the church for the support.

Are we as a church willing to make some sacrifice in their behalf that they too, may have an equal show with other children who have been less unfortunate?

It cannot be done on $14.17 per week.

In Memoriam

JOHNSON.

Mrs. Lucy Virginia Johnson, widow of the late W. J. Johnson, died at her home in Suffolk, Virginia, August 13, 1937, aged 52 years. The funeral services were conducted at Windsor Christian Church, of which she was a member, by the writer, assisted by Drs. J. G. Truitt and I. W. Johnson. The burial was in Antioch Cemetery.

Mrs. Johnson leaves six children—Earle, Judson, Mary Virginia, Mrs. Edward Hindley, Mrs. Elton Gwaltney, and Olive—all of Suffolk, and three grandchildren. Mrs. Johnson was a faithful wife and mother and a sincere and devoted Christian. May our Heavenly Father comfort and keep her loved ones.

N. G. NEWMAN.

NEWLAND.

Mr. Samuel Newland departed this life July 22, 1937 at the home of his aunt, Miss Fannie Martz, who had cared for him since a little child. After becoming a man he looked after her in her old age. Mr. Newland was a brother to Mrs. Elmer Cook in whose home the funeral services were held. Mrs. Cook and family are members of the Palmyra Christian Church at Edinburg, Virginia. Many friends mourn the passing of Mr. Newland who, though not a member of any church, was a good citizen and very devoted to his aged aunt, Miss Fannie Martz. May God bless and comfort the friends left at home.

ROY D. COULTER.

MOATS.

Rev. Annie C. Stuckman Moats, a Congregational minister who had all her pastorates in the North Alabama Association of Congregational and Christian Churches, on April 7, 1937, went to her reward from Chandler's Mountain near Steele, Alabama, where she had her pastorate with the Steele Mt. Lebanon Congregational Church of which Rev. Marion L. Thrasher is now the minister.

She was born in Indianapolis, Indiana, and gave her soul to God at the age of twelve.

The New Liberty Congregational Methodist Church ordained her and she had charge of the Gamble's Chapel Church in Cullman County. Later she had charge of the Town Creek, Old Liberty Congregational, the Steppville Mt. Groove Congregational, the Garden City Congregational, and the Steele Mt. Lebanon Congregational Churches.

Mrs. Moats had real ability as a preacher and would have had larger services had she been a man.

After her retirement she continued to be the pastor on the field between the regular appointments of her successors at Mt. Lebanon Church, Rev. J. P. Bean and Rev. M. L. Thrasher.

In ministry to the sick she was faithful and tender. It was an epidemic of pneumonia which finally carried her away after she had depleted her reserve strength caring for a number of people.

She was the life of the woman's work of the Church.

The young people looked to her for helpful counsel with the Christian Endeavor Society.

She spoke well in the annual Association meeting.

Mr. A. M. Moats, her husband, was in sympathy with her work and, with their children and many friends, misses her cheerful and helpful voice.

"MOODY STILL LIVES."

The above caption is the striking title of the exceedingly valuable book written by Arthur Percy Fitt, in connection with the D. L. Moody centenary, 1837-1937.

Mr. Fitt was Mr. Moody's private secretary for a number of years. The fact that he was also Mr. Moody's son-in-law suggests the peculiar advantage the author had over other authors producing biographies of this great religious leader.

As many of our pastors will hold a Moody Centenary service in connection with their Fall program, it is very timely that this unique biography be recommended now. This volume contains many incidents in connection with Mr. Moody's personal and family life which no other writer has given to the public. In this volume is also revealed the great secrets of Mr. Moody's marvellous power.

Following are some of the attractive chapters of this unusually interesting and well written book: "How Did a New England Country Lad Become a World Power?"; "Northfield a Hundred Years Ago and Today"; "In Action Over-Seas"; "Impress on America"; "Beginnings of Continuing Influence"; "World's Fair Evangelistic Campaign"; "Later Ministry"; "With Family and Friends"; "How Shall a Man's Influence Be Measured After He Is Gone?"; etc.

Mr. Moody's son, Paul I. Moody, President of Middlebury College, says of this book—"In brief compass the author has given an accurate and discriminating outline of the life and activities of the man he loved devotedly and served faithfully."

As no doubt Mr. Dwight L. Moody was the greatest layman the Congregational Church has ever had, it is especially fitting that every minister of the Congregational-Christian Church should have a copy of this intimate story of his useful life. The book is published by Fleming H. Revell Company of New York City and can be procured at almost any book store at $1.50. The third edition of the book has already been published, so great has been the demand for this valuable volume.

LIFE'S SURPRISES

By CLARENCE A. VINCENT, D. D.

Life is more than dull routine, it is all slavish work, it is full of surprises. Steep hills that take the breath, bring thrilling views; dust that befouls us, makes the sparkling stream, as we leap into it, more stimulating. I have always been glad that time is broken up into days—the monotony of one endless day would have been depressing.

New mercies, each returning day,
Hover around us as we pray,
New perils past, new sins forgiv'n,
New thoughts of God, new hopes of heaven.

NATURAL WORLD.

What a surprise it was when Dr. Bull discovered that out of a wild grape, he could bring about in a few seasons the delicious Concord grape. Burbank's gifts to the world in the production of new fruits and vegetables astonished the thoughtful world. Out of the scrawniest flowers have come some of the most beautiful and fragrant flowers. The mornings and the evenings often paint the most gorgeous pictures upon the sky. The forces of the natural world are continually giving us fresh delights and inspirations. "The ocean is never twice alike," some one has said, at least its inspirations are always felt. Even rebellious Byron felt its power and charm.

Roll on, thou deep and dark blue ocean, roll!
Ten thousand fleets sweep over thee in vain.
Man marks the earth with ruin, his control steps with the shore.

FRIENDS.

We often hear men say that friends have proven unfaithful. Perhaps, we all have been disappointed in those whom we supposed were friends. However, there is another side to our relationships. Many a time when we need encouragement, those whom we have trusted speak the word, or quietly shake our hand, or send us a bit of a poem, or a verse from the scriptures, and we feel strong again.

But above all is the friend that sticketh closer than a brother and whose presence surprises us with a gift of strength in times when it seems that every earthly stay is falling.

He changes not! Our wants are known to him.
And every road we tread his feet have trod.
He changes not! We creatures of a whim
Often falter and cry out beneath the rod,
And faith grows weak, and fainting hopes grow dim,
But still he cares and leads us nearer GOD.

History seems sometimes to defy backward. Vice and hate seem often to be in the saddle. The plotting of the Colonies against one another threatened the settlement of this Continent. The different ideas of Federal and State rights and slavery were threatening Representative Government. Established opinions often refuse to see the light, and the nation lags; destructive opinions often would throw over principles and achievements that have taken centuries and cost sacrifices to establish.

At such times, men and women of pure devotion come to the front who believe the nation must move forward in a constructive effort, building upon the everlasting principles which have made the country unique and helpful and breaking through the crusts of thought and endeavor that hinder progress. Such citizens lead the nation on step by step, generation after generation toward the goal of a perfect self-government. Expect surprises in the critical hours of our National life.

Home From Vacation

I'm glad to be back on the job once more;
To stand again in the year's open door;
To hear the call of a burdened soul,
And too feel the desire to restore it whole;
I'm glad to be back at home again
To battle for the Lord, to fight against sin.

I'm happy to kneel at the gate of God,
To meet Him in prayer in this sacred sod;
To seek for the message my folks will need,
As they fight temptation, and self, and greed—
I rejoice to be back with all my heart
To share their burdens and take their part.

I'm glad to be home from the roads I've trod,
To inspire their spirits and lead them to God;
To be but a servant of the Lord always,
To be a small vessel of the humblest clay—
I'm glad to be back on the job once more
To work for the people I love and adore.

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

Labor Day and the consequent delay in receiving copy makes THE SUN a day late in reaching some of its subscribers this week. Some Labor Day material came too late for last week's issue and could not be used.

The Valley Virginia Conference was organized at Antioch Christian Church in 1838. Next year the conference will celebrate its centennial. A committee composed of Mrs. B. F. Frank, R. Roy Hosaflook and J. C. Bradford is to plan this celebration.

The young people of Winter Park Congregational - Christian Church have had a very successful summer program in cooperation with the Methodist young people. They feel that this union service is much better than going out of business during the vacation period.

We are glad to have the pictures of the active pastors in our Valley Virginia Conference appear in the paper this week. (The picture of Rev. Roy D. Coulter did not arrive in time to be put in). Two other ministers, Revs. W. B. Fuller and F. E. Allison are members of the conference but are not active pastors at the present.

Miss Irene Cotten of Dendron, and Mrs. W. B. Williams of Newport News, Virginia were visitors at the Valley Conference and helped considerably with the Youth Fellowship work. Rev. F. E. Hyde, of Sanford, North Carolina led some fine devotional services and made an excellent address on "The Rural Church and Its Task."

The Valley Conference voted to appoint a committee of five to make preliminary surveys and report to a committee composed of one representative from each church on plans for grouping of churches within the conference. The president appointed W. C. Wampler, chairman, E. A. Hillyard, Clarence Rush, R. C. Myers and Loy H. Hook.

Rev. and Mrs. H. S. Hardeastle of Norfolk report having had a very pleasant visit recently with Miss Pattie Lee Coghill as she vacationed at her home near Henderson, North Carolina. Mr. Hardeastle's thumb that he sawed the end off of several days ago is getting well. Miss Coghill has returned to Florida for the fall and winter's work.

Rev. F. Ervin Hyde of Sanford, North Carolina, called at THE CHRISTIAN SUN office in Norfolk last week. He and some friends had been vacationing at the beach. Mr. Hyde is interested in a state-wide meeting of the young people in our churches in North Carolina. It is always a pleasure to see ministers and members of our churches as they pass by this way.

The basis for enrollment as a banner church in the Virginia Valley Conference is as follows: Conference apportionments paid in full—20%; One deacon and accredited delegate attending conference, 15%; At least 25c per member for missions, 15%; Pastor's salary paid in full, 15%; At least 25c paid to the Orphanage, 10%; Five per cent of membership taking THE CHRISTIAN SUN, 10%; Five per cent addition to the church membership, 15%.

Any church making 60% or more will be enrolled as a banner church.

At the recent conference in the Valley of Virginia the chairman of one committee twitted the conference about doing nothing concerning resolutions passed and promised that if the churches would act on the resolutions better reports would be written. THE CHRISTIAN SUN took up the challenge and promised to print the resolutions so the churches can act upon them. It is hoped that every church will call a meeting of its officials, go over the resolutions and make definite plans to do whatever can be done concerning them. THE CHRISTIAN SUN will be glad to receive information concerning what is accomplished and then the committees will have to write better reports. That is the reason for this special issue.

A year ago the Mt. Olivet (G) young people secured a number of subscriptions to THE CHRISTIAN SUN. Recently Miss Winona Morris has sent in renewals. That is a fine service for the church. Some other churches are planning to render a similar service. Thank you, friends. Surely there is someone in every church who will be willing to lead off in a campaign for subscriptions to the Church Paper. There is no better time to do this work than right now, in the early fall, when people are just beginning to sell their crops. All subscriptions should be sent to Norfolk, not to Richmond. There is a commission of twenty-five cents on each annual subscription for church organizations that secure the subscriptions.

REPORTS OF THE VIRGINIA VALLEY CONFERENCE.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON FOREIGN MISSIONS.

Recommendations were as follows:

1. In our private devotions, as well as our prayers at church, that we remember the cause of foreign missions.

2. That each church send an Easter offering to missions.

3. That all our Sunday schools take a monthly missionary offering and on that Sunday have a missionary program.

4. That the Cent-a-Meal plan of contributing to missions be given a chance to prove its value in the homes of our people in deepening the spiritual life, increasing the number of givers and enlarging the sum total of missionary giving.

THELMA MORRIS,
E. LENA ROTHGEB.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON HOME MISSIONS.

It is the business of this conference to seek and to save that which is lost within its borders as well as elsewhere.

Not only does the salvation of the church depend upon the proper and economical expenditure of the funds given it and the evangelistic efforts of the church but the very life of the church itself is at stake. Whenever Christianity ceases to use its best efforts along these lines it ceases to be Christianity. Just how to best accomplish this end is what this conference should do today.

We therefore recommend:

1. That a committee be appointed for the purpose of grouping our conference into pastorates so as to save time and expense for our pastors and give more time for actual contacting the people in his pastorate and this committee is to report to the first session of conference.

W. C. WAMPLER,
E. A. HILLYARD,
R. C. MYERS.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON APPORTIONMENT.

We, your committee on apportionments, recommend the following amounts to be raised by our conference: Home Missions, $400; Conference Fund, $205; Southern Convention, $501.

ber Ridge, $80; Whistlers Chapel, $25; Winchester, $100; Wood's Chapel, $25.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON RESOLUTIONS.

This committee expressed the opinion that the conference had been successful. They hoped that the churches will be grouped, commended the young people and their work, and presented appropriate resolutions for the entertaining church, program committee and speakers. Other resolutions were as follows:

1. Our churches continue to teach temperance and the evil effects of alcohol as a beverage.

2. Our church people do all they can to do away with war, and promote peace and good-will between nations.

3. The continuance of the Mid-year Conference.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON EDUCATION.

This committee pointed out the necessity for education as a process of emancipation and showed the cultural value of intellectual progress. The college is said to be a necessity. The committee recommended receiving into members Rev. R. D. Coulter,

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON RELIGIOUS LITERATURE.

This report contends that there is need for clean, wholesome literature in every home. This will include the Bible, books and magazines, especially the church papers. The report says there has been an increase in subscriptions to THE CHRISTIAN SUN this year and that the work should continue. Recommendations were made as follows:

1. That we donate a few minutes of our time each day in careful reading and mediation upon some passage of Scripture.

2. That we give our whole-hearted support to THE CHRISTIAN SUN that it may continue to grow and give us the best reading matter.

3. That we use our own denominational Sunday school literature.

5. That we use the "Pilgrim Highway" and the "Christian Endeavor World" for use in Young People's work, and the "Missionary Herald" in our homes and missionary work.

IRENE HENSLEY,
MRS. SAMUEL EARMAN,
MAMIE SUMMERS,
J. A. KAGEY.

REPORT OF CONFERENCE MISSION SECRETARY.

We have reached another milestone on our pilgrimage journey, and since we cannot again pass this way, let us pause for a moment and reflect upon the way by which we have come. As it is difficult to measure our spiritual attainments, we will only consider our financial attainments in comparison with last year's record.

DR. M. L. WEEKLEY

Last conference year all of the churches of this conference gave to both Home Missions and Foreign Missions the sum of $87.73 and the Sunday schools gave $287.77, making

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgement and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

WHY GO TO COLLEGE?

A new crop of students have entered or about to enter, college. For years they will dwell within dormitories, play on athletic fields, wander around campuses, and attend college classes. Many of them will graduate, but more will fall by the wayside. Some of them have entered with determination to accomplish something, but others will never be able to answer the simple question, "Why go to college?" There is an answer, one worthy of serious thought.

It is not simply to get away from home that one should seek life at college. Home may not be all that one could wish, but it is likely much more acceptable for a place to live than a college. Life on a college campus must be abnormal. The divine method for living is a family of parents and children of various ages. College is a select list of nearly the same age-youth without the influence of parents or small children to guide and hallow. The business of college is specialized. There is not the chance for a well rounded experience as there is in the home. And college life costs more than to live in the home. No, the reason for going to college is not simply to get away from home.

Neither is it to enjoy the extra-curricula activities. Famous athletes sometimes rise out of college life and go to remunerative places in their chosen sports, but college is not intended to make superior athletes. Courses in "campus" may be very appealing, and many young people succumb to the calls of the campus rather than the classroom. To those on the outside it has seemed that college students of a generation just passed thought their highest attainment lay in the line of least resistance, in being "sloppy" in language, dress, and conduct. No, the reason for going to college does not center in things outside the classroom and study halls.

The world looks for honest, intelligent, noble men and women who know things and are willing to work sacrificially. The culture of the world lies within the walls of our college awaiting those who will accept and use it. The historic past will rise up to bless and guide those who willingly seek out its lessons. Science will open fast-closed doors to those who find the secret locks that hold them shut—doors that open into rooms filled with blessings for humanity. Literature and religion will refine and inspire those who seek for truth, beauty and goodness. The reason for going to college is that one may become the most cultured, useful, and happy individual that it is possible for him to be. If you happen to be one of those rare souls, then this Church Paper wishes to congratulate you and wish you good success.

MORE MINISTERS ARE NEEDED.

Twenty years ago the Christian Church of this section sent out a call for new recruits for the ministry and missionary work. Young people in our churches faced the world's needs and the call of their Church for laborers to enter the Master's vineyard. And the young people volunteered. There was an upsurge in the life of the churches. Members were added annually to the rolls, and a period of prosperity swept over our work.

Then came a time when there appeared to be more workers than we needed. Some who had volunteered for missionary service could not be sent out. Although several from the Southern Convention were definitely planning for foreign service twenty years ago, not one of them went out of America as missionaries. The Church could not, or would not, use its volunteers. For a long time there has been no clarion call from the Church to its young people to enter the ministry, become a missionary, or give full time to any form of Christian service. Along with this failure to call has gone a decrease in church membership, and what appears to be a lessening of efficiency.

The time has now come when the Church should call again for recruits. Men are needed for the ministry. There should be religious educational workers in the convention and in local churches. Missionaries should go to neighboring nations with the message of Christianity. Around us everywhere the fields are white unto the harvests and the laborers are few.

In the mountains of Virginia is our youngest work. Three churches up there on top of the world are struggling for life. New roads have gone through neglected areas, and others are in the process of building. Those good mountain people will soon be on the great highways of the nation. Many of them are alert, but some are still backward. Here is a marvelous opportunity for a man to go into a new, growing community and transform the life of multitudes of America's most native people into progressive, Christian communities. But what is happening? A student in college who has two other churches to pastor, serves these three communities as best he can. One who cares can go there and live himself into the hearts of these noble mountaineers and in the years to come rejoice in the beauty of his handiwork.

Four Christian churches center around a rural High School in North Carolina. Two of them are in the center of the area served by the school. The others are only a few miles away. It is a fine farming section, and the people are making money. The school is one of Carolina's new consolidated schools with nearly a thousand pupils and teachers. The community has just learned how to use a county agent to aid the farmers, and a home demonstration agent as an assistant to good work, but it is a new experience for the community. But what of the churches? Three pastors serve the four churches, the nearest one fifteen miles away. A leading member of one of the churches died recently and the pastor, who lives far away, did not arrive for the funeral. A visiting minister who happened to be present was called on at the church to conduct the services. What greater opportunity could any young man with a cultured mind and soul want than to become pastor to these hundreds of people, to preach so that the teachers will want to hear him, to share in the school activities, and to make religion felt in all the activities of this beautiful country life? It will take a man who knows religion and education and who loves the rural life. But here is a chance for the right man to shape the life of a large community according to Christian ideals. But where is the man? The churches await his coming. And the longer they wait the more difficult the task.

Or think of the beautiful Valley of Virginia. Five ministers are trying to serve the entire conference. Some of them give only part time to the work. The churches are there. The people are there. The wealth is there. Everything is there except the "man of God" who will be the pastor to those who live from week to week without the services of a shepherd. Some of the churches that see a minister for only a few hours each month should have a man for full time. It would be a bit difficult at the beginning, but there is plenty of food in these churches for another family, and the people would soon learn to share it with the one who fed them on the "bread of life." Again the man needed is one of culture, one who knows religion and life, one who can interpret Christ in terms of right living and sacrificial service rather than in emotional disturbances, one who will not feel lost because he lives among the hills where roads are crooked and sometimes rough, one who will find his greatest joy in leading children, young people, and adults who have not had all the advantages (and disadvantages) of city life to learn to live beautiful, cultured, Christian lives. Here is a chance for an alert, well-trained minister to live a full, useful, and happy life among the people who will love him and follow his example.

Or think of our larger churches with hundreds of members, some with more than a thousand members, and only one man to the work of the ministry. He must preach twice each Sunday, speak at the mid-week services, be a director of religious education, direct the organized work of the church, and be a pastor to some two thousand people. Can he do the needed work? Of course not! He could not if he were two men. There is more visiting needed than one person could possibly do. Meeting the public engagements is as much as one person can do efficiently. Religious education could well claim all the energies of a person. Yet one man struggles with the work that four should do.

We need more and better ministers. We need directors of religious education and pastor's assistants. We need those with vision who will open new churches in unchurched places. Our church is in need of men and women who will give themselves to Christian service and count it all joy to be the best that they can be without thinking of how much money they can make. The progress of our church depends upon the upsurge that will come when young people offer themselves on the altar of the Church and prepare themselves to serve.

COULD ALLADIN'S LAMP HAVE BEEN DUTY?

A story told by Hamilton Holt, president of Rollins College, of one of his own experiences, and retold by Joseph T. Mackey, president of the Mergenthaler Linotype Company, might well bear out the idea that it was. It was during the depression and money was somewhat hard to get. Mr. Holt, with an associate, was in New England on a collecting tour, and was visiting those who had at some previous time made contributions to Rollins. But let Mr. Mackey tell the story:

"It was hard work. But near the afternoon, they began to perk up and feel better because they knew that by finishing their scheduled calls on time they could arrive at a certain attractive inn where they were sure of a fine dinner and a comfortable bed. The thought of dinner ahead made their work easy. But, as the sun dropped down, they saw they could not reach the inn if they called on a woman who had once given the college ten dollars.

"To call on this woman meant an additional twenty-five miles of motoring. Was the call worth making? They argued. They decided it was not and rode along with the comforting thought that in an hour they'd be having a cooling shower at their favorite inn. But when they came to the final crossroads, with the road to the right leading to the home of the small contributor and the road ahead leading to the inn, they stopped the car.

"After all, they said, we are working for Rollins. We need every dollar we can possibly collect. So, without any more talk, they hastened on the duty road. Arrived at the woman's house they found dinner nearly ready to be served. They could not have come at a more inopportune time. The companion of the woman they had called to see greeted them coldly. She didn't know them. Neither, apparently, did her employer. It was only when Mr. Holt made it clear he was president of Rollins College to which she had once made a contribution that their prospect consented to see them for a few moments.

"The refined, rather fragile old lady who greeted them listened without expression to Mr. Holt's sales talk. He says he talked badly because he tried to condense into six minutes a talk that was usually twenty minutes long. He was sure that he was wasting his time, but he persisted. When he finished, and almost breathed a sigh of relief, his hostess rose, said, 'I'll give you a check,' walked to a high desk, cluttered with papers, wrote a check, handed it to Mr. Holt and then dismissed him impersonally. When Mr. Holt looked at the check when they were outside, he found they had received one thousand dollars.

"That year when the college year opened one of the guests at Winter Park was their contributor. She had come to see the college for herself. The next summer she gave another thousand. That fall she returned to Florida, but before Mr. Holt could make a call upon her, she died. When her will was read it was found she had left Rollins fifty thousand dollars."

SUFFOLK LETTER.

A revival meeting was held last week in the Liberty Spring Church. Rev. E. R. Brittle assisted the pastor in the meeting. Fifteen members were received into the church on Friday night.

Brother Brittle is the beloved pastor of the Cypress Chapel, Bethlehem and Union (Southampton) churches. Large congregations greeted him throughout the week and the Holy Spirit was present in saving power. The humility and consecration of the preacher made a great impression upon the church and community. His sermons were plain and practical, but the impressions were deep and heart-searching. Truly he is a man of God. He is giving himself without reservation to the Christian ministry. God is honoring his work. The people in his own pastorate are devoted to him, as a pastor, and he is a successful winner of souls. His churches are growing in membership, and he has had great success conducting revival meetings in the churches of his charge. The congregation at Liberty Spring desires his services in a revival meeting.

One of the secrets of his success is his personal work as a visiting pastor. During the year he is constantly on the lookout for prospective additions to the church. He quietly and systematically makes contacts with the people who are not church members in the community. By personal visitation he wins his way into their hearts. In this way new friends are made for the church. Converts are won for Christ and added to the church membership. The revival meeting is the harvest time for months of seeding sowing and patient cultivation.

Other ministers would profit by his methods and devotion to his work. His modesty and humility would cause him to shrink from giving any publicity to his work, but ministers throughout the Convention should have the benefit of his experience. It would be helpful to many ministers to have him on a Summer School Program for a series of addresses on Evangelism and Personal Work as a Pastor. He is doing a wonderful work in the churches of his charge. Other pastors and churches should have the privilege of sharing in this work. If every minister in the churches of the Southern Convention could equal him in consecration and devotion, and be as successful as a winner of souls, the statistical tables would present a different story as to church growth in a few years.

Within a few weeks the Conference year will end, and the opportunity to make this year rich in spiritual achievement will pass. If there are unsaved people within reach of our churches why not go after them? If they will not come to church, when the revival meeting is held, it is possible to carry the gospel to them in their homes. The Gospel has power to save. The Word of God, upon the lips of consecrated men and women, can transform human life. Automobiles can become messengers of heaven when dedicated to personal visitation for Jesus Christ and the kingdom of God on earth. Consecrated men and women in every church may join with the pastor in this glorious work. "He that winneth souls is wise." And there is a great joy in store for everyone who will display this wisdom in a consecrated way.

Christians should live for Jesus Christ and work for Him. That two-fold ideal is within reach of every church member. Today is the time for the realization of this high privilege and opportunity. Surely there is a need. Where are the workers who will enter the field's already white unto the harvest?

ELON COLLEGE RECEIVES FURTHER RECOGNITION.

For the past three years the administration of Elon College has given attention to a more inclusive course of study and has consistently endeavored to provide the school with competent and skilled instructors in specific fields requiring the type of preparation received by individual professors.

A few weeks ago, through the efforts of Mr. M. E. Yount, Superintendent of Public Schools for Alamance County, and Mr. L. E. Spikes, Superintendent of City Schools, Burlington, North Carolina, the State Department of Education at Raleigh authorized Elon College to do inservice training or extension work. This recognition and provision greatly extends the influence and effectiveness of the college. Superintendent L. E. Spikes will be added to the Elon College faculty, retaining his position and responsibilities as Superintendent of the Burlington Schools, but will teach in the college's Extension Department. He will offer a 4-point course in the Psychology of Education which sets forth a basis of learning and its attendant consequences. Mr. George Beecher of Stamford, Connecticut, a recent addition to the Elon College faculty, will also teach a 4-point course in Progressive Education. Mr. Beecher in his course will emphasize the modern view of education in a practical way. Two years ago he was selected to conduct a similar course in Mrs. Roosevelt's Experimental school in West Virginia. He is an expert in this particular field.

These courses will meet two hours each week for thirty-two weeks. Should there be demands for other courses in the Extension School, the college is obligated to provide for the same. These courses are, of course, for public school teachers only and will be taught at night and on Saturdays. This extension work, however, is definitely a part of Elon College. It will be conducted by the college, the curriculum is determined by the college, all matriculations are to be received at the college, but classes for convenience's sake will be conducted in Fisher Street School, Burlington, North Carolina. This will considerably increase the college's enrollment.

Aside from the Extension Department, our enrollment will be considerably larger this year than last. The total enrollment for 1936-37 was 473. The enrollment this year will, in all probability, run considerably beyond the 500 mark, exclusive of the enrollment in the newly created Extension Department. There isn't any question but that this new adventure of Elon College will not only be of great benefit to the school system of Alamance County and adjoining counties, but will attract considerable attention because of its unusually progressive features.

A DELIGHTFUL OCCASION.

On Sunday, August 8, 1937, one hundred and fifty people assembled on the lawn of A. L. Jones in Virginia, Virginia, to have a part in the reunion of the Jones family of this section. About half a century ago Richard D. Jones lived in Granville County, North Carolina, near Big Rock. He had six sons and one daughter to grow up and live to advanced years, as follows: John, Hubbard, Lemuel, Gabe, Wyatt, Reuben, and Susie. The latter married Scott Norwood. Of these children only Wyatt survives at the age of seventy-five. A. L. is the son of Hubbard, who for years was deacon in Union Christian Church. The one hundred and forty descendents of Richard Jones came together from at least three states, Virginia, North Carolina, and West Virginia. It was delightful to witness the joy on the part of those assembled, many of whom had not greeted each other for years. A long table was built in the yard from which a splendid dinner was served. It was the high privilege of the writer to be present, and offer the prayer for the occasion and meet again many of whose parents he served as pastor in former years and whom he had received into the church.

It was agreed to have this family reunion an annual affair and in 1938 to meet with Brother Wvatt Jones of Person County, North Carolina.

May all of these people carry on, in the light of the influence and council of departed ones to the betterment of all that is in the highest interest of mankind.

AM I LOYAL TO ELON?

It is well known that there are few churches of the Congregational-Christian brotherhood in North Carolina, east of Clayton, and none that I have found in eastern South Carolina for many miles; few in east Georgia and east Florida. Too, there are few colleges in these densely populated sections. So it has been a part of my job while in these sections, to acquaint the public with Elon and its objectiveness in the building of Christian character. This I have done, even from the pulpit and the platform, in such fairness and brotherly kindness to other educational institutions as to maintain their respect and best wishes. I really enjoy visits to these colleges and joining in their service in any way that I can help. I help to place young people in these institutions when it is to their best interest to do so. I believe in brotherly love, Christian affection, and cooperation in educational institutions as well as in our different Christian brotherhoods.

Since about June 10, until late in August, I made visits to sections of more than twenty-five counties in eastern North Carolina, all the way from Durham to New Bern; and I have some old pupils that took the canvass on as far as Davis Shore. Neither I, nor my old pupils have done this little service out of selfish motive toward Elon, but in the name of Christian education, assuring the public that Elon College and the Congregational Christian brotherhood is interested in the development of any young woman, regardless of church affiliations and will render a whole-hearted service in preparing them for useful men and women in the world.

A. R. FLOWERS.

HABITS OF A MINISTER.

One of our subscribers once sent us the following with the suggestion that we might use it in our "joke columns": "I wish you were here to give some hint to our pastor that he needs to get his clothes pressed, and put on a clean collar, and several other things that we can't say out loud. He is a good man, and can preach very good sermons; but—! And his wife is much the same."

We publish the item but not in our "joke column" because, as we see it, it is no joke. It is pathetic! It has in it the elements of a tragedy! Here is a good man, and able preacher, who is making his people ashamed of him because of his slovenly and untidy appearance; who is discounting his work, handicapping his influence, and lessening the appeal and power of the Gospel in the community by habits for which there is no possible excuse or palliation. We feel that the particular minister to whom reference is made is an exception, but in our ministry there ought to be no exceptions.

A minister must first of all be a gentleman, and soiled linen, grimy nails, and spotted and rumpled clothes are not the marks of a gentleman. It may not always be possible for him to be well dressed, but it will always be possible for him to be clean. Soap and water are cheap, and neatness in dress and person will cover a multitude of defects.—Clipped.

"Our duty is not to remake ourselves, but to make the absolute best of what God made."

FOR PROGRAM BUILDERS:

The Church in Rural America is the challenging theme for our consideration this year. In these program suggestion we are briefly introducing to you two books, namely, Highland Heritage by Edwin E. White, pastor of our church at Pleasant Hill, Tennessee, and Rebuilding Rural America by Mark Dawber. These two books can well serve as information bureaus, guides, and clarion calls to intelligent consecration to the task of making the church a vital social force in our rural communities. The following gleanings from these books are aimed to entice a desire to read and study them.

Today there are more American men, women and children actually living on farms in the United States than at any other time in our national history. A little less than three-fourths of all churches in the United States are rural in character, and if we include those members of city churches who grew up on the farm or came to the city from rural areas, we must conclude that the churches have been composed largely of rural-minded people throughout the history of Christianity in America. The first Thanksgiving Day was a profound expression of the deep conviction that through the difficult months the Pilgrim Fathers had been working with God.

These emotions have in varying degrees stirred the American farmer these three hundred years, causing Rural America in general to be reverent and devout in spirit. God was present in the minds and hearts of the settlers as they cleared the wilderness and established their homes, so today churches dot the country-side. In these, God's laws and love were proclaimed and they were a unifying center in the social fabric of a community.

Today, it is fitting that we pause and consider whether or not we have preserved this spiritual heritage: namely, an abiding conviction of God's ownership and man's stewardship of the land. The statement of T. C. Clayton, "To save the land is to save the people" is not only economic but religious in import. Much of the present missionary work among under-privileged groups in rural areas is made necessary because of the serious consequences in physical, social, and religious degeneration that follow in the wake of impoverished soil.

The Church has responsibility to keep before its people, the sacred trust involved in stewardship of the soil. This responsibility is clearly outlined in Chapter II of Dr. Dawber's book.

Great changes have come to our countryside during the past years as clearly pictured in Chapter I of Building Rural America, and this changed countryside demands a changed Rural Church program; not simply propagating a religion that prepares one to die, but a Christianity that helps people live with hearts and minds broad enough to make all educational and social forces of Christian service to a community. Chapters IV, V, VII in Rebuilding Rural America not only analyze the present status of rural churches but suggest constructive ways out.

In our country there are special rural groups with special needs. In Chapter VI Dawber presents basic facts and needs of these groups. This is very good background material for programs covering the work of our fellowship with and for these groups; e. g., the Negroes, sharecroppers, Mexicans and Indians. Note the new adventure in Adult Education on Santee under the leadership of Philip Frazier. The migrant workers are challengingly introduced in They Starve That We May Eat, edited by Edith Lowry. Be sure to use this book.

Miss Helen Frances Smith, 287 Fourth Avenue, New York, will furnish materials about our work in the rural areas of the homeland.

In his book, Highland Heritage, Edwin E. White presents to us "The Highlanders," their heritage, their problems, and with prophetic insight a possible way out. This book is well adapted for study, review and reading.

In studying or reviewing it a two-fold plan is suggested. First, use the first four chapters to acquaint ourselves with these friends, discovering who they are, their home life, their means of livelihood, their social contacts, their educational opportunities, and religious background and needs. The second half of the picture is brighter, entitled "Because Someone Cares." (Use Chapters V, VI, and VII as sources of information). These reveal real heroes at work, and as we honor them, let us not forget those at Pleasant Hill.

Here again is the same indictment against many churches: "So absorbed in the preparation for death that they offer little help to young people eager for life, very little preparation for Christian living in our day." So we recommend to you for thoughtful consideration Chapter VIII, "The Church's Part," as a way out.

The church must broaden its horizon to include all activities for social, moral, and educational advancement of the people, helping all forces to go forward together in the same spirit of sacrifice, service, love, and good will as manifested by the Christ who "went about doing good."

The great need is brotherly interest, a real sharing by all peoples that the youth of the Mountains may share in wholesome recreation, in religious art and drama, in music; have access to libraries, schools, and colleges; and study and serve under trained leadership, that they, too, may become serving and loving Christian citizens of these Great Beautiful Highlands. Ponder the question of Edwin White: "Shall it be a plain gospel to all people or a gospel with magnificent surroundings for a few?"

REPORTS OF THE VIRGINIA VALLEY CONFERENCE.

a total of $375.50. This conference year the churches gave to missions, both home and foreign, $119.22 and the Sunday schools gave $318.63, making a total of $473.85. We, therefore have a gain of $62.35 over last conference year, which is encouraging. But we should not compliment ourselves too highly on this gain for this is such a small sum for a membership of 2,452 that we should rather hide our faces in shame. The missionary societies of the conference raised $333.11. The total raised for missions by the conference would be $770.96. Let us give this matter serious consideration and when we reach the end of another conference year our records will show our faith by our works.

R. O. ROTHGER.

REPORT OF STEWARDSHIP SECRETARY.

The Stewardship secretary said: A Christian steward gives his time, talents, body and soul to God . . . God will never bless a man who retains for himself that which belongs to God . . . Be it resolved:

- 1. That a new stress be placed upon Tithing.
- 2. That we, as good Christian Stewards, use the opportunities to better serve God.
- 3. That we seek anew to present our bodies as living sacrifice holy and acceptable unto God.

MINNIE DOFFLEMYER.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON EVANGELISM.

This report gave statistics from the Annual showing that the Valley Conference has decreased in membership in recent years and makes the following recommendations:

- 1. The pastors of the conference report to the chairman of the Evangelism committee each quarter the number of people won to Christ in their respective field.
- 2. The church attempt to make the community more God-conscious.
- 3. The forming of a laity group within the church whose business it will be to form a "prospective list" of new members. This list to be given to the pastor.

titudes and ideals. We feel that it is the duty of the Church to be alert and progressive enough in order to direct the trends of thought and conduct in these social reforms.

We recommend:

- 1. That the churches undertake to develop a recreation program that will meet the needs of the young people of the community.
- 2. That we endorse the efforts of all peace agencies that seek to overthrow war; that the church people be on guard concerning propaganda for war.
- 3. That we affirm our faith in the sanctity of marriage and the home.
- 4. That strong sentiment be voiced against all commercial enterprises in the community that do not offer good physical, moral and social benefits to our people.

- 5. That every person who professes to be a Christian live a Christian-like life before those about them.

NORMAN MORRIS,
MINNIE DOFFLEMYER.

REPORT OF DIRECTOR OF RELIGIOUS EDUCATION.

The director of religious education reported vacation Bible schools in most of the Valley churches and that fifteen young people attended the Elon Summer School of Leadership Training. Three of these young people were from Antioch, two from Bethel, two from Leakesville, two from Newport, one from Mt. Olivet (R) and five from Mt. Olivet (G). Recommendations were as follows:

- 1. A Bible school in every community cooperating, where possible, with other denominations.
- 2. At least one representative from each church attending the Elon Leadership Training School.
- 3. Leadership training schools for Sunday school officers and teachers. Several experimental schools to be held, and the results to be studied at next conference session.
- 4. A serious study of church grouping so that ministers may better serve as pastors and preachers.

A. A. DOFFLEMYER.

A WASTED LIFE.

A wasted life is not always an evil life or an idle life. It is an easy thing to allow life to be filled with matters of small importance or with affairs of such varied and conflicting tendencies that the days and the weeks and the years shall pass with no definite goal reached and no effective work done. No one of the things that have occupied the time and attention may be wrong in itself, but the outcome of the life is as absolutely nothing as if nothing had been attempted. The flitting of the butterfly is serious and earnest compared with such a life, for the butterfly gathers food and lives a life of beauty.

Aimless lives are neither useful nor beautiful. And it must always be remembered that if our lives are to have an aim and trend toward a definite end the purpose and control must come from within. Outward circumstances do not usually conspire to shape a life to the best mold. The decisive purpose that rules your life must be supplied by yourself and adhered to and made effective by the firmness of your own determination.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church"

MISS EMILY CARLETON, Editor, 541 Osceola Ave., Winter Park, Fla.

THE YOUNG PEOPLE OF OAKLAND.

The young people of Oakland Christian Church, Chuckatuck, Virginia, report a good year's work. Their Missionary Society has met the requirements on the Standard of Excellence by increasing their membership to 48, sending reports in regularly, paying their apportionment, presenting a public program, holding regular monthly meetings, and studying the suggested Mission Study book. This society raised $24.00 for the Silver Anniversary Offering.

During the year these young people assisted in the work of their church and Sunday school. Some have served as officers and teachers in the Sunday school, ushers, pianists, and choir members.

This group has been represented at all district meetings and conferences during the year. Five of these young people attended the Elon Leadership Training School in July.

Besides presenting their own public program this group has cooperated with the other departments in presenting programs at various times throughout the year. On the third Sunday in August while their good pastor, Dr. I. W. Johnson, was on his vacation, one of this group conducted the regular monthly worship service. A large crowd heard a splendid address on "Our Church," delivered by Mills Godwin, Jr., a law student at the University of Virginia.

As the year draws to a close this group is already making plans for another year's work. May they continue that which is good and grow to be of still greater service to their church.

NO TRIP TO CHINA NOW.

Last week this page carried announcement of a trip by Miss Lucy Eldredge to Japan and China. The young people had given money, the Boards had agreed for her to go, she had secured passage on a ship, and was in San Francisco ready to start on August 21. But she did not go. The dream of a life-time crumbled to earth because Japanese and Chinese are killing each other in an undeclared war. It is dangerous to travel in these two great countries where missionaries have gone to tell of Christ, the Prince of Peace. Two contending armies send fire and shells from land and sky and sea to destroy life and property in the peaceful land of China. Missionaries have already died amidst this carnage. Others must wait for the mad fury to spend itself before they can build international friendships on the basis of Christian love. This is the tragedy of war!

It is devoutly hoped that reason will soon come back to the leaders of nations, that people will practice peace, and that the young people of our Church can safely send their messenger of peace and good-will to Japan and China. Miss Eldredge has placed the money in a bank so it will be ready whenever she can go to visit the land of the rising sun and bring back a message of inspiration to those with whom she works in America. Pray for the return of peace, for war wrecks hopes and homes and happiness. War is destructive of all that is highest and holiest. We are glad that Miss Eldredge is safe at home among her friends, and we wish as much for the people of China and Japan, thousands of whom have lost life, loved ones and all that they possessed. Pray for the peace of the world.

FRANCIS E. CLARK.

September 12, 1851, like February 2, 1881, is one of the great days of Christian Endeavor, for on that day, Francis E. Clark was born in Ayleshire, Canada. Born Francis Symmes, the boy's name was later changed to Clark when after death of both father and mother he went to live with an uncle. As a young man he was educated for the ministry and for his first pastorate was installed in the Williston Congregational Church of Portland, Maine. Faced with the problem of interesting young people in the church which in that day was very much an adult's institution, the young minister and his wife worked out a plan for their young people which was called Christian Endeavor. On February 2, 1881, about forty youngsters were gathered at the Clark home and to this group Mr. Clark introduced his plan. When they had signed the constitution, Christian Endeavor had begun.

The plan worked out was the same general plan that is in use in Christian Endeavor societies today. The

Daily Readings—

Monday—Teaching About God—John 3:16.

Tuesday—Teaching About Death—John 14:1-3.

Wednesday—Teaching About Preparedness—Luke 12:35-44.

Thursday—Teaching About Missions—Matt. 28:18-20.

Friday—Teaching About Faith—Mark 11:20-26.

Saturday—Teaching on Judgment—Matt. 25:31-46.

It is out of Jesus' teachings and sayings to His disciples, as recorded in the gospels that we recognize the moral principles and Christian virtues which were fundamental to His thinking. We must realize with deep conviction in our hearts that Jesus gave these truths because they could stand the abuse of critics and still radiate the highest of all ideals. They are just as true now as they were then, and when applied to the problems of our day and generation will change life and conduct.

An enormous amount of material is available for our use. The daily readings may be changed into questions. For Monday's reading we may ask, "What is Jesus' teaching about God?" With this topic give the Scripture reference. By the use of John 3:16 any person should make an inspiring talk since it shows the greatness and all inclusiveness of God's love for us.

Give consideration to the way in which the following principles of Jesus may be applied to the problems of today: (1) the supreme value of human personality; (2) the law of love; (3) the principle of self-denial; (4) humility.

Jesus asked, "Why call we Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?" May we seek to observe those things which we have discovered to be the teachings of our Christ for today's living.

A NATION NEEDS RELIGIOUS HOMES.

LESSON XI—SEPTEMBER 12, 1937.

GOLDEN TEXT: Train up a child in the way he should go, and even when he is old he will not depart from it.—Proverbs 22: 6.

LESSON: Deut. 6: 1-9; 11: 18-25.

Learning by Doing.

"Now these are the commandments . . . which the Lord your God commanded to teach you, that ye might do them." God is not concerned with learned heads but with loving and obedient hearts. He wants His children to know His will that they might do His will. He wants His children to be doers of the word and not hearers only. He wants knowledge to issue in conduct. Ministers and teachers must not be content simply with imparting knowledge; they must earnestly strive to inspire to Christian living. And one learns by doing. And one cannot teach these things . . . Indeed one teaches more effectively by what he is and does, than by what he says. God's laws are not ends in themselves; they are not arbitrary laws which He has promulgated to show His authority, or to furnish a basis of judgment. Thy are His means to discipline us and to help us to find the way of abounding and abiding life.

The Dividends of Religion.

"That thy days may be prolonged . . . that it may be well with thee . . . that ye may increase mightily . . ." Frankly the writer says that it pays to be religious. And frankly he says that it pays in material things. There was a very definite balance of rewards and losses associated with obedience or disobedience in his scheme. As a matter of fact, it does not always pay in material things to be a Christian. It is not always well with one simply because one is trying to follow Christ, that is one will not always be prosperous or healthy or successful. But religion does pay. And it pays large dividends in the practical things of life, to say nothing of the spiritual dividends. True religion is conducive to wholesome living and hence to sound health. It develops habits of industry and thrift and hence promotes material success and stimulates increase in material things. It unloosens latent capacities and powers and helps one to grow mightily in the things of the spirit,

And what shall one say of the invisible and intangible but real and enduring dividends of religion, of the sense of security, of the spirit of peace, of the liberty and freedom of inner life, of the grace of the Lord Jesus in heart. Religion pays, it is the greatest dividend producing force in the life of man, especially in abiding values.

A Declaration of Faith.

"Hear O Israel; The Lord our God is one Lord." These words were the opening sentence of the great Shema or the declaration of faith that was repeated in the services of the synagogue twice in a day by the pious orthodox Jews. They affirm that there is one Absolute God, that to Him alone the name Jehovah belongs, and that He was the God of Israel. There is but one true God.

"I believe in God the Father Almighty"—thus begins the Apostle's Creed. It is good for a man to state what he believes. Men cannot live by their doubts, although one might think that they could to hear some moderns talk about what they do not believe. There is no value in having a positive conviction about God and the eternal verities of life.

The First and Great Commandment.

"Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy might"—this said Jesus was the "first and greatest commandment." To love God is the supreme command and hence the supreme duty of man. He is not only to be recognized and acknowledged, not simply to be obeyed and worshipped, but He is to be loved, that He asks for the very love of our hearts. God is love, God loves us, God asks that above all else and above all others, we love Him. It is a law, but it is a law of love.

This love is not to be half-hearted, or divided. We are to love with all our hearts—the seat of affections; we are to love Him with all our souls; with all our personality; we are to love Him with all our might, enthusiastically, passionately. This love will become the means of knowing God—John later said that he who loved not could not know God for God is love. And it will be the motive for obeying God—Jesus said if we loved Him we would keep His commandments. Lovelessness is the great heresy. Love is the true orthodoxy. Love is the fulfilling of the law. If a man lacks love he lacks all.

Teaching Religion in the Home.

"Thou shalt teach them diligently unto thy children, and shalt talk of them when thou sittest in thine house." The foundation of the state and the church is the home. Wherever else religion may be taught, it must be taught in the home. And this cannot be done altogether by proxy. Whatever progress may be made in teaching religion in the Sunday School and in Week-day Schools of Religion, there will still be a need for teaching religion in the home. Indeed, whether we will or not, we teach religion, or the lack of religion or not, we teach it by influence and contagion and contact. But how much better for the parent, and especially the mother to take the time and the pains to teach children the fundamentals of religion. How important that there be an atmosphere of genuine religion in the home so that even unconsciously the child is becoming grounded in the great truths by which men live and without which men cannot live at their best. Grace at meals, family worship, democratic sharing, even formal instruction in one way or another, training in praying, proper attitudes toward the Lord's Day—these things can best be done in the home. God gives us the children first, and during the formative period of life. We should teach them diligently, for if we do this, when he is old he will not depart from the way of the Lord.

Making Religion Natural and Normal.

"Thou shalt talk of them when thou sittest in thine home, and when thou walkest by the way, and when thou liest down and when thou risest up." Religion is not to be simply a Sunday affair or spasmodic affair. It is to be a natural and normal part of the redeeming of all life.

MT. ZION.

The week of August 22-29, 1937, a revival service at Mt. Zion Christian Church, Eclipse, Virginia, was conducted by our pastor, Rev. W. H. Warren, of Ocean View, Virginia. His highest aim in his preaching was to press upon our minds the spiritual way of living. There was an increased number in attendance at each service; the church was inspired to continue the fight for righteousness.

Eight professed faith in Christ and five additions were made to the church with prospect of several members by letters of transfer. We feel that our pastor has accomplished much in his good work.

For all the blessings received we praise and thank our dear Saviour.

MONDAY.

A DELUSION.

"Follow thou me."—John 21:19.

Life is full of woes, dark and difficult experiences, burdens and cares, distress and sorrows. Man is often overcome by these and feels that his experience is worse than one's else. He even forgets that Jesus experienced all the bitterness of life and is a sympathizing friend.

To follow Jesus truly is of special significance to all who travel the way of woe. If our paths are dark and difficult, He went that way; if we have problems, distress and sorrow, He went that way; if we are misunderstood and criticized, he went that way; if our friends fail us, we know that they failed Him.

Whatever befalls us, befell Jesus too. His promise to be with us in the sixth trouble and the seventh, not to forsake us, is true for you and me in everyday experiences.

Prayer—Our Father, give us dauntless hearts to follow Christ all the way. Amen.

TUESDAY.

SAFE IN THE FOG.

"I follow after."—Phil. 3:12.

We are told that when a shepherd of the Judean hills leads his sheep in a fog, they can not see him, but he knows them and calls unto them, ta-ta-ta-ho-ho-ho. The sheep hear their master's voice and follow closely with their eyes toward that voice they follow after.

That is life, clouds and sunshine, fog and open skies, exultation and depression, but progress nevertheless. Jesus said: "My sheep hear my voice." David said: "Mine eyes are ever toward the Lord."

Whether happy or unhappy, a good Christian, like a good traveler, is more concerned to make sure that he is going forward than he is to regard the uncomfortable things about him. Paul said: "I press on."

Prayer—Our Father, we would not have all days bright. We only pray to be steadfast and faithful to Thee in all vicissitudes of life. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

LIFE'S GREATEST ART.

"Mind not high things but condescend to men of low estate."—Rom. 12:16.

In other words he would say that life is made up of lowly things and the little things may arise to the higher things by them.

It is only occasionally that we land the big things of life. Even as we live, minute by minute, so during the day we have to deal with the small things. Little pleasures, little rewards, little duties, little kindnesses, little thoughts, little acts and deeds all make the sum of daily living and even the grand prizes of life, we find, are made wholly of these. The great art is to extract the most from them all.

Prayer—Our Father, forbid that we should waste our time in longing he who pays the most attention to for bigger things. May we not despair the little ones that surround us. Amen.

THURSDAY.

LIFE'S ASSURING HOPE.

"The son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister."—Matt. 20:28.

There are fine examples of Christian service crossing our pathway everyday. Christian men and women going here and there ministering to the wants of the needy. This sort of thing brings more happiness to the world than any other thing that we know. It is just what Christ came to do, and to embue his children to do. We thank God that in some particulars we can be like Christ.

But there are smaller things that are as much expressive of the spirit of Jesus. It is the spirit that people have of sharing with others for their mutual good and pleasure. It may be a book or magazine, or the traveler's album shown to friends, or the home with guests, or the sharing of life with all whom it may serve, in a thousand little things of daily life.

Deep in these, beyond all utterance, lies the motive of loyalty to Jesus.

Prayer—Our Father, make us the more nearly like Christ in our spirit, in example and inspiration, in Christ's name we ask it. Amen.

FRIDAY.

A CHRISTIAN'S FREEDOM.

"Thou hast set my feet in a large room."—Ps. 31:8.

A large room suggests space, freedom of thought and action, and freedom from perils of littleness and restriction.

The U. S. Fleet goes to the sea for maneuvers and there they have the room of the great spaces of the ocean. They turn and circle, they do right oblique, left oblique, right angles and anything else required for the problem. There is a great sense of freedom in this room of great waters that one can find no where else.

The Christian whose life is hid with Christ in God has a freedom that is denied to worldlings.

Prayer—Our Father, lift Thou us up into the fullness of the knowledge that we are Thy children. Make us free from sin and free for a perfect service. In the name of Christ, we ask it. Amen.

SATURDAY.

A COMPANION FOR LONELY SOULS.

"Lo, I am with you always, even to the end of the world."—Matt. 28:20.

Recalling the millions of cripples and invalids and shut-ins, we are made to think that these sufferers suffer, in addition to their pain, great loneliness. An invalid's bed is a very narrow world despite the friends who may call there.

Yet there are many who are evidences that such confinements become habitations of heroism and light of glittering souls. We knew of one woman confined to her room, racked in misery and pain, for a period of twelve years, but that room was a place of light to every soul that entered it.

Simple endurance itself may be the highest form of courage and inspiration to some people. Whatever it is, a walk with Christ is sufficient, for in Him there is light and there is life.

Prayer—Our Father, we bring to Thee all those of sorrow and loneliness and pain, praying Thy blessing upon them. Amen.

SUNDAY.

RIVERS OF GRACE.

"There is a river, the stream whereof shall make glad the city of God."—Ps. 46:4.

Rivers always make glad. We have rivers of the ocean as well as the land. The Gulf stream of the Atlantic and the Japanese stream of the Pacific flow through the mighty oceans and temper the climate wherever they go. Upon entering them, they are streams of grace that almost alter our very natures. They bring blessings to far off lands whose shores are washed with them. The rivers of the continent bring to man and beast blessings in richness of land, fields of grass and grain, and riches to the country.

And here is the wonder of it all—Christian faith brings the soul, streams of divine grace which pre-

PILATE WAS FOR RELEASING HIM. BUT . . .

By REV. VICTOR B. CHICOINE.

"Pilate was for releasing him. But . . ."—John 19:12. (Weymouth).

Everyone of us has been in some difficult situation where we knew just what we should say or just what we should do—but have neither spoken nor acted as though we did. We were handicapped by pressure from the outside, and by fierce and differing emotions within. Pilate was in just that sort of situation. He was for releasing Jesus, but there was an angry and powerful mob without—and within himself there were surging and conflicting desires.

There was the transparent honesty of Jesus. This must have appealed to Pilate. The man before him was no criminal, liar, cringing fellow, but truth itself. The unfairness of it all must have stirred Pilate deeply. For Pilate was a Roman, he had been born and trained a Roman—and Romans stood for world conquests, justice, and law. This pettiness on the part of those demanding the death of Jesus must have been nauseous to him. Then there was the forboding dream of his life. And finally there was official and dominating Rome to be considered.

A flood of mingled emotions was upon Pilate that day. And added to all this there was a hatred for the fawners before him, scorn for the sycophants from the synagogue, and a terrible fear for his own future.

These wild and turbulent thoughts clashed with the noble emotions concerning the issue before him. Pilate had noble motions and feelings, and they came to grips with the lower and lowest that was in him—as they do in all men—but the noble ones did not dominate that day! The truth was that Pilate had built up no single great, dominating emotion that could control all the others! He had a large number of little, vicious, and selfish ones—and they massed themselves for a terrific onslaught against his better self—and they won!

It was not that Pilate on this particular day loved justice, but that he loved preferment, his own skin, and more ease! Pilate was for releasing Jesus, but considering the crowd, and his own precious skin—it was safer to hand over Jesus!

We know the tale by Anatole France in which he relates what he thinks occurred that day when Jesus faced Pilate. But even if it did happen that way—that Jesus was a mere passing incident in the official life of a Roman governor—a poor misguided mechanic from Nazareth who had become confused with an ideal and the real world—and forgotten by Pilate as soon as the matter was settled in an official way—so much greater the indictment of Pilate, and all men like him.

But the men in the crowd after it had been broken up when the day's tragedy was over, how do you suppose that some of them felt? There must have been some real men and good men who stood by in that hour when Jesus was condemned to die. And on the next day—after the excitement of the hour had passed and they were able to view the whole treacherous affair in its light, shame must have seized hold of them even as it griped Judas. These men if possible must have stayed at home and avoided their neighbors. Or if they were forced to go abroad they crept cautiously through the back alleys and streets.

But deeper than the sense of shame would be a profound and more rankling thought. They had been tricked! They had been cheated! They had been swindled! This man was one of their own—they saw it now. He had been speaking for them. He was the one spokesman who seemed to know what he was about, who went to the source of their troubles. And now silly fools that they were, they had allowed themselves to be plundered of him!

If Anatole France was right, a poor man before the bar of justice of the greatest nation of its day could not but expect to be defrauded of his rights. It may not happen often—but once is too often! That act on the part of Pilate, the church dignitaries, and that portion of the crowd that had been bought up, was only a piling up against the floodgates of human rights a bit more of the great flood of feelings that will some day break through and sweep all like Rome, and like Pilate from places of power. It will be a flood of love—but stern and unyielding—that will bring about human rights. The warning of that coming event Edwin Markham puts this way:

"Two things," said Kant, "fill me with breathless awe:

The starry heavens and the moral law. But I know a thing more awful and obscure—

The long, long patience of the plundered poor."

Previous to this occasion Pilate had decided many times and boldly, upon military matters; the building of aqueducts; the beautifying of the city. But in this matter when he should have dealt boldly and fairly with a carpenter who represented humanity—he utterly failed!

Pilate was for releasing Jesus, but the crowd, it kept shouting, and there were too few imprudent people to speak and to act for justice. But was it not proved within twenty-four hours that Pilate was right in his reasoning, and in the way he acted? Did not the crowd disperse in an orderly fashion? Did not the tumult cease throughout the city—and also the tumult in Pilate's mind—according to Anatole France? And was not the threat to carry the matter to Rome recalled? And did not all flow on serenely once more?

It takes no prophet nor the son of a prophet to know that the Caesars, and their men, like Pilate, will go on and on in their abetting of crucifixions until imprudent men and women by the scores, the hundreds, the thousands upon thousands begin to think and act. The roads of life must become thronged and jammed by those who are willing to forget themselves into God's presence, because they love truth, and righteousness, and justice more than they love anything else in the world!

CHANNELS OF BLESSING.

The attitude of different individuals toward money, and indeed, toward all God's rich gifts to them, is well illustrated by the two seas of Palestine with which all the Bible students are familiar. The sea of Galilee receives the river Jordan at the north and gives it off to the south. It is surrounded by verdant shores and life in many forms. The Dead Sea receives the river Jordan but holds it; there is no outlet. No life can live within this sea, and its very name is a synonym for desolation. The lesson is obvious. Lives that receive God's blessings and pass them along to others are beautiful lives; lives that are selfish, receiving and keeping, are comparable to the despised Dead Sea.

God wants us to be channels of blessings, not reservoirs.—Paul E. Holdcraft.

The Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

The boys at the Christian Orphanage are good workers. Mr. Wagner, my assistant has been quite ill for a week. During this time we had a car of coal to come in and it had to be unloaded. We had the boys to take the wagons and haul it out. They went at it with a will and by late in the afternoon they hauled out the last ton. A lady who lived near the place where we unload the coal said to me that I ought to feel proud of our boys because they certainly stuck to their work till the last lump of coal was in the wagon.

Then it fell to our lot to fill a 125 ton silo—one of the hardest jobs we have to do. We got some extra help and undertook to do the job. We started on Friday morning and by Saturday night we had 90 tons in the silo. The boys stuck like leaches and not one complained. No one shirked and we had no “sit down strike.”

Sunday, September 5th, was “Home Coming Day” at the Christian Orphanage. It is always Sunday before Labor Day. On this day the children who have been reared in the orphanage and have gone out are invited back home. Quite a number came back to visit the old home and see each other and make new acquaintances.

We had children from Norfolk, Newport News, South Norfolk and many places in North Carolina. We were glad indeed to welcome these boys and girls back to their old home again. In the program Dr. J. N. Newman led the devotions. Mr. Vitus R. Holt, Vice-President of the Board, gave the welcome address. Mr. W. B. Truitt, of Greensboro delivered the address of the occasion. His theme was “Sharing With Others” and he made it very impressive and his address was very highly appreciated by those present.

Have you shared any of your blessings with the little children here? Don't you think it would make you happy to do so? Mail us your personal check and see if it don't give you a real joy in your heart that you have not had before.

AT THE ELEVENTH HOUR.

Between August 23rd and September 1st, I received letters from three worthy young women, two from North Carolina and one from Georgia, each asking me if I could get her in touch with some source from which she could secure a loan sufficient, when placed with what she has in hand to take her through college the coming scholastic year. I am quite sure that CHRISTIAN SUN readers have little idea of the mental strain through which I pass each year, especially from about the first of April up until the last of August, trying to help such deserving young women and deserving young men into institutions of learning, where they can have a chance to prepare themselves to be useful men and women in life. For the last few years I have received letters from young people in the different states whose faces I have never seen, but they write me letters that are an inspiration to a man who really loves young people who have real ideas and worthy objectives. It is tragic that more of these young people can not be educated. Society sorely needs them. A Methodist minister, with whom I work a great deal, made the statement from his pulpit recently that "Brother A. R. Flowers has lost himself in the cause of Christian education for our youth." I am frank to acknowledge that he was right, but it is a work that any real Christian man or woman can lose self in, but you will soon be found; they will find you and make your heart rejoice after they have gotten out in active life. They will support you in your work for the sake of others who are coming after them. I have just received a $20.00 check from Mr. J. T. Boykin of Sims, North Carolina. Mr. Boykin is a business man and one of my old pupils, through the scholastic years 1918-1919 and 1919-1920. He is affiliated with the Baptist church.

A. R. FLOWERS.

HOW I HOLD YOUNG PEOPLE IN MY CHURCH.

A Symposium

My experience for twenty years has taught me that the gospel is the best attraction for youth. The churches which I have served have always become great young people's churches. My present pastorate is characterized by the presence of an unusual attendance of young people upon the preaching services. I have discovered that a vigorous Bible preaching-teaching ministry, with its practical application to the needs of our age in every walk of life, attracts thoughtful and earnest youth. Young people are keen to detect compromise. They do not want speculations; they want certainties.

I do not put on extra attractions to entice young people, but I endeavour to retain their interest through harnessing their enthusiasm in constructive expression. For example, I have them associated with me occasionally in some phase of the service of the church. Recently, on successive Sundays, the five young people's groups had a fifteen minute period at the opening of the evening service, during which time they presented a program over the radio, in keeping with the evangelistic type of meeting. There was no duplication. The variety was pleasing. It held the attention of the older people and created enthusiasm among the young people themselves.

I endeavour always to make soul-winners of the young people, with this slogan: "Young people after young people for Christ and the Church," emphasizing the spiritual realities of life and service. Worldly attractions would fail utterly with young people, and lead to their spiritual demoralization. Perhaps today they are misled more than any other group through erroneous teaching, lying advertising, and the like, and I verily believe that if it please God to give the church another spiritual awakening, it will come through the youth.—Albert G. Johnson in Free Will Baptist.

FRANCIS E. CLARK.

growth of the idea came about, not because of any promotional schemes, but because other Churches and pastors, seeing how well this worked out with the Williston group, came to adopt it for their own. Within a short six societies were formed. Soon great Conventions of Endeavorers were being held. Within fourteen years after the first society met one of the greatest conventions of all time was held.

Christian Endeavor spread rapidly all over the world. Today it exists in 125 nations and there are approximately 80,000 societies. Four million present day Endeavorers speak a hundred languages and are drawn from ninety denominations

Christian Endeavor owes much to Francis E. Clark. Not only was he given the vision which made the movement possible at first, but he was its guide and its most ardent laborer for many years. His great wisdom, his real love for, and understanding of the problems of youth, his genuine desire to bring Christ to all the world contributed much to the success of the work. For many years he served as International and World President and he actually gave up his life in the service of Christian Endeavor. Probably it was never more truly said of any man than of him, "He that loseth his life, for my sake, shall gain it." Surely Francis E. Clark has gained for himself a shining place in the hearts of young men and women, some now grown aged, and in the presence of Him Whom he served.

The Voice of God is Calling

The voice of God is calling
Its summons unto men;
As once He spoke in Zion,
So now He speaks again.
Whom shall I send to succor
My people in their need?
Whom shall I send to loosen
The bonds of lust and greed?

I hear my people crying
In cot and mine and slum
No field or mart is silent,
No city street is dumb.
I see my people falling
In darkness and despair,
Whom shall I send to shatter
The fetters which they bear?

We heed, O Lord, Thy summons,
And answer, here we are!
Send us upon Thine errand,
Let us Thy servants be.
Our strength is dust and ashes,
Our years a passing hour—
But Thou canst use our weakness,
To magnify Thy power.

From ease and pleasure save us,
From pride of place absolve;
Purge us of low desire,
Lift us to high resolve.
Take us, and make us holy,
Teach us Thy will and way,
Speak, and behold! we answer,
Command, and we obey!

OUR ALBEMARLE CHURCH.

Shown here is the Congregational-Christian Church of Albemarle, North Carolina, which was founded twenty-five years ago. An appropriate anniversary service was held in this church recently and was largely attended. The church plant is modern in every respect, and some very effective work is being done in this community by the church organization. Rev. Arnold Slater has been pastor since 1934.

PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

Miss Minnie Thorn, it is reported, has been doing good work in the interest of Elon College recently in Eastern Carolina.

The East Alabama Conference of Congregational and Christian churches will meet at Dingler's Chapel, near Lineville, October 13-14th.

Rev. B. J. Earp and family, of Paces, Virginia, are grateful to their churches for financing a very pleasant vacation from which they have just returned.

Chaplain H. E. Rountree, now stationed at San Diego, California, says he is getting considerable pleasure out of concert singing. The San Diego Union of August 29th tells of a musicale conducted in one of the local hotels by Chaplain Rountree.

Dr. C. Rexford Raymond is this week holding a revival in the Christian Church at Holland, Virginia. Dr. Raymond is now retired from the active pastorate and will be glad to aid the churches in any way possible. Address him at Southern Pines, North Carolina.

Our churches in Norfolk, Suffolk and Wakefield areas hold leadership training schools each year. They are scheduled to open this year on October 11th and to run for three weeks. Norfolk and Suffolk will have alternating nights for the first two weeks and Wakefield will meet the third week. Miss Priscilla Chase of New York City and Dr. John L. Lobinger of Boston will be on the faculty of each school. Several local leaders will share in the programs also. Sunday schools and churches in these areas will surely be planning for their leaders to be present. This will include missionary leaders since Dr. Lobinger is the educational secretary for missions for our church.

MISSIONARY RALLY.

Young People of Eastern Virginia will please note that their annual missionary conference has been postponed from the regular meeting time, September 24th, until the following Friday, October 1st. This change is made in order to have Dr. Norma Dunning, a young woman who has been a medical missionary in India, speak to our young people.

CAROLINE GORT,
Young People's Supt.

HOME-COMING SERVICE.

On the fifth we held a home-coming service at Christian Chapel, near Merry Oaks, North Carolina, and it was a real Christian service. Our pastor, Rev. George Talley, preached a most valuable and constructive sermon in the forenoon.

The afternoon was used by different units of worship, such as short talks by Rev. J. S. Carden and Rev. J. E. Franks, both of whom are ex-pastors of this church. Their discourses were of the most constructive type. Brother Carden was full of pep, and we are sure that he is not yet near through preaching the good old time religion. Then came Brother Johnston, superintendent of the Christian Orphanage, with a group

OUR PRAYER.

By REV. EVERETT LESHER.

Eternal God, we present ourselves to Thee at the altar of prayer, soiled and dusty with the sins and business of the by-gone week. Thou knowest how faulty our lives have been. Yea, Thou knowest us even better than we know ourselves. Our very inmost thoughts and desires are known to Thee. Nothing is hid; nothing can be concealed. Thou dost see all; Thou dost hear what our words cannot tell. Even our most secret and silent wishes are thoroughly understood by Thee. Lord, the door of our life is ajar. Search us and know our hearts. Deliver and purify them for all corrupt affections and irregular passions. Fill them with higher issues. Give us wings of ardent zeal and pure devotion that we may rise above the bitterness of earth's travail and taste the sweetness of Holiness. Make life one continued act of prayer and obedience, and where our power fails to accomplish that, strengthen and supply whatever is wanting by Thy grace. With Thee the rugged ways of duty are made smoother, the heaviest burdens made lighter, the greatest difficulties made easier, and the bitterness of suffering lifted. So do we beseech Thee, O Lord of Mercy, to enter into us and possess us and make our inner lives a sanctuary of Thy strengthening Presence. In the name of Jesus. Amen.

of orphanage children with their program, and that was just excellent. The program was enjoyed by all present, which was a full house, and many outside. The occasion was a great success, and enjoyed by all, many of whom came from a great distance, and some of whom had not been here for twenty-four years.

The quartette from Durham, led by Mr. Emory Woodell, sang some of the most beautiful songs, and we realize that Mr. Woodell, who was reared in this community, has not lost his vigor and smoothness of singing.

A. M. COTTEN.

"Empty lives, like empty houses, soon go to pieces."

HEADS MUSIC DEPARTMENT.

The appointment of Stuart Graham Pratt as head of the Music Department at Elon College has been announced by President L. E. Smith.

Dr. Pratt comes to Elon from Kings College in Bristol, Tennessee, where he served as head of the music department. Before going to Kings College, he was professor of music at Hartwick College, Oneonta, New York for a period of eight years. This was the college from which Dr. Pratt secured his A. B. degree.

The new Music head secured his Mus. B. from the Philadelphia Musical Academy and his Mus. M. from Syracuse University. After finishing there, he went to Germany where he studied piano under Marta Siebold, theory in composition under Hugo Kaun, and organ under Walter Scharwenka for two years.

In his professional career, Dr. Pratt has done considerable concert work in piano and for five years was a symphonic director. He is an experienced organ and choir master.

Dr. Pratt is married and lives on the Elon campus.

RETROSPECTION.

When the day is finished, we should thank God for his blessings, forgive our enemies, and slumber with a clear conscience through the night. At the end of the year we should take an inventory of our lives and start the new year with a determination to do greater things. At the end of the journey here we look back over a life already spent and then go face the Alpha and Omega, Jesus Christ, who will judge us at the last day. Let us remember that, whether we be of royal family and dwell in kings' houses or whether we be a peasant and live in a tent or an humble cottage, we must be judged according to our works.—E. M. Borden.

I think Rev. A. R. Flowers has given Elon College a good square deal this summer. He has worked little or much in more than two dozen counties all the way from Durham, North Carolina, to near New Bern, and he has some old pupils who finished out the canvass down to Davis Shore. He says, "We ask nothing of Elon for our services but to keep on delivering the goods."

H. F. FULCHER,

Revs. W. J. Andes and Roy Coulter were in Richmond Tuesday of this week, en route to Suffolk, Va., where Mr. Andes attended the Annual Meeting of the Mission Board of the Southern Convention.

ONE HUNDRED YEARS OF GIVING AND PRAYER.

General Aaron Simon Daggett, U. S. A., retired, on June 14, 1937, rounded out 100 years of Christian giving and prayer, and he is still hale and hearty.

For a number of years General Daggett has been praying that he might be spared to reach his 100th birthday and God in his gracious mercy has answered such prayers.

Those of us who know and love General Daggett and have felt the influence of his fine Christian spirit rejoice with him on his anniversary, and we rejoice for his splendid Christian life.

General Daggett has always been a faithful and consistent giver to the Lord and has practiced self-denial to do so.

Some ten years ago, when his legs were stiff and it was difficult for him to get on and off cars, he regularly went across town from his home on Capitol Hill to the Central Presbyterian Church on the street car—walking a block or so to and from cars at each end. When asked by friends why he traveled on the street cars instead of using the cheap and convenient taxis, he replied that by using the street cars he saved approximately 60c per trip to church and that gave him just 60c more each Sunday which he could, and did, give to the Lord.

While this is a small matter, yet it is typical of his life of giving which, as we will see, became so far-reaching and influential.

At the beginning of the Boxer Uprising in China, in 1900, General Daggett was in command of the American forces in China and because of his fine character and splendid ability, he was made commander-in-chief of all the combined troops of Europe and America in China during those perilous days and acquitted himself with distinction and won the praise and admiration of the world.

With such a noble Christian as General Daggett, who had consistently practiced self-denial and giving as counsellor and advisor on the Chinese situation, it is very easy to understand how and why the President and the Congress of the United States was influenced and led to turn back and donate its share of the Boxer Indemnity fund, so that it would be used to advance education in China.

ALBEMARLE'S TWENTY-FIFTH ANNIVERSARY.

The First Congregational-Christian Church of Albemarle, North Carolina, on August 8, 1937, observed its twenty-fifth anniversary. Rev. Arnold Slater, pastor of the church, reports that the annual evangelistic series which the anniversary program brought to a close was a great spiritual blessing, and the spirit of the church gives every indication that they may anticipate a year of growth. Rev. J. E. McCauley of Richmond, Virginia, conducted the revival and assisted in the anniversary program.

The history of the church is an interesting one. We quote from the booklet which the church published commemorating this twenty-fifth anniversary:

"Rev. A. Lamonds, State Evangelist of the Congregational Churches of North Carolina, came to Albemarle with his Gospel Tent in May, 1912, to conduct a revival meeting. The meeting was a success and at the close of it a group of believers asked him to organize a church. He refused to grant their request at first, but after careful consideration decided to organize.

REV. ARNOLD SLATER.

On the night of July 28, 1912, the believers met in a brush arbor, prepared for this purpose, and organized the First Congregational Church. The church was legally organized according to the Congregational laws. Officers and a building committee were elected also.

For about a period of ten months worship services were held in the brush arbor, a tent, and in the homes of the people. During these months plans were developing for a church meeting.

A lot was purchased November 30, 1912, for the sum of one hundred dollars. The church building was then started and with the cooperation of the Congregational Building Society, the building was completed at the cost of twelve hundred dollars. The first service held in the church was in the form of a business meeting May 25, 1913. The purpose of this meeting was to elect officers for the church.

The church continued to grow and the Sunday school membership increased. By 1922 it seemed that a new and better equipped building was an absolute necessity. It was plainly evident that the Sunday school could not do its best without class rooms.

After about five years of planning and preparation in July, 1927, a new church building was started. With the supreme efforts of the members and friends and the Building Society the present building was completed with the exception of the basement. The first service held in the new church was a sunrise service Easter Sunday, 1928.

A special service of Dedication of the church was held Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, September 27, 1931.

Due to the merger of the Congregational and Christian churches, the first Congregational Church of Albemarle officially changed its name to Congregationaal-Christian Church on October 4, 1936.

The Sunday school rooms in the basement were completed April 27, 1937, making a total of thirteen class rooms.

The present estimate of the church property is thirteen thousand dollars.

ATTENTION SUPERINTENDENTS.

I am mailing a letter to the superintendent of each Sunday school in the Eastern North Carolina conference of Congregational and Christian Churches. I want all superintendents and pastors to be sure to read this letter to the Sunday schools and churches. Let us do more for the different items mentioned in that letter and make our Convention active.

Did you read the report of Superintendent Charles D. Johnston in THE CHRISTIAN SUN of September 2, 1937? It showed that an average of $1.44 per child for a week's support was sent in from the Sunday schools. That won't do. If any superintendent fails to get one of my letters, write me at Chapel Hill, North Carolina, and I will see that your school gets one.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgement and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

TO FINISH THE YEAR.

There may be several things that need to be done in your church in order to finish the year in good style. Of course a mere editor does not know just what the situation is in your church, but he does know about one church, the one he serves as pastor. Within a few days all the churches in the Southern Convention, except those in the Valley of Virginia, will be making a report for the year. What needs to be done to get that report right?

It may be that more money needs to be raised. The pastor may not be paid in full. Conference Apportionments often get neglected until the end of the year and whatever amount can be raised without much effort is sent to the Conference, regardless of how far below the standard it may happen to be. Better check up on these items to be sure. And why leave it to the treasurer only? If you are a member of the church, don't you think that you have some responsibility in the matter? And aren't you interested? Don't let such an important matter drag without your help. If all bills are paid in full, and a little more given for good measure, then you and your church can feel the blessings of Him who talked about the second mile.

But what about the new members of your church? You have doubtless lost some by death or transfer. Have you received others to take their places? Have you gained any? In recent years most of our churches have lost rather than gained in membership. No one wants to be a part of a dying organization. If your church seems to be falling backwards the thing to do is to get busy and win new converts to the Christian way and to membership in your church. There are plenty of people in these Virginia and Carolina communities who are not members of churches to double our church rolls. There is no good reason for leaving them to become heathen. Try winning some of them to your church. It will give you a thrill different from anything that you ever tried. Be sure that your church is increasing in membership when the report is made.

Then be sure that your report is made and that delegates are in attendance at Conference. Surely there is no excuse for a church not sending a report to Conference. Statistics are supposed to indicate the conditions of our work, and unless those statistics are accurate and up to date they are worthless. The Conference is the churches in cooperation. If your church is not represented, your church is not cooperating. This is like the family in the church that never attends the meetings or shares in the work. Such a family misses all the joys of service and friendship. The Conference needs your church and your church needs the Conference. Why not take some personal pride in your Conference and your church? They are about the most important organizations with which you are associated. They will do you good, if you will let them.

Do not let the Conference year just drag out. Put some enthusiasm into your church work so that everything is in order. This will mean that officers are ready to begin the next year's work. That plans will be made for another year of successful service. To finish this year's work means to begin another. To finish it successfully means to begin the new year with hope, plans, and the prospects for growth.

TO READ OR NOT TO READ.

Is our Church to be a reading Church, or will it be content to live without reading? That is a question worthy of serious thought on the part of local and Conference leaders. Your editor wishes to place it squarely before those of you who carry the responsibility of church work.

Many there are who do not know the necessity for reading church literature. Among these seem to be many leaders of churches. The Sunday school literature used in our churches comes from several different denominations and some non-denominational sources. At first glance this may seem to be all right. But is it? What does it do for our own churches? The answer is that many of our young people and adults do not know anything at all about the denomination of which they are part. They have been taught the doctrines of other churches or of no church. They have not been told the faith as it is delivered by the church of their choice, neither have they been instructed concerning the programs, plans and institutions of their own Church.

In addition to Sunday school literature we have this paper, magazines for young people, missionary materials, and a denominational paper. But of what value are these papers to those who never read them? Advance, The Pilgrim Highroad, and The Missionary Herald are as fine as are to be had in any place. Even "The Christian Sun" has some value to those who read it. But all of them are worthless so far as most of our church people are concerned, for, as a matter of fact, it is doubtful that half of our people even know the names of these papers.

What does this accusing editor mean? He means simply that he hopes that the leaders in local churches and conferences will decide that the thing to do is to get the people to read the Church Papers. He believes that this can be done. We have succeeded with other projects, and we can succeed with this one. It is possible to get our people to subscribe for, and read the papers. Most people read something. They spend money for whatever they want. They, most of them, have sufficient funds to pay for the papers. The trouble is that they have not seriously thought of the matter. Those who read should tell them the importance of their reading, and in many ways show them the joys that come from reading of the Church and religion.

Some churches are considering putting the Church Papers in the budget and sending them to all members of the church. Why not? No one questions the necessity of buying coal to keep worshippers warm who attend church. It seems to be all right to pay for the minister's service as a preacher. Sunday school literature is bought without question. Then why not see that the members of the church have copies of the necessary church publications so they can be informed about what is going on in their Church and in the religious world? This seems to be a plan worthy of real thought. In a certain Presbyterian church where it is being used, it works well. The church has made rapid strides since the people have begun reading the Church Paper and the Missionary Magazine. It is the same pastor. Other things are about as before, except that new light and life have sprung up since the people have begun reading the Church literature.

A reading people are likely to be loyal and progressive people. The opposite is also equally correct. Stop the Church Paper from the homes of the people and the church begins to deteriorate. Put the paper into the homes and hearts of the people, and the church moves forward. Which way shall we go? What will the answer be in your church? The answer to that may lie with you and what you do about it.

UNDECLARED WARS.

Modern wars seem to thrive without being called war. Italy decides she wants Ethiopia and takes it with machine guns and bombs and gas without ever soiling her reputation with declaring war. Japan wants the rich stores in China and goes over to take what she wants at the point of the sword. No nation today seems to want war. And apparently there is no need to use such an ugly word. There may be some bit of unpleasantness as large cities are burned, homes and hospitals wrecked, and thousands of men, women and children killed, or maimed for life. It is a bit unfortunate if someone happens to receive bullets shot from battleships, bombs bursting in air, or poison gas sent to clear the air (of natives) so the army can proceed on its peaceful journey to bring civilization to non-cooperatives.

All of which is senseless and silly. War is war, whether called that or not. And Sherman was right: "War is hell!" It deceives, destroys, and damns mankind. All the nations may keep up the pretense that there is no war in Europe or Asia, but the fact is that war is doing deadly work both to the east and west of us. Missions and missionaries are being destroyed. Men are bending every effort to slaughter each other, and women and little children suffer the consequences of war—war that turns a peaceful world into a turbulent hell. Nice words do not change the facts. It does no good to try to deny the truth. Our nation must take its stand in regard to war whether that war is declared or undeclared. Our commerce faces destruction on the high seas and about blockaded ports. Our people are unsafe within the borders of warring nations. We stand to lose because war is destructive. But if we want neutrality, and the Congress said we do, then we must put into operation those processes that have to do with being neutral with warring nations. It is no easy task, but it is a necessity. When nations are slaughtering each other they are at war. Other nations are neutral, or they are not. High-sounding phrases do not change the facts. The sooner the world moves out of its house of make-believe and faces realities, the sooner we will arrive at the chance to correct difficulties and start again on the road to progress. F. C. L.

BIRTHDAY OF THE CONSTITUTION.

"We, the people of the United States, in order to form a more perfect Union, establish justice, insure domestic tranquillity, provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity, do ordain and establish this Constitution of the United States of America."

With the above preamble America's government was planned and established 150 years ago.

On September 17th of this year we observe the 150th anniversary of the signing of the Constitution, that document under which has grown the most perfect civilization ever created by man. Under the Constitution there has been created better living, more of the comforts and luxuries of life, for more people than anywhere else in the world. Under the Constitution there has grown a land of opportunity, drawing millions of people from other countries to our shores.

Our streets are not paved with gold, as so many of those who came to our shores believed, but there has existed and does exist today golden opportunity and liberty for one and all.

What has been the foundation of the vast progress of America in the short space of 150 years? What lies at the bottom of our vast opportunities? How is it that we have built great industries that pay the highest wages in the world and where men work shorter hours than elsewhere? How is it that we have the world's highest living standards? Why do more people own their homes in America? How is it that we have more schools for the education of our children and that there are more hospitals for the sick?

Because behind all of these stands one thing—the Constitution of the United States, which today, as 150 years ago, guarantees freedom, liberty, and opportunity for all.

No other document in the history of the world has given:

1. Religious freedom.
2. Freedom of speech.
3. Freedom of the press.
4. Freedom of assembly, the right to get together at any time.
5. The right to petition the government to right wrongs.
6. The right to vote and choose our own governing officials.
7. The right to work, using our earnings for ourselves and our families and to hold property which we acquire.

8. The right of citizenship and of equal protection of the law. No political group can pass a law removing the right of citizenship of any class or group.

These are but a few of the protections which the Constitution guarantees to every American through a government of three independent parts—the Legislative, headed by the Congress; the Executive, headed by the President; the Judiciary, headed by the Supreme Court.

SESSQUICENTENNIAL COMMISSION.

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Within about two months the annual sessions of the Conferences of the Southern Convention for 1937 will be a matter of history. These two months are very important. Many churches defer the raising of the money for the various Conference and Convention Funds until the last few weeks before time for the annual session. Usually the local expenses have not been paid up to date. Extra effort is necessary to raise enough money to meet the budget in full before the report is sent to the annual Conference. A little delay and inclement weather may make it difficult to meet the obligations of the local church promptly and fully.

Every pastor should make an earnest effort to present the various calls for support of the church enterprises with clearness and emphasis. The laymen of the churches should support the pastor in his effort to raise the Conference Apportionments in full. Many excuses will be given and sundry objections will be raised in this important part of the local church program. As a rule it is much easier to pay the current expenses of the local church, if the Conference Apportionments are paid in full. Dr. Staley once said: "I can guarantee the payment of the pastors salary in any church which pays in full its Conference Apportionments."

It is not easy to interest indifferent people in the larger program of the church. Systematic instruction will usually pave the way for a more favorable attitude. The young people should be carefully instructed concerning the various enterprises of the church and should be taught the duty of systematic giving. When they reach mature years they will be responsive to the plea for all the benevolences of the kingdom of God. Here is a field which will yield rich returns in a few years, if properly cultivated. Older people are somewhat fixed in their opinions, and it is difficult to change their attitude towards the general work of the church.

If the Congregational and Christian Churches are to keep pace with the other aggressive denominations, and meet their opportunities and responsibilities, it is evident that there must be a greater interest in the missionary work of the kingdom. There should be a more concerted effort to increase the membership of our churches. If our denomination is worthy of our patronage, the number of our churches should be increased, and the local churches should grow in numbers and in power. This is a vital part of the missionary program. Raising money for missions is secondary to winning souls. It is a means, but not the end. No church should be satisfied when it has simply raised its quota for any or all of the benevolences of the church. Boys and girls, men and women should be brought to a saving knowledge of Jesus Christ and trained for service in the church.

September and October may be great harvest months for the churches of our Convention. Has your church won new converts and added new members during the year? Surely others may be won in the next few weeks. Someone within reach of your church is waiting for your invitation. And those Conference Apportionments can be raised by prayerful, persistent effort. An honest effort will be richly repaid. Increase your church membership and the offerings for the kingdom of God.

AN ENLARGED CURRICULUM FOR ELON COLLEGE.

Elon College is enlarging its curriculum so as to be of more practical service to students enrolled in the college and others who may be interested in improving their situation by taking such college courses.

This year there will be offered a course in practical Home Economics. This course has been organized primarily for homemakers and upper-classmen in college. Special attention is to be paid to menus, cooking, preparing, and serving meals. Special instruction will also be given to interior decoration, furnishing of the home, ect. The course will also include dressmaking, upholstering, and different kinds of needlework. This class will meet on Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday at 10:30 A. M. unless a more convenient time of meeting can be arranged after the class is organized. All class periods will be one hour in length and will be instructed by the regular Home Economics teacher.

The Art Department is offering special courses in drawing, charcoal work, portrait painting, china painting, and other studies in art as may be desired by the class. This course is open to advanced students in the college and to others outside of the college.

The college is offering its Music Department for special instruction to people of the community and county who may be interested in either undergraduate or advanced courses in music. We have a very excellent music department. Mr. Stuart Pratt who is a thorough musician and is thoroughly prepared for his work is head of the Music Department. In addition to extensive study in this country, Mr. Pratt spent two years abroad preparing himself for this type of work. This course offers an unusual opportunity for any who may be interested in furthering their musical education.

The Department of Christian Education is offering special and practical courses to prepare young men and young women for positions in the local church. This department is not only interested in preparing ministerial students but in inspiring laymen to be of valuable assistance in the local church when they are out of school. Professor D. J. Bowden heads up this department and would be glad to consult with any who might be interested in this course.

All students for special courses must matriculate at the college and register for the particular course in which he is interested.

We are having a very fine opening. Detailed reports will be made in next week's CHRISTIAN SUN.

L. E. SMITH.

A PROFITABLE WEEK.

The great Massanetta Bible Conference of 1937 is now a thing of history. It was my privilege to be there for seven days. These were busy and strenuous in attending about forty lectures, and sermons. While it was a disappointment that Crosley Morgan was not on the program, the ablest specialists in various lines of social and religious spheres were there. Apart from the intellectual and spiritual uplift of the conference to the writer, social contacts were most delightful. When assigned to a room in the dormitory with cots for six, whom should I already find installed there but Revs. J. F. Morgan, O. D. Poythress, and E. T. Cotten. The others of our church attending were Dr. and Mrs. I. W. Johnson, Dr. and Mrs. John G. Truitt with Ann and John, and Rev. F. Ervin Hyde.

I confess a feeling of pride at the way our people were recognized. One morning, as I entered the large auditorium, Rev. J. F. Morgan was leader of song and Mrs. I. W. Johnson was at the piano. One evening it was announced from the platform that the Morgan quartette would entertain at the hotel. There for three quarters of an hour one hundred and fifty guests were delighted with the quartette composed of J. F. Morgan, O. D. Poythress, and Dr. and Mrs. Johnson.

While at the Springs I went over to Harrisonburg to visit my old friend, so well known at Elon, prior to the world war, Walter B. Fuller, who has served churches in Eastern Virginia and in the Valley of Virginia for a number of years. He should be able now to render his best service, but has no charge. I visited in his home. He has an excellent wife and two intelligent children, Mary Virginia and Walter Bennet. While Brother Fuller is engaged in secular work, he much prefers to be in the pastorate.

C. E. NEWMAN.

ELON WELCOMES FRESHMEN.

Another year and Elon has opened in the grand old-fashioned way with all new-fashioned ideas in. For upper classmen the opening was a time long to be remembered, old friends exchanged the hearty handshake.

Freshmen are in the process of receiving a welcome which they too will remember. This year's Freshmen are indeed the best sports to enter Elon yet. Last night the girls came down dressed in true style. Each Freshman girl had her hair plaited and tied with a red and blue ribbon; they had to wear hats to dinner; each wore a high-heel shoe on one foot, a long stocking and oxford on the other. With no make-up and carrying a bed pillow, they entered the dining hall on the arm of some Freshman boy.

We are all very glad that Dr. Smith is better. Elon is indeed completed only when our college father is here to start us off. We do sincerely hope that his health may continue to improve and that he may be able to guide us throughout 1937-38.

MARGARET J. EARP.

TO THINK ABOUT.

By I. A. BARNES.

While reading may make a full man and writing a correct man, it is thinking, concentrated, consecutive logical thinking, that makes an intelligent man. And intelligence is the basis for personality. "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he," in all the essentials of character and personality. The difference in what one thinks and what he believes is so slight that, what one thinks may be also his creed. The effect of one's thinking upon his character is illustrated in Paul's admonition to the Philippians (4:8) when he said,

"Whatsoever things are true—Honest—just—pure—lovely—of good report: if there be any virtue, any praise, think on these things." Why? because the thinking on these things will tend to build them into the structure of your character.

Another very significant thing about our thinking is, that to us, things are just what we think them to be. If you are inclined to doubt this statement, a little logical thinking will convince you that it is true. A man may be dishonest and untruthful, inherently, but if you think he is honest and truthful, you will believe him and trust him. A woman may be a Magdalen, but if one thinks she is pure and true, she is accepted as such by him. The character and quality of things in general, are largely matters of our thinking rather than their inherent or intrinsic realities. This explains why there is often such a wide range in the estimates which people put upon things. It also explains why there are so many different standards of morality and conduct. One man may do a thing conscientiously, that another would look upon with abhorrence, and he might do something which the other man would consider a gross sin. "As a man thinketh, so is he." It is thinking that distinguishes man from the animals.

From my long years of experience and wide acquaintance with people, I am convinced that no two people have the same God, the same heaven and the same hell. To you, God is what you think Him to be, and no two people think of Him exactly the same. In fact very few people have any intelligent conception of nature and character of God. The same is true of heaven. No two people will describe it alike. Education does not mean the same thing to every one. And no two persons get the same answer to the question: What is your life?—Methodist-Protestant Recorder.

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

LEADERS OR FOLLOWERS?

The late lamented Dr. W. W. Staley said in this writer's hearing several years ago that it seemed to him we were stressing "leadership training" in our church assemblies whereas what was most needed was "followership training"; the world needs faithful and willing followers rather than noted and distinguished leaders. This idea advanced by Dr. Staley seems to have reached and penetrated in a marked manner the mind and heart of Dr. D. L. Pierson, the beloved and renowned editor of The Missionary Review of The World. We quote and commend to our readers for their careful consideration the following from the leading editorial in the September number of The Reviews

"Much emphasis is placed today on the training of leaders in all departments of life. Leadership training conferences are being held for political, educational and religious workers—and in many of these conferences, men and women are being educated for better leadership; they are learning how to keep the mass of the people from drifting or floundering.

"It was said of a certain politician: 'He would make a great leader, if only he could persuade anyone to follow him.' There are two requisites: a wise, strong leader and people intelligent and unselfish enough to follow good leadership. How much both are needed today! The Apostle James says: 'Be not many teachers—or leaders—knowing that we shall receive heavier judgment.'—(James 3: 1 R. V.). In many lands, and in many spheres of life, confusion and conflict arise because too many seek to be leaders rather than show a willingness to be followers. We are inclined to forget that 'one who would command must first learn to obey.'

"When the late Sadhu Sundar Singh, that remarkable Christian ascetic of India, was in America, he was asked by one who heard him speak: 'Have you any followers in India—any who follow your ideals of life and methods of service?'

"The Sadhu thought a moment and then replied: 'No, I have no followers. I, myself, am a follower.' In that answer lies the secret of leadership to meet the needs of the hour.

"Jesus Christ did not call men to be leaders; He called them to be followers. He called them to be 'fishers of men,' rather than rulers of men.

He called them to serve men rather than to exercise lordship over men. They were called first to disciples (learners), then apostles (missionaries).

"Is not this the great need in the world and in the Church today? What might we expect if, instead of setting up many 'leadership conferences,' we promoted training classes to teach men, women and children to be good followers? There is one safe and sane leader, the Lord Jesus Christ. If men and women would sit at His feet to learn of Him; if we would know how to appreciate His love and His sacrifice; if we could understand His wisdom and accept His standards—then the wrongs in our own personal lives, the mistakes in the family, in the Church, in the State and the world might be set right. As we learn of Him and are ready to follow Him, He has promised to give us power to do His work as He gave power to the early disciples when the Holy Spirit came upon them.

"The great need today is not more classes to train leaders but more classes and conferences to teach us to be true followers of Jesus Christ—as humble Christians, as parents, as business men and women, as workers in Church and State, as missionaries and as executives. In proportion as we succeed in learning in this school of Christ, we can say with the Apostle Paul to less privileged disciples: 'Be ye followers (imitators) of me even as I also am of Christ.'—(I Corinthians 11: 1.)"

Through our Missionary Offering we share with others, not our love for our neighbor and our fellowman only, but the love and life of our Lord, whose love only is sufficient for the world's needs and salvation. We do not give to missions to increase our joy, but to increase the joy of our Lord, for well did Nehemiah write: "For the joy of the Lord is your strength."—(Neh. 8:10.) And Jesus spake to the same effect with the man of five talents: "Enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." Our joy is to be made full in Him, not in our own deeds.

CONCERNING THE WOMAN'S MISSIONARY CONFERENCE.

The Executive Board met in Norfolk, Saturday, September 11th, and made final plans for our annual Conference to be held in Franklin on Friday, October 1st.

We have been fortunate in securing as one of our speakers Dr. Norma Dunning, a medical missionary who has been in India under the Presbyterian Board. Dr. Dunning is a young woman and has a message. She was an outstanding member of the Eagle's Mere Mission Conference and comes to us to be the speaker at the morning session of our Conference. She will also be the speaker at the Young People's Conference to be held in Suffolk on Friday night, October 1st.

At the afternoon session of our Conference we will have as guest speaker Miss Jellson from the Congregational-Christian Board. Miss Jellson has worked in Syria.

The hour of beginning is 10:30 A. M. and the hour for closing is 4:00 P. M. It is the desire of the board that all of us be there for the opening and remain until the close. We have planned a most interesting and, we trust, a helpful program.

MRS. J. MONROE HARRIS,
President.

HOLY NECK.

The Woman's Missionary Society of Holy Neck Christian Church has enjoyed a most encouraging year under the leadership of Mrs. June Davidson, president. Mrs. David Howell is the efficient secretary.

An inspirational public program was given at the church on the fifth Sunday in November at which time the Thank-offering was received. Very interesting programs have been presented at each monthly meeting with Mrs. E. T. Holland, Spiritual Life Superintendent, in charge, assisted by Mrs. Nelle Langstun.

The Mission study books "The American Negro" and "Congo Crosses" have been studied with very good attendance and interest. Twenty-one members attended the book review given at the Suffolk Christian Church October 20th and several were present on January 22nd when Dr. Sholto Smith reviewed the home book also at Suffolk.

The twenty-first anniversary social was held on January 14th, when every member except three shut-ins was present.

The World's Day of Prayer was observed jointly with the Holland Missionary Society on February 12th at the Holland Christian Church. This society was well represented at the District Meeting at Liberty Spring Christian Church, April 7th, twenty-two members being present.

A special interest was manifested in the Silver Jubilee at Suffolk Christian Church, May 13th, in honor of Dr. W. W. Staley. Through a united effort all four of Holy Neck's missionary organizations became honor societies, in that they sent in the required amount designed for each member and every member's name was written in the anniversary book. The names of two honorary members and two deceased ones (memorials) were also enrolled. The total offering for the church was $64.00, the Woman's society's part being $40.00.

In April and May the members helped the society and also THE CHRISTIAN SUN by securing new subscriptions for THE SUN.

Two new members have been enrolled and two lost by death.

There has been good attendance at each of the monthly meetings and great interest manifested by the members, and through cooperation, prayer, and faith, much good has been accomplished this year.

CHRISTIAN TEMPLE.

The women of the Christian Temple are organized into a group known as the Woman's Council. This organization has a membership of approximately eighty-five, and meets monthly to transact the local church and missionary business. Following the business session a missionary program is provided. A brief social hour and refreshments conclude the meetings. All women who join the church are invited and expected to affiliate themselves with the Woman's Council. Because of its representative membership this organization is a vital part of the church life.

Mrs. A. B. Jarvis, as president, with a helpful group of officers, has served efficiently during the past year. There have been a number of helpful features at the monthly meetings. The home and foreign mission books have provided interesting programs under the able leadership of Mrs. R. B. Wood. Quarterly luncheon meetings were held to which the women of the church were invited. Mrs. Hubert Lloyd, a missionary to Japan, gave a fine lecture. An evening meeting was held in June to which the men of the church were invited. After the business session an entertaining program was presented.

Other interesting features of the year's work were the formation of a group of the younger women of the church, the attendance of Mrs. Jarvis at the Eaglesmere Conference, and the raising of $100.00 for the Silver Jubilee Offering.

DENDRON.

A project in racial understanding was sponsored by the Dendron Christian Church, Thursday, September 9th, beginning at 4:00 P. M. and continuing through the day.

At four o'clock the book, "The Story of the American Negro," by Ina Corinne Brown was review by J. S. Johnson, minister of the local church. B. H. Watkins, minister of the Wakefield Christian Church, and Miss Irene Cotten, Superintendent of Missions for the Southeast Pilgrim Fellowship. Mrs. E. T. Atkinson, Missions Superintendent of the Waverly District, conducted the worship.

At six o'clock a picnic supper was served as visiting delegates and local people spread the lunches they had brought. Iced tea was furnished by the local group.

At seven-thirty o'clock the stereopticon lecture entitled "Negroes Training Negroes" was given. It told the story of four American Missionary Associations' elementary and high schools which are now managed and directed by Negroes. The story was told by fourteen local young people. The "Rollins Brothers" of Surry sang the two spirituals, "Ain't Gwine to Study War No More" and "Lord, I Want to Be a Christian." Miss Charlotte Cotten of Dendron led the worship service.

Christian Churches cooperating were: Burton's Grove, New Lebanon, Wakefield, Waverly, and Dendron.

Mrs. E. T. Atkinson and Miss Irene Cotten of the local church, representing respectively the adult and youth groups, were in charge of the project.

J. S. JOHNSON.

LIBERTY SPRING.

The Woman's Missionary Society of Liberty Spring Christian Church has had the best year in its history. The attendance has been good, the interest great, and all the points on the Standard of Excellence have been met. Twelve meetings have been held with well-prepared programs in which the Spiritual Superintendent had the greatest part. This society feels that the spiritual life of its members has been benefited very much by its devoted leader. The membership drive was held the first quarter with a substantial increase.

An active part was taken in the Silver Jubilee and 100% in money was raised.

The Liberty Spring Junior Missionary Society has also had a successful year under the leadership of Mrs. Roscoe Harrell. They held public meetings with good attendance and much interest was manifested in the monthly meetings. A special interest was taken in the Silver Jubilee at Suffolk and the quota raised. This society expects to be an honor society at the conference which will meet soon.

SOUTH NORFOLK.

The last meeting of our church year for missions was held last Thursday, in the Social Hall of South Norfolk Christian Church.

Plans for the fall program were outlined. The attendance was large.

Mrs. A. L. Hanbury, leader of the group, announced that the organization has come through the current year with all apportionments met. As president, she wishes to congratulate the ladies for working so beautifully together.

Mrs. Harry Seymour, spiritual life leader, made an interesting talk on "The Dedicated Life" and the pastor, Rev. O. D. Poythress, sang a solo, "The Stranger of Galilee," accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Hanbury. The society looks forward to another successful year.

MRS. A. L. HANBURY,
President.

NEWPORT NEWS.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the First Congregational-Christian Church of Newport News gave a beautiful luncheon on August 3rd, to which all women of the church were invited.

Mrs. J. F. Morgan was guest speaker and gave a very interesting and worthwhile address on the topic of the coming year's study, "The Moslem World."

Mrs. Robert Lee House gave the points of importance on the work at Franklinton College.

This society has raised their apportionment and met all requirements. Mrs. C. E. Boulder is secretary.

MISS EMILY CARLETON, Editor, 541 Osceola Ave., Winter Park, Fla.

PROGRAMS FOR SEPTEMBER.

Below are given the program suggestions for September, as given in the bulletin for the Eastern Virginia Pilgrim Fellowship. They are worthy of consideration by every local group and each can no doubt enlarge the scope of its program by including some of these items:

1. Leaders set the example by striving to follow the "Practices of Jesus" in their every-day living. Study "Jesus" by Mary E. Lyman. Price, 50c.

2. Attend Young People's Missionary Conference.

3. Observe one Sunday as Mission Sunday. Use World Service material on "The Southern Mountains" in Christian Youth Missionary Action, second series, for your missionary program in Missionary Society, Christian Endeavor, or Sunday school class. Order additional material listed in this pamphlet. Have available for use of leader a copy of The Pilgrim Highroad and The Missionary Herald.

4. Contribute to Missions through Missionary Society, Christian Endeavor, or Sunday school class, and keep an approximate account of total contributed by young people, so that a report can be made at the end of the year.

5. Arrange programs that will interest and instruct.

6. Stress Personal Growth in your programs.

7. Christian Endeavorers observe Founder's Day, September 12th.

8. Make a study of Stewardship. Plan a budget for your group.

9. Stress Tithing; sign Tenth Legion card. Have a public service at which time young people pledge a tenth to church for a year.

10. Welcome new members and give each some part in your work.

11. Start a scrap book of source materials for worship services.

12. Organize an Elon College Club in your church. This is very important and would mean a great deal to our college. For information write to Rev. R. L. House, No. 3 Arlington Apts., Portsmouth, Virginia.

13. Have a farewell or send-off party for all those going away to college.

Any of the materials mentioned may be secured by writing the editor of this page, or direct from 14 Beacon St., Boston, Massachusetts.

FOLLOWING THE PRACTICE OF JESUS.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC

FOR SEPTEMBER 26, 1937.

SCRIPTURE: Luke 4:16; John 8:1-11.

Daily Readings—

Monday—Jesus Practices Friendship—

Matt. 8:14, 15.

Tuesday—Jesus' Daily Work—Matt.

11:1-6.

Wednesday—Illustrating Divine Truth—

Matt. 13:1-9.

Thursday—Caring for the Children—

Matt. 18:1-11.

Friday—Jesus, the Peacemaker—Matt.

20:20-28.

Saturday—Jesus, Our Example—I Peter

2:21-25.

It is very fitting that the discussion of the practices of Jesus follows the discussion on His teachings. One thing we do not doubt: Jesus always practiced what he taught. He was a living example of His message.

Let us begin with a round table discussion and discover the practices of Jesus.

1. Jesus communed with God. The busier His daily life, the more He prayed. He rose up before day for this communion. It gave Him renewed strength and power for His task. How often do we pray? Would our lives be stronger spiritually, if we prayed more? How may we pray after the manner of the Master?

2. Jesus resisted temptation. He was not exempt from temptation because He was good. His resistance shows His strength of life—the power to overcome. How did Jesus overcome temptation? How may we overcome it in our own lives?

3. Jesus healed the sick. There are those about us that need the touch of a sympathetic hand or the sound of a kind word, or the expression of a loving deed. Their hearts need to be comforted, and their sorrows need to be shared. In what ways and to what extent does the spirit of the Good Physician move in the hearts of men today?

4. Jesus upheld His friends and prayed for His enemies. A person's life was made morally strong because of His association. He always did that which commanded the respect of His associates. He gave them visions of the kind of persons they ought to be by holding up the highest ideals He knew. How may we uphold our friends? Do we seek to be a friend to all people?

CHOICES AND THEIR CONSEQUENCES IN A NATION'S LIFE.

LESSON XII—SEPTEMBER 19, 1937.

GOLDEN TEXT: Choose you this day whom ye will serve.—Joshua 24:15.

LESSON: Deut. 11:8-12, 26-32.

"Therefore shall ye keep all my commandments which I command thee this day." There is a world of meaning in the word "Therefore." For if one reads the opening verses of this chapter he will find that God is giving a meaningful background against which His commandments are to be interpreted and respected and obeyed. He reminds them that they have seen with their own eyes His mighty works in their behalf, and they have experienced in their own lives His grace toward them. "But your eyes have seen all the great acts of the Lord which He did, therefore, shall ye keep all the commandments which I command you this day." Obedience is to be based upon a recognition of God's providence rather than upon God's power. Every one who reads these Notes knows that God has been good to him or her. Therefore, let us give heed unto his commands for his commands are not grievous.

Possessing the Land.

"That ye may go in and possess the land, whither ye go to possess it." It was not to be given to them outright, they were to possess it. In another place we read that they were to have every place that the sole of their feet should tread upon. Men after God's pattern could not be made by dropping things in their laps. When God put Adam and Eve in the garden he told them to replenish it and subdue it. Character cannot come without the discipline of work. This principle applies all through life. Before us there beckons the land of education, of business success, of skill and accomplishment, of character, of spiritual blessings, but generally speaking we can have only as much of these goodly lands as we possess. God does not do for us what we can do for ourselves. Today as always there stretch out before us goodly lands which are to be had, not for the asking, but for the application.

Getting Help From Religion.

"Therefore shall ye keep all the commandments which I command thee this day, that ye may be strong and go in and possess the land . . . that ye may prolong your days in the land." In the stress and struggles of life which are inevitable in possessing the good things, religion is of real help. It ministers inner resources that enable one to do what must be done and to endure what must be endured. Real religion is like unto a perennial spring welling up within us, feeding life from within so that we can face the issues of life from without. As Dr. Paul Sherer said in a radio address a few weeks ago, religion can be of use to us in helping us to deal victoriously with ourselves, successfully with those we do not like, and victoriously with the world.

Choosing.

Life is a series of choices. One can not escape the necessity for making them. Indeed to refuse to make choices is to make them just the same. They are an inevitable part of life. And they are an important, a tremendously important part of life. They determine our happiness and our success here, and our destiny hereafter. Heredity, environment, training, influence choices, but the choice itself rests with us. But alas! that choice may affect not only us, but others. There is nothing that men need more than the desire to make the right choice, the ability to see what the right choice is, and the power to make the right choice.

To be sure some choices are trivial. One need not spend much time choosing what necktie he will wear—although both men and women often spend too much thought and energy on "what they shall wear." There are many choices that do not loom very large in one's daily life, the things concerning the routine duties of life. But the basis of choice, the determining motives in choice are extremely important. And some choices are vital. The choice of a life-philosophy, the choice of one's religion—these and other choices make a tremendous difference. The supreme choice is what one will do with Jesus Christ.

With this brief introduction one can appreciate better the challenge of choice which came to the Hebrews. "Behold I set before you this day a blessing or a curse . . . the blessing if ye shall hearken unto the commandments of Jehovah your God which I command you this day, and the curse, if ye shall not hearken to the commandments of Jehovah your God." Every nation and every individual comes to the cross-roads. A choice must be made between the road of obedience or disobedience to the highest moral and spiritual authority, between the road of unselfishness and selfishness, between accepting the Saviour or serving Satan. There are ultimately but two roads, two gates. The broad way may be a little easier traveling at times and afford more companionship—wide is the gate and broad the way that leadeth to destruction and many there be that go therein, than the narrow gate and the strait way—few there be that enter therein. But one should look through to the end of the road before he chooses. The one leads to blessing, the other eventually brings a curse upon those who choose it. Let every man choose this day whom he will serve. And let the nations of the world take heed lest they choose the paths of international suspicion and aggression and exploitation and armament and bring a devastating curse upon themselves and upon the whole world.

WILL YOU HELP?

Few people realize the difficulties under which the Board of Christian Education has been working during the past few years. Our income has been cut to the point that only a limited amount of office work can be done. And yet, the variety of work done and the service rendered the churches and Sunday schools is surprising. Often we have to offer sympathy when we ought, and would like to offer help to worthy Christian Education enterprises. The office at 514 South Main Street, Norfolk, Virginia, is constantly answering requests for help from superintendents, teachers and pastors. Literature of all kinds for church school workers is available. The Board is anxious to help and is helping with Leadership Training Schools, Sunday School Conventions, Christian Endeavor and Pilgrim Fellowship work. Material for special days is always available, books on religious education are loaned, and requests for help are always welcome.

The churches will soon be sending in conference apportionments. One of the smallest items listed on the report is the amount asked for by the Board of Christian Education, but we hope you will not overlook it because it is small.

The Board will be very grateful if each church will see that the full amount asked is paid in full. All the money invested in the Board comes back to the churches in service. Will you help us render more and better service?

JOE A. FRENCH,
Chairman.

By confidence, we mean that, on the whole and over a long period of time, this is the kind of universe which can be trusted, that the human beings in it are to be trusted, and that the highest values are to be trusted.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
Chaplain in the U. S. Navy

MONDAY.

PROCRASTINATION.

"The foolish . . . took no oil with them."—Matt. 25:3.

"Thou shalt not delay to offer of thy harvest, and of thy outflow of thy presses."—Ex. 22:29.

Because "punishment for sin," saith the Lord, "is not speedily executed, therefore are the hearts of men set to do evil."

What man believes that his punishment is near? Do we all not know that sin is alluring and that penalties are deceptively remote? As we think about this we will act accordingly. However, Christ teaches us to reverse this completely. Suppose we say to ourselves, after each wrongdoing, "I shall be punished for this tomorrow, yes, I may be punished the very next hour." What a restraining influence this has upon us and how much more beautiful life will be. Punishment is indeed certain to come and life is brief at its best. Life is too good to be spent in evil and then in suffering the consequences.

Prayer—Our Father, we would do Thy will this day for the sake of Jesus. Amen.

TUESDAY.

GOD'S RAVENS.

"The ravens brought him bread and flesh in the morning and bread and flesh in the evenings."—I Kings 17:6.

God's ravens are everywhere. If we do not realize this, then it must be that we are not Christians.

The distressed, the needy, the sick and the afflicted, the sad and the weary, all are signals for help and we believe that there are but few places in this world that help is not ministered. God's ravens are everywhere and as faithful as the birds were to Elijah.

But they do not come to the distrustful, the anxious and the fearful. They do not come to the cowards nor to the cold-hearted. They come to the faithful.

Prayer—Our Father, fill our hearts with Thy love and send us forth to fill the hearts of others for Jesus' sake. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

STAND FAST.

"Stand fast in the Lord."—Phil. 4:1.

There are so many wobbling Christians! There are so many Christians that lean now to the left and now to the right, that are here today, and gone tomorrow, that cannot be depended upon for a single Christian task.

What quality is more admirable than steadfastness? The Lord is steadfast. What He is now He will always be. And His true followers will be as steadfast as He is, will stand fast where He stands fast.

If God can not trust us, men can not trust us either. Life is to build up this quality of fidelity. If this earth leaves us unstable in our ways heaven will find us so, and all eternity will doom us to fickleness.

Prayer—Strengthen us, we pray Thee, O Thou who changest not. May we stand forever in the Lord, and so beloved by him. In His name we ask it. Amen.

—Amos R. Wells.

THURSDAY.

WOULD YOU SEE JESUS?

"Sir, we would see Jesus."—John 12:21.

"It is expedient for you that I go away."—John 16:7.

The Apostles were confounded when they realized that Jesus was going to leave them. They loved Him dearly and they relied on Him for guidance. How could they get along without Him?

We sometimes say to ourselves, "if I could only see Jesus and hear his voice, I could live a Christian life." In this we have come no farther than the Apostles. We must understand the Holy Spirit which he promised to send in his stead is to be everywhere at all times with all people, and we can have more, far more through his spirit than we can through him in person.

Prayer—O Lord, speak to our souls so that we can hear and dwell Thou in us Thy Holy Spirit. In the name of Jesus Christ we ask it. Amen.

FRIDAY.

CONDITIONS OF SUCCESS.

"The Lord said, go not up, neither fight; for I am not among you; lest ye be smitten before your enemies."—Deut. 1:42.

We are a very sensible people in our every day business. We do not build houses without foundations. We do not make bread without the leaven, nor do we bake it in a cold oven. We do not lay out city blocks nor even fields without a survey. We do not go to sea in leaking ships nor try to cross a river on a broken down bridge. But we do undertake things that cannot possibly be accomplished without God's assistance. We do undertake things without considering whether God is with us or not. It appears that we are undertaking to solve the world's problems today just this way, and it also appears that we are doomed to failure.

As we enter upon each task of life, the presence of the Holy Spirit is as necessary as the morning meal.

We have a promise of the Lord which we can claim. It is: "In all thy ways acknowledge Him and He will direct thy paths." Our first question always is; is God with us? If He is, that is all we need. The consequences will be well! That is my faith. Is it yours?

Prayer—Forgive us, our Father, of our foolish self-reliance and teach us to lean on Thy everlasting arms. Amen.

SATURDAY.

PRAISING GOD'S WAYS.

"They shall sing of the ways of the Lord."—Ps. 138:5.

How far have we come in thus praising the Lord? How much do the duties of the day take us away from the thought of God? Each day that comes, as the morning light pours itself upon the earth, should flood our hearts with happy anticipation. We should know that the ways of the Lord for the day will be good and true, happy and full of blessings. Every blessing should glow in our eyes. Every good thing should fill our countenance with a gleam and then we will sing a new song and praise Him, not from a sense of duty alone, but from an overflowing joy.

Prayer—Our Father, we bless Thee and we praise Thee with our whole soul for every good thing. Help us to see Thy blessings and worship. Amen.

SUNDAY.

WITNESSES.

"Therefore let us also, seeing we are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, lay aside every weight."—Heb. 12:1-7.

Christians should go about the world rejoicing in a host of blessed unseen companions. The Bible characters will furnish a host of them. Missionary biography and the lives of the great philanthropists and reformers will furnish a throng of others. And there will be a vast crowd of lovely saints that they themselves have known.

We may not see them, but what is that to us? We know that they

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D., Pastor.

THE CONTINUING CHRIST.

By REV. JOHN G. TRUITT.

"All that day Jesus began to do and teach until the day in which he was taken up."—Acts 1:1-2.

Let us say in the very beginning of this message, Jesus is not through with his work. He had finished his work on the cross, when he said: "It is finished," but all his work is not yet done. The Gospels tell of the works beginning. From the time he started until his ascension he was in the began-to-do-and-teach stage. He is a continuing Christ. He is still going on to complete that which "he began to do and teach."

From the beginning of his life until the ascension—"the day in which he was taken up"—Luke, the historian puts it aptly when he said: "All that Jesus began to do and teach until the day in which he was taken up." He began until the day, and what he began during that period he is now continuing. He has not begun a work just to fail to carry it through. He is the continuing Christ.

II. The World Does not Realize that Christ Is.

Our modern rush and hurry, our modern science and self-sufficiency, has left Jesus in the dead past. One of the major difficulties with our day is that it has no contemporary Christ. The mind of the present-world puts Jesus in the past. It is hard for you and me to realize that one of the mysteries of the ages is that Jesus lives. That he is living now. The self-same Saviour that walked with Peter, and James, and John, is now living; and is near and precious to those who have their eyes of understanding open to behold him.

Trustworthy documents tell us of his birth, life, death, and walking out of the tomb alive again. We sing about his birth, about it we build our beautiful stories; we preach about his death, and about it many of our great hymns are written; but we are all too prone to forget that he was resurrected from the grave, and that he is now alive; that he walked and talked with his disciples, ate with them, called especial attention to the facts of his living, breathing, functioning body. We have "spiritualized" away these facts until we have lost the Christ of the early church, and the Christ of the Gospels. The same documents that tell of his birth tell of his walking out of the grave after he was crucified. We are not looking over our shoulder with apostolic wonderment as to whether the Christ may not be with us. We are not expecting him to appear in our midst. We say "He was . . .," but we cut off the "is," and in some fantastic sort of fashion we may add, "and evermore shall be." But it is hard for us to walk out into our matter-of-fact world and say He Is.

II. But All the Scriptures We Have Teach that Very Fact.

The church was built on that very fact. Paul says, "If Christ be not risen, then is our preaching in vain, and your faith is vain; yea, and we are found to be false witnesses of God; because we have testified of God that He raised up Christ." On that fact the church was built. In the Revelation of Jesus to John on the Isle of Patmos, he says: "Fear not; I am the first and the last; I am the light: I am he that liveth, and was dead; and behold, I am alive for evermore, Amen; and have the keys of hell and of death."

Paul says, "Jesus was seen at one time by more than five hundred brethren, most of whom are still alive, but some are fallen asleep. Then he was seen by James, then by all the Apostles, and last of all he was seen by me, Paul, also, as one born out of season." And Luke says, "He showed himself alive after his passion by many infallible proofs, being seen of them forty days." They were the facts that changed a few faltering followers of Jesus to flaming evangelists establishing the church by leaps and bounds. Such were their messages.

At the preaching of Peter on Pentecost 3,000 souls were saved. What did he preach? What were the great facts set forth in his sermon? Listen: "Ye men of Israel, hear these words; Jesus of Nazareth, a man approved of God among miracles, and wonders, and signs, which God did by him in the midst of you, as ye yourselves also know; him, being delivered by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God, ye have taken, and by wicked hands have crucified and slain: whom God hath raised up, having loosed the pains of death: because it is not possible that he should be holden of it . . . This Jesus hath God raised up, whereof we are all witnesses." There is the heart of your Pentecost sermon!

"This Jesus hath raised up, whereof we are all witnesses." On that fact the church of which you and I are by faith a part was builded. Without that risen, living, present, continuous, contemporary Christ there is no such thing as a Christian church. That is our faith, let us not forget it. And listen to this: "Then they gladly received this word and were baptized: and the same day there was added unto them about three thousand souls."

III. The Christian Believes These Facts, and Witnesses to Them.

Many years after the raising of Jesus from the dead, John wrote his Gospel, and gives as the reason for writing it: "There are written that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and that believing ye might have life through his name." Did John say in that Gospel that we had a living, continuous Christ? Listen at this: "Jesus then cometh, and taketh bread, and giveth them, and fish likewise. This is now the third time that Jesus shewed himself to his disciples after that he was risen from the dead." One of the most realistic, and engaging conversations recorded between Jesus and his disciples is that in which John shows how Jesus reinstated Peter after his resurrection from the dead. As true as any part of John's Gospel is this part of it.

Matthew was a disciple of Jesus, did he testify to his resurrection? He says, "And the angel answered and said unto the women, fear not ye, for I know that ye seek Jesus, which was crucified. He is not here, for he is risen, as he said." And Matthew tells of Jesus meeting his disciples in Galilee, and giving them the great commission. The same divinely inspired writers who recorded his life after his birth recorded also his living after his death. Therefore, if we have the Christ of yesterday, we have also the Christ of today.

How it would change our contemporary life if we could, throughout our so-called Christian civilization testify that Jesus was alive! That he could be considered here and now! That his counsel could be sought, and that his way and wish could be known! How it would bless our world today if those who profess to follow him lived in that same sort of expectancy which filled the lives of the early followers of the Saviour with a spiritual reality, that meant taking orders and carrying them out.

The facts of the "raised up," living Christ allows no thought of our going down into the grave as the final disposition of our lives. The facts of his death and resurrection give us a sure

The Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

Several days ago the writer visited a business man's office. I had been having dealings with this man for a number of years. When we went in his office he said, "I have had a licking laid up for you for sometime and I am going to give it to you now." The writer could not imagine what had happened to incur a licking. He looked at the writer with a twinkle in his eye and said, "I am going to lick you with a check for $25.00 to help you care for your large family." We are proud to say that was the best feeling licking I ever had. I believe I could stand there all day and take "lickings" like that.

Who will be the next to give me a licking like that one? I believe I can stand several more as badly as we need funds in our checking account for the orphanage.

The public school opened on September 9th and while the children are at school it is a very quiet time around the orphanage. It is really lonesome. Our financial report carries us one half way to our goal for the year. It is going to take cooperation. It is going to take pulling together. It is going to take workers in all our churches and Sunday schools who are willing to share a little time and a little effort to raise the next ten thousand dollars.

I feel sure we have many in the Congregational-Christian Churches who are willing to cooperate in every way and are anxious to see us reach our goal. Let everybody start now to help put it across. There are only three and one half months left to do it. Ten thousand dollars to raise by December 31st. Work and pray that it may be done.

Marriages

BURNER-HOUSDEN.

John V. Burner, Luray, Virginia, and Miss Brownie Housden of near Stanley, Virginia, were united in holy wedlock by the bride's pastor, Rev. W. J. Andes, at his home near Harrisonburg, Virginia, on September 4, 1937. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. C. Housden, Mr. Housden being a deacon at the Leakesville Church, near Luray, Virginia. The groom is the son of John C. Burner and wife, of Luray, and is employed in the tannery.

Both are popular young people in their communities and have excellent Christian characters. May God bless this new home.

W. J. ANDES.

In Memoriam

SPITZER.

The Mayland community, near Broadway, Virginia, was greatly shocked by the death of Floyd E. Spitzer—born June 24, 1918 and died September 2, 1937—at his father's home. He is survived by his father and mother—Mr. and Mrs. Edward Spitzer—and by four brothers and two sisters.

Young Mr. Spitzer had attained a high reputation and Christian character in the Mayland and Broadway communities and his death will be felt in many homes. He was a member of the Mayland Christian Church, near Broadway, Virginia.

The funeral was conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. C. E. Nair of the Brethren Church. Interment was in the cemetery, near the Mayland Brethren Church, where the funeral was conducted.

W. J. ANDES.

DIXON.

Patrick S. Dixon was born February 9, 1869, and departed this life August 12, 1937. He was the son of Robert L. and Louisa Dixon.

He was married to Susan Sharp, who several years ago passed to her reward. He is survived by a second wife, Maggie Baynes Dixon, four brothers, W. F. of Roanoke, Virginia, J. S. and J. F. of Guilford county, North Carolina, F. P. of Winston-Salem, and two half brothers, Rev. G. W. Williams of Lexington, North Carolina, and J. C. Williams of Potsdam, New York.

The deceased was a loyal member of Mt. Bethel Christian Church, Summerfield, North Carolina from early boyhood. His honest and sincere life was an example to those who knew him. He was a devoted husband and a trustworthy friend. His life was without malice and filled with love for God and his fellow man. Funeral services were conducted in his church by Rev. F. C. Lester of Norfolk, Virginia, and the body was laid to rest in the church cemetery.

A FRIEND.

WEST.

On July 23, 1937, God in His infinite wisdom saw fit to remove from our midst one of our faithful members, Selma Beale West, wife of R. T. West.

We, the members of the Missionary and Ladies' Aid Societies of the Christian Church, Waverly, Virginia, desire to express our devotion to her, our appreciation of her worthy life, and our grief at the loss sustained by her departure. Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That in her death, the Waverly Christian Church and the societies have lost a consecrated member and her home a loving wife and mother;

2. That we bow in humble submission to the will of our heavenly Father, remembering that "He doeth all things well," and extend to the bereaved family our deepest sympathy;

3. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy to "The Christian Sun" for publication, and a copy be placed on our records.

PRICE.

Whereas, on April 30, 1937, Almighty God in His wise providence, called from our midst to the life beyond Mrs. Nolie A. Price, one of the beloved members of the First Congregational Christian Church, who was a charter member, and who was active in all the auxiliaries of the church.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That in the passing of Mrs. Price we realize the First Congregational-Christian Church, Richmond, Virginia, has lost a faithful member.

2. That she has gone from us, but not forgotten.

3. That we hold in loving remembrance her faithfulness as a friend to all, and that we pattern our lives after the goodness and brightness of her life in such a way that our own lives may reflect the same Christian sunshine as did her's.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, for she leaves to mourn their loss three sons and one daughter, and that a copy be spread on the minutes of the church.

TAYLOR.

On August 18, 1937, God in His all-wise wisdom saw fit to call to his reward our friend, brother, and teacher, H. Tazewell Taylor. We, the Taylor Progressive Bible Class of Bethlehem Christian Sunday School, wish to join the family and his host of friends in mourning their loss. His going not only deprives us of his teaching, which he did for a long period of years, but of his kindly counsel and friendly help at all times. We do not wish to murmur or complain to our Heavenly Father in the doing of His will, but our loss we keenly feel, yet we are committing ourselves to His will.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we are thankful to Thee, our Heavenly Father, for the lending of our brother and teacher: that his life and devotion be ever before us pointing us to home beyond the Vale of Death; that we strive to make this class a living memorial of him, pointing us to follow the teachings of our Lord Jesus Christ.

2. That we extend to his family our sincere sympathy and commend them to our Heavenly Father.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy to "The Christian Sun" for publication, and a copy be spread upon the records of our Sunday school.

are with us. The sense of their presence thrills us. They keep us in the right ways. They lead us to lofty ideals. They comfort us in sorrow and uphold us when we faint.

May we be more worthy of this cloud of witnesses! May we constantly measure ourselves up against them! May we lay aside every weight of sin and cowardice, that we may do such deeds as they have done!

Prayer—And above all, dear Saviour, may we be conscious of Thy presence. We need Thee every hour, and Thou wilt never leave us or forsake us. Thou wilt go with us through our journey here, and afterwards receive us to Thy glory. Amen.

hope, and anchor for our souls, and living in the light of that hope we have life, indeed. Let us not cover our Master with the dusty centuries of the dead past, but let us hear him saying: "Behold, I am alive for evermore."

The Virtue of Quiet People

This world is so full of talkers that the silent man seems to stand a very poor show. If we want a preacher we want a man who can talk well. If we need a lawyer we look up a man who possesses the gift of persuasive speech. If we want a school trustee, a councillor or alderman, or a member of the legislature, we usually vote for the glib talker, and not seldom on the hustings the man of solid sense, the man of keen business instincts, the man of education and refinement and character, stands no show at all with the man of nimble wit and nimbler tongue. And then possibly, after we have elected a man on the strength of his volubility we find fault with him because he lacks the poise, the judgment, and the character of the man we rejected.

The truth is that there are many men of great ability who are not good talkers and the world owes much to them. We read the other day of a director of a very large corporation, concerning whom the president of the corporation said, "His words were few, but his judgments were wise and influential," and we think that many of our business and church boards have men of this type. We have known cases where the most voluble members of a committee or board would discuss a matter for hours, but in the end the decision nearly always rested upon the opinion of one or two men slow of speech, but of remarkably sane and well-balanced judgment.

The brilliant talker is not always a safe guide, and he is not always the best companion. We have known a few cases where a young girl or a young man has married a brilliant talker only to realize that his (or her) tongue was his (or her) chief asset. The idea that fluency of speech must necessarily mean great mentality is an erroneous one; the thinker is often slow of speech and he is not apt to shine in society. Youth finds it difficult sometimes to realize this and is apt to pin its faith to the man with the golden tongue, forgetting that intellect and heart are of much greater importance than facility in speech.

There are men who can voice their sympathy with suffering in most grace and even tear-producing language, but sometimes the tongue is more ready to proclaim its sympathy than the hand is to open the pocketbook. Experience teaches us not to estimate the strength of a man's patriotism nor the depth of his piety by the extent of his vocabulary.

Some of our best church workers are of the quiet type. They never say very much, but they can always be depended upon to do their share of the church's work. Perhaps they pay better than they pray, but at least we are convinced of their sincerity and the genuineness of their religion.

We have nothing to say against true eloquence; it is indeed a divine gift and one which at times works miracles; and so long as the world stands, men will crowd to hear the orator, and he will never cease to be a tremendous power. But we simply wish to call attention to the value of the men and women whose speech is never very profuse, but whose wise counsel is always worth listening to, and whose helpful lives are everywhere in evidence. We thank God for the quiet men and women whose lives are ever speaking in a tongue which all can understand of the power and charm of true religion.

OUR YOUNGEST CHURCH.

On top of the Blue Ridge mountains in Carroll County, Virginia, stands a dilapidated school house in which a Christian Church Sunday school was organized on the second Sunday in August, 1935, and a church was organized a year later. The above picture shows a group of the people who constitute the 55 members of the Sunday school and 12 members of the church at what is known as Ivy Hill Christian Church, which is the youngest church within the Southern Convention. Rev. O. A. Elmore is pastor, Mrs. W. R. Morris is secretary of the church, and Miss Angeline Burcham is superintendent of the Sunday school. The Skyline Drive is now being built right by the present school building, and it is hoped that within the near future a beautiful stone church building can be erected. Here is an opportunity for a constructive missionary work.

LET THERE BE LIGHT

PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

Rev. George A. Pearce of Franklin, Virginia, formerly of Wakefield, is eager to serve any churches that may call him.

"There are three kinds of people in the world, the wills, the won'ts and the can'ts. The first accomplish everything, the second oppose everything, and the third fail in everything."

Three members, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Seaman and Miss Dorothy Cheek, united with the Henderson Christian Church on September 5th. Rev. J. Everette Neese, pastor, says this makes a total of 13 additions to the Henderson Church this year.

Rev. James R. Clinton, D. D., will aid the pastor and people of First Congregational-Christian Church of Newport News in a series of meetings from October 3rd to 10th, next. A cordial invitation is extended to people elsewhere to attend these meetings.

Rev. F. E. Allison, a college graduate with many years of experience as a pastor, united with the Virginia Valley Conference this year and is ready to accept churches wherever he may be needed. His address is 707 S. Braddock Street, Winchester, Virginia.

Rev. and Mrs. R. A. Whitten entertained the young people of their church (Winchester, Va.) at the parsonage on the evening of September 14th. Rev. Mr. Whitten is giving a series of eight Wednesday evening talks on "Prayer," one of which has been "The Great Promise Concerning Prayer."

Rev. Alan T. Jones, pastor of the Macedonia Parish of North Georgia for the past two years has accepted a call to succeed Rev. H. B. Mowbray as pastor of Union Church, Demorest, Georgia. Mr. Mowbray is retiring from the active ministry after about 40 years of service and will make his home in Winter Park, Florida.

Rev. and Mrs. E. J. Sanderson of Brown Summit, North Carolina, are receiving congratulations on the recent arrival of George Edwards. The Haw River Church expressed their congratulations by a free-will gift of $27.00, and the Monticello Church supplied the parsonage pantry with "a huge pile of good things to eat."

Mr. and Mrs. Sanderson are very grateful to their churches for these substantial gifts.

Yale Divinity School will have another representative from the South when it opens this fall. Rev. W. Alphonzo Grissom, of Henderson, North Carolina, will join Rev. Herbert Council, Jr., of Franklin, Virginia, and Rev. Lanson Granger, Jr., of Norfolk. Rev. Robert Kimball graduated from Yale last June and is now pastor of some churches in and about Everette, Pennsylvania.

Rev. A. Lanson Granger, Jr., president of the National Pilgrim Fellowship, preached in his home church, First Christian Church at Norfolk, on last Sunday. He leaves the latter part of this week to begin his second year of study in Yale Divinity School. Rev. Mr. Granger attended 18 young people's summer conferences during June and July in the interest of the Pilgrim Fellowship, and preached for a month at South Hadley, Massachusetts.

HOLY NECK,

The annual revival services were held at Holy Neck Christian Church, Nansemond County, Virginia, September 6-10 with Rev. J. F. Morgan preacher and song-leader. He did both well. The attendance and interest were good. There were a number of professions and a large number of reconsecrations. Six were received into fellowship, and five were baptized in Norfleet's Pond Sunday afternoon, the 12th.

N. G. NEWMAN,
Pastor.

BEREA, NORFOLK, REVIVAL.

Rev. Jesse H. Dollar of Newport News aided the pastor, Rev. Joe A. French in revival services at Berea Christian Church near Norfolk, Virginia, August 29th to September 10th. It is reported that Rev. Mr. Dollar made his appeal mostly to the church with the exception of the last two nights when an invitation was given to others to accept the Christian way of life and become members of the church. A special feature of the meeting was a consecration service by families on Wednesday night of the last week. Attendance was above the usual and visible results were 11 new members received into the church, 5 on profession of faith and 6 by letters of transfer. Most of these people were parents. The church was greatly revived and shows prospects for future growth.

NEW ENGLAND NOTES.

Rev. Mr. Smith of Laconia, New Hampshire, has been seriously sick with the flu.

Albion, Maine, and Freedom, New Hampshire, had successful Daily Vacation Bible Schools this year.

Reception of members and baptism are on the calendar of the Portsmouth, New Hampshire, church for September.

The York Beach Interdenominational Bible Conference has been a source of inspiration to our people all summer and many of the Court Street Christian Church people of Portsmouth have been found there several times each week.

York and Cumberland Christian Conference holds its annual session with the Court Street Christian Church September 24 and 25th. It is expected that this year, as last year at Rumney Camp Grounds, Rev. A. A. Wright of Binghamton, New York, Christian Temple will be the guest speaker.

The work on the parsonage at Cape Neddick is continuing successfully. The town donated an unused school house. A basement for prayer meetings and for social gatherings is being erected of stone (the one crop of the mountains). The preacher is working day times with his hands as Paul did. Tuesday evenings he conducts a service at Knight's Pond.

The Portsmouth children attended the excellent school conducted by Gordon College students at the Advent Parish House (the only Vacation School that survived in Portsmouth). A few years ago there were three—one at the Universalist Church and one at the Methodist Church. A benefit woman's gathering for the Cape Neddick parsonage was held in a home in Portsmouth. Miss Frances Andrews Brown, well-known soloist of Amesbury, Massachusetts, sang for the women. Some of the Southern women may remember meeting her with the late Mrs. Roemer at the Quadrennial of our people held in Ohio. Eight dollars and fifty cents was donated for the parsonage, but several took collection cards to be returned later.

M. A. TRUE.

Prosperity is the fruit of labor; property is desirable, is a positive good in the world. That some should be rich shows that others may become rich, and hence is just encouragement to industry and enterprise.—Lincoln.

THE SIOUX INDIAN SUNDANCE.

It may seem like a far cry from the grotesque dance of a primitive people to the modern communion table, but the distance is more imaginary than real. I was present on August 22nd and 23rd, when the Sioux Indians reenacted their ancient Sundance in a small Indian village, called Little Eagle on the Standing Rock Reservation in South Dakota. Never in my life did I sense the universality of religion and its ritual and its symbolism as on that Sunday afternoon, when, within an enclosure about the size of a modern church, made of willow and cottonwood boughs, Sioux Indians fulfilled their vow to the Great Spirit—to worship him in this old ritual and implore his mercy that the curse of devastating drought might be lifted from their people.

Through my mind ran the words of ancient Malachi, "Prove me now herewith, saith Jehovah of Hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven and pour you out a blessing that there shall not be room enough to receive it."

About two years ago their present chief, One Bull, nephew of the Indian leader, Sitting Bull, promised the council of the tribe that he would bring tribute to the Great Spirit and perform the Sundance. Indians from far and wide had assembled and a vast number of whites. How few the devout, how numerous the curious! How my heart went out to those old shriveled and wrinkled faces to whom this ceremony recalled the days of the early sixties when last this sacred dance was performed.

Tears welled up in the eyes of some, the only time I have ever seen a tear in the eye of an Indian. Because of its orgiastic nature the government had suppressed the celebration of this ancient Sundance, but a special permit had been granted to the Indians to reenact their old dance without the flagellations which were part of the ancient ritual. On their naked bodies were painted dark red stripes resembling blood. How terrible say you? Does not our sacred book say that without shedding blood there can be no remission of sins? Behind our communion table, or upon it, does there not stand a cross, a symbol of bloody sacrifice?

When we arrived we were shocked to see that the ceremony was commercialized. How terrible, I said to myself, a sacred ceremony like this sold for money. Twenty-five cents admission was charged to enter the sacred circle where the ceremony was to take place. Shocking indeed. So were the tables of the money changers that Jesus found in the temple.

How many churches still sell their pews? Most all churches commercialize this sacred ritual, though we tone it down by calling it an offering. In most churches this "special offering," whether in connection with the mass, or the communion, is figured in when the annual budget is planned.

The tree or pole around which the dance is performed, must be tall and straight and healthy throughout. A tree coming out of the earth and reaching up to the Great Spirit. The Sioux told us the pole was symbolic of man who comes out of the earth and lifts his soul up to the Great Spirit. This was the Indian interpretation, not that of an encyclopedia.

The pole was not curved but left as it had grown except that the branches had been removed. So was the first holy, that is something set aside. Here is a tree set aside, made holy, not by the means of water or blood but with symbols and a dance. This is repeated at the entrance of the sacred circle where the rite of the Sundance takes place.

At the top of the pole is hung a scarlet banner, symbolic of the sun, the Great Spirit's truest and most wonderful handiwork, his living presence one might say. How often is the sun emblematic of God or Jesus in our Bible? More than one hundred and fifty times.

Beneath the crotch but high up in the tree hung a painted image of a human being to symbolize the Sioux tribe. No, this was not like Jesus, but like the ancient Israelite who considered himself one of God's chosen people and Paul's conception of Christians as "God's elect."

A little further down hung a crescent moon holding a star, representing the firmament. To quote once more, "The moon and the stars which thou hast created." But man's symbol hung above them, "but thou hast made him but little lower than God." Not far from the altar and facing it lay the skull of a buffalo, the symbol of bread to the Indian. Bread to him because he used the buffalo's meat and his hide for clothing, and his bones for weapons and tools.

The old chief had a vision that it would be pleasing to the Great Spirit that the ancient dance should be revived. Did any of the prophets speak without having had a vision or receiving a message from Jehovah? And so this old man had made a vow to the Great Spirit that, given strength, though he was over eighty years, he would perform that mission.

For nearly two years preparations has been made, undoubtedly rehearsals were held and sanctifying ceremonies performed as by the High Priests of old. Here the words of Jesus come to mind, "For their sake I sanctify myself." He must have known that he would do this at the cost of his life.

After fasting for nearly two and one half days and taking part in the dance for the greater part of the previous day, there he was being escorted to his place, fatigued, not having tasted water, with a blistering sun beating down upon him in a stifling heat that choked us who merely stood underneath the shade of the boughs. Yet as he took his place among the other dancers, two of whom were women, he lifted his eyes to the scarlet symbol hanging from the top

What Will War Mean to Them?

Israelite altar made of earth or unhewn stones. Near the top of the pole is a crotch, and the two branching limbs must be straight and turning upward, "Male and female created he them." And in the crotch there lay a reef of sage, a sacrifice. Not a child to be sure, but considering its position how closely related to the Mosaic comment "Sanctify unto me whatsoever openeth the womb."

The tree had been selected by men chosen by the council for their exemplary lives. If I understood my friend correctly, several trees are chosen and the final selection is made by a small boy and girl of innocent age. Their hands are the first to touch the tree which is to be cut down. A sacred ceremony is then performed to cleanse this tree from evil spirits. Was this not at the heart of the Israelite—that Jehovah cannot abide evil, that his altar and the sacrifice upon it must be cleansed and made

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgement and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

WE REPORT PROGRESS.

Under the above caption "The Methodist Protestant-Recorder" editorially says that the Methodist Protestant conferences show that the tide has turned and that the churches are on the up grade. Much of the depression psychology has gone. People are becoming more interested in religion, it seems. This is true not only of that church, but of other churches, the editorial states. Facts are given concerning the Disciples of Christ with a ten percent gain in benevolences, the Methodist Church with a similar gain, and the Presbyterian Church of the U. S. A. with an increase of two million dollars and 14,277 members. The Baptists of Texas are out to win 100,000 members, and the prospects seem to be good to get them.

There are signs that indicate that our own Church is joining the procession of those who move forward in the name of the Lord. The Valley of Virginia Conference surely had a new and progressive spirit that has not always been so obvious. It is hoped that every church within the Southern Conference will make a complete report of work done during the year, and that each church will be encouraged as it reads its own record sent to the Conference. It is possible for our churches to grow. People are getting more money than for recent years. There are hundreds of non-Christians all about us who need the saving grace of the crucified Saviour. Social security is not sufficient; the people need soul security, and the Church alone can bring that message to a lost world.

Your editor awaits to see the joy reading reports to Conference from churches. He wants to see the joy on the faces of those who share in the Conference work as they are able to make cooperative plans for the future of our work with a new assurance that we travel the path of success. Conferences can make progress only as churches succeed. Here is a sincere prayer that when our Conferences have convened and the reports are all in, we, too, can report progress.

LEADERS SHOULD STUDY.

It seems that everyone who is elected to an office in a local church would feel the necessity for study in order to continue to grow and be able to lead. Unfortunately, they do not all seem to think so. There are deacons, Sunday school superintendents, teachers, and other church organization officers who seem to feel that they are sufficiently informed to carry on their work indefinitely without the necessity of study. They seldom read Paul's letter to Timothy in which he said, "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." The fact is, however, that every leader must continue to study in order to continue to be a leader.

Fortunately, it is possible for everyone these days to get helpful literature in all phases of church work. The Board of Christian Education has a considerable number of books on religious education. The Mission Board supplies literature in that field. The Elon College library can be used by many of our people. There are lending libraries in Boston, Massachusetts, and in Nashville, Tennessee, for ministers. The Duplex Envelope Company of Richmond, Virginia, will furnish material on church finance. Other sources of material are also available. If one can not afford to buy books, it is still possible for one to read because of the vast amount of free material and books that can be borrowed. There is no excuse for ignorance in our day. Just a few minutes of daily reading of the right kind will give one a vast store of information that will be beneficial in the particular job to which the church has called. An office in the church is important. It makes no difference what the office may be, whether it is janitor or pastor. The doorkeeper in the house of the Lord has a more honorable job than those who stand at the head of line among the workers of the iniquity. Every officer of every church should know how to do his job in the best possible way, for he renders a service in the name of the Lord and for the sake of His Church.

THE MISSION BOARD MEETS.

The Mission Board of the Southern Christian Convention met in its annual session at Suffolk Christian Church on Wednesday of last week for a full day of labor. Reports indicated that churches being helped by the Board are making progress. It is expected that within the coming year the Board will pay all of its obligations and be ready to begin on something new. The churches to be aided during the coming year include Winston-Salem, our mountain churches, the Valley pastorate, Richmond, Ocean View, Lynchburg and Hopewell.

Rev. W. J. Andes sat with the Board for the first time filling the vacancy created by his father's death. Mr. A. L. Jolly of Holland was elected to fill the vacancy created by the death of Mr. J. M. Darden. Mrs. W. R. Sellars of Burlington offered her resignation, and Mrs. Stanley C. Harrell of Durham, North Carolina, was elected to fill her place.

The Board voted to meet in connection with the other board meetings at Elon in February. A committee was appointed to work in connection with the Board of Christian Education to see if it may be possible for the two boards to put a man in the field to promote the work of these boards. This is in keeping with action of the Southern Convention at its last session and in response to considerable agitation on the part of people in our churches. It is to be hoped that within the not far distant future some progressive step can be made in the way of promotional activities.

ENTHUSIASM FOR THE POSSIBLE.

It was said of Booker T. Washington that the secret of his success was his great enthusiasm for the possible. If this sounds trite to any reader, just try to remember how rare it is to find a person who can enthuse over doing the possible, the commonplace things of life: the things which most any other one can do as well as they when they make a fair trial. Many of the sermons we hear and the addresses delivered to youth are challenging us and them to attempt the impossible; to give self unstintedly to doing the most difficult things in life. Of course, all of us need such a challenge once in awhile, but it is only once in awhile that we need to turn aside from doing the commonplace things of life to try our hand with the impossible things which lie across our path. But every day we have to face the common duties of life; the things which we know full well others can do as well as we, and unless we are on our guard we shall go about them in a sort of disgusted, uninterested way which fails to enlist others and makes us fall short of efficiency.

For instance, take the duties of the housewife, or the mechanic, or the salesman, or the farmer, or the teacher, etc., etc. These people are quite aware of what is coming tomorrow and that it will most likely be a repetition of yesterday. And they know also that they can do these things without employing a new technique, for they prepared themselves for these things long ago. So to be able to begin over and over again the preparation of a meal, the setting of the house in order after the night; or to plough the same field for the same crop this year as last; or to sell the same sort of merchandise day after day to mostly the same customers; to do these things with enthusiasm lifts such things out of the commonplace and most assuredly makes the one doing them a master in his or her particular sphere.

To some people a worship service fails to appeal and bores them, not because it is bad, but because there is in it no appeal to the impossible—the unusual. They are exhorted to obey the commandments, to live up to the standards set by their elders, and to go forth and perform some deed of mercy. These appeals they have heard from their youth up. How often do such persons go out of a religious service without enthusiasm or inspiration for such things they have heard that day. They are much like Naaman, the leper, when told to go and wash seven times in the River Jordan replied, "Are not Abana and Pharpar, rivers of Damascus, better than all the waters of Israel?" And not until his servant said to him, "If the prophet had bid thee do some great things, wouldst thou not have done it?" Did he go? Is it not easy for all of us to be so allured by the extraordinary, the unusual, the so-called great things of life, that we fail to see the value of the commonplace? Like the priest and levite in the parable who were rushing down to the temple to worship with such haste that they did not have time to stop and help a wounded man who greatly need their assistance. Or like the rich, young ruler, who came to Jesus seeking some good thing he might do to inherit eternal life. He

A PRAYER FOR ELON COLLEGE.

By REV. EVERETT LESHER.

O Thou Eternal One, in whose Being are the eternal treasures of wisdom, and who dost delight to be ever the teacher of mankind, humbly we implore Thy blessings upon Elon College as it opens the doors of opportunity to the marching feet of youth. We praise Thee that through the labors of its faculty, its graduates, its friends and supporters, the white light of knowledge is driving back clouds of ignorance, prejudice and superstition, enriching the well-being of men and women, spreading material comfort, promoting good feeling, giving refinement to living, advancement to morals, elevation to tastes.

We bless Thee that from these stately halls there has gone and is going forth the emancipating power of truth that prompts men to control the tyranny of appetite, to seek the pleasures of the mind, to grapple with the sins which have ever dealt death to the human race. Suffer not this noble work to be hindered by outgrown precedents or the visionless selfishness of the political State. Save this institution from surrendering the dearly won freedom of the scientific mind. Prosper every effort to disseminate truth. Grant that with the truth there may be a union of great faith, and so promote the holy alliance between the two that every graduate shall not be satisfied either with an ignorant faith or an unbelieving knowledge. In Jesus' Name we pray.

Amen.

wanted a thing that would include the commonplace, which when it was done, nothing else remained for him to do. So there are people in the Church today who remain idle because they have not been offered some big task; they would arm themselves to meet some mighty foe, but have no interest in the insidious evils which daily undermine our civilization, because they are small. They would cross the state to attend a convention on methods in Church work but refuse to sit through a meeting of their board of stewards. They just have no enthusiasm for the commonplace and because of it never have a chance at the great, the impossible tasks of life, for one must be prepared for the great by doing well the little things.

How does your enthusiasm register for Conference claims and paying pastor's salaries these days?—Methodist-Protestant Herald.

AMERICAN BOARD NEWS.

Boston, Massachusetts, September 16—The American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions in Boston announces today through Harold B. Fletcher, treasurer, that the fiscal year was closed on August 31, 1937, with an operating deficit for the year of $51,511.26. This, with the previous deficits, makes the present accumulated debt of the Board $142,603.75.

"The emergency in China has not affected the expenses of the year just ended," says treasurer Belcher. "The American Board, however is expecting that the expenditures of the year just beginning will be substantially increased on account of the cost of evacuating many of its missionaries from China and the other expenses incident to the situation in that country. Appeal is being made to the Congregational and Christian Churches to substantially increase their giving this to the support of the Board both in order to finance the present scale of work without deficit and also to provide for the China Emergency expenses.

The total expenditures for the year were $1,008,012.99, or approximately $20,000 less than the total of the previous year. This reflects both the policy of strict economy that has been exercised through the year and also a more favorable exchange rate in China and Japan than had been anticipated.

The total receipts were $956,501.73, of which $441,901.80 came from the Congregational and Christian Churches. For the first time in ten years it is possible to report that the amount received from the churches shows an increase over the previous year, the amount of increase being $5,223.38. The total giving of the Congregational and Christian Churches to its missionary program is, however, 46% less than the amount received six years ago, and it is expected that this year there should be received a larger increase than the amount as noted above.

Over 2,300 individuals sent in their personal gifts totalling $110,031.45. Most of these gifts came in during the last two months of the fiscal year and it is possible to report an increase over last year in this source of income also. The 481 missionaries and the officers of the Board are deeply grateful. (Continued on page 9.)

SUFFOLK LETTER.

School days are here again. Boys and girls pass each day, on their way to the school, where their minds are being trained and new visions and ideals are challenging their future. Many who graduated last June are having their first thrill of going away to college. Others are returning to college to continue their work looking to graduation.

It is a memorable day when one leaves home, for the first time, to go to college. That day cannot be forgotten. It is the beginning of the journey away from the home of childhood and youth. Home relations are changing. The young people are facing a new world. They will live in a new social order. New associates will be found. New friendships will be formed, and the whole trend of life will be under a new direction. One is compelled to think of the parents and other members of the family left at home. Every day the vacant chair at the table is a reminder of the absent one. Every association of the absent member of the family is sacred and treasured. Anxious parents, who no longer have daily oversight of their son or daughter, carry a burden lightened by a deep seated hope for a successful year and a worthy outlook upon life.

Parents should have the tender appreciation of every son or daughter who is attending school away from home. There is a tug at the heart—a lump in the throat—a tear in the eye—when these young people pass out of sight that first time. They are on the road to manhood or womanhood. Childhood and youth are so sweet and precious! Parents would not have them remain as children. There is a hope that they may reach maturity and take up the tasks of life for themselves. They hope to make their own homes some day and have their own families. College days make changes for parents as well as for the young people.

And the young people in college will have new responsibilities. Father and mother cannot be consulted every day. Questions must be considered, problems must be studied, decisions must be made on their own merits. Temptations will meet these young people in college. Room-mates are to be considered and personalities must be adjusted. With the new freedom and opportunity for individual expression one is brought face to face with inevitable crises which may change the character and conduct for the future. College days are an index to the after life of the student. It is important that religious attitudes and moral standards shall be indicative of righteous living. These young people will take their places as leaders in a few years. The home, the state and the nation will look to them with high hopes and happy anticipations. If they fail in these days of preparation, what hope can there be for the days of maturity?

The importance and influence of colleges should call for the best thought of the Christian people of our land. Slowly and insidiously the lax thinking and loose living of this generation may threaten the religious life of our state controlled and church owned colleges. The young people should resist every effort made to weaken their church loyalty. And every student should hold fast to the faith of our holy fathers and devout mothers. College young people should have the prayers and sympathetic friendship of the Christian people of this land.

REAL GIVING.

One day Jesus, together with others, stood outside a humble synagogue. The people were gathering. They were coming from all walks of life, interested in different things. Soon a great crowd had gathered. They stood and talked awhile about various things. Then they moved quietly and slowly into the synagogue for worship. The time for the offering arrived. As was the custom then, the worshippers passed by the table at the altar and cast their money into the treasury. They gave according to their abilities. The wealthy gave large amounts; the poor gave but little. Jesus observed the worshippers as they contributed to meet the financial requirements of the kingdom on earth. He was impressed with every gift, for, to Him, this was part of worship. Presently a poor widow passed by and cast in her mites—all that she had. Jesus remarked that this poor widow had given more than anyone else. She had given all that she had. Others after making their offerings had something left. Some had plenty and to spare left; others not quite so much. But this poor widow had nothing. She had given all her living.

There are two principles to be observed in making our offerings for the support of the kingdom of which we ourselves are a part. The first is to give that which means but little or nothing to us—that we can easily get along without. It may be an old suit of clothes. It may be an old dress. It may be a piece of discarded furniture. It may be an article about the house—anything that is of no particular use to us longer. We are just as well off or better off without it. Hence we are quite willing to part with it. Or it may be money. After giving $5, $10, $15, $20, or even larger amounts, we are not inconvenienced in the least. We have plenty and to spare. We can give without occasioning any hardship or any inconvenience whatsoever. We give in an effort to satisfy public opinion and ease our own personal conscience. The gift carries with it no tinge of sacrifice, no mark of fervent devotion. It is just a gift. Jesus has observed many such offerings as He has watched His confessed followers cast their gifts into His treasury.

The other principle to be employed in giving is that which is actuated by an overwhelming sense of gratitude and devotion to God for His unspeakable gift to us and His abundant mercy so graciously manifested in granting to us a share in His kingdom here and hereafter. Such promptings call for the best of all of our possessions. In gratitude we give the morning time of life—the early hours of the day—the most sincere and the very best there is in us. Having given ourselves, nothing that we have can be withheld. Instead of seeking for that which we can spare, that will not inconvenience us, we search for the best that we have, that means most to us. Such love and devotion will not tolerate the offering of that which is practically useless, but demands that we bring that which is most costly.

Out of gratitude one of old broke the alabaster box of precious ointment and anointed His feet. True, those who stood about complained at the extravagance, but love—true love—is always extravagant. It gives its best and gives it most generously. The true worshipper in his giving will not give that which has been cast away, but will give that which is most precious to him. He will not give pennies, nickels, and dimes, but he will give dollars, tens of dollars, and thousands of dollars, according to his ability. Of what value is wealth to anyone beyond the complete satisfaction of his immediate needs? If God has blessed you with the ability to earn, I trust that He has also blessed you with the disposition to share. If you earn bountifully, may God give you grace to share generously. Money retained to represent an estate or to be turned over to friends and loved ones, it cannot abide, but must eventually perish. Money given to the glory of God for the advancement of righteousness and the redemption of mankind must abide forever. It cannot perish.

"What shall it profit a man if he should gain the whole world and lose his own soul?"

"What shall a man give in exchange for his soul."

"He that saveth his life shall lose it. He that loseth his life for the sake of Christ and the gospel, the same shall save it, both for time and for eternity."

L. E. SMITH.

J. M. DARDEN.

The Southern Christian Convention in bi-ennial session at Franklin, Virginia, May 3rd, 1918, elected to membership on our Mission Board, Brother J. M. Darden, Suffolk, Virginia. On this Board Brother Darden served with great energy and efficiency, seldom failing to meet with the Board in its regular and called sessions till the time of his decease, May 30, 1937.

At the regular meeting of the Board after his election, namely, Suffolk, Virginia, July 30, 1918, he was made a member of the Executive Committee in which capacity he served most acceptably till the time of his death. In 1930 he was elected Assistant Secretary to the Board and served most acceptably in this capacity till his decease. Being a man of vision, capacity and good judgment in business matters this Board was under continuous obligations to him during all the years of his invaluable service as a fellow member with us. In addition to the time he gave in unselfish service on the Board, and without any charges for any and all services rendered, he was also the largest contributor of funds to missions of anyone in, or out of, the Convention, having on two occasions each given $5,000.00 and in addition thereto having on several occasions given liberally to points helped by, and in need of, funds from the Mission Board. At all times he showed great eagerness for the work of missions and the deepest desire that all mission funds be handled with greatest wisdom and discretion so that the church could be built up and the work of the kingdom enlarged when, and where, there was greatest need. As a Board we wish our gratitude for his faithful services, for his liberal donations and for his wise counsel, to be expressed in the strongest terms at our command. With the keen sense of our great loss in the decease of our faithful and beloved comrade we realize the added responsibility that has fallen upon our shoulders to carry on with all the zeal and wisdom at our command the work which he so much loved and to which he gave of his own time and means so unsparingly.

Resolved: That a copy of the foregoing be spread upon our records for permanent preservation; that a copy be sent to the bereaved family; and that a copy be furnished our church paper, THE CHRISTIAN SUN, for publication.

By order of the Mission Board, Southern Convention, in regular annual session, Suffolk, Virginia, September 15, 1937.

Signed on behalf of the Board,

J. E. WEST, Chairman,

J. O. ATKINSON, Sec'y.

Nothing relieves and ventilates the mind like a resolution.

NINETIETH ANNIVERSARY.

On October 6, 1847, when the Christian Church was 53 years old, a group of people met on the east side of the Elizabeth river and organized a Christian Church in what is now Berkley (Norfolk) Virginia. Through fire and storm the church has gone on for ninety years. From this group have gone people to build other churches in the Norfolk area where there are now ten Congregational-Christian Churches. On Wednesday evening, October 6, 1937, the church will have a birthday party for its members and friends. On Sunday afternoon, October 10, at three o'clock, there will be a special anniversary program to which all former pastors are especially invited. It is hoped that the nearby churches will be well represented. This is an invitation to all who wish to attend the 90th anniversary of First Christian Church in Norfolk, Virginia.

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND MISSIONS—TWO VIEWS.

One could heartily wish that every CHRISTIAN SUN reader would consider what seems to this writer the very wise counsel the Editor of The Missionary Review of the World offers in the following lines. The two views presented by young people themselves certainly indicate in our judgment the lines of cleavage at the present time, not only between groups of young people, but of adults, churchmen and ministers as well. If the conclusion by the Editor of The Review is not that of wisdom and security then our thinking is at fault. This conclusion briefly stated in the writer's words is "The hope for a new and more fruitful day in Christian advance is in a youth movement wholly loyal to Christ and led by the Spirit of God." Let every SUN reader consider The Review's editorial as follows:

"The youth of today sometimes criticize the mission boards on the ground that youth is ignored in the planning and direction of the work. They claim that the viewpoint of the younger generation is ignored in religion, while it is sought in business, in politics and in social movements.

"All acknowledge that the future of mission work is vitally linked with the rising generations. It is dependent on new life being constantly supplied, infinitely more than it is dependent on new money.

But are the young men and women of this coming generation taking an interest in vital Christian work as they are in politics, sport, economics and social reform? In how many churches are the youth a strong factor? How much are young people as a class willing to sacrifice for the Cause of Christ? How many are ready to do personal work on spiritual lines? Are they trained to accept and practice fundamental Christian ideas and standards? How many of the present generation of students would sacrifice ambition and prospects of business advancement to start and carry forward a Student Volunteer Movement for Foreign Missions or a Young People's Missionary Movement? Have they the idealism, the courage, the ability, the faith to undertake such work in the face of discouragement and opposition?

"We believe that multitudes of the youth of today will respond to this challenge if it is rightly presented. They must first be conscious of their own debt to Christ and acknowledge

His supremacy over their lives. They must realize the need of the world and the ability of Christ to supply that need. When they see this as clearly as they see the need for world peace, for social justice, for economic improvement and for better race relations, then they will respond as enthusiastically and sacrificially to the call of Christ and man's spiritual needs as they now do to the call of Marx or Hitler or Mussolini for temporal and national advancement. There is great encouragement today in the spirit shown by Christian youth in many colleges and in summer conferences, in societies and in churches where they find true virile and spiritual leadership.

"The missionary cause must be presented wisely to appeal to the youth of today. What kind of a missionary enterprise will students support? is a question recently sent out to colleges by the Student Volunteer Movement. The Intercollegian and Far Horizons publishes the following answer which was among those received:

"Everywhere and for the most part increasingly, capitalism, communism, fascism and nationalism threaten the welfare of mankind. Nervous breakdowns, depressions, wars—these are all symptoms of a basic economic and moral sickness. Until social justice can be established, spiritual life is impossible. The great hope of the future lies in the development on a world scale of cooperatives and an increasing socializing of the means of production, pointing ultimately toward a Cooperative Commonwealth of Nations. This is the missionary enterprise of the future."

"One contributor takes exception to this view, and rightly if we are to be guided by Christ's ideals and objectives as they are presented in the New Testament. This contributor says:

"In the early days of the Church there was no social justice. Palestine was seething with social injustice, nationalism, imperialism, absentee-landlordism, cruel taxation, frequent rebellion—but was there not a spiritual life in the midst of it? In my experience those who have been the greatest saints have often been those who suffered most from social injustice. I do not think that the world as we know it will ever be rid of sin, and so I cannot see a hope of our being rid of social injustice. I have not much hope of the coming of a cooperative Commonwealth of Nations in the terms in which we see it today. We are in a time of tremendous chaos in which we cannot yet see clearly the direction or tell the nature of the new order which will be born, though my own hopes lie in the direction indicated here. I do not, however, regard this as the "missionary enterprise of the future." Missions are concerned primarily with the religious, not with the economic."

"Let the coming generation be stirred to fight courageously against the present-day crime, injustice, cruelty and selfishness, but the hope for a new and more fruitful day in Christian advance is in a youth movement wholly loyal to Christ and led by the Spirit of God."

ROSEMONT SOCIETIES.

The Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Society of Rosemont Christian Church has finished its work for this Conference year, and is ready to go to the annual meeting at Franklin, Virginia, October 1, 1937, with a good report. The society has had a good year. The meetings have been most helpful, and financially the society went over the top more than $25.00

The Young People's Willing Workers and Cradle Roll Societies of the Rosemont Church have also gone over the top, and have raised more than their apportionments.

Following are the officers of the society for the new year; Mrs. D. D. Johnston, president; Mrs. H. H. Morrison, vice-president; Mrs. M. K. Hassell, secretary; Mrs. H. C. Hedley, treasurer; Mrs. Mary White, pianist; Mrs. O. S. Mills, sponsor of Young People's Society; Mrs. J. F. Morgan, superintendent Willing Workers Society, and Mrs. A. S. One member of this society, Mrs. J. F. Morgan, has been superintendent of the Norfolk District for the last two years, and the other members of this society are doing effective work in the interest of the great cause of missions.

ROSEMONT JUNIORS.

The Rosemont Juniors have just completed a good year's work. They more than paid their apportionment, and also enjoyed their monthly programs made up of stories and talks from their mission study books. But that which is perhaps more important is the development that has come to them in learning how to preside over meetings, acting as secretaries and taking various parts in the programs. We also feel that they are beginning to grasp the real purpose of Missionary work. Future leadership in Missions will come from these boys and girls and it is necessary that we train them for that task.

Our work for the new year has been planned and begun. We shall study three projects worked out in blocks of four successive Sundays each, with a different group of children in charge of each. These projects are on Peace, the Moslem World (Doorways) and our Rural Problems.

TO OUR MINISTERS.

The North Carolina Woman's Mission Conference will meet with our United Church, Raleigh, October 5th, at 10:00 A. M. and we not only want to invite, but to urge all our conference ministers to be present and bring some representatives from their church. The advancement of our work and the progress of the local church depends a great deal upon the pastor's attitude toward Missions. We believe that a Missionary Pastor will have a Missionary Church and a Missionary Church is always a progressive church.

Please remember the date, Tuesday, October 5th at 10:00 A. M.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church"

MISS EMILY CARLETON, Editor, 541 Osceola Ave., Winter Park, Fla.

STUDENT SUMMER SERVICE.

The Student Summer Service work is one place where Youth Fellowship members have an opportunity to put some of their ideals into practice. Since these workers are all young people, we thought you would like to hear about some of the things they have been doing during the past summer. In this issue we are happy to let you hear from Emmanuel Hedgebeth, who has been doing excellent work in some of our North Carolina churches. Emmanuel is treasurer of the Southeast Pilgrim Fellowship and is a student at Elon College, although his home is in Holland, Virginia.

FROM AN S. S. S. WORKER.

Fried chicken and country ham are not all the things that a Student Summer Service worker gets when he goes to work in North Carolina, for there are treasures of experiences that come to one who is engaged in this work. It is an unceasing pleasure to one who travels from place to place, coming in contact with different people, different ideas and different problems.

It is only natural for a person who does this work to make observations and it is this that makes the experiences of a Student Summer Service worker so valuable. One observation that I made was that where there are full time pastors the churches are growing and prospering even though they may be small, while the same can not be said about part time work.

My work did not bring me in contact with the young people of the various churches that I served, but wherever you find a strong intelligently led young people's organization, you find a church with a great deal more of enthusiasm and interest in the things that the church is trying to do.

Everywhere people seem to have a hungering desire for religion, a religion they can use in the practical world, a religion that will cause men to live peaceably among themselves. They are not hungering for an idealistic philosophy that cannot be put into practice. Yes, people actually want religion, but they do not realize the individual responsibility of one who upholds the principles and teachings of Jesus. People expect too much of their ministers; people rely too much upon their ministers for their religious convictions. They do not seem to realize that religion must necessarily be a vital part of an individual's life.

Student Summer Service has helped me a great deal and I pray and trust that the work that I have done at the churches I have served has been of great value to the boys and girls that I have come in contact with, and that their influence upon other children may be of the highest type.

A STRANGE FAMILY.

The father has never missed church or Sunday school in 23 years. The mother has had a perfect record for eleven years. A son has not missed for twelve years. A daughter has been at the evening service every Sunday for eight years.

What's the matter with this family anyway? Don't they ever have company on Sunday to keep them away from church?

Don't they ever get up tired on Sunday mornings? Don't they belong to any lodges where they get their religion, instead of at their Father's House, or to any clubs, or to anything?

Don't they ever have headaches, or colds, or nervous spells or tired feelings, or sudden calls out of the city, or week-end parties, or business trips, or picnics, or any other trouble?

Don't they have a radio so that they can get some good sermons from out-of-town preachers? Don't they ever get a lot more good out of reading a sermon out of a book? And don't they ever get disgusted with the social Gospel or whatever it is that their minister preaches?

What's the matter with this family anyway, and why are they so happy and cheerful?

We leave it to you to answer.

NEW ADVENTURES FOR OUR SOCIETY.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC
FOR OCTOBER 3, 1937.

SCRIPTURE: Phil. 3: 13, 14.
(Consecration Meeting.)

Daily Readings—

Monday—Missions Are Calling—Acts 16: 9-15.

Tuesday—Commissioned and Equipped—John 20: 19-23.

Wednesday—No Task Too Big—Phil. 4: 13.

Thursday—A Great Adventurer—II Cor. 11: 22-33.

Friday—An Adventurer in Jail—Acts. 16: 16-33.

Saturday—Following Leaders—Heb. 13: 7, 8.

This topic offers a fine opportunity for Christian Endeavorers to take stock of their society and its program activities. The activities of the society should be closely related both to the needs and interests of its members and to the policies of the society and church. The purpose of a society is to get young people to engage in activities which enrich their experiences and make their lives more Christian.

Give consideration to the following:

1. Has the society been maintaining an adequate program?
2. Have the activities been related to the needs of the members?
3. Have the activities been planned as a part and in keeping with the total youth program of the church?
4. Is the society reaching as many young people as it should?
5. Has it rendered valuable service within the church?
6. What may the society do this year that it has not been doing?
7. What new adventures of study and service may the society undertake? What shall the goals be?

Through careful planning of this program any social society should be able to discover the weak points which should become stronger. Do not try many new adventures at the same time, but at least try to improve some lines of Endeavor.

Suggested Hymns—

- "Somebody Did a Golden Deed."
"Give of Your Best to the Master."
"O Master, Let Me Walk With Thee."

GOD IN THE MAKING OF A NATION.

LESSON XIII—SEPTEMBER 26, 1937.

GOLDEN TEXT: Beware lest thou forget the Lord thy God, in not keeping his commandments, and his ordinances, and his statutes, which I command thee this day.—Deut. 8:11.

LESSON: Deut. 8:11-20.

The old man knew that within a short time he would be leaving the children of Israel, and that another would take his place as leader. And his heart was full. Not so much of sorrow over the approaching severance of the ties that had bound him to this people through a long life-time and had through many experiences together which had bound them close to one another. His heart was full, rather of anxiety, anxiety lest this people whom he loved so much should forget God Who had redeemed them from bondage in Egypt, Who had led them and fed them through the long wilderness journey, and Who would give to them the land of promise after his departure. He knew full well the fickleness and forgetfulness of human beings. He knew, too, how soon the discipline of depressions could be forgotten in the days of prosperity, how vows made in times of stress could be forgotten in times of success. Thus he calls the people to him, and as a father speaking to his children, out of a full heart he warns them against forgetting God, and enjoins them to follow Him. Here is one of the great addresses of all time, not only because of its dignity and beauty of language, but because of its passion and heart throbs.

God in the Nations Life.

Moses starts out, rightfully, by reminding the Israelites of God's hand in their history. He would make obedience in the present based upon recognition and appreciation of God's grace and goodness in the past. He reminds his people how God had delivered them from Egypt, how He had led them all those forty years in the wilderness, how He had disciplined them, and tested them, and fed them, and provided for them, and how he Had taught them that after all "men do not live by bread alone," that men are not sufficient to themselves, that they draw their sustenance from God himself. He makes it clear that God has been working out His purpose in the history of their nation, that history has really been His-Story.

And then he reminds them that the future is bright with the promises of God. Just across the River Jordan there stretches out before them in intriguing and entrancing panorama the land of promise, their "journey's end." From of old the promise had been to them and to their children and their children's children. Now the goal was in sight. It was a godly land. It was their's for the taking. It was a prospect to thrill the heart of the most sophisticated.

Lest We Forget.

But there was a subtle and insidious danger. There was the danger that they should forget the Lord their God, that their hearts should be lifted up in pride and vanity and self-sufficiency, that ingratitude would creep in, that a false sense of their own importance should blind them to their comparative impotence without God, that prosperity should make them hard of heart and fat of soul, that success should blind them to the fact that it was God himself who gave them power to get wealth, that they should forget their part of the covenant which was a sacred relationship between them and God. It all sounds so modern and up-to-date. How many there are today who have become so prosperous that they have forgotten the God who gave them power to get wealth. How true a picture it is of our generation which feels so self-sufficient because of our scientific discoveries and achievements that it feels that it does not need God any more.

Lest we forget, lest we forget! How much we need to be on our guard lest we forget God. Lest we fail to remember with gratitude His manifold blessings in the past, lest we forget our dependence upon Him in the present, lest we seek to live without seeking his will for our lives, lest we become self-sufficient, self-complacent, self-righteous. One cannot but wonder whether we have learned the lessons of the depression, whether with the return of better times, and of potential prosperity, we are not turning again to our old ways, bowing down at our old idols, and forgetting God.

If We Do Forget.

God help us if we do forget, either as individuals or as a nation. One cannot but be impressed with the abundant evidences of God's hand in our national history. (The writer of these Notes has for a long time been intrigued by the topic "The Hand of God in American History," and if he had the ability he would like to write a book of that title). And our nation has not been unmindful of that fact entirely. But there is danger lest our nation, and the other nations of the world forget God, that they do not administer their national affairs according to His principles, that they become secularized and seemingly self-sufficient. History records the downfall of great nations that forgot God. Material resources, scientific achievements, educational institutions, even formal religion are no guarantee of national security. Righteousness exalteth and undergirds a nation. Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord.

And the principle holds true in the case of the individual. The man who forgets God, who leaves God out of His life, in whose life as the writer says "God is not in his thoughts," that man is walking in the way that in the end leadeth to destruction. "Thou shalt remember the Lord thy God"—this commandment giveth life.

SIoux INDIAN SUNDANCE.

of the pole and on his face there shone a heavenly serenity. Peace and ecstasy.

He plucked a few leaves from a spray of sage that he with all the other dancers held in the left hand. These he chewed and then the dance began with the intoning of the tom toms and the rhythmic singing of the players.

The men were painted with ochre, naked to the waste, wearing a white skirt and belt, wrists and ankles ornamented with white rabbit fur, barefooted. Only those who have tried to walk on heated dust barefooted know what that means. The women though painted were dressed in the common Indian garb of white elk skin, trimmings of beads and shells, beaded moccasins with decorative feathers beneath the wreath of sage crowning their heads.

Yes, the Medicine Man was there in all his glory of feathers, porcupine quills and beads, peace pipe and other sacred relics. But remember so is the priest at high mass arrayed in all his glory. He had some small bells and a wand to ward off the evil spirits from the dancers. And for fear you might laugh at him, recall that the bell on your church but recently, as time goes, was rung for the purpose of keeping the evil spirits away from the house of God and that the place be yet better guarded against the forces of the evil one gargoyles were sculptured on every projection.

Each dancer was sheltered from the evil spirits by one who kept constantly in front of him, waving in his right hand an eagle feather tied to a stick. How many prayers and Ave Marias are said for the same purpose! The dancers held in their hands a circle signifying the universe. Their Great Spirit is the God of All, the

UNDAUNTED COURAGE.

"This one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Jesus Christ."—Phil 3: 13, 14.

"Teaching the things concerning the Lord Jesus Christ with all boldness."—Acts 28: 31.

Nothing, however severe, merciless and cruel, kept Paul from going on with his work. Though the enemies were multitudes, he had a friend with him and that friend meant glory.

If we could realize this as Paul did, we also would stand up to the right in Jesus and be brave. Rather we would greatly fear not to do so for we are bidden by him to be "steadfast, unavoidable" and to hear the good news of salvation to the world. One of our greatest sins is silence in his cause.

Prayer—Forgive us of our failures to be living witnesses for Jesus. Fill our hearts with boldness today and always to show forth Thy indwelling spirit. Amen.

TUESDAY.

FUTILE POWERS.

"His hand, which he put forth against Him, dried up."—I Kings 13: 4.

We sometimes wonder why our Lord does not paralyze the hands of the enemy stretched forth to thwart the progress of Christianity. He does in a way, but perhaps differently from what we expect. With the Christian, as with Christ, there are legions of conquering angels. If the enemy is not stopped now, he will be some day, for evil will be discovered and the black pits will be turned to glorious palaces shining with the light of God. All efforts fall weak and futile that are put forth against the Kingdom of God. Let us trust Him.

Prayer—We need the power of the Holy Spirit in us that we shall not fear and we pray for the courage to be always about Thy business. In Christ's name we ask it. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

BRING YOUR REPORT.

"And the apostles, when they were returned, declared unto Him what things they had done."—Luke 9: 10.

It was a marvelous report that these apostles brought to Jesus. It was a report on their first commission to preach and teach and save. What a joy it must have been to them to realize that men are made to believe on Jesus and that at the spoken word disease and sin fall away from afflicted souls.

How about your report? You have been commissioned, too. What does the day look like when you arrive at the end of it and look back? Ask yourself the question: "What have I done with the gifts and the powers entrusted to me?"

Prayer—Our Father, forgive us of our neglect. The days run by and we have let so many things of life steal our fruit from us. God forbid. Enable us to give a report that will carry joy to Thy soul. Amen.

THURSDAY.

THE SIGNS OF THE ROAD.

"He has showed thee, oh man, what is good, and what doth the Lord require of thee but to do justly, love mercy and walk humbly with thy Lord."—Micah 6: 8.

"See then that you walk circumspectively, not as fools, but as wise." Eph. 5: 15.

One of the most blessed provisions for the travelling public are the signs along the road, not only marking directions that the traveler may not miss his way, but also warning signs to protect him from harm and danger.

God has furnished us also with good warnings against evil so that we may not miss our way and may not come to harm. For instance, the toothache warns us that something is wrong; take care of the teeth. A headache warns us to have a saner regard for our bodies. Every misfortune bespeaks something wrong in our lives. All of this is a proof of God's love and his watchful care.

Prayer—O Lord, we praise Thy Holy name for all our blessings and we pray for wisdom, to grow in grace and the knowledge of the Lord forever. Amen.

FRIDAY.

THE FINEST HOUSE.

"I, wisdom, have made prudence my dwelling."—Prov. 8: 12.

We all love to live in nice comfortable homes with comfortable furnishings, rugs on the floor, lovely pictures on the walls and modern conveniences. But we forget that there is a dwelling place far more glorious and luxurious than the most palatial homes known to man and that place is the dwelling place of the Spirit, prudence and wisdom; a place of love, righteousness and honor, where one is free from evil, pride and arrogance. Such a place turns the barest house into a palace and fills it with comfort and satisfaction.

Prayer—Our Father, Thou art our dwelling place throughout all generations. Help us to live here that we may live in heaven there. Amen.

SATURDAY.

PROMOTION AND DEMOTION.

"Everyone that exalteth himself shall be abased; but he that humbleth himself shall be exalted."—Lk. 14: 11.

In other words, don't "toot your own horn." The wise man will not put himself where there is no chance for promotion, but he will undertake to put himself where there is a chance for promotion. Then, what ever happens will be upward.

Pride falls, humility cannot fail, for it is already on the ground. Pride provokes envy, but humility arouses admiration. Life is too short to exert ourselves for worldly honor and miss the glory of God. The glory of God is infinitely more to be desired, and that goes to the lowly.

Prayer—Our Father, we would be like Jesus. Help us to be. In His name we ask it. Amen.

SUNDAY.

THE BEAUTIFUL WAY.

"Sanctify them in the truth."—John 17: 17.

"I rejoice greatly that I have found certain of Thy children walking in truth."—II John 4.

The highway of truth in the most beautiful way. It is the way of God's Spirit, it is the way of love and kindness, it is the way of peace and satisfaction, it is a girdle for our loins, it is a breast plate of righteousness for our character, and it is the only sure way of arriving. All other ways are an abomination to the Lord.

The strange thing of life is that so many people deliberately choose the way of falsehood. Their vision cheats them, their will is twisted, evil seems good to them, and the part of death seems to be their choice.

Prayer—Our Father, we pray for the guidance of the Holy Spirit through Jesus Christ, our Lord. Place our feet always in the right way. In Christ's name we ask it. Amen.

A proclamation was published recently in the Canada Gazette calling for the observance of Monday, October 11th, as "a day of general thanksgiving to Almighty God for the bountiful crop and other blessings with which Canada has been favored.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D., Pastor.

AN ANCHOR OF THE SOUL.

By REV. JOHN G. TRUITT.

"Which hope we have as an anchor of the soul, both sure and steadfast, and which entereth into that within the veil." Heb. 6:19.

As we meditate together this morning about an anchor of the soul I wish you to have in the background of your mind, first, God. Let us think about God. Let us look upon him as our creator, and maker, and the one who holds the universe in his hands. Let us remember that he holds us in his heart. That he loves us, and that we are his, and that he has both willingness and power to reveal himself unto us. Let us think on the majesty and greatness of God. Let us look upon all history as being in his power, and all people as being in his concern. Let us turn our hearts and minds toward God. We are in his presence, in his church, at his altar, and a place made sacred by the power of his Spirit. As in no other place we are in God's presence, let us draw our minds in to him.

Second, Jesus. Let us think on God having so great a desire to reveal himself more fully unto us; and being so anxious for the world to know him as not only its creator but as the Father, that he sent his Son Jesus Christ, the second person of the trinity, to reveal the Father unto men. Let us not be afraid to believe on the simple Gospel message which pictures Jesus as the perfect revelation of God, so that men knowing Jesus could have an understandable conception of God, and seeing Jesus they could know well what the Father was like. Let us think of Jesus as being sent from God, and that God was in Jesus, his only begotten Son, so much so that men could fall at his feet and cry, "My Word, and my God." Let us see Jesus as our brother and God's Son. Let us know that he came to earth to bring us to God.

Third, Holy Spirit. Let us realize that we are under the dispensation of the Holy Spirit. That the church is the work now of the Holy Spirit, and that God is not gone as long as the Holy Spirit is in his church, and that Jesus still lives, as long as the Holy Spirit reigns in the world. Let us turn our minds then to God, and Jesus, and the Holy Spirit—each a revelation to us, each living, and reigning in our hearts and in the church, the three one in spirit, purpose and power, unshakable and eternal, God blessed for evermore.

Fourth, Ourselves. Each of us has a place in God's scheme of things. We are his. We are not left out, only as we leave ourselves out. He is our Father, and we are his children. Let us by faith know that, and seek to find our place in his will and in his work. We have a place, and he will reveal himself to us in such way that we may feel ourselves filling the place he has for us, if humbly we seek to love and serve him.

Such is our hope. "Which hope we have as an anchor of our souls."

(1) All ships have anchors. All ships need them. Anchors tie, and hold. They keep ships in harbor. They hold ships from drifting away. They keep them from running on rocks and being destroyed. A ship without an anchor could never see peace because of fear of being driven against the rocks. Is a ship any less likely to carry its cargoes across the seas because it has anchors? No. Is a ship any less likely to see the ports of the earth because it has anchors? No. Is a ship any less likely to make a name and a fame for itself because it has anchors? No. Is it any less likely to see full service, and come to full glory because it has anchors? No a thousand times NO. Because of its safe anchors, its sure and steadfast bonds it is all the more certain of the freedom of the seas, and the success of a great career.

(2) Ships. Ships are beautiful after all. Sometimes I like to stand in the harbor and watch the ships at sea. Some are old, and rusty, and dirty; some are neat, and new, and clean; some are great, and some are small, but somewhere about them all are their anchors. Great, massive irons, and strong cables to hold those heavy iron anchors. Some anchors weigh as much as 18,000 pounds, great sheet anchors, they are called. Do you know the kind of ship Dick Byrd chose to carry him, and his expedition to Little America? Well, he chose a ship which had been tested in the seven seas for sixty full years! Think of it, an old ship sixty years old. Nothing new and untested, and untried about that! A ship it was, which was built right, handled right, and whose anchors had kept it in, and kept it secure. Yes, it had carried its cargoes, and seen the shores of the seas, and tried its strength on the bosom of the mighty oceans of the world. And for sixty years it had never failed. Its anchors had held.

(3) Storms. All anchors do not hold. Mighty storms sometimes sweep down upon a ship to try its very soul, so to speak, and sometimes their anchors fail to hold, and they founder. We are reading anew about the Mediterranean. It claims the front page of our papers again. But the most universally known incident of the Mediterranean Sea is one that happened many centuries ago when four anchors failed a Roman ship, and a Roman prisoner became the central figure among the passengers aboard. Paul said: "I believe God, that it shall be even as it was told to me." "There stood by me this night the angel of God, whose I am, and whom I serve, saying, fear not, Paul; thou must be brought before Caesar: and lo, God hath given thee all that sail with thee." "I believe God."

They cast out four anchors and waited for dawn, but the four anchors all failed, and the ship foundered; but Paul's anchor of faith did not fail, and not one single soul was lost. Paul believed God. God did not fail and a faith that is fastened in him will not fail.

(4) An anchor of the soul. A person wants to be very careful as to what he ties his soul to. He wants something more than the vanishing materials of a perishing world. They will perish. They will not hold. Just as the anchors on the Roman ship failed just so will trust in this world's goods fail, however, helpful, and beautiful they may be. The psalmist says, "Some trust in horses, and some in chariots; but we will remember the name of the Lord our God." What are you trusting in? Are you fastening your soul to gold, or silver, or houses, or lands? Are you putting your trust for salvation in pleasure, or fame, or power, or influence? In what are you putting your trust? Our lesson today teaches us to put our trust in the hope of salvation through Jesus Christ. That hope is to be an anchor of the soul, both sure and steadfast, and which reaches to within the veil.

The earthly anchors of the Roman vessel reached down into the mud, the simple faith—anchors of a Roman prisoner—reached up into the very throne of Almighty God. The earthly anchors failed. The spiritual anchors held. The spiritual anchors: The Christian faith, the Christian home, the Christian Church—these all are but ways of saying the Christ cannot fail. Is your anchor in him? Is your hope, when a world is shaking and its civilization is trembling, in Jesus Christ? Is he the anchor of your soul? Let us say with Paul: "I believe God."

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

I wrote a letter a few weeks ago to two of our churches in the Mountains (Elk Spur and Ivy Hill) asking them to send us a few crates of cabbage. The mountain cabbage is so good and they seem to have plenty of them in that section. My good friend, Rev. O. A. Elmore, who is pastor of those churches found out I had asked these people for cabbage. He got busy and instead of sending us a few crates, made up a truck load of 2,500 pounds and sent it to us.

The children in all the buildings have had cabbage to eat for a week and to keep from losing any of them we got busy and made two barrels of sauer kraut and stored it for the winter.

It certainly was kind of our mountain churches to "share" their blessings with us. We trust the Lord will richly bless them and that they will get lots of joy out of the giving. Brother Elmore is certainly a man who can put things across. If we could find a friend in the apple sections of the Valley Virginia Central Conference who would come to our aid it would be a great blessing to us. Who will spare a little time to ask the good people in that section to share a few apples with these little children at Thanksgiving?

The Christian Endeavor Society of Shallow Ford Christian Church made it possible for the orphanage to have a three-reel movie last week. They were pictures to entertain children and they certainly did enjoy the show. Mr. W. E. Walker put the show on. He has given the children several amusing shows before. The children all join in with their many thanks.

MY MOTHER PRAYS FOR ME.

16.58 Whenever trials I may meet,
Rugged roads may bruise my feet,
The thought that is supremely sweet,
My mother prays for me.

28.21 When cares of life are thronging fast,
And o'er my life are shadows cast,
And gloom succumbs my heart at last,
My mother prays for me.

If life is bright or dark with woe,
I am content, for this I know,
My mother prays for me.

I've found the power of Jesus' love;
The peace of God is like a dove,
Since mother prays for me.

In Memoriam

TUCK.

Mrs. Maggie Coe Tuck, daughter of Thomas and Annie Coe, was born in Wake County, North Carolina, April 18, 1890, and died at her home in Virgilina, Virginia, August 5, 1937. When young, her parents moved to Durham, North Carolina, and in this city she grew up. She was twice married—in 1908 to Arthur Seat, who died in 1911. To this marriage were born two children, Donald Wayne, and McArthur. McArthur is now Mrs. Philip Shuey of Kingsport, Tennessee. After the death of her first husband the deceased moved to Virgilina, Virginia, and engaged in the millinery business. In 1913 she married Ira Tuck of Virginia. To this latter marriage there are four children—Wilbur, Elizabeth, Doris, and Thomas. Elizabeth is now Mrs. Graham Loftis of Virgilina and Doris, Mrs. P. V. Tillman of South Boston, Virginia. Wilbur is a graduate of Elon and teaches in the Deep River High School, Sanford, North Carolina.

Sister Tuck was one of the leading workers in her church and in the civic and social affairs of her community. While a devoted wife and mother, she always served in any way opportunity presented for the good of those about her. She was a leader in the local Parent-Teacher Association and represented the County Red Cross as their social welfare worker in this community.

The funeral was held in the presence of a large crowd of relatives and friends in the Christian Church, conducted by Revs. L. E. Smith, E. R. Harris, and C. E. Newman. The interment was in the Coe family plot in the City Cemetery, Durham, North Carolina.

One of the most unselfish and sacrificing women of the community has gone to her heavenly reward. Her greatest pleasure here was to serve others. In heaven her joy is complete in doing her service for her Saviour.

C. E. NEWMAN.

COLE.

We, the members of the Woman's Missionary Society of Big Oak Christian Church wish to pay tribute to our beloved sister, Mrs. Evander Cole whom God called home on August 3, 1937. Her death came as a shock to her family, loved ones, and friends.

She was our vice-president last year. When home duties prevented her being with us, she always sent her offering. She was a faithful wife, a devoted mother, and could not be surpassed as a neighbor. Therefore, be it resolved by our society:

1. That we have lost a good member and a free giver.
2. That we humbly bow in submission to God's will, who doeth all things well.
3. That we extend our heart-felt sympathy to the companion and children and commend them to God, who alone can give comfort and consolation.
4. That a copy of this tribute be sent to the family, a copy to "The Christian Sun" for publication, and a copy to be recorded in our minutes.

A precious one from us is flown,
A voice we loved is still,
A place is vacant in our home
That never can be filled.

Yet, we bow in submission to His will;
Press onward at His command,
Until we meet around the throne
And then we will understand.

Respectfully submitted,
Mrs. J. B. COLE, President,
Mrs. JANIE SMITH, Sec'y.

VINCENT.

On June 14, 1937, God, in His infinite wisdom, called home Mrs. J. E. Vincent, a member of the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Society of the Suffolk Christian Church.

For a number of years she had been an invalid, often times unable to leave her bed, but her sunny disposition, her patience, and her trust in God endeared her not only to her family, but to those who were so fortunate as to know her. She never forgot her church and, while she could not attend the meetings of the society, she never forgot her contributions.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we humbly bow in submission to the will of our Heavenly Father who doeth all things according to His loving kindness and tender mercy.
2. That we honor her life, not only with our lips, but by being true in the service to the cause she loved so well.
3. That we extend our heartfelt sympathy to her family and commend them to God, whose grace is sufficient in the hour of trouble.
4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, that a copy be sent to "The Christian Sun" for publication, and a copy be entered upon the records of our society.

ruler of the universe. To this circle four feathers were attached symbolizing the four corners of the earth so often mentioned in the Book of Revelations. Did they mean that although they came to the Great Spirit with a special petition they asked his benediction to fall on the whole world? I wonder.

These ceremonial dances are, we were told, of value only when they are performed with absolute accuracy. One mis-step and the whole dance loses its value. Now it is the object of the evil spirits to detract the minds of the dancers that in some forgetful moment a little slip of foot or gesture may frustrate all the good that has been done. It reminded me of Martin Luther's lines, "For still our ancient foe, doth seek to work us woe, His craft and power are great."

But though the spirit was willing the flesh was weak. The old Hero could go no further. Utterly exhausted, still making a feeble attempt to blow his reed through parched lips in harmony with the other dancers, six in all, he was helped to his shaded shelter. As far as we could see no one ministered to him. I said to a doctor standing near. "Why does not someone do something, he will die?" He did die. Shall we say, giving his life a ransom?

It was remembered that after the dance the Old Chief had had a vision, a vision of hail, meaning that the Great Spirit was displeased. Some one, perhaps many, had been irreverent and the invocations were not honored by the Great Spirit. Then immediately following the close of the dance a violent gust of wind, blinding us all with dust. That was the proof that the Great Spirit frowned upon them; one or more of those sanctified for this ceremonial had not been true in spirit. It was all done to no purpose. The week before I had heard a minister say it was because of our sins that God has sent the drought.

Returning to my car I said to myself: "And we send missionaries to the Indians."—Advance.

Vacation Bible Schools Train Future Citizens

Boards Cooperate in Student Summer Service.

The Board of Christian Education of the Southern Convention cooperated during the past summer with the Extension Boards in New York in directing Student Summer Service work within the Southern Convention. Eight duly appointed workers served within the convention. They all attended the Elon Summer School of Leadership Training and were commissioned at the closing service on Friday night. Rev. W. T. Scott, a member of the Board of Christian Education, was directly responsible to the Extension Boards for this Student Summer Service and worked co-operatively with Rev. F. C. Lester, Executive Secretary of the Board of Christian Education, in making out schedules.

A major feature of Student Summer Service work is to conduct vacation Bible schools. They do many other things also. Reports from these workers indicate that they enjoyed their summer and that the churches responded well wherever they worked.

Rev. Albert Buchanan served at Winston-Salem, Asheville, Southern Pines, and Albemarle. Mr. Loring D. Chase served at Christian Temple, Holland, First Church, Norfolk. (He also edited THE CHRISTIAN SUN for three weeks).

Emmanuel Hedgebeth worked at Berea, Henderson, Liberty (Vance), Union, Providence and Sanford. Misses Mary Nell Eaves and Arline Waite spent their time in Greensboro, High Point, Sophia, Brown's Chapel and Spies Presbyterian churches. Dorothy Grigsby and Evelyn Ayscue served ten churches in the Valley of Virginia. Rev. Arthur Wells was with Rev. G. C. Crutchfield at Bethlehem before going on to Georgia.

More Than 1,500 Persons Reached.

As shown in the chart below more than 1,500 persons were reached through these vacation schools. Thirty-five churches directed some of the summer vacation of their children and filled the days with happiness and useful study and service.

These Beginner and Primary children with their teacher, Miss Lilly Spain, at Rocky Ford, Virginia, are representative of the hundreds of boys and girls in our vacation schools during the past summer. These future citizens of America are being trained in things of religion.

Other Churches Reached.

Miss Lilly Spain directed the Beginner and Primary department of the union school at Franklin, Virginia. Miss Spain and Miss Edna Fulcher aided Rev. O. A. Elmore in the schools at Elk Spur, Rocky Ford and Ivy Hill in the mountains of Virginia. Waverly, Virginia, shared in a fine union school. Newport News and Lynchburg held their own schools. There are doubtless other churches that held vacation schools from which reports have not been received. If so, the Board of Christian Education will be glad to have reports from them.

The Bible and Missions Are Studied.

The Bible and missions were the two topics most often studied in these vacation schools. It was the aim of the leaders to give the pupils an appreciation of the Bible and make them feel a friendship for peoples of other races and nations. Of course, there were discussions of health habits, good citizenship and other important things. There were stories, dramatizations, handwork and games. Happy, Christian workers sought to implant this spirit in the lives of growing citizens.

The Country Church

You say that it's needing painting some,
That it's pews are somewhat straight,
And it's woodwork is not so beautiful
As the church that's up-to-date?
But the up-to-date cathedral,
That graces the city square,
Is great and strong, for it's men came from
The country church—out there!

It's windows are frail and ancient, too,
Storm-tested from above;
While the colored glass of the city church
May speak forth of faith and love;
But the strong men of the city church
And the women gathered there
Are the jewels that came from the country church
And made the church on the square.

The cow-bell rings at the country church
And gathers the folk indoors;
While the city church chimes silver notes
To the tread o'er carpeted floors;
Yes, I long for art, and the beautiful,
And the soul of the organ's tune;
But the country hearts are just as warm
In December, as in June.

There's Jim and Pearl, and dear Aunt Lou,
And Uncle This and That;
While the city church may only have
A bow, and a tip of the hat;
I own that I long for culture's touch
And the bigness that travel imparts;
But the country church has its bigness, too,
In the goodness from simple hearts.

Now hear, oh, hear! ye city church,
The money you gave away
Was only an investment for a time,
And the interest we send today;
You gave us dollars, we give you men
And young folk clean and true,
For the country cannot assimilate
These that we now send you.

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

News comes from Dayton, Ohio, that Rev. McDaniel Howsare is in the hospital very ill. His many friends will pray for his recovery.

Rev. G. H. Veazey of Wadley, Alabama, is helping Rev. G. C. Crutchfield in a revival meeting this week at Belew Creek, North Carolina.

Rev. Aubrey C. Todd and his bride, the former Miss Dorothy Grigsby, visited his parents in South Norfolk, Virginia, before going to Chicago this week where they will attend Chicago Seminary this winter.

The matter of renewing your subscription to THE CHRISTIAN SUN may be insignificant to you, dear reader, but it is very important to the paper that is struggling to continue its service. Please look at your label and be sure that your subscription is up to date. Thank you heaps.

Rev. D. M. Spence of Walnut Cove, North Carolina, has resigned his churches in order that he may co-operate with the Conference in establishing pastorates. He is eager to accept work beginning November 1st. This is a fine cooperative spirit and the churches will certainly appreciate it.

His many friends will regret that ill health has made it necessary for Dr. W. C. Wicker to resign as treasurer of the Southern Convention, a position he has held for almost twenty-four years. At last report the good doctor was slowly improving at his home at Elon College, North Carolina.

Rev. Joseph W. Fix, formerly of Burlington, North Carolina, has completed a successful six years pastorate in the university city of Urbana, Illinois, and has recently begun a pastorate at Cairo, Illinois. The latter church has twice the members of the former, and Mr. Fix anticipates a happy pastorate.

Rev. A. R. Van Cleave, who has been dean of Southern Union College at Wadley, Alabama, for the past several years, has recently moved to Demorest, Georgia, where he has become the head of the department of education and psychology. Rev. Mr. Van Cleave says that he regrets to leave the college and churches which he has served.

Rev. W. Millard Stevens seems to be having a good time as pastor of Union Christian Church, Route 2, Burlington, North Carolina. A recent bulletin from his church tells of four young people who have entered colleges from his church and three persons who united with the church. This makes a total of twenty received during the conference year. This country church seems to be moving forward.

Evangelistic services at Holland Christian Church, with Dr. C. Rexford Raymond as preacher, were concluded Sunday evening, September 19th. Five persons, three by profession of faith and two by letter, were received into membership. The

OUR PRAYER.

By REV. EVERETT LESHER.

O Thou Brightness of Eternal Glory, lift up the light of Thy Countenance upon us as we kneel in the silence of this worship hour. Illumine the darkness which encompasses us; dispell the gloom of all unrighteousness which lies cold and dull in our hearts; drive away the shadows of ignorance and prejudice which lie across the landscape of our minds. Be Thou the lamp unto our feet and the light unto our path that we may no longer live groping, faltering, stumbling lives. As the light of the sun warms out of the flowers the beauty that is in them, so do we pray that Thou wilt warm out the good that is in us. Draw from our hearts the love that knows no boundary, the reverence that holds all things sacred, the justice that is melted with mercy, the selflessness that seeks daily not to outshine others but to outshine ourselves. Help us to be, in very truth, lights set upon a hill which no vicissitude can obscure, reflections of Divine glory which nothing can darken. And when we pass at last into the shadow of the valley of death, continue to be, O Lord, our Light till the morning breaks. Amen.

rite of baptism was administered at the Sunday evening service. A deep spiritual note prevailed throughout these meetings, reports the pastor, Rev. Carl R. Key.

The Union Congregational Church, Chattanooga, Tennessee, has enjoyed a very profitable September with sermons by their minister, Rev. M. J. Sweet, on "Men and Money," "Thinking Loyalty," "Education and Democracy," "So This Is College," "The Nazarene," and "The Struggle for the Goal." Visitors included Commissioner T. J. McMillan, Rev. Aubrey C. Todd, President Alex W. Guerry of University of Chattanooga, and Coach "Scrappy" Moore. Each Sunday was given a special designation such as "In His Glad Service," "Church and School Day," "College Day," and "The Day of Athletics."

EVANGELISM.

What has your local church been able to accomplish during this year in winning others to Jesus Christ? How many new members have been added to your roll? How many indifferent members have been started again toward real loyalty and faithfulness? Have you checked over your roll this autumn to see how many members you have on the roll? Are you making definite plans to win them to devotion to the church during the new church year? Have you checked over all the families connected with your church to see how many young people are slipping by without uniting with the church? How often do they give themselves to wholesome Christian living without recognizing the church, and making public their affiliation therewith.

Our Conferences will be in session soon. Let us report to those Conferences the work we have done along this line, and let us see something of what may be done next year, and then let us consecrate ourselves to the task. A group of twenty Eastern Virginia Conference pastors sat down together at lunch in our Suffolk Christian Church and made a reporting of their work in winning others during this closing conference year. The twenty pastors present report the winning of 314 new members. Pastors of a few of the larger fields were not able to be present. But we all feel that a finer work along this line should be done. How can our ministers catch a new enthusiasm for winning others to Christ? And how may we be able to get a larger number of our laity to take the matter of winning others still more seriously? We need not expect our church members to go out after others unless we ministers lead the way.

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Ch'm. Com. on Evangelism.

A vexation arises, and our expressions of impatience hinder others from taking it patiently. Disappointment, ailment, or even weather depresses us, and our look or tone of depression hinders others from maintaining a cheerful and thankful spirit. We say an unkind thing, and another is hindered in learning the holy lesson of charity that thinketh no evil. We say a provoking thing, and our brother is hindered in the day's effort to be meek. How sadly, too, we may hinder without word or act! For wrong feeling is more infectious than wrong doing; especially the various phases of ill temper—gloominess, touchiness, discontent, irritability—do we not know how catching these are?

—F. R. Havergal.

PALMYRA CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

With the recent re-organization of the Palmyra Sunday school and additions to the church organization has come a period of advancement which is gratifying to all concerned. Among some of the activities which are moving along is the influence of the recently organized Ladies Aid Society. They organized with eleven members and now they have twenty-two on the roll. With capable leadership represented in its official capacity, it will do things. They have already raised the funds for the children's Christmas tree. They have helped to pay the pastor's salary. They have helped to pay the Conference Apportionment. They pay to Missions ten percent of all money raised. New song books have been ordered for the church. Money has been raised for a new system of lights for the church.

The Sunday school has increased ten percent in attendance under the leadership of Malon Clem, the new superintendent. Miss Rush is secretary.

The church has an increased average attendance from thirty-one to seventy-eight within the last few months. During the last revival there were nineteen additions to the church and a new spirit manifested in all departments of the church and community.

The young people have an organized Christian Endeavor which is really doing things in a fine way. Their program are well attended and listened to with much interest. After each meeting at the church the young people go out on the church grounds for a happy time playing games before services at church. Their recent picnic was one of the highlights of the season in the community with all the surrounding neighbors taking part.

The daily Vacation Bible School recently conducted by Miss Ayscue did much to awaken a spirit of service. It will be hard to estimate the good done there in this work. Only the years will tell the story. She won her way into the hearts of these good people. She was assisted the first week by Miss Irene Hensley of Mt. Olivet (R) Church, a very capable worker. The second week was taken by Miss Driver from the Bethlehem church. Both are products of the Valley and know their work and people.

There is hardly a meeting that the pastor and wife are not present; and the good people there always remember them with gracious gifts of love and appreciation. May God bless the good people at Palmyra.

Watch Palmyra grow! She has the material, the leadership, the will to do things. They love their God and their church. They appreciate their pastor and wife and have proven it by their fruits. May God richly bless them. We ask your prayers that they may not become discouraged.

ROY D. COULTER.

MEMBERS PAY TRIBUTE TO G. D. HUNT AND WIFE.

[The following article appeared in a recent issue of the "Roanoke (Ala.) Leader." The service was held on September 5. Ed.]

Rev. George D. Hunt, pastor of the First Christian and Lowell Christian churches, had a rather full day last Sunday, preaching three times and

REV. G. D. HUNT.

'Tis men like him that God has given
To lead the sons of men
To Christ who saves them one by one
From every blight of sin.

He gave his life while young and strong
To the cause he loved supreme.
He labored all these fifty years
That souls Christ might redeem.

He followed Christ these fifty years
Through tribulation great,
And prays that God will save the lost
Before it is too late.

He's laid no treasures up on earth
But many up in heaven.
I am convinced that such as he
Are just a "lump of leaven."

His greatest asset none will doubt
Is a devoted wife
Who's shared his burdens and his joys
Throughout this useful life.

She's stood beside him all these years
And never did complain.
She knew that the reward was sure
And her prayers were not in vain.

Today we see them hand in hand
Far down the western hill,
And more resigned than e'er before
To do the Master's will.

The evening sun is sinking fast
God's saints are marching home,
It won't be long ere we shall meet
There, never more to roam.

G. H. VEAZEY,
Wadley, Alabama.

conducting baptismal services in two different places. That would seem to be a full day for a young man but the veteran pastor was that day finishing out fifty years of services as a Christian minister.

But that is not all the story. Some members of the First Christian church decided to have some observance of such a rare occasion and they communicated with some friends at other places. This church is not large in membership but they decided to raise a purse of $50.00, a dollar for each year of the pastor's ministry. At the morning services were representatives from seven churches which Mr. Hunt is now serving or has served. At the proper time V. E. Kitchens, to the great surprise of his pastor, presented him a purse containing a dollar for each year of his ministry and then presented to the pastor's wife a purse in amount nearly as large. Rev. A. R. Van Cleave read a poem paying tribute to this fine couple. The whole thing came as a surprise to this good man and his wife. Lunch and a social hour followed.

Probably no minister in this section has baptized more people, married more people, or buried more people than has Rev. George D. Hunt. His people did a gracious thing in thus honoring this man of God whose life has been a blessing to so many others. May there be many more years for him to enjoy the love and respect of so many people and to continue to bless the world by his life and his ministry.

NEWPORT NEWS.

Our Newport News, Virginia, Church has issued a little card with the picture of Dr. James R. Clinton on one side and the following on the other:

"The First Congregational-Christian Church introduces Dr. James R. Clinton of Philadelphia. A native of Ireland, his fame as a preacher, musician and dramatist spread across the sea, and he was called to the pastorate of the Central Congregational-Christian Church of Philadelphia eleven years ago. Early in 1937 the Church Extension Boards took him away from his pastorate and gave him to the churches of the Southeast as Pastor-at-Large.

"We present him to Newport News in a series of services October 3-10. He will speak over WGH each week day at 10:15 A. M. At one service during the week he will give Ian MacLaren's famous spiritual drama: "Beside the Bonnie Briar Bush."

Services at 10:45 and 7:30 P. M. Sundays, and at 7:30 P. M. each evening during the week.

"This card is a personal invitation from the pastor and members of the church. Come, 'Let us worship the Lord.'"

A seven-year-old boy, Charles Jaynes, Jr., was recently ordained as a minister at Peoria, Ill., by the Rev. G. D. Brake, pastor of the Trinity Tabernacle, said to affiliate with the International Ministerial Association. It is claimed that the boy has been preaching since he was three years old and can speak five languages. He is at present conducting religious services on a tour, accompanied by a nurse and a tutor.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgement and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

TWO WAYS TO BE SILLY.

Those who have audacity these days to say anything against smoking are usually laughed at as being silly. Smoking seems to be a fairly universal habit among American people. In fact, those who smoke seem to forget that there are those who do not smoke and that they do not care to have their lungs filled with smoke, that there are those who prefer to breathe the pure air which God has given for the lungs which He has made. To suggest that they do not care for this foul air causes the smoker to feel, seemingly, that one is being a bit silly.

On the other hand those who seek for fresh air to breathe and do not care for nicotine are inclined to think that those who smoke are being silly. They have some bit of reason for thinking this way. A fine poster published by the Massachusetts Anti-Cigarette League of Hemenway Street, Boston, shows graphically facts gathered by Dr. J. W. Seaver of Yale College over a period of nine years. Non-smokers in college average fifteen months younger than regular smokers. They are twenty-four per cent higher and gain seventy-seven per cent more in lung capacity than do regular smokers. For these and many other reasons there are those who really think that it is silly to smoke, whether it is done by preachers, Sunday school teachers, men, women, young people or children.

THE CHURCH PAPER—OUR PROBLEM.

Ninety-three years ago it was decided by some who loved the Christian Church that there should be a paper for the people in this section. Since then "The Christian Sun" has been bringing light to the minds of men and women as it visits the homes of loyal members and friends of the Christian Church from week to week. Its past is worthy of praise, its present is somewhat of a problem, and its future depends upon the careful thought and cooperation of those who care for this church publication.

It is easy for the Southern Convention to elect an editor and a Board of Publications, but it is much more difficult for a paper to be published, distributed and read. The last convention elected a pastor who had other duties to perform and said that he should carry the responsibility of editorial service and such other duties as fall to the job of a business manager. For more than a year he has sought to do his duty to the best of his ability. But he has not solved the problems connected with this church paper. He does not believe that he can do it, or that any other one person or Board of Publications can do it. Of course, there must be leaders who will make suggestions, but ultimately the success depends upon the conferences and churches.

The fact is that under present conditions the churches are paying a considerable subsidy for "The Christian Sun." It is not listed as such in conference apportionments, but it is paid nevertheless. The editor believes that this subsidy is too large for the present subscription list and he is certain that if the conferences will take up the matter seriously either the subsidy can be greatly decreased or the subscription list greatly increased, or both. He is exceedingly anxious that the conferences consider this matter in their approaching sessions and give it the benefit of their wisdom, and, if possible, make plans for putting "The Christian Sun" in the homes of our people. This is a problem that faces our churches and should be solved by the church people. Conference has its responsibility concerning the matter as well as the Southern Convention and the local churches.

If the paper has value at all that value will be reflected in the local church. It is easier for a pastor to preach to a group who read the church paper. It is easier for finance committees, missionary societies and other church organizations to succeed with those who are readers of the church paper. This being the case, it seems reasonable that the church should be eager for the paper to be in the homes of its people. All churches buy Sunday school literature and give it free to the members of the church school, but few, if any, in our Southern Convention think it wise to give the family the church papers. For 5c a week each family in the church can be supplied with "The Christian Sun" and "The Pilgrim Highroad" or "The Missionary Herald." Why not put these papers in the church budget and pay for them by the church treasurer so that all families may have this reading matter? Actually it would cost those who contribute to the church very little, if any more, than they pay at present if they read their church papers. In this way new sources of income can be brought into the church treasury, for those who read will likely want to give also.

Your editor sincerely hopes that both conferences and local churches will consider carefully the advisability of taking a definite quota of subscribers to "The Christian Sun." He is thoroughly convinced that one of the best services any local church can render to its people is to put "The Christian Sun" and other church publications in the homes. If he is mistaken he would like to be given the correct information. If he is right he hopes that leaders who are responsible for conferences and churches will take the matter to heart and see what can be done about it, for after all the church paper is our problem.

F. C. L.

Who can measure the power of corporate intercession when the intercessors are united as one heart, one mind, and one soul, with the power of the Lord behind to use and direct the prayers? For, as in all His utterances on earth, there is a law of God behind those direct words of His: "If two of you shall agree on earth as touching anything that they shall ask, it shall be done for them of My Father which is in heaven."—"The Healing Church."

IN BEHALF OF THE MINISTRY

By RALPH E. VALENTINE.

The ministry is an exacting office. The true minister must be skilled and useful as pastor, preacher, teacher, priest, and church administrator," says this writer in The Christian-Evangelist," the National Weekly of the Disciples of Christ. Editor.

Edgar De Witt Jones, addressing the Metropolitan Church Federation of Detroit, outlined the ideal modern clergyman thus: "The minister of today needs the courage of a lion, the skin of a hippopotamus, the endurance of a camel, the sagacity of an elephant, the patience of a donkey, and as many lives as a cat."

The ministry is an exacting office. The minister's work is to wed lovers, bless little children, help parents recover a wayward son. He serves as mediator in a home where a tragic break is threatened; he brings cheer and encouragement to the sick and bereaved; he stands in his pulpit as "the revealer of the life of God." The great preacher Jowett said, "I strongly believe that the artisan who works with his hands, or the trader who is busy in commerce, or the professional man who labors in law, or in medicine, or in literature, or in music, or art, is not able to conceive the insidious and deadly perils which infest the life of a minister." He deals with the most vital problems of human life. Henry Sloan Coffin truly characterizes the minister as "a friend at large."

The Christian ministry is the world's greatest work. For that reason the pulpit must occasionally have a champion in its behalf. Its responsibilities ought to be held before the pew. The week of the Ministry (October 3-10) provides such an opportunity. The observance holds a new significance this year. Its purpose is entirely educational—for the exaltation of the ministry. The plan is, first, to have a sermon on the ministry preached in every church; second, ministers perhaps to exchange pulpits for this presentation; third, to have the office of the ministry presented at each official board meeting. Both church and pastor are encouraged to pay the 8 per cent and 2½ per cent Pension Fund dues. All churches are invited to enlist as members by October 31st. Finally, adequate ministers' salaries are to be emphasized as never before. A healthy spiritual life within the church depends upon these issues. Such an emphasis is essential.

Ministers must be versatile men. Efficiency is required in a variety of fields. They must be well-trained men. A minister must, first, have a social scientist's understanding of human nature, to know how to treat spiritual sickness. He must, secondly, have the spiritual insight and imagination of a prophet to inspire worship. Third, he must cultivate the mental discipline of a philosopher to interpret the life of the spirit. Fourth, he must herald the good news of the gospel, and seek definite commitments to the Christian life. He must be, finally, the manager of the church institution and have the executive talents of a business man. His vocation exacts competent training in at least five fields—as pastor, preacher, teacher, priest, and administrator. Thus he extends the ministry of Jesus.

The minister as pastor is counselor of people in their moral, spiritual, and personal problems. That is, he is the shepherd of Christ's flock. "He might more accurately be called the keeper of his menagerie," says

Russell Henry Stafford, "since his work is feeding the lambs, taming the tigers, and sometimes shearing the sheep and milking the goats." A pastor, nevertheless is interested in people; in every aspect of a person's life—his physical welfare, economic condition, family life, disappointments, and hopes for the future. A pastor leads his people up the ladder rung by rung to spiritual achievement.

The minister as preacher persuades his people to consecrate their lives in service to Jesus Christ. Someone said that preaching is like discharging an eye dropper out of a window into the street below, in the hope that the eye medicine will hit somebody in the right place. Preaching, to fortify faith and strengthen incentives to right living, must be spiritual. Phillips Brooks, great in mind, sympathy, and character as well as stature, was transfigured by the spirit of Christ. The people heard him gladly. Preaching, as Shelly said of life, "like a dome of many-colored glass, stains the white radiance of eternity." That is to say, it is the white light of God shining through the prism of human personality. The power of preaching to move, cleanse, and exalt is measured by the purity, sincerity, richness and charm of personality through which the light shines. The true preacher turns the "ears of his congregation into eyes."

The minister as teacher gives men a knowledge of God as revealed in Jesus Christ. A student paid a tribute to his teacher by saying, "He threw down a bunch of keys." The same may be said of every sincere minister. He does not furnish charts to people for every contingency, to take the place of initiative and responsibility. He teaches Christianity by familiarizing his people with the message and noble diction of the Bible; with the history of the Church and the intrepid builders who laid such enduring foundations. Jesus flung down a bunch of keys—insights, principles, a spirit which unlocks the doors of life. So do his ministers.

The minister as priest is the leader of worship. Worship as "worth-ship" is essentially the adoration of life; it is men's realization of the goodness of God. Whether the minister is observing the solemnities of baptism, induction into the church, consecration to office, the Lord's Supper, holy matrimony, offices for the dying and the dead, or public invocation—he is directing thought from the concrete to the universal, from the moment to eternity. A priest inspires in his hearers a depth of devotion in worship, and a sense of divine sympathy in joy and suffering, that can be attained in no other way. He gives expression to "man's chief end" which is "to glorify God and enjoy him forever."

The minister as administrator, is the business manager of the church enterprise. Slipshod methods of administration are positive evidence of spiritual decay. "When the temporalities go wrong," said one wise minister, "the spiritualities are sure to get into disorder." The minister as overseer stud- (Continued on page 7.)

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The Eastern Virginia Conference will meet at Holland, Virginia, Wednesday, November 3rd to Friday, November 5th, 1937. One of the items of business will be the election of delegates to the next session of the Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian churches to be held week before the first Sunday in May, 1938.

Since the union of the Congregational and Christian churches there has been considerable agitation, on the part of a small group of ministers, for a reorganization of the Christian churches on the basis of the Congregational plan of Church Government. The Christian churches in Georgia and Alabama have already accepted this form of Government, having withdrawn from the Southern Convention a few years ago. The Congregational churches in the Carolinas have united with the Carolina Conferences in their respective areas.

The Southeast Convention was organized as a mass meeting distinctly for the purpose of creating and fostering a fellowship between all the Congregational and Christian churches of the Southeast. This Convention does not undertake to be a legislative or governing body, owns no property, carries on no authorized educational, missionary or benevolent work, as a Convention. It has no plan of finance and is under no responsibility to provide funds for any purpose. It is a fellowship meeting, open to any ministers or laymen who desire to attend.

The Southern Convention is a legislative body, made up of delegates from the Conferences in Virginia and the Carolinas. Its territory is much smaller since the withdrawal of the two Conferences in Georgia and Alabama. It has the same relation to the General Council as a State Conference in the Congregational plan of Government. It owns property worth several hundred thousand dollars. It has financial obligations running into several thousand dollars annually, and is morally responsible for the indebtedness of Elon College and THE CHRISTIAN SUN. There are certain legal difficulties to be faced in attempting to adopt a new form of Government. Certain methods are prescribed for changing the book entitled, "Principles and Government of The Christian Church." This book is the basis of the charter of the Convention. The Convention is an incorporated body, amenable to the State of North Carolina, if it violates its articles of incorporation.

Therefore, those who anticipate suggesting radical changes to be considered by the next session of the Southern Convention, should formulate their plans and submit them to the Conferences this fall for consideration, with some instructions to the delegates. Heretofore it has been the custom to offer a group of resolutions at the close of the Convention and hurriedly pass them without careful consideration. Resolutions were passed at the last session, which, if carried out to the letter, would radically change the whole tenor and procedure of some of the most important Boards of the Convention. If changes should be made, amendments to the by-laws (The Principles and Government of the Christian Church) should be offered in the manner prescribed by the articles of incorporation. It would be well to consider prospective suggestions when the Conferences convene this year. Changes are usually expensive, and the people who pay the bills should know something about such matters before definite action is taken.

ELON'S FORTY-EIGHTH OPENING.

It has been very interesting, indeed, to watch Elon's development and growth during the past five years. In 1932, on opening day, we had considerably less than two hundred students. We finally reached 232 for the year. Since that date, the increase in our student body has been gradual, with the exception of the fall of 1935, when the enrollment jumped one hundred over the previous year. In 1935-36, we reached a total of 483 students in all departments, no duplicates. In 1936-37, we reached a total of 473, ten less than the previous year. In 1937-38, our present enrollment has gone beyond the 500 mark. We have registered to date 509. This includes, however, 55 in the extension school. The extension school, conducted by Elon College, is for the public school teachers in Alamance County. This school is authorized by the North Carolina State Board of Education. We have to date 454 regular college students. There will probably be others to register before October 1st. Usually, we have a number who register for special courses from this date on. It is certainly conservative to say that our enrollment this year will reach 500, exclusive of enrollment in the extension school.

The increased enrollment is indicative of what is taking place on our college campus. The students would not multiply their number over again in this brief period if they did not find on that campus what they felt helped them decidedly to prepare for life's ambitions.

In addition to a greatly increased enrollment, we have been fortunate in our selection of Faculty members, which insures not only a progressive program of education, but efficiency in the execution of that program. There is also a disposition on the part of the Administration and the Faculty to assist students, rather than annoy them by making unnecessary and petty demands of them.

We have a wholesome type of student, and the body as a whole seems to realize what it is here for, and is getting down to work more readily than usual. The morale of the campus could hardly be better. You cannot come in touch with our present student body without being conscious of the enthusiasm that has developed here, during the first weeks of school.

Our present student body comes from practically all sections of the country except the far West. We have more students from Virginia than usual. As has been the case for the past years, by far the greater majority of our students come from North Carolina.

Aside from the school itself, Mr. George D. Colclough, Field Secretary, is responsible more than anyone else for our increased enrollment. He has worked faithfully and untiringly through the year, and always in the interest of Elon College. The majority of the students are reached by him during the year and are pledged to the school weeks before the school opens. The ones of us here on the campus have been working diligently to make the campus attractive, the buildings inviting and comfortable, and otherwise make the student's stay at Elon not only profitable, but a pleasure.

We try constantly to discover those things that go to make up a good school, concentrate upon the same, and see that the prospective student knows something about what there is at Elon College.

If every local church in our Convention could have an interested and influential representative on our campus, I feel certain that there would be no difficulty about raising the college's Conference apportionment in full. You can assist your college by speaking a good word for it, helping to increase your church's contribution, and by influencing the high school graduates of your congregation to select Elon College as their college.

LA GRANGE NOTES.

Rev. John H. Knight, minister of the Unted Congregational-Christian Church of LaGrange, Georgia, has announced that he will preach a series of sermons on the subject, "Essentials for a Successful Church." The topics are as follows:

September 26—"Sit Down Strikers In Church"—a sermon on the Will to Work.

October 3—"The Common Wealth"—a sermon on Cooperation.

October 10—"God's Confidence"—a sermon on Dependability.

October 17—"The Christian Community"—a sermon on Fellowship.

October 24—"In Divine Presence"—a sermon on Worship.

October 31—"The Divine Radio"—a sermon on Prayer.

On Sunday evening, September 19th, the United Church Christian Endeavor under the direction of Miss Mary Florence Moore, held a special service at the Hillside Christian Church, Rev. Charles Hanson, pastor. The Misses Mozelle Cole, Elsie, Colquitt, and Christine Skelton were the speakers. The Misses Tillie Hines and Doris Moore sang.

Miss Christine Rountree of Vidalia, Georgia, and student at LaGrange College, will begin her work as pianist for the United Church. The Junior Choir will be reorganized and directed by Miss Rountree. Before entering college Miss Rountree was pianist at the First Presbyterian Church, Vidalia.

The United Church Christian Endeavor Society recently held an outdoor vesper and weiner roast on the estate of Mr. Bob Hallman, member of the United Church. Melvin Moore, newly elected president of the society, was in charge.

Through inspiration received at Camp Viola this summer, Olin Hanson, son of Rev. Charles Hanson, has recently organized a Christian Endeavor Society at the Hillside Christian Church, LaGrange.

Miss Christine Skelton, one of the United Church's most loyal young people, recently entered the freshman class of LaGrange College.

IN BEHALF OF THE MINISTRY.

ies his church as a whole. He acquaints himself with its history and habits, its environment and opportunity, the spiritual and temporal qualities and capabilities of its people. He outlines the things that need to be done and the means for doing them. Thus he seeks to mold the policy of the church, always making sure before hand of the willing co-operation of his people. One of his hardest tasks is supervision.

Thus the minister's work might truly be called the world's hardest job. Under poor conditions, his battles are terrific. So many churches, in these days, expect the impossible from him. A minister is supposed to keep his head above the clouds of worldly concern, though his feet are in a quagmire of economic necessity. Many ministers are heroically silent about their money problems. They try to fulfill the qualifications which James Chalmers sent to his mission board. "Don't send us fellows who talk of self-sacrifice," Chalmers said. "Send us those who take danger and difficulties as the salt and pepper of life." Ministers need a champion for their cause.

The Week of the Ministry provides such an occasion. The brotherhood may speak in behalf of the ministry. Increased salaries and membership in the Pension Plan represent one of our greatest present needs. The salary standard is pathetically low. The four-volume report on the Training of the Ministry recently issued by the Institute of Social and Religious Research, after three years of investigation by a competent staff, makes this authentic statement:

"The average salary for the profession as a whole is about that of workers in the gas, electrical, clay, and glass industries, and less than that of any class of teachers—kindergarten."

CHINESE COLLEGES AND UNIVERSITIES OPEN.

Despite hostilities virtually all of the Christian Colleges and Universities in China have already opened or are preparing in the immediate future, according to reports from the offices of the Associated Boards for Christian Colleges in China. This Board represents twelve of these Colleges and Universities in which western funds represent by far the greater part of a total investment in plant and endowment of $17,164,500.

From Yenching University at Peiping, China, word has been received that that institution opened a few days later than originally scheduled but without any interference. Enrollment as of September 22nd, was 268 men and 111 women, which total it is expected will be considerably increased as conditions in that area improve.

Cheeloo University at Tsinan has cabled "Tsinan quiet. Plan open School." The Associated Boards office has also been advised by cable that members of the university staff have returned to Tsinan from summer vacation in Tsingtao, to take up their work.

In Nanking the University of Nanking and Gingling College planned to open September 20th. The air bombardments of the capital city have probably caused a postponement. A few American teachers are on these two campuses with their Chinese colleagues and with the Chinese Presidents, Dr. Y. G. Chen and Dr. Yifang Wu.

The University of Shanghai has announced its opening as scheduled for October 1st. On account of Japanese invasions of the immediate campus area, the University will open inside of the French Concession. President Herman C. E. Liu has cabled "No matter what happens we are determined to carry on. I believe that the educational front is even more important than the military front."

Fukien Christian University, and Hwa Nan College, both located at Foochow, are not considered to be in an area of immediate danger. Hwa Nan cables that the college opened on schedule with 75 percent of its normal enrollment, which is expected to be considerably augmented by additional students from some of the war-ridden regions. Fukien has cabled that it was proceeding with plans for opening as usual.

The latest word from Lingnan University at Canton is that its opening was scheduled for Monday, September 20th, and that an unusually large enrollment was anticipated as a result of an influx of students from the more disturbed regions.

Hangchow Christian College is believed to have opened regularly in view of the fact that no information to the contrary was received by the Associated Boards and that cables from other institutions in the same area show that they are carrying on.

Hua Chung College, at Wuchang, has been especially asked by the Chinese Government to receive a large number of students from Government institutions affected by the hostilities, and latest information would indicate that its operations this fall will amount virtually to the maintenance of a "double shift program."

West China Union University at Chongtu is far removed from all disturbances at present and is functioning normally. Here, also, heavy registration is indicated, and advices received by local representatives of the University indicate that should the area of conflict extend it may provide a temporary haven for the activities of some of the more harassed institutions.

Soochow University, the twelfth of the Christian institutions represented by the Associated Boards, has sent no word that its activities have been hampered and it is assumed that it is prepared to go ahead with its regular fall program.

MISSIONARY NEWS ITEMS.

ROSEMONT.

The Young People's Missionary Society of Rosemont Christian church has held all its regular monthly meetings from October through August with a good attendance.

There are 23 active members on roll. A rally was held in June and $14.83 was collected from the mite-boxes.

The programs have been well planned and have been very interesting. Their theme has been the "American Negro," and the Mission Study book, "Campfires in the Congo," was discussed at the meetings.

With a fine president, as well as the other officers, this society has had a very prosperous year. Miss Viola Halstead is secretary.

FRANKLIN YOUNG PEOPLE.

The Young People's Missionary Society of the Franklin Christian Church has closed a very successful year. The subject for the year was "Mission Work in Africa" and "The American Negro" with most interesting discussions and accounts given at each meeting.

Sunday, February 21, the Society with the Woman's Missionary Society celebrated its Silver Jubilee at the church and contributions were given toward the Memorial Fund.

Sunday evening, September 12, a very interesting one-act play entitled, "If I Be a Disciple," was presented by the society under the auspices of the Woman's Missionary Society. The play dealt with Missions work in the Southern Mountains.

The money apportionment has all been raised by free-will offerings, a cake and pie sale, and by sale of THE CHRISTIAN SUN and "Holland Magazine."

The society has several new members and all have shown interest and done their part to make this year a success.

FRANKLIN WOMAN'S SOCIETY.

Mrs. W. J. M. Holland of the Franklin Woman's Society gives us the following program of the outstanding of the year, which was held in February in celebration of the Silver Jubilee Anniversary.

Prelude, "Lead On, O King Eternal."
Anniversary Theme, "That Thy Name May be Known in the Earth."
Anniversary Text, "Thou Shalt Remember the Way, Which Jehovah, Thy God, Hath Led Thee."
Hymn, "Lead On, O King Eternal."
Scripture, Psalm 67.
Prayer, Dr. Elwood Jones.
Reading, "Forward Through the Ages," Miss Dorothy Williams.

Anthem, "Teach Me, O Lord, Thy Statue," Choir.

Greetings, from Mrs. C. H. Rowland, read by Mrs. E. L. Beale.

Resume of work of Secretary from the first meeting to present, Mrs. W. J. M. Holland, Sr.

Resume of work of Convention by Mrs. J. A. Williams.

Poem, "Twenty-five Years Ago," Mrs. E. L. Beale.

Offertory, "Take My Life and Let It Be."

The altar was made most attractive and the giving of the offering was an impressive part of the service. The quota of the society was raised and thus ended a delightful and helpful program.

This society has recently lost one of its valuable members, Mrs. F. F. Jenkins, who has been a great strength and help during her fourteen years of active service in their midst.

HOLLAND JUNIOR SOCIETY.

The Holland Junior Missionary Society has as its superintendent and capable leader, Mrs. L. J. Daughtrey. This society is divided into two groups, thus having the small or younger children in one group, and the older in another. All requirements have been met for the year, and plans for the new year have already been started.

Work with group 1 consisted of missionary stories, memorizing prayers, theme song and making posters. For group 2 the Bible Village study was used, one street in the Village being taken each month. The first month was Law Street (Books of Law), something being learned about these books and on through the Bible. The playlet "The Cross" was used for their public program when they invited the Woman's Society and mothers of the members. A public program was given at Christmas and several meetings were held in the Sunday school auditorium for mothers and guests. Nelle Dixon Rawls has been the president during the year and Edith Leach Jones is the newly elected president for next year. The study book "Doorways" is being used most effectively and is being enjoyed.

The August meetings for both groups were held outdoors. Group 1 enjoyed a supper on the lawn of their superintendent with a hay ride later. Group 2 had supper at the lake and went to the Chadwick Theatre afterwards.

This society also did some charitable work, sending $10.00 to the Orphanage for Thanksgiving, several boxes and some money to Louise Lewis, a former member who was at the sanatorium, and helped to clothe Mildred Hines at the Orphanage.

This society has recently ended an interesting "Fetch 'em in" contest in which each member of the society was made an Indian Brave and told to round up "Buffaloes" in the form of nickels. The final "round up" was held on the lawn of Mrs. Daughtrey, where a delightful picnic supper was served and games played. Two hundred and forty-three "Buffaloes" were secured.

JEWELS FOR HIS CROWN.

The closing night of our revival here at Elk Spur our pastor, O. A. Elmore, gave the people an opportunity to dedicate their children. The dedication service for children was new here. The privilege had never been offered the people of our church here before. Rev. O. A. Elmore explained the meaning of the service, and five little ones were brought to the altar. It was an impressive service. Here, truly, were jewels for His crown. Here were little lives free from sin and all His own. Here was a glimpse of Heaven. We heard again, "Of such is the Kingdom of Heaven." Each little life a breath from God, each little smile a sunbeam from Heaven. Here was the sweetest gift ever bestowed upon a man—a baby. The purity, the sweetness, and sincerity of the occasion radiated from the altar. At the close of the service a father came forward and gave his life to God.

This is beginning at the beginning, to start with the baby in the mother's arms. Each little life belongs to God and the sooner we realize that, the better.

These little ones will be the leaders of tomorrow, and there is no better place to start them right than at the altar before God.

'Tis the set of the sales
And not the gales
Which tells us the way to go.

This dedication service is one of my cherished dreams come true. I have hoped for years to see our church at Elk Spur hold this one service. I have always been told before that the hills did not believe in such things and would not understand. But now I have lived to see this purest of services at Elk Spur, have seen the people stand out of the way and let the little ones come to God. And who was it who once told me, "It couldn't be done?"

The outside world would do well to think about starting the beginners right. I have seen too many mothers, out in your cities, who are willing to give money for missions but who do not know where their children are when church hour comes. But I realize I am of the hills and am not supposed to know what I am talking about. So I am not going to fuss with the outside world. I am happy to still be able to say that most of the people whom I have known out in the cities are good.

And now our hills are blue and silent. Our Elmore's go back to school, for summer is past. But our people of the hills have done well indeed. They have almost raised the amount we are supposed to raise by Conference. Cabbage has sold as low as fifteen cents per hundred pounds here this fall.

There has been right much raised in this section in spite of the dry weather we had this summer. If we could get a reasonable price for farm commodities in our hills there would be plenty here but we sold green peas for 30c per bushel. It isn't that people here don't know how to farm; it is simply that we have no market for stuff. People here have learned to handle this mountain land in a way so as to make pretty good crops. But until there is a better market, there is not going to be money here to pay our pastor. There are no public works to furnish work for this section, so it is not so easy to get a dollar here. However, the hills have sent twenty-five hundred pounds of cabbage to the little children at our Christian Orphanage. We hope they enjoy our hilly cabbage.

And now schools are opening and little feet are hurrying past on the winding mountain trail. Lend your prayers for these little souls among our hills.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church"

MISS EMILY CARLETON, Editor, 541 Osceola Ave., Winter Park, Fla.

RALLY DAY.

Next Sunday is Rally Day and will be celebrated by the various Sunday schools and churches throughout our area. It is to be hoped that the young people's societies will plan a special program for that night—something to term it as the starting point for the fall and winter work.

Some societies have election officers at this time of the year and thus it marks a real beginning point for them. This is often the time of the year when members of the Junior young people's society progress to the Intermediate group, and the older members of the latter group become Seniors. Thus it is a convenient time for the election of officers.

In other places the election of officers comes at another time. They might profitably use Rally Sunday as a time of rededication of the members of the group and make it an impressive and inspirational service, which will long be remembered. A candle-lighting service, led by the minister, is an effective way in which to carry out this idea.

In still other groups it may be well to use Rally Sunday as a time for presenting the plans for the fall and winter—to give the members an idea of the things the executive committee has planned in the way of meetings and socials and group action, and see what the whole group has to offer as suggestions for improving these plans. Every group will have a more interested membership, if the whole group is given some idea in the beginning, and knows what you are trying to accomplish.

Let us make Rally Day a time when we will attempt to bring new members into our group. Now that school has started it is easier to contact new people who have moved into town during the summer, or to invite those young people who do not attend church anywhere. Even if nothing else is planned for Rally Day for your young people's group, take it upon yourself to urge everyone to bring a new member that night—or to bring some one who really belongs in your group, but has not been attending the meetings for some time.

These suggestions apply to Sunday school classes equally as well as to the evening meetings.

Take advantage of this opportunity for making your group "bigger and better"—and provide the inspirational type of service which will make all eager to come again. E. M. C.

OFF TO COLLEGE.

During recent weeks many colleges throughout the land have opened their doors for another academic year. So it is that in the Southeast many of our young people are beginning their college life for the first time. Others are returning for another year's study. And what of their relationship to the church? For the most part, they will be divided into three groups. The largest group, we hope, will be those who will enter into the religious life of the college community to the extent of taking a definite part in the activities of a church there. This will mean making new contacts with a church and church people hitherto unknown to them. In some college towns there may be no church of our denomination. That should not deter their religious growth—they should ally themselves with some other church in that community and thus broaden their outlook and continue their Christian work.

Another group of college students will enter into the life of the college in all its phases and believe that thus they have no place in their lives for the church, as such. They will think that campus organizations having to do with religious affairs and social problems can take the place of organized church work in their lives. After college they will realize that these organizations were inadequate—for college life is quite different from after-college life and work in organizations can never take the place of corporate worship and fellowship with Christian people of all ages in the community.

We hope that there will be none of the third group—that group which believes that church-going is a habit to be thrust aside when going off to college. Thus this most important side of their lives will remain relatively undeveloped, while the other sides are being more highly trained than ever before.

In college—where for the first time we are completely "on our own"—we need more than at any previous time some stabilizing force, some divine guide. At the time when we are gaining more knowledge about science and our universe, we need some opportunity to worship that Great Power who conceived such a wonderful world. In this youthful, immature world we need contacts with older men and women who have already had similar experiences, so that we may receive their Christian counsel and advice.

In the final analysis, it is up to each individual student to decide just what place the Church will have in his college life. In denominational colleges, where the religious side of life is emphasized, students are given every encouragement to continue their religious life. In other colleges this may not be done. Let us hope and pray that our young people will have the courage of their convictions and that they will take their church affiliations with them when they go to college.

CHRISTIAN SONSHIP.

LESSON I—OCTOBER 3, 1937.

GOLDEN TEXT: But as many as received him, to them gave he the power (or right) to become children of, even to them that believeth on his name.—John 1:12.

LESSON: I John, chapter 3.

We begin today a series of studies in the Christian Life. Their aim as stated by the Lesson Committee is "to create and deepen individual fellowship with Christ, and to quicken the conscience of Christians that they may carry the spirit of Christ into all their activities and relationships." Here by the way are both the individual and social aspects of the gospel—to have an experience of Christ in an intimate and personal way, and then to express that experience in social contacts. If Christianity ends with the individual it ends.

Another word by the way of introduction. This epistle of John is a "love letter." The word love, as a noun and as a verb occurs forty-eight times in the five chapters of this letter, more often than in any other five successive chapters in the entire Bible. But as we shall see, love as John uses it is no weak, sentimental word. It is a strong, exacting, challenging word.

Sons of God, Children of God.

"Behold what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us that we should be called children of God; and such we are." There is one sense in which all men are children of God—by creation. But John is writing here about those who through faith in Christ, those who by receiving Him, have been born "again" or from "above." "To as many as received Him, to them gave he power, or the right, to become sons or children of God." And men come into this rich sweet relationship, not by blood or by the will of man, they come into it by a spiritual experience, by the will, and by the grace of God. We are saved by grace—behold what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us that we should be called the children of God.

"And such we are." Sonship is a present possession or experience. It is not a matter of waiting until we get to heaven, but here and now, with all our imperfections, and in spite of them, we are children of God. What dignity and warmth this truth gives to life.

Living as Sons of God.

"And everyone that hath this hope set on him, purifieth himself, even as he is pure." When a person realizes that he is a child of God, that God's love has been manifested to him through the saving grace of Christ, he will find the incentive and the impulse to noble living. Because he is a child of God he will want to live as becometh a child of God. He will strive to be and to do his best because of his gratitude for the work of grace. Love is the motive for Christian living.

Growing as Sons of God.

"It is yet not made manifest what we shall be . . . we shall be like him, for we may see him as he is." We may become children of God here and now, but we are to grow unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ. We are to become perfect even as our Father who is in heaven is perfect. We shall be like him, and then we shall see him even as he is.

Loving as Sons of God.

"My little children, let us love not in word, neither with the tongue; but in deed and in truth." John says that love is more than sentiment; it is service. As the little child said "Love means doing errands." Love is showing rather than saying, doing rather than talking. When Peter professed his love for Christ, Christ said, "Feed my lambs." If we love we will give and go and serve.

Obedying as Sons of God.

There is a glorious liberty to the sons of God, but it is not license. It is the freedom which comes through law. Only those who obey God are really free. But he who "keeps his commandments and does the things that are pleasing in his sight" find true liberty. And we find great reward. Whatsoever we ask of we receive of him, whatever we ask in accord with His will, we receive. And because we really love him we shall want only the things that are in accord with his will. His commandment is that we shall believe in the name of his Son Jesus Christ, and that we shall love one another, even as he gave us commandment. His commandments are not grievous, and in keeping of them there is great reward.

Knowing as Sons of God.

"And hereby we know that he abideth in us, by the Spirit which he gave us. His Spirit beareth witness with our spirits that we are the children of God, and if children then heirs, heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ. Obedience brings the blessing. As we live in him we shall abide in him. And in his fellowship life will have a new meaning and power and outreach and upreach.

EASTERN VIRGINIA TRAINING SCHOOLS.

The Nansemond County Training School to be held at Suffolk, Virginia, will open on Monday evening, October 11th, at 7:30 o'clock, and will continue for two weeks on alternating nights. The school at Norfolk will begin on Tuesday evening, October 12th, at 7:30 o'clock and will alternate with the Suffolk school for two weeks.

Courses and instructors for the Suffolk school are as follows: "The Old Testament; Its Contents and Values," taught by Rev. Robert Lee House; "Education for Missions and World Friendship," taught by Dr. John L. Lobinger; "Guiding Children in Christian Growth," taught by Miss Priscilla Chase; "Building a Total Youth Program," taught by Rev. Carl R. Key.

Theses same courses will be given at Norfolk with an additional course, "Guidance in Christian Home Making," taught by Dr. H. S. Hardecastle.

The training school at Waverly for the churches in the Waverly, Dendron and Wakefield pastorates will open at 2:30 o'clock on Sunday afternoon, October 24th, and continue through the week, with two class periods each evening, beginning at 7:30 o'clock, and closing on Friday evening. Dr. Lobinger and Miss Chase will teach the same courses in this school as in the other two. Rev. F. C. Lester will teach "Methods for Guidance of Youth Groups." The worship services are to be led by Rev. Carl R. Key and will be a demonstration of different types of worship services.

There is no cost to pupils who enroll in these schools except the purchase of a necessary text book. It is expected that large numbers will attend.

We are fortunate in having Dr. Lobinger, Mission Secretary, from Boston, and Miss Priscilla Chase from New York to share in all of these schools. Rev. Carl R. Key, of Holland, Virginia, is dean of the school at Suffolk, Rev. Joe A. French of Norfolk is dean for the Norfolk School, and Rev. F. C. Lester is dean for Waverly.

Direct us to Jesus, that we may see in Him Thine own undying love and compassion. Help us to see that the stress of sorrow, of loneliness and of fear is but for a moment, and that Thou wilt soon again show thyself gracious and merciful as ever. Make us think less of the dangers around us and of the sadness upon our hearts than of Thine unfathomable wisdom and Thine unending love.

THE IMMOVABLE CHRISTIAN.

"They that trust in the Lord are as Mount Zion, which cannot be moved, but abideth forever."—Ps. 125:1.

We once saw a headline, "A Fixed Star." It referred to the life of one who had passed on. It represented him as one of great faith, high ideals, a willing worker and dependable in all circumstances. The writer gave him the epitaph, "A fixed star."

A large part of the woes of life produce uncertainties. Out of those uncertainties one comes to feel that abilities and achievements are not what has been hoped for. Often we find such a one going down in despair, only a shooting meteor.

There are a great many other conditions in which men flash for awhile and pass off the scene forgotten, only a shooting meteor.

But it need not be so. There is a life that is like a mountain; lofty, good, noble, true, unshaken. What others regard as disastrous shiftings, such a one looks upon as but a light breeze and he sticks to his guns. This is because his trust is in God and the substance of eternity and not in temporal things.

Prayer—Our Father, we trust in Thee for life as it should be. We ask for Christ's sake. Amen.

TUESDAY.

DOCTRINE AND DIRECTION.

"Let no man despise thee."—Titus 2:1-15.

Paul was speaking to a young apostle, who, like the most of us when beginning was utterly lacking in experience. Paul saw the need of giving him some backbone. He wanted Titus to know that the authority of Christ in God was back of him.

It took man, with his highest consecration plus the power of God, to combat wickedness in those days. It takes the same thing now. We must be strong in the Lord. That strength must have in it a sovereign self-respect, a discernment, that knows ones own weakness and fallibility and carries with it the boldness of essential Christianity. We are ambassadors of a King and we must carry with us the energy, the authority and the force of our King. This is Christian self-respect.

One of the weaknesses of today is the lack of this courage, and that lack has forced disrespect, and disrespect brings on utter disregard for God.

Prayer—Our Father, walk with us today and be Thou our strength and courage that those people who come in contact with us may know of the workings of the Holy Spirit through us. We ask it for Christ's sake. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

THE BROTHERHOOD OF MAN.

"Have we not all one Father? Hath not one God created us? Why do we deal treacherously every man against his brother?"—Matt. 2:10.

If we believe in the fatherhood of God, we must believe in the brotherhood of man. If we believe in the brotherhood of man, we have to regard all persons in the light of that relationship.

Think of the person whom you heartily dislike; yet he is your brother and in him you are to respect all the laws of brotherhood. This does not mean what we are to enter affectionately into the incompatibilities of persons; but it does mean the abandonment of the sin of selfishness and the establishment of kindly consideration; it does mean giving a lift to the other fellow toward the realm of happiness.

Prayer—(Say the Lord's Prayer).

THURSDAY.

OUR NOTION OF HAPPINESS.

"All nations shall call him happy."—Ps. 72:17.

The psalmist is describing a character regarded by other people as happy.

Our happiness is largely determined by our idea of happiness in others. For instance, if we think the rich, living in luxury and ease, are the happy ones, we shall not be happy until we have wealth. If we think persons in the public eye, perhaps leaders of nations, are the happy ones we are not happy until we have attained some what of the public eye.

Perhaps this element in the strata of human standards these times, is one of the causes of so much uprising and revolution. The truth is, that none of these things produce happiness. Happiness is found only in service in the spirit of Christ, a service always rendered in the spirit of sacrifice, of purity of heart and love.

Let us understand that the same ideas make us strive for happiness as we see it in others, will also serve to bring to us the true happiness. For if we believe that God is happiness, we shall not be happy until we possess God.

Prayer—Our Father, we believe. Help Thou our belief. We know that if we can be happy in Thee, others shall find that same happiness. Grant this we pray. Amen.

FRIDAY.

WHY PRAY?

"He would have passed by them."—Mark 6:46-48.

Even as it said on the radio, "Time marches on," so it may be said that "God marches on." He is marching on in the march of events. He is passing by every individual in the day's duties.

There are a great many people who do not realize this. God is passing by these even as He would have passed by the disciples, without touching their lives.

Is that like our Lord? Yes. No heart is so tender as His and no one is so ready to help as He; yet in all of his relations to man during his sojourn on earth no help has been given until the one needing help shouted to Him urgently petitioning Him for help. To the silent toward Him God marches by leaving no place in their hearts for Him.

Prayer—O Lord, we would not have Thee pass by without Thy touch, if only it be the fringe of our garments. We pray to Thee for help today. Amen.

SATURDAY.

PERFECTION. HOW NEAR ARE WE?

"If ye love them that love you, what reward have ye?"—Matt 5:46-47.

The teachings of our Lord Jesus Christ distinguishes between selfish love and perfect love. Love that merely reflects those who love us is of little more value than looking into a mirror. It has been said to be but little more than the sale of an article over a counter.

Perfect love is divine and it is exemplified in the death of our Lord for whom it is said that "while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us." Christ died for his enemies. Our love will be like this when it goes to the unworthy, the unresponsive, and the evil. How far have we come?

Prayer—Our Father, remove all selfishness from us and give us a passion like the Saviour's. May we know what it is to love for love's sake and not only for a lover's sake. Amen.

SUNDAY.

THE JOY OF RELIGION.

"The oil of joy for mourning, the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness."—Isiah 1:6.

In this scripture, the office of Christ is described. It is that of consoling

FREEDOM.

By REV. ROY D. COULTER.

"And ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."—John 8:32.

As far back as history records there has been the problem of freedom. Men have fought, bled and died in its name. Since the proverbial apple was bitten, men have claimed exemption from necessity in choice of action.

Freedom and liberty are often interchanged. But freedom oftener implies absence of restraint or repression. In every great question in history where men have endeavored to control the thoughts and actions of others, the result has been disagreement, thus showing how unworkable is the attempt to control the propagation of ideas in any place where men differ and the herd impulse does not dominate the atmosphere.

The founders of the Christian Church acted upon the principles which they knew were true, and like all founders who have formed principles into institutions, they became ever afterwards identified with the glory of the things they saw, and the power of the institutions which they founded.

Great learning and noble achievements have always followed in the wake of new adjustments of freedom. The greatest art of the world was contributed only after Christianity had influenced the freeing of slaves. But in no other field has the desire for freedom been more manifest than in the field of religion. We of the "free churches" value our liberty. But Vogt says, "Freedom is not acquired by release from law. It is not negative, but positive. Freedom is not the gift of formlessness but the mastery of form."

No truth-loving man's ideas, however erroneous, can be corrected by repression. When Luther was repressed he broke away. When Jesus Christ was crucified He was enthroned into the hearts of more millions than He would have been should He been allowed to live His natural life. His economy of method seemed to be to allow the tares to grow with the wheat until the harvest. Like all discovery, the knowledge of truth is marked by a mixture of success and failure.

The New Deal in our midst is another concept of freedom from the powers that be. Freedom must continue to throw off authority or ideals will perish. We think of Jesus as a teacher. One who used perfect authority, with the ultimate value of each personality with whom He dealt.

We, too, must use authority in our teachings. However, we cannot hope to be able to tell each soul how that soul could come to its full flower, how to fulfill its destiny, how to be itself, when we, who are teachers, have so much need of learning. We are bound about with chains of self, which impedes our progress. Moral development comes with and through moral wrestling. Jesus says: "For whosoever would save his life shall lose it; and whosoever shall lose his life for my sake and the Gospels shall save it." Here is liberty for those who would be bound with self-forged chains.

These are days when all of us are being weighed in the balances. The searchlight of truth is being focused upon the rich men of America, and people are asking how they have amassed such large fortunes, whether legitimately or in an unrighteous manner. Moreover, how do men of wealth regard their riches? As something with which to gratify their every whim and fancy? It is sad but true, that many use their wealth as a means whereby they may be clad in purple and fine linen and fare sumptuously every day. That they may have freedom to buy whom they will to their bidding. Only a few regard themselves as God's trustees who are to administer with zealous care every dollar for the welfare of their fellowmen. Many do not know the truth. The truth would make them free.

Many church denominations claim for themselves all the truth and say they take the Bible as their creed of faith and practice. Yet, they leave out some of the things mentioned as irrelevant and out of date. They have learned only part of the truth. Therefore, they are not free.

Many ministers join the Rotary, Kawanis and Chamber of Commerce Clubs with the idea that they will learn the trend of the business mind and therefore be better able to preach to them. Yet, they do not join the Labor Organizations where they may have a real insight as to the troubles of the masses. But they claim to understand all the problems that arise from all the people. A true minister will plan his sources carefully to maintain cooperation with all groups.

The truth will bring liberty of discourse. It will make you free to know the Son and ye shall be free indeed. The failure of ninety percent of the ministers, is a failure to keep a prophetic ministry. He must know the truth and be free to consider the rights of all people, high and low.

"If ye continue in my word, then you are my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."

What is this freedom that everyone desires, but a few can define? Jesus speaks with great authority, yet He imposes no law on life. Freedom, then, must come from within the individual, and through practice.

The young minister starting out to preach is not free to pick the exact words as he chooses to express the thought until after long practice has given him the reward of a full flow of English. And his mind has, through experience of thinking on his feet, acquired freedom of thought and thinking. Mastering the technique must bring freedom. When mastered, it becomes one of the richest and most upbuilding of all his experiences.

And so it is with us all. When the motives of our heart are dominated by love, unselfishness is the law of life. Practice in this greatest of all virtues brings freedom of life. We will then have learned the truth.

the broken hearted, proclaiming liberty to the enslaved, giving comfort to those that mourn and in every way helping the needy so that they can be called the "trees of righteousness planted by the Lord."

How heavy do things hang over our head and press down upon our heart? Should it be so? It is so to a great extent. In our weakness we seem to be unable to throw off trouble and some think that something serious is the fault with religion when he gets down in the dumps.

This is all wrong for a Christian. It is all out of character and we have no business there at all. Let us cultivate our text and find the joy of mourning and the good there is in heaviness, and content not ourselves until we find peace and happiness. Anything less is emptiness.

Prayer—Be thou our happiness, O Lord, and help us to accomplish what we have just been talking about. For Jesus Christ's sake. Amen.

It does not matter so much who we are, nor matter so much where we are, but it makes a lot of difference what we are where we are.

The Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:—

Twenty-one years ago we took two little twin boys, Clarence and Lawrence Fields, into the Christian Orphanage from the city of Greensboro, North Carolina. They grew into two splendid young men. Lawrence took a job with the Golden Beet Manufacturing Company of Durham, North Carolina. Clarence joined the Navy eight years ago. For several years he has been stationed in China, but returned to the States a few weeks ago. He got 30 days leave and came home to see his old home and friends. The boys came up and spent the day with us one day last week. This is the only home they have ever known. They tell me that there is no place like the Christian Orphanage.

Clarence has seen much of the world in his service in the Navy and says in his eight years service he has a perfect record in conduct.

We feel proud of our boys and if they ever get rich I feel sure the orphanage will get liberal contributions.

Conference will soon be here. We trust the churches in all the Conferences will be able to pay the Conference Apportionments in full. We want to mail a letter to each church the first part of October, showing what the churches were asked to raise for the orphanage, the amount paid and the balance due. This is done so that each church and Sunday school will know just what is expected of them. I feel sure every church will do its best to raise its apportionment.

This is the beginning of the most expensive time of the year at the orphanage—shoes, clothing, for winter, coal bills, school books and one hundred and one other things to buy. All these needs can and will be supplied if our church folks will “Share with us.”

A statewide system of schools, in which thousands of Pennsylvanians will study Christian living, will be established during the coming Winter, the Council of Churches and affiliated groups announced recently. The schools will be another phase of the United Christian Advance Movement, the first of which was the national preaching mission conducted last Fall. The last step will be a program for building Christian communities.—The Methodist-Protestant Recorder.

In Memoriam

JENKINS.

When on Friday, August 27th, in Franklin, Virginia, Mrs. Varina Bailey Jenkins, with life's work finished, "Crossed the Bar" into eternal rest—the Ladies Aid Society of the Congregational-Christian Church suffered the irreparable loss of one of its most active, devoted, and lovable members—a loss felt and shared also by the church at large.

Mrs. Jenkins was the daughter of the late Charles W. and Indiana Virginia Howell Bailey of Isle of Wight County, being born in Windsor. She was educated at State Teachers College, Farmville, and taught school in the High Schools of Wakefield, Waverly, Prospect, and Whaleyville, besides being Rural Supervisor of the schools in her native county.

In August, 1920, she married F. F. Jenkins and moved to Franklin in December, 1923, when her husband was elected superintendent of schools of this county. She united with the Christian Church upon moving here and became active with the many organizations of the church. She was once secretary of the Ladies Aid and performed the duties of this office with great efficiency.

Mrs. Jenkins was of the highest Christian faith and gave freely of her time to the up-building of the Christian Church, and those coming in contact with her were enriched by her faith in the Christ, whom she served and loved.

To us left she has pointed us toward the Cross and the Master she served, exemplifying in her patient suffering the faith she had, asking us to follow.

To her family we extend a sympathy born of grateful remembrance of a true and faithful life and affectionately commend them to the Source of noble inspiration.

Therefore, be it resolved, that a page in our record book be dedicated to Mrs. Varina Bailey Jenkins' memory by making these resolutions a part of the minutes of this meeting; and that a copy be sent to the family.

RAWLES.

Mrs. Sarah Cornelia Rawles died at her home, Holland, Virginia, September 17, 1937, aged eighty-five years. The funeral services were conducted at the home by the writer, assisted by Revs. Carl R. Key and W. H. Corbitt. The burial was in the Holland Cemetery. Mrs. Rawles was the daughter of the late Demphrey and Mary Elizabeth Jones of Holy Neck community. She was married to William James Norfleet of Sunbury, North Carolina, in 1870. From this union six children survive: Mrs. Mamie E. Holland, Mrs. B. J. Beale, Mrs. J. G. Holland, W. John Norfleet, Sr., Holland, Virginia, Linwood J. Norfleet, Ridgeland, Georgia, and Mrs. Charles Daughtrey, of Charlottesville, Virginia; nine grand-children and six great-grand-children. Following the decease of Wm. James Norfleet, she married Hugh Kelly Rawles of Holy Neck Community. She joined Holy Neck Church in 1867 and was loyal and faithful to the end. Mrs. Rawles was a faithful wife, a devoted and sacrificing mother, a kind and generous neighbor and a sincere Christian. Her long life was spent in service for others, save for a few years of growing weakness and suffering at the end. Her life went out like the candle that slowly burns to the end, an heir to the promise of the Word, "Thou shalt come to thy grave in a full old age like as a shock of corn cometh in its season."

IN BEHALF OF THE MINISTRY.

garten, elementary, high school, or vocational."

Churches must heed this condition. More financial consideration should be given to the ministry. Qualified younger ministers cannot tolerate bankrupt churches; nor can older men, in a constant state of financial discouragement, build strong spiritual churches. Many ministers, like John Robertson, who have felt like giving up their work, need Christ to resign their commission. One night Mr. Robertson earnestly besought Christ saying, "Let me resign my commission back to Thee, and turn to something else." And John Robertson said, "As I prayed that night, at the midnight hour I heard a still small voice in my heart say, 'No, John Robertson, you cannot resign your commission. You let me resign it for you.'" The Week of the Ministry may stimulate a similar service.

"The Christian Ministry," as James Elliot so aptly stated, "Is a challenge to aspiring, unselfish, consecrated men. It is incomparably the greatest vocation on earth." Ministers are expected to assume this attitude toward their work. They must "be all things to all men"—apostles, prophets, preachers, workers of miracles, healers, and interpreters. The churches have their share of responsibility to fulfill this expectation. Together we may build a great brotherhood.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC.

Friday—Sharing a Knowledge of God—John 14: 1-12.

Saturday—Sharing Christian Fellowship—I John 1: 1-10.

The question of most importance is not, How much of Christ am I getting? but How much of Christ am I giving to others? Christianity is a sharing life. A prominent non-Christian once said, "Scratch a Christian anywhere and you will find a missionary." Every sincere follower of Jesus is called to be a witness to others that they may also know Christ as the Saviour of the world.

In our reading upon this topic we discover the following reasons why some "called Christian" do not share Christ with others.

1. Lack of valid and vital personal fellowship with Christ.
2. Failure to understand the nature of Christian faith and experience.
3. A popular belief that one religion is as good as another. This cuts the nerve of evangelistic and missionary endeavor.

4. Timidity to impose our ideas and experiences on another who may not at first be interested. There is a great difference in forcing Christ upon others, and sharing Christ in a spirit of friendliness and deep concern for others.

For Discussion—

1. By what kinds of actions and attitudes do we share Christ with others?
2. What do we mean by "Sharing Christ?"
3. Why should we talk to others about Christ?
4. What do we have or know to tell others about Christ?
5. Does the purity of my life count for Christ?

Suggested Hymns—

"I Love to Tell the Story."

"O Zion, Haste."

"We've Story to Tell to the Nations."

"Christ for the World! We Sing."

LET'S SUPPOSE

By CLARENCE A. VINCENT, D. D.

When finishing the preparatory course at Oberlin, a severe attack of measles made it impossible for me to review the work and to take the examinations. It meant that I would drop out of my class with all its fine associations. I was discouraged. I had worked to earn the expenses of the course and the struggle had been hard. On a Sunday afternoon Tutor Hall, who was in charge of the Summer School, called upon me. He assured me that my work had been such that he would excuse me from the review and examinations. He gave me new courage. It was a more valuable gift than the academic gift.

There is a tide in the affairs of men
Which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune;
Omitted, all the voyage of their life
Is bound in shallows and in miseries.
On such a full sea we are now afloat,
And we must take the current when it serves
Or lose our ventures.

Such destiny moments come to all persons from childhood to old age.

A WORD TO YOUTH.

A word spoken to a child or youth—a friendly, cheerful word, a word that tells him that you expect much of him—often awakens him and shapes his life. A teacher, scout leader—indeed everyone—has many wonderful opportunities to give courage and direction to some young person. Garfield declared a log with Mark Hopkins on one end and a lad on the other was an effective college.

A WORD FROM YOUTH.

A child or youth can give an older person courage. A word of appreciation to a parent or teacher heartens him. A hopeful outlook and an encouraging word to an older person who is passing through sorrow or any misfortune will "buck him up" to meet the test valiantly.

A business man received a telegram that his store had been burned. The savings of a life-time were swept away. He was overwhelmed with depression. In the darkest hour a letter full of cheer came from his wife and this note from his six-year-old daughter:

Dear Daddy,

I am sorry that our store is burned. I saw it this morning and the rain had frozen and the ruins were sparkling in the sunshine. It was beautiful, Daddy.

A smile broke over the father's face and he began to plan to rebuild.

JESUS.

Jesus was always bringing new courage to men and women and children; to the woman taken in adultery he said, "Go, and sin no more"; to the woman at the well he gave a new ideal of life; to the publicans and sinners he spoke the immortal parables, The Lost Sheep, The Lost Silver, and The Prodigal Son, and to the sorrowing Mary and Martha, "I am the resurrection and the life." He took the raw fishermen and gave them courage to follow him and to become great men—Peter, John, and the rest. He can give us courage to face the evils of today and the messages that will encourage others to unite with us in the work that will at last bring all the kingdoms of this world into the kingdom of our Lord and his Christ.

We'll Be Our Best

J. H. LIGHTBOURNE, D. D.

O Lord of all our days till now,
Thou object of our highest vow;
In this stern day of trial and test,
Help us to be our very best.

O Lord, when thou dost need us most,
Prove not our past an idle boast;
But grant the faith raised by our voice
To live in deeds of worthy choice.

O Lord, in these great days of ours,
Grant unto us prophetic hours;
High moments when empowered anew,
Thy cross to bear; thy work to do.

For lo, O Lord, thou yet art nigh,
Thy reassuring presence by;
And with that consciousness of Light,
We share with thee Eternal Right.

O Lord of all our days from now,
Thou object of our highest vow;
In these stern days of trial and test,
With thee we'll be our very best.

OUR PRAYER.

By REV. EVERETT LESHER.

O Lord, strong and mighty, as Thou didst invest the eternal hills with strength at the beginning of time, so do we pray that Thou wilt give us strength. We stand in mortal life weak and powerless. We would be strong—strong in body that we might be ready messengers of Thy Will, tireless builders of Thy Kingdom. We would be strong in heart that we might give to Thee the love which is Thy rightful heritage, and give to our fellowmen, whether friend or foe, all patience and tenderness, returning good for evil, pity for hatred, compassion for hardness. We would be strong in mind that we might follow the truth wherever it leads, for we know that the truth shall make us free.

O Lord God, strong and mighty, we pray for strength. We would have strong eyes that we might see beyond the gloom of earth's uncertain values the clear shining of the eternal verities. Give us the strength of hope undaunted, ever certain that though at times wrong seems to be upon the throne Thy truth will yet gain the victory. Give us a strong faith that amidst life's wounds and sorrows and disappointments we may rest in the abiding assurance that Thou art our dwelling place and that underneath are the everlasting arms.

O Lord God we pray for strength. Hear us, we beseech Thee, who art our strength and our Redeemer. Amen.

PROGRAM COMMITTEE.

ABOUT FREE BIBLES.

Some time ago an advertisement was run in this paper in which it was stated that those who need a Bible or New Testament can get one by writing to the Board of Christian Education, and that teachers can get them for their classes. Since that time orders have come in faster than they can be filled. The Board is eager to meet every need, and is mailing the books as rapidly as possible. Please be patient, and your order will be filled.

It is the hope that no one will ask for a free Bible who is plenty able to buy one for themselves. It is the purpose of the giver of the books to place the books where they will be used and where they might not otherwise be. Churches that can afford to buy books for their people should not ask someone else to give them this aid. Please use your own judgment, and if Bibles or Testaments are needed, send on the orders. Thank you.

ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATION.

On Wednesday evening, October 13th, our Winston-Salem Congregational-Christian Church will celebrate the Fifth Anniversary of its organization. There will be a banquet and a local speaker in addition to other features. The pastor, Dr. W. M. Jay, cordially invites anyone interested to be present for the occasion. This is one of four most youthful churches and it shows the real vigor and activity of alert youth.

The men who try to do something and fail are infinitely better than those who try to do nothing and succeed.—Lloyd Jones.

THORSBY INSTITUTE NEWS.

Thorsby Institute, a private High School of Thorsby, Alabama, for boys and girls, with Christian environment, opened September 15th. Miss Helen Jenkins, principal, presided at the opening exercises. Rev. M. I. MacLeod, pastor of the Thorsby Baptist Church, offered prayer and Rev. Charles Luther, father of Miss Charlotte Luther, the new librarian, who has taken Miss Marian Fairbanks' place read the scripture. Rev. L. L. Stanley, pastor of the Thorsby Congregational Church, who was recently elected vice-president of Thorsby Institute trustees, gave an address of welcome. Mary Christ, a senior at Thorsby Institute, gave words of welcome. Miss Kathryn Foss, a Thorsby Institute and Piedmont graduate, who teaches voice and piano, sang a solo. Miss Lois Townsley, a new teacher this year who is a graduate of the University of California, and has studied at Scarrett College, Nashville, Tennessee, gave an inspiring talk. She teaches history and public speaking, in which she majored at the University. Mr. H. R. Maddox, a T. I. graduate and Registrar and Rev. E. W. Butler, Treasurer, also made short talks.

Four graduates of the school are taking post graduate work in our commercial course. Mrs. H. R. Maddox and Mrs. V. H. Sutlive, graduate of Thorsby Institute and former teachers, are teaching the commercial work, one teaching in the morning and the other in the afternoon.

C. B. Jean of Roanoke, Alabama, a Thorsby Institute graduate, visited the school recently and at Chapel told about his travels the past three years while he has been in the United States Marines. He has a few more months of service and then plans to enter college.

From last year's class two are at Southern Union, Wadley, Alabama, two at Piedmont College, Demorest, Georgia, one at Bowling Green, Kentucky University of Commerce, one at Marion Military Institute, one at Alabama College, Montavalo. Some are attending business college, one is in training to become a nurse, and others are busy at various things.

A letter from a Thorsby Institute alumnus was received recently in which he said, "Thorsby Institute and all it stands for means more and more to me as the years go by, and I feel that I owe a debt not payable in a short life time, no matter how abundant in means or in service."

Rev. J. E. McCauley is helping Rev. G. C. Crutchfield in a revival at Berea Christian Church at Altamaha, North Carolina.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgement and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

GREENER GRAZING.

The "Richmond Christian Advocate" recently carried on its front page a picture of two mules, one on either side of the fence and both of them grazing from the opposite side. A sign says "No trespassing on this lot," but the mules seem to think that reaching over the fence to get some grass from the other side is much to be desired. Underneath this picture is this interesting paragraph:

"For some years we have periodically published this picture for the guidance of some Methodists who, like these mules, think the other fellow's pasture is better than their own. There is no need to write about it or discuss it. Just take the paper and go off in a quiet place and sit there and think about it—a long time. We commend it for meditation just before Conference."

About this season of the year many ministers look about them for greener grazing. There are problems in their own churches and they wish to find it a bit easier elsewhere. The other fellow's job looks more attractive and sometimes he gets a bit more money. The temptation is to resign the present job and try to get the one where the grazing is greener. This is what mules do. But not many mules are in the ministry.

OFFICERS OF THE CHURCH.

About this season of the year many of our churches elect officers who will serve for the next twelve months. It sometimes happens that people do not wish to act as officers of the church. They seem to feel that it is an imposition to demand of them their time and energy in the service of the church. They fear that people will criticize them if they work. There are others, however, who feel that it is an honor to be elected to an office in the Church of Jesus Christ. They accept the honor with the desire to render real Christian service. Of course, the honor is not in the election merely but in the service which they render during the year. It is a terrible disgrace to be elected to office in the Church of the Lord and then fail to perform the duties of the office. Election to office signifies that the church group believes that the individual can render the service. Sometimes the church is mistaken in its judgment, but usually the group is correct, for the person can do the work assigned him.

If church officers will take their job seriously, almost any church can grow. Deacons are supposed to care for the spiritual welfare of the people. Wherever they do their work well there is a fine spirit within the church group. The secretary is expected to keep the records accurate, and those who do so will make it possible to review the church history at any desired time, and will report to conference an active church roll rather than a list of those who are long since lost to the church. A treasurer who takes his job seriously will do more than collect money and pay bills. He will be able to develop love, loyalty for the church, because it is still true that "Where the treasure is there will the heart be also." A sexton can keep church property so clean and attractive, fill the house with pure, wholesome air and otherwise serve the worshippers so that the community will delight to dwell in the house of the Lord. If you, my good reader, have been elected to any office in the church, be sure that you render the service as unto the Lord, and in so doing you will find your own life enriched and developed.

OUR WOMEN AND MISSIONS.

As the women of the Southern Convention start on their twenty-sixth year of organized missionary activity they report progress, and plan for even greater growth. The reports show that there are increasing numbers of people connected with the missionary societies and that more money is being given by both women and young people. This is a happy situation, and gives courage to look to the future.

More than three hundred women gathered in Franklin last Friday to make reports of what they had done, to consider the fields that are ready for harvest, and to plan together for another year of work. The beautiful church in Franklin was a lovely scene when it was filled with eager and earnest women searching for wisdom to work as Christians around the world. With dispatch they transacted business, with reverence they sang and prayed, and with attention they listened for the voice of God as He spoke through the leaders concerning things that have been done, things that are being done, and things that are yet to be done. With Dr. Dunning, a vivacious young lady who is a surgeon, the faithful three hundred women lived for a while in India. Later they traveled in Syria among our church people there under the skilled guidance of Miss Jillison. Through the study books these women will visit the many Mohammedan people around the earth during the coming months, and by their prayers and gifts they will live in at least twelve countries, and they will do it, as they were taught at Franklin, in the spirit of love as it is described in First Corinthians 13.

On Friday night about three hundred young people and their leaders met in Suffolk, Virginia, for their annual Missionary Conference. They, too, showed progress and enthusiasm. They have hope that the world can be made a better place in which to live. In the hands of youth lies the future of the Church and of civilization. Sitting in a large audience where a young woman presides and another speaks with assurance of the leadership of God in far-away, non-Christian lands, it is easy to believe that the world will yet be saved.

Our women have become greatly interested in missions during the last quarter of a century. They are training the young people and children in missionary activity. They are not (Continued on following page.)

CAN MAN BY SEARCHING FIND OUT GOD?

By REV. CARL HERMAN VOSS.

That burning question "Can Man By Searching Find Out God?" is not confined to the book of Job, wherein we find it asked of the tormented Job by his friend Zophar the Naamathite; on the contrary, it is an ever-present question which plagues a modern with the same doubts and dismay as it did the denizen of the ancients' world.

To many a superficial contemporary the question is solved; in his mind there is no God. Discussion of theological concepts and philosophical categories is to him simply a waste of time. In glib phrases he gives us the answer of the Freudian who maintains that "God is an illusion," just a compensation for the complex which must have a spiritual father to appease its hunger. That this indictment is in many cases true no one can deny, but that is not the whole story. The Marxian contention is given next: "God is a tool of the bourgeois class to delude people into submission and pave the way for exploitation." No one can deny that in all history religion has too often been "the opiate of the people," but this does not give us the entire picture. Anyone with a sense of wonder in his heart, as he gazes spell-bound on the veritable miracle of life and its all-encompassing mystery, must needs assent to the dictum of the unknown Biblical writer who said, "The fool hath said in his heart 'There is no God!'"

Many of us in this strange day, when old guideposts have been torn down and venerated institutions gone to smash, wander about just a bit bewildered and speak of ourselves as "a lost generation." We search for certainty in an uncertain world and "grope for the wall like the blind." Our dilemma is eloquently expressed for us by that eminent writer and critic, the late Gama-liel Bradford, who toward the close of his life, admitted that

My one unchanged obsession whereso'er my feet have trod
Is a keen, enormous, haunting, never-sated thirst for God!

The mania that some people have for revivals is partial testimony to that fact; so is the unthinking adulation of the upper classes, "the comfortable and the excellent," as they stumble headlong unto the toils of the Oxford Group Movement. But there are many millions more whose intellectual and spiritual integrity will not permit them to throw in their lot with evangelists and Buchmanites. They are sincerely intent on finding clues to the nature of God in a world which seems to deny God at every turn.

Theirs is a valiant and an honorable search and a treasure awaits them if they seek earnestly enough. They must be warned, however, that only partial victory awaits them, for man can know God only in part. The splendor and the beauty of nature reveal God, but the impersonality and fury of nature thwart a full knowledge of God. A mystical experience, such as that undergone by Isaiah or St. Paul, may be of aid but mysticism needs logic to clarify it; often the sunlight of reason dispels the foggy mysticism of the previous day! In personality and the excellences of human nature there may be perceived manifestations of the Divine, but even Jesus of Nazareth, in whom were distilled the fullest riches of God, warned his disciples; "Why call ye me good? There is none good, save God!" Science, through Eddington and Jeans, Millikan and Whitehead, leads us a bit further on the path; philosophy by means of Plato and Aristotle, Spinoza and Hocking, encourage us, but we must beware lest our concept of God becomes a "long, oblong blur." In other words, the answer to our question is both "yes" and "no." God is too great for mere man to know entirely. Man may be god-like, may have been made in the image of God, but man is not God! "What is man, O Lord, that art mindful of him? The Son of Man that thou visitest him?"

Those of us who are bent on this quest for the meaning of life, which is ultimately the meaning of God Himself, must content ourselves with partial prizes. Our search is ceaseless by its very nature. God is God and man is man; never the twain shall meet entirely! We must content ourselves with half realization and continue the search; we must let our search be characterized by humility and awe. We shall then understand why the Indian sage Sanhara of the eighth century A. D. was impelled to say:

O Lord, pardon my three sins:

I have in contemplation clothed in form Thee who art formless;

I have in praise described Thee who art ineffable;

And in visiting shrines I have ignored Thine omnipresence.

satisfied merely to read two books and to bring in their apportionments. This year they will read three assigned books, and bring in more than their apportionment. That indicates a spirit of life, of growth. That is the way to success.

It was not the editor's good fortune to be in the meeting of the North Carolina women at Raleigh, North Carolina, on Tuesday, but he is sure that what has been said about the women of Virginia is equally true of those in Carolina. "The Christian Sun" congratulates these splendid workers on their attainments, and wishes for them still greater success during the coming year.

IT IS EASY TO QUIT.

Sometimes church people get tired and want to quit. Some of them do it. Things do not go just as they like, and they forget that God didn't like their way of life before he forgave them of their sins, and that he probably is not too well pleased with them yet. They decide to quit; to walk out on the Church they pledged faithfully to serve; to leave God to carry on His work the best he can without them. Apparently they forget that they may need the Lord and His Church to aid them sometime. They let others pay all the church bills, and do all the church work. But they want to receive the benefits of the Church and of the Christian Religion.

It is easy to quit. But it is cowardly, childish, little. It is difficult to keep on when others quit, but it is Christian.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The Eastern Virginia Woman's Missionary Conference of the Congregational and Christian Churches met in Franklin Christian Church, Friday, October 1, 1937, in the Twenty-Fifth Annual Session. More than three hundred women were present. Mrs. J. Monroe Harris of Norfolk, Virginia presided, and Mrs. Herbert P. Harrell of Driver, Virginia was Secretary. This session of the Conference reached a high mark in point of interest, efficiency and inspirational outlook. The outstanding speaker of the day was Dr. Norma Dunning, a medical missionary, representing the Presbyterian Church in India. She recited a number of personal experiences culled from her work, as a surgeon in a Mission Hospital, and gave some interesting insights into the outstanding differences between Christianity and the pagan religion of India.

The report of the Treasurer indicated that the total regular offerings given by all the Societies of the Eastern Virginia Conference for the year was $4,901.69. The total amount raised by the Societies of this Conference for the Silver Anniversary amounted to $1,136.95. This added to the regular offering made a total of $6,038.64 for the year. This is the largest amount raised by the Conference in one year during its history. The people who contribute to this work should be congratulated for the work accomplished during the twenty five years, and especially for the year 1937.

The Young People's Conference met on Friday night of the same date, in the Suffolk Christian Church. Miss Frances Everett of Holland presided. A large congregation of young people attended this Conference. Dr. Norma Dunning was the speaker of the Conference, and delivered an interesting address on the needs of India. Christianity is the only religion that can correct the evils of the times and satisfy the heart hunger of a war stricken world. The Young People's Missionary Societies raised $1,532.35 during the year. This is an increase over 1936. The young people are doing a fine work and should be encouraged to reach higher goals of achievement in the future. They contributed $194.75 to the Silver Anniversary offering making the grand total for the year $1,727.10.

It is not possible to give a detailed report of these Conferences in the space allowed for this letter. If this writer has caught the trend of the missionary movement and sensed the needs of the local churches, it seems to be impressive for the Missionary Societies to face a new field in their missionary work. For a number of years the emphasis has been laid upon the enlistment of church members in the Missionary Society and the raising of funds for carrying on missionary work at home and in foreign fields. Recently the cultivation of the Spiritual Life and the study of Missionary Books have added interest and efficiency. But this is not enough. Every Missionary Society may become an evangelistic organization taking as its project the reaching of the unchurched in the community adjacent to the local church. This is a work that has not yet challenged the women and young people in our Missionary Societies. And this is a work that should challenge the best thought of our young people.

Legislation has been enacted within the past decade which makes it illegal to employ young people under a certain age in the industrial plants of the country. This may be good legislation, from the standpoint of labor, but when young people are idle they will find some outlet for their growing strength and enthusiasm. Unless they are carefully guided there is a danger that they will become criminals. Huge sums are being spent today in recreational movements to prevent crime. If the young people residing in communities near our churches can be reached for the Sunday school and church these lives can be saved from criminality. Christianity is the remedy for our present moral decadence. The Missionary Societies should face this opportunity, in every church throughout the land, and make a determined effort to bring the youth of our land to intimate contact with a virile religion, where they may be taught the way of everlasting life, for this earth and for this generation. Survey your community and face your task there.

THE ANNUAL CONFERENCE.

In a few days now our conferences will be meeting in annual session. Our system now in practice provides for the gathering of representatives from the several churches of our different conferences in annual session for the purpose of receiving reports, making plans, and passing resolutions. Our usual conference program consists of reports from all departments of the conference which are similar to the departments of the convention, and in addition, sermons and inspirational addresses. These annual occasions are looked forward to with much interest on the part of officials and church representatives. These gatherings are wholesome, inspirational, and of much value to the general work of the church. They are indispensable to efficiency, growth and development. Every church should see that it is represented by its full quota. Also, it should see that all conference requirements are met. Good attendance and good reports help to make a good conference. The Lord has certainly blessed our section of the country with good crops and good business during the past year. Everyone should be grateful and should be glad for the opportunity of expressing his gratitude in every way possible.

In addition to our usual procedure in our conference programs, I hope that we shall have the opportunity to emphasize the position of the church today, the need of its program and purpose, to express gratitude for the peace and prosperity now enjoyed by our country, and to express the hope that the nations now at war may soon learn the ways of peace.

I am venturing a suggestive outline for a conference program. This suggestion does not include the regular conference business such as reports by the various departments, etc., but only such items as would make the conference a bit different.

Theme: "The Church In This Present Age." First Day—The Church, Its Present Relation to Christ.

- I. "The Head of the Church"—Opening Address.
 - II. "The Church as an Example in Society"—Noon Address.
 - III. "The Inspiration of the Church"—Evening Address.
- Second Day—The Church, Its Present Relation to Christian Doctrine.
- I. "Intercession"—Morning Address.
 - II. "Good Works"—Noon Address.
 - III. "The Sacraments"—The Administration of the Lord's Supper—Evening.

Third Day—The Church, Its Relation to Society.

- I. "Regeneration"—Morning Address.
- II. "Organization"—Noon Address.
- III. "Evangelism"—Closing Address.

The above addresses could be twenty minutes in length and would, I think, be of great value to the conference. The above are only suggestions, but it occurs to me that they deal with vital things that need to be considered by our church today.

SAM JONES AND LIQUOR.

Rev. Sam Jones, Methodist minister of a generation ago, was a widely known temperance lecturer and a strong opponent of the liquor business. According to the Civic Bulletin, published at Albany, New York, the following report of his lecture at Sigourney, Iowa, appeared in the local paper, and since it has a modern application we pass it on to our readers. He spoke as follows:

"This nice little Iowa town, with a farming region around it makes one of the garden spots of the world; but with all your blessing you can't get along without three saloons to debauch your village and ruin your boys, 'because you need the money.'

"Here, Mr. Jones inquired of the surprised audience, 'How much is the license fee here?' Someone answered, '$300 each.' 'Nine hundred dollars altogether,' said Mr. Jones. 'What is your population?' Answer, '2,000.' The speaker then made a little lightening calculation, and resumed: 'The liquor dealers walked up to you and said, "If you will let us damn this town, we will give you 40c apiece." Say, what would a 200 pound hog bring?' Answer, '$12.' 'So,' replied Mr. Jones, 'hogs $12 apiece and people 40c a head. Say, brother, don't you wish you were a hog? You and your whole family wouldn't bring enough in this town to buy a suckling pig! This is a little lower down than I have ever found them. For the pitiful sum of 40c a apiece you turn over your boys to be debauched, the hearts of mothers to be crushed, and the town ruined—all for 40c. This is cheap; and I suppose that is all you are worth, eh?

"I want to say that there is not a man of you who signed that petition to bring saloons to your town but desires that every boy in your home shall fill a drunkard's grave, and your daughters live in the embrace of drunken husbands. What did you sign it for? If you did not want your boys to drink, or your daughters to marry a drunkard, what did you do it for? Stand up and talk back. You surely did not sign, hoping that your boy would not drink, but that your neighbor's would!

"Why don't you say, 'To tell the honest truth, I did it for 40c.' If the Devil don't get you for that, it is just because he don't want you, and every man that signed that liquor petition, the Devil will get the last man of you—but thank God, he won't get much. If you fellows don't feel like a hog, you don't feel natural. That's all."—Baptist Courier.

WOMAN'S WORK IN A COUNTRY CHURCH.

By MRS. JAMES D. WYKER.

"Just what is woman's work in the country church?" I asked a little lady with snow-white hair who has been a life-long member of one.

"Why paying the preacher and keeping up the church building repairs," she answered. Then she hesitated and added, "And, of course, missionary giving. Women have always done that. Not many, but a few of us always send in our apportionment to the Board."

"And for what is the missionary money used?" I inquired again.

"Preaching the Gospel," came back emphatically. "Saving souls."

I went next to an enthusiastic young minister's wife who, with her husband, has dedicated her life to the work of the rural church.

"What is woman's work in the country church?" I asked.

"Helping her church rethink its reason for existing," came the unhesitating reply, "urging it to place life ahead of creeds; showing that its field is The Community and that every unreached person is a responsibility of the church. All of this—with the belief that sharing the message of Jesus Christ around the world is a task for the entire church."

In her enthusiasm she had generalized, but as I talked with her later I received specific answers in very definite terms.

As I talk with rural church women today, I find many eagerly and earnestly agreeing with this young minister's wife.

The function of the rural church woman has changed today because the program of her church is changing. And is it surprising that her church program is changing to meet new needs? The heart of her work continues the same—the sharing of the teachings and message of a young, rural evangelist, Jesus Christ; but her method of work is changing as she finds the experience of her children to be different from her own a generation ago.

The religion of Jesus was very simple. Growing up in a country home, his school the country-side, the beauty of the out-of-doors keeping him close to the heavenly Father, He grew to understand and sympathize keenly with the people and their problems. Religion to Him was not adding names to church rolls and having contests to increase attendance. He was not a Presbyterian or a Baptist or a Methodist seeking to sprinkle or immerse, but a Christian out to reveal God, change life and save individuals. He insisted on a decent society in which religious people might be more religious; He desired that the hungry might be fed. He had no fear and did not hesitate to condemn sin wherever he found it, even the corruption of the political system of this day. People believed Him not only because of words He spoke but because they saw a radiant personality on fire with a divine message—a man who lived what He preached.

The country church today has the unique opportunity of carrying on this same simple kind of religion, unhampered by big church-building debts, set forms and ceremonies, large maintenance expense. Because of the unique position of the country church, rural women have unusual opportunities.

In the first place, the farm home continues to be something of a unit even in a complex, modern world. There are chores to be done and responsibilities that need to be placed on young shoulders. The family shares many experiences, even its social life, and the minister of the rural church ministers to the entire family. Woman's work in the country church is first of all to recognize this and try to preserve family unity, for it is a real asset to church life.

The rural woman in many communities today is faced with the fact that her children attend a fine, well-equipped Consolidated School during the week and, on Sunday, must leave their friends and go (if they go) to a small, competitive, denominational church. She realizes that though the doctrines of her church are important and she will probably continue to believe them, the emphasis of religion today should be, as in the ministry of Jesus, on life. She realizes that if the rural church is to continue its ministry, Christians must learn to work together and in cooperation with other character building agencies. Small, competitive churches, unable to support a resident minister, will find it difficult to challenge other co-operating groups in the community and to do much about the large, unreached number of people within its boundaries.—Missionary Review of the World.

Make no little plans, they have no magic to stir men's blood and probably themselves will not be realized. Make big plans; aim high in hope and work, remembering that a noble, logical diagram once recorded will never die, but long after we are gone will be a living thing, asserting itself with ever-growing insistency. Remember that our sons and grandsons are going to do things that would stagger us. Let your watchword be order and your beacon beauty.

OUR MISSIONARIES IN CHINA AND JAPAN.

DEATH FROM THE SKY.

The bomb from a war plane that ended the life of Dr. Frank J. Rawlinson in Shanghai on August 14th, robbed the Chinese of one of their most understanding American friends and the Christian movement in China of an able interpreter and counselor. According to press reports, Dr. Rawlinson was driving on Avenue Edward VII with Mrs. Rawlinson and 14 year old Jean, when the first bomb fell on a stunned city. He stepped out, was struck by a fragment of bomb and killed instantly. Mrs. Rawlinson, suffering from shock, drove his body to the mortuary before collapsing. Mrs. Rawlinson and Jean sailed on the S. S. Hoover for Manila on August 20th. Jean is coming direct to America, John (16) will come as soon as he can leave China where he was at a Y Camp, and Mrs. Rawlinson will wait in Manila until she can return to Shanghai and finish business details.

DR. RAWLINSON'S CAREER.

Dr. Rawlinson, though born in England, was an American by choice, becoming a citizen of the U. S. A. in 1902. He was educated at Bucknell University, Rochester Seminary and Columbia University. He was editor of the Chinese Recorder, a monthly magazine of the Christian Movement in China and also edited the China Christian Year Book. He lectured in the schools of Shanghai, Peiping, Nanking and other cities. Dr. Rawlinson was one of the best informed Americans in China on timely issues there. Particularly was he interested in social and industrial problems in and about Shanghai. Many of you have seen the appreciation in THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

It is impossible to give an accurate report on our missionaries in North China now, or of the general situation there, because it changes from moment to moment. The press carries running accounts of military events and to date many of our workers have been mentioned in dispatches, among them Rev. Harry S. Martin and Rev. James A. Hunter, Tunghsien; Miss Abbie G. Chapin (who survived the Boxer Rebellion in 1900), Miss Jessie E. Payne, Rev. and Mrs. Elmer W. Galt and Faith, all of Paotingfu; Dr. Alma L. Cooke, Miss Lucia E. Lyons, and Helen Dizney, R. N., of Tehchow. These, and their co-workers un-named, have been rendering inestimable service to refugees, both Chinese and Japanese, to sick and wounded soldiers and civilians, to terrified families. It might be said that while the press in general is as accurate as one could expect under the pressure of war conditions, undue alarm should not be felt at dispatches about missionaries until they have been carefully checked by the Board with the Secretary of State, Cordell Hull, who has been most cooperative in this connection.

WHAT CAN YOU DO?

One of the most important things that Congregational and Christian friends can do is pray. Dr. Fairfield in a bulletin to missionaries on furlough from China and near relatives of workers still on the field, asks that petitions be included for the "morale of the whole missionary body, for clear guidance in difficult decisions and for strength from God to meet each day's needs, as well as prayers for their safety and that of our brothers and sisters of the Chinese churches and for the speedy termination of hostilities." To which should be added prayers for Japanese Christians and the many thoughtful Japanese, who, we are led to believe from reports, are not eager for war and deprecate this bitter conflict.

WORKS BOTH WAYS.

A group of some 16 young men from the Commercial College at Nagoya, Japan, organized a Bible Class in English which meets weekly at the home of Rev. Floyd L. Roberts. They did this on their own initiative. A second group sponsored by the Roberts is made up of American born Japanese who find many difficult problems of adjustment. Still another class of young men and women is taught by Mr. Roberts on the subject of the history of the Christian Church; again the topic was selected by themselves. "It is as stimulating for me as it is for them," says Mr. Roberts.

Out of three official delegates from China to the Coronation, two were American Board "products." Dr. H. H. Kung and Admiral Chen, who, despite the fact that China's navy is hardly more tangible than that of Switzerland, is still an Admiral. To show how China has been pushing ahead, Rev. Robert W. McClure sends an "ad" from a Shanghai newspaper showing a man holding a telephone receiver to his ear and saying: "I'll telephone our Hankow office." Not long ago, he points out, you might have said "Hankow" to many a Foochow Chinese and he would have answered: "Let me see, I believe I have heard that name but I don't know where it is. In China, I presume."

THE LEAVEN?

As in many other countries today, there is in Japan a strong, intelligently directed undercover movement to subjugate Christianity to Shintoism and Japanese nationalism, while at the same time making trouble for Christian schools that do not fully satisfy the ideas of this group. In contrast is a statement published by the National Christian Council bulletin in Japan to the effect that 31 members of the newly elected Diet (it has 466 members) are either aggressive Christians or have a Christian background and Christian connections. With only 250,000 Protestant Christians in a population of 70,000,000 in Japan this would seem to be a significant and truly remarkable showing.

TWO BIG MEETINGS.

Two big Congregational and Christian Conferences this fall are of special note from the missionary angle: on October 23-25, in Concord, New Hampshire, comes the Sixth New England Regional Meeting and the 128th Annual Meeting of the American Board with the theme, The Christian Church in Our Day, and on October 19-21 at Fort Wayne, Indiana, comes the Mid-West Regional Meeting with the Annual Meeting of the Board of Home Missions under the theme, "A Better Christian and a Better Church for a Better America and a Better World."

BETHLEHEM NOTES.

BETHLEHEM JUNIORS.

The Willing Workers of Bethlehem Christian Church sends in the report of a successful year under the able leadership of Miss Ruby Piland, superintendent.

The home and foreign mission study books were studied, a membership campaign was conducted and an interesting public program was rendered.

A large box of Sunday school supplies, CHRISTIAN SUNS and pamphlets was sent to Lincoln's Academy at King's Mountain, North Carolina, as a home project.

This society raised the required amount for the Silver Anniversary fund and went to the meeting with a 100% society. All requirements have been met so far and they are now working on an African program.

Several days were used to raise money for the year, such as selling pencils, Larkin orders, holding a lawn party and by the "Foot of Pennies" plan.

BETHLEHEM WOMAN'S SOCIETY.

The Bethlehem woman's society has thirty-four members and the society is divided into circles. Each circle has had both books taught to them and has raised their apportionment in full. Very interesting programs have been presented each month by Mrs. J. W. Folk, Spiritual Life Superintendent. The World's Day of Prayer for missions was observed in February, and on the second Sunday night in September Mrs. Hendricks

HOLY NECK YOUNG PEOPLE.

The Young People's Missionary Society of Holy Neck Christian Church has had a very successful year's work under the leadership of Mrs. Mills March, superintendent. The society has met regularly each month on the third Sunday night at the church. The programs have been well prepared with a different member in charge each time. The attendance has been good and $14.00 was raised for the Silver Anniversary Fund.

The society united with the Holland and Bethlehem Societies in having their foreign mission study which met at the Holland Christian Church on a Sunday afternoon in June. The book was most interestingly taught by Miss Lois Rabey of Holland, and a good crowd was in attendance. Each person brought his or her supper and all was spread together on tables on the church lawn. Tea was served by the local society and a social good time was enjoyed. After the supper hour a most instructive illustrative lecture on the "Missionary Work in Africa" was given. The pictures were shown by Rev. Carl R. Key, accompanied by a lecture by Mrs. Key.

Miss Vergie Whitfield very ably taught the home mission book "The American Negro" at the home of one of the members, September 2nd.

Several public meetings have been participated in during the year besides cooperating in the work of the Sunday school and Church.

This group has been represented at all the district meetings and conferences during the year, at the Elon Leadership Training School in June, and the Youth Fellowship meetings held at Bethlehem in July. Miss Annie Britton is the secretary of this splendid group of young people.

"DO NOT PUT OFF UNTIL TOMORROW WHAT YOU CAN DO TODAY."

Do not wait until the last minute to make plans for a program for a special occasion. Now is the time for all good "program planners" to begin thinking about suitable plans for Armistice and Thanksgiving—and even to plan for Christmas. If you wait until the week before the meeting you will find many fine programs that could have been used, if you had time to prepare for them—but it is too late!

Often you can secure interesting and valuable plays, play readings, pageants, and stories to use for special days—but you must have time to send for them and to find people to help you in carrying them out. One reason our meetings are apt to be monotonous is that we always wait until the last minute to prepare for them and consequently follow the line of least resistance and have the same type of program that we always have had.

Surprise your group by presenting something different—a new form of worship for them perhaps—on Armistice and Thanksgiving. The Board of Christian Education at 514 S. Main St., Norfolk, Virginia, will be glad to furnish you with suggestions and materials, as will the editor of this page. Let us help you.

FOR OUR FILES.

It is important that the officers of an organization know who the members of that organization are, so that they can make plans accordingly. In the case of the Southeast Pilgrim Fellowship, it is necessary for its officers to know who the leaders are in each one of the states so that they can send them material and exchange ideas with them. In turn, the Fellowship officers must know who to write to in the local churches, in order to make the Pilgrim Fellowship program of use in the local group.

When your state or fellowship group elects officers, the secretary should send a list of those new officers—including their addresses—to the secretary of the Southeast Pilgrim Fellowship. If this were done, the organization would be able to be of service to a much larger number. The names of all the Superintendents of Missions would be given to the Southeast officer in that department, and they would each receive material from him during the year. This material would be passed on by them to the local groups—providing they had the name of someone in each group to whom they could send it. Unfortunately, this valuable work can not be done, and much valuable material is simply wasted each year, because someone does not send the leaders' names to the proper person.

If you are the secretary of a fellowship group, please send the names of your officers to me. It is such a simple mechanical thing that it seems relatively unimportant, but much of the efficiency and efficacy of our organization may depend upon it.

ARE WE CONTROLLED BY PROPAGANDISTS?

Propaganda is used to gain the support of people to a cause, an article, or a course of action. The desired course of favor or attitude of those who are in sympathy is intensified by propagandists. They seek to change the attitudes of those who are hostile, and make it attractive for the indifferent.

The radio, newspapers, posters, lobbies, and demonstrations of various kinds are a means through which propaganda is spread. Notice some of our public signs and advertisements and one can easily discover that truth is many times misrepresented. Words paint great pictures to the imagination of the individual. How about the phrase "not a cough in a car load?" So we give this common sense consideration? How about whiskey adds—"Ripened and mellowed with age," "Smoother," etc. These are dangerous to our thoughtless youth of today.

It is a very sly way to present interesting news in such a way as to favor a certain point of view. Many newspapers with political alliances take pride in the fact that they mold public opinions by the way they present the news.

Consider such questions as the following:

1. What interests and causes are being propagated today by means of propaganda?
2. To what extent is congress influenced by "pressure groups?"
3. Is the use of propaganda a proper means of influencing public opinion? Is it honest and fair?
4. How may we use propaganda to further the cause of Christ?

THE CHRISTIAN IN GOD'S KEEPING.

LESSON II—OCTOBER 10, 1937.

GOLDEN TEXT: Keep yourselves in the love of God, looking for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto eternal life.—Jude 21.

LESSON: Psalm 121 and Jude.

The Christians in the Early Church—perhaps in the second generation after Christ's death—were living in a dangerous age. The spirit of worldliness and license and self-indulgence was rampant. Furthermore, the situation was made worse by a group of people, suave and subtle who were false teachers and who have crept in and were seeking to spread their doctrines and theories. Jude, a brother of James, who wrote the epistle of James, and hence a brother of Jesus himself, takes it upon himself to write a letter to his fellow Christians to set them right on these matters. In a brief letter he severely condemns those who are doing the mischief, denouncing them in stinging words, and then exhorts the Christians to avail themselves of the privilege which is theirs of being kept by God the Father himself through Christ.

Jude's letter thus has a timely and timeless message. Our modern world is materialistically minded, it is a self-indulgent, and unspiritual world, and Christians need to be reminded that if they are to live worthy Christian lives they must depend on a power not wholly of themselves which will make them conquerors, and which will enable them to grow in grace and in Christ-likeness.

"Called" and Kept.

"To them that are called"—to those who have heard the call of Christ and who have come out of the world in one sense even while living in the world. Christ calls us to be saints, he calls us to be sons of God in a spiritual sense, he calls us to discipleship.

"And kept for Jesus Christ." The word here translated "kept" occurs five times in this single chapter, and means to hold firmly. Jesus once said that no one was able to pluck his sheep out of the Father's hand. The word kept signifies watchful care and is suggestive of present possession. Jude means to teach the truth that God really can keep us, that if we fully commit ourselves to him we shall not walk in sin and we shall overcome the devil. By his use of circumstances, and by his indwelling Spirit, we are kept free from the things that are our enemies.

"Contend Earnestly."

Although the responsibility for keeping us is God's, it is a difficult thing for us to give ourselves so completely to God that He can do His will through us. We want our own way, we seek our own pleasure, we walk in our own paths. Furthermore, there are so many subtle forces to delude us and lead us astray.

"The Faith Which Was Once for All Delivered Unto the Saints."

Not in a static sense to be sure. But Jude would indicate that the basic things by which men live were delivered once and for all unto the saints. It will find new meanings and new applications, but it represents a continuing fellowship through the ages and a life-giving stream.

"Those Who Make Separations."

Jude denounces in strong terms those who are "ungodly men," those who turn the grace of God into lasciviousness, those who deny our Lord and Master, those who are mockers, those who are sensual and walk after their own ungodly lusts. He declares that they do not have the Spirit of God, that they live for the senses and after the senses, and that they "make separations." Alas! for the church groups which have been torn asunder by those who profess to be the followers of Christ, but who deny him.

"Building Up Yourselves."

"But ye be building up your yourselves on your most holy faith, praying in the Holy Spirit, keep yourselves in the love of God, looking for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto eternal life. We must do something in the process of being saved. Our hearts must keep sensitive by prayer, we must abide in God's love through obedience, we must trust in the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ.

"Having Mercy."

"We are to have mercy upon those who have stumbled, who are of doubtful mind, even on those who have fallen into sin. We are to have mercy upon them even as we rest our own case on the mercy of Christ. We are to love the sinner but to hate sin—hating even the garment spotted by the flesh."

"A Glorious Benediction."

"Now unto him that is able to guard you from stumbling, and to set you before the presence of his glory without blemish in exceeding joy, to the only wise God our Saviour, through Jesus Christ our Lord, be glory, majesty, dominion and power, before all time, and now, and evermore, Amen. There is perhaps no more exalted language, and certainly no more glorious benediction in the entire Bible. Jude commits his fellow Christians unto God who is able to keep them from stumbling and to finish the process of becoming sons of God without blemish through the grace of Jesus Christ, the revealer of salvation which is from God, and this for this world and for that which is to come. Unto him Jude ascribes glory and majesty and dominion and power for ever and for ever.

This letter of Jude ought to strengthen and encourage us in these days when there are so many enemies of the soul. And it ought to challenge us to a closer walk with God so that we may know at first hand experience his saving and keeping power.

DON'T FORGET.

The Board of Christian Education needs the aid of the churches in order that it may aid the churches with their religious educational task. Do not forget to send the money to Conference for Christian Education. It is not a big item, but it surely is needed. The Board cannot work without this income from Conferences. Please, for the sake of the children, young people, and adults who need religious training, don't forget to send this money to Conference designated for Christian Education.

OUR FAITH IN GOD.

This is a title of a book by Rev. W. R. Matthews concerning which "The Living Church" says, "Dr. Matthews' book, like all that the Dean of St. Paul writes, is lucid in its exposition and delightful to read . . . It may be commended without reserve as among the best simple statements of fundamental Christian belief."

Bishop William T. Manning sent to the clergy of his diocese copies of this book. The price is $1.25 and the book is published by The MacMillan Company.

HEAVENLY ALLIES.

"Woe unto them! for they have fled from me: destruction unto them! because they have transgressed against me."—Hosea 7:13.

(Revised version) "It is my destruction, O Israel, that thou art against me, against they help."

What insanity it would have been in the World War if the allies had disagreed among themselves and had turned their guns on one another. The foe would have soon won the war.

And yet we often see this sort of thing happening midst the forces of Christianity. All good and honest people are for us, all the good past backs us up. God is for us and the hosts of heaven are ready to fight for us against Satan, and yet we stand off and by our own conduct or by the lack of action, allow the enemy to come in and bind us hand and foot. That will be our destruction.

Prayer—Dear Heavenly Father, our hope is in Thee. Our trust in Thee. May we never forsake Thee but may we, and all Thy forces stand loyally for Thee. Amen.

TUESDAY.

THE BEST FRIEND.

"Neither will I offer burnt offerings unto the Lord my God, of that which cost me nothing."—II Sam. 24:24.

We are reminded in this text of the Jewish law which required that the sacrifices offered unto God must be without blemish. The first fruits were always offered.

Should we do less than the ancient Jews? Should we give to the Lord seconds, that which is spoiled or marred or of no value to us? We are to give him our best for He has given us His best.

We read comments the other day on this subject. It said in part: Cheapness in love and service is bad for us as well as an affront to God. Dare we even call it service at all? God knew human nature and for our own sakes said, "bring the first of the flock, the herd and the fruitage of the ground." Religion that cost us nothing, into which we have put nothing of time, labor or substance, is worth nothing. It was not thus that God loved us. "God so loved the world that He gave his only begotten son, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life."

That heartbreak at the very center of our faith can never be eased with anything less than the whole hearted giving of ourselves, be the cost what it may.

Prayer—O Lord, help us into Thy spirit of sacrifice and help us to carry into our lives, somewhat of the spirit of God. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

LIFE'S CHIEF ERROR.

"Covet earnestly the best gifts."—I Cor. 12:31.

One of the world's chief errors is that of being ambitious in worldly ways and lacking ambition in heavenly ways. We are so preponderantly human that we like the crowns of earth rather than the crowns of heaven. Men are ambitious for power, for fame, for wealth, for luxury, for the knowledge of the world. Not so many are ambitious for soul power, for the fame of goodness, for the wealth of the pure in heart and poor in spirit, and for the lasting knowledge of eternal things.

These are the more excellent things. God has promised to give them to us if we covet them earnestly. We are not only to covet them but we are to toil for them. They are riches that come only by extreme exertion.

Prayer—Our Father, give unto us the riches and the glories of eternal life and while we labor in this world midst the things of this world, help us to live above them. For Jesus' sake. Amen.

THURSDAY.

OUT OF TRIALS.

"These are they that come out of the great tribulation."—Rev. 7:14.

John knew well the meaning of "great tribulation," and so did those for whom he wrote out his wonderful Revelation. We easy-going Christians hardly know what trial means.

Is it really a fortunate omission from our lives? Not if we have not something to take its place and give us spiritual stamina. The martyrs were taught great lessons by their great tribulations, the greatest of all lessons, how to serve God with all their powers and how to lean upon Christ with all their trust.

We can learn these things in the schools of Christ without scourgings and imprisonments and crucifixions; we can, if we will. There are hard enough things to do for Christ, if we will only do them. We can find difficulties enough in the work of the kingdom to give us spiritual stamina without persecutions. We can if we will; but will we?

Prayer—Lord Jesus, may we go about Thy tasks. Lord Jesus, may we follow in Thy toiling ways. Amen.

—Amos R. Wells.

FRIDAY.

BEAUTY IS BUT SKIN DEEP.

"A man's wisdom maketh his face to shine."—Ecc. 8:1.

Although we are told that cosmetics have been used throughout all generations, probably never in the world's history has so much attention been paid to facial beauty as today. Never were there so many lotions, powders, creams, etc. for improving the skin or injuring it. It is one of the biggest business's in the world and incomparable sums of money are paid for this beauty of the face.

But how deep is this beauty? The preacher of Ecclesiastes in our text tells us of the true beauty that is as deep as the soul and shines with a charming luster through any face, however homely, unless it be true that cosmetics have made it impossible by darkening the light of the countenance.

It costs nothing whatever to produce a loveliness of face infinitely superior to all that the "Beauticians" can do. One's wisdom, born of the spirit of God in his soul, makes his face to face with heavenly loveliness.

Prayer—Heavenly Father, creator of beauty, we pray for the loveliness of the spirit in our souls. Grant unto us, wisdom from above and add unto it heaven's goodness from day by day. Amen.

SATURDAY.

JUDAS KISSES.

"And straightway he came to Jesus, and said, hail, Rabbi; and kissed Him."—Matt. 26:49.

The most despicable act in all history is the kiss with which Judas betrayed his Saviour, thus pointing Him out to be crucified. It has stood ever since as the symbol of hypocrisy and treachery.

If we shudder at the foul deed, let us see to it that we do not ourselves transform some act of hate, or use some pretence of goodness and kindness to mask a purpose of villainy.

Thus the advocates of liquor proclaim that what they are seeking is "true temperance." Thus foul infidels assert that they are earnest students of the truth. Thus the writers and artists who portray licentiousness do it in the name of "realism." Thus anarchists parade under the banner of "liberty" and "freedom."

Prayer—Help us to be honest, All-seeing Father, with Thee, with men, and with ourselves. Keep us from FOLLOWERS OF CHRIST.

By REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D.

"If any man serve me, let him follow me; and where I am there shall also my servants be: if any man serve me, him will my Father honor."—John 12:26.

It was an intense moment. Jerusalem was filling up with its race from all over the world. He had entered the city in triumph, a triumph only symbolical of the day when he would be King and Lord of lords. The news had traveled like wildfire of his having raised Lazarus from the dead, and there were literally thousands who desired to see the man who had raised the dead.

At that spectacle the Pharisees said, "Behold, the world has gone after him." How Jesus stemmed the tide of all this exultation! He held to his high standards, and did not bow to their passing fancy. He knew their fickleness. But there was an additional note that sounded the depths of his soul, namely, the coming of the Greeks through that crowd to say to one of his followers: "Sir, we would see Jesus." Now that was a demonstration of the fact that the world really did wish to know him. That was a call from across all boundaries. It set the world-wide mission of Jesus definitely before him. It caused him to think immediately of his crucifixion and to say, "And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me."

It was in that tense moment that Jesus set forth the world-wide norm for being a follower of Jesus. There were a few already followers of Jesus, but they were few and not yet would they come in on any wholesale basis; for the few who were already his followers were saying, "We have left all to follow thee." Others had been invited to do this very thing, but had turned it down, for instance, the rich young ruler. Not many not yet would be willing to leave all to follow him.

Servers of Christ, and followers of Christ. We see here in our text a subtle difference, and a difference which becomes very wide, indeed. There is a hollow, shallow serving which amounts to little than selfish place-seeking. That sort of notion of getting into the swim, or taking up with the movement if and when it is popular. Jesus had never been fooled by that sort of pretense of serving. He had told his hearers already that,

"Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name? and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works? And then will I profess unto them I never knew you: depart from me, ye that work iniquity."

Many are willing to do lip service. But what Jesus was hungering for was followers in the noble sense set forth in our text. Not servers only, but followers also. Not what they were in outward acts, but what they were in inward self mattered most to Jesus. How do we make a distinction between servers and followers? It is the text: "And where I am, there shall also my servant be." Where I stand the man serving me in the noblest, deepest sense will stand. Where I am there he is. You can find out where my servants are by finding out where I stand. "If any man serve me let him follow me; and where I am there shall also my servant be." The emphasis is on the word follow—if any man will serve me let him follow me—the ability to serve properly, and with any degree of appreciation, depends on his relationship expressed in the word follow.

It is an expressed yearning in the soul of the Saviour of men for their hearts first, then their hands.

It is submitting our wills unto his will, even as he submitted his will unto the Father. "I came not to do mine own will, but the Father's, who sent me," says Jesus. Paul has in turn rightly expressed it: "It is no longer I that live, but Christ that liveth in me." How happy would be our 'followership' if we could say: Where Jesus stands I stand in all the rounds of human endeavor and daily living! It would fill our churches, empty our divorce courts, bless our homes, clear our seas of submarines, and our skies of deadly explosives. If those who serve Christ on the low plane denounced in his "Lord, Lord" speech should all join those who serve him on the high plane expressed in our text a new day would dawn in our midst. To that task you and I are setting ourselves. To that task you and I must work, by close association with him daily. We must seek daily, not merely on Sunday, but daily to learn his will and to practice his presence in our lives. We must not only be with him on Sunday, but being his servants we must be with him every day of the week. If our religion does not go any further than our weekly worship of him then we turn beauty into ashes; and we are not followers of him.

May we multiply the men and women, and young people who give their heart to Jesus constantly, who delight to honor him at work as well as worship, and to walk with him in the valley as well as on the mountain heights. Then our churches will have congregations that are inspiring, gifts that are honoring to our Lord, and sufficient to carry the Gospel to the ends of the earth, and the dedication of life whereby this Gospel may be carried.

"If any man serve me (on that high basis) him will my Father honor." To be honored of God, what an honor that must be! It is well enough to be respected, admired, and loved by one's fellowmen—who is there so little of soul that he does not desire the respect of his fellowmen?—but to be honored of God, that is great indeed. "Him will my Father honor," he will have the ear of God, and God will help him and deliver him. The honor of men is all too fleeting, in a day it can falter; but the honor is eternal and in an eternity it cannot fail!

Let us sum it up this way: "Following Jesus, getting the mind of Christ and having his spirit and will in ourselves; serving Jesus, by serving our fellowmen in the way in which he would have them served by us; reward for service, having the honor and approbation of the heavenly Father." In that way Jesus will be honored, man will be honored, and God will be honored. Such was the desire of the Christ as he stood facing the cross, namely that he might bring man home to the heart of God, in loving acceptance of his rightful place in the family of God. Whoever gives God his heart makes himself a follower of Jesus, and server of his fellowmen, and becomes a recipient of the honor which only God can give.

Grief is so far from retrieving a loss that it makes it greater; but the way to lesson it is by a comparison with others' losses.—William Wycherly.

The Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

Children are interesting. I sometimes think that little children are the most interesting. We have a most interesting group at the Christian Orphanage. They are as fine a group as you will find anywhere.

In the Johnston Hall, where I have my office we have four small girls, two of the little girls are twins. One day they came from school and three of them came into my office with a smile on their faces and happy as they could be. They said they wanted to tell me that they got a hundred on their work that day. They are first graders and the teacher had given them figures to write and the grade of one hundred looked good to them. I gave them an apple for being so smart. They went out to play. Soon the fourth little girl came in and with a sweet smile on her face she said to me: "Mr. Johnston, I made a hundred, too, on my work today." Of course, she got an apple, too.

Thanksgiving will soon be here and the children will be expecting a chicken dinner. They always do.

The Conferences will soon hold their annual sessions. We are anxious to see how many churches will raise their conference apportionments in full. We are mailing a letter this week to all the Sunday schools giving their conference apportionments for the Christian Orphanage, and the amount paid and the balance due. We thought this information might be of some help.

We are very short on winter dresses for the girls, large and small. Winter is always here, if you have good dresses you don't need coats, suits for boys, won't you be so kind as to Parcel Post them to us. We can use them and we will appreciate them. Just be a good neighbor to us in this work and share with us.

BETHLEHEM NOTES.

Jones of Holland gave a very impressive missionary program.

A great interest was manifested in the Jubilee Anniversary, and the sum of $83.25 was raised. During the year $155.00 has been raised on apportionment and $10.00 for a memorial for Mrs. W. B. Byrd.

There has been good attendance at each of the monthly meetings and a great interest manifested by the members. Mrs. W. C. Joyner, the president, feels that a great good has been accomplished through the continued cooperation, prayer, and faith of all the members.

BETHLEHEM'S YOUNG PEOPLE'S SOCIETY.

Miss Audrey Byrd, secretary of the Bethlehem Young People's society sends us the following information. Mrs. O. D. King is the efficient superintendent and a most successful year has been enjoyed.

Regular meetings have been held throughout the year with an attendance of over fifty per cent and the apportionment has been raised.

An Easter pageant "Morning Light" was presented before a large audience and was very helpful and inspiring. This society met with the Holland and Holy Neck societies in the study of "Consider Africa," and "The Story of the American Negro" was taught in their regular meetings.

Thrift in life will repay you in after-life with a usury of profit beyond your most sanguine dreams; and waste of it will make you dwindle alike in intellectual and moral stature beyond your darkest reckoning.

—William E. Gladstone.

WE ARE NOT A CANDIDATE FOR THAT JOB.

There is a story going the rounds about a small congregation hunting for a new minister. The board members were perplexed and they sought the aid of one of the chief executives of the Church, who happened to be in their city on official business. The executive met the board and they told him what they had in mind. One man suggested they needed a great orator and pastor; another said the man they wanted would have to be a genius for organization; another put in that they needed someone with an eye to finances; another intimated that they would require a good politician to keep various factions in mind; another wanted someone with athletic ability to coach the young. The church executive listened attentively and then said:

"Well, gentlemen, what you seem to want is a cross between Henry Ward Beecher, Roger Babson, Premier Baldwin, and Andrew Carnegie. I am afraid you can't get him for a hundred dollars a month."—Religious Telescope.

NOW IN THE DAYS OF YOUTH.

Now in the days of youth,
When life flows fresh and free,
Thou Lord of all our hearts and lives,
We give ourselves to Thee;
Our fervent gift receive,
And fit us to fulfill,
Through all our days, in all our ways,
Our Heavenly Father's will.

Teach us where'er we live,
To act as in Thy sight,
And do what Thou wouldst have us do
With radiant delight;
Not choosing what is great,
Nor spurning what is small,
But taking from Thy hands our tasks
To glorify them all.

Teach us to love the true,
The beautiful and pure,
And let us not for one short hour
An evil thought endure.
But give us grace to stand
Decided, brave and strong,
The lovers of all holy things,
The foes of all things wrong.

Spirit of Christ, do Thou
Our first bright days inspire,
That we may live the life of love
And loftiest desire;
And be by Thee prepared
For larger years to come;
And for the life ineffable,
Within the Father's home.

In Memoriam

HOLLAND.

Dewey Shafter Holland, Suffolk, Virginia, came to his death by accident September 17, 1937, aged 37 years. He was the son of the late Elisha E. and Mary Gardner Holland. The funeral services were conducted at Holy Neck Church, where he held membership, by the writer, assisted by Revs. Carl R. Key and W. H. Corbitt. The burial was in the family cemetery. He is survived by four sisters: Mrs. E. L. Beachman, Mrs. J. P. Hedgebeth, Mrs. Henry Duke, and Mrs. F. H. Hedgebeth and one half-brother, James Causey Holland, Drum Hill, North Carolina. May the God of all peace comfort and keep his loved ones.

N. G. NEWMAN.

RAMSEY.

Whereas, God, in His infinite mercy, has seen fit to take from this life, our beloved friend, Mrs. James A. Ramsey, on June 16, 1937, and

Whereas, she was one of the oldest and most devoted members of the Rosemont Woman's Missionary Society, and we shall sadly miss her kindly smile, her quiet and unassuming manner, and her great and steady devotion to her church, Sunday school, and Missionary Society, being always ready to give of her time and means,

Therefore, be it resolved.

That we submit to God's will, trusting in His great wisdom, and loving kindness and mercy, and

That the memory of her life shall ever be an inspiration and encouragement to us all, and

That we extend to her bereaved family our loving sympathy in their sorrow, and

That a copy of these resolutions be sent to her family, a copy sent to "The Christian Sun" for publication, and a copy placed in the minutes of the Rosemont Woman's Missionary Society.

Mrs. H. R. MORRISON,
Mrs. J. B. BARKSDALE,

AYSUCUE.

On August 21st, God in His all wise providence called from our midst Miss Lula Ayscue, our kind neighbor, beloved friend, loyal member of our church, and faithful worker in both the Ladies Aid and Missionary Societies.

Surely we shall miss her gentle spirit, but the influence of her humble, unselfish life will live on and on, for she combined the Christian virtues in no small degree.

Therefore, be it resolved:

First, that we humbly bow in submission to God's will, knowing that He doeth all things well and that his loving arms are ever beneath us.

Second, that we extend our heart felt sympathy to her family in their bereavement, and point them to our loving Father who was her constant source of comfort.

Third, that we in our Christian career strive to emulate the high ideals she lived before us.

Fourth, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to her family, one to "The Christian Sun" for publication, and one recorded in our minutes.

STEPHENSON.

Mrs. Mary Jane Stephenson was born in Chambers County, Alabama, August 1, 1852. She was the daughter of Rev. and Mrs. W. M. J. Elder, who established the first Christian Church in Alabama, the church that she joined at the age of eleven years and was a faithful member to her death. She died in her eighty-sixth year and was the oldest member of New Hope Christian Church.

She was married to C. H. Stephenson on the 29th day of February in 1872. To this union were born nine children, three boys and six girls. The grown sons preceded her in death. The surviving children are: Mrs. Lola Floyd, Abanda, Alabama; Miss Bettie Stephenson, Atlanta, Georgia; Mrs. Ada Mann, Roanoke, Alabama; Mr. Jubilee Stephenson, Mt. Vernon, Georgia; Mrs. Rosa Lankford, Elon College, North Carolina; Miss Zana Stephenson, Atlanta, Georgia; Mrs. Rillie Dunaphant, Atlanta, Georgia. She leaves, also, one brother and one sister, Dr. J. W. Manning and Mrs. A. M. Johnson both of Norfolk Virginia.

She and her husband lived a consistent Christian life and brought their children up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. They were strong "Pillars" in the Christian Church.

In the beginning of the ministry of this writer it was my privilege to board in their home and go to school. She was a great friend, wife, and mother and for nearly sixty years she, with the good husband who preceded her in death six years ago, kept intact a strong Christian home in which it was a joy to live or to visit.

She came peacefully to the end of her earthly journey August 11, 1937, in Atlanta, Georgia, where she had made her home since the death of her husband April 4, 1931.

Her body was brought back to New Hope Cemetery and gently laid to rest beside her husband. Funeral services were by this writer assisted by Rev. A. R. Van Cleave, pastor of the church. God rest her soul in Peace.

My prayers go out for the bereaved.

G. D. HUNT.

MY DESIRE.

It is too much to ask to win
Each step, each passing strife;
But one should always firmly be True to the best in life.

What is my aim each fleeting day,
My hope what'er betide?
Have I the will and strength to choose
The things that shall abide?

Let me not crave too much success
In terms of worldly deeds,
But rather may I have the light
To meet life's noblest needs.

Give me the courage to be true,
The will to do and dare,
A heart brim full of Godly love,
And work to my full share.

THE POOR RICH.

"Whatsoever is under the whole heaven is mine."—Job 41:11.

How rich are you? How poor are you? Are you a Christian? Is any Christian so senseless as to feel poor? All the world belongs to him. Its gold, its silver, its precious stones, its beauty, its palaces, its ships, its storehouses its outnumbered world's that fill the vault of heaven.

All these things are ours for we are joint heirs with Christ in all riches of God. Why should we feel poverty stricken though we may be very poor indeed? He who has these things can endure the poverty of earth in the brief space of time he sojourns here. He who has not these things, though he be as rich as Midas, is poor indeed for he can not enter into the happy consciousness of an abounding eternity with God.

Prayer—Our Father, Thou art all we want. We find in Thee, infinitely more than in all else on earth. We pray to Thee to give to our own souls, the wealth of our heart. Amen.

NOT FOR SALE

"You can buy any man alive," the cynic declared boldly and loudly. "Every one has his price."

Perhaps it was true of his circle of supposed friends; he had found that with them gold's lure was supreme. Nothing else counted when it was dangled before their eyes. So he imagined that the entire world was for sale—the price dependent upon the danger and difficulty involved.

It is tragedy indeed when anyone reaches such pessimistic conclusions, for half of the joy in life is in watching others struggle nobly to maintain their ideals and principles and that, too, often in direct poverty and under severest temptations to win ease by crooked practices or by desertion of the noblest.

Gen. Robert E. Lee, broken in health and finances by the Civil War, was offered ease, wealth, and British acclaim if he would quit his loved Southern states after the Civil War for a castle in England. But he swept the enchanting picture aside to devote his remaining years to the rebuilding of his war-torn nation.

William Carey could have died a wealthy government official of India—the opportunity was his—but his heart held him true to the seemingly thankless task of bringing the Gospel to Burma and India.

An oil company in search of a special man for a difficult task in the Orient, discovered their ideal—an American missionary. But their bid of thousands of dollars annually failed to secure his services. "No, gentlemen," he answered calmly, "I thank you for your offer, but my task lies elsewhere."

A famous scientist-inventor left the world infinitely brighter when he ended his career, but his wealth was hardly worth counting. He had given his entire life to work that would make others more comfortable and happy, paying no attention to patents and profits.

A middle-aged doctor had given his finest service to a district where fees were small and uncertain, trails were rough, and nights were bitterly cold. Then fame came suddenly to him—when five baby girls were born one May night—and he was enabled to keep the faint life-spark alive. Ease and wealth clamored for his life. But he stayed in the north where he was needed, the most famous country doctor in the world, and as happy as a bird in his choice.

Another, poor and with no prospect of riches, had an opportunity through certain information he had stumbled upon, to make a fortune in a few weeks. But it was in whiskey! And he had hated drink with an increasing hatred all his years. So he stayed poor, thrusting away the chance to acquire wealth.

And in every street and along every country road live the thousands of nameless heroes, the men and women who, Moses-like, refuse to sell out their ideals for the thing that promises ease, comfort, and wealth—but all secured by slaying principles or drugging conscience into submission. They prefer the hardships of the Hebrew slave camps, honest and God-fearing, to the pleasures of Egypt's palaces and pomp. And some count such fools—but strange to say, it is to these that sin-wrecks come for help in their final struggles—too late often.

But there are others who sell for gold. A Judas who values himself at a mere thirty pieces of silver! Others amass wealth through supplying narcotics for drug slaves, selling whiskey to kill body and soul, wrecking young lives by filthy and unhealthy publications, producing shot and shell to murder will all the efficiency of modern warfare, or turning honest men into criminals through their gambling hells.

Nothing is more false than the cynic's "Every man has his price." It isn't true. Most people cannot be bought, at any price. The visions, ideals and principles are too sacred to barter for gold and glamor, pomp or place.

A fool it was who said, in his heart, "There is no God!" It's his twin brother who declares, "You can buy any man alive."

A Judas sells! But a Moses quietly says, "I would rather suffer affliction with the people of God than have all Egypt's pleasures."

Real men are never for sale—only life's culls are on the auction block. He who will sell himself is apt to sell out his master if the opportunity comes.

NUMBER 41.

Our Fall Opening

By REV. M. J. SWEET, D. D.

The live church is conscious of its mission. It feels the pulse of the heart of God beating against its own interest in the world's work and life. Something it must do—it cannot live unto itself alone. "Without Him" it "can do nothing." It may be stronger than its weakest member but only so because the strong bear the infirmities of the weak. The weak by prayer and fasting must become stronger, or eventually join the ranks of the wrecks of life—one can't be carried always. The live church like the live man sees his duty and greets its task fervently. Thus at the opening of our working year the church's work looms big. No one can be spared; the task is too colossal for the few; shirkers may live in the army of the country, but in the army of the Christ they soon die and become the objects of pity in the eyes of God. The very life of the Christian depends on his or her interest and activity in the things that are Christ's. If one's interest wanes he must take care! The breakers are ahead! Nothing can separate one from the love of Christ; but one may lose his love for Christ. The thought is appalling, but only too true. Just a little neglect, a fancied grievance, a willful absence from the means of grace, a little fault-finding and self-excusing because of the shortcomings of others and, lo, one finds himself forgetting God and a fervent love is lost not to return—how long? But among us there shall be no such thing. Seek the ways of the Lord! Find your task today and make a partner of Christ and fight the good fight of faith. The cry must be heard all along the line: "Thy king cometh and is calling for thee." "Go work in my vineyard."

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

The training schools for Suffolk and Norfolk began last Monday and Tuesday respectively, and will continue through next week.

Chaplain W. W. Elder, now stationed at the Norfolk Navy Yard, was a welcome visitor at First Christian Church, Norfolk, on last Sunday.

Chaplain H. E. Rountree, stationed at San Diego, California, was recently in a play entitled "The Life of Cabrillo," given by the Kiwanis Club over the local radio.

Suffolk Christian Church announces an evangelistic meeting beginning on October 26th, with Rev. W. E. Wiseman of Greensboro, North Carolina, as the preacher. On the first Sunday in October Mrs. Vernon E. Ramsey was received into the church, and 442 people attended the Sunday school. They reported having had six 100% classes.

Rev. W. Millard Stevens, pastor of the Union Ridge Christian Church assisted Rev. F. Ervin Hyde in a meeting at Shallow Well Christian Church during the week following September 26th. Rev. Mr. Stevens brought strong evangelistic and inspirational messages. There were twenty additions to the church, sixteen of which came on profession of faith.

On September 26th, the Loyal Bible Class of the Congregational-Christian Church of Sanford was the host to the other Men's Bible Classes of Sanford, North Carolina. Honorable Clyde R. Hoey, governor of North Carolina was the guest speaker for the occasion. He was presented by A. H. McIver, teacher of the Loyal Bible Class as "North Carolina's great governor and favorite Sunday school teacher." Others having part on the program were Rev. F. Ervin Hyde, minister of the church in Sanford and Dr. Adams, a retired Methodist minister. The auditorium was crowded to its capacity.

PORTSMOUTH LADIES' AID.

The Ladies Aid Society of the First Christian Church, Portsmouth, Virginia, has had a most successful year.

Under the leadership of our efficient president, Mrs. J. E. Powell, the untiring efforts of the society have been rewarded, far beyond our expectations. A total of $497.97 has been raised, an increase of $126.81 over the previous year.

The fellowship enjoyed throughout the year has been as gratifying as the financial results, all of which shows what can be done when a group of women, regardless of number, work together for one cause.

MRS. R. F. EDWARDS,
Secretary.

NEWPORT.

A revival was held at the Newport Christian Church from September 6-17th. Rev. F. Ervin Hyde of Sanford, North Carolina did the preaching. He brought clear, impressive messages each night. As a visible result there were two conversions, but only God can know the real good that was done. Brother Hyde won his way into the hearts of the Newport people and they will always remember him with joy and be interested in his work. Our pastor, Rev. W. J. Andes, led the music, his sister, Clarence, and mother, Mrs. A. W. Andes, presided at the organ.

We thank God for the gospel messages and the confessions made, and pray that God will continue to convict men of sin and that they may come to Christ, the Saviour of the world.

SUFFOLK CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The Suffolk Christian Church closed its fiscal year at an annual conference Wednesday, October 7th, with records from all departments, and a showing of the increase both in membership and gifts. Mr. E. H. Rawls, church treasurer, made a report showing that through the current expense treasury there had been received during the year $10,806.05, and $4,425.00 through the building fund treasury, making a total of $15,231.05.

The missions of the church were as follows: Orphanage, $1,146.12; Home and Foreign Missions, $3,121.60; Elon College, $989.03; and to Superannuation, $152.51. Reports from the Sunday school, Ladies' Benevolent and Social Union, the Woman's Missionary Society, the W. W. Staley Missionary Society, and all departments and adult classes of the Sunday school will bring the total amount received into the church from all organizations to around $20,000.00, it was indicated.

A report was made by the pastor, which included the following items: Sermons and address during the year, 180; meetings attended, 503; personal conferences in the pastor's study, 208; books read during the year, besides the Bible, 50; wrote and published in the church paper, 28 sermons; married 33 couples; conducted 39 funerals; received 47 new members; and made 1,209 pastoral calls. The deacons reported the church in harmony and of progressive spirit.

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Pastor.

WORDS OF APPRECIATION.

Miss Jeannie L. Jillson, who recently visited churches and Women's Conferences in Virginia and North Carolina, writes on her departure, Richmond, Virginia, October 6th;

"Dear Dr. Atkinson:

I want to thank you very heartily for the arrangements you made for me these days in Virginia and North Carolina. Everyone has been so kind and so cordial and so interested in the Mission work. It has been a great pleasure to see the fine churches and know something of the work they are doing. It means so much, on coming to America, to find such an earnest Christian spirit. Sometimes we hear things about present day life in America that aren't very encouraging, but I shall certainly write back to those in Syria that God is leading life here just the same as ever and there is much to thank Him for.

"It has been a great pleasure to be in such delightful homes. I feel very grateful that I have been able to meet such earnest people.

"Thanking you, and all the others, very much for your great kindness,

JEANNIE L. JILLSON.

A CORRECTION PLEASE.

This week I read the Suffolk Letter, with interest, as I have done each week for many years.

I noted it was stated that the total offering of the Eastern Virginia Woman's Missionary Conference this year was $6,038.64—the largest amount raised by the Conference in one year during its history. Splendid—but this amount was exceeded by the regular offerings of 1926-27-29, and in 1928 it was exceeded by $1,676.76.

It was also stated by a number attending the Conference this year that the attendance of 385 was the largest on record. In 1929 there were 525 by actual count.

MRS. L. W. STAGG.
Norfolk, Va., Oct. 6, 1937.

A GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY OF SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHING.

On September 9, 1937 Mrs. M. J. White of 237 West Thirty-First Street, Norfolk, Virginia, and a member of the The Christian Temple completed fifty years of consecutive teaching in the Sunday School. This unusual record deserves recognition, and as her pastor I am taking this means of honoring this good woman, and of paying a tribute of respect to her and her work. In addition to this article, Mrs. White will be given special recognition at the morning service of worship on Sunday, October 19th, when a large and beautiful mirror and a pulpit lamp, the gifts of Mr. and Mrs. White will be presented to the church and received by the pastor.

Mrs. White whose maiden name was Lauretta Thompson was born on a farm in Arlington Precinct, Washington County, Nebraska, on September 9, 1870. Mrs. White is not sensitive about her age and she gave me this date. Incidentally it might be added that her enthusiasm and her activity give no indication of her age in years, and she has reason to be thankful for, and proud of, her age. When Mrs. White was twelve years of age, she was converted and joined the church. When she was thirteen, her father and mother and their three children migrated to north-western Nebraska, where they took up government land and established a home. Two years later, however, the Thompsons moved to Chadron, a near-by town with a progressive, pioneer spirit. There were several churches in the town, and Mrs. White cast her lot with the Methodist Episcopal Church. In 1887 she took a class of Junior age girls, and thus began her long and honorable career as a Sunday school teacher.

In 1888 Mrs. White came to Norfolk, and attended a private boarding school for girls, the Leache - Wood Seminary, which was then located on the corner of Granby Street and Freemason Street where the Southland Hotel now stands. While in Norfolk Dan Cupid shot one of his arrows which found its mark, and on January 15th, 1890 she became the bride of Mr. Draton Wright Odell. Mr. Odell was a member of the old Granby Street Methodist Church and his bride transferred her membership to his church. Shortly thereafter, however, the congregation of the Granby Street Church built what is now Epworth Church and Mr. and Mrs. Odell became members of that church. Mrs. Odell took a class of Junior girls in this church and thus began a long period of teaching in Norfolk Sunday school, a period reaching even up till the present time.

Mr. Odell passed away in 1904, leaving his widow with three children, a son, and two daughters to take care of. On June 30, 1909 Mrs. Odell became the wife of Mr. M. J. W. White, a member of the old Memorial Christian Temple, now a member of the Christian Temple and well-known by hundreds of members of the Congregational-Christian Church. Mrs. White again changed her membership so that she and her husband might have a common church home, and as was her custom, she again took a class, this time in the Begin-

OUR PRAYER.

By REV. EVERETT LESHNER.

O Thou Eternal Spirit, where Thou dost move troubled waters are stilled, the storms subside, order comes out of chaos, light out of darkness, harmony out of discord. As Thou didst move upon the chaos of things at the beginning of time, so do we pray that Thou wilt move upon our inner lives so often restive and troubled. Let there be wrought within us quiet miracles of grace that the surge of every temptation, the restlessness of uncertainty, the tumult of every sorrow may not have dominion over us. Give us peace, perfect peace. Bring peace upon the battlefield of conflicting desires. Silence the fervent cries of life-destroying fears of clashing motives and cross-purposes that there may come to us the beauty and power of a unified and well-organized life. O Thou Eternal Spirit, move upon our inner lives and bring harmony out of discord.

As we would pray for ourselves, so do we raise suppliant voices to Thee to move upon the chaos of human relationships. Bring peace and harmony into the troubled homes of the world. Put to shame the spirit of selfishness and acquisitiveness that is reeking havoc in the field of industry and commerce. Let Thy Spirit move upon strained international relations, upon the ugly spectacles of inter-racial ill will, upon the arrogance of every oppression, every injustice, that order may come out of disorder, light out of darkness. O Thou Eternal Spirit, move upon the chaos of human relationships and Thine shall be the Kingdom, the Power, and the Glory, forever and ever. Amen.

ner's Department, but later changing to the Primary Department. When the Memorial Christian Temple was merged with the Third Christian Church, Mrs. White became a teacher in that Church, and when the state-ly Christian Temple was built, Mrs. White continued as a teacher in the Primary Department without a break. Thus it is that in September she completed fifty years as a Sunday school teacher in the Children's Division of the Church school.

In addition to her duties as a teacher, Mrs. White has been active in other phases of church work. She has been a regular attendant at the services of the church, a custom which alas too many Sunday school teachers have not adopted. She has been, and is, Superintendent of the Cradle Roll of the Sunday school and the Missionary Cradle Roll, which have a unified program. Mrs. White has identified herself in an intimate and vital way with all the phases of the work of the church, and by her consistent life and her constant service, as well as by her gifts of substance and self, she has made a large contribution to the church and to the kingdom of God.

Who can estimate or even imagine the influence of the life of this good woman? Think of the great host of boys and girls who have come under her influence as a teacher in the Sunday school and as a Christian in the community! If it is true that first impressions are usually lasting impressions, think of the lasting contribution for good which she has made to the lives of these boys and girls, and through them to the Kingdom. They were, to be sure, young children, and they undoubtedly do not remember what she told them in actual words, but they could never get away from what she told them in letters written out in human life and love. A great multitude will rise up and call her blessed. As she looks back over the years may she rejoice that God has given her this great privilege, and may she have in her heart the rich blessing which Christ has for those who have been faithful to their trust. And may she look forward in the years to come that please the Father may be many, to a continued and rich fruitfulness in His service.

As was stated above, Mr. and Mrs. White have given Christian Temple a large mirror which will make it possible for the members of the choir and the minister to see each other to a better advantage, and an attractive and dignified pulpit lamp. The Church receives with sincere appreciation these tokens of the love of these faithful members, and these reminders of their abiding interest in the church.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgement and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

THE PRESIDENT SPEAKS.

At Chicago last week the President of the United States surprised the world by speaking out boldly concerning international affairs. In his characteristic directness he told of conditions in certain unnamed countries where treaties and agreements are being broken and inhuman warfare carried on. It was easy for Germany, Italy, and Japan to see that he was talking about them. Naturally they did not like what the President said, and Germany reminded the President that Woodrow Wilson spoke to the mass of humanity over the heads of national leaders, and that he was unable to carry through the things he undertook. England, France, China, and the other League of Nations found great encouragement in the words of our President.

With equal clarity the President said that we need not expect to be spared if the world becomes involved in war. His reasoning was clear and accurate. If stronger nations are allowed to gobble up weaker ones whenever and wherever they like, if peaceful peoples are to be destroyed by bombs, bullets and gas whenever war-lovers like, then the seas which surround America will be no protection for the women and children here any more than the mountains of Ethiopia and the walls of China have been for those countries in recent years.

It is the opinion of this paper that public opinion will sustain the President as he undertakes to work out plans based on the principles of the Chicago address. Our country wants peace. It is absolutely opposed to war. It wants peace badly enough to work and sacrifice for peace. If the nations decide to "quarantine" those peoples who make war, the people of America will gladly make the necessary sacrifices in order to help. A "hands-off" non-cooperative policy does not seem to be enough to curb the hands of the destroyer. And the destroyer must be curbed, or else civilization will be lost. More power to the President as he works for peace.

OUR CHINESE MISSIONS.

The invasion of China by the Japanese has badly upset the mission work of all denominations in China. Our own Dr. Rawlinson, one of the best friends China had, was killed in the early days of the conflict. Our government has asked that Americans leave the danger zones as rapidly as possible. Most of the wives and children of missionaries have left, but many of the missionaries wish to stay.

This makes a very difficult situation. No missionary wishes to involve his government in the least bit of trouble. He is neutral. His job is not to sustain any government, but rather to minister to humanity. Most missionaries and mission boards do not ask the home government for protection. They are at work for the King of kings and the Lord of lords and look to Him for guidance and help. This does not totally relieve the home government of responsibility, for the missionaries are still citizens of their own country and the country must protect its citizenship.

On the other hand, it seems cowardly for missionaries to leave when difficulties arise. They have preached and practiced sacrifice; they have told the natives how to overcome difficulties. Then if they seek for safety at the first sign of trouble, the preaching doesn't seem to tally with practice. When war comes destitution and death come with it. Mission property is often destroyed; the homes and lives of the natives brought down to dust. It is then that the missionary is needed to bring comfort, health and help to those who have recently learned a bit concerning Christianity and the Christ way of life. It is not surprising, therefore, that missionaries stand by while the armies battle back and forth even though their friends in the homeland might bid them seek for shelter elsewhere.

It is difficult for us to know just what is happening in China. We do not know that some of our people had to leave which increases the expenses of our Mission Board. We know that many have had to give more time for relief work, that the regular schedules are blown to pieces by the bombs that burst in the air and "the destruction that wasteth at noonday." We do not know that most of our missionaries are sticking close to their places taking the risk and proving to be faithful servants of the Lord Jesus who shunned not the way of the cross. Their loyalty and sacrifice should certainly bring us to a humble realization that we, too, can share in a larger way in making the world Christian.

SUCCESSFUL CHURCHES.

As the conferences meet and reports are read, there doubtless will be a desire to see which are the successful churches and which have failed. Two things will probably enter into the estimate: First, how much money have they raised? Second, how many churches have been added to the rolls? At first glance this may seem to be a fairly accurate test. The amount of contributions does indicate something of the loyalty of the membership. But a few of our churches have a quota that is anyway commensurate with the ability of the members to give. A budget may be paid in full and mean but little to the group because the budget was much too small. In like manner new names may be added to the roll while many who have joined before are lost to the church without an effort to keep them active.

A successful church is one that is growing a new generation of church members who will have a larger vision, a greater desire to serve and a holy passion for making the world Christ-like. It is not the number who attend Sunday school that matters most, but rather what is happening to those who do attend. It is not the long list of names on the roll that changes a community; it is the Christ-like effort on the part of those who are faithful to make (Continued on page 15.)

The Future Outlook of the Young Minister

By REV. J. EVERETTE NEESE.

I am sure that you will agree with me when I say that every known profession in existence in our modern world has as its outlook a bright and prosperous future for the man or woman who has prepared themselves well.

Medicine, Law, Surgery, and the many other professions of our day have never offered to the young entrant a greater opportunity or a brighter future than it now offers. The ministry is by no means different from the other professions with respect to its opportunities. I hesitate, however, in referring to the ministry as a profession, because it is not exactly a profession but a grand and noble calling. It is true, however, that the ministry falls within the realm of those who pursue some definite line of work; therefore, to some degree, it actually is a profession. Wherever I am and whenever I refer to the ministry as a profession, I do it with all the reverence I possess.

The opportunities which the ministry now offers are greater than those which confronted any generation of ministers prior to this one. The outlook for the young minister is bright because his field of service is broader than that of his predecessors.

First, there is the opportunity for service within the realm of Society.

It seems that the Social order has, to a marked degree, lost its sense of consciousness and responsibility. It seems to be a day when anything goes. Since society, seemingly, has become corrupt, it appears that the rank and file of ministers are saying "We'll keep hands off," so they wrap their cloak of self-righteousness about themselves and play "hands off." The young minister sees the folly of this act. He sees that new social order will never be created until he and the thousands of other young men who profess Christ and who follow Him first plant within society the high moral tone and the profound Christian standards of the Church of Christ. Society is still needing leaders and we young ministers hope and pray that we shall be able to inculcate into the social mind the true standards of a follower of Christ, as we feel that this is the only means of Salvation for our present social order.

The young minister is endeavoring to incorporate into his life a portion of the concern for social betterment that so gripped the life of Russel H. Conwell that it caused him to give himself for the uplift of society. Conwell toured the country, lecturing to thousands, endeavoring to establish in the heart of the social order the high moral standards of life, and to give the degraded of society a new outlook on life. Through his lectures, Conwell was able to do this and even more. His lectures were such pieces of art and eloquence that they resulted in social changes for, not only the good of the state, but the nation as a whole. A leading lecturer had this to say about his lectures: "So many villages have become cities in consequence of your lectures; so many individuals and societies started to do something for their town; so many manufacturing enterprises were begun by your hearers; so many rivers harnessed and banks started; so many schools and colleges opened; so many churches founded and others built; so many young men and women started into study; so many discouraged men began again; so many found wealth in their own 'back yards,' so many books written; so many charitable institutions begun; so many orators sent to the platform; so many of our best teachers sent into schools; so many reforms made triumphant; indeed so much good was done by those lectures that I stand amazed at the accumulation."

Dr. Conwell saw a place for service in society and by the help of God he served and served well. The young minister of today, also, sees the need of Christian service in the social order and he, too, by the help of God plans to establish therein Christian Principles. The social order needs religion as much and as often as you and I need oxygen.

George A. Buttrick quotes Dr. A. B. Belden as saying, "If religion ends with the individual, it ends." To a very marked degree this is true. If the religion of Christ with its high ethical standards ends with me, it ends. I feel it my responsibility as a young minister of the Gospel, to give to the Social order a part of that in which I have found peace of heart and satisfaction of Soul. The only cure for the constant irritated sore of the social order is Christ and His principles, and as a young minister, I deem it my responsibility and my service to give society that which it really needs.

"Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for a friend," and that friend, whether he be yours or mine, is, undoubtedly, a member of the social order. Thus, the outlook for the young minister within the realm of service to Society is bright.

In addition to service in the Social order, the young minister of today, also, sees the need for service within the realm of politics.

The fact that Politics, to a large extent, is corrupt, is no longer disputed by the rank and file of men. Graft, bribery, selfishness, and the many other sins of our political order, are conditions which you have seen repeated again and again, yet you have taken no definite stand to eradicate.

The young minister possesses eyes of optimism. His youthful vision is so great that he sees a new political world for tomorrow's civilization. He believes that the creation of this new political world is going to come about when the young Christians of today, shoulder their responsibility and cast their influence for the man who holds the highest moral and religious principles.

Christianity must fairly and squarely face this political problem. It is as much a part of its task as that of service through medical aid. The young minister sees this responsibility in a light far different from that in which his predecessor saw it. The need for Christian participation in politics is, undoubtedly, more apparent today than it was three, two, or even one decade ago.

Society, as a whole, has become more closely knit. Thus, the problem confronting one group becomes the universal problem in which all are concerned.

We can no longer tolerate the taboo which some religious leaders have placed on (Continued on page 7.)

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The attention of the Pastors and Church Secretaries of the Eastern Virginia Conference is called to the Conference Apportionments for this year. For the first time the Orphanage is included in the Conference Apportionments. By referring to the Apportionment Table printed in the last issue of The Christian Annual, the Orphanage Apportionment for the various churches of the Eastern Virginia Conference may be found.

The Report blanks will be sent out to Pastors and Church Secretaries within a few days. In filling out the item for the Orphanage Apportionment the churches are each entitled to credit themselves with contributions from the Sunday school, Sunday school classes, Thanksgiving Offering, and all other offerings for the Orphanage sent in during the Conference year—1936 - 1937. Any amounts sent to the Conference for the Orphanage should be properly designated in the same manner as the other items of the Conference Apportionments. This item has identically the same method of accounting in the report and in the amount sent to the Conference as the other apportionments.

Emphasis should be made of the importance of raising all the Apportionments if possible. It is imperative that the Conference Fund and the Convention Fund should be raised in full. These two funds are not more important than the other enterprises but they are essential to the payment of the actual operating expenses of the Conferences and the Convention. The Apportionments suggested for these two Funds are barely large enough to meet the necessary expenses if they are paid in full. If they are not paid in full there is no other method at hand to meet these expenses. These expenses are a fixed contract and should have first consideration. As long as the Conferences have to pay for The Christian Annual and the Convention is responsible for a large part of the expense of printing THE CHRISTIAN SUN, it is imperative to raise the full quota for Conference and Convention Fund. Other Convention enterprises object to this emphasis, but objection does not satisfy the matter nor pay honest obligations made by the Convention and the Conferences.

All churches should pay the Conference Apportionments in full. And all Pastors and delegates should attend the Annual Conference during the entire session of that body. For several years a number of Pastors have reached the Conference late on the first day, or have left before the Conference adjourns on the last day. Nothing, except sickness or death, should interfere with a Pastor's attendance. And it should be the sacred duty of laymen to be faithful in attending their Conference, if they are honored by election as delegates. The kingdom of God should be first in a Christian's life. Many people say: "I am too busy. I cannot go." That excuse will not be acceptable when the death angel knocks at your room. It is usually a confession that personal matters are more important to you than the business of the Kingdom of God. Put God first and you can find time to attend to the business of your church.

It is not too late to make an honest effort to meet your Conference Apportionments. And current expenses should be paid in full also. The Pastor will be happier at Conference if his salary is paid up to date. And the church will be proud of this achievement. Churches should meet their current expenses promptly every month. There is no excuse for getting six months behind every year. It is so much easier and more satisfactory to all concerned to pay every month. If the Pastor's work is not worth the salary promised he should be retired, or he should withdraw from the field. Usually that is not the reason why so many churches are lax in keeping up their current expenses. It is simply a matter of carelessness and neglect. People attend church more faithfully when they pay promptly. Churches are always happier when they properly attend to the financial business of the kingdom.

THE ELON COLLEGE CLUB.

Last fall, it was the privilege of Elon College to welcome to her campus as visiting preacher for the regular Sunday morning service, Rev. Robert Lee House, pastor of the First Congregational - Christian Church, Portsmouth, Virginia. The day was ideal, the sermon was great, and the spirit of the service was most helpful. Mr. House was so impressed with the spirit of the campus, and the atmosphere of the church service in particular, that he said that every church in the Convention ought to learn something about Elon College first-hand, that representatives of every church should sometime during the year visit Elon College, and share in the Sunday morning service. He suggested that local churches organize groups, who would visit the College over the weekend, by appointment, and otherwise acquaint themselves with their own church school.

This was a most practical and helpful suggestion. It is the hope of the Administration that such a plan may soon be put into effect, and that we may have the opportunity of welcoming representatives from our local churches for our Sunday service.

Mr. House also stated that in his opinion it was the duty of every local church to put itself squarely back of the College, or help in every way possible. The College needs financial support, but it also needs the support of its constituency, church, and alumni, in extending the influence and usefulness of the College, particularly within the church. As a result of Mr. House's impression, he undertook to do something definitely for the College, in his own church. He organized what he called the Elon College Club. The Club in the Portsmouth church, which is the first of its kind, was organized in January. Among other things, it proposed to carry the claims of Elon College to the high school graduates of its membership, and others who were not members of the local church, and this they did most effectively. The Club was organized in the home of Brother C. W. Parker, with fifteen charter members. Miss Dorothy Edwards was elected president, Miss Doris Newbold, vice-president, and Mr. Charles Parker, secretary-treasurer. When the time came for enrollment at Elon College for 1937-38, the Portsmouth club got busy. As a result, there are fourteen young people from Portsmouth enrolled in Elon College this year. The president of the Club, Miss Edwards, and the secretary of the Club, Mr. Parker, are members of our Freshman Class. There is no question but that the Elon Club in the Portsmouth church has had its effect and has borne fruit for the College, which means that in the future this effort on the part of the Club will bear dividends for the local church. The Club is a very simple organization and has very definite responsibilities.

I would like to express my great appreciation to my good friends, Brother House, the pastor, and to the membership of the Portsmouth church for manifesting concretely this interest in their College. There are something like two hundred churches in the Convention, supposed to be supporting Elon College. If these two hundred churches would each organize an Elon College Club, the church would immediately know more about the College, and be in a position to do definitely more for it. The organization would not only be beneficial to the College, but would be beneficial to the church itself. It would give to its young people something to do that would really appeal to them. They are interested in the church, to be sure, but they are also interested in anything that has for its purpose their own enlightenment, culture, and advancement. Elon College is our school. It was built for the young people of our church. It exists today for the young people of our church. If the adult members of the church would manifest an interest and give the young people some encouragement, the interest of the College would immediately be greatly enhanced.

We are exceedingly anxious that everyone interested in the College may have first-hand knowledge of her present program and what is actually being done on the campus. We are putting emphasis upon mental and physical training, but we are also emphasizing the necessity of religion in the advancement and development of the individual. We are indebted to the Portsmouth Church for organizing the first Elon College Club, and we are happy to have two of the officials of the Club as members of our Freshman Class. It is the hope of the College that others of our church may follow the example of the Portsmouth Church and report the organization of a club within their membership.

THE FUTURE OUTLOOK OF THE YOUNG MINISTER.

politics. The day has come when religious leaders must participate in politics and endeavor to bring about reform.

The young minister does not favor bringing of the Church into politics, that is, the bringing of the high moral tone of the Church, the Christian principles which it advocates, and the observance of the Golden Rule, within the realm of Politics.

The so-called religious sects of Christ's day, the Scribes, the Pharisees, the Sadducees, and the Herodians—received small courtesies and sympathy at His hands. He denounced them with an invective unmatched in any other recorded utterance of man. He had a high moral standard and never lowered it for any one. If he saw evil in a particular act, He denounced it and went about purifying the "order" in which he had found the evil. The young minister of today realizes the inestimable value of a life of sincerity and conformity to purpose and he, too, in the face of present evils is doing all he can to eliminate them and establish in their place worthwhile principles.

The young minister realizes that God made man and endowed him with certain inalienable characteristics and powers. Every one of these, even the least of these powers, is divine. Therefore, he is conscious of his task in life and purposes in his heart to serve and serve well. The young minister of today is very much in sympathy with Charles E. Jefferson's philosophy when Jefferson says:

"I have looked the whole planet over and I see no man, save Jesus only, who is able to take away the sin of the world. I have observed the great religions of the day and I know that it's Christ or Nobody. He has no competition in the field. No one else has the slightest chance of winning the homage of the entire human race. More and more He is to me what He was to Saul of Tarsus—the image of the invisible God.' More and more He is to me what He was to John and those He loved—'God made manifest in the flesh.' More and more He is to me what He Himself claimed to be, the eternal Son of the living God. To know him is indeed life eternal. To work with Him in

THE TRAGEDY IN CHINA.

Apparently the Japanese have determined to gain control of China or of the northern provinces. Impartial observers who have followed the events that led up to the present conflict can see no justification for Japan's invasion of China. The excuse offered is the Japanese desire for economic development, their determination to suppress anti-Japanese feeling, and a desire to combat the communistic influence of Russia. They have taken a strange method for accomplishing these purposes. The first end might have been gained by friendly agreement and cooperation, the second aim is thwarted and made more impossible by each new invasion of China's territory and by utter disregard of China's sovereign rights. The third aim—to destroy communistic influence in China—can scarcely be achieved by methods that stir up the spirit of communism and seem to give reason for its promotion.

Japan feels conscious of her military strength and evidently thinks herself to defy the public opinion of the world. Her military party is ambitious to carry out its program, without much regard for justice. It is reported on good authority that ninety per cent of the Japanese are opposed to the invasion of China, but the people are kept in ignorance of the real situation by very strict censorship of the war news. Japanese Christians, and others with more enlightened and pacific ideals, are greatly disturbed over the aggressive policies of the military party that now rules Japan. These policies destroy the beneficial effects of the friendly advances made by such Japanese Christian leaders as Dr. Toyohiko Kagawa and Miss Michi Kawai. Apparently Japanese military leaders feared that China was growing in strength and was becoming united under the able Christian leadership of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek and so determined to strike while there was more likelihood of being able to achieve their purpose.

The modern war machine of Japan is much more perfect and complete than that of China. Airplanes make it possible to carry destruction far inland, and there seems little effort on the part of the Japanese to limit destruction to the enemy fortifications and military forces. Already many thousands of non-combatants have been killed and wounded and peaceful villages have been destroyed by ruthless Japanese airplane attacks. Foreigners and foreign enterprises have also suffered. In the north Japanese forces have occupied Peiping and Tientsin and are pushing their campaign north to the Great Wall and south to the Yellow River. Without any declaration of war, Shanghai has been attacked with warships, airplanes and cannon. Even the International Settlement has suffered and many educational and missionary institutions have been bombed. The Chinese troops have offered brave and determined resistance in spite of their inferior equipment. They have now retired to their second line of defense on the west of Shanghai.

What will be the outcome of this invasion of China, no one can foresee. China is too great a nation and too large a territory to be conquered in a short time. The Japanese attacks have united Chinese as never before, even communists offering their service to the Nanking Government. China is fighting for her life and for the principles set forth by Dr. Sun Yat Sen, the father of the Chinese Republic.

The warfare is naturally affecting the missionary work in China. Reports come that the people in war areas are filled with fear and that there are signs of religious revival in many places. Christians meet to worship, in spite of danger, and pray earnestly for the guidance and strengthening of their needs.—From Missionary Review of The World.

NEWS FROM MRS. JAY.

The conference year is closed, conference is over, and the year, September 30, 1936 - September 30, 1937, is history. Was it the best year in every way that we could make it? Did we put forth our best effort to broaden our work and to spread the missionary cause through education, giving, and praying? Several new resolutions have come in through the news items and we hope these resolves along with others in every society will materialize into great fruits for our conference and convention work. In many ways this has been a banner year, but there is always room for improvement and growth and the society that stands still will surely slip backward. Let's all push forward and in this trying, unsettled time try to make Christ felt more and more throughout our churches. There is a great work to be accomplished.

HOLY NECK.

Under the leadership of Miss Allie Lee Norfleet, superintendent, and Miss Selma Jones, assistant, the Juniors of Holy Neck Christian Church have completed a good year's work. More responsibility was put on the children in presenting their programs and presiding over the meetings.

They raised their apportionment in full, every member contributed to the Silver Jubilee Fund, and names were recorded in the anniversary book.

Interesting programs based on the year's study books were rendered and a public program was given at the church.

WAKEFIELD.

The Woman's Society of the Wakefield Christian Church has enjoyed a most encouraging year under the leadership of Mrs. P. J. Holmes, president. The attendance has been good, the interest keen, and all the points on the Standard of Excellence have been met.

This Society observed the World Day of Prayer in February and each month very interesting programs have been presented.

Several members attended the Silver Jubilee at the Suffolk Christian Church on May 13th and a special observance of the Anniversary was held at the church some weeks before.

The mission study books have been used and eight members attended the Book Review given at Suffolk.

Three new members were enrolled. Mrs. R. L. Murphy is the secretary of this group of women who are striving to make mission work stronger.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church"

MISS EMILY CARLETON, Editor, 541 Osceola Ave., Winter Park, Fla.

HELPS FOR MISSIONARY LEADERS.

For the past few months Mission Superintendents of the various Conference Pilgrim and Youth Fellowships have, in cooperation with the officers of the Missionary Conferences, given much time, thought, and work in an effort to promote missionary education and giving among all young people's groups, regardless of whatever organization they may have. This group of leaders believes, with Dr. Herbert W. Gates, that "any person who is dominated by the divine spirit inevitably becomes a witness of the gospel in his own home, in his neighborhood, in the community where he lives, and to the ends of the earth wherever human contacts are possible. The lack of such witnessing raises a fair question as to the depth and vitality of one's Christian experience." Wherever there is a young people's group, a program of missionary education and giving should be carried forward, whether it be in the Sunday school class, Christian Endeavor Society, Missionary Society, or some club.

Too often groups of young people fail in their missionary task because of the lack of a leader, and especially a trained leader. Every group had an opportunity the past summer to have one or more of its members take a course in missionary methods and materials under Reverend Raymond Dudley, missionary to India, in his various summer conferences held. Our Mission Superintendents did what they could to advertise this course and encourage attendance. The young people everywhere responded, and Mr. Dudley had a fine class in each conference. The young people came from those classes inspired, enthusiastic, and eager to get back to their local groups to put into effect their new ideas.

Missionary leaders in Eastern Virginia again have an opportunity to learn new ideas of methods and materials in the Leadership Training Schools which will be held in Norfolk and Suffolk October 11-22 and in Waverly October 24-29. Fellowship Mission Superintendents requested the Deans of the schools to include a course in Missions. They not only complied with the request, but secured Dr. John L. Lobingier, Secretary of the Department of World Fellowship, Boston, Massachusetts, to teach this course in all three schools. "Missionary Education In the Church," by Herbert W. Gates is the textbook which will be used. It is hoped that the young people within reach of these schools will respond to this great opportunity to learn more about their missionary task from such a man as Dr. Lobingier.

To aid leaders in arranging interesting, attractive, instructive, and inspirational programs this year, a packet of World Service and various free materials was furnished the key-worker of every church in the various Fellowship meetings held the past summer. What is being done with this material? Wherever there is a Missionary society, it should be used by this society. Where there is no Missionary society but a Christian Endeavor society or club, it should be used by the missionary committee of this society or club. Where there is no organized society or club, it should be used by the Sunday school class.

The programs and study for the fall months should be on the topic, "The Church In Rural America." All free material available on this subject has been furnished. Additional material may be secured as follows:

"The Missionary Herald at Home and Abroad," our denominational monthly, $1.25 a year, 14 Beacon St., Boston. The September, 1937, number has to do chiefly with the theme, "The Church in Rural America."

"The Pilgrim Highroad," young people's monthly magazine, $1.25 a year, 14 Beacon St., Boston. Three of the Christian Life topic discussions and several articles in the October, 1937, number are on the theme: "The Church in Rural America."

"Highland Heritage," the current young people's home mission study book by Edwin E. White, pastor of our church at Pleasant Hill. In paper covers, 60c. Missions Council, 287 Fourth Ave., New York; 14 Beacon St., Boston.

"In the Highlands of the South" (53 colored slides). An account of what our churches are doing in the region which is being served by the TVA through home mission churches, Pleasant Hill Academy and the John C. Campbell Folk School at Brasstown, North Carolina. These slides are loaned without charge, but the user pays transportation both ways. Missions Council, 287 Fourth Avenue, New York.

An arrangement has been made by which Miss Ruth Seabury, Secretary of the Education Department of the American Board, Boston, Massachusetts, will introduce the study books for the young people of North Carolina, Eastern Virginia, and the Valley of Virginia sometime in January or February. The definite time and place of these meetings will be announced later.

MURDER AT THE STEERING WHEEL.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC
FOR OCTOBER 24, 1937.

Daily Readings—

Monday—Death By Accident—Luke 13: 4, 5.

Tuesday—Avoid Murder—I Peter 4: 15

Wednesday—The Mark of Cain—On the Car—Genesis 4: 3-15.

Thursday—Death On Horseback—II Samuel 18: 9.

Friday—Slaughter of the Innocents—Matt. 2: 16-18.

Saturday—Charging Chariots—Nahum 2: 4.

There are some who would object to discussing this topic in a religious meeting. But such meetings are places where moral questions should be given consideration. If we should think, we would all agree that this topic is of vital moral importance.

More than thirty thousand people are killed in our country by automobiles. More than a million others are injured, while nearly one hundred thousand are left with some permanent injury as a result of automobile accidents. This is the horror of our modern highway. A few of these accidents may be unavoidable, but the large majority of fatal accidents are due to carelessness, taking unnecessary risks, drinking, and other avoidable causes. Those who are responsible for unnecessary accidents in which death occurs are guilty of murder.

A boy was once boasting that he drove a car full of young people as fast as ninety miles an hour. This boy was a public menace to those in the car and those on the road. What should young people do when riding in a car when the driver goes that fast? What is the religious way of driving, with reference to speed, passing cars, and other phases of driving?

Christians should emphasize these major points:

1. Self-control.
2. Consideration for others.
3. Respect for human life.

Help make America a safer place to worship, work, and play. Each society should support "safe driving" campaigns. Encourage the idea that "it's smart to be safe."

Suggested Hymns—

"O God, Our Help in Ages Past."

"Amid Life's Busy Hurrying Throng."

Prayer Hymn—

CHRISTIAN SPEECH AND CONDUCT.

LESSON III—OCTOBER 17, 1937.

GOLDEN TEXT: Let no corrupt speech proceed out of your mouth.—Ephesians 4: 29.

LESSON: James, Chapter 3.

The author of this epistle was a brother of Jesus, but there is but very little about Christ in the epistle. It is a very practical exposition, however, of what the life in Christ will express in daily contacts and conduct. It is a kind of Proverbs of the New Testament.

The Responsibility of Teaching.

James warns against being too ambitious about being a teacher from motives. Teaching others involves a tremendous responsibility. Jesus said "Whosoever will do and teach these things"—teaching involves practicing what we preach. Those who teach are supposed to know more than those whom they teach. Those who know more are supposed to do better. Let every teacher take heed unto himself how he walks.

The Untamed Tongue.

In one of the most striking and most practical ways James writes about the tongue. He goes even so far as to say if a man does not offend or "stumble" in word, he is a perfect man, and able to control all the other impulses and passions of the body. He draws an analogy between the tongue and the bit of a bridle by which we tame and guide a wild horse, or the rudder of a ship by which a huge ship is guided and controlled, even during a storm. In each case the controlling factor is comparatively small, but tremendously important and absolutely essential.

So like-wise is the tongue. It is a little member—the tongue is insignificantly small as compared with some of the other members of the body. But according to James it is far and away the most influential. There is wrapped up in it infinite possibilities for evil and for good. It may be likened to a small fire, even a spark, which may start a wholesale conflagration. One thinks, perhaps of Mrs. O'Leary's cow kicking over a lantern and starting the destructive Chicago fire, or a careless camper dropping a cigarette stump and setting a whole forest on fire. Sometimes a word, just one word becomes a devastating and destructive influence. The tongue can boast of great things. Some of the world's most historic events have been due directly to the work of the tongue. James says the tongue is a fire, and that it can defile the whole body. Indeed, there are times when the tongue is set on fire by hell itself. The devil has no more effective weapon than he can wield than a tongue devoted to his service.

In fact James says that, although men have tamed every kind of beast and birds, even the wildest of them, mankind has not been able to tame the tongue. "The tongue can no man tame"—only divine grace can give a man control over his tongue. "It is a restless evil, it is full of deadly poison." These are strong words, but James' experience and observation, and the history of the tongue bear them out. Lives have been blighted, homes broken, reputations ruined, character despoiled, fortunes lost, hearts broken, nations antagonized, souls lost because of the tongue. No wonder the Psalmist said "Set a watch, O Jehovah before my mouth; keep the door of my lips."

But, of course, there is another side of the picture. The tongue can be a blessing as well as a curse. As Dr. Buttrick says, "Words are personality articulate. Words born in the soul's silence are among earth's mightiest tools—a brush to paint a picture, a chisel to carve motives, a battering ram to break down walls of oppression, a compass to guide the traveler, and a light to pierce the soul's gloom." By words men have been moved to endure hardship, undertake the difficult, to give themselves in service to others. Words can bring cheer and comfort and courage to others. Words can woo and win men to Christ. Words are among earth's mightiest forces for good. Paul sums up the matter when he enjoins his readers to "let no corrupt communication proceed out of your mouths, but such as is good for edifying." And Jesus urged his hearers to keep their hearts with all diligence for out of it were the issues of life. A fountain can give sweet, pure water only as the fountain itself is cleansed. Only as Christ cleanses the inner life can we be sure that the words of our mouths will be acceptable in His sight, and helpful to others.

HELPS FOR LEADERS.

The Pilgrim Fellowship has accepted no definite missionary project this year, nor has any effort been made to get all young people's groups to accept apportionments. All groups, however, have been requested to contribute to Missions and to do this through any channel they deem wise. The giving of money is, and ought to be, an expression of interest. If a proper program of missionary education is carried on by every young people's group, the knowledge of certain activities and new interests aroused will naturally find expression in gifts of money for these causes. The time and effort spent in arranging interesting, attractive, instructive and inspirational programs and holding study classes this year will determine how much the young people of the Southeast will contribute to Missions.

The Master has said, "Go, ye," and the helps are available. What shall we do about it?

PERMANENT FAITHFULNESS.

"Thy faithfulness wilt thou establish in the very heavens."—Ps. 89:2.

Men are not long in discovering how frail is human faithfulness. We make the best investments we can, and they become worthless. We build fine houses, and they crumble into dust. We buy costly friendships which we had thought immutable but they prove treacherous.

But there is a faithfulness upon which we can rely. It is not founded on the earth, but has its foundations in the changeless heavens. It is not established by man, but by God, who is the same yesterday, today, and forever.

In these shifting times it is good to look away from the varying values and revolutionary contortions of human institutions to these firm establishments of Jehovah. Fixing our gaze upon them, we are saved from endless anxieties and uncertainties.

Prayer—Who is our Rock but Thee, O God? We flee to the stronghold of our faith, and are at rest. Amen.
—Amos R. Wells.

TUESDAY.

RAPTURE AND FAITHFULNESS.

"Ye are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you."—Jno. 15:14.

Christian living has its raptures and ecstasies but rapture and ecstasy will not take us through. "Life is duty."

There is rapture and ecstasy with two lovers. But visit them at their home after their marriage and you will find them busy with the chores that the home and business demand, with only a small leisure for guests. Their rapture now is that of making home-life a success. The devotion of their hearts for one another is now expressed in duty well done, and they prove their affections for one another in doing their best.

Christian living has its hours of rapture but it is the faithful doing of Christ's commands that makes us happy in the end.

Prayer—Our Father, Thou knowest that we love Thee. Help us this day to show that love by our works. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

FAITHFULNESS TO THE END.

"He that endureth to the end, the same shall be saved."—Mk. 13:13.

The scripture from which this text is taken is a description of hardships and trials that a Christian will experience. It is followed by the promise of victory and salvation.

Many begin earnestly the Christian life, but they fall by the wayside because they did not endure.

Salvation is a matter of endings as well as beginnings and to be steadfast and finish the course and keep the faith to the end is not so easy. We must cultivate endurance. We must plant patience. We must persevere. We must not be diverted from our course. "Let us run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith.

Prayer—Our Father, we can not live right without Thee. Bless our souls with Thy guidance, Thy strength, Thy courage, and Thy endurance. We ask it for Jesus' sake. Amen.

THURSDAY.

THE PERFECT GENTLEMAN.

"(He) dwelt among us, full of grace and truth."—St. John 1:14.

We sometimes hear it said of one, "He is good at heart but he has weaknesses." We have heard it said, "He is strong in doctrine but weak in manners." These sayings refer to those who have high ideals and mean well but who are more or less disagreeable, ill-tempered, and uncharitable. In their weaknesses the good that they would do is nullified.

Jesus was regarded always as gracious, considerate, winsome, and a perfect gentleman. Under all circumstances and conditions, he was "full of grace and truth."

Christians show the graciousness of Christ. They are always kindly, gentle and considerate. This is the normal expression of the indwelling Spirit.

Prayer—Dear Lord, forgive us for our bad manners and lack of graciousness and the loveliness of our Saviour. Amen.

FRIDAY.

ONE WHOM CHILDREN LOVED.

"Suffer little children . . . to come unto me . . . for such is the kingdom of heaven."—Matt. 19:14.

There is an engraving of the British artist Sullivan which portrays Jesus on the shore of Galilee, surrounded by little children. A couple are in His lap, one is tugging at His hand, another has clasped Him about the knee; all are taking familiar liberties with Him.

Blessed is he whom little children love and trust. We are glad for all the comfort that little children bring to the stressful life. We are glad that their love, their implicit trust and confidences, their innocency and sweetness represent a character we all must have in the kingdom of God.

Prayer—Our Father, we would come to Thee in simplicity, sincerity and utter trust, and be unto Thee as far as possible, as little children. Amen.

SATURDAY.

HOW TO BE ALWAYS RIGHT.

"The way of the righteous is made plain."—Prov. 15:19.

It has been said, "It is never wrong to be right." That is a good motto. Does it need any further explanation?

Life has many perplexities, many ways and by-ways, temptations and destructions, trials and tribulations. There are times when one scarcely knows what is right. However, old paths are clearly marked, true friends are many and all good and honest people are for us. "The way is so clear," says the Lord, "that a way-faring man, though a fool, need not err." If we can remember this text, "The way of the righteous is made plain," and live that way, divine revelation will guide us in the right. "It is never wrong to be right."

Prayer—Our Father, Thy Word is a "lamp unto our feet and a light unto our pathway." Though distant scenes may be hidden from us, lead us in the right way. Amen.

SUNDAY.

GOD'S SURE DESTINIES.

"What I do thou knowest not now, but thou shalt know hereafter."—Jno. 3:7.

We read from Amos R. Well's writings, just before his death, his own point of view of the destinies of this world being in the hands of God. Despite afflictions, hard times, distresses beyond understanding, and despite the fact that no economist or statesman, philosopher, or anybody else, is able to point the way out; he said, "God is doing something with this world." It was plain to him that some power beyond mortal understanding, was shaping the destinies of things. That power, of course, was God.

Whatever it is that God is doing with humanity, we are certain that He is pleased with His children who can say, even as Christ said on the cross, "not my will but Thine be done."

Prayer—Our Father, Thou doest all things well. Let us be Thine and Thy submissive children always. Amen.

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D., Pastor.

THE UNRECOGNIZED GALILEAN.

By REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D.

"Who art thou? . . . 'I am Jesus.'"—Acts 9:5.

A little more than ten years ago there came down out of the blue sky above Paris, France, a youth who said, "I am Charles Lindberg." They were looking for Charles Lindberg, for he had been on his way for thirty-three hours, and had been coming over three thousand miles. He was alone, but for his indomitable courage and his tough little plane. He was only twenty-five years of age, and his mother's prayers were aloft with him, as were the prayers of millions of others. So it was a very great moment when he stepped from his Spirit of St. Louis and said "I am Charles Lindberg."

My friends, it was a far greater moment for the wide world when Jesus coming out of the blue above Damascus, said many centuries ago, to one of the finest young men of his day in response to his stammered and frightened question, "I am Jesus." The heart of civilization would have to hear that name from the lips of that self-same young man. They had no radio, nor telephone, nor wireless, nor even the excellent modern mailing systems of today. Hot from the heart, and by the hand, must go the message which bore that most beautiful name. If one got scratches, and scars, and scuffings one must take it for one's share and press on with the precious message, "I am Jesus." "Who art thou? . . . 'I am Jesus.'"

But from that incident, so epoch-making, I want to call to your attention the fact that Jesus is so often unrecognized. He is so often the unexpected. Many have awakened in some crisis to find that Jesus is our attending and comforting Friend.

In the crisis of character. There came out of Sychar a poor sinner to Jacobs well for water. No longer had she the beautiful character of childhood, nor the winsome charm of young womanhood. All had gone the way of transgression. She was now only a poor slave woman, doing the menial work now done in our cities by lead pipes and pumps. She was a carrier of water. Kicked out of society into the arduous tasks given to her kind. Her character had suffered crisis after crisis. But now she hears speaking to her someone who was clean and holy. It was so unexpected. And in the course of the conversation he says, "If thou knewest the gift of God, and who it is that saith to thee, Give me to drink; thou wouldest ask of him, and he would have given thee living water." If thou knewest who it is! He would give thee water! What truths! How we fail, and fail, and fail, because we do not know who it is when it is Jesus! Have you had a character crisis? Take it to Jesus. And, oh, my friends, please know that Jesus is able to help you win in every personal crisis in your lives. He stands by all too often the unrecognized Galilean. "Who art thou? . . . 'I am Jesus.'"

The crisis of storms, of stress. Our world is in the midst of one now.

Perhaps we do not realize it, perhaps we do, and are bewildered within. A fellow minister wrote me the other day asking me what can we do in a time like this for world peace? Or maybe you are in some storm or stress not so international as that, much more personal, and local. In that storm may stand the Christ unrecognized! The disciples were put to sea. All night they had battled for their lives in one of the most terrific storms that they had ever witnessed. How they wished for their master! Presently through the storm they saw what they thought was a ghost, and froze with fear. But "Jesus spake to them saying, 'Be of good cheer, it is I ('I am Jesus'); be not afraid.'" Ah! my friends if we could only always recognize him. Do you find yourself in some storm center? Hear the voice of Jesus say, "Be of good cheer . . . Be not afraid." So often men will think Jesus is a ghost and flee from him, and turn to the world, or pleasure, or greed, or gain, looking for the courageous word: Be of good cheer!

The crisis of sorrow. Some people break in grief. They are overwhelmed with sorrow. They have lost some beloved friend. They cannot see at the same time that somewhere in that sorrow is a great comfort, or blessing. If the Christ is there he is unrecognized. Dawn was streaking the eastern horizon. Grief and fear was breaking the heart of Mary Magdalene. At least she had hope to see the body of Jesus to anoint him with spices, and oils, and tears. But now they had brutally, as she thought, borne even his body away. Coming up to the gardener, as she thought, she asked him to please tell her where he had taken his body if he had removed him. She was looking straight at Jesus! If she had said "Who art thou?" He could have answered "I am Jesus!" The unrecognized Galilean! Are you holding some great sorrow to your bosom. Hear the gentle spoken word of the Galilean in the garden: "Mary." Let him call your name. Know that he knows personally all about it, and he knows you yourself, even by name! Take your troubles to him. He is near.

The crisis of self. One of the greatest problems in the world is self. How that trouble is often blown tight. And tough, too, so that it takes a great deal to puncture it. I recall a little lesson in child's reader called "Sticking Pins in Johnny." He thought he was the best ball player, but they had one better; he thought he was the best racer, again they had one who could go by him; he thought he was the best wrestler, and again he was found on the bottom; he thought he was the best speller, and they put him down the line there. They were sticking pins in Johnny! It is a healthy thing for a self overblown to be punctured. Plenty of us could testify to that. One of the best men of his day, striving to be better and better all the time, thought self could do it, and then cries out, "O wretched man that I am, Who shall deliver me from this death." He wanted a better world, and he thought self could go out and clean it up. With death warrants in his pockets he proceeded to Damascus. On the road, unexpectedly a light struck him to the ground, and a person stood above him: "Who art thou?" he cried, and a calm, yet strong voice, answered, "I am Jesus!" What a blessing he fell into the hands of Jesus—Jesus who loved him so, who understood him so well, who could give him all his heart hungered for, and help him make a better world! How great if we can find our selfhood captured by the Christ, can lay our best selves in his hands. Never after that day was Paul ashamed of himself, as such, for he had committed himself to Christ. "Are they Hebrews? So am I. Are they Israelites? So am I. Are they the seed of Abraham? So am I." But then he goes on to tell of the things he had suffered for Christ. And when he spoke thus of himself he threw in the words "I speak foolishly," for he had determined to know nothing but Christ and him crucified. The world well knows the result of Paul's finally recognizing the Christ on the road to Damascus.

In every crisis of life let us be able to see the Christ, and let him no more be for us the unrecognized Galilean!

The Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:—

We are very happy that we have reached and passed the eleven hundred dollar mark in our financial report this week—with $207.42 to spare. That leaves a balance of $8,792.58 to raise between now and January 1st to reach our goal for the year. If all the churches will meet their Conference Apportionments for this Conference year for the Orphanage it will help us a lot toward reaching it.

The cool, chilly weather is here, shoes (and they are high this season), coats, winter dresses, zipper jackets, hats for the girls, and a lot of other things to buy. If you could take the position of Superintendent from now untill Christmas you would learn to spend restless hours trying to make the income balance with the expense account. In other words "balance the budget." Don't forget to send us all the coats, dresses, and boy's suits that you have on hand that are in good condition that you can't use. We will be glad to get them.

We have five children in college this year. Four of them are taking the business course to be secretaries. One girls is getting her foundation to take a course in nursing at Duke University next year. All of them are doing fine work. One in the business course has been making one hundred on her tests. All of these children have been financed but one. We started her on faith, hoping some big hearted person would mail me a check for $75.00 to pay the whole semester and repeat it in January for the spring semester. Just think, for $150.00 you place a fine young girl, an Orphan, in a position to be a secretary to some business man where she can get a good salary and be lifted out of dependence into independence. Then when she goes to work she expects to pay you back in full. In other words it would be a loan. Then you would get so much joy out of just lending her the money to help now while she needs you and it will mean so much to her. Who, in the Congregational-Christian Church has that great, big heart?

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON,

SUCCESSFUL CHURCHES.

Christianity felt that counts. Certainly, no church succeeds which does not plan wisely and then execute its plans so that current bills are paid and conference apportionment met in full, but we need to learn that service in the community and service throughout the earth is needed to develop the personality and soul quality of individual church members. We need to emphasize more than heretofore the growth of Christian character on the part of the growing generation. This character should be such as to bind them eternally to the Church and to Church work.

When you are checking up in your church conference on the work of the past year, why not give a little thought, not only to the money raised and to the members received, but also to the activities of the members and the quality of character being developed by your church. This latter may not be as obvious as the former, but it is far more important.

FUTURE OUTLOOK OF THE YOUNG MINISTER.

establishing on this earth the Kingdom of righteousness and peace and joy, this is what makes my life more and more worth living."

The third phase of life in which the young minister of today is to serve is within the bounds of religion.

The voice of God has called to him to serve, and in his service, to be Christ-like. In my mind everything that a Christian does should be divine, that texture should be with every experience of life. Bible reading is no more divine than plowing. Singing anthems is no more spiritual than washing dishes. Preaching is no more religious than clarifying the opinions of men in respect to the spiritual issues of a world war. Prayer no more normal for a Christian than play, though we do one with solemn voice and on bended knee and the other with rollicking peals of laughter and clad appropriately for the sport. Whether I read my Bible or plow corn, whether I sing songs or wash dishes, whether I preach or give interpretations to the issues of a war, whether I kneel in prayer or run in play, whether I eat or drink, if I am the Christian I ought to be. I will see my Master's face and hear the gracious whisper of his voice to my trusting soul in it all. My whole life is God's, or none of it is His. My every experience must relate itself vitally and wholesomely to Him or it is for me as a Christian an unworthy experience. Reverence, the Spirit of Devotion, and Worship must sanctify and purify my every act and fit me for service in the Church of God.

As God in the picture, "Green Pastures" stood by the window of Heaven and continually heard the prayer of Ezra and Nehemiah to come and assist them in the physical and spiritual redemption of men, so, too, there comes to the ears of the spiritual leaders of our present day a prayer and a cry for help to alleviate the physical and spiritual suffering of men today. This cry, and this prayer for help is the thing that is encouraging to the young minister, because it opens to him a wider field of Christian service.

The educational advantages of today have given to the young minister a keener insight as to his task in life than he ordinarily would have received. These educational advantages have enlightened the young minister concerning the scripture and have helped him to become self-confident. The practice and instruction which he receives in college helps to prepare him for the parish in which he will soon work.

Another action in the church as a whole that has made the outlook for the young minister encouraging is the high conference entrance requirements which our conferences have seen fit to adopt. This rule makes the work of those in the conference more secure. One difficulty arising out of such a procedure, however, is that instead of conforming rigidly to the conference rules, the committee oftentimes acts at its own discretion, thus, seemingly, showing partiality and in addition lessening the security of those in the conference. The outlook for the young minister is going to look just as bright as there is conformity to our conference rules.

When the day comes that more power is concentrated in the hands of the conference body and less power given to the local church, it will be a day in which the outlook for the young minister will be brighter than ever.

My prayer is:

"God, give us more young ministers who are brave enough to proclaim the principles of Christ; persuasive enough to lead men to dedicate themselves to these principles; and keen-visioned enough to see that religion embraces the whole, and not just a part of life."

The young minister's philosophy and ambition is to be found in this poem:

Onward! the march is onward!
Hark to the Captain's voice!
Onward the Church is marching!
Loudly the saints rejoice!
Never a look east backward!
Never a traitor fear!
Always a smile for the weary mile,
And a song when the day is drear.

Onward against oppression!
Onward against the strong!
Never a truce with Satan!
Never a truce with wrong!
Never a halt for pleasure!
Never a halt for gain!
Advance to the fight in the cause of right
For the Head of the Church must reign

Onward, the march is onward!
Onward against the foe!
Till with our feet we trample
Evil and error low!
Over the field of conflict
Beating are angel wings,
As for the right and the truth we fight
In the ranks of the King of Kings.

Onward, the march is onward!
On through the blinding sand!
On to the Holy City!
On to our Captain's Land!
Leaving behind forever
Error's wide sandy waste,
Over the gleam of the border stream
To the City of God we haste!

Making Good Use of Your Church Paper

A Church paper is much like a Church building, good only to the extent it is properly used. As there is no virtue in building well-appointed, modern structures, for the use of public worship and religious instruction unless these are to be used, so it is with a Church paper. Your Church paper may have its departmental sections well edited; may have a finely conducted page giving a review of the news of the whole denomination in interesting paragraphs; may carry each week splendidly written editorials; it may present from time to time the very best writers in those subjects which relate to the progress of the Church and to the growth of the spiritual life of its members; but if the paper goes nowhere, if it has just a small circulation, does not reach the people who most need it, then what is printed therein, all the labor and expense of such a venture is really lost.

While the first problem confronting those who would run a Church paper is to have it properly edited, etc., the second problem is possibly more difficult to solve—that of finding subscribers. Of course, the paper must create, in most cases, a desire for itself. There are but few in a denomination who would take it because it is their official organ. So it becomes the duty of some one to carry this messenger of Kingdom service to those who know little or nothing about it. It is in doing this service that the agent of the paper shines in her community—it is here also that many pastors exhibit their salesmanship ability. They can place the paper in the homes of their members while making usual daily visits without extra expense and with but little extra effort. Knowing that the paper must be “sold” to a large majority of their members they prepare their line of talk, being readers of the paper and knowing its worth to the Church in its services to those who read it, they can present it like a real salesman would present a new labor-saving device in the home.

The fact must be admitted that the average person is not a reader, has but few books, knows little about the Church to which he belongs, less about historical Christianity, and as a rule has but slight interest in what is happening outside his community. So here is the problem which faces the person who would put a Church paper in such a home. Then shall he just leave this family alone because it knows so little about the work of the Kingdom that it does nothing for it? Or shall he attempt to enlist them? The thing which will require less effort but bring most regrets to a faithful soul is to leave such people to themselves—make no effort to inform them of their opportunity and duty as members of the Church. But the enlistment of such people is rarely easy. However, a faithful, earnest Christian worker, should find great joy in trying to do this rather difficult thing. And if he decides to do it he will try to place his Church paper in that home, for he knows that reading it will help the reader to be better informed about his Church and will create or stimulate an interest in what is being done. Your Church paper is issued weekly as the helpmate of the pastor and the Christian worker in the Church. It should go into every home of the membership, should be read by all the members, and might well be a topic of conversation of pastor and people as they make contact.

Our goal for suscriptions this year is one subscription from every ten members of our Church in this Conference. We have yet far to go to reach it, but it is not impossible; in fact, it would be quite easy to reach did all our leaders take this matter very seriously. The proof of the last sentence is found in what a few pastors have done on pastoral charges which before knew nothing about the Church paper. And what these have done, we exhort all to do. Come, friends of the Church paper, rally to the slogan, “Our quota of subscribers in full before November the fourth.”—“Methodist-Protestant Herald.”

Twelve Points of Service for a Local Church

By DR. ROY C. HELFENSTEIN,

Minister, People's Church, Dover, Delaware.

"Twelve Points of Service for every member of People's Church!" That is to be our slogan, our aim, and our responsibility. Auto service stations require Twelve Points of Service from every attendant. A church should confidently expect as much from each of its members. Following are the "Twelve Points of Service" expected of every member of People's Church:

1. To offer a sincere prayer each day for People's Church.
2. To live each day in such a way as to bring honor to People's Church.
3. To contribute each week to the financial support of People's Church and to the Conference Benevolences according to your ability.

Let each one give as the Lord hath prospered him.

4. To invite "new-comers" and other unchurched friends and acquaintances of the community to attend People's Church. (Others will be glad when you say unto them: "Let us go into the House of the Lord.")

5. To try tactfully and prayerfully to win at least one disciple for Christ each year.

Heaven's gate is closed to him who comes alone,
Save thou another soul and it will save thine own.

6. To talk People's Church, to boost People's Church, and to advertise People's Church at every opportunity. (Knockers have no place in any church.)

7. To "speak a good word for Jesus," and to render as many acts of service in his name each day as opportunity affords. (Why call ye me Lord, Lord? and do not the things which I command you.)

8. To read some portion of the Bible each day for practical help in religious living. ("Any person will be wiser and stronger by being familiar with the teachings of the Book of Books.")

9. To attend divine worship at People's Church each Sunday when in town if physically able.

10. To bow your head reverently in silent prayer upon entering the church and taking your seat—praying for yourself, your minister, your choir, and for the congregation—to join interestedly in the responsive reading and in the singing; and sincerely to seek help from each feature of the service.

11. To make a special effort to speak a word of welcome to as many visitors possible after each service. (This is a courtesy which you would naturally extend to visitors in your home, and it is even more to be expected from you in your Church Home.)

12. To give your church first place in your loyalty. A worthy church member will never allow his lodge, club or any other affiliation to keep him from doing his full duty to his church. (The Church is the greatest organization in the world because it is in the greatest business. "Seek ye first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness.")

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

Dr. and Mrs. J. O. Atkinson are both in Florida in search of health. Their many friends will wish them good success in this search and hope for their speedy recovery.

Rev. J. F. Morgan has just finished aiding Rev. O. D. Poythress in a successful two week's revival meeting at South Norfolk, Virginia. During the revival a son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Poythress.

Dr. John L. Lobinger, Secretary of World Friendship and Missionary Education, who is teaching in training schools in Norfolk, Suffolk, and Waverly, preached in Suffolk last Sunday morning and will preach at Holland next Sunday morning.

At the 210th Anniversary Celebration on September 26th to October 3rd of Old First Church (Evangelical and Reformed) of Philadelphia, Rev. Roy C. Helfenstein, D. D., pastor of People's Church, Dover, Delaware, gave the principle address at the "Fellowship Night" program on September 28th. The bulletin for that occasion says that Dr. Helfenstein is a lineal descendant of the Rev. Samuel Helfenstein pastor of First Church, 1799-1830.

FIRST CHRISTIAN CHURCH, NORFOLK, CELEBRATES NINETIETH ANNIVERSARY.

"Ninety years ago when First Christian Church was organized at Ferry Point (now Berkley) there were only ten Christian churches, with a few hundred members, in Eastern Virginia. Now there are more than 40 churches with more than 10,000 members in the same area," so said Col. J. E. West of Suffolk, Sunday afternoon in the ninetieth anniversary program held at First Christian Church, Norfolk, Virginia.

At this service greetings were given by Rev. J. M. McKnight of the local Presbyterian Church, Rev. H. S. Hardeastle, D. D., of the Christian Temple, Rev. Joe A. French, pastor of Ocean View and Berea Christian Churches, Rev. Robert Lee House, pastor of First Christian Church of Portsmouth, Rev. W. D. Williford, a member of Old Zion Christian Church, and Rev. J. F. Morgan, a former pastor, who is now pastor of Rosemont Christian Church. Greetings were received from Rev. J. E.

McCauley of Richmond, Virginia, and Rev. Murdock W. Butler, of Conshohocken, Pennsylvania.

Mr. D. J. Bowden, member, deacon, and superintendent of the Sunday school for many years during the earlier history of the church, and now a member of Christian Temple, brought memories of the earlier days of the church, and Mr. W. E. MacClenny, of Suffolk, a historian, presented some interesting historical data. A group of children represented the twenty-six pastors who have served the church.

Music was furnished by the local choir assisted by Mrs. H. L. Dickens, and Mr. Paul Sieloff of the Presbyterian Church and Mr. D. J. Bowden. The church was beautifully decorated by the Ladies Aid Society and the Barrett Floral Company. Mrs. J. D. Howard, a member of the church, furnished a basket of flowers in memory of Rev. Stephen S. Barrett, her grand-father, who organized the church on October 6, 1847.

The principle address was given by Dr. John G. Truitt, pastor of Suffolk Christian Church, who served the Norfolk church for six years. Dr. Truitt centered his address around two statements; namely, "I like the Church," and "I like the churchmen." Dr. Truitt likened the church to an anchor that holds a ship steady in the midst of storm. To it men may come for strength and safety and are always received because of the gracious goodness of the Christ who is the Head of the Church.

This program brought to a close the celebration of the ninetieth anniversary. The church reports all current expenses and conference claims for the past year met in full and plans are under way for increasing the space for Sunday school class rooms. This matter will be discussed further at the conference of the church on Wednesday evening of this week.

A SCENE AT CHERROKEE HEIGHTS. WAYCROSS, GEORGIA.

On a beautiful little hill, known as Cherokee Heights in Waycross, Georgia, about a mile from the Temple of Justice among the pines and surrounded by many beautiful structures, erected and occupied by those who seek a place of quietness where they may find rest and comfort from the busy hours of the day, a nice little cottage stands finished and occupied by the pastor of Friendship Parish of Congregational-Christian Churches, a home for the Parish Messenger.

Only a few months ago this scene originated in the mind of one man, who surely has a spirit of progressiveness, a man who has a mind to work and put a progressive thought into visible existence. From this thought a voice was sounded and transferred from mouth to ear until Friendship Parish was aroused to its needs. From thence a spirit of readiness was manifested among its people to enlarge upon it and bring to pass its wonderful possibilities. Axes and saws in the hands of willing workers went forth to the forests and felled the trees, whose boughs have sung the song of the air for many decades, waiting to be transformed into a building, a shelter, a home for God's creative man, a home to be adorned with His presence at a sacrifice of his forests. Logs were donated and assembled at the roadside in the church communities and loaded by man power on a truck and transferred to the mill where they were sawed into lumber and later hauled to the place where the cottage now stands ready for the builder's use. After a sufficiency of logs had been donated by Union Hill and Williams Chapel communities there were still other big-hearted and good thinking men who wanted to contribute timber to the use of this building. Others in all four of the church communities who did not contribute timber gave money to buy nails, roofing, paint and other necessities which must be used in the making of a complete building.

The leading voice and one of the most important tools in the planning and building of this cottage was our beloved pastor, Rev. W. Carl Parker, who rendered untiring service from the beginning to the completion. He helped to cut the logs and freely gave his service as architect, and served as chief carpenter in the building. We have as yet failed to find words whereby we can express our appreciation for his services, but we know God will reward him in due season. In this Cottage Friendship Parish, composed of Union Hill, Williams Chapel, Friendship and Antioch Churches, has something for which they are proud and that all pastors will appreciate.

The building is equipped with all modern conveniences for the benefit of its occupants as well as visitors. Rev. Mr. Parker invites all who will to visit his new home and see what the Lord hath done with one material thought, and to consider what He can do for a hungry soul.

OUR PRAYER.

By REV. EVERETT LESHER.

Eternal God, who hast given us eyes to see, be merciful unto us that so often we behold the Truth, the Way, and the Life and see it not. Thou art the meaning of our lives, yet we grope blindly after the transient and uncertain values of earth. Thou art our hope, but in stupid blindness we see it not. How great is the sin laid against us! Through our blindness we deny the world abundant life. Through it we suffer Thee to be imprisoned in our unjust social order, in the exploitation of childhood, in wastrel parenthood, in churches that tithe, mint and anise and cummin, but omit the weighty matters of life. Our eyes are dim. We do not see how foolishly we fritter away our days in trifling fashions, formal religion, and respectability. We are religious, but rotten because our eyes behold a great salvation, but do not see.

O Eternal God, Thou Captive struggling to be free, have mercy upon us. Cast the veils from our eyes. Fill them with vision to see the Truth, the Way, and the Life, that we may no longer add to the dark weight of the world's sin and to the burden of Thy suffering, but that we may be saved from fetterless freedom and made builders of a world where righteousness shall reign and love shall be triumphant. Give us eyes that see, in the name of Him who came to restore the sight of the blind and be the Light of the world. Amen.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgement and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

PARTIAL VISION.

How well do you see? An advertisement by an optical company says that six out of ten persons need glasses. They quote from the Better Vision Institute these very interesting statistics:

Of persons 15 years of age or less23% need glasses
 Of persons 30 years of age39% need glasses
 Of persons 40 years of age48% need glasses
 Of persons 50 years of age71% need glasses
 Of persons 60 years of age82% need glasses
 Of persons over 60 years of age95% need glasses

If these figures are correct, and we have no cause to doubt them, most people can not see well. For some reason their vision is not clear. Nature may be responsible for these defects, or the individual may have had much to do with it. Whatever the cause, it needs correcting.

There are many boys and girls in school who suffer from eye strain and are unable to do the proper work. They may become nervous and irritable, or else sluggish and negligent. In either case, they become a problem child and must face life not only with the physical handicap of poor vision but also with the mental handicap of failure in education. It is very important that children have proper vision so they can go forward in their studies. Parents and teachers can render a Christian service by carefully checking the vision of children.

Jesus came in contact with the blind. It was His will that the blind should see. If one application of clay to the eyes made a man see only partially ("men as trees walking"), then He made the second application of clay, and He was not content to quit until the vision was perfect.

Jesus was interested in what we call spiritual vision, also. He wanted men to think right and feel right. He wanted them to see men not as trees but as brothers. He is still interested in the kind of vision that people have. He still sits by the treasury and notes the difference in those who toss in a few coins and those who put in all their living. His commendation goes to those who have insight into reality sufficient to make them give all that they have.

He still labors with fishermen, tax collectors and rich young rulers trying to get them to see that fishing for men, gathering jewels for God and giving to the needy are more important than the things which we ordinarily do.

How well do you see? Is the child in your Sunday school class just a ragged, worthless urchin, or is it a possible Gypsy Smith or a Dwight L. Moody? Is your task as a worker in the church an irksome burden to be shifted with every change in the weather, or is it the golden opportunity which your church and your God have given you for your own personal development as well as for the benefit of mankind? Is the payment of conference apportionment simply the whim of some persons out yonder at a distance who would like to lay burdens on your church, or is it an opportunity for you and your friends to build churches and schools where they are needed, train young people, care for the orphans, send missionaries where the Gospel has not yet gone, and to bring happiness in the sunset of aged ministers and their wives? Is the routine of daily duties simply a struggle that must be endured, or is it a delightful pleasure because you are serving your fellowmen. Is money a thing to be accumulated and stored away for a rainy day, or is it an instrument to be used in personal development and for the benefit of humanity?

Is your vision blurred by the pleasures and impulses of the moment, or is it clear and dependable? Do you walk in mists and darkness, or is your life radiant with the sunlight of God's love? How well can you see?

WE NEED THINKERS FOR THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION OF CONGREGATIONAL AND CHRISTIAN CHURCHES.

Now do not get insulted, my dear reader, for no one has intimated that you can not think for yourself. Most people do. Readers of "The Christian Sun" think or else they wouldn't read this paper, but the fact remains that we need a thinker for the Southern Convention.

The magazine, "Life" carries the story of Charles F. Kettering who, at the age of 28, was working for $50 a week and would have worked for less, but who at the age of 61, is now receiving $350,000 a year, more than the highest paid minister in the Southern Convention. Stating it another way, General Motors pays him approximately one and one half times as much as the churches of the whole Southern Convention reported having raised for all purposes last year. Mr. Kettering receives his pay for thinking. He has 150 patents to his name, including the electric cash register, the self-starter for the automobile, delco ignition, etc. If we had someone in the Southern Convention who would think in terms of our Church problems like this man has thought about improving machinery, automobiles, and such like, a few years would revolutionize our Convention.

We have a president who is supposed to think out some of our problems, but he is a pastor, busy with a local church and receives no pay for dealing with Convention problems. A fine, Christian layman heads our Mission Board, but most of his thinking must deal with his own business affairs. The Board of Christian Education is largely directed by the pastor of a city church who is also editor of this paper. The superintendent of the Orphanage and president of Elon College must needs think in terms of their own institutions, as does the secretary for Missions. There is nobody to think through the problems of the Convention and to put into expression the ideas (Continued on page 15.)

It's the Drinker Who's A Sissy

By D. STEWART PATTERSON.

It takes more courage to be the only one in the crowd who does not drink than to tag along with the others.

So they called you a "sissy" when you refused to drink, did they?

Well, don't let it get you down. They always have, and I suppose always will call us sissies (for I do not drink either), unless they get wise to themselves.

The next time they call you a sissy, just remember this—it's the drinker who's a sissy. He just can't take it.

The drinker is a sissy because he is afraid of the crowd—can't take the alcoholic ridicule—can't take the pressure they put on him—the "wet blanket"—"lilly" stuff—the "come-on-be-a-sport" hokum—the "don't-you-want-to-rate" gaff.

Of course, there is the fellow who drinks to get away from some problem, or unpleasant situation such as lack of social acceptance, disappointment, or failure of some kind. But he, too, is a sissy—running away and taking the cheap way out.

Let's look at this proposition of ridicule first, and try to understand its psychology. Why does the drinker ridicule the non-drinker? Because, almost without exception, the drinker feels inferior to the non-drinker.

This point has been pretty well stated by Roy Dickerson: "Many a drinker feels inferior to the non-drinker. That means that he has respect for what he views as superior powers of self-control. But the inferiority feeling is uncomfortable. So the drinker frequently seeks to escape it by ridicule. That is an attempt to discredit the behavior (abstinence) which causes the inferiority feeling. The drinker's ridicule, therefore, is not what it seems to be. It reflects genuine respect for the very behavior it seems to belittle."

Get the idea? This ridicule they throw at us, and which seems to be an expression of lack of respect for us, is, in fact, the very opposite—unconscious respect and admiration. Queer things, we humans; and queer things we do.

So, don't you see, it's the drinker who is really the sissy—who is suffering from an inferiority complex, is unable to get up enough courage to meet your kind of courage, and who seeks to cover up by calling you a sissy.

Now look at it from another point of view. There is the fellow, who, apart from the crowd, just can't take it on the chin when things don't go right.

Dr. Alexander Lambert says: "To those who cannot, or have not been taught to adjust their emotional balance to their environment, alcohol is an easy method of balancing a mental deficit. It cuts off the sense of inferiority, it blunts a sense of failure, it possesses above all drugs that which London called 'White Magic' so that when under its influence, whatever we did or said, no matter how inaccurate the fact, it all seemed to be the most perfectly done, and the most brilliantly said."

Another answer that can't be dodged comes from Albion Roy King, a psychologist, who has been doing a lot of work in this field: "Intoxicating beverages furnish the easiest and cheapest means ever discovered for escape from the reality into the lighter and freer world of one's own fancies. It is a characteristic of mind to 'compensate' for the failures and disappointments, the misery and hardships, the tedium and monotony of human existence, by escape into a dream world of fancy where all desires may be imaginatively realized. One needs only a quiet hour for reverie or sleep, or the aid of a novel for such escape; but long ago it was discovered that certain drugs, which deaden the perceptual and motor functions, greatly facilitate the exit into that artificial world of feeling and fancy . . . The resort to alcohol is always an artificial and cowardly way to meet the dissatisfactions of existence. It never cures any evils, and always causes a plenty."

Just this last suggestion, before I go along my way. Have you had to face the question of what to do when you were visiting and cocktails were served? Have you been worried about what to do?

Take a tip from a distinguished British newspaper man, Mr. Philip Whitwell Wilson: "It is plainly a breach of good manners for any host or hostess to place a guest in a difficult position. Let us say he prefers not to add pepper to his soup or have a glass of champagne with his chicken. If plain speaking be permitted, there is in the United States a definite attempt by many hosts to make it socially impossible for a guest to refuse liquor. It is no longer a case of compulsory abstinence. The compulsion is the other way."

Personally, I do not like parsnips, ripe olives, or cottage cheese, so when my host or hostess insists that I have another helping I try to leave the impression that the first serving was one too many. This courtesy business is supposed to work both ways, and it is a pretty poor host who crudely embarrasses the guest. I know places to go where I am not embarrassed.

So—don't let this sissy business get you down. I, too, have been on the spot. But I am not posing as a hero, one who defies the crowd and looks with "pitying scorn upon the weaklings of the mob." (Please, let's not get a superiority complex by way of overcoming an inferiority complex). I meet the situation as it comes, and do not apologize for my refusal.

It seems to me, if you want to look at it this way, that it takes more courage to be the only one in a crowd who does not drink than to tag along with the crowd and do all the foolish things everyone else does. And, by the way, does the crowd ever give you any special credit for courage? Of course, you become a "good sport," a "great fella," and all that, but for how long? When the crowd really gets to going places, unless you are out in front acting crazier than the rest, who gives you any credit for being along?

Well, it has been good to chat with you. Think through this "sissy" business carefully. My own answer is that I see nothing intelligent in running around labeling myself as a psychological sissy. For that's what the average drinker is.—"Epworth Herald."

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The writer appreciates the correction made by Mrs. L. W. Stagg in last week's issue of THE SUN concerning the financial report of the Eastern Virginia Woman's Conference. What the writer intended to say was that the amount raised this year was more than for any year since the financial depression made a slump in the missionary receipts.

The statement is frequently made that the men of the church are lagging in missionary interest, and are not keeping pace with the women. Admitting that the men are not working in any organized way comparable to the Women's Societies, one wonders if the men are as unconcerned as this statement would suggest. For example, it is quite probable that many men (if they are husbands) have a large part in raising the money reported by the women each year. A few women may earn their money independently, but these cases are rare and exceptional. Whatever part the men may have in earning the money should be credited to them. That is a larger part than one might estimate at first thought.

As to the matter of missionary education. Women usually talk about what they read. A great deal of missionary information seeps out to the men in the average family where the wife and mother have an interest in missions. And how can a man attend a Sunday school in these days without getting something of the missionary message suggested by the lesson? It is possible, of course, that some teachers may avoid the missionary message on the same grounds that they disregard a temperance lesson, because they fear it is unpopular, or they are not in sympathy with that topic. But such teachers are the exception, and their numbers are rapidly diminishing.

It is so easy to have a narrow view of missions in the church. Any forward looking church work is missionary. It may not be foreign missions, but if the kingdom of God is extended and strengthened, it is as truly missionary as making a donation of money to a missionary society. And there are multitudes of both men and women who are not deeply interested in the winning of souls and the educational development of the church as a growing institution. But there are many men who join heartily with the women in seeking to advance the cause of Christ in the world.

Do not be too hard on the men. A missionary society is a good and a great institution, but it is not the only means of carrying on missionary work or raising money for missions. Men are doing something about the preaching of missions, and they have a part in the educational work done by the Sunday school in these days of new vision and higher ideals. And they contribute money, through the regular benevolences of the church, which, in some measure, may be to their credit for missions.

When the whole field of opportunity is surveyed and the ability of the church is measured, there is much room for improvement on the part of men and women. The work has only begun. Those who seem deeply interested could do more. Think of the great numbers of women in the church who have no interest in the missionary movement. The indifferent may be counted by the thousands. Surely no one has any right to boast of our past achievements. The time has come when the whole church should be enlisted in the forward movement of the church of Jesus Christ.

THE ELON COLLEGE FACULTY.

The primary purpose of an institution of learning is, of course, to instruct and improve the individual student. There are certain requisites to the success an education undertaking. Equipment is essential, it should be first class and adequate. The individual teacher is not only essential, but mandatory if the organization is to be a school. The character and effectiveness of the school depend entirely upon the individual faculty member.

Qualifications of a good teacher are, in part, personality, adaptability, co-operation, a psychological insight discovering the abilities and tendencies of the individual students to be taught, and, of course, thorough training in the particular field in which he is to teach. Given these qualifications and achievements, one would naturally assume that the individual is ready for the task of teaching. Mentally and pedagogically he is, but there are other qualifications that those who teach at Elon College must possess. The teacher must be of good character, and he must be Christian. Without these two qualifications he would necessarily be barred from the faculty of a Christian institution.

There are two other qualifications which loom large in the practices of certain influential institutions of higher learning in this country; namely, age and experience. There is a conviction on the part of some that no one can be a successful teacher without these two last-named qualifications. Age and experience may count, but they are not essential. They usually come very high; that is, an efficient teacher beyond his thirties with from five to ten years' experience is usually located and if he changes schools, the school that se his services pays for these two qualifications. For the past five years it has been the policy of Elon College to select with the utmost care young men and young women with good characters, connected definitely with some evangelical church, and the products of the best schools in this country. The majority of our present faculty came to Elon College direct from the leading universities of this country such as Brown, Yale, Duke, University of North Carolina, New York University, Columbia University, etc. These younger men and women with talents, superior preparation, and a great ambition, have proven themselves worthy of the trust that the institution has placed in them, so that today we have a group of some twenty-five experts in the several fields embraced by a progressive college curriculum, associated together as an Elon College faculty and dedicated to the high endeavor of assisting young men and young women who come to our campus in the discovery of their individual abilities, talents, and possibilities, and further to assist them in their earnest efforts to increase these abilities, develop these talents, and multiply these possibilities.

In the curriculum at Elon College in addition to high standards in scholastic achievements, there is definitely an atmosphere that impels honor and honesty in student and college relations. In such an atmosphere character experiences its most vitalizing stimulation and stable enlargement. Emphasis upon things spiritual and religious is evident in all activities.

It has not been the practice of Elon College and shall never be to seek out individual teachers who have taught in other institutions and bring them to Elon at any cost. On the other hand, it has been the practice of Elon College and shall ever be to discover individual teachers who are prepared adequately from every standpoint who wish to dedicate their lives to the Brethren, the Scripture tells us that some were called to be ministers, some evangelists, some teachers.—

(Eph. 4:12.)

In the Book of Acts we are told that when the disciples were multiplying, the Church growing, and the duties of the Church had become diversified, the Church chose men of good report, full of the spirit and of wisdom, to assist the ministry of the Word; and that the deacons thus chosen by the Church were set before the apostles, who laid hands on them and prayed, thus uniting them apart in the presence of the Church to the duties of their honorable office.

In like manner also, as need arose, the Church selected others to be teachers "in order to fit his people for the work of service, for building the body of Christ, until we all attain unity in faith, and in the knowledge of the Son of God, and reach mature manhood, and that full measure of development found in Christ."—(Eph. 4:12-14).

Following the custom of the early Church, your church has chosen you for the several duties assigned to you for the teaching of the Word, the ministry of service, the ministry of music, the administration of the Lord's work, the teaching of those who love the Lord. To this holy calling you have been chosen Stewardship, and the perfecting of Christian

Character by your Church for this New Year's work.

You are charged to remember that "Assistants in turn are to be serious men; they are not to be talebearers or addicted to drink or pilfering; they must maintain the divine truth of the faith with a pure conscience. They, too, must be put on probation; after that, if they are above reproach, they can serve as assistants. Their wives must be serious too; they must not be slanderers, but temperate and absolutely trustworthy. Assistants are only to be married once, and they must manage their children and households properly. For those who do good service as assistants win a good position for themselves as well as great freedom in the faith of Christ
Jesus."—(Moffat I Tim. 3:8-13).

Question to Officers: Will you, to the best of your ability, faithfully try to do the work which your church has called you to do?

Answer: I will, the Lord being my helper;

Address to (Congregation stand-

You have chosen these before you to be your leaders in the work of building the Church and training for their worthiness for this service is evidenced in their election to the various offices. Their faith in your sincerity of purpose will be determined by your loyal cooperation in the work of the church. A leader can do only as much as faithful followers will permit.

Question to the people:

Will you, the members of this church, uphold the hands of your officers as fellow-workers with them in the furtherance of the gospel? Will you honor them with your support, your sympathy, and your cooperation, that your communion and fellowship

JONAH.

The Book of Jonah is the very heart and center of the Old Testament. In brief Jonah is to the Old, what Paul and his writings are to the New Testament. Strange then, isn't it that many readers pass up Jonah as a fictitious or impossible Book. Might as well pass up the Acts as impossible and call Paul fictitious.

If one is looking for action read Jonah. From the opening to the closing line there is movement, action, and adventure. And the center figure and adventures in the Book is not Jonah at all, but Jehovah God. In the forty-eight verses of this Book of four brief chapters one finds a perfect picture of God speaking, God acting, God moving unmistakably to a definite end. In the Book, Jonah is only mentioned eighteen times while Jehovah's name is given thirty-six times. You find Jonah not sulking God, but God sulking in fact desperately pursuing Jonah. God wants Jonah for a purpose and so zealously does God pursue him that whether he flees by land or on sea, or under the sea, God overtakes him and will not let him escape. And in the depths of the sea when Jonah prayerfully acknowledges that "Salvation is of Jehovah," then God sends him to the great pagan city of Ninevah just as later He sent Paul to preach the same Gospel to the Gentile world. And when Jonah saw how God was converting the pagans of Ninevah, Jonah was as mad and rebellious (almost) as were the Jews at Paul when he preached salvation to all people through the mercy of love of God.

In brief the Book of Jonah is a condensed history of the Jews, God's chosen people. God chose the Jews to give to all the world the message of salvation through the grace, mercy and love of God, and then when the fullness of time came and He revealed that fact unmistakably in His Son, the Jews, like Jonah, became obstinate, rebellious and sought to flee from God and escape the purpose and responsibility God had laid upon them.

A great fish swallowed Jonah; and great Babylon swallowed the Jews. But when they, like Jonah, out of the depths of their bondage cried unto God, He delivered them—and they built again the walls of Jerusalem. If one wants to see in panorama the dealings of God with His chosen people let one read and study Jonah.

ROSEMONT.

The Women's Missionary Society of Rosemont has completed a most progressive year.

Their eleven meetings were well attended and programs both interesting and helpful were rendered.

A membership campaign was held during the first quarter with a number of young married women joining. They were fortunate in having a Missionary from China speak to them at one of their meetings, and deeply regret learning of his recent tragic death.

The World's Day of Prayer was observed and every member participated.

The annual luncheon was held in the spring with 51 women present.

An impressive program for the Silver Jubilee was held and the members responded well.

This Society went over the top with the Conference Apportionment.

"Living for Jesus" is their motto for the coming year. Mrs. D. D. Johnston is president. We predict a successful and helpful year.

THE CHURCH IN RURAL AMERICA.

This is the month when many of the women's societies will take up their studies of the home missions theme for 1937-38. The books are not only intensely interesting and challenging, but are vitally related to our national life and the critical period in which we are living. As many of the speakers at the Missions Institutes this summer have pointed out, we can no longer expect to hide our own family skeletons from the world, and un-Christian conditions in our own country, and un-Christian behavior toward other countries, prove a stumbling block to the foreign missionary as well to those at home who are trying to spread the Gospel of Jesus.

Over half of the population of the United States is rural. Under what conditions do they live? What are their problems? What groups have special needs? How should they be met? Is the church meeting the needs of Rural America? What must we do to Rebuild Rural America that it may be a part of a great Christian nation of which we can be proud? What lessons can Rural America teach us today? The contribution of Rural America to urban life and the development of the nation has been great, as has been its contribution to the Christian Church, which has its roots in rural life.

VIRGINIA STATE PREACHING MISSION.

Science and philosophy, while useful enough, can never show the way to salvation, and are therefore always inferior to revealed Christian truth.

St. Augustine, when he penned this thought, must have had in mind the National Preaching Mission, which this fall and winter will conduct eighteen Missions in principle cities of the country, including a four-day session at Richmond, Virginia, November 4-7th.

Through the four-day session at Richmond, November 4-7th and the subsequent one, two and eight-day missions which are scheduled to continue through December 5th, will come a spiritual experience to prepare the people of the State for a Pentecost, a new high venture to assure the nation that the spirit of Jesus Christ still remains extant and that the Church will forge ahead with a new and militant program.

Just what is the Preaching Mission? In the old days the circuit rider used to hang his lantern at the school house, and from miles around the people gathered to sing the old hymns and say the same fervent prayers that have been the bulwark of Christianity for generations. But today new ideas are needed, new methods must be attempted to stop the onrushing currents of paganism and atheism which are threatening to sweep Christianity into oblivion; and to meet this need has sprung the Preaching Mission.

Its inception was brought about by the intuitiveness of Dr. Hugh T. Kerr, pastor of Shadyside Presbyterian Church, Pittsburg, that the time had come when it was necessary for a group of preachers to travel over America preaching the Gospel, as Paul once went to Corinth, Ephesus, and the regions of Eyria, and Silicia. Dr. Kerr wrote a letter telling about his thought to the Home Mission Council and the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America.

The two councils agreed with the Pittsburg minister and as a result the National Preaching Mission was organized with the Rev. William Hiram Foulkes of Newark, New Jersey, as its chairman. Its purpose, briefly, was to stress the reasonableness of the Christian faith in the Personal God, its aptness to the deepest needs and the farthest aspirations of human life, and its redemptive, creative power in the organizing and shaping of a bewildered society towards the standards and ideals of the Kingdom of God.

Last autumn it consisted of a group of eighty of the foremost interpreters of the Christian Gospel. For three months, beginning September 13th, this band of Missioners travelled over the country visiting twenty-eight major centers of population in the United States, and through their efforts making the spirit of Christianity felt within a radius that extended from fifty to a hundred miles.

Such a Mission is planned for Virginia this year and for the vast territory contiguous to and embracing the area covered by fifteen new cities. Included in the itinerary, which began September 26th, at Salt Lake City, Utah, are Albany, New York (including Schneetady and Troy), Charleston, West Virginia, Cincinnati, Ohio, Nashville, Tennessee, Shreveport, Louisiana, Tulsa, Oklahoma, Wichita, Kansas, Quincy, Illinois (including Hannibal and Keokuk), Charleston, South Carolina, and Jacksonville, Florida.

Special teachers are chosen to deal with youth, women, preachers, industry, government officials and various professions. Indicative of the broad, inter-racial scope of the program, a Negro, Willis Jefferson King, noted theologian and president of Gammon Seminary, Atlanta, Georgia, is included among the list of speakers to visit Richmond this fall.

Those selected to speak here are among the most outstanding men in the international religious affairs of today.

Dr. George W. Truett, for forty years pastor of the First Baptist Church, Dallas, Texas, and president of the Baptist World Alliance, is perhaps the most prominently known of the high-calibered men and women who will visit Richmond. He will be in the city a week prior to the opening of the Mission as a speaker before the sessions of the Richmond Baptist Co-operative Campaign.

But equally sincere in their desire to spread the Message and show a bewildered society the reasonableness of the Christian Faith in furthering the highest aspirations of human life are other denominational ministers, laymen and lay women, whose work for the church and humanity has placed them among the leaders of the present social order.

Among those who visit Richmond are the following:

The Rt. Rev. James Edward Freeman, Bishop of Washington, D. C.

Bishop Ralph S. Cushman, of Denver, Colorado, General Chairman of the Conference on Evangelism of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Rev. A. J. Muste, Pastor of Labor Temple Presbyterian Church, New York, and an outstanding authority on Labor problems.

Rev. George Arthur Buttrick, Pastor of Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church, New York, chairman of Department of Evangelism of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America.

Dr. Daniel A. Poling, Pastor of the Baptist Temple, Philadelphia, and editor of The Christian Herald.

Dr. Edgar DeWitt Jones, Pastor of Central-Woodward Christian Church, Detroit, Michigan, president of the Federal Council of Churches.

Honorable Francis B. Sayre, of Washington, D. C., Assistant Secretary of State.

Dr. John R. Mott, of New York, Chairman of the International Missionary Council and president of the World Alliance of Young Men's Christian Associations.

Mrs. Grace Sloan Overton, of Ann Arbor, Michigan, Chairman of the Marriage and Home Department of the National Council of Federated Church Women.

Mrs. Harper Sibley, of Rochester, New York, prominent leader of the Protestant Episcopal Church.

Miss Muriel Lester, of London, England, internationally known social worker and Christian pacifist.

Rev. Oscar F. Blackwelder, Pastor of Lutheran Church of the Reformation, Washington, D. C., Chairman of Committee of Association of Young People of the United Lutheran Church.

Dr. Adolph Keller, of Geneva, Switzerland, honorary lecturer for the Universal Christian Council and a member of the Swiss Church Federation.

Rev. Roy A. Burkhart, Pastor of First Community Church, Columbus, Ohio, leader of young people's work of the United Brethren Church.

Dr. Cleveland Kleihauer, of Hollywood, California, Pastor of Hollywood-Beverly Christian Church, Hollywood, California.

Dr. Francis Cho-Min Wei, president of Hua Chung College, Wuchang, China.

Dr. Willis Jefferson King, president of Gammon Theological College, Atlanta, Georgia.

WALLACE J. MINSHULL,
Director of Publicity, Va.
State Preaching Mission.

A philosophy is the house of the mind, and no two philosophies can be alike, because no two minds are alike. But the emotion is the same, the emotion of expansive joy in a house not built with hands, in which the soul has made for herself a large and harmonious dwelling.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church"

MISS EMILY CARLETON, Editor, 541 Osceola Ave., Winter Park, Fla.

PILGRIM FELLOWSHIP.

Dear Fellowship Workers:—

The plan we have been wishing for is to be realized at last. The three Pilgrim Fellowships of this state (North Carolina) are to have a joint rally at the Congregational-Christian Church in Sanford on Saturday and Sunday, October 30 and 31, 1937.

The conference is scheduled to begin at 2 o'clock, Saturday afternoon, October 30, and will last until about 3:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon.

The entertainment is to be furnished on the Harvard plan, thus making the expense of the conference not to exceed one dollar ($1) for an individual, besides the expense of transportation.

We are asking that all registrations be sent to Miss Elberta Murray, Greensboro College, Greensboro, North Carolina, by October 23rd, for the convenience of the women of the host church, who are preparing a banquet dinner for Saturday evening at 6 o'clock, and who are arranging for the homes for the night.

The Program Committee has worked out a very interesting program and one which we think you will enjoy. We are counting on you to be there and to bring as many young people from your church as you can. Let's see which church can have the largest representation. We're looking forward to seeing you October 30 and 31 at Sanford, North Carolina.

ELBERTA MURRAY,
Acting Secretary.

FLORIDA MAKES PLANS.

The officers of the Florida Pilgrim Fellowship met at Camp Wewa the week-end of October 1st, for the purpose of making plans for the year. The following officers were present: Henry Witte, president; Betty Chicoine, secretary; Peggy Saunders and Frances Barnett, district chairmen; Marinus Latour, college representative; Lucille Taylor, editor "Pilgrim Progress"; Emily Carleton and Earl Ward, council representatives; and Pattie Lee Coghill, and Rev. V. B. Chicoine, counselors. Mrs. Chicoine took the responsibility of furnishing the meals for the group, which was greatly appreciated.

It was decided to emphasize the Pilgrim Fellowship organization—its history, meaning, and relation to the local groups—during the coming year.

At five different points in the state meetings will be held this fall for the young people of our churches, at which time the president will present the above-mentioned things. A definite effort will be made to organize the young people of our churches into a working group.

We hope to have the young people doing more for missions than they have done heretofore. The missionary emphasis will be on Pleasant Hill, both in programs and in raising money. All money will go through the Florida Pilgrim Fellowship treasurer, but it will count on the apportionment for the local church from which it was sent.

Our paper "Pilgrim Progress" will no longer be an "occasional bulletin" but it will be published quarterly, the first issue appearing on October 15th. If anyone would like to have a copy of it, the editor of this page will be glad to send you one.

In order to cooperate more fully with the Southeast Pilgrim Fellowship, each one of the District Chairmen was designated to be the head of a department—Frances Barnett, Devotional Life; Peggy Saunders, World Friendship; and Muriel Poole, Social Action. They are hoping to be able to carry out the plans of the Southeast Superintendents to the best of their ability.

All of the Florida officers were new this year. It was an inspiration to see how much interest they are taking in the work and how enthusiastic they were in their plans for the year. Let us hope that they will be successful in carrying out their plans in the local churches.

LIQUOR—WHAT ARE WE DOING ABOUT IT?

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC
FOR OCTOBER 31, 1931.

SCRIPTURE: Eph. 5:18; Isa.
5:11; Prov. 23:31, 32.

Daily Readings—

Monday—Ancient Prohibitionists—
Num. 6:1-3.

Tuesday—The Illusion of Drink—Prov.
20:1.

Wednesday—A Warning Word—Lk.
21:34-36.

Thursday—Woe to the Tempter—Hab.
2:15.

Friday—Lost Through Drink—I Kings
20:13-21.

Saturday—Stay Away From Drink—
Rom. 13:13, 14.

One of our greatest problems is the liquor traffic. It breeds crime and vice and everything un-Christian. Drinking is injurious to both the physical body and the spiritual life. It is a menace to society. In many places the modern tavern is more corrupt than the old saloon. The freedom from restaurant which is exercised by women makes the tavern a dangerous institution.

When liquor became legal, many promises were made. "Bootlegging would stop, drunkenness would decrease, automobile accidents would decline, political corruption would be reduced, taxes would be lessened, and drinking among young people would be discouraged." These have been only "empty" promises, and none of them have been fulfilled.

Young people may be classed in one of these four attitude groups:

1. They do not see or realize the evils of alcohol. They do not recognize what serious menace the legalized sale of alcohol is.

2. Some people think it smart to use alcohol. They want to be in style, not willing to stand alone.

3. Others drink because they "get a kick out of it." They enjoy it either for its taste or for its effect.

4. Other young people are doing their best to get rid of it. They speak against its use and discourage it among their group.

To Think About—

Is there any such thing as "moderate drinking?" Why ought we to help solve the liquor problem? What may we do to promote the cause of temperance? Is anything being done in your community to discourage drinking? Is the public school giving a good program of alcohol education?

Suggested Hymns—

"Stand Up For Jesus."

"Yield Not to Temptation."

"Take My Life and Let It Be."

O Christ they took Your living words

And made from them a creed;
They built theology upon

The words You meant to lead
Men through their darkness and their doubt

Into the perfect light;
They made hugh walss that shut you out,

And only shut in—night!

CHRISTIAN RENEWAL.

LESSON IV—OCTOBER 24, 1937.

GOLDEN TEXT: For the grace of God hath appeared, bringing salvation to all men.—Titus 2:11.

LESSON: John 10:7-16; Titus 3:1-11.

This lesson has two scriptural backgrounds, the Gospel of John, and the Epistle to Titus. The message from John's Gospel concerns the more abundant life which Christ came to give. It expressly states that Jesus is the Good Shepherd who gives his life for the sheep, through whom they find life, and life more abundant, and through whom they may "go in and out and find pasture," a poetic way of stating that those in Christ have access to resources for daily living, and the secret of finer renewal. This abundant life is the gift of God through Christ, an expression of his love for his children. The possibility of this more abundant life is open to all men—no class nor color has a monopoly on it. There is to be only "one fold, and one Shepherd."

Paul's letter to Titus presents some of the fruits of this more abundant life in Christ. While he insists that we are not saved by works, but by the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, he does insist that if we are saved by grace we will show it by our works which bear the imprint of Christ's spirit upon them. Paul simply puts in one way what Jesus puts in another, "By their fruits ye shall know them."

Respect for Authority.

"Put them in mind to be subject to principalities and powers . . ." Men have a right to change unjust laws and to remove unjust rulers, but they are to preserve respect for authority, to obey law, and to honor rulers. Disobedience and lawlessness are not becoming to a follower of Christ. Godliness promotes law observance and peace.

Ready for Good Works.

"To be ready for every good work"—not only helping to feed the hungry and clothe the naked and visit the sick, but to do works of mercy and to minister to the spiritual needs of men. As we have opportunity, we are to do good to all men, but especially to the household of faith.

Considerate of Others.

"To speak evil of no man, to be no brawlers, but gentle, showing meekness unto all men." If one cannot say anything good about another, let him keep silent. An idle or false word may ruin a man's reputation, or break his heart. Let a man beware of wearing a chip on his shoulder, of being quarrelsome, of being a brawler. Let him rather seek peace and pursue it.

The basis of this meekness, or consideration of others is the fact that we ourselves have been "sometimes foolish, disobedient, deceived, serving divers lusts and pleasures, living in malice and envy, hateful, and hating one another." One should be very careful how he condemns another. It is so easy to see the mote in the other fellow's eye and fail to see the beam in one's own eye. It is so easy for a Christian to forget his own faults in condemning the faults of others. It is well enough for us once in a while to remember that we have done things just as bad as others, indeed that according to our light and privilege, we do things just as bad, if not worse, now. Paul says that we are to "consider ourselves, lest we also be tempted." This is not to condone sin. We are to hate sin, but to love the sinner. In a classic expression which has come down to us through the years, this truth is illustrated. A great and good man used to say every time he saw a drunken man, "There but for the grace of God goes John Newton."

Saved by the Goodness and Grace of God.

"The kindness and love of God, our Saviour, toward man . . . not by works of righteousness but according to his mercy he saved us by the washing of regeneration, and the renewal of the Holy Spirit . . ." No man can buy salvation. No man can earn it. Salvation is simply a gift of the grace of God, an expression of his great love as revealed in Jesus Christ. It is not a matter of justice, it is a matter of mercy. It is not a process of law, but a possession of love. God saves us by changing us from within and from above by the renewing power of His Holy Spirit, and He renews us by the power of that same Spirit. He gives us that Holy Spirit "abundantly through Jesus Christ our Saviour. Thanks be unto God for His unspeakable gift."

Heirs of Eternal Life.

Being justified by his grace, that is being made righteous . . . and that is the only way a man can be made truly righteous, by the grace of Christ changing his heart, we become sons of God, and as sons, heirs of God, and joint heirs with Jesus Christ. We are in line for an inheritance of the Father's immeasurable wealth. But we do not have to wait until we die to enter into our inheritance. The riches of grace in Christ, and the resources of God become the heritage of the child of God. But not all of them—eye hath not seen neither hath entered into the mind or heart of man what good things God has reserved for us in the Father's house of many mansions. "The hope of eternal life" becomes an assured fact in Christ.

Maintaining Good Works.

"I will that thou affirm constantly, that they which have believed in God might be careful to maintain good works." Although a man is not saved by his good works, he ought to show by his good works that he is saved. Jesus said we glorify God when we bear much fruit. Christians are not shade trees, they are fruit trees. Every one who nameth the name of Christ ought to be careful to maintain good works. Paul enjoins Titus the young preacher not to allow his people to forget this basic fact . . . I will that thou affirm constantly . . . that they might be careful to maintain good works. Perhaps the gravest charge against the average Christian is that his goodness is negative goodness. In so many cases he is known more by what he does not do, than by what he does.

Avoiding Foolish Questions.

It is so easy to get into an argument about religion. And usually so futile and foolish. Paul says they are "unprofitable and vain." Let every man know what he believes and why he believes it. But let him avoid contentions and foolish questions which do no good, but harm.

THE BASIS OF LOVING.

"Thou shalt love the Lord thy God, with all thy heart and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind."

This is the first and greatest commandment. And the second is like unto it:

Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."—Matt. 22: 37-39.

This is the glorious commandment. What a just thing it is! There is no salvation without it.

For instance, a young couple gets married. The young bride may know by the first decision her husband makes whether he loves her with an enduring love or not. If his first decision is rendered upon a basis of himself, his love is not enduring, for love is not selfish. If it is rendered upon the basis of her welfare, then she is certain that his love is true and will carry through.

The basis of society's happy living is love.

Prayer—Our Father, as Christ Thy Son is the way of happy living give us faith, courage, and yearning souls for that love that comes through Him. Amen.

TUESDAY.

SILENT WITNESSING.

"Let your light so shine before men that they may see our good works and glorify your Father which is in heaven."—Matt. 5: 16.

Recently, a story came to us. It is a story of a Korean merchant who bought out the business of a city grocery store in the Korean section of Los Angeles. A friend was calling upon this Korean merchant and the first thing that greeted him was a big attractive sign which said: "This store will close on Sundays. This store will not sell liquor."

While this friend was tarrying, people came in with jugs in their hands asking for wine. "Oh," said the merchant, "did you not see the sign?" "We do not sell liquor here," "What sort of joint is this," said they. "This is a grocery store," said the merchant, "we shall be glad to sell you what we have. We will not sell liquor here." These people left, it is said, disgusted. As they were growling their complaint to a nearby merchant, the latter said: "Oh yes, he is a Christian."

We are told that this was the first store in this section to eliminate liquor from its business and to close up on the Sabbath. However, the new standard has spread and others are doing the same.

It pays to witness for Jesus.

Prayer—(Pray as you feel).

WEDNESDAY.

I KNOW WHERE YOU HAVE BEEN.

"Now when they saw the boldness of Peter and John . . . they took knowledge of them that they had been with Jesus."—Acts 4: 13.

Peter and John must have been luminous souls. Christian living is luminous. The salvation of the world will come through that kind of influence.

Bulgaria is noted for its perfume, known as Attar of the Roses. We are told that the blossoms in these valleys of beauty fill all the country with fragrance. The odor, which would quickly disappear if the flowers were not picked when ready, is captured and held for all the world to enjoy.

The garments of the workers are permeated with this perfume so that wherever they go, the air is sweetened and their friends say: "Oh, I know where you have been—in the valley of the roses."

Do others know where we have been Prayer—Our Father, make us brave, intelligent and strong with the character of goodness and truth, that others may know that we live with Jesus. Amen.

THURSDAY.

GOD IN SMALL THINGS.

What is man that Thou art mindful of him?"—Ps. 8: 4.

Some "broadminded" people say that God is too busy and too big to be expected to bother about the little petty affairs of our everyday life.

Does this miss the mark of the greatness of God? The sun is the greatest thing in the universe and yet it is not so great but that it is entirely reflected in the smallest dew drop of the morning.

God is so great that He is encompassed, not only in every child of His but in every act of every child. The Infinite One who is concerned with the affairs of the universe and the paths of the outer spaces, is also concerned over the affairs of a single human heart.

Prayer—Our Father, we are thankful that Thou hast set eternity in our hearts, and hath enabled us to think our thoughts after Thee. Help us to live everyday in a manner befitting this reality. Amen.

FRIDAY.

EMOTION IN RELIGION.

"Our hearts burned within us."—Luke 24: 31.

The spirit of the present age is that emotion in religion is taboo.

They say that religion should be reasonable and intellectual and that the expression of emotion is superficial and artificial. At the same time people are emotional in everything else—fraternity, clubs, society, community spirit. In all of them, they think it is necessary to parade and whoop up the cause, in order to make a success of it. Is it consistent? Is it reasonable? Is it sanity to be emotional in the secular things and leave the fires of religion to perish?

Glowing hearts are better evidences of Christianity than a brilliant brain. It may be true that the world is weary of theological hair-splitting, but it is also true that burning love is a vital part of religion and burning love is emotional. Jesus craved love and fellowship. He inspires love. And we ought to always be able to say, with Peter, "Thou knowest that I love Thee."

Prayer—

"This is our earnest plea,
More love, O Christ, to Thee,
More love to Thee."

SATURDAY.

NEVER TOO DEEP FOR GOD.

"When thou passeth through the waters, I will be with thee."—Isiah 43: 2.

A father once took his boy afishing. The boy was nervous as the boat was pushed out from the shore. He said to his daddy, "Daddy, is the water over my head?" "Yes, son." "Is it over your head?" "Yes, son." "Is it over God's head?" "No, my boy."

Have you ever passed through deep waters? How are times with you now? Perhaps there never will be a time when the world will be without trials and tribulations, sufferings and sorrows, death and destruction—deep waters. However, be assured that the water is not too deep for God. His succor is sufficient and sure. Trust Him.

Prayer—Our Father, we cry to Thee for Thy help midst all the menacing things of life. Thou art our Saviour through Thy Son. Save us or we perish. Amen.

SUNDAY.

LOVE'S LONGING.

"In Thy Presence is fulness of joy."—Ps. 16: 11.

What do we want most of those whom we love? Just to be near them.

THE SPIRIT OF VICTORY.

By REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D.

"This is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith."—I John 5:4.

There are battles to be fought, and the hardest are not fought with explosives, and poison gas. The hard fought battles are of a subtler, quieter type "no marshalling troops, no bivouac song; not banners to gleam and wave," but they are the real battles after all. The slaughter battles which are still holding on, are of such little use any more.

Battles within. Battles over self are real battles. The other day a friend of mine, whose life is high and noble, told he was having a battle with himself. A neighbor gave me a bad deal, and shook my faith in him. I feel ill toward him, but I know that my ill-feeling toward him dampens my spiritual power and joy, so I must fight it out on the basis of love—love even for my enemies. I cannot bear to hold ill-will, and every time something within me asserts that ugly feeling I shall fight it down. That is victory.

The other day I asked a small group of folks why they did not come to church. They said they did not feel dressed enough, and they did not have the price in their hands. There is a big battle for them to fight, because they should whip down that ill-advised attitude. It is a very real battle to them. They really feel that they would be out of place, although you and I know they could not be out of place, and that there are many illustrations of very poor people attending the church regularly and enjoying their worship immensely. However, to them it is a big thing. And to overcome that feeling is for them a real battle. Much happiness, and joy in their lives depends on their overcoming that feeling. How much happier their lives, their homes, their children, if they could bring themselves to putting on the best they had, whatever it was, and coming to their house of worship, and praise, and prayer.

Let me be an advocate for them. Let me suggest that you and I do all in our power to relieve the situation which is holding them back. Let you and me help make it so that economically they shall be able, by helping develop a better understanding and appreciation all around. So far as we can let you and me do all we can to remove the cause of their poverty; and at the same time let us so live at church and on the street, and everywhere that they shall know their places are vacant at their church, and that they are wanted there. Haven't the price! Let them come without money and without price, if need be; but let them come. God needs them, and they need God. You and I want them, and God wants them; and their homes and families need the uplift that worship of God will give them. "This is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith." Have we the faith? Has the church the faith? The church has a duty to perform, a faith to exercise, a battle to fight, and a victory to win.

Again I wish to speak for a verdict in favor of the boys and girls of our Sunday school. God bless them, they are the children of our homes and of our hearts. They are far more precious than silver and gold, more beautiful are their beaming faces than rubies and diamonds. We have had to look this autumn for teachers to teach them in our Sunday school. It takes forty teachers for the forty classes, to say nothing of the others who act as officers, helpers, and substitute teachers. There are but few places where more lasting good can be done by a true Christian than in teaching boys and girls in Sunday school. Shall those boys and girls grow through these great plastic years of their lives without your leadership, and your helpful instruction. The battles that will win the full lives of these young people is a battle worth fighting, and it is a victory worth winning. Faith that looks across the years, and see them mature men and women, active in church and community as true Christian leaders, is the victory. But that faith for tomorrow without the works of instruction and guidance today is worthless: "Faith without works is dead."

Some people will not give themselves to the joy of faith. They are afraid that faith is too fine to be a reality in life. Faith is full of joy and happiness. They are afraid of faith. They know nothing but hum-drum 'having,' never hoping, never believing never trusting. If they cannot see it, they do not believe it; and that which they do not already hold in their hands they will not hope for in their hearts. It is a pitiable state to live, but it has a host of people within its borders. Judas did not believe it, and that ended Judas; but did not stop the plan of salvation. Peter did not lack faith, he was simply afraid. But when Jesus sold him forever on love for him that perfect love cast out all his fear and the Christian world is well acquainted with the results.

Honest doubt is respectable and must be treated with the finest consideration and patience. But the cold, calculating, disbelief is deadly. Do not harbor that sort of sickly pessimism in your soul. It does not bring you happiness, and it is contrary to the will of God. Have faith. "Without faith it is impossible to please God." And have you ever thought how it is also true that without faith it is impossible to please man? Disbelief pleases neither God, nor man. The world is looking for men of faith!

Now faith is the victory: "This is the victory that overcometh the world even our faith." Have faith in your church and its programs. Have faith in its members and its plans. Have faith in its Christ and His constraining love. Faith is the victory. Faith will overcome any lack of interest, or funds—that is faith coupled with love and works. The other night a group of men making up the board of finance of this church sat in solemn council. Several of the men seemed nervous about the source of funds with which to meet the building fund obligation of several thousand dollars. But there was one man whose composure and faith was so noticeable that it was commented on at the close of the meeting by some who remained in the church office. And it was the unanimous thought of that small group that one of the finest assets in our church was the implicit faith of a few of its men and women in the entire membership of the church. That faith simply cements the large membership together as a unite, and things come to pass. Faith pleases God. Faith pleases men. "We live by faith." "Ye are saved by faith." Faith is the victory.

"That is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith." And the word 'overcome' is the victory cry. Jesus says, "To him that overcometh I will grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I overcame and am set down with my Father in his throne." You will not fight a losing battle if you have faith, for faith is the victory.

Love your enemy, bless your haters,
Said the greatest of the great;
Christian love among the churches
Looked the twin of heathen hate.

—Tennyson.

The Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:—

The North Carolina State fair was on last week at Raleigh. The school children got free tickets on Friday. A number of our larger children wanted to go. We had made up our minds to go and let the children who had tickets go. But alas! On Friday morning there was a great frost and ice. The thermometer was standing at thirty degrees—two below freezing. The potato tops were frozen like cakes of ice.

That meant to dig potatoes and not go to the fair. Sure we were all disappointed but we did not cry. Friday and Saturday we dug potatoes and by Saturday afternoon at 5 o'clock we had stored in our potato house 624 bushels. We had two big loads on the two wagons that we ran under the shelter and told them to wait till Monday. We had had enough of potato digging for the day. We still have another patch to dig yet. We hope when we get them all in that we will have 800 bushels. Pretty good for a group of little boys at an orphanage.

We were disappointed not to go to the State fair, but we are happy to have a good crop of potatoes. It means a lot of food value this winter.

Thanksgiving will soon be here. We want every church to do its best this Thanksgiving. The offering will count in the 1938 quota for the orphanage in the Conference apportionments. It will be fine to show your appreciation for the many blessings that have come to you this year.

Bountiful chops, good prices and good health—three great blessings. Are you thankful? If so, share with the little children in your orphanage.

"THY NEIGHBOR AS THYSELF."

By DR. CHARLES STELZLE, Ex.

Director, Good Neighbor League.

It is a striking fact that in the prayer which Jesus taught His disciples, commonly known as the "Lord's Prayer," there isn't a single "I" or "my" in the petitions which He suggested. It is definitely a social prayer and no man can offer this prayer for himself alone. He must also include his neighbor.

And when the rich young ruler, and the lawyer who tried to embarrass Jesus, asked Him to give them the fundamental rule of life, Jesus replied: "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." Upon this precept, He added—together with the command to love God with heart and soul and mind—"hang all the law and the prophets." To these outstanding declarations may be added innumerable events and teachings in the life of Christ which illustrate the social principle thus announced. These incidents and teachings are familiar to all students of the Bible.

We are very much concerned today about finding cures for unemployment, low wages, long hours, child labor, unsanitary conditions, crowded tenements, poverty, sickness, war, and a host of other ills that afflict society, and we hold the national and international conferences in order to find the remedy for these deplorable conditions.

Unquestionably, to remove these evils requires statesmanship of the highest order. We enlist the interest of specialists so that we may utilize their highly developed knowledge. And yet, we almost invariably avoid the major issue. We forget the fundamental method of love for our neighbors. We piously preach about it from our pulpits. We oblige ourselves as "Brothers" in fraternal organization. We sometimes promise to observe it when we unite with the Church—insofar as our relationship to our fellow members is concerned—in order to preserve "the peace and harmony of the Church."

But when men get together in an attempt to reach an agreement regarding industry, Social Reform, National Problems and International Affairs, they fight for the supremacy of their own class or for themselves as individuals. Should someone make an appeal for "neighborliness" he is regarded as sentimental, and often he is charged with being insincere. And almost always it is considered as a mere platitude.

The time has come in human affairs to get back to the simplicity of the supreme command of Jesus. Let us face the social and economic facts honestly and with an open mind. Let us search for those things which will help remedy the evils of our day and generation, but above all, and through it all, let us heed that upon which hangs all the law and the prophets: "Thou shalt love thy Neighbor as Thyself." There is no greater remedy for the healing of the woes of the world, and without it no other permanent remedy will be found.

MAKE ME A MAN.

God, make me a man—

Give me strength to stand for right,
When other folks have left the fight.
Give me the courage of the man
Who knows that if he wills he can.
Teach me to see in every face
The good, the kind, and not the base.
Make me sincere in word and deed,
Blot out from me all sham and greed.
Help me to guard my troubled soul
By constant, active, self-control.
Clean up my thoughts, my speech, my play,
And keep me pure from day to day.
O, make of me a man!

WE NEED THINKERS.

which may be of service. We need somebody who can think through difficult problems and apply Christian principles to church work with the same effectiveness that "Boss" Kettering does in the automobile industry.

At present THE CHRISTIAN SUN is struggling against seemingly impossible odds, but nobody has time to do anything about it. The Board of Christian Education is eager to put on an effective program in our churches, but funds are not available and no one knows just what to do. The Mission Board struggles to collect money and aid struggling churches, but it feels itself only partially successful. Ministerial Relief is administered to only the most needful cases. Stewardship, church finance, evangelism and many other phases of church work are left without anyone to bid us what to do and to guide us in paths that lead to success. We need somebody to think for us and to guide us in our work.

This person will cost money. It may cost big money to get the right person and sufficient helpers, but it is costing us far more to do without that person. It is costing us little churches and little church programs. It is costing us poorly paid ministers struggling with financial obligations they can never pay. It is costing us a generation of untrained leaders. It is costing us far more than we can afford in this day of rapid progress. We need somebody to think for us, to show us how we can not only pay for the thinking, but to do many other things which need to be accomplished in this Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches.

FAMILY ALTAR.

We do not ask gifts or brilliant talk, but only association. It is the presence of the beloved that is love's richest reward.

So it is with the love of God. A consciousness of His nearness is supreme boon. To feel His presence, to be conscious of His fellowship, is the ultimate desire of every loving heart. Many and varied are the wants of every one of us; but our real need is for God Himself.

Prayer—Give us of Thyself, O God, for we ask no lesser gift. Flood our spirits with the realization of Thy presence, according to Thy promise. Amen.

Amos R. Wells.

I Am the Soul of Man

By J. J. PRUITT

I am the soul of man—
Hungry, hunted and disillusioned!
Crying from the twilight of desolation.
My voice swells like the tide of the sea,
Until the foundations of palaces tremble
And mountains crumble into dust.

I am the soul of man—
Harried by task-masters
Who are mad with lust for power;
I am driven
With the lash of persecution
In the hands of men who are mad
With biological fanaticisms,
Repeating the emotional instabilities
Of the tyrants of remote centuries.

I am the soul of man—
Seeking a Promised Land;
But following the wandering light
Of feeble tapers in the night.

I am the soul of man—
Hungry and hurt,
And urged by foolish leaders
To fill my belly with the husks
Fit only for swine.

I am the soul of man—
Thrust into the maws of machines of murder
And smoothed by demigogues
With the swift anesthetic of words.
My name is legion—
My destiny is oblivion;
My hope is destroyed.

I am the soul of man—
Despised and forsaken awhile;
But as the sun rises to its meridian
I shall rise because I am the soul of man—
In the plan of the Infinite
For Time
And for Eternity.

Mountain-Top Men

Said the Emperor Marcus Aurelius: "Live as on a mountain."

There is something vibrant and inspiring about mountains.
How can one be mentally small who associates with the magnificent bigness of mountains?

Great men live on Mental Mountains.

Their spirits tower above the storms;

Their minds are above doubt, cynicism, and despair;

Their horizons are expanded; their mental frontiers are broad;

Their visions are lifted above the fog of petty things;

They look out over the obstacles into the Promised Land of Tomorrow;

They see the rainbows while little men battle with phantom shadows in the valley;

They see the sun in the east while the valley-dwellers burn their tiny lamps in darkness;

Their heads are in the clouds but their feet are bedded in the solid Rock of Fact and Reason;

They dare the sky; they take the risks;

Like the Alpine Guide, they would have as their epitaph these words: "He died climbing."

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

Be sure to attend your conference this fall.

Rev. G. C. Crutchfield aided Rev. W. J. Andes in a meeting at Leaks-ville (Luray, Virginia), last week.

"Enclosed you will find two dollars for SUN. May the Father's richest blessings rest on you and your work is the prayer of your old true friend." This is the kind of a letter the editor likes.

At a recent conference at Berea Christian Church, Norfolk, Mrs. Joe A. French, wife of the pastor, was elected as a deaconess, Mrs. E. E. Waterfield is also a deaconess of the same church.

During the week of September 19th Rev. J. Everett Neese assisted Rev. J. M. Allred in a meeting at Randleman Christian Church. There were fifteen professions and five additions to the church.

Mr. Alfred Dofflemyer, of Bethel Christian Church, Elkton, Virginia, says that his church is planning for financial and soul-winning campaigns. The Board of Christian Education was glad to furnish them some material and would like to help other churches also.

Mrs. Roy D. Coulter, wife of the pastor of several of our churches in the Valley of Virginia, is in the Rockingham Memorial Hospital, in Harrisonburg, Virginia. She has been quite ill but was somewhat improved at the last report. Prayers are requested for recovery.

All young people in North Carolina are invited to attend the Pilgrim Fellowship meeting at Sanford Christian Church on Saturday afternoon and Sunday of this week. This should be a fine opportunity for young people in the Old North State, and it is to be hoped that every church will be represented.

Rev. F. C. Lester, editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN was elected to membership on the Prudential Committee for the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions last Saturday at the annual meeting of the Board held in Concord, New Hampshire. He attended the meeting of the Prudential Committee in Boston Tuesday and Wednesday of this week.

MT. OLIVET (R) CHURCH.

Sunday, October 17th, marked the first anniversary of the coming of our beloved pastor and his wife, Rev and Mrs. Roy D. Coulter, to the Valley of Virginia and the Mt. Olivet (R) Church. The anniversary sermon was brought to us by the pastor, choosing as his text: "Teach Us to Number Our Days, That We May Apply Our Hearts Unto Wisdom"—Psa. 90:12. During the service he remarked that his life had been greatly enriched by the year's service in the Valley. Looking back over the year's work, we have made much progress with the untiring efforts of our pastor and co-operation of the people. We have a good Sunday School, superintended by Mr. B. C. Shifflett, which stays open the year around. We also have an active Young People's Society under the leadership of the writer. We had a very successful Daily Vacation Bible School this year, which was conducted by Miss Evelyn Ayseue, assisted by Miss Ruth Strickler and the writer. We had an average attendance of twenty-six. We also entertained our Annual Conference this year on August 4th and 5th, and the house was filled to capacity.

The young people took a special program to the Dry Run Church, of Seven Fountains, Virginia, another of the churches which our pastor is serving. There were forty-five young people who went on the school bus for this program on August 8th.

The past Sunday night, October 17th, we gave a missionary playlet entitled "Something Big" at the preaching service. We are at present saddened by the illness of our pastor's wife in Rockingham Memorial Hospital, in Harrisonburg. We earnestly pray for her complete recovery.

We are now facing another year with these two good workers, and we pray by the grace of God that we will continue to grow. May His richest blessings rest upon the Mt. Olivet (R) Church.

TEMPERANCE NEWS.

Grant Bernards and Claire Challengren, of Bricelyn, Minnesota, recently bought a cafe and started operating it so that people who do not wish to drink wine and beer may have a place to eat without having to be bothered with these alcoholic beverages. Wouldn't it be fine if other young men would start similar businesses?

W. S. Alexander, the Federal Alcohol Administrator, has recently urged the breweries to be more careful with their advertising. He said, "Distillers are using brazen, insidious methods to make the public liquor conscious in order to step up assumption to take care of overproduction." The distillers evidently believe that advertising pays, but it will not pay the boys and girls in your home who read it.

El Paso, Texas, has 174 saloons, or more than five times as many as the city had before the advent of prohibition 18 years ago. Some seem to remember a promise that saloons would not return.

* * *

Four residents of Petaluma, California, including one woman, have recently been in the federal court for depriving the government of a million dollars in taxes through two illicit distillery rings. Somebody said there was not to be any illicit liquor after repeal.

* * *

Minnesota has made it illegal to ride with a drunken driver. If a tavern keeper advises a tippler who has "too much" to get in his car and drive home he is subject to arrest. Looks like Minnesota may be in earnest about enforcing the law and saving human life on the highway.

A TURKEY DINNER.

At this season of the year when many churches are entertaining conference groups, it might be interesting to know something of what it takes to serve a turkey dinner. The Ladies of the Christian Temple, Norfolk, Virginia, led by Mrs. R. P. Salehell and Mrs. C. C. Johnson served a dinner consisting of fruit cocktail, turkey and dressing, cranberries, celery, pickles, green peas, candied yams, hot rolls, coffee, ice cream and cake, nuts and mints.

To serve this meal to ninety people, the following was required: 34½ lbs. turkey; 10 loaves bread for dressing; 12 stalks celery centers for table, other for dressing; 1 gal. cranberries; ½ gal. pickles; 1 case peas; 150 rolls; 3 lbs. butter; ½ bu. potatoes; 2 lbs. coffee; 2 lbs. mints; 2 lbs. nuts.

NOTICE.

Delegates and others who wish entertainment, meals or lodging, during the Eastern Virginia Conference, which is to be held at Holland Christian Church, November 3, 4, 5, will kindly notify the pastor, Rev. Carl R. Key at once, so arrangements can be made.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgement and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

THE CHURCH AND SUNDAY.

Since the days of Moses, Jews have observed the seventh day as the time for rest and spiritual renewal. This they call the Sabbath. Jesus observed the Sabbath by attending the Synagogue services and otherwise rendering aid to those who might need His help. After the resurrection of Jesus, which occurred on the first day of the week, the disciples began to observe Sunday in memory of the resurrection of Jesus. Gradually this practice took the place of the ancient Sabbath by the Christians. The Church has had sufficient influence to make Sunday the day for religious services in a good portion of the world.

Today there seems to be a tendency to forget the proper use of Sunday. This is noticeable among many who are members of the Church. Apparently, they do not think that Sunday is a memorial to the resurrection and should be used only for those things that will bring renewal of life. In America we face the recent change that has put service stations along all highways where gasoline, automobile supplies, drinks and food are served to the passerby all day Sunday. This is the big day for service stations because most Americans want to ride when Sunday comes.

This Sunday traffic seems to make necessary, so some think, the opening of theatres and other places of amusement. Baseball games, beach resorts and many types of pleasures are offered to those who seek it. Commercial pleasure is making terrific inroads on the religious observance of a day sacred to the memory of the resurrected Christ.

Unless the Church renews its stand concerning the observance of Sunday, the chances are that in a comparatively short time there will be no Sunday worthy of the name. Non-Christians will not keep this holy day sacred for the Church and the world. Only those who love the Lord Jesus Christ will do honor to His memory. Unfortunately, many who are members of the Church pay little heed to observance of the day. They join with the multitudes who make holiday of a holy day. Here is a problem worthy of the serious thought and active endeavor of both pastors and people, for if the sacred day goes, the Church is also gone. If there is no time for religious service, there will be no time for religion. If there is no Christian observance, there will be no Christian living and no Christian Church.

Any laws regulating Sunday observance are usually referred to as "Blue Laws." These ancient laws came from people who established a fine form of government and developed strong characters. It is doubtful that our modern laxness will either preserve the government given to us or grow character worthy of our forebears. Your editor believes that the Church needs to emphasize anew the values in properly observing a Christian Sunday. When the people are minded to do that, the problem of church attendance will be largely solved. Then the members will want to follow the example of the Christ who made it His custom to worship in the House of the Lord on the Sacred day.

WHAT KIND OF A HYPOCRITE ARE YOU?

Every so often somebody rises to remark that there are hypocrites in the Church. Pastors who visit in the homes will hear this as an excuse why members do not attend or do not work. They hear it also by outsiders who are being invited to become a part of the Church of Jesus Christ and to share in the work of redeeming the world. Jesus said something about hypocrites, or rather He said something to Hypocrites.

He was talking to the kind of people who went to the church to find fault. They were there at the time of worship, but they were not there to join in the worship. They were there to pick flaws. They could not enjoy the worship service. They didn't like the preacher and therefore they didn't like the service, even though the prayer was supposed to come out of their own hearts and not from the lips of the speaker. They didn't get comfort from what Jesus said; neither do those who attend church today in order to criticize.

Jesus called those hypocrites who did not lay their hands to the task of relieving human burdens but rather spent their time in performing religious rites. Those who attended the services, wore the name of the Church, and even paid a tenth of their income, but who did not get under the burdens of the Church with their hearts and souls and hands and really make the world a better place in which to live—people of that type looked into the flashing eyes of Jesus and heard Him say in a way they could never forget: "Ye hypocrites!" There are still people with talents, God-given gifts, who stand aloof from the activities of the Church, and yet desire the blessings which the Church has to give. They will not serve. Some frivolous excuse is offered on every possible occasion, but service is not rendered. To them Jesus speaks as He did to the Scribes and Pharisees who made similar excuses—"Ye hypocrites!"

There are many types of hypocrites still living in the world. They may lie and cheat and steal, but they deceive themselves more than they do others. Certainly they do not deceive the God who made them and gives them opportunities for personal development. The all-seeing eye of the infinite God looks straight into the human heart, and the voice of the Master of men says, "What kind of a hypocrite are you?"

DAY LESSON.

If I, who at night in faith lie down to sleep,
Waken by day when light doth flood the sky,
Shall I not wake from that last silent sleep
When light draws nigh?

THAT DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE

By CHAPLAIN ALBERT N. CORPENING.

Albert Newton Corpening received the degree of B.A. and M.A. from Wake Forest College, the degrees of B.D. and Th.M. from Crozer Seminary. He has done graduate work at the University of Pennsylvania and at the University of Chicago. This article is reprinted from the October issue of The Army Chaplain.

The little conventions or customs that are observed in every community form a basis for restriction upon the movements of men. Each stratum of society has its own peculiar conventions that must be adhered to. Those who break over are either lionized or made outcasts, generally the latter. These things have to do with the kind of clothes one wears, according to season and the time of day, the way he introduces people, the manner of speech. It includes such expressions as "Please" and "Thank you." Occasionally these customs become incorporated into law. We have, for example, the custom of driving on the right side of the road, the custom of being reasonably quiet during religious services and other public assemblies, and such courtesies as holding out one's hand to indicate the direction of a turn when using an automobile.

Occasionally such conventions are carried over from a day when conditions differed and are now obsolete. Most of them, however, are accepted as necessary for a smooth-running society and are expressions of courtesy to those about us. Such is the custom of introducing gentlemen to ladies instead of ladies to gentlemen, rising to give one's seat to the aged or weak, the driving upon an accepted side of the road, and the observance of quiet at a public assembly. The omission of the word, "Please," from most requests changes them into orders, commands that are apt to result in rudeness and a failure to recognize the rights of others in such matters. The words, "Thank you," show an appreciation for courtesies performed, give happiness to the person who is thanked, and offer an incentive for repeated courtesies to others. When too much is taken for granted, either because it is a routine or because of the recipient's arrogance and self-importance, resentment and dislike are certain to result, and a smooth-running society is disrupted. Imagine, if you will, the result of a man who makes up his mind to break all the conventions of society, including the observance of driving upon the right side of the road. The result of his persistence in driving upon the left side of the road would be most disastrous.

Independence for the political rule of other nations has resulted in many a revolt in the course of the world's history, including our own Declaration of Independence, July 4, 1776, in which such questions as taxes, representation, judges being paid by the fees from convictions, and the quartering of armies on the civilian population without reimbursing them were matters for consideration. The Egyptian revolted against the Babylonian, the Jew against the Egyptian, the German against the Frank, the Briton against the Norman, the Dutch against the Spaniard, and so on through a long gamut of tribes and nations. Whenever and wherever nations have felt the heel of a foreign oppressor, they have revolted against him, made their declaration of independence, and, successfully or not, have endeavored to assure their freedom.

Occasionally the revolt has been within the nation itself against wrongs, real or supposed, or against the individual at the helm. We have recently seen this in the rise of Hitler and Mussolini. In Russia, the resulting government is in the hands of a committee, supposedly, but in reality seems to be in the hands of Stalin as an individual. Like revolting groups in all history, the conqueror in winning what he considers his own freedom encroaches upon the freedom of others. In Italy, it has resulted in muzzling the press, the training of the children in the arts of war from a very early age, and restrictions on travel and free speech. In Germany, a new religion is being forced upon the youth of Germany. Neither Catholics nor Protestants are free. Approximately six million German boys and girls, between the ages of eight and eighteen have been taught to desire a church that recognizes the supreme authority of the National Socialist State, that rejects the spirit of Christian internationalism" (Lit. Dig., Ag. 8, '36, p. 26). Again German youth observe the age-old festivals of their pagan forefathers. Oppression is almost certain to result for others when the oppressed come into power.

Declarations of independence against the restrictions of religion have been fairly common. Christianity itself was a revolt against some of the abuses of Judaism. In the days of the French Revolution, France as a nation decided to throw off the bonds of religion as a superstition that was handicapping the people. She set up for worship a Goddess of Reason and fixed every tenth day as a day of rest of every month. For some reason or other, the new goddess did not meet the needs of France. Russia, under its new government, closed practically all of its churches, proclaimed Christianity a tool of capitalism, and subservient to the freedom of the Russian people, and taught and still teaches atheism. When Mexico adopted its new constitution, it closed all church schools and later closed churches. Carefully prepared instruction was given in the public schools in order to inculcate atheism. In some states, churches are permitted to be opened for worship again now. The Nationalist Government in Spain declared its independence of religion and sponsored atheism in the destruction of churches and persecution of various church orders except in the Basque (which remains Catholic).

The new teaching of science in this country sometimes fosters a declaration of independence from religion. This is particularly true of studies in behavioristic psychology. Many a young man comes out of his new freedom from religion and with disdain for many of the traditional teachings of his traditional church. He has been educated out of religion and feels very superior at no longer being bound by it. It may take years to understand that somehow the Goddess of Reason does not entirely take the place of God. Henry C. Link, nationally recognized consulting psychologist, was one of these. He married a young woman with similar views to his own. They decided to (Continued on page 9.)

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Under the caption, "We Need Thinkers," the Editor of THE SUN wrote a challenging article in the issue of October 21st. This article is suggested and touches a vital spot in our church life. The central thought is directed to the need of someone who will think the way through the various problems of the Convention and the tasks of the local church.

Assuming that pastors and business men are too busy to think in terms of the larger outlook, the editor intimates that there should be some person whose chief business shall be to think for the denomination.

Now the fact is that any person who undertakes to think and plan for the whole church soon discovers that he also is a very busy man. As a rule he is just about as busy as any pastor or business man can be in any place on the face of the earth. If the Southern Convention should select and elect some man to think for the combined interests of its constituents, how much time would he have for constructive thinking? Is there any assurance that this official would have the privilege of leisurely taking up the various problems unmolested by daily calls for conferences and other types of service? How can any man worth his board and clothes escape the stress and the strain of being busy?

As a rule busy men are the men who think in the larger realms of life. It is a mistake to think that a business man does not have time to think seriously and intelligently concerning the problems of his church. Busy pastors are trained to think. They are compelled to deal with hard problems and serious questions. Business men and pastors have a background of great value when dedicated to the kingdom of God. The heads of the various departments of the church are capable of enriching the kingdom by their experience and superior knowledge.

There is a need for a thinker. But there is a greater need for many thinkers. And there is a still greater need for concerted action to support those who think in terms of the larger church. Leaders give much time and thought to working out plans for the various enterprises of the church. The ink is not dry on the records before someone attempts to throw a monkey wrench into the machinery and upset the adopted order. "Away with the old order, adopt something new," is a favorite slogan with many people.

Our Convention needs united thinking and united thinkers. The Christian denomination arose as an expression of a desire for democracy in religion. Democracy in government may lose its form as the voice of the people, but may the good Lord deliver us from throwing off our individual responsibility to use our heads and hands in the work of the church. Many committees in our Conferences and Convention never have a formal meeting to consider the work assigned them. Such committees could spend some time thinking in their respective fields. As Secretary of a Conference and the Convention this writer knows something about the methods of committees. In the Conference and Convention files are many committee reports written with pencil or pen after the respective session was called to order.

We would make a plea for thinkers in every field of our church. Pastors are busy, but not too busy to think. Laymen are busy, but they can find time to act. If they will not act under our present system, what would they do under some other type of organization? Would they have more time, and would they use it more freely for supporting the elected thinker for the church? Support our present leadership and we will advance the cause of our beloved church.

I. W. JOHNSON.

THE SUPPORT OF OUR ENTERPRISES.

It is the policy of our Convention to ascertain as accurately as possible the financial requirements of all Convention departments and enterprises, to apportion the amount required to the several conferences with the instructions that the conferences apportion to the churches their share in the Convention's total annual budget. The amount to be raised by the churches of the convention is in excess of $30,000. The Convention's interests sharing in this total budget are the Convention itself, THE CHRISTIAN SUN, Home and Foreign Missions, Superannuation, Christian Education, Elon College, and the Christian Orphanage.

The Convention, through its special committee, considered carefully the needs of these different interests and apportioned to each what, in its judgment, was a sufficient amount to meet actual demands. Each department and interests of the convention is of vital importance to the whole program. No one department can receive its full share while other departments do not, and be continually prospered thereby. The Convention did not presume to designate any one department of more value than the other. By recognizing the real worth of all, it sought to make adequate provisions for the needs of all. All departments should share and share alike. We cannot push one department ahead of another and expect the church as a whole to go forward. We are all members one of another. If one member suffers, we all suffer. No one department need boast of its success when other departments fail. No one department should be gratified if its success is made at the expense of other departments.

We have come to the place where we must consider our church as a unit, look at our program as a whole, then face our task like Christian men and women, realizing that the church is the body of Christ and that as constituent members of that church we are under obligation to see that its every interest is supported adequately according to our several abilities.

It is the hope and prayer of the writer that as our conferences meet in annual session, we may find ourselves in one place and in one accord. May the spirit of God guide those who make our programs and may the presence of Christ be with us in the execution of the programs.

A PASTOR'S DAY.

Sunday is not the only day a pastor has, although I must say last Sunday was a busy day for this particular pastor. I taught a class of young men at Sunday school, preached at 11 o'clock, made an address at 3:30 at the Ninetieth Anniversary of the First Church, Norfolk, made an address to the Young People's Christian Endeavor at 6:45, and preached at 7:30. And, what is more I enjoyed it.

But Sunday, as I was saying, is not the only day a pastor has. Yesterday I spent the morning in the study, had two important conferences in the afternoon, which took the time up to supper-time. I felt that the daily turn of pastoral calls had not been made, and, although I was scheduled for a meeting of more than forty women of our church at 7:30, there were calls I felt I had to get in somewhere. Hurriedly eating my evening meal, I drove out to make a call on a new family, a father and three children.

When I reached the door I found one of the children, a lovely little girl, about five, very sick. I convinced the little girl that she was going to be better now that the minister had come to see her, and had a prayer for her, and her family. They appreciated it very much.

It had been several weeks since I had seen one of the dear old mothers in our church, blind and feeble, but courageously Christian, and so appreciative of every call the pastor makes. A few minutes after 8:00 I knocked on her door. No response. I knocked again, and then I called out her name, thinking that perhaps her only son and his wife were out for the evening, for she insists that they go out occasionally, and she responded, "Who's there," for she did not answer the door when she was alone. I told her who it was, and she as quickly as she could opened the door. We had such a pleasant visit together, and she told me how she had prayed in the spring for the return from the hospital of her only son, and how the Lord answered her prayer, how she knew the Lord had answered her prayer, and she added: "Do you know what I was doing when you knocked on that door? I was sitting here in prayer of praise and gratitude to God for giving me back my son."

God must get a lot of thanks that the world does not know about! There she sat alone, blind, just praising God for his goodness to her! She had time to pray. She had the heart of gratitude. She is an inspiration to the little circle of friends who know and love her.

About 9 o'clock I hastened away to another home where there was a sick father, and his wife and son, and also a widowed mother. I found gratitude there for the pastor's visit, and there, too, I joined with them in prayer and praise to God. I went to the meeting of women of one of the circles of the church, enjoyed their fellowship for a short while, and went on to home where I had an engagement to see a young business man about becoming a Sunday school teacher. At 11 o'clock I had won him for that important post and was on my way to close the day.

To any young man thinking of becoming a minister, I wish to say it is one of the most glorious tasks in all the world. The work is hard, and sometimes the corners are rough, and the strain is great, and the hold on this world's goods is never large. But every true minister will feel that he is more than rewarded for all he does, and he, too, will join with others in silent, unseen places, in a prayer of gratitude to God for his good and gracious providences. If you have the call and the courage, come on, for the opportunities and privileges are truly great!

HE IS MY ROCK,

A PRAYER FOR THE ORPHANAGE.

By REV. EVERETT LESHNER.

Infinite Father, in the name of Him for whom no room could be found in the Inn when he was a little babe, we call upon Thee to bless and hallow the Christian Orphanage which has been dedicated to the budding life of Children. Fill it with the sweetness of Thy presence that patience and kindness, love and tenderness may ever abide there. Bless every little child-friend that has come to this haven of refuge with smiling trustfulness. Suffer them not to stumble and fall. Shelter and protect them from every thieving danger. Cover their distresses with the shadow of Thy wings that their yearnings for love may not be in vain and their right to laughter and happiness may not be denied.

We are moved with gratitude that Thou hast put into the hearts of people the desire to make this home possible through the gifts of money. By the Holy Child who nestled on Mary's bosom, we beseech Thee to raise up more and more friends to support it through the years to come.

We bless Thee for those who are giving the strength and beauty of Christ-like service to these homeless children. Evermore gird them for their tasks with the patience of Divine Mercy, the reverence of Divine Love, and the wisdom of Divine Insight, that they will be enabled to help young lives increase in wisdom and stature and in favor with God and man. Amen.

football team opposing an even greater foe. At the signal there was a rush—a falling back—another rush. Then, as if gathering in a huddle, a roaring, beating, plunging effort. Going on and on until so weakened by the out-going tide they would walk from the field to await another day—another try.

Bending, as an old man bends after the years have taken their toll, the young man lay himself wearily down upon the edge of the cliff. He wishes he might have the strength, the courage, to keep on and on as the waves had been doing for ages. "But man's days are numbered," he thought. He must go—all must go, like—like time and tide that wait for no man. But this rock—it stands as if ageless. He had heard something once that reminded him now—oh! what a wonderful thought. "Rock of Ages," that was it. Man was God's masterpiece, yet man could not remain here as this great rock. The years take and take, and soon—too soon—he must be numbered among his fathers. It seems he had once heard his mother say something about a shadow of a great rock in a weary land—She was a rock. The home she tried to make was like a rock in strength. Her faith had been like the man who digged deep, and laid the foundations on a rock; and when the flood arose, the stream beat vehemently upon that house, and could not shake it; for it was founded upon a rock. Why should it be shaken—even now? This great rock upon which he now lay was like that, too—man's strength is small, but the God who made this rock, this sea, and caused this tide to come and go—He made man. Made him stronger than all the waves and the rocks. He remembered many things now—remembered mother saying, "God is the Rock of my salvation . . ."

Arising as if from a deep slumber, he walked with a brisk step, away to his work; he had drunk of that spiritual Rock.

RUTH.

Next to Jonah, about which we wrote last week, one of the most significant and meaningful books of the Old Testament is Ruth. The pity about it, not to say the tragedy, is that Ruth is looked upon as the central figure about whom a beautiful and romantic "love story" is written. Ruth is not the central figure, nor is romance or a thrilling love story the object of the writer in giving the Book to the world. As in the book of Jonah, the central figure and Chief Actor is Jehovah God. It is God seeking, with a high hand, to show to the Jews, that while they are His chosen people, He has chosen them to teach Him and reveal Him to all peoples, tribes and nations. (Let us hope the proof reader this week will not make me say "God sulking," as he did last week, but God seeking.) In Jonah we saw God seeking out a man, a Jew, representing his race, to go and preach salvation to the pagans of great Ninevah. In Ruth we see God, through famine, sending a woman to live and to love in the land of Moab—the people most despised by the Jews. And in that land of despised and "low down" people, Naomi lived a life of such devotion to her God that she won a convert, yea, a despised Moabites woman, to accept her God as the One All—sufficient and true God. "Where thou goest I will go; thy God shall be my God." There you have it: a disciple, a heathen woman won to, and born anew into the Kingdom of the true and living God. And to drive this truth home and fix it in the minds of His "chosen people," the writer repeats twice in the closing verses of the Book, that this hated heathen woman, won as a convert to the true God, is through her offspring the ancestors of David, Israel's greatest king: and likewise the ancestress of our Lord and Saviour Jesus the Christ. As in our day, so in the days of Ruth, some of the brightest and most upstanding Christians are those won to Christ in pagan lands, or among underprivileged peoples.

It is interesting to note in this brief book of four chapters, Ruth (for whom the book is named) is mentioned thirteen times; Naomi, the missionary mother-in-law, who won her to God is mentioned twenty times; and Jehovah God is mentioned twenty-two times. Truly in the Book of Ruth we have God seeking, through a chosen vessel, to find and redeem the most despised immoral and remote peoples. Suppose we call Ruth the proceedings of a Woman's Missionary Society.

THY NEIGHBOR AS THYSELF.

Dr. Charles Stelzle, whoever he is, other than as he designates himself "Director of Good Neighbor League," as quoted in THE CHRISTIAN SUN last week, October 21st makes out quite a weak, not to say absurd case for "his neighbor." If he had left the Bible out of it entirely, instead of mis-quoting as he did, it would have been a different matter. Take this for instance, (I quote), When the rich young ruler, and the lawyer who tried to embarrass Jesus asked Him to give them the fundamental rule of life, Jesus replied, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." And then in his closing plea and paragraph we read, (I quote again): The time has come in human affairs to get back to the simplicity of the supreme command of Jesus . . . Let us search for those things which will help remedy the evils of our day and generation, but above all, and through it all let us heed that upon which hangs all the law and the prophets 'Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.' "

Now, let us turn to the Bible which Mr. Stelzle has so thoroughly misquoted, and see just what the words of Jesus are about the first and greatest commandment. Matthew 22:35-40—"And one of them, a lawyer asked Him a question, trying Him, Teacher, which is the great commandment in the law? And He said unto him, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the great and first commandment. And a second like unto it is this, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. On these two commandments the whole law hangeth, and the prophets." One can but wonder what Mr. Stelzle's object could have been in leaving out what Jesus really said about the great and first commandment.

Then take Mark's account (Mark 12:28-31)—"And one of the scribes asked Him, What commandment is the first of all? Jesus answered: The first is, Hear O Israel, the Lord our God is One, and thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength. The second is this: Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. There is no other commandment greater than these."

Again we wonder why this second commandment must be made to appear as the first and all sufficient one. When one leaves God, and the love of God, out of his reckoning, he is getting on a foundation of sand. Russia is trying to do that very thing and create a whole nation of "good neighbors" by leaving God, and the love of God out. If one would love one's neighbor truly and devotedly as he does himself, first of all he must love God with all his heart.

We will never have a brotherhood of man (good and real neighborliness) until we recognize and acknowledge the Fatherhood of God. Hence, Christ said: "When ye pray, say Our Father." True and abiding love for our neighbor grows out of, and is dependent upon our love for God.

The world gave Jesus a manger for a cradle, thorns for a crown, and a cross for a throne. But he transfigured and glorified each of them. In like manner by his presence and power he can convert poverty into riches, sorrow into joy, suffering and sacrifice into conquest and victory. THAT DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE.

train their child in keeping with the latest views of child-training, permitting it to do the things it desired, avoiding the negative in handing it, and of course not forcing it to go to church or Sunday school as they had been in their youth. Later, if it desired to go, they would not interfere with it. Almost too late, they discovered that the standards that meant most to them, the ideals that were treasured by them, and the character that was most desirable to them had been encouraged and sponsored by the church and Sunday school at an age that neither of them was at liberty to choose whether they should go or not. Dr. Link found over and over again that the people who came to him for help needed just the thing that the church atmosphere or church organizations provided. Again and again, although he was an avowed atheist, he found himself directing people to the church. This recurred so often that he began to realize that the thing he had scorned and despised was a necessity to him. Reason could not take the place of God, and the church was a vital power in helping and saving men. His declaration of independence from religion had not led to freedom but to tyranny of reason. His volume, "The Return to Religion," written from a psychologist's point of view, is most interesting, most valuable.

The experience of Dr. and Mrs. Link is an explanation of why thousands of young college men and women, after they are out of college and facing the problems of living in a not too ideal material world, again find that the things they most value are sponsored only by religion. The traits they most admire in other people had their basis in their early religious training; and the standards that seem most worth cultivation in their own lives are the standards that were implanted in a church or church school in their childhood.

A few years ago, much was heard about the revolt of youth. Youth did not want to have to be in from an evening's outing by ten o'clock or have to have a chaperon every time a date was being filled. Youth did not want to be made to go to church or to chapel. Youth did not want to study Latin in high school and was not over-anxious about French or German. Youth wanted to be modern and do things in its own way, and learn for itself.

Strangely enough, we do not hear much about the revolt of youth any more. Youth is wise, even if some of them do not get home until midnight. (Or is it "Three O'clock in the Morning?") Youth is catching its breath. It has not overthrown all conventions and customs, nor has it abandoned religion. Youth is sensible enough to see a value in most conventions and fair enough to know that RELIGION is not a comparison of the SCIENCE of today with the science of an ancient past; that religion is a personal relationship with the God of the present and the past.

Youth recognizes that if he does something of his own choice, rules of society or civil laws are responsible for his action. He is acting of his own accord. His car may be capable of doing a hundred miles an hour with never a quiver. The law may say sixty miles is the speed limit. His common sense and the pleasure of driving are responsible for his going fifty miles an hour. Has the law put any brakes on his liberty? His common sense says that it is better for all drivers to keep to the right except in passing. Does he stay on the right side of the road because of the law or his own choice? He is free within the law because he has chosen that as his course voluntarily.

In the same manner, if youth decides to smoke only immediately after meals, drink nothing stronger than beer (and not over six beers in an evening), get in to his quarters by midnight, his liberty is limited only by the crowd that says he must smoke all the time, form a habit for alcoholic drink, and stay out regularly until three o'clock in the morning. Should he decide to attend at least one worship service a week, only the tyranny of his gang is able to prevent it.

Thus are discovered two kinds of tyranny, one that places external limits upon one's actions, another that sets up minimum boundaries. The external limits are generally fixed by the customs and conventions of society or by civil law, of minimum boundaries by such extreme advocates of liberty that they force upon others a practice of liberties they do not want.

If a man, because of his own choice, desires to follow the customs and conventions that go toward making a smooth-running society and to live within the limits of the civil law, he is free, insofar as they are concerned. If his gang or club forces him to liberties that are beyond his choice, he is a slave under the laws of these extreme advocates of liberty, and the only way he can have his freedom is to declare his independence, revolt from them, live the courage of his own convictions.—The Army Chaplain.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church"

MISS EMILY CARLETON, Editor, 541 Osceola Ave., Winter Park, Fla.

LANSON GRANGER'S MESSAGE. (From Pilgrim Fellowship Flashes.)

Some of you know that during the summer I had the privilege of visiting seventeen Congregational Christian Youth Conferences in eleven states: Iowa, Kansas, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Massachusetts. To me personally it was a joyous and memorable experience which has made my life the richer for the things which I saw and felt, and especially for the friendships which I made. For all of that I am gratefully indebted to you who helped to make the trip possible.

From the standpoint of the National Pilgrim Fellowship, the tour was an enlightening and encouraging revelation of some developments which, I think, are having tremendous effect in bringing about the national solidarity of our youth. I was particularly impressed with the enthusiasm with which these groups welcomed the Pilgrim Fellowship, its purpose, its spirit, the fact that together we are sharers of common objectives to which we ought to give whole-hearted and unified expression. The eagerness to become more definitely and actively related to the entire National Fellowship was likewise a fact of which I was made aware, especially in those areas where an aggressive program has already been launched. These facts have significant implications.

Combined with this brief glimpse is also the fact that we have in the Fellowship a group of eager, aspiring, intelligent, and consecrated young people. I have seen some of them! We should be encouraged, I believe, to have faith in such an enterprise which is going to have momentous influence for Christ and the Church.

INVITATION FROM GREENSBORO.

The officers of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Greensboro, N. C., Congregational Christian Church, have extended an invitation to the Southeast Pilgrim Fellowship officers and the State Pilgrim Fellowship officers to hold a Holiday Conference in their church. The Southeast officers are very pleased to accept this invitation from the Greensboro young people, and hope that all the officers will begin planning now to attend.

Since this invitation has just been accepted, the plans for the conference are not yet definite. Announcement will be made about them in an early issue of THE SUN.

However, the purpose of the meeting will be twofold: (1) To have all the officers present see the definite relation between the National, Southeast, and State Pilgrim Fellowships, and their relation to the local groups. (2) To make definite plans to be carried out by each of the departments during the coming year. Thus it is vital that all of the officers join in this conference, if our work in the Southeast is to continue to grow.

SOME PLAYS OF WORLD PEACE,

BROTHERS, by Mary Clark Wilson. Walter H. Baker Company, 1933. 35 cents. 9 characters, 3 scenes. Time, about one hour. A strong play showing the effects of war on two brothers. The older one experienced it and forgot; the younger one heard about it and never forgot.

I PLEDGE ALLEGIANCE, by Marion Wefer. In "International Journal of Religious Education," January, 1935. 15 cents for each copy of the Journal. 4 characters, 1 act. Time, about 40 minutes. A play dealing with the military training and the conscientious objector. The different viewpoints of father and son result in the latter's leaving home, rather than compromising his conscience, but he goes out as a peace worker.

THE GREAT CHOICE, by Fred Eastman. Samuel French and Company, 1932. 35 cents. Royalty. 8 characters. 1 act. Time, about 45 minutes. An incident of the next war, showing the conflict between the nationalism of those who promote the war and the pacifism of the war resisters.

PEACE ON THE MARCH.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR
NOVEMBER 7, 1937.

SCRIPTURE: Ps. 34:14; Isa. 2:4.

*Armistice Day. Consecration Meeting.
Daily Readings—*

Monday. Support the Prince of Peace—
Isa. 9:6.

Tuesday. Press toward the Goal of Peace
—Phil. 3:12, 13, 20.

Wednesday. The Fruits of Peace—Psa.

Thursday. The Fate of War-Makers—
Matt. 26:52.

Friday. Counselors of Peace—Prov. 12:

Saturday. The Victory of Peace—Isa. 11:
1-10.

On Armistice Day we celebrate the end of a great war and the beginning of an attitude of peace. Those who celebrated the first Armistice Day in 1918 had a joy that peace had come and mortal strife had ended. Armistice Day should be kept as a day of dedication to the cause of world peace and brotherhood. To celebrate it properly would be the promotion of the peace of the world.

The church is beginning to see that war is wrong. Jesus did not advocate or support mortal strife. To Simon Peter, Jesus said, "Put up thy sword." By studying His life and works we discover Jesus to be the "Prince of Peace." He stands unmistakably for peace. We should advocate a program for peace. People must be convinced that wars are un-Christian.

IN LINCOLN CATHEDRAL.

While lordly braggarts stir the world to arms,
And statesman preach the gospel of defense,

In this dear place I hide from all alarms;
This quiet hour is amply recompense

For years of noisy arguments of men
Who, faithless, prophesy of coming doom—

The frightened nations gripped by war

again,
The world collapsing in a sea of gloom.

Yet, here is peace. For centuries meek souls

Have walked these aisles and given God
the praise

For life and love and beauty's lofty goals.
Faith stirred their hearts, trust fortified their days.

For me, this hour, the woes of empire

cease;
At this still altar I have found God's peace.

—Thomas Curtis Clark.

Discussion—

1. How may Christian young people further the peace of the world?

2. Can war be necessary?

3. How does war settle national disagreements?

4. How can we create sentiment against war?

THE MORAL ISSUE IN THE DRINK PROBLEM.

(International Temperance Sunday.)

LESSON V—OCTOBER 31, 1937.

GOLDEN TEXT: Walk by the spirit, and ye shall not fulfill the lust of the flesh.—Galatians 5:13

LESSON: Rom. 13:12-14; I Cor. 6:9-11; Galatians 5:16-24.

In the year's cycle of lessons thus far we have considered the drink problem from the Financial Cost (Jan. 31); the Scientific Approach—actual effects of alcohol on the human body (Apr. 18); the Social Approach (Aug. 29). We come now to consider the drink problem from the Moral Standpoint.

This point needs emphasis. Before the repeal of National Prohibition a great many people thought that it was wrong to drink liquor, if for no reason other than that it was against the law. They saw the moral issue involved in deliberately flaunting a law of their country. But alas, those who saw the moral issue involved in the drink problem during prohibition, do not see it any more. Talk with them about the wrong involved in drinking liquor and they will forthrightly remind you that it is perfectly legal now to buy and to drink liquor and beer and wine. They insist that if it is legally right it cannot be morally wrong. Indeed one of the most unfortunate factors in the liquor situation today—and there are many unfortunate and even tragic factors in it—is at just this point. People are morally blind to the matter of drinking liquor. It never has been right and it never can be right to become drunk. The touchstone in dealing with the liquor problem is not what the state or public opinion says, but what the divine law says. Men ought to obey God and not men, in this as in all other matters. The church might as well face this situation, and make up its mind to become militant, and hereby unpopular again on the liquor problem. Let us consider briefly some of the moral aspects of the drink problem.

Moral Problem Involved in Giving Support in Any Way to a Thing that is a Denial of the Kingdom of God.

There is nothing in common between Christ and the liquor traffic. Brewers and distillers have invented and are broadcasting some far-fetched and ingenious propaganda in regard to liquor and wines and beer but none of them by any stretch of the imagination have ever dared to say that it stood for anything that the Kingdom of God represented. Test the whole liquor problem by Christ's ideals and spirit, and it stands condemned at every point. There can be no compromise at this point. A man who says that he can take a drink or leave it alone, or that he drinks moderately misses the point, at least if he is a professing Christian. A man who professes to be a follower of Christ ought not to give any encouragement, to say nothing of support, to anything that tends to defeat and would like to defeat the coming of the Kingdom of God. The man who buys or uses liquor betrays Christ and His kingdom. That is a hard saying, but it is true. There is a moral issue involved at that very point. What would you think of a soldier, who, while at war with the enemy, contributed to the success of the enemy? The church member who drinks does just this.

The Moral Issue Involved in Sinning Against One's Body and Soul.

Alcohol is not a food, it is a habit-forming drug, a narcotic, a poison. It impairs the efficiency of a man's body, mind, and soul. It lowers his resistance to disease, raises the mortality rate in many diseases especially pneumonia, defiles the body which is the temple of the Holy Spirit, and inevitably even if unknowingly keeps a man from living at his best. Anything that keeps a man from living at his best is sin. A man's body is not his own to do with as he pleases. The man who drinks, or for that matter does anything that makes his body and mind less efficient is involved in a moral and spiritual issue.

The Moral Issue Involved in Putting a Stumbling Block in the Way of Another.

For Christians at least the law of life is the law of love. We are to bear one another's burdens and so fulfill the law of Christ. We are to take heed lest we cause a brother to stumble. Thus, it is, that even though a man may take a drink and let it alone, there is a moral issue involved in supporting a thing which others cannot take or leave alone. This is especially true when the thing involved is something so powerful and deadly as the alcoholic habit. By drinking a man may cause his brother for whom Christ died to become a drunkard. Jesus himself said: "Take heed lest we cause one of these little ones to stumble."

The Moral Issue Involved in Unfaithful Stewardship.

Do you realize how much money is spent on liquor in the United States in a year? It is not a case of a man being goody-good. It is not a case of a man never having any fun or recreation. But when one thinks of the money that is diverted by liquor from legitimate channels, of the money that is spent for "that which is not bread and that which satisfieth not," when one thinks of how the kingdom of God lags because of lack of funds, and then realizes that much of the money for liquor is spent by members of the Church, the body of Christ, the matter becomes a moral issue. It is required of a steward that a man be found faithful. What about the man who takes money that ought to be spent for the things that enrich life, and spends it on something that defiles his body and debauches his soul! This is a moral issue that folks ought to face.

The Moral Issue Involved in Becoming a Slave of Sin.

Alcohol is a habit-forming drug. A man starts out to take a drink and the drink takes the man. He becomes its slave. It blinds him and binds him and blights him. It deadens his conscience, and dulls his higher sensibilities. It degrades, never exalts him. Come to think of it, one does not associate liquor with the best things of life, does he? One does not think of liquor and abundant spiritual life in the same breath. And if it be replied that a great many good people drink, it needs to be said that we are not talking about men being good, we are talking about liberty wherewith Christ sets men free. Whosoever committeth sin is the bond servant of sin. It may not make much difference to the man who has drugged himself with liquor but it makes a great deal of difference to Christ. To sum up the whole matter—liquor and Christ are irreconcilable enemies. A man may choose as to whom he will serve. But there is a moral issue and a moral judgement in his choice.

and here to bring that influence upon them. What will we do about it?

"I, if I be lifted up, I will draw men unto me." Jesus was lifted up on Calvary just outside Jerusalem, in order that you and I, and Christians all over the world, might lift him up in our hearts and lives right next door to all the needy ones of the earth. Thus, thus, will he be able to draw all men unto him! Let us lift him upon our hearts here,

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
Chaplain in the U. S. Navy

MONDAY.

TRUE PATRIOTISM.

"Righteousness exalteth a nation; but sin is a reproach to any people."—Prov. 14:34.

"Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord."—Ps. 33:12.

"The nation that will not serve Thee shall perish."—Isa. 60:12.

Profound patriotism is defined as to make one's nation strong in spiritual qualities with which (believing our texts) no country can endure.

As the strength of the tallest building is its foundation, so the strength of a nation is in the Christian qualities of men and women who are loyal to God and devoted to His service. He serves his country best who seeks to strengthen the Christian character of its citizens.

Prayer—O God, we thank Thee for our country. Grant unto us the spirit to live so that our Saviour may never weep over us as He wept over Jerusalem. Amen.

TUESDAY.

POOR BABYLON.

"And Babylon shall become heaps, a dwelling place for jackals."—Jer. 51:37.

And it has. We are told that visitors to Babylon are faced on every turn with ruin and devastation and actually jackals run from beneath their feet just as was predicted two thousand years ago.

Is it possible that our nation could come to this? At least, because we are tempted to view life from our immediate point of time, it is well for us to stand apart from the present and consider how well the ages have vindicated the Word of God.

We cannot too often remind ourselves that we are children of the Heavenly Father to whom, "a thousand years is but a day."

Prayer—Our Father, we know that Thy work is truth. May we study it more, believe it more and live it more everyday, that we may be able to say at any time, "Thy will be done." Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

WHAT DO THEY KNOW OF US?

"Even a child is known by his doings."—Prov. 20:11.

Mr Conway in the picture "Lost Horizon" is caused to say, "Have you not met one whom you never saw before and yet you felt that you knew him? Have you not visited some strange scene and felt that you had been there before?"

Yes, we have. That person, perhaps, had been in our dreams. That place, so strange and yet so familiar, perhaps, was a scene in our ideals.

Amos R. Wells once said that he was visiting a person who previously had been a rank stranger to him and yet that person showed him a book filled with clippings of Biblical comments from his own pen over a period of twenty-five years.

What do they see and know of you and me, by our doings? They should know that we have been with Jesus.

Prayer—Our Father, in our most serious moments we believe we love Thee and we would have all our living to be a testimony to the love and loyalty we have for Thee. Amen.

THURSDAY.

GRATITUDE, WHERE ART THOU?

"Where are the nine?"—Lk. 17:17.

It is said that ingratitude is the greatest sin of man.

A dinner party was served to forty or more dear friends. The hostess provided unique and remarkable entertainment, but, we are told, that only one guest wrote a "thank-you" letter.

The Master Himself loves gratitude and expects it, and yet His experience with the ten healed lepers, only one of whom returned to give thanks, it is said "is a fair average of what life shows." How about you?

Prayer—Our Father, we are conscience-stricken that we are so ungrateful. Forgive us and help us by Thy spirit to increase our gratitude day by day. Amen.

FRIDAY.

A FRIEND TO THE LIMIT.

"I will be with him in trouble."—Ps. 91:15.

"I will never leave thee or forsake thee."—Heb. 13:5.

It is a tragic truth that most friends are "fair-weather" friends. In prosperity, one does not lack for companion, but when stripped to the bone of life's possessions, boon comrades fly away, save perhaps a few. It is true that there are a few real friends.

My friends, the test is whether it survives adversity. The uniqueness of Jesus Christ is that He is found to be a friend in trials and tribulations. Shame on us that so many do not find Him until they are driven to Him by difficulty. What sort of friend is Jesus to you? What sort of friend are you?

Prayer—Our Father, we pray for Thy help in our helplessness, but help us to be more than this by being trustful, devoted and willing servants at all times. In His name we ask it. Amen.

SATURDAY.

A MOTHER IN ISRAEL.

"A mother in Israel."—Judges 5:7.

Deborah was a mother. She had fulfilled her duties to her own home ere she assumed larger duties toward the nation. It was out of the normal instincts and experiences of motherhood that her great career grew.

Most of us set small limits to our own powers and interests. We are content with little concerns, when we have capacity for the greater. For what William Penn called "a public mind" is but the normal expansion of a spiritually-inclined person's domestic interests.

Prayer—We do not ask to be great, our Father; but we do pray for vision and courage to extend our influence and service to the uttermost limits. Especially do we entreat Thee to make us real ministers to the welfare of our own beloved Country. Amen.

Amos R. Wells.

SUNDAY.

ONE CONCEPTION OF HEAVEN.

"What I do thou knowest not now; but thou shalt know hereafter."—Jno 13:7.

"It will take a considerable slice of eternity for me to solve all the mysteries that have baffled me on earth," said a Christian worker. "I am taking a life full of questions to heaven with me for answer there."

One of the Scriptures that should be graven deep in the foundation stones of every character is, "For now we know in part." One bliss of heaven is that we shall "know fully." Even more, we shall know God, which is life eternal.

Prayer—So small are our minds, and so limited our knowledge, that we complain because we do not understand Thy ways, O Lord. Set our feet on the rock of great faith that Thy mind will be revealed in Thy presence. Amen.

Amos R. Wells.

In his dissertation on I Cor. 13, Prof. Henry Drummond (in "The Greatest Thing in the World") says "To be like Christ is the only thing in the world worth caring for."

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

STEWARDSHIP OF CHRISTIAN CHARACTER.

By REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D.

"He breathed on them, and saith unto them, receive ye the Holy Spirit."—John 20:21.

Throughout the centuries men have desired Christian strength. They have made unceasing prayer for the Holy Spirit, and have been assured that the Heavenly Father is more willing to give the Holy Spirit than earthly parents are to give good gifts to their children. One song writer expresses a common desire thus:

Holy Spirit, power divine,
Fill and nerve this will of mine,
By thee may I strongly live,
Bravely bear and nobly strive.

Another has said:

Gracious Spirit, Holy Ghost,
Taught by thee we covet most
Of thy gifts at Pentecost,
Holy heavenly love.

Faith and hope and love we see,
Joining hand in hand, agree,
But the greatest of the three,
And the best is love.

And still another has said:

Holy Ghost, with light divine
Shine upon this heart of mine;
Chase the shade of night away,
Turn my darkness into day.

And one is almost ready to ask why? Why have this power of the Holy Spirit, if one is not going to make good use of it. Why be always filling the furnace with fire, the boiler with steam, and getting ready for pulling a heavy load if we are going to stand in the shed all the time? Edwin Hatch has put it better:

Breathe on me, Breath of God,
Fill me with life anew,
That I may love as thou dost love,
And do what thou wouldst do.

"He breathed on them, and saith unto them, Receive ye the Holy Spirit." Those words are the key to the great work which the disciples did after Jesus had been received into heaven. Let us look at the circumstances in which these words were spoken. The disciples were behind shut doors for fear of the Jews. The Jews had crucified Jesus, and they were afraid they would kill them also. In fear and trembling they hid from that danger. Jesus came unto them, and breathed on them the power of the Holy Spirit.

It made all the difference in the world.

They knew their Lord had the power of the Holy Spirit. The Spirit had descended upon him in the form of a dove. In this spectacular way they had known that he was led by the Holy Spirit. By his life, his power, and his marvelous words they felt the power of the Holy Spirit. Having the Holy Spirit had harnessed Jesus to the mighty tasks before him. He had not received that power in vain. He shewed them the scars in his hands, and the wound in his side, and knew it was he.

He bore signs of his possession of the Holy Spirit. They were scars of suffering, of work, of sacrifice.

With the Holy Spirit the Disciples would be changed from cringing, hiding cowards to courageous, crusading Christians, helping Jesus to carry on the work which he had begun. They laid down their lives on many a shore for their Master. They put the Christian strength which had been given them to a real purpose. And years later one of the apostles said: "Henceforth let no man bother me for I bear in my body the marks of the Lord Jesus." And so could they all say. For they bore in their bodies the marks of service, and sacrifice. They had been given the Holy Spirit, and in that strength they went to work for the Kingdom of God.

We talk about stewardship of money. We talk about stewardship of time. We talk about stewardship of talent. We talk about stewardship of all of life. Let me suggest another way of putting it: The stewardship of Christian strength! Let us stop praying: "O Lord, give us strength, unless we mean to use that strength for Him. When he gives us strength, whatever that strength may be, let us consider ourselves stewards of that strength, and multiply it, and use it for His Kingdom.

To him that hath shall be given more abundantly. We covet the gift of the Holy Spirit, let us use such power of the Spirit as we have, and more power will be given us. In the simplest ways sometimes we may begin to exercise this stewardship.

I wish to suggest that we make this coming week an intense preparation for our revival meeting which begins in this church next Sunday. Three things I wish us to agree with one another to do during these days until the meeting is over, (1) Read the Bible every day, (2) Prayer for the revival every day, and (3) Speak of it in the home, or on the street, or in the shop, or wherever we may be every day. They are three simple, easy things to do. Begin with them, and follow the inclinations to go further that will come to you. But deliberately, earnestly do the three things I have suggested, and see if you will not develop more strength to work for the success of the revival meeting in our midst.

We are not making this evangelistic meeting primarily, we are seeking to make it a revival meeting. The minister wishes to have a renewal of strength, and the members of the congregation wish a renewal of strength, in other words we all wish to come very near, in fellowship, with our Lord. We wish to come so close that we, too, may feel his breath, as it were upon us, and hear him whisper "Receive the Holy Spirit." We want to get right ourselves. We desire the world to see and know that we have been with Jesus. We wish a new dedication to him. We wish a new and high resolution to a deeper loyalty to our Lord, in order that our own homes may be happier, our own children may have finer and more nearly Christian attitudes, and in order that our church and community may be more and more like the Christ; so that others may find their way to him.

There are certain dictums of defeat that we wish to overcome, namely, people will not go to church in the week any more! Yes, they will. You and I will. God has it in his power through you and me, and all of us to bring them to church. Let us not join in the saying which in itself is so deadening to the church.

Scars! Are there any in us? Do we lay aside for a week other engagements, sometimes at real cost, to hold the standard of our Christ and His Church up in our community? Scars! Do we pay the price of coming each service for a week, and of urging both by word and action, others to come with us? What Christian sacrifices do we make, or are we willing, henceforth, to make for him? How, where, when, shall we cry: "Let no man bother be, for I bear in my body the marks of the Lord Jesus?"

Let us pray for the gift of the Holy Spirit, but let us have it in mind that we are able to honor a stewardship when it is entrusted to us. There are dozens of men and women, and boys and girls, that need the influence of the church brought to bear upon their lives in this community. Some in the church, some out of the church, but many who need the church's power. You and I are God's opportunity now

The Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:—

When the writer was a young boy people who lived in the community were good neighbors. They helped each other and shared with each other. When father gathered his corn he would invite his neighbors to come and help him to husk it. He would kill a pig and mother would write to several of the women in the neighborhood to help her cook for the men who husked the corn. Roasted pig and pumpkin pies, oh! how good they were. Then when the neighbors called our father to help them he gladly helped them. We shared in work with them and they with us—Its great to have good neighbors.

In that day, if a friend was ill in the community the neighbors would go in and help nurse the sick one. That was before the day of trained nurses and hospitals. The neighbors shared with one another in times of trouble. Of course, in this day of numerous hospitals and graduate nurses and doctors, it has changed this method of service.

In years gone by when a father and mother passed away and left little children the kins-people would take them and care for them and in many cases it was a real burden on a family when they had a family of children of their own to take other children in their home. And in such cases the burden fell on one family. But now our people have become more generous, and have contributed money liberally to build homes where the fatherless and motherless can have a home and training. It is like every one pooling their resources together in a common course. This method of taking care of children has lifted a burden off the shoulders of the few and placed it on the shoulders of many. The orphanage gives a home to the homeless. It gives training for good citizenship to those in its care. It gives every man and woman an opportunity to be a good neighbor to these little children and an opportunity to share with them by contributing to help support the Christian Orphanage. Will you be a good neighbor to us in this work? Will you share with our ninety-three children? The Thanksgiving season will be a good time, when the offering is taken in your church, to show whether or not you are a good neighbor to these little children.

In Memoriam

BYRD.

Whereas, it hath pleased our Heavenly Father on July 6, 1937, to remove from our midst our brother and friend, W. B. Byrd, a member of Bethlehem Christian Church and an honorary member of the Ladies Aid Society, and,

Whereas, by his going the church, Sunday school, and Society have sustained the loss of a faithful and consecrated Christian worker, who was always glad to be of service in the Kingdom.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That in the death of Brother Byrd, the church has lost a true, loyal, and valiant soldier.

2. That the removal of such a useful life from our midst will leave a vacancy hard to fill.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family of our deceased brother, a copy be entered upon the records of our Society, and a copy be sent to "The Christian Sun" for publication.

WHY YOU CANNOT KILL THE CHURCHES?

By DR. CHARLES STELZLE,
Ex. Direct. Good Neighbor League.

Everybody is religious, even though they don't express it in the same way. John Fiske, one of the foremost scientific investigators, said of religion: "None can deny that it is the largest and most ubiquitous fact connected with the existence of mankind." Some religions are better than others, but every man has some kind of religion, even though some may deny it.

You can't knock it out of him, although many of us think that we should to pound it into him. Religion isn't manufactured by priests and ministers. It is born in the hearts of men—even savages. But religion if it is to get anywhere must be a social force. No man can be truly religious alone; there must be a God. In the past, when men could not find God, they made a God of their own. But there must also be a neighbor.

The reason that there are churches, and the reason that it's next to impossible to kill a church, it is because of this special force. Maybe you'll insist that it's the religious force of religion that keeps the church alive. All right, call it what you please, but it's the fact that there's God—and somebody else—that makes religion vital.

Religion is life. And life produces what the scientists call "Organisms." There is no life without organization. The "inorganic" is the lifeless. It's when "things fall apart" that they die. "Dissolution," they call it. The church is the organized expression of man's religious life and instincts. It is the best organization which he has formed to permit him to serve best.

No star is ever lost we once have seen,
We always may be what we might have been.

Since Good, though only thought, has life and breath,

God's life—can always be redeemed from death;

And evil, in its nature, is decay,

And any hour can bolt it all away;

The hopes that lost in some far distance seen,

May be the truer life, and this the dream.

—A. A. Procter.

A CORRECTION.

On page seven of this paper two weeks ago were some words left out of the article by Rev. J. Everett Neese, which made the meaning quite different from his opinion. The paragraph which said, "The young minister does not favor bringing of the church into politics," etc., should read:

"The young minister does not favor bringing politics into the church, but he does favor the bringing of the church into politics, that is, the bringing of the high moral tone of the church, the Christian principles which it advocates, and the observance of the Golden Rule within the realm of politics."

THE CHRISTIAN SUN regrets this mistake and is glad to make the correction.

How to Improve the Country Church

By DR. P. E. LINDSEY, High Point M. P. College.

Professor Ross, the sociologist, asks the question: What can be done to make the country church a great factor for good in the community? The question was passed on to my class in sociology, and the following suggestions were made:

Beautify the Country Church—A great many rural churches, perhaps a majority of them, are looking worse every year. When compared with the consolidated school building in the same or adjoining community they appear quite unattractive. Soil is washed from the lawn, trees have died, no flowers have appeared, and no beautiful walks and drives lend enchantment to the view. Thus the students are right. We must beautify our churches or lose them.

Place Good Leaders in Charge of the Church Work—This is not always easy. Well-qualified leaders may not be available, and some who are leading may be hard to dislodge from the positions. More and more must we insist upon some standards of training for those who occupy places of leadership in the Church and Sunday school. Progress is being made in this direction.

Re-locate the Churches—This needs to be done in many cases, but the remedy is about as bad as the disease. While everybody knows the rural churches are left off of the roads, "a ragged beggar sleeping," they also know that moving them is the problem. We will never suffer our churches to be moved except as a last resort, even then many of them will die right where they are, rather than find a location on which they could grow and serve the community. It appears that we love the local church so well we want to see it die where it is, amid sacred scenes, rather than thrive under new skies. But the Church, like a school or sawmill, must be accessible to the people.

Blend the Denominations—This is about as hard as moving the place of worship. Still some kind of a cooperative community program might be worked out. Several schemes have already been tried with success. Further experimentation along this line is now in order.

Make the Church a Center of Activities—Make the church a center of activities, such as musical organizations. This would put new life into the local church. Our rural areas are famished now for a high type of religious music, and if the churches do not supply it, I see no possible chance to bring it to the attention of the people. Already we have about forfeited our chances here by offering only cheap, empty music. Yet, of all places, the church ought to be the very center of great gospel singing. There is possibility here.

Elect More Young People to Office—Both young and old should be on the official list. Youth has much to offer, besides, young men and women will thereby develop into better leaders. Allowing only the old to assume leadership creates the impression that religion is not a normal, natural function for boys and girls.

Vitalize the Worship Program—This is the old cry. Some folks think a program will do the trick and bring them flocking into the church. Like Babson says in his new book, "How to Increase Church Attendance," no one thing will do very much to build up the attendance; it will take a combination of forces working together at the same time to accomplish much. Yet, there is truth in this suggestion. Every item of the service is to be studied, examined, and then improved, if possible. Those in charge of the programs would do well to read Babson's book, mentioned above, and put into practice as many of the recommendations as seem helpful.

Let Educational Attitude Permeate the Whole Rural Church Program—This, I take it, refers to the preaching, the special days, the worship, the missionary work, as well as the Sunday school activities themselves.—"Methodist Protestant Herald."

When War Shall Be No More

Were half the power that fills the world with terror,
Were half the wealth bestowed on camps and courts,
Given to redeem the human mind from error,
There were no need of arsenals and forts.

The warrior's name would be a name abhorred!
And every nation, that should lift again
Its hand against a brother, on its forehead
Would wear forevermore the curse of Cain!

Down the dark future, through long generations,
The echoing sounds grow fainter and then cease;
And like a bell, with solemn, sweet vibrations,
I hear once more the voice of Christ say, "Peace!"

Peace! and no longer from its brazen portals
The blast of war's great organ shakes the skies!
But beautiful as the songs of the immortals,
The holy melodies of Love arise.

—Henry Wadsworth Longfellow.

LET THERE BE LIGHT

PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

For the next two weeks—until November 7th—a revival will be held at Mt. Olivet (G) Church, Dyke, Virginia.

A special communion service was held at Leaksville (Valley of Virginia), Sunday, October 17, at which time a study was made of the few hours Christ spent in Gethsemane. The church was filled for this service, many of the out-of-town members being present.

The meeting held at Leaksville, near Luray, Virginia, the week of October 17th, was a great success. Rev. G. C. Crutchfield assisted Rev. W. J. Andes in the meeting, and there were excellent crowds and splendid attention. Rev. Mr. Crutchfield brought inspirational sermons each night and made for himself a fine reputation as an excellent preacher of the Gospel in the community. Many reconsecrations were made and several are expected to unite with the church.

BELEWS CREEK.

The revival meeting began at Belews Creek the fourth Sunday in September, with Rev. G. H. Veazey, of Wadley, Alabama, as the visiting evangelist. His sermons were well prepared and delivered in a most acceptable manner. The spirit of the meeting was fine throughout; congregations increased every night until the house was full to overflowing. As a direct result six members were added to the fellowship of the church, with the church much encouraged. Brother Veazey made a lot of friends while in this fine community. Belews Creek, with Salem Chapel and Pleasant Ridge, is the first group of churches to accept the conference proposed plan of grouping, and a working and effective machine has been set up. The group has called as the leader and pastor of the field Rev. G. H. Veazey. He has accepted the call and will move into the field by November 10th. This group of churches was being served by Rev. D. M. Spence and the writer. Both gave up their places in order that the field might be united under one man. Brother Spence showed a beautiful spirit, one which has not been manifested or equalled before by anyone, in order that this group might be effective. I can only commend him to any group that is needing a man, for he is worthy of the consideration of any field. I sincerely hope that more of our rural churches will follow suit and likewise our brother ministers who are now being scattered out will see the need of doing the thing that Brother Spence has done and contribute their resignation to the progress of the Kingdom of God, and they themselves apply their strength and ability to the work, where they can get results. Our rural work not only in our church alone is facing extension, but in general, and something must be done in order to save the life of our Rural Church, as well as the folk that are in the rural sections. Some of the best folk on this earth are in rural communities and they are worthy; they have needs that must be met and cared for. And Why, my brethren, let them suffer?

Much more can be said about our work at Belews Creek, for all this year they have been going forward. There stands to grace the community a nice and beautiful brick church, almost ready to enter for worship. Soon it will be completed and the beautiful thing about it is that, so far, no bills have gone unpaid. The membership and community, as a whole, has manifested one of the finest spirits of cooperation I was ever privileged to observe. With the close of this month, October, I will have completed my work with these good folk and I think that when we come up to Conference our report will show that, not only have they done the above mentioned, but will have all Conference moneys in hand and will be one of the banner churches. I am grateful to our Heavenly Father for such a beautiful year together with such good folk. May God bless each of them.

BEREA.

Our revival meeting began here the first Sunday in October with Rev. J. E. McCauley, of our Richmond, Virginia, Church, doing the preaching. As always, his sermons were well thought out and presented in his characteristic manner and well received, to the profit and pleasure of the church and folks who heard him. These good folks at Berea always enjoy having Brother McCauley come back, as he is a former pastor and has done more for the church than all the rest of us combined; for it was under his leadership that Sunday school rooms were built, which were long before needed and have since been a great asset to the cause. There were four additions to the membership and others to join later. We thank God for a splendid work done and for a fine year together with such good and faithful folks as those at Berea. May God richly bless all of them.

PALMYRA LADIES AID.

The ladies of the Palmyra Christian Church have organized a Ladies Aid Society. The following officers have been elected: President, Mrs. Shirley Oliphant; Vice-President, Miss Margie Bowman; Treasurer, Mrs. Retta Clinedinst; Secretary, Mrs. Dorothy Carper.

So far, the Society has helped to purchase song books for the church, paid $9.00 on Conference Apportionment, and is giving 10% of the total raised to missions.

Now, we are improving the church property and grounds.

In all, we have raised $94.74 and have been organized since April, 1937.

DOROTHY CARPER,
Secretary.

PROGRAMS FOR ADULT GROUPS.

What are the adult groups that keep looking for program material? They are our Women's Societies, our Men's Clubs, and our churches themselves that vary their mid-week meetings by having "church nights" that call for special programs without an outside speaker.

To meet this need a new booklet of nine programs for adult groups in Congregational and Christian churches has just been issued. These are on the following subjects: Deepening the Religious Life, The Near East, The Rural Church in America, The Rural Community in America, World Peace, The Church and the Economic Issue, Building the World Christian Community, A Re-interpretation of Missions, and Christian Education in Our Church.

Ample material is included in the booklet itself so that leaders are not compelled to search in outside sources.

A copy may be secured for 10c from the Missions Council, 287 Fourth Avenue, New York. A copy was sent to every pastor a few weeks ago.

Money in abundance for movies, chewing gum, cigars, cigarettes, gas for joy rides, money for football games, but only complaints of poverty when a demand is made for a benevolent contribution. Keep your eyes open during these last days of the conference year and see how the foregoing observation applies to church members not a few.—Exchange

LOST SOULS.

Hosts of people in our country are weighed down and morally hardened by the filthy slum, the dark tenement, the unsanitary factor, the long hours of toil, the lack of a living wage, the backbreaking labor, the inability to pay doctor's bills, the poor and insufficient food, the lack of leisure, the swift approach of old age, the dismal future.

Many of these have almost forgotten how to smile. Their soul—their ethical souls, are all but lost. They believe that no hell in the future can be worse for them than the hell in which they now live. They fear death less than they do sleep. Some indeed long for the summons.

We used to talk a good deal about how "the other half" lives, but the other half" usually consisted of an indeterminate number. Whether or not it is true, as President Roosevelt said some time ago, that one-third of the people in this country are "ill-nourished, ill-housed, and ill-clad," the situation is serious enough to give the rest of us great concern.

It is in meeting the spiritual needs of these that the Church will be severely tested in coming days. It will be recalled that for a time the children of Israel, who were slaves in the brickyards of Egypt, would not listen to Moses because of "the rigor of their toil" even though he came with a message direct from the throne of God.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgement and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

GREETINGS TO CONFERENCES.

This week two of our Southern conferences meet, and within the month probably all the rest will transact their business for this year. "The Christian Sun" sends greetings and good wishes to those men and women who represent their churches in the annual conference.

You have been selected from your fellows to speak for the church on the issues that face the world today. To some of you it may seem a small matter that you were elected as a delegate to conference, but actually it is no small matter. Out of the group of many who might have gone you have been selected, and to you is given the opportunity of sitting with representatives from other churches to consider what the Congregational-Christian churches of American can, and will, do within the next year to aid the progress of humanity. Your presence at conference will demonstrate your interest and will give to your church its desired representatives. Your absence at any session will thereby weaken the process of Christianity in a heart-breaking world. Your interest in lifting the burden from the lives of men will make the sessions all too short and will send you back home far too early to face again the problems of a local church.

Your Church Paper, the one piece of literature produced by the Congregational-Christian churches of the Southeast, greets you and bids you Godspeed. With your help your paper may greet you again next year. Without your help you may be called upon to sing its funeral dirge before you sit again in conference with your fellows.

HIGH PRICED PIE.

On Monday, October 25, last, "The Sun" (N. Y.) carried on its front page an article stating that the counties of New York are to "Receive Share of ABC Tax Pie." The article stated that there was a real gain of a million dollars over the same quarter of last year. Quoting: "State Controller Morris S. Tremaine said that $10,317,569.39 is to be distributed for this quarter, the largest distribution since repeal."

The same paper on the same page tells the story of a thirty-six-year-old automobile dealer of New York city who was stabbed to death by his fifteen-year-old daughter. This is the way the story is told: "The police said that the dead man's wife, Mrs. ———, Gladys and another daughter, Marjorie, 12, told them that ——— came about 3 A. M. today in an intoxicated condition and began quarreling with members of his family . . . According to police he grabbed a large carving knife and when he threatened his wife, his two daughters tried to take the knife from him." Result: A dead father, a broken family, children disgraced and defeated for life. Why? Liquor! Probably liquor sold by the state which thinks of its liquor tax as "pie"—something over and above the necessary.

But that pie seems to have been made at the expense of happiness, composed of broken lives, and seasoned with human blood. No, thank you, I do not care for such pie! It is bitter; it burns; it is nauseating.

BALANCING THE BUDGET.

President Roosevelt apparently has become convinced that it is necessary to balance our national budget in the near future. Thirty-seven billion dollars is about all he thinks the government can owe safely, and we owe that now. This budget balancing business seems to be giving the President and congressmen a rather violent headache. The tax bill has already given the citizens a headache.

But this article deals with a different budget. It comes closer home. It concerns local churches, conferences and the denomination of which we are a part. It is the business of men and women who read their Church Paper. It has to do with the welfare and the progress of our churches and denomination. It will mean something for the children who are now in our Sunday schools and churches, and its influence will go out to the ends of the earth bringing happiness and joy, or sorrow and defeat, to multitudes who will never meet this side of the judgment.

This writer believes that local churches should pay for what they enjoy. They should not live on the heritage of the past without making a contribution of their own. Neither should they lay burdens on the generation yet to be unless, indeed, these burdens will bring added opportunities, and then they should not be too heavy. It seems to be reasonable to expect every member of the Church, who has anything like an adequate income, to make some contribution to the Church. Any person who has money for movies, smokes, or other personal pleasure can certainly offer no excuse for failure to contribute to their church budget.

But what about our missionary budget? Your foreign mission board has brought home all the missionaries it has had the courage to bring home and has sought in every conceivable way to cut down on expenditures. In spite of these facts the budget for last year was $51,511.26 out of balance. The Board decided last week to cut down on its items of education, literature and such like for ourselves, but to make a desperate effort to continue the work out on the field. The success of this program depends upon the contributions of the local churches. If there is no good response to the "Thanks With Giving" program, which is being sponsored throughout the country at Thanksgiving time (or at a later time, if necessary), and if conference apportionments are paid in full as they should be, then your mission board will be able to carry forward its world-wide program. This writer feels sure that members of the Southern Convention can not be content to send to its foreign mission board (Continued on following page.)

RELIGION IN A FREE LAND

Wm. L. CHENERY, Editor, "Collier's"

"The churches have kept their hold in America and have continued to grow because they fill a basic need in our lives," says an editorial in Collier's for August 7, 1937. The article is reprinted here by permission of the author.

Religion is a potent factor in the lives of the American people. We hear pessimistic words concerning vacant pews at Sunday services. The motor-car and athletic sports are said to have drained the churches. The losses are more superficial than profound.

Actually the growth of American churches has been uninterrupted during the last thirty years. During the ten years from 1926 to 1936 nine million new members joined the churches. Every year marked an improvement in the position of the churches.

Last year more than sixty-three million members were recorded on the church lists. One out of every two Americans was attached to some church. The proportion with church affiliations increased instead of diminishing. They who say that the churches are losing in the United States do not know their America.

This actual record of steady growth of church membership in this country is in striking contrast with the experiences of the churches in numerous other countries. During the last twenty years the Russian government has fought the Russian church as a deadly enemy. The German Nazis are engaged in a relentless struggle to subdue both the Catholic and Protestant churches.

Most of the Mexican churches have been closed during the past ten years. Religious services have been outlawed and simple people who congregated for worship have been shot down by government troops. War on the churches was one of the conspicuous features of the Spanish revolution.

Whenever dictators have seized power and suppressed the liberties of the people, the churches have been repressed. In these countries the alliance between church and state was historically close. When political power was captured, at once the churches were feared and fought. Dictators dread any organization they do not control.

The complete separation between church and state established in our Constitution has been the great bulwark of American churches. The government is a dangerous friend of any church in time of change. Free churches, wholly unpolitical in support and in management, have proved their capacity to survive and grow.

The absurdities of the German fanatics, intent upon rooting out Christian teaching and re-establishing a worship of the ancient mythological divinities, reveal the fundamental weakness of the war against the churches. Neither an ancient Thor nor a modern Hitler is an adequate substitute for Jesus. Nor, in the long run, will a Lenin supplant the Founder of Christianity. Hate is not permanently more desirable than good will.

Our churches have been strong and enduring because they appealed to the best instincts and ideals of a free people. Nobody has been compelled by governmental authority to join any church or to attend any religious meeting. Yet, half of all Americans are counted church members and the overwhelming majority, including those who attend no services derive their sense of right and wrong from the churches.

In this country, certainly, religion has been the teacher of morality. Our standards of right have been expressed and upheld by the churches. Back of every advance in morality has been the teaching of a leader nurtured in one of the churches. The history of social reform in this country is a record of the activities of men and women who were awakened by religious experience.

The strength and growth of the churches are a great stabilizing influence in our national life. The surface differences between the various denominations are wide enough but the moral ideals upheld are fundamentally the same. Catholic, Protestant and Jew teach the ideas of right, of justice, of mercy of the good life.

The churches have kept their hold in America and have continued to grow because they fill a basic need in our lives. Ideals and aspirations make men different from other animals. Merely to live, to bring children into the world, to struggle for material possession or power has never satisfied men. Other needs which only the churches have served have always driven men to religion.

As people, we have not experienced any great religious awakening or been stimulated by a widespread religious revival during recent years. The growth of the churches has been unspectacular, but steady. The appeal has been quickly made and quietly answered by millions in the fellowship of the churches.

There is reassurance in this. So long as the American people look to the churches for guidance in the problems of life, we shall be strong and honorable, good neighbors to ourselves and to all the world. The growth of our churches is a witness to the soundness of our character as a people.

BALANCING THE BUDGET.

less than $6,000.00 annually. There is no apparent reason why this figure can not be doubted and that within the next year. The needs were never greater; the calls were never more insistent; and the doors that were once closed are now open. Will we come to the rescue of our foreign mission board and help not only to balance the budget but also to preach the Gospel to the ends of the earth?

F. C. L.

We may never know here how much is done through our prayers, but we shall know hereafter; and in the meantime we have Christ's promise that where two or three are gathered together in His Name, there He is in the midst of them. This thought alone brings unspeakable comfort; for by it we know that we can come into the very presence of the Lord—that we can speak to Him and ask Him for His help.—Selected.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

For four days the writer has been suffering from a severe attack of Lumbago. This is defined as "a rheumatic pain in the loins and small of the back." Well, these symptoms are all there and several others have been added to give emphasis and weight to the diagnosis. The small of the back seems very large when a pain waves its flaming signals. One is not "back-conscious" until something goes wrong with that system of bones, muscles and nerves.

There are some compensations in such an experience. Every caller has had a similar attack. Others have suffered in like manner. And these former sufferers delight in telling their experience. While they tell you how they suffered and what cured them, you want to hurry through so you can tell your case in detail. People who have been sick enjoy telling about it afterwards. And so many remedies have been suggested. Electric pads, hot water bottles, pills, tablets, liniments and lotions all have a place in the list.

Life is different when there is a pain in the back. One sits down very slowly and carefully, there is difficulty in getting out of bed, all activity is curbed, the speed in walking is greatly reduced. Why does one have such symptoms, and why cannot life go in its normal way of activity and work? The writer does not know the answer to this question. Maybe, if man knew just what his back should do and would treat it exactly as it should be cared for, probably there would be less back-ache and lumbago. God made no mistake in making the back. Man cannot expect a new kind of back-guaranteed against lumbago and other painful conditions. But many of us need a few lessons in caring for the back that God has given us.

One is inclined to think the church sometimes has a bad case of lumbago. It seems to be so fussy. It moves forward so slowly. It complains and finds so much fault with things as they are. Looking at these symptoms would-be diagnosticians decide that the church needs reorganization. A new order of methods would cure this lethargy and inactivity. One's back does not need reorganization. There is sufficient organization already provided for, but there is a need of better co-ordination. And that is the picture of the church. No organization is effective unless there is life and response through co-ordination. Church members should be related, each to the other, and all to Jesus Christ and His Kingdom. When one member suffers all suffer. When one member of the body fails to function properly the whole body is reduced in efficiency and power.

A pain in the back is very uncomfortable. But it may be a valuable signal. Some physical law has been violated. The penalty must be paid. Church pains and spiritual problems are unwelcomed guests in our minds and hearts. But they must come in an imperfect body. And they must come to those who would make the church better than it is today. Jesus suffered in His soul. He suffered for others. "He shall see of the travail of His soul and shall be satisfied." If suffering makes us think more seriously and live more carefully, then it does not come to us in vain. It may not be a punishment for our sin or lawlessness. The innocent may suffer. They do suffer. But man should be interested in what suffering may accomplish under the spiritual dedication of self to God, and under the guidance of our heavenly Father. If the way leads to His presence let us be glad in His name and through His grace.

S. C. A. WEEK.

At Elon the students have what they call the Students' Christian Association. We do not have the Y. M. C. A., the Y. W. C. A., the Christian Endeavor Union, or other young people's organizations for Christian service. These various organizations have been fused into one. This we call the Student Christian Association of Elon College which affords opportunity and expression for the religious interests of the campus. The aim of this organization is to encourage private and personal devotions as well as public worship. Every student is urged to keep his daily devotionals in his own way. There are also morning prayer meetings held in different dormitories by members of the Association.

This association plans and provides leaders for Sunday evening Vespers. Vespers are held in the Whitley Memorial Auditorium. These services usually consist of songs, prayer, special music, the reading of scripture, and a short talk by one or more students. This is the students' service and as a rule is conducted by students.

The week of October 17th was observed on Elon College campus as Student Christian Association week. The Association had charge of all public religious services during the week. It began with Sunday evening Vespers with a candlelight and musical service—very beautiful and very impressive.

Monday morning at Chapel the chairman of all Association committees spoke briefly concerning the program for his committee and the work outlined to be done.

On Tuesday afternoon a social hour was observed in the Y. W. C. A. Hall. Refreshments were served with entertaining features which made the hour enjoyable.

At Wednesday morning chapel Miss Beatrice Wilkins, daughter of Dr. J. C. Wilkins, Messrs. Duane Vore and LeGrand Moody, ministerial students of the college, and Mr. Milton Chesire each brought brief messages on the students' relation to themselves, to the faculty, and to the world.

Thursday was used as registration day when all students were urged to go to the Association office on the first floor of Alamance Building and enroll for Christian Service in the Association.

The closing address was delivered on Friday at chapel hour by Mr. King, Y. M. C. A. Secretary for State College, Raleigh, North Carolina.

The members of this Association are anxious for the improvement of the religious life on Elon College campus. They are tackling the problem in a very practical way and have impressed the student body with their earnestness and purpose. It is wholesome and helpful to have the students themselves take over religious life of the campus in a statesmen-like way and with a determination to improve the religious life of the campus.

This organization has the hearty approval and unqualified cooperation on the part of the faculty. With students and faculty working together much good can be accomplished for all.

The college will fail in its undertaking unless it administers to the whole of life. Life is religious, and unless there is some care and concern to make that life Christian, the individual will face the responsibilities of life seriously lacking in those elements necessary for advancement and success. We are anxious to safeguard health, to improve the mind, to teach the students how to be at ease in company with others, to instruct them how to use the talents they have agreeably and profitably, but we are also concerned to see that the all-important, the discovery and development of his real religious life, is not overlooked. At Elon College we are not striving to disturb students in their Christian thinking but to help them find themselves religiously, sanely, and surely. Faculty, students, and all are determined on such a program.

A WORLD AT PEACE.

A Service of Worship.

By SUSAN A. ANDREWS.

Theme:

"Our Objective—A World at Peace."

1. Leader announces theme and reads the following:

One Christmas time during the last war, Joyce Kilmer wrote:

The Kins of the earth are men of might,
And cities are burned for their delight,
And the skies rain death in the silent night

And the hills belch death all day.

But the Christ of the ages, Master of all,
Is fair and gentle and very small.

He lies in the straw by the oxen's stall,
Let them think of him today.

2. "It came Upon the Midnight Clear." Piano, with violin, if possible.

3. Hymn—God the All-Merciful.

4. Scripture Reading and solo alternating as follows:

Leader says:

Men at their best have always longed for peace. A prophet of old once said: "Behold, it shall come to pass in the latter days, that the mountain of the Lord's house shall be established in the top of the mountains, and shall be exalted above the hills; and all nations shall flow unto it. And many people shall go and say: Come, ye, let us go up to the mountains of the Lord."

Solo: (music of No. 254—"Hymnal for American Youth.")

Thy Kingdom come, O Lord,
Wide circling as the sun;
Fulfill of old Thy word,
And make the nations one.

Leader:

I will make thy officers peace and thy rulers righteousness. Violence and destruction shall no more be heard in the land. Behold, the days come, saith the Lord God, that I will make a new covenant with you: I will put my law within you and write it in your hearts. My people shall be righteous and shall inherit the earth forever. I, the Lord, will bring it to pass in mine own time."

Solo:

One in the bond of peace;
The service glad and free
Of truth and righteousness,
Of love and equity.

Leader:

"He maketh wars to cease unto the end of the earth, he breaketh the bow, and cutteth the spear in sunder; He burneth the chariots in the fire. Be still, and know that I am God; I will be exalted among the nations, I will be exalted in the earth."

Solo:

Speed, speed the longed-for time,
Foretold by raptured seers—
The prophecy sublime,
The hope of all the year.

Leader:

"God shall judge the nations and arbitrate for many peoples; and they shall beat their swords into ploughshares and their spears into pruning hooks. Nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more. For the people shall dwell in a peaceful habitation, and in safe dwellings, and in quiet resting places. And the work of righteousness shall be peace; and the effect of righteousness, quietness and confidence forever."

Solo:

Till rise at last to span
Its firm foundations broad,
The commonwealth of man,
The city of our God.

5. Offertory, announced by the leader, who says:

Phillips Brooks once said, "No man has come to true greatness who has not felt in some degree that his life belongs to his race, and that what God gives him, He gives him for mankind."

During the receiving of the offering the pianist plays "Dear Lord and Father of Mankind."

As the offering is brought forward the leader says: Thou, our Father, hast put it into our hearts to care for others and to give to them. And how we would ask thy blessing upon our gift. As it is transformed into service here and in other lands, may it play a part in the building of peaceful world. In the spirit of the Christ we pray Amen.

6. Story (This should be told, not read).

TWO BOUNDARY LINES.

Once upon a time, in the year 1900, to be exact, there were two nations that thought they had a good reason for going to war with each other. They were Argentina and Chile, and their trouble was about the boundary that wound around and among the heights of the Andes Mountains. So long had they brooded over their quarrel that they were just on the point of fighting and both sides had made great preparations. But the Christian people of the two countries, in the persons of their bishops, and the women who did not wish to lose their husbands and sons, protested against such a step, and finally it was agreed to let the King of England arbitrate the matter.

At last the matter was settled to the satisfaction of both countries. Then the question arose, what could be done with all their warships and guns? The ships were sold for freighters, and the soldiers were sent home to till the soil, while the money that had been spent for fortifications was used to make better roads and harbors. But the women of the two countries felt that something ought to be done to keep this victory of peace continually in the minds of the people. So money was raised and a young sculptor secured to make a beautiful statue of Christ out of cannons that had been melted down. On the very day that the peace treaty was ratified, Senora De Cost, who had been the leading spirit among the women, invited representatives of the two governments to inspect the statue, and secured from them permission to have it placed on the highest accessible pinnacle of the Andes.

It was a difficult task to carry the heavy bronze up the mountain. After a train had carried it as far as tracks had been laid, the journey was continued on gun carriages, and when the road became dangerous, the people took ropes and helped, that the precious statue might reach its destination in safety. Hundreds of people were present when the statue was unveiled. The Argentines camped on the Chilean side of the boundary and Chileans on the Argentine side, as an evidence of friendliness. Hymns were sung and prayers were said, and there was a great salute of guns. The sound echoed down the mountains and through the valleys. Then the face of Christ was unveiled and the people read the inscription beneath it:

"Sooner shall these mountains crumble to dust than Argentines and Chileans break the peace which, at the feet of Christ the Redeemer, they have sworn to maintain."

There the statue stands today, a silent witness to the possibility of peace between nations. Henry Van Dyke has been inspired by the sight to write a beautiful poem, prophetic of a still larger peace between nations when all guns shall be melted into the spirit of good will:

Christ of the Andes, Christ of everywhere,
Great lover of the hills, the open air,
And patient lover of impatient men
Who blindly strive and sin and strive again—

Thou living Word, larger than any creed,
Thou Love Divine, uttered in human deed
Oh, teach the warring world, warring still,
Thy way of Peace, the foot-path of Good Will!"

7. Prayer. This prayer was offered at the dedication of the Christ of the Andes by Senor Carbrera, of Argentina:

"O God, will it that war shall disappear. Put out fires of rivalry, of hate, and cause to reign among men concord and love. Give unto the nations peace, benevolence, and order, and to such end let the spirit of evil be broken, let the dew of Thy loving

DANIEL.

When one wants a half hour of real good reading—thrills, adventures, courage, breath-taking experiences—try Daniel. No other book in the Bible, or out of it either, is quite like it.

The hero, the one whose name the book bears, is different. He is a nobleman, a prince of the blood royal and a genuine aristocrat. There are aristocrats who make the heart sick—the ones who boast of their blood but never do anything to add any worth to it, and depend upon what they have to carry them through, rather than what they are.

Daniel was a king's captive, but when the king wanted to wine him and dine him on dainties and indulgencies, Daniel would have none of it. Let those who wished, feed and drink of the kings dainties, but none of it for Daniel. He would eat nothing, drink nothing, though all the others were doing it, that would weaken his body or becloud his mind. He was a man even if he was a prisoner.

Daniel, as a character of the Bible, differs in another particular. His ministry was all to kings, princes, the high and mighty. One recalls that when God commissioned Paul to preach He said, "For he is a chosen vessel unto me, to bear my name before the Gentiles and kings, and the children of Israel." Not so Daniel. He was God's chosen vessel to bear His name before the mightiest kings of the earth—and to them only, so far as the Book reads.

One day when a complete history of nations and civilizations is written, it is certain to be shown that some of the most lavish, luxurious and cultured civilizations have long since perished from the earth and have left few relics or remnants of their power, abundance or achievements. Some of these mighty kings, lords of all creations, lived and reigned in Daniel's day, and among these high and mighty, Daniel lived, and wrought and preached. And God certainly dealt with a high and mighty hand, through Prince Daniel, with these "kings of kings, and lords of all the earth." That which makes Daniel a real prince among princes is the fact that he did not bow down, nor cadaver to any of them; but in their presence, surrounded with all their power, Daniel dared to tell them the genuine, bare and naked truth. Preachers are sometimes accused of preaching to please the rich and the great. Not so Daniel. He told one of the mightiest kings of all time just where "head in and get off."

One sometimes wonders if what is called the "social gospel" is not a gospel of fear and intimidations—a "gospel" directed at conditions in general and people in the abstract. That is easy and requires little courage. Preacher Daniel, a foreign missionary, in a heathen land preaching to heathen rulers and monarchs, dared stand up to their faces and preach the gospel of righteousness, and denounce their high and godless way of living. And preacher Daniel brought these mighty kings to acknowledge his God as the true and living God. Look at the acceptance of the true and living God by that formerly idolatrous and wicked King Nebuchadnezzar (Daniel 4:37), "Now I, Nebuchadnezzar praise and extol and honor the King of Heaven: for all His words are truth, and His ways justice: and those that walk in pride He is able to abase."

Daniel, a captive in a foreign land, remained a prince among princes, and preached the gospel of repentance and salvation with such force, rigor and power that he was honored and exalted among men, even in a heathen land, and the secret is all told in these words, "And this man Daniel was prepared, because an excellent spirit was in him." And take this text he used one day in preaching to the king, "Wherefore, O king, break off thy sins by righteousness and thine iniquities by showing mercy to the poor."

If you don't believe in foreign missions, then leave Daniel out of your reading and your reckoning. Daniel is a Book written by a foreign missionary to heathen peoples.

Notice so far: Jonah is purely a missionary Book, the work and life of a missionary to the "heathen." Ruth is a history of how a faithful missionary woman, by and through love, won a heathen to her God. Now Daniel. To those who do not believe in missions, even the Old Testament must be largely a closed book.

A MANCHURIAN PASTOR SAVED FROM BANDIT RAIDS.

During these troublesome times here in the Far East it is gratifying to learn of the Lord's protection to His workers who are carrying on at distant, dangerous, isolated places here in the northern reaches of Manchuria.

Word came that Mr. Li Teh-Chao, a pastor far over at Mishan, on the Manchukuo-Siberia border, was experiencing very trying difficulties; so he felt uneasy regarding him, and prayed for his safety. That is the border region of which you have read so much in your daily papers. It is difficult for Christian workers to labor there, for they are frequently foolishly regarded as spies, are often questioned and sometimes their movements and work hindered. The bandit situation in such places is bad, so there is constant danger. There is also the constant strain on one's heart of having to hear the stories of the looting and burning and torture of people who have been taken by the cruel the missionaries to visit such places, so we do go regardless of these conditions. But we try to be wise and before making such trips, first consult with the American consul general and with the Japanese and Manchukuo authorities.

A report just received from Pastor Li tells of conditions common to many parts of the Far East. Being a son of the well-known old Pastor Li of Pingtu, Shantung Province, one is not surprised that this faithful servant of the Lord up here would be "game" in any situation that might arise, for he is a "chip off the old block."

"The work over in this region goes forward, thanks to the Lord, our God!" writes Pastor Li. "During the spring meetings and up until the hot weather six of the Church members assisted in daily preaching services. Three preached here in the chapel while the other three distributed tracts and invited people to the meetings. The groups of three alternate daily in their work. The house was full to hear the Gospel of our Lord," he writes. During the spring and summer fifty have enrolled as enquirers. The daily Bible classes are attended by from twenty to thirty.

Pastor Li then tells of house visitation and of preaching at other places. A trip was made to another town. Pantsiehe (Half-creek Village), where work was begun a few years ago. Ever since then the little group of believers there have been asking that we help them engage an evangelist as preacher and leader. It is there that an earnest brother has given a few hundred dollars during these years for the erection of a place of worship. Since the special meetings at Pantsiehe by Mr. Ko Hung-Kun, a lay preacher, the believers there have been leading others to the Lord.

Pastor Li then visited another of our outstations. Pingyangchen (Level Sun-slant Village—the origin of village names in every land is interesting), where again the believers are making an effort to erect a church building. One member has offered to mortgage his home and all other property to cover a loan to complete the amount needed for erection of the building. It is encouraging to see how these groups are making sacrifices to have their own places of worship. We encourage them in this, for they cannot become self-supporting without their own church buildings. What is saved on rents then goes toward salary of evangelist or pastor.

At these two places Pastor Li baptized fourteen. He planned to visit another place, Sankangtzi (Sandy Ridge), but floods made this impossible. Then he learned that following the day on which he should have arrived there a band of robbers entered the town, looted it, killed some and carried away others. The Christians did not suffer. Some were kidnapped, but later released. The church at Mishan rejoiced when their pastor returned, for they supposed he was in Ridge Village when entered by the bandits.

Still determined to visit Sandy Ridge, Pastor Li planned later to go there, but against the wishes of his brethren. Some earnest enquirers were asking for instruction and baptism. Before leaving urgent word came from Pantsiehe, begging that he come for special meetings and baptisms. He responded, and it was well that he did. For again bandits entered Sandy Ridge, looting, murdering and kidnapping, at the very time Pastor Li would have been there. On his return to Mishan this time, fifteen more were baptized, making forty-five for that frontier city so far this year. The Lord God has been good to protect frequently us missionaries, as is also the native works.

Our people in the homelands of the West who enjoy so many conveniences and are yet discontented, can hardly realize the trying conditions under which so many of these people out here have to live—their poverty, lack of personal safety, frequent mistreatment, inconveniences of travel, etc. It would do them good to come out here to see and experience the great contrasts. They would then be more content. Reference is not to living conditions in Harbin, Peking, Tientsin, Shanghai and other "port cities." These are not really China, nor Manchuria. I am referring to conditions under which the rank and file of the people live, such as we find constantly in our work. Evangels of the Word must be ready to meet most bandits, so many of whom have gone so far into sin that they cease any longer to be human.

It is not advisable for us missionaries to visit those border places now for three reasons: We are even more suspected by certain people than are the native workers, for it is so difficult for these authorities to realize that we would go so far and endure such inconveniences and dangers purely for the good of the Manchurian people; bandits are so bad that our protection cannot be assured; then there is the constant danger of conflict breaking out between the Russians on their side of the border and the Japanese and Manchukuo troops in this side. Sometimes, however, it becomes almost necessary for

FOR WORSHIP DURING ARMISTICE WEEK.

(PILGRIM FELLOWSHIP FLASHES.)

In response to a Lakeside request, Dr. Kagawa prepared seven "Question Prayers" for use during Armistice Week. The idea is that after asking the question the individual or group will keep on praying until God's answer is found, or an answer is found in accord with His will. These are the question prayers:

1. O God, can I love colored people?
2. O God, can I love nations which have a different constitution and history from mine?
3. What can I do, O God, to abolish the economic causes of war?
4. Can we love our enemies or those making blunders or mistakes? (We need power to do this. How can we adjust ourselves to love our neighbors who do not behave nicely?)
5. How can we educate these people?
6. How can we carry the spirit of Jesus throughout the world to establish the Kingdom of God?
7. How can we change our political relationships so that God's will can be done?

SUGGESTIONS FOR NOVEMBER.

A prejudice is a hastily formed opinion, a making up of one's mind before all the facts are known. Prejudices frequently lead to blind action and wrong behavior. They may be classed in the same order with dishonesty. The prejudiced person is one-sided and fails to give his antagonist the benefit of the doubt.

Prejudice was the cause of Jesus' crucifixion. The Pharisees in Jerusalem were narrow-minded. Yet, many of them were morally upright according to the religious standards of that time. It is out of the prejudices we bear toward certain individuals or groups that causes the "sore spots" of our civilization.

Create a feeling of goodwill within the Christian Endeavor. Abolish your factions or cliques which exist. Be interested in all the young people of the community. Help to break down any barriers that may exist among the group.

Name some of the historic tragedies which were brought about by prejudiced minds. What tragedies of recent time are due in part to prejudice? What are some of the common prejudices of today?

The determining characteristics of the mind of Christ was His unwavering devotion to the truth. We should give deep consideration to Paul's words: "Let this mind be in you which was also in Christ Jesus."

CHRISTIAN CHARACTER AND PEACE.

LESSON VI—NOVEMBER 7, 1937.

GOLDEN TEXT: And let the peace of Christ rule in your hearts, to the which also ye were called in one body.—Colossians 3:15.

LESSON: Colossians 3:1-17.

Spurgeon, the great preacher said that the verses included in today's lesson "begins in heaven and ends in the kitchen" by which he meant that it is full of the loftiest spiritual truths, and yet at the same time concerns the most matter-of-fact, everyday experiences in the world in which we live. It would be difficult to find a passage in the New Testament which embodies in the same number of verses more spiritual truths than these verses, nearly every one of which is a gem in itself. In brief compass of these Notes one can touch only the general principles, or the "highlights."

New Life in Christ.

"If ye then were raised together with Christ, seek the things that are above, where Christ is, seated on the right hand of God." The Christian life involves something more than reformation; it involves transformation. One becomes a Christian as Christ's spirit transforms or renews the life of the man from within. Just as God raised Christ from the dead into newness of life, just so does Christ raise men from the life of sin into newness of life in the spirit. The beginning of the Christian life is a new birth. Except a man be born from above, or anew, he cannot see or enter the kingdom of God.

Having been raised with Christ, having been regenerated through Christ, we are to set our affections, or our minds on the things above. It is not enough that a man simply be born as a Christian. He must grow into the measure of the stature of a full grown man, even unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Jesus Christ. And he cannot do this without some attention to the things of the spirit, and without some effort on his part. A man cannot set his mind on low things and live a high life. He cannot set his mind on the things of the flesh and live the life of the spirit. A sign of the new life in Christ, and a condition of new life in Christ is that one set his mind on the things that are above, not on things that are upon the earth. New life in Christ helps to set one's mind on the things that are above, to seek the things that are above; seeking the things that are above, setting one's mind on the things that are above, helps to keep the new life in Christ. The two are mutually dependent.

Putting Off the Old Man.

"Seeing ye have put off the old man with his doings." Paul likens the Christian life to putting off as it were an old garment, filthy, ill-fitting, ragged, out-worn, and out-grown. One who would put on Christ must first put off the old man with his doings, must give up the works of the flesh, must put to death fornications, uncleanness, passion, evil desire, and covetousness. There must be no compromise with these things. One cannot be sinless, but he must not condone sin. One cannot live without sin, but one must not compromise with sin. Everything unworthy must be put out of one's life. Sin must be renounced. A growing abhorrence of sin is an essential evidence of a truly regenerated man. Paul adds significantly that it is because of these works of the flesh that God's wrath is visited upon the children of disobedience.

And not only sins of the flesh, but sins of the spirit—anger, wrath, malice, railing, shameful speaking, lying, in short sins of disposition must also be stifled and put to death. And the surest way to put them to death is to starve them to death, give them nothing on which to feed, give them no opportunity to find expression.

Putting on the New Man.

"And have put on the new man, that is being renewed unto knowledge after the image of him that created him." Goodness is more than mere passiveness, more than mere refraining from doing wrong; goodness is positive and active. A Christian not only discards his old self as he would discard a worn-out or filthy suit, he puts on a new suit, a new man created new by the grace of Christ. And that new man is universal, there is no difference between Greek and Jew, circumcision and uncircumcision, barbarian, Scythian, bondman, or freeman when it comes to distinctions among Christians. Christ is the ideal of character for all. God's grace is available for all regardless of nationalism, ceremonialism, intellectual outlook, or social ideals.

The new suit is a suit of many colors and materials. It is made up of a "heart of compassion, kindness, lowliness, meekness, long-suffering, forbearance forgiveness." And the girdle, binding all together, is the spirit of love, which is the bond of perfectness. One sometimes hears of folks having on their "company manners."

Paul simply states that Christians will always wear their company manners, that they will always be clothed with the qualities of character that find their complete expression in Christ.

Nurturing the New Life.

"And let the word of Christ dwell in you richly." Life grows by what it feeds upon. The life of the spirit cannot flourish on the things of the world. Man can live at his best only on every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God. It is only as one's soul is nourished on the word of Christ, only as Christ's word dwells in us richly, in abundance and fullness, that we shall grow in grace and in knowledge of Him.

Making Religion Mean Something.

"And whatsoever ye do, in word or in deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, giving thanks to God the Father through him." An old washwoman giving her testimony during a revival service caught the spirit of these words when she said: "By the grace of God I am going to be the best washwoman in this town." Alas for that man's religion if it does not make him a better man in the world or in deed. And one has missed somehow the real meaning of true religion, unless in all the experiences of life he can "give thanks to God the Father through Jesus Christ." The thankful heart is a primary quality of Christian character.

MONDAY.

COURAGE BROTHERS.

"The women who publish the tidings are a great host."—Ps. 68:11. (R. V.)

We are glad to be reminded, occasionally at least, that the host of good people are far greater than we think. Elijah sat under the Juniper tree and felt that none were good but him, but the Lord showed him differently. Elisha's understudy saw the hosts of the enemy surrounding the city and felt lost, but Elisha showed him the hosts of God and they that were for them were greater than they that were against them.

Take a review of active Christian people that you know. Add to them the imaginary hosts of active soldiers of Christ. No parade ground on earth would hold them. This knowledge of the magnitude of the army of the Lord should hearten us greatly.

Prayer—Our Father, we give Thee thanks for the soldiers of the Lord. May we never lose our consciousness of the vastness and the faith of our fellow Christians. In Christ's name we ask it. Amen.

TUESDAY.

AT WHOSE JUDGEMENT BAR ARE WE?

"And delivered Him to Pilate."—Mark 15:1.

The world rabble did that. The world does that always. Contemplate the scene. Jesus, the Son of God, before Pilate, a human court, a second rate man sitting in judgment upon the first rate one. The only thing the world remembers about Pilate is that on a certain morning, Jesus stood before him.

Before what judge art thou standing? What persecutions dost thou endure? Be of good courage. Christ is our Exemplar. He once stood a prisoner persecuted, but He was victor, and He promises to be with us in the sixth trouble, and in the seventh not to forsake us.

Prayer—Our Father, in the defeats and humiliations which life may bring to us, teach us how to know Thee, who art by our side, a sympathetic Saviour ready to make strong our souls. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

THE ONE ROAD TO HEAVEN.

"Seek those things which are above."—Col. 3:1.

Everything which we acquire of any consequence, comes to us from above. The tree of the forest grows tall because it spends its life reaching upward.

So it is with our lives. We grow from what we are to something more nearly what we ought to be by looking upward. We have the victorious life through constant pursuit of the things high, good and holy.

Prayer—Our Father, Thou art the light of our lives. Through that light may we attain a brightness of soul always. Amen.

THURSDAY.

THE WAITER'S BURDEN.

"As thy days, so shall thy strength be."

"There is none like unto the God . . . who rideth upon the heaven in thy help."—Deut 33:25-26.

"My burden is light."—Matt. 11:30.

Life has many intolerable burdens for all classes and conditions of people, but Heaven has no burdens. The Christian finds interest, strength and joy in every care. The burdens of our Lord are light when we are put beneath them with the strength of character which He supplies.

Prayer—Our Father, give us strength sufficient for the task of the day and so fill our tasks with the spirit of service that the doings of them will be great joy. Amen.

FRIDAY.

ANGELS OF THE NIGHT.

"I meditate upon Thee in the night watches."—Ps. 63:6.

"Commune with your own heart upon your bed and be still."—Ps. 4:4.

"Be still and know that I am God."—Ps. 46:10.

In a letter from a friend the other day, he explained that he was suffering much from insomnia but that he was spending his waking hours of the night in meditation upon His Word. He added that these meditations were a source of great blessings to him. He was learning to know more of God.

Think what it means not to know the Psalms or the Scriptures to meditate upon when one can not sleep. The wakeful mind should not wear itself out with the worries of the day. It should be able to pillar itself upon the restful truths of God and be refreshed. In this, of course, sleep would be easier.

Prayer—Our Father, help us to turn our minds to Thee in the watches of the night and fill those vacant spaces with the wonderful sweetness of divine things. We ask it for Christ's sake. Amen.

SATURDAY.

SMALL FAITH.

"Low I am with you always."—Matt. 28:20.

The words of our text constitute the final benediction upon the disciples when they were commissioned to make Christians of all nations. The Lord knew that as they went forth in the world to do His bidding that great trials would beset them and they would need His help.

It is easy to have faith, when we are in fellowship with kindred minds at the church hour, or when we feel spiritual ecstasies that come in Christian influences. That, however, is a small faith. It is not so easy when the enemies of life beset us and we have to struggle. Therefore, we need a faith for those things, a faith that makes us know that Christ means it when He says, "always." That is the larger faith.

Prayer—Our Father, we would go through our days, confidently and victoriously. We pray Thee to be Thou our very life so that it may be so. Amen.

SUNDAY.

PROFOUND, OR DULL?

"The common people heard Him gladly."—Mark 12:37.

According to the traffic in the streets, of the parks and the resorts on the Sabbath Day; and according to the empty pews at the churches, our text is out of date. There seems to be only a few who hear Him gladly. The masses do not seem to know anything about the joy of God's word. They like life elsewhere better. This should not be so. The Gospel may seem dull to some. But why?

We know of one man who found the preaching of Paul to be dull. He fell asleep and fell out of the window. But nobody ever went to sleep when Jesus talked. His words were simple and clear and full of pictures and they heard Him gladly. It is lamentable that our poor tongues are not better able to make the people glad to hear His Word. We can only pray that the power from on High may be with us more and that our souls may lack less of the Spirit's presence. We believe it will be so when men and women hunger for the Divine Word.

Prayer—Touch our lips, O Spirit of God, so that our words may be free from worldly taint and full of the witness of Jesus. In His name we ask it. Amen.

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D., Pastor.

WORSHIP THE LORD.

By REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D.

"Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God."—Matt. 4:10.

These are the words of Jesus. He quoted them from Deut. 6:13. Let us look at these words a few minutes. One could take them up word by word, and it would make a very interesting and helpful study. "Thou," yes you, and you, and you, everyone in this congregation, and everyone in all the world: "Thou shalt worship." That is not only a command, but it is the statement of an actual fact. We all worship. Just as we eat, and sleep, and breathe, and move, we worship. It is part of us. We are made that way. We cannot escape that fact. It is understood that we are going to worship, and that is not the burden of the text. You might as well say: Thou shalt eat, breathe, talk, run, or rest; or tell the birds to sing, or brooks to run, or the sun to shine.

The question is: Whom, or what shall we worship? The answer is: "the Lord," not a lord, but "the Lord." There is but one Lord in the sense used in this commandment, and we dare not allow anything else to become lord over our lives. And it goes a step further: "the Lord thy God." Yes, he must be "thy God" if he is to be worshipped. How the verse speaks now that we have emphasized every word of it: "Thou - shall - worship - the - Lord - thy - God." Every word is vital to the meaning of the text. Are we always doing that? Are we always worshipping the Lord our God? Are we making him Lord and God in our lives, and are we giving him worship?

What is worship? An eminent minister friend of mine puts us to thinking when he says: "Whenever anyone is confronted with a reality which is so good, so true, so beautiful, and so irresistible that, almost in spite of himself, he turns to it with a sense of wonder and awe and adoration, he is entering upon an experience which leads directly to worship."

Now, just keep that in mind a minute, while I tell you that there is something in this text which I have not as yet called to your attention. We emphasized each word, but we did not notice that when Jesus quoted the verse he used a translation, so to speak, of the word worship, or rather he translated the word in Deuteronomy to mean worship. Now that is a very interesting fact, is it not? Let us see what it says in Deut. 6:13: "Thou shalt fear the Lord thy God, and serve him." What is worship? Fear? No, not the bitter frightening away fear, but the element of awe, wonder, reverence, such as is meant when the Scriptures say: "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom." Respect for, reverence of some object, or an awe-inspired wonderment. The word is often used throughout the Scriptures in that sense.

Now look again at the words of my friend: "So good, so true, so beautiful and so irresistible, that, almost in spite of himself, he turns to it with a sense of wonder and awe and adoration, he is entering upon an experience which leads directly to worship." "So good, so true, so beautiful, and so irresistible . . . a sense of wonder and awe and adoration!"

Some time ago I went to Waverly, Virginia, to attend a banquet and make an address. I purposely rode along by myself for the rest and meditation. For several days it had been raining. The air was wet. But the clouds were thinning, and passing. Of a sudden as I rode toward the sunset I noticed some very, very blue spots. I could hardly believe my eyes, bright blue, with a slight tinge of purple. But alas! now, the whole sky was turning to sheens of glowing gold! Rifts, ridges, banks, serreated against a bright blue sky of the brightest of gold, and turning here and there to rose, and red and crimson. "So beautiful and so irresistible" I was slowing down my automobile. I feared I might interrupt traffic, and pulling off to the side of the road I stopped and gazed and gazed at it. And shall I tell you I reached up and took off my hat? I felt a sense of awe, wonder, joy, peace, and a thrill at so beautiful a sight; and adoration for the God of the universe who could paint the sky so beautifully! I shall never forget that sight! It is not necessary for me to add I worshipped God there!

Jesus could see through the individual the glory of the Eternal. What is the greatest commandment they asked Jesus. "Love God." Just taking the word fear and lifting it very, very high, fear God, worship God, Love God. Fearing God in that noble sense is worshipping God, worshipping God in the best sense is loving God. That is the great commandment, answered Jesus; and the second is like, namely, Love thy neighbor as thyself! "Perfect love casteth out fear!"

But everybody does not love God as he ought. We sometime put other things first, so the commandment is written: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength: this is the first great commandment." Nothing is to come before God.

Have you noticed that the words of our text: "Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God," are taken from the Lord's temptation in the wilderness? It was there that Jesus had the temptations which showed that he loved God with all his strength of body, power of mind, and depth of soul.

When can a person be said to be worshipping something other than God? When he wants something enough to give up God for it. It is then that he sells his soul for a mess of pottage. Are you neglecting God for anything else in all the wide world? Jesus would not give up his love for the Father for all the nations of the earth! Hungry after forty days of fasting, he was told to turn the stones into bread, and "he answered, and said, Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." Only a few choice souls realize how much one may live on communion and fellowship with the Eternal God, how much strength and wisdom and grace is given by that divine fellowship. If we could realize that we should not neglect our daily worship of him, nor our worship on the holy Sabbath in his house.

And when Satan took Jesus "up into an exceeding high mountain and sheweth him all the kingdoms of the world, and the glory of them; and saith all these things I will give unto thee, if thou wilt fall down and worship me, then saith Jesus unto him, Get thee hence, Satan, for it is written, Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve." Jesus coveted the return of all kingdoms back to the Father, he desired all the nations and the glory of them, but not for them all would he worship other than God. He would not sell out for all the kingdoms of the world. Some little thing may be selling you out, some little personal thing may be keeping you from church, some trifle may impoverish your soul.

In the church, my friend, in the church God does something to our in-

The Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:—

Children in the Christian Orphanage are always happy when they do something worthwhile. The report cards came in last week for the first school month this semester. We found that the following children made the honor roll: Hallie and Helen Whitaker (twins), Billy Lasher, Mary Alice Watkins, Herbert Petty, and Louise Currin. We are offering a prize of fifty cents to the children who make the honor roll from now to the end of school.

One hundred sixty bushels of apples! What a contribution! We mentioned in our weekly letter sometime ago that we would like to have some apples. A good lady, Mrs. Mary E. Hinton, of Harrisonburg, Virginia, read the letter and while Mrs. Hinton is not able to attend church, she was impressed with the call and wrote to a member of Antioch Congregational-Christian Church where she was a member and asked that this need at the Christian Orphanage be supplied. The Adult Bible Class took the matter under consideration. A Working Committee was appointed. An appeal was made for apples. On last Friday afternoon a truck-load of apples—160 bushels—parked on our grounds. My good friend, Rev. W. J. "Billy" Andes, in company with Mr. Moody Nieswander and Mr. Earl A. Showalter brought the apples to us. I am informed that Mr. Nieswander furnished his truck free and also a part of the gasoline for the trip. The Adult Bible Class got up the apples and paid the balance of the expenses of the trip. This certainly was lovely of the Adult Bible Class of Antioch Sunday school to be so good to us. It was good of Brother Nieswander to furnish his truck to deliver them to us. It was lovely of Mrs. Hinton to suggest this to the Sunday school, and it was so good of the class to so generously carry out her suggestion. We wish we could find words that would adequately express our appreciation for this splendid donation. Our children will have apples for two weeks and will enjoy them immensely.

We want to appeal to all our churches and Sunday schools to begin now to plan their Thanksgiving Offering in their church and Sunday school. Times are better now than in recent years. The things we have to buy are higher, so you can readily see the need of a liberal Thanksgiving Offering.

Clarence Fields, one of our boys who has been in the Navy for eight years, has the joy of being the first one to send in a Thanksgiving Offering. He mailed us his check for $25 for Thanksgiving and says he is going to mail us another check for the same amount Christmas. He came to us when a mere tot. He never knew any other home. He loves the Christian Orphanage. He visited us a few weeks ago and seemed very happy to be back home again. Who will mail us the next check?

kindness descend upon and penetrate the hearts of men."

Help us to realize, our Father that these great aspirations can only become real as individuals help to bring them about that even though I am just one, it makes a difference whether I desire peace and am honestly doing, in my world, all that I can do to make my desire come true. If we pray for peace, make us willing to work for it. Amen.

8. Prayer Response. Solo: Let There Be Light (first stanza only).

Let there be light, Lord God of Hosts,
Let there be wisdom on the earth,
Let broad humanity have birth,
Let there be deeds instead of boasts!

trying situations such as could not be found on western lands, and meet them bravely. It is our privilege to share these conditions and situations with the native workers. Happy are we; and happy are those in the homeland who make it possible, through their prayers and financial support, for us here to carry on in the saving of souls and the building of His Kingdom until He comes.

ner spiritual natures; maybe not the sermon, nor the song; maybe not the prayer, nor the praise; maybe not the gift that you bring, nor even the prayer which in secret you may offer from the hidden depths of your soul; but somehow God will do something for your life if you regularly worship him. "Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve." There is life, and life in that; and how you need your worship, and how the world needs your service for God and for goodness.

There are persons who constantly clamor, they complain of speculation and of the pernicious influence of accumulated wealth. They cry out loudly against all banks and corporations, and all means by which small capitals become united in order to produce important and fundamental results. They carry out mad hostility against all established institutions. In a country of unbounded liberty they clamor against oppression. In a country of perfect equality they move heaven and earth against privilege and monopoly. In a country where property is more evenly divided than anywhere else, they rend the air shouting agrarian doctrines. In a country where the wages of labor are high beyond parallel, they would teach the laborer that he is only an oppressed slave. They would shock the foundations of industry and dry up all the streams.—Written 85 years ago by Daniel Webster.

Aggressive Japan and War-Torn China

Both Need Understanding Christian Friendship.

TODAY this means:

First: We are putting our three missions in China on a war-time basis—Our missionaries in both Japan and China are standing by. “Certainly, when trouble comes, it is not time to step out! On the contrary!” says Floyd Roberts. Can we match their devotion? Mothers with children, the ill and aged are being evacuated. War-time service demands greater sacrifice than ever, but “Now—or soon after—is the most important and crucial time for our work.” We will not desert our Christian friends in these countries. In most cases schools and hospitals are continuing much as before, but with increased duties and opportunities.

Second: We must condemn militarism and aggression everywhere and always—Unquestionably, war is contrary to the spirit of Christ, but we must maintain unbroken fellowship with our Japanese and Chinese Christian friends by entering into the struggle going on in their own hearts and minds. “Judge not, that ye be not judged.” “Cast out first the beam from out of thine own eye.” We must assure those in China and Japan who have taken Jesus as their Lord and Master that “we hold them in our hearts,” now of all times. George Sheperd writes: “The Church is needed in China now more than ever, and if they need missionaries in peace time they need them more in times of strain.”

Third: Special funds are needed during this crisis—The American Board has already sent its first special gift for emergency travel, relief, and hospital service in China. More is needed for emergencies at once. We ask now for $25,000 in addition to all regular giving. Send a special gift ear-marked “For China Emergency” to our treasurer as soon as you can. Money translates and transfers your friendly spirit to the point of bitter need.

Fourth: Unitedly, we must look beyond the end of this conflict—Christian people of every land must seek to be used by the Spirit of God to build better bridges of good will, justice and mutual understanding and respect between the nations.—Fred Field Goodsell, in “American Board Bulletin.”

Crosses In A Foreign Land

Surely the heart shall not forget
Across the lengthening years
The countless brave young dead who lie
Beneath the rain's bright tears.

Those crosses in a foreign land
Should help us to remember
Their sacrifice—should bring to mind
Another bleak November.

When "war to end all wars" had ceased,
And the gun's wild tumult died,
When the men remaining could return
To their beloved ones' side,
And peace lay white upon the land . . .
O, Lord God, would men dare
Unloose those fiends of hell again,
Loose death upon the air?

Surely those muted lips would cry
Reproach to all mankind,
Surely those still white hands would reach
To stay men . . . eyes long blind
Would wake and weep . . . God, God, today
Bid wars and their rumors cease,
That those who paid that awful price
May rest in peace.

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

Last week Miss Priscilla Chase conducted a training class at Newport News and twelve credit cards were issued for work done in the local church.

Sixty-six people enrolled in the training school at Waverly, two weeks ago, and twenty-four credit cards were issued. Good reports come from the school, and it is hoped that next year will be even larger.

About one hundred young people met in their first State Pilgrim Fellowship at Sanford, North Carolina, on October 30 and 31st. Reports are that they had a fine session and planned for definite work.

Our college has its largest enrollment, and is doing a fine work with school teachers in Alamance County as an extension program. Those who paid their conference apportionments help to carry forward this educational program.

Don't be uneasy about investing $2 in a subscription to THE CHRISTIAN SUN, for if you read it you will get the benefit of some ten to twenty dollars worth of material. Why not ask your neighbor to secure a bargain like this by subscribing to the Church Paper right away?

Plans should be laid this month for the fine Christmas program to be given in your church. The Board of Christian Education, at 514 South Main Street, Norfolk, Virginia, has material that can be borrowed. First come, first served.

Thanksgiving is nearly here and definite plans should be made for the Thanksgiving Offering to care for the ninety-three children at the Christian Orphanage. "Thanks-With-Giving" will bring happiness to those who look to our Church for a home.

Dr. Stanley C. Harrel, president of the Southern Convention, Dr. James H. Lightbourne, pastor of the Burlington Christian Church, and Mr. C. D. Johnston, superintendent of the Christian Orphanage, were among the welcomed visitors and delightful speakers at the Eastern Virginia Conference last week.

A revival meeting was carried on at Mt. Herman Christian Church, beginning Sunday, September 19th and concluding September 26, 1937. Much interest was exercised during this series of meetings. There were twenty-five professions and sixteen new members added to the church roll. The preaching was done by the beloved pastor, Rev. J. S. Carden, of Durham, North Carolina.

After the meeting of the Prudential Committee, THE CHRISTIAN SUN's editor spent part of a day seeing the wheels go 'round in the Boston offices. It was a delightful experience. Great men and women are working hard to carry forward our denominational program as it reached out to the ends of the earth. Christmas boxes had just been shipped to the mission stations around the world—a little early for Santa Claus, but he is on his way.

A BANQUET FOR MEN.

On Wednesday, October 27th, the Community Brotherhood and Bible Class of the Second Congregational-Christians Church, of Irvington, New Jersey, held its Annual Banquet. About a hundred men gathered to partake of the fine repast prepared and served by the Ladies Aid Society, and to enjoy the program provided. Honorable A. Harry Moore, United States Senator, from New Jersey, had been engaged as speaker. But, Mr. Moore was in the last stages of a campaign for Governor of the state, and found at the last minute that he could not be with us. He sent, as his substitute, Dr. Harry L. Everett, who has been the minister of the First Congregational Church of Jersey City for twenty-eight years. Dr. Everett delivered a very fine address. A quartette from the police department of Jersey City was also sent by Mr. Moore, and added a great deal to the program. There were present and taking part in the program the mayor and two other members of the Irvington City Commission. There were also present the Chairman and the Secretary of the Irvington Board of Education and one or two teachers in the Irvington High School.

It was an inspiring sight to see this large group of men, many of them leaders in community life, gathered in the church for fellowship and for reconsideration of their responsibility to church and community. We are hoping that the gathering will continue to bear fruit for the kingdom of God.

Our work in Second Church is starting off very well this fall. Three new members were received into fellowship on the first Sunday in October. We are celebrating the twelfth anniversary of our organization on November 21st. A series of meetings and services are being planned for that time.

CALVIN FELTON,
Minister.

WHAT THE WORKER PAYS.

By DR. CHARLES STELZLE, Ex.
Director, Good Neighbor League.

It has been estimated that it costs the State and community—plus the expense to the individual's family—about $10,000 to raise and equip the average laborer for his life's work. And so, when a man applies for a job, he is offering the employer a $10,000 "machine," for which the employer pays nothing.

As a matter of fact, the community and the state have done so much for the average employer, that his business is actually a socialized enterprise, in which the Government—local, state and national—has a considerable stake, for without the support which the employer receives from the Government, he simply could not exist.

But, to come back to the $10,000 worker who wants a job. Suppose a business were established in which $1,000,000 was invested in equipment, and in which 1,000 workers are to be employed. These workers would have an "equipment" value of $10,000,000—ten times as great as the amount spent for business and machinery. Have these workers no stakes in the business? Have they any rights which should be considered? What has become of the fine theory of "partnership" which employers have so long been talking about?

Under these circumstances it is absurd for the employer to say that he is absolutely independent of any "outside interference"—meaning anyone outside of himself—and that he will conduct his business as he pleases, pay his workers what he chooses and totally disregard any attempt to cooperate in bringing about fair and harmonious relationships between the various interests involved in the conduct of his business affairs.

Chairman of Committee.

PUTTING THE BIBLE OUT OF THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

We do not refer to the Book itself but rather to the substance of the sacred volume. Few Bibles are found in the average Sunday school unless it be a Presbyterian school where stress has been placed on having the Bible in all class rooms. The Methodists have a fine literature with portions of the Bible selected with care for use from Sunday to Sunday. But even with this the Bible is too largely left out.

Any who are in doubt about this would do well to make a close survey of what is going on in many of our church schools. Teachers who do not have the Bible hid in their hearts and have little concern as to getting it into the lives of others too often spend the half hour in worse than nothing. Some gossip about the events of the day and discuss almost every theme except religion as it relates itself to life. The real theme of the Sunday school teacher as well as of the pulpit is the spiritual interpretation of life.

Much of our so-called teacher training is responsible for this. The technique of instruction is stressed rather than the substance of the Bible and the religious character of the teaching. The spiritual qualifications of the teacher are kept in the background.

The Bible is the text book of the preacher. The sermon springs out of the Bible—our one book of religion. It is the inexhaustible source of the ages. The same is true as to the church school teacher. What are all the helps and the "credits" worth unless the substance of the Bible is a part of the life of the teacher? Yes, we certainly have put the Bible out of the church school without being fully aware of it.

Of course, there are glorious exceptions both as to schools and teachers, but just now we are referring to the present tendency; yea, to what has already happened in many schools. The many so much in need of spiritual instructors should lead us to a serious effort to improve the situation.—N. C. Christian Advocate.

A RICH MAN WHOSE LIFE WAS A FAILURE.

A rich American, intellectually brilliant but without mental or financial scruple, recently died. He was sore, bitter. His sole concern in life was to leave a certain number of millions to his children—his wife didn't rate importantly. He freely admitted to intimates that he didn't care how or where he acquired wealth—he was out to get by hook or by crook. And because the depression prevented him from attaining his mercenary goal, he felt his life had been a failure.

Knowing him, his greed, his unethical code, I agree. This man had such brains, such talents, such education, that he could have contributed most usefully and fruitfully to his day and age. But he subordinated absolutely everything to unscrupulous money-making. He was utterly without sincerity, utterly without honesty.

When he died, there was nothing but rejoicing among his family, the very ones for whom he had prostituted his soul!

If such a life isn't a miserable failure in the eyes of both God and man, what is?—Forbes.

Mankind are very odd creatures: One half censure what they practice, the other half practice what they censure; the rest always say and do as they ought.—Benjamin Franklin.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgement and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

ARMISTICE.

Nineteen years ago the world was made glad by the signing of an Armistice which brought to an end the World War. The roar of cannons ceased; the hum of airplanes dropping death died away; men in the trenches laid down their arms and waited for orders which eventually meant that they returned home. It was a great day, an exultantly happy day for that war weary world. Americans three thousand miles from the battlefield went wild with joy, for mothers, wives and sweet-hearts had some assurance that those they loved would come again home while all were delighted that others would not be called to give their lives in a needless sacrifice to the god of war.

But nineteen years seems like a long time. A new generation has grown up who know not the tragedy and struggle of war but some of whom were cradled in its conflicting emotions of love and hate, of faith and fear. Many have forgotten the long lines of casualties. Wounds have healed over and scars do not hurt like an open gash in the flesh. We hoped, and prayed and believed in those far away days that the Armistice would prove to be a lasting peace because men had learned the folly of destruction and had returned to the weightier matters of justice and mercy.

But an armistice seems to be only a truce, a cessation of fighting for the present. The nations that laid down arms have taken them up again and have taught others how to use the weapons of destruction. Over the same territory where men fought and died nineteen years ago others strut, boast, and brag, and threaten today. Guns are ready and men march in long lines. Politicians dicker for the best positions and drive the keenest bargains possible with an eye to the time when lines of men will again cut at each others throats. In other parts of the earth other nations have followed the example, have learned the lessons of war and are putting into practice the ideas which they have been taught. Our own nation talks of peace and prepares for war. The world is waiting for the flash that will be the signal for another carnage, the like of which we have not yet seen—a world conflagration in which civilization may be burned up.

This Armistice Day will not bring to the world the joy of that nineteen years ago, for now we are preparing not for peace but for war. We forget the futility, the heartache, the destruction of war. We turn from the Prince of Peace and look to the war lords for protection.

Here and there pious words are spoken concerning peace, and conferences are held to discuss peace, but it appears that peace passes out of sight and men grab for whatever advantage they can get for their nation. It is not a happy world in which we live today. Fear has a stranglehold on humanity. "Perfect love casts out fear," but who has time, or patience, for the processes of love in a world of hate? Sometimes it seems that not even Christians have. But our hope must still be in God, or else we shall be of all men most miserable.

This Armistice Day may well be used by those who are followers of the Prince of Peace in an effort to establish in the hearts of themselves and in the heart of a friend the idea that love works in this present world and that only as nations cooperate in the spirit of brotherhood can there be any hope of permanent peace.

EASTERN VIRGINIA CONFERENCE.

A hundred and seventeen times members of Christian Churches in Eastern Virginia have thought it well to meet together in annual conference. The last time they met in Holland Christian Church and were interspersed with Congregationalists, for two Congregational churches united with the conference at the session last week. This completed the merger of Congregational and Christian churches in the southeast.

It has become a habit to meet in these conferences, but President Robert Lee House indicated in his address that there are other reasons for meeting than simply the habit. He maintained that the Church is a history-making institution and that in local churches, conferences, and as a denomination we ought to be making history which historians can record. This address and many others during the conference brought a challenge to greater consecration and activity.

The conference was fortunate in having Dr. William L. Beard, of Foochow, China, present for the sessions to tell of our work in that far away, war-torn country. Dr. Beard is to attend the other conferences and those who have not heard him have a treat in store, for it is a high privilege to have such a messenger come to us from the other side of the earth telling what God is doing through the Church out there.

Statistics from the conference will be given elsewhere or at a later date, but there was some indication of activity among the churches during the past year. More than four hundred people had been received into the forty-two churches. The amount of money sent to conference was not quite as much as last year but figures may show that more money had been sent direct to the enterprises of the Church.

The church at Sarem was discontinued by request and the executive committee empowered to dispose of the property. The Shelton Church, First Congregational, of Portsmouth, and the Bethlehem Congregational Church, near Disputanta united with the Conference as did their pastors, Dr. M. S. Poulson and Rev. George Olejar, respectively.

One unusual feature of this conference was the retirement of a minister. Dr. Nathaniel G. Newman has served the Christian Church as a minister for forty-seven years. He is now severing his relation as pastor of Holy neck Christian Church and does not plan to assume pastoral duties again. He will make his home near Oakland Christian Church and that church has already elected him as assistant to their pastor, Dr. I. W. Johnson. At a banquet held in Dr. Newman's honor on Wednesday evening of the conference the Holy Neck Church presented Dr. Newman with forty-seven silver dollars and the conference elected him as Pastor-at-Large with the invitation to visit any church at his pleasure.

The Holland Church and its pastor, Rev. Carl R. Key, entertained in fine Virginia fashion. The beautiful church was kept fragrant with fall flowers for every session of the conference, and delicious meals were served to those who wished to dine.

A BUNDLE OF SHEAVES.

By An Old Reaper.

I saw him come into the church during the altar service, and I had an impulse, or inspiration, to go and speak to him, although I had never seen him before. As I started toward him, some one stopped me, with the request that I speak to a penitent at the end of the altar. When I got up the man was gone.

I went to spend the night with a man who was anxious and troubled about his salvation, and we talked and prayed until after midnight. About 2 o'clock there was a knock at the door and when it was opened by the host, in stepped the man whom I had seen at the church. When I was introduced, he said "you are the man I am looking for." Noticing the handle of a pistol in the pocket of his coat I wondered why he should be looking for me at that hour—2 A. M.—with a gun in his pocket. I had heard of him as the keeper of a small hotel, which had a very unsavory reputation because of its illegal traffic in liquor, and defiance of law. So I was just a little disturbed, because I had denounced sin of every sort, with strong emphasis upon drunkenness and lawlessness. But when I asked what I could do for him, he said he wanted me to come to his home and baptize his little daughter who thought she was going to die.

Of course, I went with the man, and found three of his children very sick of a contagious disease, and with an anxious troubled mother watching beside the little ones. The oldest seemed to be sickest and she thought she must die, but not having been baptized, she wanted to receive baptism, as she was old enough to have an intelligent faith in Jesus. She told me she attended our Sunday school and she learned to love and trust Jesus as her saviour, and wanted to be baptized before she died. I baptized the child on her own confession of faith, and God seemed very near as I prayed with that stricken family. After the prayer the father took me over into his living room, and opened his heart to me. He confessed to being a bad man, and violating the law, but he said, "God knows I love my family and I could not let my child die without being baptized, when she wanted it so much." He said he was tired of the life he was living, and went to the church tonight, hoping some Christian might come and help him to a better way. Then I told him of my impulse when I saw him come, and he said, I thought you were coming to me, but when you stopped, I lost hope, and decided that no one cared for my soul, and so left the church at once.

I pointed him to the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world. He said he would try to find Him in salvation. The last time I heard from that man he was superintending a Sunday school in the state of Pennsylvania. It was near breakfast when we returned to the home of my friend and host, but I still regard it as one of the happy nights of a long life in the service of my Lord.—Methodist-Protestant Herald.

LET'S SUPPOSE.

Suppose the membership of your church was limited to one hundred people. Would you be in or out?

Suppose you had to "run" for church-membership as any candidate runs for political office. Would you win or lose?

Suppose the membership were good for one year only, and that re-election depended upon the good you had done in the church during that time. Would you be re-elected or not?

Suppose there was a long list of those waiting to get in. Would you be more alive to your duties as a Christian?

Suppose you were called on to explain just why your church should keep your name on the roll. Have you a record of helpful service to offer in your own defense?

Suppose every member of the church did as much for the church as you are doing. Would more seats be needed, or would the doors be shut and nailed?

Suppose your church had this set of rules: All dues must be paid in advance. Regular attendance at services is required, sickness being the only acceptable excuse. Each member is required to serve in at least one of the following capacities: church school teacher, member of the choir, member of some parish organization, participant in some recognized church work. How long could you qualify?

When a man is seeking a position he submits all of the recommendations he can secure and brings to bear all of the influence he can command to make a favorable impression. After he has landed the job, he works his head off to please the boss. He knows that only by giving satisfaction can he hold the job. Securing a good position is not the signal to take it easy. It is the incentive to hard work.

Yet we find church members who seem to think that their Christian experience ends the minute they get their names on the church roll. They think that they are on the high road to heaven merely because they have joined the church. All they have to do from then on is to go to the services when they feel like it, put in their dime when they go and then send the children to church school if other things do not interfere.

Becoming members of the church does not justify people in sitting back and taking it easy. It's always time for church members to buckle down to work, to put their shoulders to the wheel and push.—Church Business.

I may be right in doctrine and I may be in the right church, but what will it profit me if I do not live right? Christianity has its theory or doctrine, but we must preach the truth and practice what we preach.—E. M. Borden.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The 117th Annual Session of the Eastern Virginia Conference was inspirational and edifying. The attendance on the first day was larger than usual. The second day was not so encouraging. The program was carried out according to the plan of the Executive Committee. Reports were carefully prepared, and the various speakers presented interesting and helpful addresses.

The financial report showed a large reduction in gifts for the various enterprises as compared with last year. The totals sent to Conference for these funds are as follows: Conference Home Missions, $1,004.00; Conference Fund, $317.80; Convention Fund, $1,477.00; Convention Missions, $486.72; Foreign Missions, $420.54; Elon College Fund, $1,433.47; Superannuation, $310.88; Christian Education, $236.25; Orphanage, $329.06. The Grand Total was $6,015.72. Twelve churches paid all Conference Apportionments in full, including the Orphanage. Seven churches at this date have failed to send any funds to the Conference. Some of these churches sent contributions direct to several of the Departments or Institutions. Four hundred and nineteen members were received into the churches during the year. The total for 1936 was 465. Two Congregational churches were received into the Conference: Shelton Church, Portsmouth, Bethlehem Church, Disputanta, Virginia. Sarem church in Gates County, North Carolina, presented a petition requesting permission to disband. This petition was granted and that church will be dropped from the roll of churches after this year. The Home Mission Committee and the Executive Committee were authorized to take over the matter of using or disposing of this property, with full power to act.

The next session of the Conference will be held in the Suffolk Christian Church. The following Standing Committees were appointed for the ensuing year: Executive: R. Lee House, I. W. Johnson, H. S. Hardcastle, N. G. Newman; Home Missions: J. E. West, E. L. Beale, T. Fred Wright, J. F. Morgan; Foreign Missions: Mrs. John G. Truitt, Mrs. J. F. Morgan, Mrs. R. T. Bradford; Christian Education: Joe A. French, F. C. Lester, B. H. Watkins, H. C. Hilliard; Religious Literature: H. S. Hardcastle, J. S. Johnson, G.

Olejar, Mrs. Minnie C. England; Evangelism: J. E. McCauley, H. E. Crutchfield, Carl R. Key, L. E. Smith; Stewardship: Carl R. Key, John G. Truitt, Jesse H. Dollar, R. E. Brittle; Temperance and Moral Reform: Elwood W. Jones, O. D. Poythress, J. H. Warren; Ministerial Ethics: M. S. Poulson, H. V. White, Mrs. J. Monroe Harris; Apportionments: A. L. Jolly, J. W. Manning, J. T. Kernodle; Superannuation: Dr. J. E. Rawles, A. M. Johnson, H. W. Lee; Historian: W. E. MacClenny; Memoirs: W. E. MacClenny; Place of Meeting: Mrs. J. A. Williams.

The officers of the Conference would appreciate the personal attention of every person named in this list by accepting this method of publication as an official notice of this appointment. Cut out this section of this letter and file it for future reference. These Committees should meet at an early date to consider the work in their respective field for the year. A Conference Committee should do something more than write a report containing resolutions which will be forgotten within a week. The real work of the church is done during the year. The harvest fields within the bounds of the Conference are challenging the faith and consecration of every member. May the year 1938 be the best yet for all who have the privilege of working in the vineyard.

THE ELON COLLEGE COMMUNITY CHURCH.

The Elon College Community Church is a Christian Church in the truest sense of the word. It is sufficiently broad in its principles to include all Christians and practical in its program to afford all an opportunity for service and worship. Its membership includes faculty, students, and townspeople. The membership of the church meets every Sunday morning at eleven o'clock for morning worship. Music is furnished by the college choir and a sermon is brought by either the pastor or a visiting minister. It has a modern Sunday school, well organized and manned by capable officers and experienced teachers. Professor W. B. Terrell, Principal of the Elon College Consolidated Public School, is superintendent, and Professor D. J. Bowden of the college faculty is associated with him in the administrative responsibilities of the school.

The evening hour is in charge of the young people. They hold Vespers at 6:30.

The church belongs to the North Carolina and Virginia Christian Conference and reports annually to that body. It always raises its conference apportionment in full. It does not have a very large budget, but the budget is large considering membership and its ability to pay. Our benevolent budget is practically the same as our current budget. Reports made to the annual meeting of the congregation on Wednesday night of the past week showed that all financial requirements for the year have been met with the exception of a rather extensive repair bill on the parsonage. Including the money raised by the Woman's Missionary Society, the benevolent budget of the congregation exceeds the current budget.

The reports also reveal that nineteen members have been received into the fellowship of the church during the year and otherwise gave evidences of growth and progress in all departments.

Our quota of delegates to the annual conference was elected. The church letter was provided for, and authorization for the treasurer to send balances necessary to meet conference requirements to the conference treasurer was voted at the meeting Wednesday night.

When your church has met all requirements, there is a great deal of joy and satisfaction to be a part of conference and to be present when reports are given. When conference requirements are not complied with, there are usually embarrassing moments for the delegates representing such churches. It pays in every way to see that all requirements are fully complied with. If concerted efforts are begun with the beginning of the year, in most churches all financial requirements will be met and there will be evidences of religious growth and increased spiritual power on the part of the church itself.

L. E. SMITH.

A sound body is a first-class thing; a sound mind is an even better thing. But the thing that counts for most in the individual, as in the nation, is character, the sum of those qualities which make a man a good man, and a woman a good woman.—Theodore Roosevelt.

The power of words is immense. A well-chosen word has often sufficed to stop a flying army, to change defeat into victory, and to save an empire.—Emil de Girardin.

WHAT IS A CHRISTIAN?

By CHARLES A. S. DWIGHT.

D. L. Moody is said, during his lifetime, to have asked over a million people the question: Are you a Christian? In a sense there is no other question—unless it be the further inquiry, What is a “Christian”? If we are interested simply in asking who is a Christian, we go to the census, or to a denominational Year Book for the answer. The denotation (extent) of the term (as the logicians say) is fairly easy to determine—it is the connotation (content) that comes hard. Names are always cheap. A-way back in the first century a group of people in Syrian Antioch were “called Christians” either by Jews as a term of scorn, or by Roman officials as a convenient administrative classification. Ever since the best people in the world have been trying to live up to that title. Formalists, imposters, prevaricators, have been many, but in every age the “Jesus Way” has been trodden by men—all too few in number—of whom the world is impelled to say They are the real thing!

In the question, What is a Christian? we italicize the “is” in order to stress the factual nature of the Christian experience. That alone is genuine living. We deal too much in words and definitions while our nerves are scant of life. Sometimes it seems a pity that the term “Christianity” was ever invented, for that is an abstraction, whereas, what we ought to mean and want is Christness. (The converted pagan has a sure intuition when he calls a believer a “Jesus-man.”) In much of the preaching today the person of Christ is not presented, and a drive is noticeable to delete the very term “Christian” from many titles or institutions. This is a step not just in the direction of looseness, but of falseness. Only in Him is the light and the life of men. We need to get beyond adjectives to substantives—finding “Christian” to be Christ.

The early Christians (Christ-men) were by no means perfect, but they exulted in a sense of the realness of their faith in a supreme person. Some of their critics (and it may be secret admirers) called them “crickets of the night,” because, whenever their sleep was interrupted, they immediately began to sing. In their consciousness (“con,” “sub,” or “super”) they were in touch with reality—which meant the core of all being. Times, but not truths change. The realities of the first century are the bed-rock of this age. “Christianity” may vary as a theoretic expression, but Christ still calls to men. Jesus of Nazareth “passes by,” but never away.

The twelve “apostles” visualized Christ—we must realize Him. Men of the modern world will never be converted by falsetto notes of sentiment, poses and pageantry, statistical exhibits, church suppers or picnics, but by people who are in the deepest sense Christians. Service and serenity are end-products of such vital religious experience. One of the Church Fathers, in a letter to a friend, has left on record a picture of his own evil times, strangely prophetic of conditions today. He tells of robbers on the highways, loathsome lust, devastated villages, famines and floods,

NATIONAL FRIENDSHIP AND WORLD PEACE.

Let's make national friendship,
There's room enough for all,
If each on its own foundation,
Builds its stately statue tall.

No more the boom of cannon,
No fields of blood made red,
No homes bereft of loved ones,
No fields strewn thick with dead.

All questions settled fairly,
For weak as well as strong,
Let justice be our motto,
And right will conquer wrong.

Write peace upon our banner,
Let peace be in our song,
A peace to last forever,
A world made right from wrong.

—DR. J. R. CLARK.

crime, corruption, and confusion everywhere. And yet (he continues in his epistle) in the midst of all the riot, bloodshed, and rapine, I see a band of people who are calm, unmoved, serene, and happy in a heaven-fed faith. There are the “Christians,” my good friend, and I am one of them!

Amid all the rigors and riots, distractions and confusions of modern life, we like the old-time Jesus-men, must know where—in whom—to find reality.

SECOND NATIONAL SOCIAL HYGIENE DAY.

“Stamp out Syphilis—Foe of Youth” will be the theme of the Second National Social Hygiene Day to be observed on February 2, 1938.

Of the half million known new cases of syphilis each year, one in five is found among young men and women under twenty years of age. More startling perhaps is the fact that half of all syphilis infections are contracted by individuals in the age group of twenty to thirty years, a group which represents only one-fourth of the nation's population.

In line with the youth theme the American Social Hygiene Association is enlisting the interest of those national organizations whose primary concern is with the problems of young people. The American Youth Congress, the General Federation of Women's Clubs, Parent-Teacher organizations, church and “Y” groups, service clubs and many others will be asked to join in special observance of the proposed program.

Many were active during the period of the First National Social Hygiene Day early this year. New cooperating organizations, impressed by the success of that pioneer venture, have come forward voluntarily to share in the task of making the Second Social Hygiene Day an even greater success.

Last February's event resulted in more than 500 conferences and meetings, 135 radio periods and a sweeping flood of newspaper and magazine comment.

Indications point to an even greater national response to the 1938 Social Hygiene Day and all agencies and persons who have at heart the success of the campaign to stamp out syphilis are urged to join in this national endeavor to tell all the people the facts about this enemy of youth and public health, and how it may be conquered.

In addition to preliminary activity for the Second National Social Hygiene Day, the American Social Hygiene Association, through its National Anti-Syphilis Committee, is organizing state and local committees to assist in the appeal for $500,000 which will enter its general solicitation phase immediately after February 2, 1938.

General John J. Pershing heads the committee. Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur is vice-chairman, and Charles H. Babcock is chairman of the executive committee. Over two hundred leaders in the professions and business have endorsed this national appeal and have pledged themselves to aid in the fight to “stamp out syphilis.”

Jesus gave thirty years to preparation for less than three years' work. Do you wonder that his work lasts? Moses was eighty years in the tanner's pit of preparation. Is it strange that his life wears to this day? The Apostle Paul devoted three years to solitary meditation in the Arabian desert before he began his Christian work. Does that account for the enduring influence of his epistles?

A DIVIDED CHURCH.

(A Correspondence.)

Orlando, Florida,
November 6, 1937.

This is Saturday, and I looked over the church notices for today and tomorrow in Orlando's morning paper. It turned out to be a very interesting look-over. It was found by actual count that in this city of some 35,000 people, there are twenty-two different sects or denominations. This does not, of course, count separately the eight different Baptist churches, nor the five different Methodist congregations, nor an equal number of Presbyterian and Adventists churches, etc., but twenty-two different denominations. For instance, to name only a few of those with one church only in the city: Unitarians; Church of Christ ("Christian Scientists"); Church of the Open Bible; Community Church of God; "Downey Memorial"; "Company of Jehovah's Witnesses"; "Unity Center Church"; Church of the Nazarine; Penticostal Assembly of God; "Theosophical Society" (Church), etc.

Evidently Orlando is in a measure at least prepared (?) with churches to receive her colony of an expected 30,000 winter visitors from all over the country. These tourists, many of them coming in their trailers, need not bring their churches along—they will find these already here, all of them clamoring for attendance and attention. And you will find these sects and denominations claiming that the doctrine that separates them from others is certainly found in, and justified by the Bible.

A zealous "Theosophist" said in this writer's presence two days since that she knew her Society, or Church was the right one, and would eventually win out over all others because "Reincarnation" (the chief doctrine of this church) was mentioned over 250 times in the Bible; that if one by fate of circumstance or what not did not live a good life in the present "incarnation," that one would be born over again in happier circumstances next time and thus be given a better chance, and as for her, she would do as many kind deeds as she could under the circumstances, hoping the next time she was born, she might be maybe an angel—but if not the very next time, then the third or fourth birth after this one. And she was absolutely certain she was right by the (to her) plain and unmistakable teaching of the Bible! ! !

This reminded me of a Bible student (?) I knew a few years ago who believed that prohibition was a monument of the Devil's own devising, since even good Apostle Paul had advised his son Timothy "to take a little wine for the stomach's sake"; and because John had plainly written in the Book of Revelations: "and the oil and the wine hurt thou not." Well, his belief did cause that man to read his Bible through, and to buy two Bibles, one from which he cut out all references to wine and strong drink, and another one in which he pasted, for convenient use and finding all the references he had cut out. And he was a deacon in one of our Christian churches, and a long-time teacher of the adult Bible class—and loved his church, paid liberally to its support, and was loyal to it to the day of his death.

And one recalls from not very ancient history that the preachers to and amongst our grand-fathers and great-grand-fathers proved to their own satisfaction and that of the churches of their day that the Bible taught and upheld human slavery, and that the White man had the right to buy and sell the Black man, and they would and should defend that right at the point of the sword; and moreover it was right to kill folks, mow them down in hundreds and thousands, who disputed you that right and privilege. That belief proved rather fatal and was atoned for in the blood of some as noble men, some as good and devout Christian men as ever adorned and helped to make our Country's history.

We have come a long way in our thinking and believing since then, but we have a long way to go yet before our deeds, as well as our creeds, will "Crown Him Lord of all." One wholesome and helpful sign of our day is that the sects and denominations are wiping out the petty, not to say silly and sinful beliefs, that separate them, and come together as one fold with one Shepherd, even as our Lord said His followers would, and for which grand and glorious consummation He prayed the longest and most intense prayer that we have recorded from Him (John 17th chapter): "That they may all be one; even as thou, Father, art in me and I in thee—that the world may believe that thou didst send me," etc. A sinful and warning world today is the price being paid for a divided church. The world will never believe that God sent Jesus Christ into the world to save the world, until those who accept him, and Him crucified, as the one and all-sufficient Saviour, get together and dwell in unity. Yet, the regrettable, the sorrowful fact is that there are those in the church, with good intentions, who, like John, are saying: "Master, we saw one casting out devils in thy name; and we forbade him, because he followeth not us." (There you are, the bigotry and the prejudice of those who accuse "because he followeth not us.") Then get the instruction and the rebuke of the Master, "Forbid him not; for he that is not against you is for you."

There is no book as interesting, as wholesome, as helpful, as the Bible, but because it is inspired by infinite wisdom and infinite love, it admits of wide interpretation. Therefore, "Search the Scriptures for in them ye think ye have the words of eternal life and thus are they which testify of me."

ABILITY TO LIVE CONCRETELY.

To meet and deal with life in the concrete is far different from talking about life and religion in the abstract. Much of our present day discussions of social and political issues as they are related to the church and to religion never get away from abstract considerations. Many of our friends of the North are able to write volumes about the race question and many of the social issues of the day know little of the concrete situations.

Years ago at the University of Chicago a wonderfully bright and likeable young professor from the University of Illinois was fond of engaging us in discussions having to do with the Negro problem in the South. Of course, he was well informed as to the many abstract problems arising out of the situations incident to the racial and social adjustments. He got along swimmingly until he was forced to face the concrete situations in the South. We held him rigidly to these because we had known these through all the years and we could set out the actual situations the South had to face. Once when he was fully convinced as to the futility of his theories and his promising schemes, he dropped it all by saying, "Well, I like the Negro in the abstract, but I don't like him in the concrete."

This is the exact situation with many of these present day theorizers who make much of a social gospel. They are not ready to deal with concrete situations; they simply talk glibly about the abstract social and religious questions of the day. Jesus had no schemes; he asked men to follow him as he lived with publicans and sinners. He did not think out issues—he lived them out. Here is the rub. Our need is to do as well as we know.

Just now Methodism is trying to get back to the glowing heart that we may have the inner impulse that will enable us to do as well as we know. Aldersgate made the Wesleys social reformers and soul savers. The sinners saved began to build a new world order on both sides of the water.—N. C. Christian Advocate.

THE MAIN THING.

The average church is engaged in many activities. Some of its organizations are subdivided and have a variety of projects. A multitude of things are done. What is the main thing? To employ Christ's language it is to "make disciples." It is to bring men, women and children into personal allegiance to Christ.

There is a strong tendency in the average church organization to be an end in itself, instead of a means to an end. The session has its monthly meeting. How much time is devoted to the subject of winning souls to Christ? Is the theme ever discussed by the trustees or the deacons? Does the ladies' aid society give much attention to it? Do the officers and members of the women's missionary society give practical demonstration that holding tender sentiments toward missionaries and engaging in enthusiastic meetings are not enough, and that the supremely important thing is to witness personally for Christ? Is the Bible school functioning mainly for instruction and inspiration or for evangelization? Is the men's club devoted principally to entertainment and social fellowship or to making disciples for the Master? In the course of a year, many a congregation expends an immense amount of energy through its organizations. If the energy could only be directed and concentrated on the main thing, how much greater would be actual accomplishment in the work of the kingdom of God.

At this season of the year each church reports to the denominational authorities the number of persons received during the past year on profession of faith. Who won them? Did the pastor have any to his credit? Did any member of the session win anybody to the Saviour? Or any member of trustees or deacons or missionary society or Bible school or men's club? In response to the command in the Great Commission, "to make disciples," who has shown real devotion to the task? Would it not be well if all of us, without exception, should answer these questions on our knees, in the secret place, where soul meets God alone?

How is this main thing to be done? Primarily, by living in Christ's spirit, Christ's way, by being Christ-like. We must have the grace and power of the gospel within us before we can communicate them to others. The manner in which we conduct ourselves may be a matter of life or death to some persons. Kindness, gentleness, truthfulness, unrightness, goodness, brotherliness—what powerful forces these are in turning people to Christ.

Witnessing is a mighty instrumentality. Christ said plainly to His followers, "Ye shall be witnesses unto Me." Most of us Christians can talk on a variety of themes. We can carry on conversations. Surely we ought to be able to say a good word for Christ. The following is related of one of our great Americans of the last generation; he was walking along the street, and met a man he had never seen before. He stopped him, passed the time of day, and said, "Are you a Christian?" "It's none of your business," was the answer. "Oh yes, it is my business!" said our great American with his finest kind of smile. "Is that so?" replied the man. "Well, then, you must be Mr. Moody." And so it was Dwight L. Moody, who turned more people to Christ than any other man of his time. None of us has the mighty personal force of a Moody, but it is within our power to witness tactfully, earnestly, persuasively for Christ.

Friendliness is, of course, an essential thing in this work of bringing the unsaved to the Saviour. A few years ago the writer of this editorial was in a certain town and, in conversation with an acquaintance, asked this question: "What about the preacher? Is he getting along well?" "Oh," was the reply, "he can't preach for our sour apples. In his sermons he just rambles around." "But," continued the speaker, "he's the friendliest fellow you ever saw; he seems to know everybody in town; he stops people on the streets and talks to them like a brother; he goes into stores and chats with the proprietors when they're not busy; and he's always helping people who are in trouble." Such a man, preacher or layman, will not be without stars in his crown.

We have entered the new church year. What shall be the evangelistic record when March 31 (October 1), 1938 arrives?—W. E. M., In The United Presbyterian.

EASTERN VIRGINIA C. M. A.

The Christian Missionary Association of the Eastern Virginia Conference will meet in annual session on December 7, 1937, with Waverly Church, at 10:30 A. M.

It is hoped that the attendance will be large, and that each member will be present with all dues paid in full. Appeals for aid are already coming in, and the need has never been greater. Let's try and see if we cannot have not only all dues paid, but a large number of new ones as well.

Pastors are hereby requested to do their best to see that all members from their churches get their C. M. A. dues in on time.

J. F. MORGAN,
President.

An old slab in the Cathedral of Lubeck, Germany, has engraved upon it, "Thus speaketh Christ our Lord:

Ye call me Master and obey me not,
Ye call me Light and see me not,
Ye call me Way and walk me not,
Ye call me Life and desire me not,
Ye call me wise and follow me not,
Ye call me fair and love me not,
Ye call me rich and ask me not,
Ye call me eternal and seek me not,
Ye call me gracious and trust me not,
Ye call me noble and serve me not,
Ye call me mighty and honor me not,
Ye call me just and fear me not,
If I condemn you, blame me not."

It was said of a Home Mission worker in Virginia that she had "a soul like a rose in bloom."

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church"

MISS EMILY CARLETON, Editor, 541 Osceola Ave., Winter Park, Fla.

OUR HOLIDAY CONFERENCE.

The officers of the Southeast Pilgrim Fellowship and of each of the state or regional Fellowships, have been invited to meet with the young people of the Greensboro Church for a Holiday Conference. This will begin with registration on Tuesday afternoon, December 28th, and close with an evening session on Thursday, December 30th. Since this meeting will be held in the middle of the week, it will allow ministers and young people to attend all the sessions and still not be away from their home churches over Sunday.

The members of the Greensboro Church are inviting the delegates to stay in their homes, where breakfast will be furnished. The only expense of the conference will be transportation costs, and meals—aside from the above-mentioned breakfasts! The Georgia officers are already making plans to attend, with a car starting in the western part of the state and picking up other officers along the way. When such a plan is followed, and the car is filled, transportation costs to each individual are not great.

If you are an officer in a Fellowship, or a Counselor for one of the Youth Fellowship groups, begin making plans now to attend. Each week we will give you additional news regarding the plans, so watch for them.

FALL RALLIES IN FLORIDA.

There are only thirty churches of our denomination in Florida—scattered over the five hundred mile length of the state. Therefore, it is virtually impossible to have a young people's meeting at which all the churches are represented. This fall meetings are being held in six sections of the state, with large delegations attending from each of the churches of a given area.

Three of these meetings have already been held and the others are scheduled for successive Sundays in this month. Miss Coghill is very much pleased with the interest and attendance at these meetings. The object of the meetings is to make the Congregational-Christian young people in the state "Pilgrim Fellowship conscious" and to present the plans they will carry out this year.

Our president, Henry Witte, of Sanford, is proving to be a splendid leader. He is able to present the Pilgrim Fellowship in a clear and understandable manner and thus to arouse interest in it. Although he has family obligations which occupy much of his time, he is attending each of the six rallies—which means he is doing some traveling every week. Since he has been a leader at our Summer Conference for the last five years, he is greeted with enthusiasm by the young people at each of the meetings.

We feel that we are getting off to a fine start in Florida this fall, and hope that we can follow up the good work of the officers who have planned these meetings, by carrying out their splendid plans for the year.

THE GREATEST SHADOW.

(An Armistice Day Reverie.)

A shadow falls across the world
Today, a shadow tall and gaunt,
War's darksome shade, and memory
Of bitterness and hate and want.

And visions see a low white cross,
All that is left to tell of him
Who on a bright May morning marched
Away, upon a war lord's whim.

He should be in his prime, he should Be here upon his father's fields,
Have known the love of wife and child
And all a human birthright yields.

But no, a shadow on the world,
A feud in which he had no part
Blocked out his being ere he lived—
Be still, be still, rebellious heart.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR
NOVEMBER 21, 1937.

(THANKSGIVING SERVICE.)

SCRIPTURE: Ps. 103: 1, 2; 147: 5-20.

Daily Readings—

Monday—A Grateful Heart—Luke 17: 11-19.

Tuesday—Lest We Forget—Deut 8: 7-17.

Wednesday—The Habit of Thanksgiving—I Thessa. 5: 12-18.

Thursday—Giving Proof of Gratitude—Gen. 28: 10-22.

Friday—Thanksgiving Seen in Service—Rom. 12: 1-2.

Saturday—Jesus Gives Thanks—Matt 11: 25-30.

Thanksgiving Day should have a place of sacredness in all our lives. We should be grateful each day of our enjoyment of God's blessings, but to a greater degree on the day set apart throughout the nation. God has given seed time and harvest and we should not be forgetful of His mercies and love.

Our Pilgrim fathers gathered their first harvest, then Governor Bradford appointed a day in which to give thanks. It was a great experience in their lives. It is out of the appreciative heart that God receives the praise. Where life is simple, one can see that the good things are a result of partnership between man and God. In the complex social order of our day we have erected artificial barriers which make it less easy to see God's contribution to our lives. We must keep alive the thought that God is good and we shall not forget all his benefits.

THANKSGIVING.

We thank thee, God, that harvests never fail us,

And men responsive to the need today
Are closer drawn as they give from their bounty

To hungry ones who have no homing way.

We thank thee, God, that thou who led the Pilgrims

Across dim seas, and made a nation rise
Triumphant where a wilderness had flourished

Will keep us still beneath Thy guiding eyes.

And that the spirit of a generous giving,
The corner-stone on which our ideals stand,

Deep-planted in the soil with every seedtime
Sheds benedictions on a sharing land.

—Helen Welshimer.

Discussion—

1. What is your idea of Thanksgiving Day?

2. How should we celebrate it?

3. How should we express our gratitude? By prayer alone, or by a gift of service for a needy cause?

4. Which speaks louder—words or deeds?

Suggested Hymns—

"Praise God From Whom All Blessings Flow."

"Love Divine, All Love Excelling."

"We Plough the Fields and Scatter."

THE CHRISTIAN MINISTER.

LESSON VII—NOVEMBER 14, 1937.

GOLDEN TEXT: Neglect not the gift that is in thee.—I Timothy 4:14.

LESSON: I Timothy 4; II Timothy 2:1-4.

Timothy was a young man who was either converted under Paul's ministry, or came under Paul's ministry and fellowship soon after his conversion. He was a young man of high promise, both because of his character and his ability and his consecration, and there grew up between the two men a devotion like unto the father to the son and vice versa. Timothy developed rapidly under Paul's teaching and leadership, and under Paul's wise direction. He was Paul's representative on special missions as well as his companion on Paul's missionary journeys. Paul on one occasion said that he had no man like-minded unto Timothy in his unselfish devotion to others, and he refers to him as his "fellow-worker." It is out of this intimate experience, and out of his intense concern for Timothy, and his high hopes for him, that Paul writes with burning heart and glowing pen concerning some of the characteristics of the Christian minister. Needless to say Paul wrote in timeless terms, and every minister needs to read again and again his words of advice and counsel and exhortation to this young minister.

The Christian Minister as a Watchman and Warner.

There is always danger of false doctrines. Error creeps in, folks go off at a tangent, heresies flourish, wild theories are proclaimed, truth is distorted. Against all these the minister must be on his guard. Against all these he must warn all his people. And the soundest method is to teach the truth positively. Only thus can "he be a good minister of Christ Jesus."

The Christian Minister as a "Servant."

The word minister used here means "one who serves." A minister is primarily a servant. Like his Master in whose name he ministers, he is sent not to be ministered unto, but to minister and to give his life a ransom for many. The true shepherd lays down his life for the sheep. He is not a dictator, one who is to lord it over his people, one who demands special privilege, but one who serves, one who puts at the disposal of others the powers and talents which God has given him. Only thus can he "be a good minister of Christ Jesus."

The Christian Minister and His Own Spiritual Life.

"And exercise thyself unto godliness." "Take heed unto thyself." "Neglect not the gift that is in thee"—in these and other like-minded words Paul reminds Timothy that if his message and his ministry is to have any meaning or power to others, he must give heed to the things of his own spirit and inner life. It is possible to preach to others and yet be a cast-away one's self. The minister cannot mediate the things of the Spirit to others, unless he himself is filled with the Spirit. It is only as he disciplines his own soul, only as he feeds his own inner life, that "he can be a good minister of Christ Jesus" to others.

The Christian Minister and His Basic Belief.

"Because we have hope set on the living God, who is the Saviour of all men, especially of them that believe"—this is the reason says Paul, that the Christian minister labors and strives. Faith in a living God, one who has revealed himself in Jesus Christ—this is the basic hope of the minister, the thing that undergirds his life, and inspires his service. Beyond all human effort, behind all human effort, there is an active, living sovereign Purpose and Power moving toward one far off divine event for humanity, the ultimate coming of the Kingdom of God. And that Purpose and Power is Love, God as revealed in Jesus Christ as Redeemer and Saviour. Only a man who believes this can "be a good minister of Christ Jesus."

The Christian Minister and His Example to Others.

"Be thou an example to them that believe, in word, in manner of life, in love, in faith, in purity"—in the things he says not only in the pulpit but on the street, in the way he lives, in the spirit he manifests in all the relationships of life, in the faith which he declares by his outreach and his uplift and his plans, in the spotless purity, and the sincerity and undivided allegiance—in all these things he is to be an example and to give an example to those who believe. It is a big order. Who is sufficient for these things? With men it is impossible. But by the grace of God in Christ ministers may live in such a way that they are worthy examples for their people to follow. Whether ministers like it or not, whether they think it is fair or not, they are to demonstrate the better and higher and best and highest way of life. Only thus can a man "be a good minister of Christ Jesus."

The Christian Minister and His Reading.

"Give heed to reading." The minister must read if he is to be thoroughly furnished unto good works. Everything wholesome is grist for his mill. He should not, he dare not become bookish. But only as his mind is fed on the best thought of ancient and contemporary life, only as he feeds his mind on great thoughts, especially on the truths of the Bible, can he "be a good minister of Christ Jesus."

The Christian Minister and His Appeal to Men.

"Give heed to exhortation, to teaching"—he is to appeal to the emotion and the will, and to the intellect. As a matter of fact, a true minister is a teacher and preacher, his example is Jesus who came teaching and preaching. Let a minister teach his people the great doctrines of the Bible and the Church. And let him appeal to the heart and will as well as to the head, so that men may become doers of the truth and not hearers only. Only thus can a man "be a good minister of Christ Jesus."

The Christian Minister and His Work.

"Be diligent in these things." There are lazy men in the ministry but they are a shame and a scandal to the ministry. A minister should be diligent in his work. He should discipline himself, and he should be most careful in the stewardship of time. Many a man's ministry would be more successful if he had more enthusiasm for his work. Enthusiasm is contagious. Let every minister do with his might and what his hands find to do. Only thus will he "be a good minister of Christ Jesus."

The Christian Minister and Hardship.

"Suffer hardship with me, as a good soldier of Christ Jesus."

Pay as little attention to discouragement as possible. Plough ahead as a steamer does, rough or smooth, rain or shine. To carry your cargo and make your port is the point.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
Chaplain in the U. S. Navy

MONDAY.

WHAT IS THE CHURCH.

"Thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of Hell shall not prevail against it."—Matt. 16:18.

The church is something indispensable and deserves whole hearted allegiance and support or else it is unimportant and does not deserve the attention of any of us.

But the church has existed throughout the ages. Throughout the Jewish age, it was the medium of the relation of God to man and was known as a "solemn assembly" of the Lord. So important was it to Christ that He called the first Christians "the church" and sent the apostles into the world to make Christians of all nations.

So important was the church to the disciples that it is mentioned ninety-five times in the apostolic writings.

Prayer—Our Father, we pray for the true vision of the true church now and always. Amen.

TUESDAY.

THE TRUE CHURCH.

"Where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them."—Matt 18:20.

Therefore, the church is not a building, nor a denomination, nor an altar, nor an organization, but it is the Spirit in the life of His children.

"Not everyone that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the Kingdom of God, but he that doeth the will of My Father which is in Heaven."

"The Lord pardoneth everyone that prepareth his heart to seek God . . . though he be not cleansed according to the purification of the sanctuary."—II Chron 30:18-19.

They, who do the will of the Lord, then, are the church and all others are outside. Therefore, we ask you, how many unbaptized Christians are there? No one knows But God. This we do know, that whoever they are and wherever they are, they possess the spirit of the Lord.

Prayer—Our Father, Thou art our God. Embue us with Thy spirit that we may feel everyday that we are members of that true church. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

THE WORLD'S OUTLOOK.

"And delivered Him to Pilate."—Mark 15:1.

It appears that the world does not look at the church today in the light of Biblical authority. It looks at it in the light of strife against itself and it seeing little necessity for such strife. It points the finger of criticism to the lack of the very thing the church most proudly boasts to possess.

The ministry of Jesus was, "the kingdom of God at hand," and, "the salvation of man." He gave His life to achieve this, and He baptized His disciples to carry it to the furthermost parts of the earth and make Christians of all nations, and you and I are responsible for that duty. He has placed the work of the church in our hands and whatever criticism we may have, that work is showing just how close or or how far off we are walking.

Prayer—Our Father, we thank Thee for the church and the human heart. Bring us into a high sense of our duty this day. Amen.

THURSDAY.

SEPARATION AS WELL AS UNION.

"I came not to send peace but a sword . . . to set a man against his father . . . the daughter against her mother, etc. . . ."—Matt. 10:34-35.

If there is strife and division in the church, such cleavage may be due to the Sword of the Spirit, severing righteousness from unrighteousness. For instance, an eminent divine, a man of sincere devout character, a scholar, a loyal church-man, a preacher of the gospel, and the light of thousands of souls, was convicted of heresy and dismissed from the church because he believed in the divine inspiration of the Word, that Moses did not write all the books attributed to him, and that there is a chance after death. Because he would not deny these things, he was expelled.

This is quite different from recent declarations in ecumenical conferences. They say that despite all differences, the church is one and that non-essential differences are not essentially unhealthy to Christianity.

Prayer—Our Father, lead us up and out and above petty differences and into the realm of the Spirit of the Living God. Amen.

FRIDAY.

THE CHURCH, A UNION OF ALL PEOPLE.

"That they all may be one."—Jno. 17:11.

We should be prepared at all times to distinguish between the church triumphant and the church militant. The church triumphant is the Spirit of Christ embraced in the society of persons who share these same beliefs and experiences. The church militant is an organization through which the Spirit expresses itself.

When Paul said, "the church is the Body of Christ," he meant the former. When Christ said, "where two or three are gathered together in my name, there I will be in the midst of them." He meant the former. But when we say "the Presbyterians" or the "Methodists" or the "Catholics," we mean the latter.

It is unfortunate that so many people think of the church only in the light of the latter. That is what they see, or they think of it in the light of untoward conduct of some of its members. They do not have any conception of that spiritual realm over which Christ reigns.

Prayer—Dear Lord, give us the wide conception, the far extended realities of Thy Church. Amen.

SATURDAY.

FELLOWSHIP BEYOND.

"The eyes of the Lord run to and fro throughout the whole earth to show Himself strong in behalf of them whose heart is perfect toward Him."—II Chron. 16:9.

The true church is not limited to the operations of the local organizations nor to the extent of personal influence. It takes us into the realm beyond, where there is free comradeship with all that is good, and full fellowship with all the good.

The true church goes further still. There are people who are not members of any organized church but who really embrace in their lives, the Christ Spirit. Christ claims him "that doeth the will of My Father." Therefore, whosoever possesses the spirit of the Lord Jesus Christ and follows Him, are His children.

Prayer—Our Father, we believe that everything else fails, but that the church never fails, and we would not fail. Make us Thine forever. Amen.

SUNDAY.

THE WORLD WITH THE SPIRIT OF JESUS.

"These only are my fellow-workers unto the kingdom of God." Col. 4:11.

The church is comradeship with God. Paul often referred to this in terms as follows: "fellow-workers with God," "fellow-laborers with God," etc. Jesus, as a reward for their consecration, promised to endow the disciples with power to do "the works that I do and greater works than these shall we do."

We understand that our lives are to go along with His life. Our minds are to think His thought after Him.

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D., Pastor.

BROKEN FOR YOU.

By REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D.

"This is my body broken for you."—I Corinthians 11:24.

Here is one of earth's sublime expressions of sacrifice. We have never yet realized what is the full meaning of this text: "This is my body, broken for you." We cannot realize the giving of Jesus for us, what it means. It is the sublime fact of the atonement. Only in humble, faithful gratitude can we take hold of it at all, that the body of Jesus was broken for us. But on the fact of Calvary the undone sinner may rest his case, and by faith accepting it, he feels a restoration and a pardon and a peace which he cannot otherwise explain. By faith one can say: Jesus died for me! Other people have died, but Jesus died for me! By faith I can take hold in humble gratitude of that fact, and come what will, and come what may, I can be assured that Jesus died for me, and that he is my Saviour, and my Redeemer!

That gives us a new start. That gives a new interpretation to our lives. From that point we can move with some assuredness of there being some point to our lives. That fact makes us his, and subordinates the purposes and motives of our lives to him. That gives us a reason for living, and for engaging in the business of telling other people of that great fact. Each of us will be called upon to go about that business in the same way. The Lord needs each of us in our places, living and adorning the eternal fact that we belong to Jesus, because he has died for us, and thus made us his. And he is calling many of us to follow in his steps in giving our lives for others. It has been so since the beginning.

It is an appropriate thought as we gather today about this communion table. More than a century ago there was a very learned, and cultured young scholar on the campus of Oxford College, England. He was one of the lecturers on its faculty. He realized the fact that Jesus had died to save him. And that Jesus had thus put him under everlasting obligation to him. He felt the call to help carry out the command of the Christ to go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. India was calling him. India with its hot climate, with its crowded, unsanitary cities. India, with its lack of knowledge of Jesus. He knew its teeming millions needed the power of that message. He set forth to preach it.

Many friends of Reginald Heber must have tried to persuade him to remain in England. They must have told him of the ever higher place he would hold in his church at home, they must have reminded him of his talents, and they probably told him that they would all be wasted in a foreign land. Nevertheless Heber went to India. So wise and useful was he that he was soon made a bishop. But, before long, the heat of the country, and the hardships brought him down, and at the young age of forty-three he had laid down his life for India.

But was he dead? This morning, more than a century after, in this land, far across the Atlantic from his native England, and farther still from his India, as we entered this service of worship we sang one of his songs, "Holy, Holy, Holy." Heber still lives! How many millions have been lifted up in worship with that majestic hymn. And besides that what untold impetus has been given the entire modern missionary movement with his "From Greenland's Icy Mountains, to India's Coral Strand." Out of his suffering, toiling, working, praying, preaching, body-breaking, and soul-giving, have come seven of the hymns in our hymnal, besides the never-dying work which he left in India.

Yes, Jesus can say: "This is my body, broken for you," and he has his courageous ones still who go out in "his train," words from one of Heber's hymn, "The Son of God Goes Forth to War," and who in turn are giving their lives for others. The world goes forward on this supreme unselfishness. Without that haunting challenge, deep down within the souls of young men, and young women, civilization would be on a very humdrum road indeed. But as long as many men and women are moved with a desire to such idealistic endeavor, our world is not going to wreck and ruin.

Can we realize how much "body-breaking" has been done for us? Can we overlook the death of Jesus on the cross for us, the expression of the great heart-hunger of the Infinite for the redemption of all his own? Can we overlook the way in which untold millions since Jesus have caught the spirit of his life and have given themselves for his cause? Can we overlook the toil and sacrifice of our forefathers that we might have the blessings which we enjoy today? Have we forgotten the furrows in our mother's face, or the stoop in our father's shoulders? All of us know how our mothers have denied themselves of things they need, of things they craved to have, in order that we might have the blessings which are ours today! Some of us know that the physical bodies of our fathers and mothers have been actually bent, and battered, and broken for us. The blessings of life which you and I enjoy have come at the price of sacrifice.

Does not the manhood and womanhood within cry out of our very souls to get in and do something for God, and for goodness which has been passed on to us? Have we been coddled and petted, and pampered until we are soft, and flabby, and fruitless? Are we unable to walk in the footprints of men like Reginald Heber who wrote: "Who best can drink his cup of woe triumphant over pain, who patiently bears his cross below—he follows in his train?"

God is not calling us to lie on a deathbed in India and dream of our native, childhood haunts and write: "By cool Siloam's shady rill how sweet the lily grows! How sweet the breath beneath the hill of Sharon's dewy rose." He is not calling us to write like Heber did these things, and like Heber died to give his life in India, but he is calling us to be Christians right where we are. He is calling us to honest, clean and holy living; and to vigorous, forthright witnessing in our daily lives and actions to our fellowship with him. He desires that we do our humble Christian duty in loyalty to our home, our church, our community, our neighbor. He expects that of us, and if we do that we shall feel something of the duty to sacrificial serving which has characterized his followers all along the way.

So much of God's world is yet hungry! So much of the human race is yet in darkness and sin, and misery, too great to bear! In the best places that ever-unquenchable desire for God is being crowded out by things, and things, and things! Jesus still stands over his own with a broken heart. You and I as Christians must know that, and ask him for grace to do something in our short day about it. And as we gather about this Lord's table today let us hear Reginald Heber's song:

Bread of the world, in mercy broken,
Wine of the soul, in mercy shed,
By whom the words of life were spoken,
And in whose death our sins are dead.

The Orphanage
CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:—

The Christian Orphanage needs to raise between now and December 31st the sum of $8,000.00, in order to close the year without any debt incurred during the year. How are we to raise it? (1) Sunday School Monthly Offerings; (2) Individual Offerings; (3) Special Thanksgiving Offerings.

We trust that all our churches and Sunday schools will do their very best in all of these offerings and especially in the Thanksgiving offerings.

I want to suggest to you that you plan your offering and set the goal to be reached and then work your offering up to the goal. But set your goal so it will be worthy of your church group. Put some effort in it. See your leading members and ask them to give five or ten dollars toward the offering. If one man gives ten dollars it is an incentive for some other to give. We want you to help us reach our goal of $20,000.00 for the year. You have helped us all these years and I have used the money you sent to the orphanage with the greatest of care. It has been used in adding farm land to our farm, building new buildings to make our plant more adequate and giving a home to orphan children.

This is the season of the year that we gather in our crops and market some. We can see how bountifully the Lord has blessed us. But at the same time we should realize that others have not been so bountifully blessed. Then, isn't it our duty to share our blessings with those less fortunate. At this Thanksgiving season I plead with you to open your hearts and make an offering to help our ninety-three little children here in the Christian Orphanage. Be a good neighbor, and share with us. The orphanage has been a good neighbor to take children from all the conferences when we had room. We want to ask you in return to be a good neighbor to us at this Thanksgiving season.

In Memoriam

DARDEN.

Whereas, under the providence of God the Home Coming Society has suffered the loss of its first and, to this time, only president, Mr. J. M. Darden;

And, whereas, in the death of Mr. Darden not only our society but the Elon Orphanage and all the other institutions of the Southern Christian Convention recognize the loss of a beloved supporter and friend;

Therefore, be it resolved that it is our sincere judgement that the following tribute is fitting and should be spread upon the minutes of our society, a copy sent to the family, and a copy sent to "The Christian Sun" for publication:

In Mr. Darden the Elon Orphanage had a friend over a long term of years, who not only gave to this beloved institution his financial support and the counsel of his wide and successful business experience, but also his affection in public and private expression. It was the good fortune of Mr. Darden to hold membership on and for several terms to preside over the Board of Trustees of the Orphanage during a period when it became an institution of which not only the Southern Convention is proud but of which North Carolina is proud. The Orphanage was a thing of delight and joy to Mr. Darden.

Toward the ideals and purposes of our society Mr. Darden was in full and hearty accord. While his health permitted he faithfully attended its meetings and gave to it the ripe leadership for which his long and successful career as a Christian business prepared him. It is our hope and wish to memorialize Mr. Darden's memory by having our society achieve in the estimation of the Orphanage and in the goodwill of the girls and boys who go forth from the Orphanage the expectations in character and ends of its founders.

WRIGHT.

On July 10, 1937, the death angel entered the home of Mrs. Mollie Truitt and bore the spirit of her loving mother, sister Bettie Wright, to her home beyond. Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That our beloved sister was a faithful member of Concord Christian Church, and we believe that our loss is her divine gain and that she is now happy with the redeemed in God's mansion of love and glory.

2. That we extend our deepest sympathy to the bereaved family and commend them to God who is a very present help in time of trouble and can all sorrow heal.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family, a copy be sent to "The Christian Sun" for publication, and a copy be spread upon the church minutes.

CAN AND SHOULD.

The church can and should do twelve kinds of service whole-heartedly:

1. The whole church should study God's word—II Tim. 2:15.

2. They can and should obey all of the Gospel—Jas. 1:22.

3. They can and should pray earnestly—Luke 18:11.

4. They should and can use faith in prayers—Heb. 1:33, 34.

5. They should and can live clean and humble—I John 1:17.

6. They can and should live to love—Matt. 22:37.

7. They can and should keep fellowship alive—John 1:7.

8. They should and can give the tenth of their income:

(1) Systematically, I Cor. 16:2.

(2) Liberally as God helps them, II Cor. 9:7.

9. They should and can build up their church—Eph. 4:16.

10. They should and can have good church officials—Acts 6:3.

11. They can and should be soul winners—Jas. 1:20.

12. They can and should stay sanctified—Rom. 15:16.

Vision that leads one church to practice the above scriptural teachings can and should make her a leader that others will be willing to follow.—A. J. Jenkin, in Freewill Baptist.

BULLETINS TO HELP YOU.

with special interests and responsibilities:

THE ADULT EDUCATION BULLETIN.

This is published twice a year. It deals with methods of adult work, gives program suggestions, describes new materials and serves in general to help make people adult-education-conscious. The next issue will give considerable space to the question of younger adults in the church. Each minister receives a copy. Any adult leader may also receive a copy on request. (Enclose a stamp if you care to.)

THE BULLETIN OF THE PILGRIM FELLOWSHIP.

This is published three or four times a year. One copy is available, free, for each church; additional copies, 5c each. This includes practical suggestions on young people's work, helps for Sunday evening meetings, lists of study courses, organization ideas. This is basic material for the young people's group.

THE PILGRIM LEADER.

This is published two or three times a year. It deals with the whole problem of leadership education in summer conferences, community training schools, local church classes, and correspondence courses. It also furnishes help along the line of less formal methods of leadership education. A request will place your name on the mailing list.

WORLD FELLOWSHIP.

This is published twice a year. It deals with the program of missionary education and world friendship for all age groups. Frequent accounts are given of world-fellowship activities in local churches; carefully annotated book lists and lists of plays are printed from time to time; materials are described; and suggestions are included for missionary leaders. A copy is sent to every enrolled world service leader. Others may have their names placed on the mailing list on request.

FAMILY ALTAR.

"It is only by such living that the world shall know Him." Our souls are to convey His Spirit to the world. Our lips are to speak His messages. Our hands are to do His work. Our shoulders are to bear His cross. Without this there is no success.

Prayer—Our Father, on this Sabbath Day, send us out to the church and into the true church and then on in the beyond spirit of this world, the realm of eternal glory. Amen.

God of the Nations, Near and Far

God of the nations, near and far,
Ruler of all mankind,
Bless Thou Thy people as they strive
The paths of peace to find.

The clash of arms still shakes the sky,
King battles still with king—
Wild through the frightened air of night
The bloody tocsins ring.

But clearer far the friendly speech
Of scientists and seers,
The wise debate of statesmen and
The shouts of pioneers.

And stronger far the clasped hands
Of labor's teeming throngs,
Who in a hundred tongues repeat
Their common creeds and songs.

From shore to shore the peoples call
In loud and sweet acclaim,
The gloom of land and sea is lit
With Pentecostal flame.

O Father! from the curse of war
We pray Thee give release,
And speed, O speed the blessed day
Of justice, love, and peace.

FIRST CHRISTIAN CHURCH
Reidsville, N. C.

The 112th annual session of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference of Congregational and Christian Churches met at this church Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of this week. Rev. J. L. Neese is the beloved pastor under whose leadership the church has grown rapidly and has built an addition of a fine two-story building with basement on the backside of the church (entrance on the left).

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

November 28th to December 5th is the time scheduled for a Preaching Mission in all of the churches of Virginia. If this carries over, it will mean a revival of religion in the state.

Rev. Carl R. Key, of Holland, Virginia, represented THE CHRISTIAN SUN and the Board of Christian Education at the Western North Carolina Conference last week. Mr. Key and his wife were visiting at his old home.

"To keep faith" with the young boys who have been his admirers for many years—that's the reason Tom Mix gave for not drinking, in an interview published in the Metropolitan Press recently. He won't play a part in which he has to smoke or drink, Mr. Mix declared. Wonder if the movies may yet have a message for ministers, church officials and Sunday school teachers.

The man who gives the Bibles distributed by the Board of Christian Education worshipped in the church last Sunday where the editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN preaches. He says that he wants every person who does not have a Bible and who wants one to have it. He does not want them piled up some place to accumulate dust. Bibles are made to be read. If you need one for this purpose, write for it at 514 South Main Street, Norfolk, Virginia.

Congratulations to the Elon Alumni Association on the fine little news-bulletin which it is now issuing each month. Dr. J. E. Rawls, of Suffolk, Virginia, is the new and efficient president, and Mr. George D. Coleough, is the executive secretary. Miss Pattie Lee Coghill is to be the orator at commencement next May. This publication will help to keep the alumni informed as to what is going on at Elon and will thus be a blessing to those who have studied there.

The following is taken from a recent Orlando (Florida) newspaper: "Rev. Victor B. Chicoine, pastor of the Congregational-Christian Church, Winter Park, was elected president of the Orange County Ministerial Association this morning, succeeding Morris Butler Brook, pastor of Central Christian Church." This is the first time a minister, outside of Orlando, has held this position. The day Mr. Chicoine took office the ministerial group started a drive for removing obscene literature and novelty objects from the stores of the county.

Are human beings happiest in the long run under a great white father, which, being interpreted, means despotism? If the answer is yes, then democracy is a disease, an aberration, to be cured as quickly as possible. In the past the genius of America has refused to accept such diagnosis. Our creed has been that democracy is not only possible but desirable, the only form of government which will in the long run satisfy the self-respect of a self-respecting people.—Dr Harold W. Doods, president of Princeton University.

Dr. W. J. Campbell, president of the Southern Seminary Foundation which is affiliated with the Vanderbilt School of Religion, was recently awarded the Doctor of Laws degree at Marietta College, Ohio. The degree was awarded at ceremonies attendant upon the installation of Dr. Harry Kelso Eversull as ninth president of Marietta College. Honorary degrees were conferred at the same time upon Col. Frank Knox, publisher of the Chicago Daily News and Republican candidate for vice-president in 1954; Charles P. Taft, Cincinnati lawyer; and James G. Gilkey, a clergyman of Springfield, Massachusetts.

From the San Diego (Cal.) Progress Journal, of October 29th comes this clipping: "Oneirans are again fortunate in having a program of unusual quality to look forward to on November 4th, when Chaplain H. E. Rountree, of the U. S. Navy, will address them, and will, in addition, entertain them with humorous songs. Chaplain Rountree's winning personality has made him deservedly popular at the Destroyer Base, and those who have heard his diverting solo concerts know that a very lively afternoon is in store. It will have its serious side, however, as Chaplain Rountree has chosen 'Peace' for the topic of his address."

The annual alumni banquet for the Elon College football team will be held on Thanksgiving evening after the annual game with Guilford College. E. N. Jones, of the class of 1932, will be the master of ceremonies for the occasion. He also has charge of arrangements. The main speaker for the occasion will be Laurence Leonard, sports editor of the Greensboro Daily News, who will speak on a subject of interest to the followers of the Elon football team. A good crowd is expected for the annual event, according to Mr. Jones. The usual custom is for an alumnus to pay for his meal and for the meal of one football player. A plate is seven-five cents. The team this year has had an extraordinarily good season under Coach Horace Hendrickson, who is coaching his first year. The Maroon has lost only to Appalachian, while defeating V. M. I., Emory and Henry, Davis-Elkins, Lenoir-Rhyne, Naval Apprentice and Catawba.

NEW MINISTER AT MEMPHIS.

Rev. Marshall Wingfield, a former member of the Disciples of Christ Church, became pastor of First Congregational Church, Memphis, Tennessee, in September, last. Rev. Mr. Wingfield is a native of Franklin County, Virginia, has served churches in Richmond, Newport News, and Bowling Green, Virginia, was associate of Peter Ainslie in mission work in Baltimore, was a pastor at Moscow, Idaho, and Amory, Mississippi.

He was president of the Disciples Convention in Mississippi recently, has represented the Disciples Church in numerous councils and conventions, has conducted four European tours, writes a syndicated column of "Short Notes on World Doings," has written several historic documents and books of poetry.

Reports are to the effect that Rev. Wingfield is an able and fraternal brother. He will be welcomed into the fellowship of the Southeast and will doubtless mean much to us in the years that lie ahead. His latest book is reviewed on another page.

RAMSEY SWAIN ORDAINED.

Rev. Charles Ramsey Swain, a graduate of Elon College and of Vanderbilt University, was ordained to the Gospel ministry in Pilgrim Congregational Church, Corbin, Kentucky, on October 17, 1937. Among those sharing in the service were Rev. T. A. Kitchen a former pastor of the church, Rev. Ruth F. Sargeant, Miss Helen Kitchen, grand-daughter of the Rev. Mr. Kitchen and bride-elect of the Rev. Mr. Swain, Dr. W. J. Campbell, Dr. F. P. Ensminger, Rev. J. M. Trosper and Rev. J. Watt Raine, author of "Land of the Saddlebags."

Many people in the Carolinas and Virginia will remember the Rev. Mr. Swain as a graduate of the Blind School, in Raleigh, a good student at Elon, and a talented musician. Last year he won a reading prize at Vanderbilt, using Braille.

WINSTON-SALEM.

We should like to make mention in THE CHRISTIAN SUN of some of the things that have been going on in the United Church, Winston-Salem, during the late summer and fall.

The church was represented at the Elon Training School by its pastor and one youth. Immediately after the school we held our Vacation Bible School for two weeks with an enrollment of 43 and an average attendance of 35. Nineteen were from our own school and the remainder from the community. Rev. A. B. Buchanan, student summer worker from Milroy, Pennsylvania, was our assistant and did very worthwhile work.

The annual Sunday school picnic, held early in August, at Crystal Lake, near the City, as usual, was a very popular event and was well attended. During the last two weeks in August the pastor and his family spent a pleasant vacation in Pennsylvania, Baltimore, and Eastern Virginia. The fourth Sunday in September was observed as Rally and Promotion Day with 62 present at the merger service. The Sunday school attendance has regularly exceeded that number since Rally Day.

October 9th marked the fifth anniversary of the organization of the church and was fittingly celebrated by a banquet on the night of October 13th. Mayor W. T. Wilson of the city was the speaker and gave a splendid message. The pastor reviewed the history and progress of the church and various members responded with short talks.

Dr. James R. Clinton, of Philadelphia, was with us in a Preaching Mission Service from October 24 to 29th. This was Dr. Clinton's second visit to this church, having been here for three days last February. It was an inspiration to the church to have Dr. Clinton with us and he did a work that we believe will be lasting. These have since become teachers in the Sunday school. They joined the morning and his messages brought in very favorable comment. He also addressed the High School body of 1,700 students, the Draughton's Business College of 150 students and was the guest speaker at the Lions Club with about 90 present.

Three new members were added to the church during October. Two of these have since become etachers in the Sunday school. They joined the church and then willingly went to work.

Miss Maizie Hosick, a member of the Church of Christ (Disciples) is the popular teacher of our Adult Bible Class and no class could wish for a more intelligent and consecrated teacher. She is an invalid and can walk only feebly with the aid of a cane; yet, she is wheeled for three blocks in a rolling chair to the church each Sunday morning by her ten-year-old nephew. Such willing and consecrated service on the part of an invalid would put to shame those who possess both talents and good health, but who seek to avoid such opportunities for service in the church.

On last Tuesday night Mrs. E. C. West and Mrs. Aden Fair entertained the Woman's Association at their monthly meeting, in the club room of the Southern Dairies. An interesting business session and program were enjoyed by all. Twenty-four were present, four of whom were new members received into the Association at this meeting. The Southern Dairies joined with the hostesses in their refreshments and provided ice cream.

We invite those coming to Winston-Salem to visit the manse and to attend our services.

Inclosed herewith is my check for $2.00 to continue my subscription to THE SUN. I was sixty-nine years old yesterday. The earliest of my memory is that of seeing THE SUN in my father's home—I have had a home of my own for forty-one years—and it has been a weekly visitor in my home all of these years, and if I live a long or a short time, it will continue to come, if I can earn, beg, or almost steal $2.00 a year.

Thank you, Dr. Manning. We hope you don't have to steal it. Ed.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgement and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

IS IT WORTH IT?

There are those who say that this little paper isn't worth $2.00 a year. Maybe they are right, but just look what they get for their money: A Good sized Volume of Poetry; News of the Churches; About two volumes of Thought Provoking Articles; A two hundred and fifty-page Book of Editorials; A two hundred page book of Daily Devotions covering the entire year; A two hundred page volume of Sermons, worth $3.00 of anybody's money; A volume of Comments on the Sunday School Lesson and Christian Endeavor Topics that would sell for a dollar or two and worth much more. This is in addition to advertising concerning institutions of the Church. Count up the cost, good reader, and be convinced that "The Christian Sun" is worth all it costs—and much more.

Now, if you are convinced, there are two things that you can do about it. The first one is be sure that your own subscription is paid in advance. The second is like unto it; namely, sell the paper to someone else on the paper's own merit and send in one or more subscriptions.

BEGIN AT THE BEGINNING.

It is commonly reported, and many reputable people say so, that there are churches within the Southern Convention—Christian churches, too—which made no attempt to raise their conference apportionment until just before the annual conference met. They did not raise their quota. Doubtless they were not disappointed, for surely they could not expect to do a year's work within a few weeks.

A new conference year is just beginning. Within a few weeks every church should know its benevolent quota for the new year. The chances are good that all those churches which begin at the beginning of the year to work on this matter will have their money in hand when conference convenes next fall. The needs of the church are larger than can be met with a few weeks work. They run through the entire year. It will take the constant effort of all the churches to meet the needs.

If you are a pastor, or a leader in the local church, it is your business, kind friend, to call a meeting of leaders in your church and make plans for raising the benevolence quota, unless some previous arrangement has been made. Missionaries, risking their lives in China, sacrificing in many places around the earth, depend upon us who live in luxury to pay their salaries and expenses so they may preach the Gospel found in the Book which we take as our "only rule of faith and practice." Their sacrifice is commendable, but our negligence is despicable. Let's begin at the beginning of the year by sowing seeds, cultivating the crop, and preparing for the harvest when time comes for the next annual conference.

"IN SIMPLE OBEDIENCE TO DUTY."

Duty is a word not used much with the modern generation. Opportunity and challenge are words that more frequently flow from the lips of leaders. But there still remains the solemn call of duty to the human heart.

Across the Potomac from the city of Washington in the beautiful Arlington Cemetery there is a monument erected to the memory of Confederate soldiers. On this hillside lie buried many who fought in the "lost cause," and scattered across the fair fields of the Sunny South lie multitudes more who lost their lives in a conflict between the states. Wicked indeed would be anyone who undertook to stir up the animosities of those ancient days. But the inscription on that Arlington monument is one worth considering by people of any day. It is worthy of brave men, and citizens might covet it as a memorial:

Not for fame or reward
Not for place or for rank
Not lured by ambition
Or goaded by necessity
But in simple obedience to duty
As they understood it
These men suffered all
Sacrificed all
Dared all And died

"In simple obedience to duty" is a phrase that may well stir the hearts of church leaders. God has given us responsibilities. He expects every man to do his duty.

Let it be said of you who lead that God was not disappointed, even if it means that you must sacrifice all.

A COVETED COMPLIMENT.

Strangers stopped at the door of my church this (Sunday) morning and said, "You have such a friendly church." The minister was too busy to hunt them out and say nice things even though he may have wanted to do so. When it came their turn to speak there is nothing they could have said which would have brought him more joy, for that compliment is the kind of thing that a pastor wants said about his church. Church members represent the world's greatest Friend. In the early days non-Christians recognized Christians because they loved each other so. If a church in the modern world can develop that same spirit and include in its friendship and love the strangers who come to worship, and all those who need redeeming love, then that church has a chance to live and grow and win. This is a coveted compliment for a church on Main Street. It is the kind of compliment that every church may properly covet.

RESPONSIVE READINGS.

Rev. J. H. Lightbourne, pastor of the Burlington Christian Church, has been giving considerable thought to responsive readings which he has put into his Sunday bulletins. Because they are suggestive of what can be done, as well as helpful reading in themselves, some of them are given herewith.

Apparently the scripture reading centers around the sermon idea, as can be seen from the following selections:

SERMON: "Another Quiet Talk."

Minister—Keep yourselves in the love of God, looking for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto eternal life.

Congregation—And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God.

Min.—Let us not love in word, neither in tongue; but in deed and in truth.

Cong.—Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works and glorify your Father which is in heaven.

Min.—And this I pray, that your love may abound yet more and more in knowledge and in all judgement.

Cong.—Love beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things. Love never faileth.

Min.—Grace be with all them that love the Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity.

Cong.—That Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith; that ye, being rooted and grounded in love, may be able to comprehend with all saints what is the breadth, and length, and depth, and height; and to know the love of Christ, which passeth knowledge, that ye might be filled with all the fulness of God.

The Doxology—

Min.—O Lord, save thy servants that put their trust in thee.

Cong.—Send unto them help from above, and evermore mightily defend them.

Min.—O Lord, hear our prayer.

Cong.—And let our cry come unto thee.

SERMON: "The Glorious Promise for a Great Work."

Minister—and Jesus said unto them, Thus it is written, and thus it behooved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day.

Congregation—And that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem.

Min.—And ye are witnesses of these things.

Cong.—And, behold, I send the promise of my Father upon you; but tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem, until ye be endued with power from on high.

Min.—And he led them out as far as Bethany, and he lifted up his hands, and blessed them.

Cong.—And it came to pass, while he blessed them, he was parted from them, and carried up into heaven.

Min.—And they worshipped him, and returned to Jerusalem with great joy.

Cong.—and were continually in the temple, praising and blessing God.

The Doxology—

Min.—Unto thee, O Lord, do I lift up my soul.

Cong.—O my God, I trust in thee, show me the ways, O Lord; teach me thy paths.

Min.—Remember, O Lord, thy tender mercies and thy loving kindness, for they have been ever of old.

Cong.—The secret of the Lord is with them that fear him.

Min.—Turn thee unto me and have mercy upon me; forgive all my sins.

Cong.—Let integrity and uprightness preserve me; for I wait on thee.

SERMON: "Faithful Watching for Jesus."

Minister—I know that my redeemer liveth and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth.

Congregation—The Son of man shall come in the glory of his Father with his angels; and then he shall reward every man according to his works.

Min.—Watch, therefore; for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come.

Cong.—Blessed are those servants, whom the Lord, when he cometh, shall find watching.

Min.—Nevertheless, when the Son of man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?

Cong.—What is our hope, or joy, or crown of rejoicing? Are not even ye in the presence of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Min.—The Lord directs your hearts into the love of God, and into the patient waiting for Christ.

Cong.—Looking for that blessed hope and glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ.

The Doxology—

Min.—Some trust in chariots, and some in horses; but we will remember the name of the Lord our God.

Cong.—God, be merciful unto us, and bless us; and cause his face to shine upon us.

Min.—The Lord hear thee in the day of trouble; send thee help from the sanctuary, and strengthen thee out of Zion.

Cong.—Now know I that the Lord saveth his anointed, he will hear him from his holy heaven with the saving strength of his right hand.

SERMON: "The Church Endued With Power."

Minister—Unto thee, O Lord, do I lift up my soul.

Congregation—O my God, in thee have I trusted.

Min.—Guide me in thy truth, and teach me.

Cong.—For thou art the God of my salvation.

Min.—Show me thy ways, O Lord.

Cong.—Teach me thy paths.

Min.—Hear my cry, O God.

Cong.—Attend unto my prayer.

Min.—O send out thy light and thy truth, let them lead me.

Cong.—Let them bring me unto thy holy hill.

OUR LEADERS GREET US.

We, the members and delegates in attendance at this, the sixth All New England Meeting of Congregational and Christian Churches, and the one hundred, twenty-eighth annual meeting of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, have from these days at Concord, New Hampshire, received a new vision of the Christian Church around the world, an Ecumenical Church. We rejoice that we are a part of this Church of all races and nations.

It is with joy that we recognize the part our fellowship has played in building this universal Church by many means, but particularly that known as the missionary enterprise. We take pleasure in the word received that our churches and members are to a degree renewing their support of our common work as indicated by the returns thus far received during the calendar year.

Yet, we note with concern that there are large areas both geographical and social where we have peculiar responsibilities which are neglected through lack of funds. Compelling our attention are long established fields inadequately cultivated and new fields into which we would, but are unable to enter.

We remember, with gratitude, the generous support of our churches in days past. We plead for a continuing and increasing interest in the worldwide cause of Christ. Especially in this year do we urge hearty participation in all local and national plans and programs of Thank-With-Giving, that mounting deficits may be adequately met and every advance made in local, state, homeland and overseas service.

We pledge ourselves anew and we urge our colleagues throughout the entire fellowship to renew and maintain the practice of Christian Stewardship. Thus, we propose and promise by word and deed to perform our part toward creating a world "with broad horizons, fences leveled and frontiers penetrated."

Unanimously adopted and signed on behalf of:

The sixth All New England Regional Meeting of Congregational and Christian Churches: James F. English, Connecticut; G. Homer Lane, Connecticut; Stanley Cummings, Vermont; Mrs. M. J. Bradshaw, Maine; Louise C. Hazen, Vermont, and,

The American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions: Rockwell Harmon Potter, President, Connecticut; Mrs. Robert L. Bowen, Vice-President, California; Russell H. Stafford, Chairman, Prudential Committee, Massachusetts; Fred Field Goodsell, Executive Vice-President; J. E. Taylor, Member of Prudential Committee, Nebraska.

I want to say to all Christian workers that if the Lord sees our faith for those whom we wish to be blessed, He will honor it. He has not disappointed the faith of any of His children yet.—D. L. Moody.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

One of the most perplexing problems before the Board of Publications and the Executive Board of the Southern Convention is the matter of publishing and providing for the financial support of THE CHRISTIAN SUN. For more than eighty years this paper has represented the interests and institutions of the Christian denomination in several of the southern states. It has passed through several changes in management, but has survived in spite of adversities and financial difficulties. Apparently the present financial crisis is the most discouraging of its entire history.

The cost of labor and printing material has mounted rapidly in recent years. The subscription price has not been increased and the number of subscribers has been reduced as compared with the more prosperous years of its history. Only a few people have felt a personal responsibility for securing renewals and new subscribers for the church paper. Conferences and Convention sessions have recorded many resolutions and heard much discussion, but no aggressive action has been taken to develop this important enterprise.

Much opposition has arisen to the plan of having the various Departments of the Convention pay designated amounts to the financial support of the paper. A large number of people have expressed the opinion that the paper is costing the Convention too much. Between indifference and direct opposition the paper has been gradually losing its hold upon the hearts of the people who are not fully informed concerning its mission and motive.

The constituency of the Southern Convention may well face the facts in the background of this situation. This paper has been a medium of communication and fellowship between the ministers and laymen of the Southern Convention. It has filled a worthy place and written a commendable record during its history. It has been an important factor in uniting the forces of our churches and institutions. The Convention has been a compact, progressive organization, with a unity of purpose and a rich fellowship. New conditions have arisen, and new leadership is taking the field for future plans. Unless there is a church paper to serve as a unifying medium of communication, there will be a strong tendency towards a localized leadership which will split up the Convention constituency into smaller groups. Within a generation many of our churches will drift apart and members will be influenced to seek a larger fellowship among the stronger denominations. The ideals and traditions of the Christian denomination are very dear to many people within the bounds of the Southern Convention. Some of these things should be preserved in the union with the Congregationalists. They are worth preserving. If an effort to advance is to challenge our thinking, it must rest, in part, upon the history of the past. Religious convictions and denominational traditions cannot be swept aside, by any leadership, over-night.

In the interest of a worthy past and a hopeful future, THE SUN should be allowed to shine for our churches and homes. We should have a better paper, in spite of the increased cost. A few years ago a Model-T Ford was considered a luxury. Now the V-8, or something better, is demanded. People buy better cars because they want them. They should be willing to buy a better church paper. They will, when it is sold to them, with a real salesman-like spirit. Every church and every institution will lose a vital contact if the paper is discontinued.

I. W. JOHNSON.

OUR CHURCH PAPER.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN is owned and controlled by the Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches. It was established in 1844 by the Rev. Daniel W. Kerr. Since that date, it has been making weekly visits to the homes of our people almost without interruption. It is the one medium of expression for the churches of our Convention. Under its influence the various institutions of our church have been founded and launched with a measure of success. It was the principal agitator for the formation of the Mission Board, and through its columns the program of Missions has been brought into favor with our people.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN, through its editors and contributors was instrumental in creating sentiment for an institution of higher learning, and the ultimate founding of Elon College. It has been the medium through which information concerning the college has gone to the churches and individual members, resulting in the almost universal support of the college.

Without THE CHRISTIAN SUN, it would have been practically impossible for the churches of the Convention to have established the Christian Orphanage, located at Elon College. This movement began in a small way, with the Children's Corner. Without THE CHRISTIAN SUN, it would have been impossible for this institution to have been held in high esteem as it is today.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN is the most effective medium for information and propaganda regarding our young people's work in all of its phases. In fact, there is not a single interest of church that THE CHRISTIAN SUN has not been the prime mover for information and advancement. THE CHRISTIAN SUN, Elon College, and the Mission Board, have been the principal factors in the building of our church in the South.

We are now face to face with the question as to the future of our church paper. What will the churches do about it? According to the report of our editor, Rev. F. C. Lester, we have a circulation of 1,240, including exchanges. According to the Board of Publications and the Committee of the Convention, THE CHRISTIAN SUN sustains a present deficit of $2,000, and with its present income is sustaining an additional deficit of $250 each month. At present, there are no sources for funds with which to pay the debt or retire the deficit.

The present cost of publishing THE CHRISTIAN SUN is practically $7,000. $2,000 of this amount is expected from subscriptions which means that the Convention must subsidize the Board of Publications in the amount of $5,000, that THE CHRISTIAN SUN may continue. At the present cost of publishing and the present rate of circulation, the paper is costing $5.00 per individual subscriber per year.

The question has been raised as to whether or not the church is justified in publishing the paper in the face of the above facts. The Executive Committee of the Convention has asked the question, if we are justified in publishing the paper at such an expense, and when it seems evident that the church as a whole does not want the paper. I cannot feel that the church does not want the paper, but that perhaps the rank and file of our people do not know the facts. I feel that when the facts are generally known, that the people of our church will arise and subscribe to the paper, that it may continue its weekly visits to our homes. Three thousand sub-

THE CHURCH.

(A Correspondence.)

Orlando, Fla.,
November 13, 1937.

After all, to quote Diognetus about Christians, "They hold the world together. Not your church, nor my church, but Christians, the ecclesia, that multitude of souls called out of God, who go about their home duties and daily affairs, prompted and guided by reverence for and obedience to Almighty God, and love of their fellowmen. These are they who carry the world forward and upward. There is a great company of them, but for whom business would not be safe and human society would be in constant chaos and jeopardy.

But there are in the churches two classes of people who count little in the forward and upward journey: One class consists of those whom the church carries, but who do precious little if anything, to help carry the church. Without admitting it, they look upon the church as a social club. They joined the church much as they would join a club, because it is made up of the "nicest people, the most prominent people in our town, you know." Oh, yes, we know. We know only too well. But as that distinguished New England layman, Donald Adams, most aptly observes, "There are lot of big men in small churches, and there are a lot of small men in big churches. The size of the church does not determine the size of the man. In one sense there are no small churches. Wherever the Word of God is proclaimed is an important place. A church may be small in numbers, but immensely important in influence."

One should bear in mind that the one purpose of the church is not to show us folks, but to help us find God. One would far better be an active man in a "small" church than inactive in a "big" one. It gives strength and character to help carry rather than be carried. It is the service we render, rather than the service rendered for us, that counts. It took the greatest of all minds and men to say, "He who would be greatest among you shall be servant of all; for the Son of Man came not to be ministered unto but to minister."

The North Carolina Christian Advocate has this timely paragraph: "It might be well for us to recall that the Son of God did not bow down before the fallacy of bigness.

On the contrary, we hear him saying, 'where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them.' With twelve men and one of them to turn traitor, he set about his task of seeking and saving the lost. Not outward show but inward spirit was with Jesus the prime essential; and we would do well in this as in all other respects to be like our Lord."

And then there is another class in the church who are to be pitied and tolerated, though they themselves have little pity, sympathy or tolerance for those who disagree with them. They are the "we-know-we-are right and we have no patience or fellowship with those whose views and beliefs differ from us." In this class are many good and well intentioned people! But they have put their interpretation upon what Jesus Christ Himself taught, or did not teach, and they will not have, nor will they tolerate, any interpretation of the Bible, or those whose views of the Bible differ from theirs. They will quote you some such Scripture as this, "Whosoever transgresseth and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God. He that abideth in the doctrine of Christ, he hath the Father and the Son. . . . If there come any unto you, and bring not this doctrine receive him not into your house, neither bid him God speed: for he that biddeth him God speed is partaker of his evil deeds." And they want to repudiate you if you do not interpret this "doctrine of Christ" just as they do. Oh! the tragedy and heartaches wrought by those who interpret our Sacred Word, with its message of mercy and love and brotherhood, in a spirit of bigotry and intolerance. How the heart of our Lord yearned, and how frequently he prayed, that "they may be one." "Holy Father, keep them in thy name which thou hast given me, that they may be one, even as we are." (Jno. 17:11.)

In this world of war and sin and chaos, the people of God of any and all churches should unite in exalting the name of our Lord and His Christ, for He alone has the strength, the wisdom and the power, to establish on earth the Kingdom of Righteousness.

The one wholesome sign of our day is that the churches are seeking a common ground of union and fellowship for all who love and serve Him.

NEWPORT NEWS.

The Woman's Missionary Society met in regular session on Tuesday, October 12th, at 7:30 P. M. The regular order of procedure was reversed and the business session preceded the devotional. General routine business was conducted. Study books for the year were discussed, and plans were made to study the book of our home work, "Highland Heritage" on November 9th, in an all-day session, beginning at 10:30 A. M.

Reports were given from the Woman's Conference, held in Franklin, on October 1st. This business session was followed by a consecration and communion service. During the consecration service, Mr. W. H. Baker sang, "Take My Life and Let It Be," while the officers of the society lighted their candles from the altar candle and in turn lighted the candles of the individual members. The candle of Mrs. Wilson, who was absent on account of illness, was lighted by the president. The Communion was served by the pastor, after which Mrs. Raymond Lewis sang, "An Evening Prayer," as a benediction. In this brief but solemn service, each individual must have felt the presence of the Father, leading the society to new visions, new labors, and purer fellowship with Him and with each other.

God is ready and willing to work, if we are ready and willing to let Him, and to be used by Him.—D. L. Moody.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church"

MISS EMILY CARLETON, Editor, 541 Osceola Ave., Winter Park, Fla.

NORTH CAROLINA RALLY.

We, who had a part in making the program for the North Carolina Pilgrim Fellowship Rally, wish to take this opportunity to thank all those who helped in any way to make the conference a success.

We certainly appreciated the cordial welcome and the splendid entertainment which was shown us by the members of the Sanford Church under the leadership of their pastor, Rev. F. Ervin Hyde.

It was voted that this type of rally would be held next year at approximately the same time, and a steering committee was elected to begin to make plans for that meeting.

Dean Messick, in giving the inspirational address Saturday afternoon, urged the young people to take advantage of the opportunities which face them today and to make the most out of them.

In his message Saturday evening, Mr. L. I. Medlin urged the youth of today to get on the right path with God and march forward with Him as the guide.

Among the most inspirational services of the conference was the Candlelight Communion Service, with Rev. F. E. Hyde administering the sacraments. The play, "If I Be His Disciple," presented by members of the young people's group of the First Church in Greensboro, was another one of the high spots of the meeting.

The discussion groups were all fine and inspirational. The findings from them will be collected for a bulletin to be sent to the various young people's groups.

Where there is a group of young people one will always find fun and fellowship, and the Recreational Period, directed by Miss Truitt, and the Banquet, with Rev. Millard Stevens acting as Toastmaster played important roles in bringing about a spirit of fellowship.

We hope that next year more churches will be able to send delegates to the Rally.

ELBERTA MURRAY.

LOOKING AHEAD.

Plans are well under way for two very important meetings for young people of the Southeast.

The first is a Christian Conference at Greensboro, North Carolina, during the Christmas holidays. All officers of Pilgrim Fellowship conferences in the southeast should plan to be in Greensboro during the Christmas week for that conference, so that definite plans can be made for cooperative and united work during the coming year.

The second meeting is the National Council of Pilgrim Fellowship to be held at Rockford College, Rockford, Illinois, June 15-22, 1938. This is to be a delegated body with at least two representatives from each state. The General Council of Congregational and Christian Churches will be in session at Beloit College, Beloit, Wisconsin, a few miles from Rockford, at the same time. The preliminary plans are very challenging and those who represent the southeast will be fortunate indeed.

PLANNING FOR THE CHURCH.

Young people have a wonderful opportunity to help make plans for the Church. For instance Thanksgiving is just a week away. Young people can do much to make that a happy day for people in the community. Early morning programs, visits to the shut-ins and many other things can be planned. Then Christmas is just around the corner. There should be Christmas programs for all ages, including the church program, Christmas carols, parties for students and others who have been away, and many, many things to make the Christian message live in the lives of the people connected with the Church, as well as those who do not come to the regular services. Plan for the Church, and then work for the Church.

Saturday—A Passion for Souls—Rom.

Christianity has a history so closely woven with a spirit of the Missionary Movement that it is hard to imagine what would have been the results without missionaries. We are sure that it would have remained a small sect in the Jewish faith and probably would have become a dead religious faith.

If there had been no missionaries, the Puritans would not have sought religious freedom in America where they set up ideals and principles which have not been surpassed in nobility and purpose.

Without missionaries who have carried the Gospel of love around the world there would not be any hospitals, orphanages, public libraries, public charities, public schools, democratic governments. The oriental religions did not make many steps in establishing agencies for public welfare.

We owe a great debt of gratitude and admiration to the heroic missionaries of the past. We can pay this debt by doing our share in our generation to continue the onward march of Christianity to the uttermost parts of the earth.

For Discussion—

1. Since previous missionaries have served us so well and brought great blessings to us, what is our responsibility that others may profit by what we do and say to extend the Gospel to every creature?

2. Who are missionaries today?

3. Would the Gospel of Christ have spread without missionaries?

4. Would the Church have been a world wide institution without missionaries?

5. What are missionaries doing for the world?

Suggested Hymns—

"Throw Out the Life Line."

"Open Mine Eyes."

"We've a Story to Tell to the Nations."

CHRISTIAN WORKERS.

LESSON VIII—NOVEMBER 21, 1937.

GOLDEN TEXT: Let us not be weary in well-doing; for in due season we shall reap if we faint not.—Galatians 6:9.

LESSON: Acts 6:1-10; I Corinthians 3:10-15; Galatians 6:6-10; I Timothy 6:11-21.

Work is written deeply in the structure of the universe. Jesus himself said that His Father worked, and that He himself worked. Apart from work man cannot find abiding joy nor realize his best self. As Christians we must work the works of God. This does mean that we all have to be what we call "Christian workers" in the sense that we are ministers or missionaries and other full-time Christian workers, but that as Christians we do our work as unto God, feeling that we are workers together with Him. The lesson deals with some phases of such work, both specifically and in general.

Division of Labor.

The development of life from the lower to the higher stages is marked by what is called the division of labor. In the simplest form of life, for instance in the Amoeba, there is no differentiation of cell structure or division of labor. But as life increases in complexity certain cells are set apart for certain functions, and division of labor becomes a fact. It was just so in the development of the church. The church in Jerusalem grew apace. The problem of relief for dependent families in the church assumed large proportions. The task was too great for the disciples to carry on with their preaching and ministering in spiritual things. They, therefore, appointed seven others whom we call deacons to attend to these practical and pressing matters, and thus safeguarded their time for the ministry of preaching and prayer. As a result their work became more effective and at the same time they trained their workers. It was sound strategy and good religion. Many a modern minister is so entangled with so many petty things that he cannot give himself to study and prayer. This may be due to the fact that he does not have the folks to help him, or because he does not know how to put the folks he has to work. Laymen ought to relieve the minister of many petty and practical things and then insist that the minister spend more time in his study and in the more spiritual aspects of his ministry.

Building Against the Time of Testing.

Jesus said that inevitably there would come storms and stresses in life and he urged his hearers to be as those who built upon the rock. Paul states with equal cogency and force that a man's work as well as the man himself will be tested, tested even as if by fire. Only that work which is well founded and into which sound principles have been applied will stand the test of time and trial. The work of many ministers is a mushroom growth. On the other hand the work of many others has stability and enduring power because it is builded on sound principles and wise work. Only as a man builds on the foundation of Jesus Christ can he be sure that his work will abide. But Paul adds a word of encouragement to those who might be faint-hearted or fearful about undertaking work. Even though a man, because of lack of knowledge or experience, should build unwisely, he himself may be saved even though his work may not survive.

Building On Another's Foundation.

One man layeth a foundation and another buildeth thereon. One man soweth and another reapeth. These truths are often overlooked in both Christian and secular fields. In many instances an evangelist comes into a town or into a church and reaps what faithful teachers and ministers have been sowing and nurturing through the years. In other instances one minister will have what seems like a phenomenal ministry which is based on the thorough foundation which his predecessor has done before him. We are heirs of all ages. Let no man boast about what he has done. Let him rather give thanks that others have laid the foundation and he has been privileged to build thereon, that others have sown and he has reaped, or that he himself has the privilege of laying a foundation on which others may build, or sowing that which others may reap.

Sowing A Reaping.

"Never in the field of nature, but so often in the realm of moral matters, men are deceived into believing that, no matter what kind of seed is sown, the consequences will not be so bad after all; or that they can sow one kind of seed and reap another." Men are deceived into believing that "they can sow folly and reap wisdom, they can sow wild oats and reap honest wheat; they can sow excess and reap soberness and moderation; they can sow unclean and diseased things and reap health, strength and a well-balanced mind hereafter; they can sow neglect and reap the rewards of duty; they can sow disbelief, irreligion, and contempt for God, and reap the peace of mind and joy in living which can come only by faith. They think they can shape the harvest to their own liking when the time comes, no matter what the sowing. They think they can sow to the devil and not reap the devil's pay." As a man sows he reaps. What he sows he reaps. He who is wise will sow to the spirit that of the spirit he may reap life everlasting.

Unweariedness in Well-Doing.

It is difficult sometimes to keep on doing good. The thing seems so futile, so unappreciated, so fruitless, so unrewarding. But we are not to become weary in well-doing or weary of well-doing. If we faithfully sow the seed and if we faithfully tend the growing crop we shall in God's good time reap a harvest.

Doing Good To All Men.

As we have opportunity, let us do good unto all men, especially unto those who are of the household of faith. In Jesus's thinking, love was simply inner goodness going forth in active service. And opportunities for doing good come to practically every one of us every day. And every opportunity is a challenge to our religious sincerity and also a chance to develop our spiritual life. As we do avail ourselves of the opportunity to do good unto all men, we increase our capacity to do good. And although those who are of household faith have perhaps the first claim upon us, they do not have the only claim upon us. Every man who needs us and whom we can help is our neighbor, and as we have opportunity we are to do good unto him.

No one can prevent a man or a woman from getting drunk and making a hades out of home. But on the street the decent public has rights; and sure, severe justice meted out to the drunken driver could, in a year drive him off our streets. We enforce laws to rid the country of smallpox, diphtheria and typhoid; have we not interest enough and force enough to banish this evil? Or had smallpox, diphtheria and typhoid no friend at court to save them from banishment?—Ann Alice Byrne, New Canaan, Ct.

The world is blessed most by men who do things and not by those who merely talk of them.—James Oliver.

MONDAY.

UNDERSTANDING, UNCTION.

"He that hath seen Me hath seen the Father."—John 14:9.

In his last book "It Happened in Palestine," Dr. Weatherhead tells of an experience he had when in the darkness one night he was about to enter the bedroom of his small boy. He had taken his flashlight with him and upon entering, in order to avoid frightening the boy, he turned the flashlight full upon his own face, setting at rest all the boy's fears, for he recognized his father.

Jesus came to reveal the Father. The face of Christ is the face of the Father and seeing that face we understand the Father and our souls are at ease.

Prayer—Our Father, we thank Thee that Thou are revealed in Jesus, Thy Son. Increase our spiritual perceptions that we may see Thee and understand Thee. Amen.

TUESDAY.

BABIES AND BROTHERHOOD.

"Except ye be converted and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the Kingdom of Heaven."—Matt. 18:3.

It is possible that we regard children too lightly. The fact is that they accomplish more, perhaps, than an equal number of grown people. For instance, think of the delight they give parents, the freshness and joy they radiate in the world; the finer qualities which they inspire. No one can estimate the value of these achievements. They rank beyond the ability of the mature.

This would seem to give to childhood a unique place in Christianity and in the Brotherhood of man. It was in this spirit that Christ identified Himself with the child. Therefore it is our privilege, as our religion develops, to realize the daily contagion and happiness of child's life, and to sense the nearness of Jesus, in his presence.

Prayer—Our Father, help us to realize the value of childhood. As they help us to know Thee, may we help them to know Thee.

WEDNESDAY.

LIFE'S LEVERAGE.

"Whosoever drinketh of this water shall thirst again, but whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst; but the water that I shall give him shall be in him a well of water springing into everlasting life."—John 4:13, 14.

There is a time, we know not when,
A place we know not where,
That marks the destiny of men,
For glory or despair.

Blessed Hymn! No one knows the turning point of his own life. Decisions that fix the future direction of one's character is beyond understanding. A trivial choice, a self-indulgence. A little deceit, a little yielding to temptation, may decide the destiny of the soul.

Prayer—Our Father, deliver us from the danger of wrong choices and make us wholly devoted to Thee. Amen.

THURSDAY.

WISDOM'S WAGES.

"Thy word have I hid in mine heart."—Ps. 119:11.

"Thy words uphold him that has fallen."—Job. 4:4.

"The entrance of Thy words giveth light."—Ps. 119:130.

As we see things today, people of older generations read the Bible more than the people of today. People of today seem to neglect the Book, or else they use it for controversy and speculation. Despite its profound depths and the mystery of much of it which worldly wisdom has never really plumbed, the Bible is a mighty impetus with pointed council and conduct.

To read the Bible studiously and store one's mind with its promises is indeed the most profitable course of education.

Prayer—Our Father, we pray for Thy mercy in our ignorance of Thy word. Grant that we may not sin against Thee by neglecting it further. Give unto us the great peace which comes in the possession of it. Amen.

FRIDAY.

"They shall still bring forth fruit in old age."—Ps. 92:14.

"The brim of it, like the work of the brim of a cap, with flowers of lilies."—II Chron. 4:5.

A familiar sight of New England seacoast places is the decoration of an old dory filled with flowers.

These boats have served their day of usefulness and are no longer seaworthy, but they still serve as an object of beauty in the peaceful purpose of growing flowers for an admiring world.

For all those who have passed beyond the zenith of life when their days of greater activities are over and they can no longer sail life's seas as they did once, they can at least grow flowers. In addition to this, it is the finest period of life for the ministry of perfecting character and glowing gracefulness that sends forth their beauty and fragrance unto the flowing stream of humanity passing by.

Prayer—Our Father, make the evening tide of life full of light, growing in grace, the knowledge of the Lord and the beauty of Holiness. Amen.

SATURDAY.

NEW MOTOR IN OLD BOAT.

"Ye shall receive power."—Acts 1:8-11.

Of all the charter boats lined up at Miami's dock, Tom's looked the most commonplace. Some of the others were mahogany-trimmed and glistened with nickle gadgets. But Tom's boat was just like ten thousand other workaday fishing boats.

In that old boat, however, was a duplex, high-powered automobile engine, which sent fisherman Tom further and faster afield than any of his competitors. He knows how to use the power at his command.

Christians should do more than others because they are better equipped than others. Like Tom's boat, they may not be much in outward appearance, but they are engined above their neighbors. To them is given the "all power" to go far and fast, and to bring back rich harvestings. For God gives us power, not for our own embellishment, but for his service.

Prayer—Disheartened by our barren lives, we turn again to Thee, O Lord, to pray for power—the promised Divine enabling to live effectively and serenely. Amen.

—Amos R. Wells.

SUNDAY.

AN UNHOLY ALLIANCE.

"To be spiritually minded is life and peace."—Rom. 8:6, 14.

Sentimentality is not spirituality. A mawkish, maudlin mood is no sign of a heart aflame.

Spirituality is so sane that it sees through the shams, alike of materialism and sentimentality, to the real values of life. It is soul-conscious, God-conscious and service-conscious.

To link sentimentality with spirituality is to perform a marriage which is not according to Scripture. Such a wedding of the unreal and the real is an unholy alliance.

MEAT TO EAT.

By REV. VICTOR B. CHICOINE,

Winter Park Florida.

"I have meat to eat . . ."—

John 4:32.

"Children, have ye any meat . . . ?"—John 21:2.

How easily and beautifully Jesus turned from one intricate situation, from one human dilemma to another without any sense of embarrassment. Jesus had been talking to the woman who had come cautiously to the well in the heat of the day so that she might escape the scornful epithets and glances of her neighbors. There she met Jesus, and in the figurative, but powerful language of the east, made the soul searching discovery, that this Nazarene could save her.

Then the disciples came upon the scene. They wonder at the continued strength of Jesus. And in their wonderment He tells them that He has had meat to eat of which they know nothing. A few minutes before He had been speaking to the woman about the water of life, to the men He uses a different figure of speech, but the meaning is the same.

And as a fresh cool water was precious in Palestine so was meat. For we are told that those people "Saw little meat; meat was a luxury to them. The things they lived on, in the lowly cottages, were bread and fish and eggs." So Jesus spoke to the disciples concerning meat and said: "I have meat to eat that ye know not of . . ."

He said: "I have meat." He did have it. And I am so sure that He has it today, I mean, of course, the way of life! And men and nations must have this way and walk in it if they are to live. Oh, the world can exist. The world can blast itself into shreds and rebuild—blast itself and rebuild. But that is existing—not living. Jesus Christ had the way the way then, and there is no other way to this hour and there never will be. "I have meat to eat," He once said. He still has.

Then there is that other tremendous scene of Jesus upon the shore of the Sea of Tiberias after His resurrection, once more speaking of "food" to His disciples. I dare not attempt to explain it. It is too fragile, beautiful and precious for one such as I to analyze. One could tear it apart as is done with a beautiful rose and say: "See, there is nothing to this but petals, stem and so forth." But that would be far from the truth.

All I say is that some great soul enveloping experience came to those men, the like of which will never happen again. And our Lord, according to the record, said: "Children, have ye any meat?" What infinite tenderness is in that word "children."

Once before, many months ago, He had told them He had meat, and now so much had happened since that day at the well curb. Had they yet learned what He meant? "Children have ye any meat?" When Jesus called from the shore do you not suppose that the memories of these men went hurrying, pell-mell, back to that scene in the village, and the day He talked with the woman—and with them? I think that it must have been that way.

You may be saying we have no need of this that Jesus is offering. We are living in a different day. What we need is better housing, better food and more of it, better clothing, better medical attention, better education. No one denies that! But one must have the other!

Let men take the eternal policies of Jesus upon which nations must conduct themselves if they are to be great. Take the eternal axioms of Jesus upon which an individual lives must be built if the race is not to deteriorate physically. Preach the laws of Jesus concerning personal purity and honesty and all the rest of His sayings. Yet it must be understood that the mind nor purpose of Jesus has not been reached. We must be aware, vitally aware, that Christ fed upon the belief and trust in God.

There had been a time when Peter, and James, and John, and the rest, would have argued that Jesus had no food that was utterly indispensable for them. If early in the ministry of our Lord the disciples were indifferent to the heart of the message of the Master it should not be surprising.

Could not these men have argued that their bodies were strong and vigorous and had not the food upon which they were living made them what they were? They could have clenched their fists and tensed their muscles and proved that they were strong men. And they would have said that what we need is leadership to drive the haughty Romans from our land.

No, in those early days they did not know the meaning of the "meat" of which Christ spoke. But later they did! For, what we call life, for the want of a better word, did to them what it does to every one of us. It brought them to the place where only spiritual matters really counted!

That is where the disciples had arrived in life that morning while the mist was still rising from the lake. This business of fishing on that particular day was being gone through because they were stumped. They did not know which way to turn. And when Peter had said the day before: "I go fishing," and the rest had chimed in that they would go too, it was because it was better to fish than to brood over the thoughts that were in their minds. Life had brought them to that place in a very rough way! And Jesus met these men of His as just the place when and where they needed Him the most. He always does just that!

Those disciples wanted rest unto their souls. We, too, want rest unto our souls. We, too, are discouraged, terribly discouraged, because men and women appear to be growing more and more irreligious. It may be that we are borne down by some tremendous burden in the carrying of which we feel that we must have help. And we are wondering who can help us—and who can know and sympathize with us. Who is there that has suffered even as we have and are suffering?

We must never forget that the Man of Galilee, a tortured, bruised soul, falling to His knees at a dark hour in the Garden, with enemies approaching to slay Him, found peace, and strength and sustenance. And because He did that and went through it, He knows the way—He knows us!

Because of that hour there, and because of that still blacker hour on the cross, there is not a one of us who will ever be able to say: "My troubles are the greatest that ever have been." No, your trouble is not. And what Jesus Christ did, we can do! And from where He drew strength, we can!

Our Lord, on the day He spoke to the disciples about eating meat of which they were not aware had not secreted some food about His person and then eaten it slyly without the disciples seeing Him do so. He had gone into the very depths of God's storehouse of the infinite with the keys of prayer and faith. And He had eaten and he had been fed. And it was the truth, the everlasting truth, when He told them that first time that He had meat of which they knew nothing.

The record of the second occurrence

The Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:—

Our financial report this week shows that we have passed the $12,000.00 mark in our financial report—less than $8,000.00 to go to reach our goal for the year. That is fine. If all our churches will do their duty in this Thanksgiving period we ought to reach our goal and have some to spare. Surely our churches will send us eight thousand dollars by December 31st. We had expected to be able to tell you in this letter how many of our children got on the honor roll, but have not gotten their report cards. We feel sure most of the children did better than last month. We are through with our fall planting and had just finished when the rain came. We still have the larger part of our corn crop to gather in.

The Thanksgiving dinner for the children! What church will send us a coop of chickens?—a turkey, too, if you like. Both are acceptable and would make us happy.

We are always glad to have visitors. A good lady came to see us a few weeks ago and looked over our entire plant and saw the children in their every-day life. After she saw the orphanage as it is every day, she said her idea of an orphanage had changed very much. She said she did not think the children would be happy. But she did not see a single child unhappy. The children were like they were at home and acted that way. She said she was wonderfully inspired with what she saw.

If more people would visit the orphanage they would be more interested in it. Anything we are interested in is the thing we get a pleasure out of helping. If we are interested in the church we will give to support it. If we are interested in the orphanage and the little children here it will be a joy to give that they may have a chance. Don't forget the Thanksgiving offering.

NOSTALGIA.

By MARSHALL WINGFIELD,

Advertiser Publishing Company,

Amory, Mississippi, 104 pp. $2.

Review by

MIRIAM LEYER DRURY,

Moscow, Idaho.

Like a silken thread one theme runs through this volume of verse. It is well expressed in the title poem,

I must go back to the hills now,
Across the miles dividing,
To find a healing for the hurts
These city streets have made:
To heel a deep and ugly wound
Which I have been a-hiding
And lay the ghosts of hurry that Make my soul afraid.

The nostalgia which the poet feels is defined in the Introduction. It is a sense of loneliness, of frustration, of separation from that which seems more real than the things which are seen with physical eyes, of being an alien in a strange and unfriendly world, of being

Far, far frae home and weary after while,
For the longed-for hame-going
And the Father's welcome smile;
Who'll never more be fu' content
Until his een do see
The gowden gates o' heav'n
And his ain countree.

The poet-preacher sings with a peculiar penetration of life and love and despair and death. The common paths of humanity are touched with the phosphorescence of compassion and understanding until they become luminous. And even at the end of his most despairing poems he lights candles of hope. At the end of "The Wheel and the Stair," we read:

For believe he must in a splendid goal
Else comes the rust that corrodes his soul.
And at the end of "The Cycle" come the surprising words,

Then weariness deep of body and brain,
A turn of the road—then spring again!
There is variety of meter and form. Some poems are sonnets, some are quatrains, and some are blank verse. The felicitous phrases and quotable lines in the blank verse make it so tower above all the rest that one could wish the poet-preacher would confine his singing to this form. Take, for instance, these three lines from Fox Chase:

Souls that appreciate this music
Should aliens be to discord,
And forever released from ugliness.

Virginians should be proud of their plantation-born singer who has gathered up in the music of his words the song of the mocking-bird, the cry of the sea gull, the wail of the "strong sea-winds that pipe wild flowers away, and bend the reeds and rushes low." He has so transmitted sights, sounds, and perfumes and emotions to the printed page that one is aware of something nearer to vital truth than history. Pain and beauty are sensed with something of the aesthetic understanding of Proust, and one is keenly aware that the poet has forcibly felt, ardently nursed, and long brooded over hopes, fears, joys, and sorrows of our common lot.

OUR CHURCH PAPER.

scribers who would pay their subscriptions would enable the Board of Publications to continue to publish the paper at its present size and frequency. Surely there are three thousand homes in our constituency that would be willing to subscribe for the paper, that it may continue. If not, some way must be worked out that will keep the paper in circulation. We cannot afford to be without our church paper.

I am sure that the Board of Publications and all officials of the Convention would welcome any suggestions on the part of interested persons. We could reduce the paper in size and frequency. This might be a way out. The suggestion has been made that the Convention decide on the number of paid subscriptions necessary to make the paper self-supporting, allocate this number to the churches on the basis of the number of families represented in the membership of the local church, and request each church to either send in its quota of subscribers or the money necessary to pay for its quota of subscribers. Of course, if every church would cooperate on this basis, the problem would be solved, but would they? One thing is certain: we need the paper and must find a way to continue its publication.

FAMILY ALTAR.

Nobody is spiritual whose thoughts do not often, and instinctively, turn toward the Godward side of life. Prayer and meditation are daily realities. In the night watches, his thoughts, like homing pigeons, turn naturally toward God.

Prayer—In a world distracted by things, we crave the wisdom to pursue the ideals of the spirit, our Father in heaven. Be Thou to us, in all conditions, the supreme reality. Amen.

—Amos R. Wells.

SUN'S PULPIT.

of Jesus speaking of meat is, that He offered them food. That, too, is just like Jesus. He was still anxious about these followers of His. Did they have meat—did they have that, that which would carry them on as He had been carried on? Had they yet learned—would they ever learn—how deeply they must go, even as He went, to secure that which would sustain?

Rev. John Arthur Gossip, that great preacher of Aberdeen, tells the following: "For long, scientists could not understand how it is that even in the longest droughts of tropical lands, when all the green things are burned up and the watercourses are dry and dusty, the ants managed to keep their huge heaps moist with that wet steam heat they love. And only lately discovered, in one heap carefully investigated, that they had sunk a cunningly constructed shaft no less than sixty-five feet long, down to a perennial spring that no drought ever touches, and that at night the whole busy little population was detailed to hurry down and up again, time after time, bearing the precious water with which to keep alive their little fields of fungus crops and spread abroad that wetness they need for health."

Is that not the answer for most of us? The sustenance for living the life that would please our Saviour is to be had—but it is deep, but is no deeper than any man or woman sincerely seeking can reach. "Children, have ye any meat?"

If I Had the Time

I have often thought of things I'd do
If I but had the time,
Of how I would bring hope and cheer to you
And lend my strong right hand to guide you through,
If I but had the time.

And so I have thought full many a day
As griefs around me crowd,
That soon I would find the means and the way
To deeds of kindness, and the courage to say
My conscious thoughts aloud.

But, as I rush on in my daily grind
Unheeding your distress,
I tread the high road on the other side
With rude and hasty and impatient stride,
Still bound by selfishness.

There are many things I can surely do,
There's time enough to spare,
I have just used it all on grasping self
And madly sought for worldly gain and pelf,
Not for a chance to share.

Gay rainbow gleams in our hurrying lives
Are vain, deluding snares.
God, grant us the vision to seek and choose
The abundant life that we never lose,
And love that really cares.

Then for spirit promptings and things worthwhile
There will be gracious time,
And hearts that were selfish and sad erstwhile
Will thrill with the joy in the second mile,
And life will be sublime.

We Thank Thee

Not for our lands, our wide-flung prairie wealth,
Our mighty rivers born of friendly spring.
Our inland seas, our mountains proud and high,
Forests and orchards richly blossoming;
Not for these, Lord, our deepest thanks are said
As humbly glad, we hail this day serene;
Not for these most, dear Father of our lives,
But for the love that in all things is seen.

We thank Thee not for prestige born of war,
For dauntless navies built for battle stress;
Nor would we boast of armies massed for strife;
These all are vain, O Lord of Kindliness.
What need have we of swords and bayonets,
Of mighty cannon belching poisoned flame!
O, woo us from the pagan love of these Lest we again defile Thy sacred name.

We thank Thee, Lord, on this recurring day,
For liberty to worship as we will;
We thank Thee for the hero souls of old
Who dared wild seas their mission to fulfill.
O, gird our hearts with stalwart faith in good,
Give us new trust in Thy providing hand,
And may a spirit born of brotherhood
Inspire our hearts and bless our native land.

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

THE CHRISTIAN SUN wishes for all members of its family a very happy Thanksgiving Season.

Rev. H. E. Crutchfield of Windsor, Virginia, and Rev. S. E. Madren, of Henderson, North Carolina, were among the visitors at the North Carolina and Virginia Conference. Both of these brothers and the editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN were formerly members of this conference.

Dr. W. H. Denison, Assistant Secretary of the General Council, will be with the Richmond (Va.) Church for the special "Week of Prayer" services. These special services will begin on Sunday, November 28th. Various phases of church stewardship will be taken under consideration and discussed during the week. Visitors from other churches of our communion will be welcomed and will find these services most beneficial.

NEWPORT NEWS.

Sunday, November 7th, marked the first anniversary of the Rev. Jesse H. Dollar's pastorate of the First Congregational - Christian Church, Newport News, Virginia. The anniversary was observed with an appropriate program at the evening worship services.

It was very interesting to note that the church has been making steady progress during the past year. When Mr. Dollar accepted the pastorate of our church and came to serve us last November, he found the work in smooth running order; but he did not give us time to "get in a rut." He immediately outlined a program of activity for our whole church. In this program each department and auxiliary was given definite work to accomplish during the year.

In keeping with our church program we have issued a monthly parish paper, "The Vista." This is a twelve-page magazine which carries news items, editorials and articles of general interest to the church. "The Vista" is entirely financed by the advertising and is proving to be quite an asset to our church.

Last April the Newman Bible Class installed a "Hearing Aid System" in the church auditorium. This has not only brought much pleasure to the several members of our own congregation who are hard of hearing, but many visitors have also found a great blessing in it.

The first part of the year we completed the payments on our Hammond

Electric Organ. At an early date both the Organ and the Hearing Aid System will be dedicated.

Our ladies have been doing a fine work during the year. Our church as a whole has been very much interested in the projects of the church.

It was a great privilege for us to have Dr. James R. Clinton in our midst for a one-week revival service during the early part of October. He endeared himself to the members of our congregation and did a fine work in the church and community.

We have had thirty-three new members join us in our work for Christ in the last twelve months.

THANKSGIVING SONNET.

By Amy Vance Weeks.

So long as colors blend at set of sun,
So long as stars are lighted through the night,
So long as homes await when work is done,
And hearthfires give a magic, mellow light;
So long as there are friends who come to call,
And life is full of blessed, simple things—
The drowsy kitten curled up in a ball,
The merry tune the copper kettle sings!
So long as churches point their spires to God,
And reach as well, toward those who suffer woe,
So long as men find comfort in the sod
And beauty in the sky, somehow I know,
Though here ungrateful murmur in our ranks,
That men can never cease to render thanks.

There is a fine spirit of cooperation between the pastor and people. We have a large group of fine young people who are being trained for leadership in the church and the service of the Master. Taken as a whole, we feel that our church is in a fine condition at the present and showing signs of growth in members, leadership, and spirituality. Our prayer is that we may continue in the Spirit of the Master, and ever press on to greater things than these.

Mrs. W. B. WILLIAMS,
Church Historian.

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The voluntary retirement of Dr. N. G. Newman from the active pastorate is a matter of more than passing interest. For the past two or three years his health has been failing. His wife who has been faithful and deeply interested in the promotion of the church, is also very feeble. Under these conditions he decided that he could not undertake to continue in the work as an active pastor. He and his wife are moving to the farm from which he went to college as a young man. Several years ago he bought this farm anticipating that the time would soon come when he should retire from active service. This farm is near Chuckatuck, Virginia, not far from Oakland Christian Church, and these dear friends have brought their letters of transfer to the home church of the Newman family. Dr. Newman has been unanimously elected assistant pastor of Oakland church, without any responsibility and without salary. This is a small compensation for a man of his ability, but it is in keeping with his wish.

Dr. N. G. Newman is too well known to readers of THE SUN for any review of his ministry to be news. He was President of the Eastern Virginia Conference and is the only surviving member of the Ordaining Presbytery officiating at the ordination of the writer, November 3rd, 1899, at Waverly, Virginia. During all these years he has been deeply interested in the advancement of young ministers and has helped many by his wise counsel, and his irreproachable character and his distinguished service. He has sought diligently to develop the talents of the young people in his charge. He has been a model pastor among his people. A cheerful spirit and a becoming dignity combined to give him a place of great respect and high honor.

As a preacher of the Gospel he is in the front rank of the ministers of the Southern Convention. A close student, a logical thinker, conservative in judgment yet progressive in his outlook, he has kept pace with present day trends in preaching and leaves his pulpit while at the zenith of his mental development. There has been no decline in his interest in preaching. He should be frequently used by churches throughout the Conference as a Pastor-at-Large to promote the unity and spiritual development of the pastors and laymen of the church. Oakland church considers itself most fortunate in having this man of God and his dear wife to make their home in that community. As pastor of that church it is a pleasure and an honor to be associated with them in the work.

What a privilege for a minister to have a few years of rest and quiet retirement, in the country before he goes to his final reward! Certainly he wishes to be able to work until the end. But failing strength sometimes prevents one from continuing in the work to which he has given his life. When that time comes the evening of life may become a beautiful transfiguration of blended glories and pre-memories. Field and forest, winding

THANKSGIVING.

By Harriet Keeler Magee.

I thank Thee for this day;
I've felt God's presence in my heart,
And joy has been with me.
Ahead I cannot see;
Disaster may become a part
Of life's uncertain way.

Tomorrow may be gay,
Or grief may come with me to dwell;
I do not walk by sight,
But this I know is right—
I'm in God's hands and all is well;
I thank Thee for this day.

streams and enduring hills invite young and old to quiet meditation and profound study. It is a benediction to turn back to nature and to God.

We wish for the Newman family a happy experience in their new home. And hundreds of dear friends throughout the Conference and Convention will remember them in their devotions. It would be appreciated if many of these friends make it convenient to call on them, at their home, near Everet's Bridge, or within about four miles of Chuckatuck, Virginia.

OUR REIDSVILLE CHURCH.

The Reidsville Church was host to the North Carolina and Virginia Conference at its one hundred and twelfth annual session. The conference was well attended from the opening to the closing.

It is not the purpose of this article to give a report of the conference but to express a very warm appreciation of the Reidsville Church and what has been accomplished in recent months.

The church was organized in 1905

by the late Rev. L. I. Cox. Brother Cox had the vision to plant the church in a very favorable location in the town of Reidsville. He and those who worked with him also had the good judgment to build a very spacious, comfortable, and worshipful auditorium. This auditorium has proved to be a satisfactory nucleus for a very adequate and substantial church plant. Rev. J. L. Neese, the present pastor of the church, has served the congregation for three years. During this time the church has experienced unusual growth along all lines. Two hundred and eight members have been received into the church, a number who were members but were indifferent to the church have been reenlisted in the service, thus constituting a very active and a very enthusiastic congregation. Brother Neese reports an average attendance at the mid-week prayer service of 125. The Sunday before conference met, attendance at Sunday school as reflected by the records numbered 350. This would mean, of course, that there must be an enrollment of at least 400 in Sunday school. This unprecedented growth in church activities and Sunday school work demanded enlarged facilities. The pastor and congregation set themselves to work to provide for their growing work. An addition, larger than the original church was erected. This new addition provided thirteen beautiful classrooms, two auditoriums 36 by 50 feet, pastor's study and prayer room combined, and Sunday school supply room.

The Junior Department has six classrooms and auditorium and is a part of the original building. The entire church has been remodeled and redecorated throughout. Carpets and rugs are on most of the classroom floors, and a very beautiful and appropriate carpet has been put on the church auditorium covering the entire floor at a cost of $850.00, the most of which has been paid. The entire repairs on the church including the new addition cost $15,000. Twelve thousand, five hundred dollars of this has already been paid. The church owes only $2,500. This is a most commendable showing, and the entire denomination is most appreciative of what our Reidsville church and their good pastor have been able to accomplish during the past three years. The church raised most of its conference apportionments and is facing the new year with consecration and high hopes. Plans are completed for the purchasing of a very valuable piece of property adjoining the church grounds. There is a two-story build-

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgement and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

THANKSGIVING.

It has become a habit for the President of the United States to set apart the last Thursday in November as a day of Thanksgiving. This habit grows out of a sincere desire on the part of our early settlers to render thanks to the God who protected them and supplied their needs. When the Pilgrim Fathers first landed at Plymouth they thanked God for a safe trip and a new country. When the first terrible winter was gone and a harvest had been gathered in they thanked God for the inadequate supply of food and for the lives of the remaining ones who had not died during the year. With courage and fortitude and devotion they faced the future with praise in their hearts to the God whom they served.

The luxuries which we enjoy must not make us forget the God our forefathers worshipped. With all of our boasted depression the fact remains that most Americans enjoy not only the necessities but also the luxuries of life. With these increased advantages we need to give more thanks lest our hearts grow less rather than larger.

When we really give thanks to the "God from whom all blessings flow, we open the windows of our souls so that the light of His life and the power of His love may come into our hearts, making us into His likeness. It is by giving thanks sincerely that we are enabled to grow into perfection of character. It is the wish of your editor that you join with him at this Thanksgiving time in a sincere attempt to say and to sing "Praise God From Whom All Blessings Flow."

NORTH CAROLINA AND VIRGINIA CONFERENCE.

For a hundred and twelve years members of Christian Churches in adjacent counties in North Carolina and Virginia have met in annual conference to consider matters of the Church and the Kingdom of God. This year about two hundred and fifty ministers, delegates, and visitors met in the Reidsville Christian Church on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of last week. Practically all of the active churches were represented. For two and one half days these people considered the problems that face Christians of this generation and considered methods by which they may better serve the world of which they are a part.

Only three churches reported having received no members during the past year. From one to eighty-eight was the list of increases in the various churches.

There were losses also, one church reporting a loss of two hundred and three members, and another a loss of one hundred members, while still another said that ninety-two were no longer active in the fellowship. Twenty-three of the thirty-eight churches reporting made a gain while fifteen seemed to have lost in total membership.

The program as printed in this paper recently was carried out almost to the letter and to the minute. President G. C. Crutchfield presided with considerable dignity and watched carefully that the program move according to schedule. There was an abiding interest manifest throughout the sessions. Those who were scheduled to speak had taken the pains to prepare and brought messages worthy of Christian servants.

One very hopeful part of the conference came at the closing session when four young men, students at Elon College, and members of the Elon College Church, were licensed to preach. So far as this writer knows, this kind of thing has never happened before. No church has recommended four candidates for licensure at any one time and neither has the college presented such a class of candidates. Apparently, they are men of ability who look forward with keen delight to a life of service as a Christian minister—the greatest opportunity in the modern world.

The Reidsville people entertained in fine style. Their new Sunday school plant is adequate and beautiful. It is a great addition to the facilities of that local church and worthy of the fine people who are members there. The pastor, Rev. J. L. Neese, has done an excellent work in Reidsville and has built for himself a monument that will continue through the years, the best part of which is not the building, but the people who love to serve.

Rev. G. C. Crutchfield was reelected as president and Rev. W. E. Wisseman, vice-president. Dr. Stanley C. Harrell will continue to keep the records and will be assisted by Rev. John R. Chapman. Dr. W. W. Boone was also reelected as treasurer. The conference will hold its session in 1938 with Dr. James H. Lightbourne and his good people in Burlington.

OUR PAPER.

At the recent conference in Reidsville, a man from Orange County, North Carolina, told the editor that the people of his county are very proud that "The Christian Sun" began in their county. More than forty people at conference were sufficiently interested to renew or to subscribe for the paper at $2.00 per year. Others were kind enough to say that they enjoy reading its pages.

Some articles have recently appeared in these pages which indicate that the paper is having a struggle for existence. Some of the figures were inaccurate, but the fact still remains that financial support is very inadequate. During the first twelve months that it was my privilege to handle the funds for the paper we turned over to the treasurer of the Southern Convention $2,432.67. This is a little more than the $2,000 which has been figured as the income from subscriptions. There are now approximately 1,500 people taking the paper, with about sixty-five of these on exchange. A few of them are in arrears and may have to be discontinued. One thousand of them are paid in advance. This indicates that many of the leaders in our Southern Church are not only interested in the paper as such but are interested in the message which it has to bring forth from week to week.

Your editor sincerely hopes that no individual will pay a subscription to the paper out of pity for the paper itself or because of denominational loyalty. If it isn't worth the price, do not pay it. If there is any other source from which to get the needed information, inspiration and help, then let's forget this "Christian Sun" and seek the other source that can bring us a better supply of needed helps. Your editor is working at the task because he believes this paper meets certain needs in our Church homes. He is well aware that it is not as good as it can be and not as good as it ought to be, but he does believe it has value. He believes that the homes where the paper is read will have a wider vision, a more accurate knowledge of what is going on in the churches and a greater desire to share in Kingdom building than do those who do not read it.

If this is true, then the things we need to do is not to decrease the size or the frequency of the paper but to increase the subscription list. Some plan may be worked out whereby the cost can be slightly reduced, but this should not be done at the expense of the values of our publication. At least this is the deliberate judgment of your editor. The major question on which we need to work, it seems to him, is: How can we get the paper into the homes of our people, and how can we make it such a paper that they will want to read it and will be benefited by so doing? This can be done only by the cooperation of the churches. If those who are now subscribers will just get somebody else to subscribe that will be a real service and will, incidentally, help to make the paper live. It is along this line that the work needs to be done, and it is in this field that the editor urges activity on the part of members in the immediate future before a meeting of the Executive Committee, the Board of Publications and the other committees connected with the Convention enterprises, which meeting is soon to be held. If you think the paper is worth the price, please do your best to send in a new subscription right away.

Pastors of the churches in the Southern Convention are being asked for a complete list of all officers connected with the churches. They are also asked to give the name of some person who may be willing to act as an agent for the paper. If the local churches will take this matter seriously, our Church Paper can mean much toward the development of our Church homes. Just as rapidly as possible we want to get these agents busy. It is entirely possible for us to double the subscription list before Christmas. This can be done, but it will take united effort. All of you who read this are hereby personally requested to see that the work is done by your own church. Let us work together to make our paper all that it should be and put it into the homes of our people. Your editor can help to make the paper, and you can help to put it into the homes.

GROUPING CHURCHES.

The North Carolina and Virginia Conference struggled with the idea of grouping the churches into pastorates. They voted to make the Home Missions Committee the central agency through which churches and pastors can work out the grouping in order that ministers may not have to travel too far and churches get more service. It is understood, of course, that the final vote must be by the churches themselves, but it is hoped that a sincere effort will be made to form pastorates. The following grouping of churches was recommended and voted by the conference:

Group I—Apples Chapel, Hines Chapel, Monticello. Group II—Belew Creek, Salem Chapel, Pleasant Ridge. Group III—Longs Chapel, Bethlehem, Berea. Group IV—Bethel, Concord, Mt. Zion. Group V—Haw River, Providence Memorial, Mebane. Group VI—Carolina, Hopedale (Student Supply). Group VII—Rocky Ford, Elk Spur, Ivy Hill. Group VIII—Union (Va.), Hebron, Liberty, Lebanon. Group IX—Pleasant Grove, Ingram, Happy Home. Group X—New Lebanon, Mt. Bethel, Kellam Grove, Howards Chapel. Shallow Ford asked that they be served from Elon College.

It was thought by some that this is not a perfect arrangement, but if the churches and pastors will seriously consider the matter and work cooperatively through the Home Mission Board it is evident that fine progress can be made in the right direction. The day must soon come when rural churches receive real pastoral service. They cannot get it under the present set-up with preachers living many miles away from their churches and probably working at something else in order to make a living. Churches must consider paying a living wage and ministers will have to give themselves unreservedly to the high calling if we are to move forward as we should in these challenging days.

OUR THANKS OFFERING.

It is the custom of Christian Churches in the Southeast to make an offering at Thanksgiving time for the support of orphan children. Our home at Elon usually keeps in its care approximately one hundred boys and girls who need a Christian home. They are well cared for, well trained, and prepared to meet life's responsibilities. The offering we make at Thanksgiving time makes it possible for this home to continue. Let no church fail to do its full share in giving for the homeless. Many give an amount equal to one day's income for this worthy institution; others contribute even more; and some less. But every boy and girl, as well as men and women, in our churches should share in this type of Christian service.

F. C. L.

O Lord all glorious, Life of Life!
To Thee we raise our grateful song;
Lift up our souls from thoughts of self
To Thee, to Whom all life belongs.
Below all depths Thy mercy lies,
Above all heights thy love ascends;
Thy providence our path surrounds,
Thy watchful care each step ascends.
From Thee all good desires proceed.
All holy thoughts we gain from Thee;
The good we do is Thine alone,
Thine shall our heart's thanksgiving be.

OUR NEGLECTED INSTITUTION.

(An Editorial Correspondence.)

Orlando, Florida,
November 20, 1937.

Every church, Protestant and Catholic, has five institutions, or enterprises, through which it expresses itself to, and does its work in the world. These institutions are the local church, missions, education, publication, benevolences. These may well be likened to the five fingers of the hand, the thumb representing the local church; the forefinger, missions; the middle finger, education; the fourth finger, publishing; the little finger, benevolence. The likeness thus given signifies the order in which these enterprises were developed into institutions. (Benevolence, for example, appeared in the early church, as spoken of in the Book of Acts, but not till a comparatively recent date did charitable and benevolent deeds result in institutions, such as homes for the aged, the infirm and the fatherless.)

One need not now discuss the relative importance of each, since by the figure used, that of the human hand, each is essential if we are to have a whole, and not a crippled hand. The object in calling to our attention this figure of speech here and now is that we of the Southern Convention, in particular are about to find ourselves with a crippled hand.

According to Drs. I. W. Johnson and L. E. Smith in last week's CHRISTIAN SUN, we are about to lose, for us, the fourth finger, and thus as a fellowship present to the world a maimed and crippled hand. THE CHRISTIAN SUN with us is more than an enterprise, it is an institution. But it, like every other institution, is but the lengthened shadow of a man. We have simply neglected and drifted at ease, and at our peril, without regard to this one institution, and it has atrophied. We have simply allowed it to waste away before our very eyes, until it has few subscribers, fewer readers, and still fewer contributors. As Dr. Smith states: "It has been a most potent factor in backing all our institutions and enterprises"; and now we see it well-nigh prostrate. We have not treated any other of our institutions with so much unwisdom, and lack of foresight. Take the pastor from the local church over a period of years and see what happens to it.

Try for a period of years, having a college without a president, an orphanage without a superintendent, missions without a secretary, and see what happens to these institutions.

We have placed the work of editing THE SUN, incurring its circulation and all the rest, on the shoulders of a pastor already loaded to the preaching point with other duties and responsibilities. And so the shadow of a man, whose heart is hardened, and whose mind is flooded with anxiety for our beloved CHRISTIAN SUN, does not fall across our pathway any more. We should now have at least 3,000 paying subscribers, with three times that many readers. But now, this one neglected institution lies prostrate, unable to help itself, and all of us are so burdened and busy with other duties to help, and willing that it should leave us with a withered and crippled hand.

Comparisons are often invidious, sometimes odious. But as these lines are written there is before my eye a copy of last week's North Carolina Christian Advocate. On its second page in "bold face" type, which even those who run may read, is a most passionate plea that all pastors get on the "honor roll" by sending in lists of new subscribers. Then on page twelve of the same paper is listed the pastors, with their churches who the past week got on the "honor roll," by sending in a total of 299 new subscribers. One pastor was credit with 26, another with 21, from church.

Well, our pastors are not doing anything like that any more. When have you heard a pastor in one of our churches pleading with his congregation to help him get on the "honor roll" by sending in so many new subscribers and renewals to THE SUN? And, yet, our pastors are as loyal and faithful as pastors in other communions; but there is no one any more with the burden on his heart of this one neglected institution—that institution, which, since 1844 has given its very life and spent its strength as Dr. Smith says, in being "The most potent factor in our Convention." The time has come, the hour has struck for doing something heroic to restore to vitality and vigor our indispensable church organ—THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

SHINING.

A Negro died not long ago, in Ohio. He had a shoe-shining stand in a store, and there he had worked hard for twenty-six years, without ever taking a holiday.

Apparently, he had a good education, and it is said that the famous Booker T. Washington once tried to persuade him to become his private secretary.

But he refused that and every other offer to leave his stand, and never did he explain why.

After his death the situation was revealed.

Beside him, as he worked, there were always ten young Negroes. Every one of them was attending school. Some were in high school, some in college, and a few in night school.

The stand could have been conducted with a smaller working force, but it was constantly maintained at that number.

Joe had figured it out that the earnings of the stand would pay the school bills of ten boys at a time. For more than a quarter of a century this unknown, unsung colored man did just that—kept ten boys in school.

His business had no other purpose.

BOOK REVIEWS

By F. C. LESTER.

THE NEW CHURCH HYMNAL.

When H. Augustine Smith, of Boston University publishes a new hymn book that is news among those interested in good church music and worship. "The New Church Hymnal" just issued by D. Appleton—Century Company, of New York is such news. Dr. Smith is a student of music, art, and worship. He has few equals and no peers in this field.

Into this new book has gone the experience of years of study on the part of the author and his associates, E. S. Barnes, H. C. Robbins, and J. D. Morrison. "Each word, phrase, stanza, melodic line, and harmonic structure has been subjected to minute criticism." Nothing is admitted that seems contrary to the teachings of Jesus. Many (perhaps too many) old tunes are used. A hundred new hymns and tunes appearing in for the first time deal largely with life today. There is a section of songs for the Junior Church and another for Youth.

An unusually fine job of indexing has been done, which makes it easy to find the appropriate hymns for various occasions. There is an abundance of material to enrich the service of worship, including chants, chorals, and responses for the choir, prayers, calls to worship, benediction, litanies, and responsive readings.

Six hundred and fifty hymns and helps await those who want to lead services of real worship.

The book is attractively printed on good paper, and well bound in convenient size. The biggest difficulty is the cost, $1.60 single copies, or $1.10 by the hundred. From rather careful study this writer is inclined to believe that the book is worth the cost to those who want to develop constructive worship services that use the best materials of ancient and modern times. It is not just a song book for flippant use, but it is a valuable addition to worship aids for churches that like dignified, stately, deeply devotional, and challenging church services.

OPEN DOORS IN RELIGIOUS EDUCATION.

A very fine little book for workers in religious education was printed in 1931 by Richard R. Smith, Inc., New York, on the above title. The author is John Wallace Suter, Jr., and the price of the book is $1.25.

Chapter headings give a good insight into what the author discusses, and they are: Toward Deeper Knowledge; Toward Better Worship—What Worship Is, The Place of Worship in Religious Education; Toward A Better Understanding of the Old and New; Toward A Creative Use of Authority—Creativity, What Makes Authority Valid, Two Schools of Thought, The Synthesis, Creativity Is Social, Creative Obedience; Toward Receptivity; Educating the Spirit.

Dr. F. L. Fagley thinks this is one of the best recent books in religious education, and this writer is inclined to agree with him. There are only 128 pages but these are filled with fine ideas.

THE CHRISTIAN VIEW OF MAN.

One of the good books from MacMillan Company this year is "The Christian View of Man," by the late Dr. J. Gresham Machen, professor of New Testament in Westminster Theological Seminary and former professor in Princeton University. Dr. Machen had written several other books such as "Christian Faith in the Modern World," "Christianity and Liberalism" and "Origin of Paul's Religion."

This new book is a clear-cut statement of the conservative Presbyterian view of man. Dr. Machen is obviously clear in all that he says, but liberals will not agree with much of his statement. He was a leader of the conservative group in the Presbyterian Church. He was a thorough student and a lucid writer. His definitions are pointed and his statements without equivocation. There is something he definitely believes and doesn't hesitate to say so. For instance, "When we say that the Bible is the Work of God . . . we mean that the writers of the Bible . . . received an immediate and supernatural guidance and impulsion of the Spirit of God which kept them from the errors that are found in other books and made the resulting book, the Bible, to be completely true in what it says regarding matters of fact and completely authoritative in its commands."

Dr. Machen was a dictator in the field of religious belief, but that is probably better than being a doubter concerning all matters of importance.

Chapter headings of the book will indicate better than this writer can the things which are discussed: The Living and True God, The Decrees of God, God's Decrees and Man's Freedom, What Is Predestination? Does the Bible Teach Predestination? Objections to Predestination, God's Works of Creation and Providence, God's Works of Providence, Miracles, Did God Create Man? How Did God Create Man? God's Image In Man, The Covenant of Life, The Fall of Man, What Is Sin? The Majesty of the Law of God, Is Mankind Lost In Sin? The Consequences of the Fall of Man, What Is Original Sin? Sinners Saved By Grace.

The price of the book is $2.50 at all book stores or from the MacMillan Company, New York City.

PEACE, BE STILL.

This is a small pamphlet prepared for ministers to leave with those who are sick. A reviewer has said, "It is more than the expression of sentimental platitudes. It is not gloomy or morbid. It is a message of faith and good cheer that will lift the soul to a renewed trust in the goodness of an All-loving Father. It is something the recipient will enjoy, not only during a period of illness and distress, but in other hours of devotion."

It is beautifully printed with a presentation page. The price is 15c each, or eight copies for a dollar, with envelopes to match, and is published by Church World Press, Inc., Auditorium Buildings, Cleveland, Ohio.

ing on the property and will make a very attractive and comfortable home for the minister and his family. This purchase provides a vacant lot adjoining the church lot in the rear which affords ideal facilities for outdoor vesper services during the summer months. It is most refreshing and encouraging to see a church move forward with such rapid strides in a day like this.

Why shouldn't all of our churches move forward? They can and would with the proper vision, the proper leadership, thorough consecration, and consecrated determination. All things are possible through Christ who strengtheneth us.

Congratulations and prayers for our Reidsville pastor and congregation!

INGRAM, VIRGINIA, CHURCH.

We are happy to say Ingram Christian Church has closed a very successful year.

The Sunday school, with Mr. J. K. Landon as superintendent, has had a good year. Mr. Landon is such a devoted Christian gentleman. The officers and teachers are very faithful and cooperate with the superintendent in every thing he undertakes. One of four classes of girls (aged 8-12) deserves special mention, as does their teacher, Miss Mary Price, who trains these children in church loyalty, and it is marvelous what they accomplish.

The Missionary Society, with Mrs. L. V. Dunn as president, has undertaken many things and has been successful in all of them.

Special mention should be given the ladies of the church, although we have no Ladies Aid Society. A good deal of money has been raised by them. Every lady stands in place when called upon to work or give.

The church has had twenty-one additions this year, and met all conference apportionments.

This, our closing service of this conference year, was well attended; the communion service was very inspiring; every deacon was in his place as they always are.

Now I am coming to a beautiful part of this letter. On Saturday P. M. a surprise came for the pastor and family. While they were in church his car was filled with many good things to eat. His car wouldn't hold everything, so Mr. Satterfield was so kind as to load his truck and bring the good things to the parsonage.

My! We were so happy. You just can't imagine what a thrill it is to have such a full pantry.

We were not so happy that we didn't remember to ask God to bless every person who remembered us. And, as we begin the year 1937-'38, we shall try to better serve the wonderful people here than we have in the past year.

MRS. B. J. EARP.

It is only those who do not know how to work that do not love it. To those who do it, it is better than play—it is religion.—J. H. Patterson.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church"

MISS EMILY CARLETON, Editor, 541 Osceola Ave., Winter Park, Fla.

LET US BE TRULY THANKFUL.

Each of you have brought to your attention at this season of the year, if at no other time, the many things you have to be thankful for. And yet I wonder if you have considered this fact—that in many countries of the world today no such organizations as the Southeast Pilgrim Fellowship could exist. It seems to me that we ought to be truly thankful that we live in a country where young people are encouraged to organize for religious purposes—where young people are trying to build a Christian world.

Too often we accept conditions in our country without giving them a conscious thought, because we are so used to them. If we would consider seriously the position we might be in, were this country not a democracy, we would have so much to be truly thankful for—and would be more interested in the cause of cooperation among the democracies to forestall by the use of reason and economic means the further spread of dictatorships.

If we were a group of young people in certain countries today, we could be organized—but the organization would be for the purpose of military training or glorification of nationalistic myths, rather than for the purpose of attempting to live more Christian lives individually and cooperating in the carrying out of Christian principles.

In these dictator-ruled countries we would not only be denied permission to organize in our present form, but many of the agents we use in our work would not be allowed to exist. For example, a paper like this one, with its doctrine of brotherhood and other Christian principles, simply could not be.

And so, let us be truly thankful that we live in a democracy where freedom of religious belief has always been one of our principles—and let us work to maintain that freedom in the face of a changing world.

HOLIDAY CONFERENCE NEWS.

Each week we hope to be able to "let you in" on news regarding the program being planned for the Holiday Conference to be held in Greensboro, December 28-30. This week we are happy to tell you that Rev. Alan Jones, one of our finest ministers in Georgia, will be able to attend the conference and talk to us about Social Action. Mr. Jones has held several parishes in Georgia, and has recently been called to serve our church in Demorest, Georgia. He is tremendously interested in all phases of Social Action and will be able to present some thoughts along that line in a vivid manner.

One of the most important parts of the Holiday Conference will be the meeting of the Southeast Superintendent in a certain field with the State Superintendents (or other interested people from each state) in that same field of young people's work. Those

THANKS BE TO GOD.

By Janie Alford.

I do not thank Thee, Lord,
That I have bread to eat while others starve;
Nor yet for work to do
While empty hands solicit Heaven;
Nor for a body strong
While other bodies flatten beds of pain.
No, not for these do I give thanks!

But I am grateful, Lord,
Because my meager loaf I may divide;
For that my busy hands
May move to meet another's need;
Because my doubled strength
I may extend to steady one who faints.
Yes, for all these do I give thanks!

For heart to share, desire to bear,
And will to lift,
Flamed into one by deathless Love—
Thanks be to God for this!

groups will work out definite ways in which we can develop during the next year along each one of the important lines represented. Each one of these working groups of young people will have a "resource leader" from among our adult leaders interested in that field. Rev. Alan Jones will not only speak to the whole group on Social Action, but will be the resource leader for the group under Miss Dorothy Truitt, Southeast Superintendent, on that same subject.

Georgia is our most recently organized state in regard to Pilgrim Fellowship work in the Southeast. Therefore, we know you will be pleased to hear that two cars will bring Georgia young people and their leaders to the Holiday Conference. We are hoping to hear soon from other sections of the Southeast regarding the number from your area.

One of our leading ministers recently made this statement: "We are proceeding when we Christians think we are a majority group in our social order, when we are not. We are a minority group. Even if all those who belong to Church were Christians we would still be in the minority."

Only about 48% of the people of the United States belong to any Christian organization. Approximately 35,000,000 people are members of Evangelical Protestant Christian bodies, and 25,000,000 others belong to Roman Catholic or Eastern Orthodox Christian churches. The unreached millions in America challenge us to evangelistic and missionary endeavor that must not be neglected.

Among those who should have special attention are mountaineers, immigrant and foreign speaking groups, Indian-Americans, Negro-Americans, migrant groups and people in the slums. In every community there are large groups of unchurched people.

How may Christian young people reach the unchurched in your community and win them to Christ?

CHRISTIAN FRUITFULNESS.

LESSON IX—NOVEMBER 28, 1937.

GOLDEN TEXT: Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit. So shall ye be my disciples.—John 15:8.

LESSON: John 15:1-16.

Christians are not only to be good; they are to be good for something. They are to be more than merely ornamental; they are to be fruitful. This truth is emphasized again and again in the Scripture passage which forms the background of today's lesson. It is full of references to "bearing fruit," "more fruit," "much fruit." Jesus says that the Father is glorified if we "bear much fruit," so shall we be his disciples." He says that they have chosen His disciples that they should go and "bear fruit" and that their "fruit should abide." He states the conditions for bearing fruit, and the joy to be found therein. On another occasion Jesus said that men were to be known by their fruits, and one of His most disturbing parables was the story of the tree that bore no fruit. The application of all of this is quite plain—Jesus is insisting on a life of positive goodness, on a life of inner righteousness going forth in active service, on an inner vitality of life that finds expression in character and conduct.

The Husbandman, the Vine, the Branches.

God is the husbandman in the sense that He is owner and Master by virtue of creation and redemption. We are not our own, we have been bought with a price. Christ is the Vine, the medium through which the life-giving force is communicated to the branches, and by which they become fruitful. We are the branches, the means through which the life of Christ finds expression in fruitfulness. It is a three-fold, intimate relationship between God and Christ and us, a relationship "of possession and care on the one side, and of dependence and submission on the other, the vine being such as the husbandman makes it."

Unfruitful Branches.

"Every branch that beareth not fruit, he taketh it away." If a man abide not in me, he is cast forth as a branch, and is withered; and they gather them, and cast them into the fire, and they are burned." Produce or perish seems to be the law of the Christian life. Unless we bear fruit we simply cumber the ground. A branch separated from the vine withers and dies, of course, and bears no fruit.

Fruitful Branches.

"Every branch that beareth fruit, he cleanseth it, that it may bear more fruit. Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit." God always deals in terms of bounty and bountifulness. The branches which bear fruit are carefully pruned that they may bear more fruit. The best is yet to come. There is always room for progress. We are to live at our best, to refuse to be content with second best.

Conditions of Fruit-Bearing.

"He that abideth in me, and I in him, the same beareth much fruit." If ye keep my commandments, ye

THANKSGIVING.

By Harry Elmore Hurd.

I shall be grateful on Thanksgiving Day
For home and friends who share our humble fare:

I shall be happy as a boisterous jay,
I shall go walking in the crispy air.

I shall be thankful for the gift of health,
For appetite and all the common joys
Which should be figured as a man's true wealth—
Delights which repetition never cloy.

I shall be thankful for the commonplace,
I shall rejoice in little household things,
For radiant love upon my comrade's face
And for her trust which gives my courage wings.

shall abide in my love. Just as the branch cannot bear fruit of itself, just as its life and fruitfulness depends upon a vital relation with the vine, just so we cannot bear fruit unless we are in intimate fellowship with Christ Who is the Vine. It is only as His life is in us that we can bear fruit. It is not within us, of ourselves, to generate spiritual life; that can come only from God in Christ. Abiding in Him through obedience to Him is the secret of growth and fruitfulness. And abiding in Him releases through us all the divine resources—shall ask what we will and it shall be done unto us. As we commit ourselves fully to God, He will release His power fully to us. He can trust us with His power only as we are committed to Him.

Fruit-Bearing as a Mark of Discipleship.

"So shall ye be my disciples"—if we bear much fruit. By their fruits ye shall know them. It is not what we profess with our lips but what we produce with our lives that is the mark of true discipleship. The follower of Jesus who has His spirit in his life will bear fruit. The truly good tree cannot bring forth bad fruit, nor can a bad tree bring forth good fruit. Wherefore by their fruits ye shall know them.

Fullness of Joy in Fruit-Bearing.

"These things have I spoken unto you, that my joy may be in you, and that your joy may be made full." Fruitbearing is the secret to fullness of joy. We have not been made for inactivity or unproductivity; we have been made to bear fruit. Only as in Christ we fulfill our divine mission can we find abiding and especially abounding happiness or joy. In His words, in this lesson, Christ has given us the secret of the fullness of joy which comes from working with Him and in bearing fruit for Him.

Friends and Fruitfulness.

"I have called you friends." Friends of Jesus, The Society of the Friends of Jesus—that is what Christians are, and that is what the church of Christ is. He has honored us by admitting us into the circle of His friendship, and by calling us His friends. As such His secret is with us. And as such we should see to it that we cultivate His friendship and try to be worthy of it.

But we are His friends for a definite purpose—that ye should go and bear fruit, and that your fruit should abide. If we are His friends we will want to do something for Him by doing something for His children.

AFRICA TODAY.

Africa, known but a few years ago as the Dark Continent, is now numerically the most Christian continent of the non-Christian world. Protestant Christians number 8,638,514; their children under fourteen years total 2,618,890; and scholars enrolled in Sabbath-schools, 2,087,989. The stronghold of Protestant Christianity is the Union of South Africa, where Christians number 4,000,000 and their children 1,500,000. The old established and highly organized religions of Asia are not here to impede progress except in North Africa, Northern Nigeria and areas of West and East Africa, where Islam offers an unyielding opposition to Christian penetration.—Revelation.

In many of the nation's large industrial plants, where men work near high temperatures, they are provided with and urged to eat salt in tablet form as a protection against heat prostration. Sweating depletes the body's normal salt supply.

MONDAY.

STIR UP THE FIRES.

"Stir up the gift of God which is in thee."—II Tim. 1:6.

We are informed that Paul meant to say to Timothy "stir into flame the gifts that are in thee."

Does that mean anything to us? Just this: everyone has gifts. Some of them are exercised and developed. Such have made the world what it is and everything in it that we enjoy. Some people have other gifts which will never be developed, latent talent never brought to the surface. They remain latent either from the lack of disposition or the lack of opportunity.

The point is clear; whatever gifts we have we should realize that we have them and do our best to develop them for the highest good. We are not to sit by, letting them die and then weep over them. We are to "stir them into flame"—these dying fires.

If more fuel is needed to stir these fires, there is plenty of it in your prayer closet, in your Bible study, in your fellowship with true Christian people, in your worship and in participation in the things that develop your gifts. Practice these good gifts whether you like it or not.

Prayer—Our Father, Thou has told us to covet earnestly the best gifts and Thou wilt show us a more excellent way. For this we pray. Forgive us our coldness of heart and make us quick to do our part in stirring up the gifts in us. We ask in Christ's name. Amen.

TUESDAY.

GUARDING THE GATES.

"Whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report, if there be any virtue and if there be any praise, think on these things."—Phil. 4:8.

There is an old saying "we cannot keep the bats from flying over our heads, but we can keep them from nesting in our hair." Not everyone that knocks at our door is to be allowed to come in. That is what we have doors for, to protect us from enemies.

Likewise, we must protect our souls. To do so, we may realize that we cannot keep thoughts away from us but we must realize that we can keep from making them a part of ourselves by shutting them out. We are responsible for our thoughts and when we learn this we have mastered a great lesson. It is marvelous. "Guard well thy thoughts, for thoughts are heard in Heaven."

Prayer—Our Father, we would live so close to Thee that we may turn our thoughts to Thee always as the flower turns to the sun. We pray for this. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

MY CREED.

"Watch ye, stand fast in the faith, quit you like men, be strong."—I Cor. 16:13.

Regarding resolutions, a friend was making resolutions one day and he wrote them down. The following is what he wrote:

"I may not be much, but I will be my best.

"I cannot do much, but I will do my best.

"I will pray daily for courage to live my own life, heedless of the changing fashions of thought and conduct; and live it the best."

"I will adhere to the fine, sweet, helpful pattern of Christian life, regardless.

"I will regard my first duty as that of doing my best as the best may be made plain to me.

"In doing these things, I may have to stand alone sometimes; if so I will try to stand, God helping me."

Prayer—Our Father, we believe that anything less than the best is second rate. Be Thou our strength and endeavor that we may not live below the level of our best. We ask it for Christ's sake. Amen.

THURSDAY.

CHARACTERS THAT STAND.

"Having done all, to stand."—Eph. 6:13

Two hundred neighbors were gathered to do honor, by a testimonial dinner, to a friend who was having a hard time. Many tributes were paid to his qualities—tributes which a million dollars could not buy.

Outstanding in the dozen short addresses was the note of appreciation of the guest's steadfastness. He is a man who has always stood strong and steady for his convictions. Everybody knew where to find him. His virtue is that of the oak or of the great rock.

At the end of life, there is no quality more greatly prized than this one of having stood fast for the best things. On such men society is built. Not the brilliant men, not the rich men, not the conspicuous men, but the sterling characters who have stood unshakably for righteousness are the dependence of God and man.

I may not be great, I may not have special ability, but at least, having done all, I can stand, unchanged by veering winds.

Prayer—Our Father, Thou knowest that we deeply desire to be true friends of Thine, and of Thy world. So we pray for the grace of constancy, that, in spite of all, and after all, we may stand fast. Amen.

—Amos R. Wells.

FRIDAY.

THE MORE EXCELLENT WAY.

"Show I unto you a more excellent way."—I Cor. 12:31.

These are the words of Paul concerning the spiritual gifts which Christ bestows upon the soul who earnestly consecrates himself to do His best. History, both secular and religious, furnishes abundant evidences of the fulfilment of this promise. It reveals that the world is better for every man who is living at his best.

However limited our natural powers, and however small our lot, everyone of us can give to God and man this supreme gift in a life at its best.

Prayer—Our Father, forbid us to dishonor Thee by anything cheaper than our best. We ask for Christ's sake. Amen.

SATURDAY.

THE SCHOOL OF HARD KNOCKS.

"I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me." Phil. 4:13.

The writer knows a person who has achieved distinction as a minister of the Gospel and has been the means of saving many souls. This person never went to college. He was obliged to work in his younger days till he had reached his teens. In his early manhood he realized the truth of our text and began immediate refining himself, and inspiring and fostering every influence possible in his life as a substitute for his formal education. God never failed him.

We have hardly tapped the resources of the Lord. There is nothing that He cannot do for us; from taming an unruly temper, checking riotous passions and supplanting selfishness by love, to creating new desires, new purposes, and new abilities. Our fault is, we will not give God a chance. Life must have one principle fountain. Let Christ be that fountain.

Prayer—Our Father, we pray for more of Christ in our lives. To live in Him, by Him, and for Him, having no part from Him, we ask in the name of Christ, our Saviour. Amen.

THE GATE BEAUTIFUL.

By REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D.

"And a certain man, lame from his mother's womb was carried, whom they laid daily at the gate of the temple which is called Beautiful."—Acts 3:2.

A beautiful gate, and an ugly, broken form of a man, lame from birth. A beautiful gate which the poor cripple could not enter. A beautiful gate but he must ever remain outside. I like the beautiful gate. Do not make them less beautiful, but with their apparent, outside beauty, learn their inner meaning, and they become more beautiful still!

"This is none other than the house of God, and this the gate of heaven."

In old Jerusalem there was a temple, a temple with a great history, and built for the greatest business on earth—the worship of God. That temple had been the center of the worship of God for many centuries. It had in it the holy of holies, and the sacred altar. It was a favorite place with Jesus Christ. He called it "My Father's house"; he called it "the place of prayer for all nations"; and he respected and revered it with a great affection. He would cry with the psalmist of old:

"The Lord loveth the gates of Zion more than all the dwellings of Jacob."

In this old temple there was an especially beautiful gate, the best craftsmen and artisans of all the land had been sought out for the building of this beautiful entrance. And such was its beauty that they called it The Gate Beautiful. It became a choice entrance, and people from far and near poured in and out through that Beautiful Gate. There hardly cripples and beggars were laid to receive a scant pittance from the passers-by. I suppose they sometimes wished with the palmist for the coming of one more glorious than all who had ever entered there, who would heal their broken bodies, and free their imprisoned spirits:

"Lift up your heads, O ye gates; and be lifted up, ye everlasting doors; and the King of glory shall come in."

Now this poor cripple must have sometimes wished for the best that possibly could be. I do not see how anyone can be so impoverished as to fail to wish for great things. This poor beggar must have wished that some day a king, able to grant any blessing upon his poor subjects, would enter the Gate Beautiful—the King of glory, indeed!

There was One other that wished that. Jesus hoped to be able to give help, and healing to his needy ones; and so often he did. Wherever they cried out to him they were healed. But outside of the beautiful gates of the city of Jerusalem they hanged Jesus to the cross, and put a sword through his heart.

However, the dream did not die! The vision of blessing for the poor and needy lived, and even the Christ was resurrected! He gave power to his followers, and his blessings he gave to his church. At the Pentecost he poured out his power on his people, and so, as Peter and John went up to the temple to pray they saw the poor cripple lying at the Gate Beautiful. You know the story of how he was healed, and the beggar that never expected to enter the temple through the Beautiful Gate went leaping, and jumping and praising God. What a glorious entrance! What a beautiful Gate!

"This is none other than the house of God, and this the gate of heaven."

Please let me make a comment, or two: The men with power to do this deed of love and mercy were men who regularly went up to the temple to its appointed hour of prayer! There are men who talk about helping the poor, and doing their good outside of the church—and let us thank God for all the help that is so given whether it be outside or inside the church—the people who could give more than a pittance of this poor world's goods were people who attended the regular services of the church.

The men who went to God's altar could give the gifts of God, bread, and gold, and goods for this world's needs could be honorably gotten by the larger gifts of life, and reason, and industry, and courage, and character, and opportunity which true Christianity offers! "Such as I have" are gifts worth having when a true follower of Jesus is speaking!

Had they given this poor lame man an alms he would have been a poor beggar still with the Gate Beautiful forever shut in his face; but if they "put him on his feet" he could enter the Gate Beautiful leaping and praising God; he could earn his gold, and his food, and he could have a share in opening the Gate Beautiful to countless others! He could have a real share in life and the joys thereof.

The king was passing through the Beautiful Gate! The dream was action!

The streams of nineteen centuries of history have piled un-numbered millions at the door of the church. We need to pray for the power of the Christ, pentecostal power, wherewith the King may again walk the corridors of his temple, and lift the halt, the lame, the poor, the imprisoned that lie a-begging at its door. The doors of the church—oh! that they may become again the Gates Beautiful, and the poor, lame, and lonely men of the earth may enter leaping and praising God!

Too much has the world forgotten the church doors! Too much has the church forgotten the world!

In this fair city of Suffolk there are hundreds of people who are, according to their views, too poor to enter the church doors. I visited in more than a score of homes this week where there was abject poverty, want and woe. I saw it with my own eyes! I know whereof I speak. I saw bending over those poor people the lowly Nazarene! There were forty little children without Sunday school, fair little faces, bright little eyes, and unaware many of them of the misery which was—and which was to be—their lot! In the name of Jesus I plead for them. Let this great out church bring alive its doors, and let us go and lead them into this church, and let us go back behind their want and poverty, and see what can be done to lift them, many of them on their feet! It is not a hopeless task. Some will not be helped, but others will. It is miraculous how far a little real kindness, and a genuine help will go. Jesus multiplies it. We can show our desire to help and in the showing things will come to pass. Ah! we may not have the gold and silver, but we do have the God and Saviour—just as every church which awakens to its great mission in the world does have. We are custodians of the Christian message. Can it be possible that there are at our very church door hundreds, so crippled, and maimed, that they cannot expect to enter the Gate Beautiful of our church? God forbid that we rest as long as it is true. Let us swing our church doors as wide open as the eternal heart of God, and our gates will become alive, and the King of glory will come in!

Let me make one more comment: Both sides of the Gate Beautiful are important. It takes both sides to make the gate. Important things

The Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:—

Watch our financial report from now till December 31st. This week carries us above the 12th rung of our ladder. We now have $7,326.57 to raise. Are you going to do your share? If all the churches will co-operate and raise an offering that they will feel proud of I feel confident that we will reach our goal. When you have made your offering in and through your church, if you want to mail us a check as a personal offering we will be grateful. Now, my friends, before you make your offering for Thanksgiving, please take time to sit down and think of the many blessings God has blessed you with during the year. Count them one by one, prayerfully, then remember there are many who have not been so richly blessed as you. After you have counted your blessings one by one, don't you think that it is your Christian duty to share with those who are in need.

When the Thanksgiving offering is taken in your church for the Christian Orphanage please be as liberal as you possibly can.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON,
Superintendent.

were inside that Gate Beautiful: The holy place, and the holy of holies, where the presence of God was. Important things were inside, and those who go inside get the vision of God, and those who get the vision of—unless they are false to that heavenly vision—are the ones who will be able to say to the needy outside, "Rise up and walk!" If we only go in to worship, and do not come out to work, God's altar becomes a spiritual trap!

All the important things are not on the inside. Jesus died on the cross on the outside of that Gate Beautiful.

The needy, bleeding, broken, dying world lies on the outside of the Gates Beautiful. Jesus is still on the cross, so to speak, out there with them. The world needs Jesus, the Prince of Peace, today! The Church, let her arise, and offer him, as Peter and John offered him that day at the Gate Beautiful.

In Memoriam

RAWLES.

On September 17, 1937, God, in His infinite wisdom saw fit to remove from our midst one of our faithful members, Mrs. Sarah Rawles. She was a loyal member of Holy Neck Christian Church. For many years she had been an invalid, but bore her affliction patiently and without complaint.

We, the members of the Missionary Society of Holy Neck Church, desire to express our devotion to her, our appreciation of her worthy life, and our grief at the loss sustained by her departure. Therefore, be it resolved that:

1. We bow in humble submission to the will of our Heavenly Father, remembering that "He doeth all things well."

2. In her death Holy Neck Church and the Missionary Society have lost a consecrated member, and her home a loving and beloved mother.

3. We extend to the bereaved family our deepest sympathy and may their memory of their sainted dead be a blessed inspiration.

4. These resolutions be made a part of our minutes and a copy be sent to the family, and a copy be sent to "The Christian Sun" for publication.

ORIGIN OF THANKSGIVING.

it would be more generally observed.

June 1, 1774, was proclaimed as a day of fasting and prayer in Virginia for the people of Boston, whose port had been closed by the British, and they were suffering for the necessities of life.

November 13, 1777, Governor Patrick Henry proclaimed that day as a day of Thanksgiving in Virginia.

(December 17, 1777, was the first national Thanksgiving Day. May 7, 1778, was proclaimed as a day of Thanksgiving for Continental army at Valley Forge.)

May 1, 1779, was recommended as a day of Thanksgiving, humiliation, and prayer by the Governor of Virginia.

December 9, 1779, was proclaimed as a day of Thanksgiving for the people of Virginia. At that time it might be said that the people thanked God that it was well with them as it was, for at times that year things looked very dark, especially in Suffolk, for the whole town was in ashes, the church excepted, and the inhabitants had fled to other places.

November 4, 1780, the Governor proclaimed a day to be kept as Thanksgiving in Virginia.

All during the Revolutionary War Congress recommended a day annually to be kept as a day of Thanksgiving, and in 1784 a day of Thanksgiving was ordered to be kept on account of the return of peace to the land.

In 1789 General Washington appointed a day of Thanksgiving after the adoption of the United States Constitution.

In 1795 a national Thanksgiving was appointed for the general benefit and welfare of the nation at that time.

In 1815 President Madison appointed a day of Thanksgiving for the return of peace after the War of 1812.

August 3, 1894, was set apart as a day of fasting and prayer in Virginia for the relief of the people of the state from the scourge of Asiatic cholera which was then raging in the state.

(Before that time it had been urged by the Governor of Virginia, but it was opposed, and Governor Joseph Johnson, in 1855, was advised against such a course by the people who regarded the holiday as too reminiscent of "Puritan bigotry.")

(In 1857 Governor Henry A. Wise, of Virginia, without asking legislative advice, issued a Thanksgiving proclamation and the people of the state celebrated it with true Southern hospitality.

September 18, 1862, after the Confederate forces had been successful during the summer campaign a Thanksgiving was proclaimed from Richmond, the capital of the Confederate government.)

Since 1863 the president of the United States has annually designated a day the last Thursday in November, as a day of Thanksgiving for the people of the nation, and this custom has been followed by the governors of most of the states of the Union, until now it has become almost a national custom.

November 28, 1918, was perhaps the most generally observed Thanksgiving in the history of the world, on account of the return of peace to the world on November 11th, of that year. It was a world-wide Thanksgiving.

The Protestant Episcopal church in this country in 1789 reorganized the civil government's right to appoint such a day and joined in the movement.

In 1888 the Roman Catholic church also decided to have a festival at that time, which has long been nearly universally observed.

Thanksgiving is generally kept all over the nation, but is regarded as larger in some sections than in others. In some sections it is almost as great a home-gathering time as the Christmas holiday.

JESUS RELIGION.

"There is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby, we must be saved."—Acts 4:12.

What non-Christians call "the Jesus religion" is reviving in the churches.

Breaking through all theological discussions, and all social and ecclesiastical problems, is manifest a new concern for a closer understanding of Jesus Himself.

In the glow of personal communion with Christ, light is shed upon all of life's perplexities. That priceless peace, which is beyond the power of the world to man, is the possession of those to whom the Saviour Himself is real and dear. This the most satisfactory reality of life.

To think about Jesus, to study His words and ways, is to enter into the fullest reality of faith. Every Christian's daily prayer may well be,

"Lord Jesus, make Thyself to me,
A living bright reality."

Prayer—This is all we are seeking, O God, that we may see Jesus—see Him in every dark experience of life; and see Him in the radiance of devotion and communion. Amen.

—Amos R. Wells.

Origin of Thanksgiving

By W. E. MacCLENNEY.

The only religious festival observed in the United States under governmental authority is Thanksgiving. Although many people think it originated in Massachusetts, such is not the case. It dates back to the days of the ancient Greek, when it was participated in by married women only, in honor of Demeter, foundress of agriculture and "Goddess of Harvests." A sacred feast, called Theomophoria, was served in the course of these festivities. This was prepared by two wealthy and distinguished members of the sex. It was similar in spirit, if not in viands, to our own holiday.

The Canaanites, living along the Jordan, held a harvest festival known as the "Feast of Tabernacles" when they "went into the field," according to the Book of Judges, "and gathered their vineyards and trod the grapes and held festival and went into the house of God and did eat and drink." Moses commanded: "When ye have gathered in the fruit of the land, ye shall keep a feast unto the Lord."

The Romans on each October 4th worshipped Ceres, their goddess of the harvest, with processions in the fields, music and rustic sports, and a feast at the end of the day which was called Carolla.

Probably it was from "merrie old England" that our ancestors brought the idea of festival at the harvest time, for the English peasants always, since the days of the Saxons, have indulged in joyful festivities when the sickles were laid down and the last sheaf set upon end. An image crowned with wheat heads was made and hoisted on a pole, around which the harvesters danced. Then they proceeded to the barn where they sat down to a feast known as the "Mell-supper."

Holland holds its harvest festival in the towns, instead of the fields, and it is called the "Kermis."

The original inhabitants of Virginia, the Indians, had many festivals, one of which was in commemoration of the return of the hunting season, and another at the great corn-gathering celebration. This took place about the time of our Thanksgiving, and it might be said that the Indians were acquainted with the idea long before the first colonists landed on Roanoke Island, or Captain John Smith and his companions sailed in the Virginia Capes. Even today when the Indian population of Virginia is very small, they make an annual pilgrimage to the governor's mansion in Richmond from the reservation on the Pamunkey River and present him with a large quantity of game taken by their tribe for his repast at this season. The Pamunkey Indians thus show that the ancient custom of their forefathers is still kept in the Old Dominion.

On July 4, 1584, the English explorers, when they first reached the coast of what was to be known as Virginia, record as follows: "After thanks given to God for our safe arrival thither we manned our boats and went to view the land next adjoining, and to take possession of the same in the right of the Queen's most excellent majesty, etc." Their first act upon reaching their destination was to hold a divine service of Thanksgiving on the shores of the original Virginia.

On April 26, 1607, the English colonists who were to plant the first permanent English colony in America landed at Cape Henry, went ashore, set up a cross on the spot, and held service to God, giving thanks for their safe arrival. The Rev. Robert Hunt was the minister on the occasion.

June 8, 1610, Lord Delaware, the high priest of Virginia, upon landing, fell upon his knees on the shore, "lifted his heart in prayer, thanking God that he had come in time to save Virginia." He then arose and went into the old church where divine service was held and a sermon preached.

The Pilgrims of Massachusetts kept their first Thanksgiving in the fall of 1621. But it was not, as many suppose, a religious festival, for as one writer says: "It was not a day set apart for religious worship, but a whole week of festivity. No religious service is spoken of, and it is not likely that any was held, other than the ordinary morning devotions. This, however, was a week of rejoicing and pleasure." They had as their guests ninety Indians with their greatest king, Massasoyt, for three days, and one thing they did was to exercise their armies while the Indians were there. No doubt this was done that the Indians might see for themselves their preparedness for any attack that they might make in the future.

(One philosopher, commenting on the first Thanksgiving in New England said that the people had been in a gloomy state of mind for the whole year, and had often taken their troubles to the Lord in the services. Finally one of the colonists suggested that instead of bemoaning their lot they should appoint a day for Thanksgiving. His idea was agreed to and the result was the 1621 Thanksgiving.)

April 18, 1645, was set apart in Virginia as a day of Thanksgiving and prayer for the deliverance of the colony from the Indian massacre that had recently taken place, and to thank God that the colony had been saved.

September 13, 1663, was set apart as a day of Thanksgiving in Virginia on account of the people having been saved from the murderous intentions of those at the head of the Indented Servants' plot to murder their masters and then take possession of the colony.

Plymouth colony and the Massachusetts Bay colony united in a general Thanksgiving celebration in 1662, and in 1677 the first regular Thanksgiving proclamation was printed in Massachusetts.

August 27, 1668, was appointed as a day of humiliation and prayer in Virginia.

April 29, 1694, was appointed as a day of prayer in Virginia by Governor Andros, on account of the epidemic of measles which was then raging in the colony; and the people turned their eyes to God through the church for relief. That spring the disease was very prevalent in malignant form.

September 10, 1713, the Governor of Virginia ordered that day be kept as a day of Thanksgiving, having sent out a proclamation from the city of Williamsburg some time previously, so that (Continued on page 15.)

The Voice of God Is Calling

The voice of God is calling
Its summons unto men;
As once He spoke in Zion,
So now He speaks again.
Whom shall I send to succor
My people in their need:
Whom shall I send to loosen
The bonds of lust and greed?

I hear my people crying
In cot and mine and slum;
No field and mart is silent,
No city street is dumb.
I see my people falling
In darkness and despair,
Whom shall I send to shatter
The fetters which they bear?

We heed, O Lord, Thy summons,
And answer, here we are!
Send us upon Thine errand,
Let us Thy servants be.
Our strength is dust and ashes,
Our years a passing hour—
But Thou canst use our weakness,
To magnify Thy power.

From ease and pleasure save us;
From pride of place absolve;
Purge us of low desire,
Lift us to high resolve.
Take us and make us hold,
Teach us Thy will and way,
Speak, and behold! we answer,
Command, and we obey!

TWO WEEKS IN CAROLINA.

On November 4th, we loaded our household goods on a truck at Wadley, Alabama, for our new location at Belew Creek, North Carolina. We took a few days to visit relatives before we started. We arrived, however, the night of November 10th, somewhat tired from the day's drive. We were received by kind neighbors who did all they could to make us feel at home. On finding our household things had arrived in perfect condition, we lost no time in arranging a place to retire for a much needed rest and refreshment. After a few busy days getting straightened out to housekeeping, we began to investigate our new field of labor, which we find to be a very challenging one, composed of Salem Chapel, Belews Creek, and Pleasant Ridge churches. After having had services at each place we find the prospects very encouraging. The people seem to be very cooperative.

We attended the North Carolina and Virginia Conference at Reidsville, November 16-18. This was one of the best sessions of conference this writer has ever attended. The conference was kind enough to receive my transfer from the Eastern Alabama Association of Congregational-

Christian churches, and elect me to membership in this body.

The people of this group of churches are very thoughtful for their new pastor by proving to him that they are aware of the fact that he and his family eat just as other people do. All the good eatables they have brought us are greatly appreciated.

We hope that through the hearty cooperation with these good people, that we may succeed in building up the Master's kingdom in this part of the world.

William Tyndale, faced with a decree against translations of the Bible, said to the Bishop of London: "If God spares my life, ere many years I will cause the boy that driveth a plow to know more of the Scriptures than thou dost." We think this has come to pass—and still, possibly, the plowman did not have to know much.

Editor's note: Franklinton is an institution of the Afro-Christian Convention and is the only college of our colored friends in Eastern Carolina and Virginia where there are many members of Congregational and Christian churches. The college has been closed for several years except for a brief summer school. This is an attempt to make the college beautiful to the Negroes who are members of Congregational and Christian churches. It is sincerely to be hoped that good success will crown these efforts. F. C. THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgement and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

WHAT SHALL WE DO?

Our reports to conference are all in so far as the Southern Convention is concerned. Another year is ended in our churches. We have given account of our stewardship. We have met together in friendly converse and have even prayed about our problems. We have voted to undertake new and greater things. We have dreamed of larger churches, more effective work and happier relationships. We have said that God is on our side and we will undertake in His name.

Now we are home again. Perhaps the same pastor will preach who was there before. It may be a new one, but what matters? Ministers will stand in the pulpit to speak words of truth to those who sit in the pew. Is that all that will happen during the coming year? Will no invitation be given to those who do not voluntarily come to the service? Will no members go out in search of the unconverted, the wayward, the backslider, the one who has failed to attend and share in the work of the Church? Will a conference of the church be held to plan for the things that need to be done in the local community? Will the conference apportionment be considered carefully and plans made for raising the amount suggested by the conference? Will an educational program be planned so that month by month people may become better informed concerning the church of which they are a part and the work which we are doing cooperatively? Will the church consider putting into the homes of its members its Church Paper and other literature which will develop informed and loyal members? Will there be a definite program of work so that all in the church may have a share in the progress of the Kingdom? Will the vision which we got at conference be carried over to the local church, or will it be allowed to fall into thin air and come to nothing? What shall we do? Shall we take life easy and drift with the tide, say that our people are too poor to contribute the amount asked by the institutions, or get busy and present the matter to the people who are members of our churches, friends of our churches, so that obligations may be met? Shall we challenge the church to undertake in the name of the Lord, or shall we apologize for lack of effort? The answer to these questions depends upon the activity of those who have shared in the conference program and the members of local churches. It is easy to believe that those who answer by earnest and sincere effort to accomplish the most possible will find that they are traveling the road to success. Now is the time to begin the work which will bear fruit through the year and will make the reports at conference next year indicate greater success than they ever have and in turn bring to the people greater happiness than we have enjoyed. What shall we do? Wish and wait, or work and accomplish?

EASTERN NORTH CAROLINA CONFERENCE.

The Eastern North Carolina Conference of Congregational and Christian Churches met in its 112th annual session at Shallow Well Christian Church, near Jonesboro, North Carolina, on Tuesday and Wednesday of last week. Illness prevented Dr. W. C. Wicker from presiding again over the conference of which he has been a member for some forty years. In his absence Rev. F. Ervin Hyde presided and did it well. The program was carried through practically as planned with a good attendance the first day but not quite so many the second day. Even some of the preachers felt the necessity of being elsewhere while the conference was in session.

Reports indicated some degree of progress among the churches. The conference faced some problems frankly and plans were made which may lead to the solution of some of them. It was voted to undertake arranging the churches in pastorates so that ministers can make a living and at the same time serve the churches more effectively. It was also voted to spend the home missionary money in one pastorate rather than scatter it among several different churches without helping anyone very much. The financial system was considered rather carefully and an attempt made to simplify finances in such a way that more money can be raised without so much bookkeeping. Other forward steps were taken and the indications are that this conference has an even better future than its past.

The Shallow Well Church (as the picture elsewhere indicates) has an attractive building and the people live in good homes and entertain royally. There seems to be no scarcity of food in this progressive farming community. The church maintained a reputation for southern hospitality by making the visitors happy while there.

The next session of conference will meet with Wake Chapel Church, near Fuquay Springs, and during the time the following officers will direct the affairs of the conference: President, Rev. F. Ervin Hyde, Sanford; Vice-president, Rev. Geo. N. Edwards, Charleston, South Carolina; Secretary, Rev. E. M. Carter, Youngsville; Assistant-Secretary, Rev. J. E. Neese, Henderson; Treasurere, Mr. W. J. Ballentine.

CHRISTMAS IS COMING.

This is the month in which we celebrate the birthday of Jesus of Nazareth whom we believe to be the Saviour of mankind. It is the Church's greatest festival. It is the time when the influence of the Church reaches into the remotest corners of American life and blesses the world with new hope. Business is already geared up to a high tension in preparation for this festival.

It is time for the Church to do likewise. December should be one of the busiest months of the Church year. It is an easy time to get the attention of the world is saying that Christmas is coming. It is the business of the Church to make Christmas have a spiritual meaning. We need not expect any other organization to do it, but we can hope that the Church through every other organization may give meaning to this high holiday.

All of which means that by this time every church should have a definite program planned for the Christmas season. It is not too early to begin reading stories of Christmas, reading the Scriptures concerning Christmas, planning the Christmas activities for the church so that joy will come to the home of everyone. If, by chance, your program has not been planned, you surely will want to get busy at once. Listed elsewhere are quite a number of suggestions concerning materials for the Christmas program which may be composed of plays, pageants, pantomimes, recitations, prayers, and a number of things that can come in to give the Christmas spirit. But a mere program is not sufficient. There will be hungry people in most communities unless the Church feeds them. There will be boys and girls without toys and trinkets unless the church furnishes them. There are a hundred people in our Orphanage who depend largely upon the Church for their Christmas gifts and good cheer. There are aged ministers with little or no income who must depend upon the thoughtfulness and generosity of the churches for their Christmas cheer. We will want to see that these people, and many others, know that we care, that we remember and that we are generous. Such activity must not pass over into mere sentimentalism. We must carefully plan the entire program, or else we will fail to celebrate the Christmas time as it deserves, for, be it remembered, God took a long time in preparation for the great event which we celebrate. He did his work carefully. The angels could sing because new life had come to the earth. They will sing again when there is new life stirring in the Church. May it be at this coming Christmas Season.

THREE ESSENTIALS.

"I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith."

These words are not the utterances of a braggart, nor do they constitute a maudlin appeal for sympathy or publicity. They represent to us a brief resume of a completed life. The great apostle viewed his life as having been completed, because this language was uttered on the very eve of his execution.

In addition to giving us a brief summary of his life, this terse statement sets forth, by implication at least, three essentials in living a completed life today.

The first is that of courage. The expression, "I have fought a good fight," presents the Christian life in the figure of a warfare, with the apostle possessing that degree of courage which enable him to fight the battles of life successfully. Life is a conflict when viewed from any angle—physically against disease, mentally against ignorance, and spiritually against that which is wrong. It requires no little courage to wage an aggressive warfare in either of these phases of conflict. That this courage must be possessed by Christians today is shown in Paul's admonition to Timothy to "fight the good fight of faith, lay hold on eternal life."

The second essential is that of endurance, and the expression, "I have finished my course," presents the Christian life in the figure of a race, with Paul possessing the endurance which enabled him to run to the finish. The Christian race is not a competitive race in which the fleetest runner only wins the prize, but is an endurance race, and a prize is offered to all who faithfully run to the close. Jesus said: "He that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved." We have but to read Paul's own recitation of the many things which he endured for the cause of Christ to realize that he possessed this important attribute in a remarkable degree.

The third essential is that of fidelity to purpose, and to that which has been trusted to us. Paul's expression, "I have kept the faith," indicates his fidelity to that which had been committed to his care—"the faith which was once delivered unto the saints." Paul said, in 2 Cor. 5: 19, that God "hath committed unto us the word of reconciliation." "We have this treasure in earthen vessels" today, and preachers and teachers should be faithful in their presentation of the great truths of God's word. Peter once said: "If any man speak, let him speak as the oracles of God."

It will be noted in this connection that the apostle, after having thus completed his life, felt entitled to the prize toward which he had been so zealously pressing throughout his eventful ministerial career. He was to give his life in the army of the Lord and was entitled to the reward of a courageous soldier. He had finished the course, or race, and was entitled to the prize offered to the winner. (Rev. 2: 10.) He had kept the faith, and was entitled to the reward of the faithful. (Matt. 25: 21.) So he says: "Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day." Let us, like the great apostle to the Gentiles, "fight the good fight of faith, lay hold on eternal life," that we may claim the prize at the end of the race.—F. H. Williamson, in Gospel Advocate.

CREED OF SELFISHNESS.

I believe in the Dollar Almighty, maker of nearly everything desirable on earth. I believe in seven per cent—and as much more as I can safely get. I believe in success—measured by salary. I believe in getting ahead. If this means getting ahead of the other fellow—well, I'm sorry for him; but it can't be helped. I believe in religion, but not in too much of it. I also believe that business is business. I believe in doing good in the world, but not to the extent of doing anything I really do not want to do, and not to the extent of giving until it hurts. I believe that my own sins, which are not many, ought to be forgiven by a just and merciful Lord. But if anybody sins against me, he had better look out! I believe in loving people who love me, and in being good to people who are good to me. I believe that most people are not worth considering, but that a few of them are unquestionably worth while. I, of course, am one of these few. I believe that all this talk we hear nowadays about a coming brotherhood of mankind is sheer nonsense. When you try to tell me that a Negro or a "Jap" or a Jew is my brother, you make me sick. I believe, first, last, and always in having a good time. I sincerely hope that my good time will not rob any one else of his good time; but if it does—well, once more, I'm sorry, but it cannot be helped.—Christian Advocate.

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The Christian Missionary Association of the Eastern Virginia Conference will meet with Waverly Christian Church, Tuesday, December 7th, beginning at 10:30 A. M. This Association is a voluntary organization, organized for Home Mission work within the bounds of the Conference. Its past record has justified the faith and purpose of the original sponsors of this Association. The membership fee is $10.00 for men, churches, Sunday schools and other organizations; and $5.00 for women and children.

There has been a decline in the amount contributed annually for several years. This has been due, in part, to the fact that there has been no great emphasis laid upon the "securing" of new members. But this work is very important, and the money contributed each year is appropriated carefully to churches carrying a great burden. The need of funds, at this time, is as great as heretofore, and it is urgent that all members renew their membership by paying the annual fee. There are many people within the Conference who should become members of this Association. The pastors of the Conference are in a position to know those people who are able to join, and there should be no hesitation in soliciting these prospective members. If the membership of the Association could be doubled this year it would be possible to help several churches carry their burden of debt and annual current expenses.

Some plan should be undertaken jointly to pay off the existing indebtedness of the churches of the Conference. The payment of a church debt does not relieve all the burdens resting upon a church. But it does remove an excuse for not liberally supporting all the enterprises of the denomination. There are church members who are opposed to raising the Conference Apportionments as long as the local church is in debt. They say: "Why should we give money to others as long as we are in debt. We need the money to pay our own debts." The state does not excuse a citizen from paying taxes because he is in debt. A debt should not be an excuse for neglecting to give to the local church or the kingdom of God. Man's greatest debt is to God. And the debt to God should be taken into account in the distribution of our gifts and offerings.

A number of our large churches are burdened by their debts. The Christian Missionary Association has rendered invaluable service, for several years, in helping some of these churches carry their burden. With united effort these burdens could be lifted entirely within a few more years. In addition to this opportunity there are churches within the Conference which are unable to pay sufficient salary to support a pastor, and some of the country pastorates need additional financial support. This Association might render a great service in seeking to build up the weaker country pastorates. Our country churches should be encouraged to call the strongest preachers to serve them as pastors.

The Christian Missionary Association has not measured up to its full opportunity. It cannot do this without money. The money comes into the Treasury when people unite with the Association and pay their membership fee. This is written as a request to all members to pay their fee this year, and as a plea for other people to join. The local church can have at least one membership, if the matter is properly brought to the attention of the people in time. Take this matter up with your church and secure a new membership and send it to Waverly for the annual meeting.

L. W. JOHNSON.

ELON'S FURTHER CONTRIBUTION TO THE MINISTRY OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

It was the hope of the founders of Elon College that the college would make a significant contribution to the leadership of the church, that young men and young women would be properly trained for the responsibility of lay leadership in the local church, and that year by year there might be young men trained for the ministry of the church. These hopes have been realized constantly and continually through the years. The present is not wanting in this particular.

At the Eastern Virginia Conference, Mr. Emmanuel Hedgebeth, of Holland, Virginia, and a member of our Holland Church, was licensed to preach.

At the recent session of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference at Reidsville, North Carolina, the following young men were licensed to preach: Mr. LeGrand Moody, a member of our Senior Class; Mr. Isaiah Sears, a member of our Senior Class; Mr. Melvin Dollar, a member of our Junior Class; and Mr. Duane Vore, a member of our Sophomore Class. All four of these young men united with the Elon College Community Church during the past year. Mr. Moody came from the Methodist Episcopal Church in South Carolina, Mr. Sears came from the Baptist Church in North Carolina, Mr. Dollar came from the Christian Church in Alabama, and Mr. Vore came from the Christian Church in Ohio. These five young men now in school at Elon College are valuable additions to the ministry of our church. The hope of any church lies in its ministry. The efficiency and success of any ministry depends vitally upon its training. Elon College is happy to dedicate itself to the high task of training young men and young women for leadership in the kingdom through our church. The college recognizes that success in the ministry does not depend entirely upon intellectual achievements but it is conditioned in all relations by sincerity, faith, consecration, and effort.

It is the determination of the college to see that those who are preparing for the ministry are grounded in the faith and are actuated by high motives as they dedicate themselves to such holy undertakings.

The college pledges itself anew to the ideals and doctrines of the church.

WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA CONFERENCE.

The two-day meeting of the Western North Carolina Christian Conference was held at Big Oak Church, Moore County, November 17 and 18. The president for the ensuing year is Rev. E. Carl Brady, native Randolphian, now residing at Hemp. Rev. M. A. Pollard, Liberty, is vice-president; O. D. Lawrence, Seagrove, was re-elected treasurer; George T. Gunter, re-elected secretary, and Rev. W. C. Martin, Biscoe, is assistant secretary.

Rev. T. E. White, of Sanford, delivered the annual sermon at the opening session Wednesday morning. Rev. Mr. White used for his subject, "Circles," and was at his best. His sermon received much favorable comment. Rev. Mr. White has been president of the conference since 1934, and the conference through President Brady expressed its gratitude for this faithful, efficient services.

For the Children

HOW THE ARTIST FORGOT FOUR COLORS.

Once upon a time a very beautiful church was being built, and before it was done all the people said: "Now the time has come to get the very finest artist in the world to make us a wonderful picture in glass, for our stained glass window over the choir."

So, as grown-up people have a way of doing, they left it to a very wise committee to choose the artist and the subject of the picture. Because the name of the church was to be "The Church of the Christ-Child" they wanted the picture to be about little children, so they chose as subject that lovely hymn we sometimes sing in Sunday school:

Around the throne of God in Heaven
Thousands of children stand,
Children whose sins are all forgiven,
A holy, happy band, singing:
Glory! Glory!
Glory be to God on High.

You know how artists work, don't you? With a great big white sheet of canvas and a queer oval thing called a palette for his colors with a hole for his thumb—just like the card pictures you have in your hand. Well, our artist painted, and painted, and painted, day after day, until he made what he knew was the very best picture he had ever painted, and he loved every inch of that canvas: For there was Jesus, and all around Him the dearest, loveliest, happiest children you can imagine, singing—oh you could almost hear them singing, "Glory! Glory! Glory be to God on High," as they stood around the Saviour with their golden heads thrown back and their sweet white throats full of beautiful music.

The artist was perfectly delighted with his work and as it was all done he sent word to the wise Committee to come the next morning to see it, to be sure they liked it—before he started the glass window picture, you understand?

Then he went to bed. And he went to sleep, still very happy over the finished picture in his studio. But in the middle of the night he was quite sure he heard a little noise in the studio where his precious picture stood . . . he listened . . . yes! he knew he heard sounds there! So he got up and hurried in, and there he found a stranger with his thumb through the artist's palette, actually painting on the artist's picture!

The artist rushed up, crying: "Oh, stop! stop! You are ruining it! Oh, look what you have done already!

You have spoiled it—and alas! alas, the committee is coming tomorrow morning!"

The stranger turned calmly around, and just as calmly He said: "When I came in the room I saw that you had spoiled it yourself, so I am merely making it right. You had five colors left on your palette, why did you use only one color for the faces of the little children? Who told you their faces were all white in Heaven?"

The artist looked surprised as he tried to think: "Why, no one ever told me, sir, but I always thought of it in that way!"

The stranger smiled kindly: "But now, of course, you see how wrong you were. I have simply used these other colors and made some of the faces yellow and some brown, and some red and some black, for these little ones have come from many lands in answer to my call——"

"Your call?" asked the artist, puzzled, "What call was that, sir?"

The stranger's wonderful voice replied in words that sounded strangely familiar: "Suffer the little children to come unto Me, and forbid them not, for such is the Kingdom of Heaven."

Then the artist knew that the stranger must indeed be the Lord Jesus Himself, but even as he knew it, the stranger was gone, and the artist was alone facing his changed picture. And as he looked he smiled happily: for there were some dear little yellow children with slant-up eyes, and he knew they were singing, "Glory! Glory! Glory be to God on High" in Chinese! And next to them were quaint little brown children with great brown eyes, and next to them black children, and next to them, dear little red children: the happiest, loveliest lot of children, and white ones, too!

The artist looked and looked and Looked, he was so pleased picking out where the children came from: "You came from India, you dear little brown fellow with turbans and you cunning brown girls in gray shawls! You brown boys with red caps are from Arabia; and you little black children—you are from Africa; while you red ones live near me right in America—you're American Indians." It seemed as if he kept on standing there looking and looking, and loving it better and better all night long. . . when all of a sudden he woke up, to find the morning sun shining in the window, and there he was, in bed! He simply could not understand!

He rushed into the studio, and there stood his picture—and all the little faces were white, just like yours! Then he knew he had a dream, but such a beautiful dream he could never forget it again.

You will remember that the committee was coming that morning to judge the picture, and oh! how he worked trying to make it look exactly the way the stranger had made it look in his dream; and sure enough, one by one, quaint little yellow faces with slant-up eyes, and little brown faces with great brown eyes, and smiling faces with smiling eyes, began to appear, and that picture became just as lovely as the dream picture had been.

Then the wise committee arrived, and they loved it, right off! only, of course, they used big long words about it, the way grown-up people do: "Captivating!" and "Entrancing!" "Fascinating!" "Such marvelous characterization!" And oh, dear me! me! a great many other equally big words, but one sweet, quiet lady, the mother of lively little boys and girls just like you, said, with a happy sigh: "Why, it's God's Family at home with Him, isn't it? I love it!"

And I think God's Family will always mean all those five colors to you and me, won't it?—Margaret T. Applegarth, "Mission Stories for Little Folks," in Biblical Recorder.

SUNSHINE.

(An Editorial Correspondence.)

Orlando, Florida,
November 27, 1937.

In college, studying Political Economy, they taught us the difference between value and wealth. There were many things of value which were not wealth, such as fresh air, sunshine, good health and the like, which were the common lot of mankind to which all were entitled. Wealth, on the other hand, had value, but something else also, such as ownership, power to get, to dispose of, barter, and exchange.

One wonders if John Stuart Mill, Adam Smith and the other orthodox economists, would not have to revise their definitions, if they lived and wrote in our day: Sunshine, for instance. It has come to have value and wealth, also. You can now buy canned, or bottled sunshine from the doctors of medicine—their ultra-violet rays—that they deal out to you at so much per. And then Florida. Thousands and thousands come to Florida to get—to buy—sunshine. They have already estimated here, the newspapers have, how large a “crop of tourists” Florida may expect to reap this winter, how much money they will spend here, how many hotels and boarding houses and trailer camps they will fill, how many miles and how much gas they will consume in the State. And it is a hefty and very sizable sum, running into many millions, and of more “value” to Florida than her orange crop, or vegetable products—celery, potatoes, beans, strawberries and all the rest, valuable as they are. Yes, indeed, some millions of people are travelling sunshine road to find good health, and are having to pay out millions in money to do so—get sunshine and health.

Only in the last decade or so, have physicians taught us the real value of sunshine. When taken in proper “doses” they teach us now that sunshine has curative values for almost every disease to which this body of ours is subject. So along with the sanitarium is the salarium—the open top house or inclosure into which one goes and takes sunshine, on the whole or part of the body, as prescribed by the physician. Hotels and Chambers of Commerce in cities of Florida provide these for use as prescribed.

Yes, sunshine has come to be real wealth to the individual or corporation or commonwealth that provides it. Some of us, even to keep strength to live and labor, have to have sunshine, God’s great wide, free open, in order that wounds caused by over exertion may be bound up and healed by the great and all-wise Physician. Here is guessing that at least 50 per cent of the 5,000,000 people expected in Florida this winter will come, not from preference, but to seek health through the great nature restorative—sunshine.

In writing that most superlative and sublime of all his letters, Paul to the Ephesians says: “And to make all men see what is that fellowship of the mystery, which from the beginning of the world hath been hidden in God, who created all things by Jesus Christ.” Well, scientists, engineers, scholars and preachers are joining with Paul in bringing mankind more and more into the use (the fellowship) of the mysteries heretofore hidden in the mind of God. I was talking just now with a friend, a patient here, who came by plane from Boston, Massachusetts. Just nine hours and a half, all in the light of day, from Boston to Orlando, making three changes and several stops. Each plane was filled to capacity, two, with fourteen, one with twenty-one passenger—besides pilot, hostess, et als. Was he frightened, this man of 81 who was taking his first trip by plane? Not in the least, never occurred to him that there was danger, if there was any. (They tell us now that by plane is the safest method of travel, far fewer casualties per hundred than by auto for instance.) It was so easy and so comfortable—and so delightful. “I never realized more the mystery and the wonder and the grace of God than on that trip. How can one ride in an airplane?” questioned he, “and not have a stronger faith, a more vivid faith in the might, the majesty, the real omnipotence of God.” And how can one get newness of life, beauty, strength, and vision from God’s good sunshine, and not have a stronger, a more vivid faith in God?

AN OPEN LETTER.

FROM THE EDITOR OF THE MISSIONARY
HERALD TO STANLEY JONES.

My attention has been called to your “Open Letter to the People of Japan” which appeared September 15th in The Christian Century.

Some of your sentences deserve sober thought on the part of all peoples these days:—

“There were three attitudes your people could have taken,” you say to Japan. “The first was to remain isolated; the second was to cooperate on a friendly basis with China and thus help in her developments and your own; the third was to take a position of antagonism to China and through her to the rest of Asia and possibly the world . . .

“You have taken the third. In this we feel that you have deeply erred. Many of your far-seeing statesmen have urged the second. Had you followed them you would have had so much to give to China and the rest of Asia . . .

“You have great gifts that the world needs. But you are erecting barriers between you and the rest of the world, and we cannot receive from you . . .

“You could have had almost anything from China, if you had decided to be friends . . . each supplying the other’s needs and each being enriched . . . But you have doomed yourself to live beside a perpetual enemy . . .

“Your nation may break itself upon the fact of God . . . God in His judgments knows no East or West . . . ‘They that live by the sword shall also perish by the sword.’”

Words stern but true, and you could not have rightly refrained from uttering them. Probably, too, you could not have done other than appeal to the people to stop the war before it was too late. Yet you must have sensed the futility of the gesture: this not only because you were an outsider; not only because mobs never listen to sense after they have once gathered momentum; but also and especially because a people whose virtues are loyalty and solidarity have been made one in the determination to see the war through to a successful finish no matter how unrighteous the world may deem it.

Having been led into a costly war of conquest, the "people of Japan" will endure to the end together. There is no hope of Japan's retracing its steps to the turn in the road.

Nevertheless, could not your Open Letter have differentiated between the millions of Japanese hypnotized into zeal for the war and the thousands who, compelled to support the government against their judgment, are experiencing some terrifying doubts as to the righteousness of the cause and the ultimate outcome, or are revolting in spirit from the selfish, inhuman method of bringing a great neighbor to his knees, or are suffering intensely over the control of their national destiny by commercial barons, or are just plain ashamed of their country's actions?

Such are driven to agonizing prayer for some divine intervention. They should feel us with them. They must know somehow that thinking people throughout the world are conscious of their plight, are sympathizing with them, not condemning, and are praying with them for a peace that will save Japan's soul, save the Far East from Europe's heritage of hate, and bring in that day when the entire family of nations shall be working as one for the best interests of the human race.

Though an expression of our fellowship with such tortured souls might not have passed the rigid censorship of their present Japanese government, it would have had as good a chance of doing so as the prophetic portion of your Open Letter. Moreover, it would have served as a constructive suggestion to us who have a moral obligation to help the Japanese as well as the Chinese in these crucial days.

Yet, you may be right in not bringing such into your public message. Perhaps after all we can best reach our Japanese brethren right now through Air Route Number One, whereby spirit talks with Spirit, and Spirit with spirit. Thank God, this route into the very heart of things is always open. It never can be closed.

—From Missionary Herald.

Be glad of life because it gives you the chance to love and to work and to play and to look up at the stars.

CHRISTIANITY IN CHINA.

One of the field directors of the China Inland Mission firmly believes that the Church of Christ has been so firmly established in China that even if all missionaries had to be withdrawn, the work of evangelism would go forward. Missionary activity has been seriously handicapped during the past ten years by Communist influence. There has been general lawlessness.

Another worker in China draws attention to the fact that the past two or three years have been the most encouraging in the China Inland Mission's history, and suggested that the devil was angry at the progress which had been made. Thus behind the earthly conflict was the spiritual, and there was an urgent need for prayer. Every great advance of the Kingdom of God in China, he said, had been born out of apparent tragedy, and the present setback may well be the preparation for another great step forward.—The Christian.

SUCCESS CALLS FOR EDUCATION

Dr. Albert I. Good, Cameroun pioneer, says: "No mission can be successful in such a country as Africa without education." The Presbyterian West Africa Mission today has approximately 35,000 boys and girls attending 1,200 mission schools. Some have to walk five or more miles to and from school daily.

There was a time when, because of native fear of the white man's medicine and trust in the witch doctor, infant mortality claimed more than 50 per cent of Africa's babies.

Since 1894 there has been gradual transition, from the binding fear of the witch doctor's power to faith in Christian medicine; from hesitation about seeking help from the white doctor to the present crowding of hospitals and dispensaries with those sick in body and soul; with nearly 45,000 coming annually for treatment and to hear the Gospel.—Missionary Review.

MISSIONARY POSSIBILITIES.

Rev. C. Darby Fulton, Executive Secretary of the Southern Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions, in commenting on the situation in the Far East says that the present trouble there, while accompanied by many elements of danger, need not necessarily retard the progress of missionary work. It is conceivable that in some ways the effect may be just the opposite. Through newspapers and other sources it is reported that there is a vast turning of the people of Shanghai and other stricken districts to the consolation of Christianity in this emergency. Then, again, missionaries are having a superb opportunity to prove to the Chinese people their genuine sympathy, friendship and devotion.

He points out that in Japan vast millions of the population are out of sympathy with the imperialistic policies of the military regime. This has been proven two or three times by the overwhelming majority of anti-government representatives that have been returned to seats in the Imperial Diet. In this opposition to militarism and aggression, the relatively small but influential Christian constituency in Japan is a strong nucleus. Letters from our missionaries reveal that despite the national crisis Japan is facing, the spiritual hunger of the people is evident, and there are untold opportunities for reaching men and women with the Gospel.

—Christian Observer.

GEORGIA BUYS BIBLES.

The State of Georgia, through its board of education, will purchase 800,000 Bibles for school children of Georgia as a means of inculcating religious principles and offsetting communistic tendencies.

The motion for the purchase of the Bibles came from Governor Rivers, who stressed the need for Bibles in the schools of Georgia, saying:

"The growth of Communism is a menace we of Georgia have got to watch, and the best weapon with which to combat it is the Bible. Communism teaches Godlessness. Our form of government contemplates the worship of God as a religion and as an act of citizenship."

It is reported that each member of the new 10-man board arose and indorsed "100%" the suggestion and motion of the governor.

It was the governor's suggestion that the Bible be furnished to all school children in the state, from the first grade through high school, and the Bible so furnished to become the property of the child and to remain in his possession throughout his school life.—Living Church.

JUST TALK—

That the American system of telephone communication plays an important part in our daily life is evidenced by a recent study which showed that approximately 750 telephone conversations are carried on every second of the day—equal to 185 calls per year for every man, woman and child in the United States.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church"

MISS EMILY CARLETON, Editor, 541 Osceola Ave., Winter Park, Fla.

A NEW WORD.

The Iowa Pilgrim Fellowship publishes a paper every month, telling of the activities of the young people. For the last several months the word "Churchmanship" has been appearing quite frequently. For example, one suggestion is to have the church schools or young people's societies provide a Junior Churchmen course and a Senior Churchman course. One of their goals for the year is to emphasize "Churchmanship" in all of their young people's groups. Following is an explanation of the term as given in the October issue of the Iowa Pilgrim Log.

Churchmanship.

This is a new word in the Iowa Pilgrim Fellowship vocabulary. To be sure it is an old word in the English language, but with a rather aristocratic atmosphere. We propose to take this word out of its hiding place and free it from its restricted meaning and fill it with a content suited to our needs.

It is said that in the British Navy, the thoroughly trained recruit depends upon three ships: seamanship, comradeship, marksmanship. By some, what the same token adequate training for Christian service calls for three ships: leadership, fellowship, churchmanship. For our present purpose the greatest of these is Churchmanship.

What then is Churchmanship? Dictionary definitions do not help much. "The state or quality of being a churchman" sends us immediately to find out what sort of an individual a "churchman" may be. Says the dictionary, "a churchman is an ecclesiastic or clergyman." No IPF admitted under that definition. "An Episcopalian or member of the established church of England"—no Congregational-Christian is included here. "One who is attached to or attends a church" is the dictionary's final disposal of churchman and churchmanship. We are disappointed in dictionary definitions of these two noble words.

Churchmanship in its deeper meaning—the meaning which the IPF should put into the word—embraces a relation with our Master which is life giving and creative, and a relation with our fellowmen which in the highest degree is serviceful. To be a churchman is vastly more than being "attached to or attending a church."

That may be most readily assumed. The churchman integrates his life with the body of Christ, which the New Testament says is the Church. This deeper significance of churchmanship can only become real to us as we grow into the stature of a churchman. It implies knowledge of the history of Christianity, appreciation of the contents of the Christian gospel, and a recognition of the Christian Church as God's noblest agency for the building of a better world.

OUR CHRISTMAS CONFERENCE.

We have just heard that Lanson Granger, president of the National Pilgrim Fellowship, and former president of the Southeast Pilgrim Fel-

ASPIRATION, THE SPIRIT OF INSTITUTE.

By Gerald F. Fisher.

God grant that we may learn to wait
With perfect trust in Thee—
For faith unlocks the doors of fate:
Despair but rusts the key.

Our Father, when we feel at length,
We cannot bear our pain—
Then wilt Thou lend us gentle strength
To rise to Thee again.

When worldly pleasures fondly call
And bring us near to wrong;
Dear Master, lest we, tempted, fall,
Oh, make us valiant, strong.

With open hearts, with seeing eyes,
With purpose full and free,
With visions of Thy paradise—
Our lives we pledge to Thee.

lowship, will be able to attend the Holiday Conference, to be held in Greensboro, December 28-30. Lanson is now attending Yale Divinity School but will be in the Southeast for the Holidays. We are all looking forward to receiving first-hand information from concerning the Pilgrim Fellowship work all over the country, and specific suggestions for future work here in the Southeast. This is just one more reason why you should plan to attend this Holiday Conference.

The way I treat you has a lot to do with the way I treat myself, and vice versa. You and I are members of the human family.

WHAT MAKES LIFE WORTH LIVING.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR
DECEMBER 12, 1937.

SCRIPTURE: II Cor. 3:6; I John
5:12; Col. 3:2.

Daily Readings—

Monday—Paul's Answer—Phil. 1:21.

Tuesday—Jesus' Cry of Victory—John
17:1-5.

Wednesday—Samuel, the Worthwhile
Life—I Sam. 12:1-5.

Thursday—Noble Living—Acts 20:
17-38.

Friday—The Advice of Jesus—John
9:1-7.

Saturday—The Unselfish Life—Exod.
32:7-14.

We are beginning with the assumption that life is worth living. We want to discover what there is in life to make it worth while. A Christian life is a way of life, and not a set of rules. There can be no real life apart from Christ. "In Him we live, and move, and have our being."

Christian Endeavor Societies should plan a service of worship for each meeting. Worship helps one to understand God better. Then our lives become better qualified for service.

The discussion of this meeting should be informal. The group should exchange viewpoints as if gathered in a home about the fireside to "just talk things over."

1. Life must have a purpose to be worth living. What is your purpose?

2. We must have a sense of values. To be pulled and pushed by every trivial interest in confusing.

3. Life seems worth living when we have some worthwhile work to do.

4. To have something to look forward to, young people can build a future. What can I do to help "Build a Better World?"

5. Fellowship with Christ transforms life. Henry Drummond wrote: "Ten minutes spent in Christ's society every day; aye, two minutes, if it be face to face and heart to heart, will make the whole of life different." Do you have private devotions each day?

6. Are we doing our part to make life happy for others?

Suggested Hymns—

"Love Divine."

"Spirit of God, Descend Upon My Heart."

CHRISTIAN REST.

LESSON X—DECEMBER 5, 1937.

GOLDEN TEXT: Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest.—Matt. 11:28.

LESSON: Matt. 11:28-30; Heb. 4.

An Invitation and A Challenge.

Jesus was standing before a multitude of people. He knew how worried and wearied, how tried and tired, how restless and restive they were. He knew how hungry their hearts were for rest and peace, and how futile had been their pursuit of these priceless possessions. And standing there, and knowing all these things, he invited these people—and all people—to come unto Him, and promised to give them rest. It was, and is a gracious invitation. It comes with appealing power to our modern world and to our maddening way of life with its hustle and bustle, its hurry and worry, its stress and strain. There is something warm and wooing in it, something that tugs at our heart, and bids us accept it, if perchance we can find that rest which it promises, and which has so often eluded us. To many a weary and heavy-laden life today, these words come as a cooling breeze on a hot summer's night, as an oasis in a desert, as the shadow of a great rock in a weary land, as a harbor in time of storm. And a great host of men and women through the centuries know at first-hand experience that Christ can give rest, that He has the secret of the peace of God which passeth all understanding. When we are in right relationship with Him, there is relief from friction and futility, from wear and tear, from anxiety and care, and we find rest and renewal. Alas, that all too many of us have not availed ourselves of His gracious invitation.

The thing works in two ways. Here is a man who has walked in ways of his own choosing, who has become enamored of, and enmeshed in sin. With a sense of shame, a sense of guilt, and a burden of sin he has turned to Christ in true penitence, and behold, he finds that the burden has rolled away, that through faith he has found peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ, that he has found rest in a sense that he never knew before, indeed never dreamed of before. It was undoubtedly in this sense that Jesus offered rest. But more. Even those who have found this rest in what is called conversion, sometimes become faint and weary. Life has many problems and burdens, it makes exacting demands upon us, it brings many loads to be born. And we are not sufficient for these things. But when we turn to Him we find that as ever, He is the Great Burden Bearer. We find as we take His yoke upon us, He takes our burden from us, and we find rest, delicious, definite rest. There are multitudes of men and women who are carrying impossible loads, and bearing impossible burdens, simply because they have cast their burdens upon the Lord and have found that He sustains them and more than supplies all their need through His riches of grace in Christ Jesus.

It has been suggested that these words of Jesus are both an invitation and a challenge. Just so. Think how much was at stake that day as Jesus stood before that crowd and invited them to come unto Him and promised to give them rest! He knew that He was speaking to all kinds of need, not only in that crowd but down through the centuries. He knew that someone would accept His challenge, would put Him to the test. He knew that He would be the result if in any way he should fail to make good His promise. Looked at in this light the words become something more than a gracious invitation; they become a glorious challenge. Jesus was saying to those men and to us: "I do not care what your needs are, I can and will meet them, if you will come to me and learn of me and work with me." Come to think of it, there is the gospel, "the good news" itself. And the significant thing is that men have been taking the Master at His word all through the centuries. And equally, or even more significant, is the fact that in no instance has Jesus been found wanting. No man who honestly and sincerely came to Jesus with any human need ever found that Jesus could not minister fully to that need. Call the witnesses. Examine the record. The evidence is convincing. Jesus Christ is able to keep His word here, as everywhere. We Christians have a great, as well as, a gracious Lord and Saviour.

But this is not all. In the section of the lesson taken from the letter to the Hebrews there appears this statement: "There remaineth, therefore, a sabbath rest for the people of God." The rest which Christians find in this life is but a foretaste of that rest which they are to find in the life which is to come. This does not mean necessarily inactivity. What a dull and drab place our eternal home would be if it were rest in the sense of inactivity, rest in the sense of nothing to do. Whatever else heaven and the haven of eternal rest may be, it is not that. But it does mean that as the sabbath was designed for rest and worship, so in the on-going process of eternity we shall find as a permanent factor in our lives the rest which all too seldom we find in this life. The writer of Hebrews, therefore, urges his readers to "give diligence to enter into that rest, that no man fall after the example of disobedience."

MOODY—"BUSINESS AS USUAL."

"Business as usual" is a saying not attributed to the late Dwight L. Moody, but it might well have been when that great evangelist was combing the United States and British Isles for souls for Jesus. Winning sinners to the Master was Moody's business, and nothing was permitted to interfere with that inspired labor of love.

Next to fire at sea, there probably is no more terrible experience than to live through a fire in your own home; a fire which destroys most, or all of your possessions. Many years ago in Chicago, Mr. Moody lived above old Farewell Hall, where he preached. A young theological student also had a room above the hall. Early one morning a fire gutted the building, preventing the occupants from saving any but easily carried belongings.

After they had assisted some people who were ill to safety, Moody and the theological student gazed sadly at the burned building. Suddenly the missionary shook himself, turned to the young man and handed him a bundle of handbills.

"Here, young man. Help me out. Take these and distribute them to the crowd that has gathered here."

"But where is your wife and little girl?"

"I saw that they were safe," Mr. Moody answered, moving away.

"But your personal belongings—how about them?" The young man wanted to know.

"Never mind them, our noonday meeting must go on."

The theological student glanced at one of the handbills as Mr. Moody strode away. He read:

"Our beautiful home has burned. The noonday meetings will be held as usual, in the Clark Street Methodist Episcopal Church."

Somehow, Mr. Moody had found time during that exciting and tragic morning to remember that he had to conduct "business as usual," and had the handbills printed.

CONDUITS OR RESERVOIRS.

"Prove all things, hold fast that which is good."—I Thes. 5:21.

Someone has said that this age is the "Pipe" age in public thinking. He says that "minds are like pipes," they let anything and everything flow through them. Unfortunately some are like sewer pipes. However, that may be, pipe minds are open at both ends usually and retain no conviction.

The human mind was never intended to be a pipe mind, but a reservoir mind. The reservoirs of our country run the manufactories and furnish power for lights and other utilities. The human mind is like a reservoir and is intended to "hold fast to that which is good" and furnish the power of faith and love and knowledge and the high purpose of life. These are not to be surrendered to every changing fashion or to every new idea.

Prayer—O Thou rock of ages, the God of our refuge, we can shelter in Thee. Give us strength to withstand the inconstant currents of life and to be something worth while in Thy world. Amen.

TUESDAY.

GRIN AND BEAR IT.

"Beareth all things."—I Cor. 13:7.

Often, these days, we hear it said, "he can't take it." And then again we hear someone say, "I can take it." What is the difference? Whatever other differences there may be, there is one difference that is possible and that is training. For instance, when a little boy was being pitied for a wound he had received in an accident, he was told to "grin and bear it" and everything would be all right. That became his policy. Now he is grown and in all of his experiences he displays the same spirit of endurance.

The burdens of life upon uncounted millions are grievous to be borne. Everyone needs the schooling of "grin and bear it." The Bible promises the crown of life to him who "endures to the end." All Christ's children bear the yoke bravely.

Prayer—Our Father, we need Jesus. He who bore the cross serenely up Galgotha long before this, bore the troubles of his people in His heart. We are aware that He shares with us our crosses. We dedicate our lives to Him. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"Be ye kind to one another."—Eph. 4:32.

Have you not before now been annoyed by squeaking door hinges and squeaks in many, many other things about us? And have you not seen someone come around with an oil can and lubricate the troublesome places and make it easier and pleasanter for everybody?

There are some folks like that, they go around with loving words and kind deeds, taking the squeaks and harshness out of life. It is believed that such people are the greatest benefactors, for without them, living would be very much harsher. The beauty of it all is that this kind of life may be lived by the humblest one in the lowliest places.

Prayer—Our Father, like Jesus we would "go about doing good." We pray for that kind of life within us that will make men think of their Master. Amen.

THURSDAY.

AN ATHEIST'S TESTIMONY.

"The words that I speak unto you . . . they are life."—Jno. 6:63.

Chancing to lunch, one day recently, with a world-famous musician and orchestra leader, our talk soon drifted to religion. He told me his own story:

"I was born a Roman Catholic. At twelve years of age I broke with the Church, and became an atheist.

"But one day, in a Western town, where I was leading a concert, I had some hours alone in a hotel room. So I picked up the Bible that was there; and as I read I took out a red pencil, and began to underscore the words of Jesus.

"They were so beautiful, so noble, and such wonderful setting, that they took strange hold of me."

That sensitive-souled musician, that lover of the beautiful, found new meaning and power in the words of the Master. He did not know, as he wielded his red pencil, that there is such a thing as a Red Letter New Testament. Yet, he felt that the words of Jesus glowed red, were instinct with life.

There are many profitable forms of Bible-study; but none equal to the frequent conning of the very words of Jesus Himself. In a strange, unique way, they are words of life.

Prayer—The entrance of Thy word giveth light. We would know for ourselves, with all of our mind and all of our heart, the meaning of the words of Jesus for our every time of need. Amen.

—Amos R. Wells.

FRIDAY.

THE PERSONAL SACRIFICE.

"Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might."—Eccl. 9:10.

Paul enjoins all Christians to present "their bodies a living sacrifice" which he calls but a "reasonable service."

Most of us dawdle and drift through the days, and the days slip away and we accomplish so little. Time's preciousness has not mastered us. Pleasure and comfort have become a passion and thereby we miss the really great achievements.

The work of the world—our work—cannot be disassociated from a religious faith. Work is the primary expression of one's Christian duty and when Paul enjoined us to present our bodies, he meant work, and when he said work with the hands what we find to do, he meant that it was a part of our spiritual life. We cannot escape it.

Good work well done in everyday life means life well lived. Consecrated souls contribute most to the world's good.

Prayer—Our Father, teach us to pray and to work well in all things; teach us how to put our hearts in our work. This we ask for Jesus' sake. Amen.

SATURDAY.

THOSE ADVERTISEMENTS.

"Lying lips are an abomination to the Lord."—Prov. 12:22.

Among the many reforms of today, one of them is the purging of advertisements or misrepresentations. As we have listened to our radios and have read the emblazoned pages of our papers and magazines, we have felt that the public is subjected to an orgy of superlative false claims. We wonder how many people believe them. We are glad to know that faith in misrepresentations is being shattered and that there is a movement to purify these representations.

There is a splendid little lesson here, namely, untruthfulness reacts upon him who speaks it; falsehood defeats itself; truth-telling is the only sound policy. Truth in all things though sometime severe and uncomfortable, achieves more than all the skillful misrepresentations. Christian men must be truth-tellers or else they are not to be Christians.

BARNABAS.

By REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D.

"Barnabas . . . having land sold it, and brought the money and laid it at the apostles' feet."—Acts 4:36.

Barnabas is quite unlike that rich young man whom Jesus met, and who was told by Jesus to go and sell and follow him. Jesus loved that devout, handsome, rich young ruler. How sad must have been when he turned away from him! But Jesus would have had a very different experience if it had been his good fortune to have met Barnabas, too, was rich, or at least comparatively so. We have a hint of his wealth in our text. He was young, also, and no doubt handsome. The colors the Eastern flowing robes must have been as beautiful on Barnabas as they were on the other rich young man. Perhaps his wealth had given him something of the same degree of confidence, so that, had he had a chance, he, too, would have come eagerly to Jesus to inquire concerning eternal riches.

Barnabas would not have turned away from Jesus. The rich young man that met Jesus came running to him with words; the rich young man later born came running to the followers of Jesus with wealth to lay at their feet. The other rich young man came to Jesus thinking of self, this rich young man came to his followers thinking of service. They both "went away," the one into oblivion; the other into opportunities to do some of the finest work for the Jesus movement the world has ever seen! What great things our first young man might have done; what great things our second young man did!

Jesus asked the first young man to do some real hard things—just such things as any really heroic young man or woman would like to be challenged to do. "Keep the commandments." There was a full man-sized commission, especially in the light of Jesus' interpretation of what that would mean. The young man replied that such he had done. "Then go, and sell all thou hast, and give it to the poor, and come follow Me." Perhaps a good deal of it really belonged to the poor in the first place, and at least he would be unencumbered in his following Jesus. No ties would hold him back. The same command rings today in many young hearts. Sell all! All hope of worldly fame, or favor; all hope of worldly houses or lands; all hope of social place, or prestige. Sell all, and give . . .!

Well, at least Barnabas, although he did not have the added help of beholding the beautiful face of the Son of God as he gave the command, was glad to accept the challenge of it. Had Jesus let down the bars, and made entrance into his Kingdom easy on that day when the other rich young man came to him he might have missed Barnabas, and Mark, and Luke, and Silas, and Saul, and Timothy and Titus, and unnumbered scores of others who have been glad to follow him when the challenge was hazardous! One of the greatest of them said: "Learn to endure hardness as a good soldier!" "Barnabas . . . a Levite, of the country of Cyprus, having land sold it, and brought the money and laid it at the disciples' feet."

Barnabas, the unassuming, the big-hearted, the beloved kinsman, was somewhat like Andrew in the work he did. An immeasurable tragedy was about to occur. Barnabas blocked it. Paul had played havoc with the church in its infancy. He had gone a long way toward crushing it, and had it not had Heaven's guarantee of ultimate success he might have finished it so great was the force of the blows he was striking. Paul was a fighter. But one day he met Jesus above his road to Damascus. Jesus told Paul that there were goads being held against his back; that he was pushing him into service with the movement which he was prosecuting, rather than against it; that he was to become a chosen vessel to be sent to kings, and to the Gentiles! "Who art thou, Lord?" "Jesus of Nazareth, whom thou persecutest." And thus Jesus of Nazareth had called Paul into a place of apostleship. Paul was one of the men he needed most, and he had accepted the change of heart and change of career, and was ready to begin the mighty things into which he had been called.

But, I say, a tragedy was about to happen. Paul had been called by Jesus, but Peter was afraid of him. Into the apostles' hands had been placed the keys of the Kingdom, whatever they bound was to be bound, and whatever they loosed was to be loosed—and Paul was outside! Paul was about to be kept outside so far as the little band into whose charge the keeping of the keys of Heaven had been given! Accepted by Jesus; about to be refused by Peter! It means something, my friends, for one's brethren to turn him down. It means something to have brethren that will give a fellow favors. There is no earthly way to get around it. If our brothers the world over "hands off" and persist in keeping hands off we are about done for. How would Paul begin, and where?

The unassuming Barnabas knew Peter. He knew Paul. He was God's loving link of conciliation in a moment when he was mightily needed. Stepping forward in the council at Jerusalem, Barnabas took him (Paul) and brought him to the apostles." There is history in that sentence, and Heaven! The man who had laid all at Peter's feet, now brought more than the combined wealth of Jerusalem and placed it in his hands—and the hands of the church. Just so somebody had brought Simon Peter to Jesus. Andrew and Barnabas—what a team; Peter and Paul—what powers in the hands of God! Maybe you will fill a little place, but who knows but you, too, may join hands as necessary to be joined as were the hands of Peter and Paul. You may be only the father of a boy! Or the mother of a son! Or the parent of a daughter! You may be neither, but just an Andrew, or a Barnabas—filling no great place, but filling some little place well. If so, rejoice, for great is your reward in Heaven.

Across the way the Jesus movement was getting started almost alone, and "when tidings of these things came unto the ears of the church at Jerusalem; they sent forth Barnabas," for had he not offered his services as well as his wealth. But what did Barnabas do but go and get Paul? "Then departed Barnabas to Tarsus to seek Paul." Without saying a word Barnabas received the church's commission, and went and got Paul to help him put it across. Study Barnabas wherever you will and you will find him seeking the other fellow's preferment. "In honor preferring one another," are the words Paul learned to write from the life of his friend, Barnabas. Since I am to preach on "John Mark" later, I shall reserve a remark I should like to make just here.

Jesus called Paul; Barnabas brought him to the apostles. The Holy Spirit mapped out his missionary journeys; Barnabas set his feet on the road! In the eleventh chapter of Acts we read of Barnabas setting Paul onto the task of becoming a mis-

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:—

Our financial report this week carries us above the thirteenth rung in our financial ladder ($13,779.73). We still lack $6,220.27 being to our goal of $20,000 for the year. Will you help us reach it? If you have ever climbed a ladder you remember climbing gets harder toward the top. That is when a little push helps a lot. Did you ever get your car stuck in the mud and some one stopped and gave you a little push and how much easier it was for you to pull out.

If every church will give us a good strong push with a liberal Thanksgiving offering we will gradually climb to the top and reach our goal. Now, let everyone push till the $20,000 is reached? Your Thanksgiving offering in your church will be credited in your Conference Apportionment.

I make the appeal in behalf of the little children here who are looking to the church to give them a chance. Are you willing to share your blessings with them?

In Memoriam

WILES.

Silas Wiles was born July 6, 1876, and died November 13, 1937. He was the son of the late William and Catherine Wiles. He had been a member of Hebron Christian Church for thirty-seven years. Brother Wiles is survived by his wife, six children, and eleven grandchildren. The children are Mrs. Dane Adcock, Mrs. Howard Newton, Mrs. Lula Mae Newton, Mrs. Vergie Elliot, Willie and Hessler Wiles. The deceased had been in declining health for the past two years, but was ill only a few days prior to his death. The funeral was conducted by the pastor of his church in the presence of a large crowd of relatives and friends at the home near Nelson, Virginia, on Sunday afternoon, November 14th, and the burial was in the family cemetery. He will be missed both by his family and the community.

C. E. NEWMAN.

WILLIAMSON.

Mellisa Luvenia Williamson, daughter of Joseph and Mary Moore, was born October 4, 1860, and died at her home near Buffalo Lithia Springs, November 3, 1937. In March, 1882, she married J. J. Williamson, who survives her, together with four sons, two grand-sons, and nine grand-daughters. The sons are W. P., J. C., H. W., and J. H.

There is one sister, Mrs. Hiram Forelines, of Virgilina, Virginia.

Sister Williamson had been a member of Hebron Christian Church for fifty-seven years. Her husband, children, and grandchildren are among the most active Christian workers in the church. She was a wonderful mother; her religion was a precious thing to her.

Funeral services were at the home, conducted by the writer, and burial in the family cemetery.

vice was conducted by Dr. Willard L. Beard, returned missionary of China. Dr. Beard addressed the conference on two occasions, relating many interesting experiences during his long stay in China.

Others who addressed the conference were: Dr. L. E. Smith, president of Elon College; Dr. S. C. Harrel, Durham, president of the Southern Convention; Sup't. Chas. D. Johnston, head of the Christian Orphanage; Rev. Carl R. Key, Holland, Virginia; Rev. J. Lee Johnson, Fuquay Springs; and Rev. J. L. Foster, Elon College, North Carolina. Visiting ministers besides those mentioned above were: F. Ervin Hyde, Sanford; J. S. Carden, Durham; J. A. Denton, Apex; and Jessie E. Franks, Raleigh.

A special feature of the Wednesday evening session was a pageant, "Sin and the Ages" by the Christian Endeavor Society of Big Oak Church, Miss Velma Thomas, leader.

The reports from ministers and churches indicated a very successful year. Attendance at all sessions was especially good, surpassing that of any conference for the last six years.

There are very few pastoral changes for the coming year. Revs. S. M. Penn, Sophia, is leaving the Western Conference to unite with the South Georgia Conference.

The 1938 annual session will meet in Grace's Chapel Christian Church, Sanford, Route 1.

SUCCESSFUL BUSINESS.

"Lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven."—Matt. 6:20.

My friend, a wealthy cotton man in a Southern state, died a few years ago. Soon came news that his fortune had been lost by a son's business misadventures. The widow was left impoverished.

As I heard the tale of heaped-up misfortunes, my mind ran over some of my friend's investments which are safe. He had been a princely giver to foreign missions. The hospital which he established in one part of the Orient is still carrying on, in his name and in the Name of His Master. The advanced mission station which he founded is still winning converts. His school in China is still a center of light and life.

All that remains of my friend's fortune is what he gave away! The treasures that he laid up in Kingdom securities have unimpaired value. The one investment that is sure is whatever of treasure and labor and interest we put into God's work.

Prayer—Amidst the crash of material possessions, we would lay up for ourselves, O Lord, treasures in heaven, beyond the reach of change or disaster. Amen.

sionary, by going after Paul and having him share with him his commission to Phenice, and Cyprus, and Antioch; and in the thirteenth chapter we read: "The Holy Ghost said, separate me Barnabas and Saul for the work whereunto I have called them, and when they had fasted and prayed, and laid their hands on them, they sent them away." And sooner or later Barnabas drops out of the picture; nowhere do I read of his reward. What did Barnabas get out of it? He had put his wealth, and his life into it, what brought he out? Is it not enough that he was the keyman at the most crucial points in the career of Paul; and that he was a first missionary of the church; and that his name still lives in letters of loving, unassuming, unselfish daring for God! I should think it would be quite sufficient to have the privilege of linking together the hand of God and the hand of man as Barnabas had the privilege of linking them. We are co-workers together with God!

A woman took her little one in her arms to hear a famous preacher. The loud voice on the platform awoke the child and made it cry, and its mother got up and was leaving the church, when the minister stopped her by saying: "My good woman, don't go away; the baby does not disturb me." "It isn't for that I leave," she replied, with innocent sarcasm. "It's you disturb the baby."—Selected.

What a Nation Soweth

By ERNEST H. CHERRINGTON.

At one period in the history of the Lacedaemonians, following the advice of one of their philosophers, an attempt was made to guard youth from the vice of drunkenness by bringing constantly into the view of children the loathsome, indecent behavior of intoxicated slaves. By this process, the elders reasoned, there would be created in the children an aversion to intemperance. Neither the philosopher nor the Lacedaemonian leaders appear to have given due consideration to another philosophy which centuries later was set forth in the words of Alexander Pope:

"Vice is a monster of so frightful mien,
As to be hated needs but to be seen;
Yet seen too oft, familiar with her face,
We first endure, then pity, then embrace."

At another period in the history of Laconia, the education of the youth of Sparta was directed with the greatest care taken to inculcate into the mind and life of young Spartans the benefits of sobriety. Spartan youth, as a result of this general policy, easily became distinguished from the youth of other nations by reason of their sobriety. They were able to undergo the greatest hardships and fatigues in war. Plato observed that this salutary policy finally succeeded in banishing from Sparta and all her territorial dependencies the curse of drunkenness and debauchery.

During the twenty years immediately preceding the beginning of the twentieth century there came into existence the salutary policy of teaching all American youth the wholesome and scientific truths regarding the nature and effect of alcohol, together with the physical, moral and spiritual value of sobriety. In every schoolhouse this became a part of the curriculum. In almost every church and Sunday school the same thing happened. The youth of those twenty years preceding 1900 became the leaders of political, social and moral life in America during the twenty years following 1900. That youth therefore was responsible for the far-reaching public policy movements toward sobriety in the first two decades of the twentieth century.

By reason of insidious propaganda and control of government by the interests opposed to sobriety, youth is now being encouraged not only to cultivate drinking habits, but what is even more significant, to discredit, despise and discard even without investigation or examination all theories, policies, programs and scientific philosophies looking toward the elimination of this habit-forming drug which we call alcohol. Thus, modern American youth is being exploited for the benefit of sordid greed. This becomes especially significant in the light of the philosophy of history which teaches that what a nation soweth, it shall most assuredly reap.—The American Issue.

Bend Down Closer, God

By REV. ROY D. COULTER.

When the world succumbs to quixotic greed,
Impregnating innocent souls
With penury—an unsavory smell,
Bend down closer, God.

When nations wrangle with rapid vibrations,
Effecting a lesser faith in Thee
And in one another,
Bend down closer, God.

When self-conceit would rob us of grandeur,
Carving a pernicious attitude
On our feeble souls,
Bend down closer, God.

When night falls—a harbinger of peace and rest—
Lest we forget those of Thine
Who know not this repose,
Bend down closer, God.

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

Dr. Trevor L. Collins, Secretary of the North Carolina Council of Churches, was a welcome visitor and speaker at the Eastern North Carolina Conference.

Dr. W. H. Denison, on last Sunday, closed a very unique series of services in First Church, Richmond, Virginia. After the evening service, he was given a "party" at the parsonage on the occasion of the 46th anniversary of his first preaching service.

Three members were received into Henderson Christian Church, Sunday, November 21st, at 11:00 o'clock—Mr. F. E. Stigall on transfer of letter and Mr. Victor Langston and Mr. Wilson Hoyle on profession of faith. This makes fifteen received this year.

In compliance to the suggestion that I made on the floor of the Eastern North Carolina Conference concerning the resolution having to do with the Missionary Fund of the Conference, let me direct the attention to page 140 of the 1934 Annual, first resolution: "That 20 per cent of the money secured from the Conference Apportionments be retained for our use by the Home Mission Committee."

NORTH MIAMI RE-DEDICATES CHURCH.

For the Union Congregational Church of North Miami, Florida, Sunday, November 21st, was a day of combined thanksgiving and Christian inspiration. On that day a re-dedication of the church was held. Two years ago a hurricane had severely wrecked their building. After being righted, the interior was still not attractive. One of the families had lost a son by drowning, and in memory of him they placed a stained glass window of "The Good Shepherd" in the pulpit alcove. The mother studied how to make the setting of the window more attractive. She had the wainscoting made more attractive, the pulpit chairs carved into a real cathedral effect, the choir was curtained and the chair backs were covered with harmonizing color of beautiful cloth. An altar cloth was provided.

As these changes went on, other people began to make gifts in the name of departed friends and loved ones until the whole interior has been harmoniously redecorated in soft browns. The main windows are amber glass, except two which are on either side of a striking reproduction of Raphael's "The Madonna and Child."

In the entrance is a plaque with the names of the twenty-four persons in whose memory the gifts for the remodeling and redecorating were made.

At the re-dedication service on November 21st, we had a large number present. Rev. Wm. T. Scott, Pastor-at-Large, gave a splendid message, "Building With Christ." He also gave the re-dedication prayer while the people stood with bowed heads. Immediately following the prayer the dedicatory service was read by the pastor, Rev. A. Craig Bowdish.

Rev. Mr. Ericson, who preached for the church in the early days of the North Miami, or "Arch Creek" Church (as it was called when it was organized 25 years ago) was present and spoke of incidents during the beginning of the work.

Throughout the services of the day there was a deep gratitude for past blessings, and a keen spirit of inspiration for the days ahead was the experience of those present.

Rev. Austin Craig Bowdish, the pastor, is a son of a former Christian Church minister, and is a namesake of Dr. Austin Craig, president of Antioch College and later of Christian Biblical Institute, where Mr. Bowdish's father attended school.

NEWS FROM GEORGIA.

Three pastoral changes in Georgia have taken place during the past few weeks. Rev. Alan T. Jones succeeded Rev. H. B. Mowbray as pastor of Union Church, Demorest; Rev. N. A. Long, formerly of Phenix City, Alabama, has taken the work of Macedonia Parish, succeeding Mr. Jones; and Rev. S. M. Penn, for 12 years pastor of Sophia Parish, North Carolina, becomes the pastor of the newly formed Richland and Doerum Parish. The parsonage at Richland is being renovated and Mr. Penn will move his family about the first of January, but he will begin his services there on the first Sunday of December.

The 85th session of the Georgia Congregational-Christian Conference was held at Ambrose, on November 2 and 3. A program of inspiration was experienced by well represented churches. Rev. John H. Knight, La-Grange, was elected Moderator to succeed Rev. David W. Shepherd; Mr. Moses Fleming, Bowman, was elected Assistant Moderator. Reports from the churches show gains during the year in building improvements, number of members received on conversion and by letter, and a decided jump in payments on apportionment and conference dues. The Congregationalists and Christians in Georgia no longer exist along the old lines of denominations. Every church is happily a part of the united fellowship.

CONFERENCE OF STEWARDSHIP.

The Stewardship Committee of the Eastern Virginia Conference, composed of Dr. John G. Truitt, Rev. Jesse H. Dollar, Rev. R. E. Brittle and Rev. Carl R. Key, chairman, met at Waverly Christian Church recently to plan a program for the year 1937 and 1938. Others present were Rev. J. E. McCauley, Rev. Joe A. French, and Dr. Warren H. Denison, Executive Secretary of the Commission on Christian Stewardship, all of whom made valuable suggestions. It was suggested:

a. That worship services be arranged, mimeographed and mailed to the pastors, young people's groups and missionary society presidents.

b. That the members of the committee visit churches and group meetings whenever possible to give sermons and addresses or teach stewardship classes in the local churches.

c. That the writing of essays on this theme by high school pupils be sponsored and that such compositions be read before the Church school by the writer.

d. That a circulating library of stewardship books and pamphlets be made available for churches in the conference. Any church or organization caring for a small library may secure same for two weeks by writing Chairman Carl R. Key, Holland, Virginia, and paying postage to the next borrower. These books and pamphlets may be kept one month if no other group has requested them.

e. That other literature be recommended. Quantities of free pamphlets such as "Immortal Money," by Stocking; "Jesus and Money," by Latimer; and "Spiritualizing Church Finance," by Denison, may be had by addressing the Missions Council, 287 Fourth Avenue, New York, N. Y. Other literature will be suggested upon request.

f. Plans for the Conference Meeting on Stewardship sponsored by the committee to be held at Shelton Church, Portsmouth, in February, were discussed. The date, time and program will be announced later.

Any member of your committee will be glad to serve you along stewardship lines at a convenient time, if you will call on them.

CHANGING THE MOVIES.

(A Letter to the Editor.)

Out of four hundred and ten motion pictures that I have reviewed since the first week in January, I found that one hundred and fifty-four of them were unsuitable for showing either to children or to adolescents, or to both.

There is no question that, since the day the producers were compelled to adopt self-censorship because of the revolt of the churches, there has been a great improvement; but this does not mean that there is no room for further improvement: when one hundred and fifty-four out of four hundred and ten pictures, or 37½% are of the type that may put wrong ideas into the minds of young folks, you will admit that there is room for much improvement.

The independent theatre owners cannot be held responsible for the showing of the morally unsuitable pictures because they, owing to the prevailing block-booking system, must either buy all the pictures produced by a company, or be deprived of the entire product.

The theatre owners have tried to correct the block-booking evil by legislation, federal as well as local, but they have not been successful, for they have met with stern opposition from the producers, who have millions at their disposal to fight against any measure that it is designed to curtail some of their assumed rights.

There seems to be little hope that the theatre owners will be able to obtain, by legislation, the right to book only those pictures that are suitable for the people of their communities. Such being the case, there seems to be no other way of effecting a further improvement in the moral quality of the pictures than to bring into the motion picture industry elements that may exert on it a healthful influence.

The writer has made a deep study of the problem and has come to the conclusion that no other person in the United States is in a better position to enter the motion picture industry, for its good, than Mr. John D. Rockefeller. The Rockefeller family is so loved and respected by the people of the United States that Mr. Rockefeller's entry into the motion picture industry will, I am sure, change its complexion over night.

Since the industry has, however, suffered from considerable adverse publicity, it is unthinkable that Mr. Rockefeller could be induced to enter it just because it is the dream of an individual. But if there should be created a sufficient public demand, he will undoubtedly feel duty-bound to respond.

Because of the influence you exercise as an editor of a religious publication, you are in a position to create such a demand. Will you, therefore, join in my efforts, and in the efforts of other editors among the religious press to whom I am making a similar appeal, to induce Mr. Rockefeller to take an active part in the motion picture industry?

If you should see fit to join my efforts, you may urge your readers, through your editorial columns, to write to Mr. Rockefeller, Rockefeller Center, New York, to plead with him to take an active part. Let them remind him of his recent utterance: "The duty of an individual is clear—to make himself in every way as fine and useful as the resources and opportunities available to him make possible." If they should do so, and should also point out to him the great good he would thus do to the people of the United States, I am sure that Mr. Rockefeller would have no other way than to respond to public demand.

For your information, Mr. Rockefeller is not altogether unfamiliar with the motion picture industry; he has in the RKO picture company an investment of almost $10,000,000.00 which he was compelled to make as a result of a financial transaction involving a readjustment of leases with this company. Since that transaction was effected, the Rockefeller family has been managing the Music Hall with unusual efficiency, not only from the financial, but also from the moral point of view. Under the direction of Mr. William Van Schmus, their representative, the Music Hall has become an institution—it is no longer merely a "picture theatre."

What Mr. Rockefeller's organizing ability has accomplished in exhibiting motion pictures it can, I am sure, accomplish in producing them. And you may well imagine what will be the moral quality of the pictures that will be produced by the Rockefellers! Nor is there any doubt that their entry into the industry will be the signal for an improvement all over the line.

I feel sure that, if you should lend this movement your support, the people of the United States will be grateful to you.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgement and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

A VISIT TO BOSTON.

On October 26th and 27th, last, this writer sat for his first time with the Prudential Committee of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions. At the annual meeting of the Board in Concord, New Hampshire, October 23rd, he was elected to membership on the Prudential Committee. This committee is composed of thirty-six people who do the major part of the work of the Board. The entire committee meets twice a year but the members near Boston meet at least once each month and some of them much more often to consider the detailed affairs of our missionary work around the world. The American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions was organized in 1810 and for several years represented not only Congregational but also Baptist and Presbyterian churches in foreign mission work. It was the first act on the part of American churches to do foreign work.

Members of the Prudential Committee deal with world affairs. They must needs think only in terms of support from American churches but also concerning the effect of activity in countries that are opposed to Christianity as well as those that welcome it. Rev. George Sheperd, one of our missionaries to China, was at the Board meeting to bring the latest news from our churches in China. He was sent by Madame Chiang Kai-Shek, wife of the Generalissimo, because he knows better than anyone the inside story of missionary work as it effects the national government of China. From nine o'clock in the morning until ten o'clock at night, with only a brief time out for two meals, this Prudential Committee remained in session and sought to find the best method for promoting Christianity in far away places of the world. The committee had to struggle with a reduced budget and far too small an income, but it was not willing to call home any more missionaries or to discontinue any of the present work now being carried forward.

It is believed by the members of the committee that the church people will respond to the present emergency needs and that they will give in larger sums for the promotion of Christianity in the countries where we are seeking to establish the Church. Unless there is an increased income, it will be necessary to discontinue more of our missionary program, but so far as this writer can see there is no need for such retrenchment. It is entirely possible for us to increase our contributions and to give to the missionaries over there an adequate support.

The trip to Boston was a delightful experience aside from attending the Prudential Committee meeting. It was a joy to be back at the Divinity School of Yale University for a brief visit with the boys there. Lanson Granger, Jr., Herbert Council, Jr., and Alfonso W. Grissom are representatives from this section. William Dudley and Loring Chase have served as Student Summer Service workers among our people and will be remembered pleasantly. They are happily engaged not only in study but also in Christian service. Yale offers wonderful opportunities in both fields.

It was a delight also to visit in the mission offices in Boston. All the secretaries (servants of the Church) were exceedingly courteous in welcoming a stranger and showing him how the denominational wheels go around. It was two months until Christmas but Santa Claus had just started from the mission rooms to the four corners of the earth with gifts for our friends out there. Editors, business managers, secretaries, busy men and women courteously considered the problems of our Southern Church and clearly explained what the denomination is undertaking to do. In one great building is located the Pilgrim Press with its book store, offices of foreign secretaries, directors of Leadership Training and Missionary Education, editors of "Advance" and "The Missionary Herald." From the windows of this building one can look out to the great Boston State House, the famous Boston commons, to the Congregational Church where several organizations of the Church were formed, and down upon a cemetery where many noted persons are buried, including the writer of "Mother Goose."

If every leader in the Church could visit Boston, and become acquainted with the courteous people who struggle with the problem of making Christianity real around the world and get the "feel" of being a part of the great Church that ministers to needy men in all corners of the earth, they would come back, this writer believes, as he did—more enthused to serve in every possible way the missionary cause.

CONGREGATIONALISTS AND CHRISTIAN CHURCHES.

Before Jesus went out from the last supper to suffer on the cross and undergo a transformation which made Him spiritual rather than physical, He prayed three times that those who were to be His followers should be united in order that the world might believe on Him. Without their unity His cause would have come to naught.

When America was young, people seemed to forget this eloquent and sincere prayer as recorded in the 17th chapter of the Gospel by Saint John. They had ideas of their own which seemed to be worth defending and promoting. If the church of which they were a part did not agree then they established another church and gathered about them followers who would promote their ideas. The world is full of struggling denominations, and America is overbound with her share of them.

In our day leaders of the Church are learning the prayer of Jesus and are seeking to make His prayer come true. Historians will record whether it was first Congregationalists or Christians that sought the fellowship of the other denomination, but those of our day all know full well that in recent years the Congregational and Christian Churches have merged their working program under one united church. They have done it with a sincere desire to help fulfill the prayer of Jesus.

Here and now are some who do not like the merger. Some Congregationalists know nothing of the Christian churches except some small little church. Some Christian Church people know but little or nothing about Congregationalists other than what they have read in the paper or heard somebody say. Those of the two denominations who have come to know each other feel that there is a real contribution which each church can make to the other. So far as we have been able to discover there is no desire on the part of one group to "swallow up" the other. On the contrary there is the most sincere effort to be sure that both groups make their contributions to the other. This writer is glad to testify that most Congregationalists he has known have been exceedingly careful to be courteous, thoughtful, considerate and kind. In some instances they are much more progressive than Christian Church people, but usually with patience they seek to understand our slow moving processes and to conserve the values in our Christian Churches. This writer is not a Congregationalist and never expects to be but he does believe they have made a real contribution to the Christian Church. He is very anxious that the Christian Church with only about one-ninth as many members shall be able to make a distinctive contribution to Congregationalists.

In the Southeast the mutual relationship of the two former church groups is developing in a fine way. The few individuals who fear as to the future may well forget their fears and work zealously to make their contributions to the united Church program. No one wishes them to do less than their best in the line of duty as they see it. In the united fellowship there is to be found a strength which no small group can have. There is an opportunity for world-wide service which is utterly impossible on the part of a little struggling group. It is devoutly to be hoped that Christian Churches will seek in every possible way to bring to Congregationalists the fine spirit of devotion, fidelity, and love for which the Church has been noted, and this writer believes that this is the desire of every person who loves the Christian Church.

USING A PULLMOTOR.

On the most stormy and snowy day we have had this fall officials of the Southern Convention met in Henderson, North Carolina, to see if they could pump new life into the Convention itself and particularly "The Christian Sun." For sometime the life of "The Christian Sun" has seemingly been held in balance. Perhaps it is a matter of drowning or asphyxiation. At any rate the doctors rushed together last week to consider what could be done and they had with them the pullmotor for they thought it would probably have to be used. As a matter of fact, it may be that such an instrument for pumping out foul air and pumping in the new has been in process for sometime. At any rate the Convention has had to give of its vitality and life to sustain its "Sun."

These doctors who met in Henderson last Thursday seemed to be of the opinion that it is very important for "The Christian Sun" to live. They recognize that it is dangerously ill and unless properly cared for may pass out of the picture at any time. But there seemed to be sufficient doctors, nurses and attendants who were willing to serve even at a sacrifice in order that the paper may be restored to normal life and usefulness.

Several suggestions were made concerning what can be done. Some thought to amputate. They would not stop with hands and feet but would take away half of the body itself. Others were afraid that the patient would never survive such an operation. Another suggestion was to reduce the publication price and elect an editor who would serve the Church as a secretary for the Convention and religious education. This appeared to be quite a fine idea but there seemed to be difficulty in locating sufficient funds to set up such an office and do the necessary work. Another suggestion was to combine all of the promotional work of our Southern Convention in one office and make one person responsible (with help, of course) for promotional and editorial work. This was too much of a radical change to be considered suddenly.

But something needed to be done at once and a decision was reached that if carried through will mean a more steady heartbeat for the Church's "Sun." That idea is to see which state can turn in the most new subscriptions to "The Christian Sun" between now and March 1, 1938. North Carolina and Virginia have been rivals and friends for many years. They are at the center of the Christian Church movement. One state has about as many members of Christian churches as the other. It is believed that if these two states will consider the matter of "Christian Sun" subscriptions and will busy themselves about securing new subscribers that within the next three months the paper itself will be headed toward recovery and the churches will be much better for having rendered this service. There are those who think that each state can easily secure 500 subscriptions. This would be an excellent service and doesn't seem to be unusually difficult to do. When divided among the several churches there are not many subscriptions for any church to raise. This kind of use of the pullmotor will really put new life and vitality into "The Christian Sun" and also into the churches.

Will you, therefore, good reader, take hold and help in order that the paper which you are now reading may have a new lease on life and the Church of which you are a part may become more effective? North Carolina will watch to see how many subscriptions Virginia sends in and Virginia will doubtless seek to excel in this as she has excelled in many other things through many long years.

Good motives and personal sympathy will not avail if we lack enough to make the final decision at the critical moment. Beginning a journey will not reach the destination, if we turn back before it is finished.

A full surrender of our will to God will make us willing to abide with His people—in His church—regardless of all obstacles and difficulties to be met. A submission that means less is dishonoring to God and disgraceful to a professed saint.—Annual Lenten Commentary.

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

A review of the statistical tables of the Eastern Virginia Conference for the year 1937 is interesting. Seven churches failed to send in their annual report in time for tabulation before Conference. On this account totals could not be given in the sheets printed for distribution at the annual session. According to the church reports submitted, the following figures and facts represent the work of this Conference for the past year: Total membership for 1936-'39, 818; for 1937-'39, 687—net loss 131 members for the year. Members received by confession, 256; by letter, 229—total received during the year, 485. Loss by death, 124; by letter and revision of church rolls, 492; total losses, 616. Sunday school enrollment for 1936, 6,635; for 1937, 6,573, a net loss of 62 for the year.

The following churches showed a net gain in membership for the year: Antioch, Bethlehem, Burton's Grove, Christian Temple, Cypress Chapel, Eure, First, Norfolk, First, Richmond, Franklin, Holy Neck, Hopewell, Isle of Wight, Liberty Spring, Mt. Carmel, Mt. Zion, Newport News, Oakland, Oak Grove, Old Zion, Suffolk Union (Southampton), Wakefield, Waverly and Windsor. The following churches reported the same total membership for 1937 as 1936: Berea (Nansemond), New Lebanon, Spring Hill and Sarem. The following churches reported a net loss in membership for the year 1937: Barrett's Berea (Norfolk), centerville, Damascus, Dendron, Elm Avenue, First, Richmond, Holland, Ivor, Johnson's Grove, Ocean View, Rosemont, South Norfolk, and Union (Surry). Twenty-four churches showed a net gain; four churches remained the same in net membership; fourteen showed a net loss.

From the financial standpoint the following figures are given: Conference Home Missions, 1936, $1,167.50; 1937, $1,026.00—net loss, $41.50; Conference Fund, 1936, $308.51; 1937, $320.50—net gain, $17.99; Convention Fund, 1936, $1,408.99; 1937, $1,482.00—net gain, $73.01; Convention Home Missions, 1936, $1,458.34; 1937, $1,635.57—net gain, $177.23; Foreign Missions, 1936, $1,513.66; 1937, $1,556.20—net gain, $42.54; Elon College Fund, 1936, $2,807.54; 1937, $3,070.25—net gain, $262.71; Superannuation, 1936, $660.02; 1937, $652.70—net loss, $7.32; Christian Education, 1936, $289.00; 1937, $322.95—net gain, $33.95; Orphanage, 1936, $2,573.63; 1937, $3,070.25—net gain, $496.63. Total raised for all purposes, 1936, $101,811.73; 1937, $101,363.93—net loss, $447.83.

These comparisons are given to give pastors and laymen an opportunity to study the Conference work as a unit. The Annual will not be in print before January and it requires some time to collect this information. Next October will be too late to begin improving the record for 1938. Every church in the Conference should show a gain in membership during the year 1937-'38. Will these fourteen churches showing a net loss and the four churches showing the same net membership for the year 1937, seek to show an increase for 1938? Will all the pastors and laymen undertake to increase membership and offerings for the year 1938? And we must not forget that the first place to begin an aggressive campaign is in the Sunday school. We are spending a great deal more money for Christian Education than in former years, but we are not winning young people for the Sunday school as efficiently and effectively as we might under a more determined personal effort. Elaborate programs are helpful, but personal work is greatly needed in this hour of spiritual challenge. We must concentrate our efforts upon building up the local church if we are to go forward. Conventions and conferences are useless unless they build up the local church. That is the final test of the pastor, and that is his supreme task—to win people for the kingdom and lead them in personal work.

I. W. JOHNSON.

WHAT SAY YOU, BROTHER PASTOR.

On Thursday, December 2nd, a group of faithful ministers from Virginia and another group of faithful ministers and laymen from North Carolina traveled the highways through snow and storm until they met in the Christian Church in Henderson, North Carolina. The purpose of this meeting was to discuss unofficially THE CHRISTIAN SUN, its past, its present, and its future. The discussion revealed that the paper had been of unprecedented value to the church in its program and achievements, that it had served as the medium through which the church had propagated its purposes and extended its borders, that every institution of the church is indebted to this agency for its founding and program. It was further discovered, however, that the paper is in serious financial difficulties and that the Convention itself is seriously involved because of its financial obligations to THE CHRISTIAN SUN for publication, and further that if the paper is to continue its weekly visits at its present efficiency, additional funds must be secured. At present the Mission Board, the Orphanage, the College, and the Board of Christian Education are contributing a total of $1,750 annually as a subsidy to the paper. It seemed to be the feeling of those present that it would be extremely unwise to increase this levy against these boards, and that there were no other boards of the church that would be willing to contribute. The Convention itself is unable to continue its present contributions, and to increase this levy would be futile.

The only possible source for additional revenue, it seemed, was THE CHRISTIAN SUN itself. The increase would be realized through increased circulation. The Board of Publications presented a proposal by which, if adopted by the Executive Committee of the Southern Convention of Congregational-Christian Churches, an additional three hundred paid subscriptions for the paper would provide sufficient funds to pay for editing and publishing the paper but would not provide for the present deficit of more than $3,000.

It occurs to your writer that it is entirely possible to secure 1,000 additional subscribers for the paper. Should this be realized, it would be possible to pay current expenses and within two years or more retire the debt. However, to my knowledge, THE CHRISTIAN SUN has been calculating against possibilities of this kind for the last fifteen years. Instead of increasing the list of subscribers, it has been steadily declining. From 1921 to 1930 we published and mailed weekly from twenty-seven hundred to three thousand copies of THE CHRISTIAN SUN. Today we are publishing and mailing a little more than fourteen hundred copies with slightly less than one thousand paid-up subscriptions which seems to me to be a serious reflection upon the interest and loyalty of our great church. It seems evident that if the paper is to continue, it must have a wider circulation. The question has been asked: "Is the church justified in paying $7,000 annually ($2,000 paid by THE CHRISTIAN SUN) for a paper with a

Dear Children:—

If I should ask you to name the season that you like best, no doubt all of you would say Autumn. Who wouldn't? Everywhere we see such beautiful autumn colors in leaves, flowers, and in the grasses that grow along the road side and in the fields. Then it is the nicest time of the year to take a hike or go on a picnic across the fields and through the woods. It is the harvest time, also, when bushels of apples and corn, bags of peanuts, and so many other things are being harvested that makes us all just love the great Outdoors. It is truly the time of the year when "The heavens declare the glory of God; and the firmament sheweth His handiwork."—Psalms 19:1, 2. The things God has made tell us of His wisdom, power, and love. I want to share with you a little story about a little girl named Gloria.

One morning Gloria, who was only three years old, was out on the porch playing. Little Gloria listened quietly for some time to the birds singing in the trees in the yard. Then she turned to her mother and said, "Mother, the birdies are talking to me." "What are they saying, dear," said Mother. Little Gloria smiled and said, "They are saying 'Gloria, we love you.'"

I think that is what God is trying to say to you and me when He gives us so many beautiful things to see and enjoy in the autumn. I think He is saying, "My children, I love you."

Perhaps some of you would like to share some of your experiences of the autumn with us. Maybe you would like to write a Christmas story, or a poem or maybe send us a riddle to enjoy. If you have something you would like to share with us, whether it is a story, a letter, or poem, send it to 514 South Main St., Norfolk, Virginia and we will teach one another through THE CHRISTIAN SUN page.

You do not know my name and I do not know yours, but if you will write me, giving your name and address, I will let you know who I am. Then we can work together in making a fine children's page in our paper.

THE TREASURE HUNT.

"Tomorrow," announced Miss Mallory, "the class is going on a treasure hunt. Each one must carry his own lunch. The one who finds the greatest treasure will be on the honor roll for the coming month."

Friday was a clear, cool autumn day, just the day for an outing, and all of the girls and boys were eagerly awaiting the signal to start. Colored bits of paper marked the many trails while arrows painted on paper and tacked on trees pointed out directions.

After awhile all the groups started at a given signal, some getting on false trails and having to retrace their steps in order to find the trail. Each one was busy looking for something to put in his knapsack while following the right trail, also. It was a jolly and happy group on its way to a great surprise and a happy day. But Mary was not too busy keeping the trail not to notice a poorly dressed little girl on the way, whose mother was unable to send her to school. The little girl looked so longingly after the children in front and looked so lonely that Mary asked permission to

A PRAYER.

Dear Father, there's the other boy tonight, Who's praying to a god that's made of wood,

He asks it to take care of him till light,
And love him—but it wont do any good.

He is so far that I cannot make him hear;
I'd call to him and tell him, if I could,
That you'll take care of him, that you are near,
And love him—for his god is made of wood.

I know he'd ask you if he only knew,
I know he'd love to know you if he could.

Dear God, take care of him, and love him, too—
The other boy, whose god is made of wood.

take her along. After Nina's mother had granted Mary's request, Nina, the lonely little girl found herself along with the group of happy children.

By and by the trail end up right in the heart of the woods at a big bonfire. Lunch was spread and all began to eat. Mary remembered when she saw Nina that she had no lunch, so she gave her some of hers. After the lunch and after the marshmallow toast, they all played games and sang songs around the fire. Then they started back to the school house.

Back at school all the classes exhibited what they had found. Some had knapsacks full of treasures of the woods and fields, while others had found very little. Mary happened to be one who had found very little because she had been too busy doing other things. Imagine her surprise when Miss Mallory called for her to come to the front. Miss Mallory said, "Mary, I didn't call for you because you had the largest number of things in your knapsack, but because you saw something none of the rest saw and did something no one else suggested. Mary, I pin on you the honors of the school because you have shown unselfishness in sharing your good time with one who was not so fortunate as you. You not only asked to take Nina with us, but you shared your lunch, your games, and fun with her."

A FAMOUS GYPSY BOY.

A friendly pat on the back, either figurative or actual, frequently goes a long way in restoring courage and determination to the discouraged and oppressed. A kindly word here and there also has marked the turning point of many lives which otherwise might have been drab, commonplace, and useless.

One wonders what might have happened to the life of one of the foremost Christian evangelists of modern times had not Dwight L. Moody and Ira D. Sankey decided to take a drive in the English countryside in 1874.

The great evangelist and equally famous soloist and song leader usually set Saturday aside as a day of rest when conducting their great gospel campaigns in the British Isles. On the day in mention they decided to visit Epping Forest, near London.

Driving aimlessly about and relaxing in the bracing air, Moody and Sankey visited a gypsy camp to speak to two men who had been converted and were doing missionary work among the other gypsies. Seeing the handsome horse and buggy in their camp, several young gypsy boys hurried up to inspect the visitors.

Sankey leaned out and gently slapped one of the youngsters on the back, saying:

"I hope the Lord makes a preacher of you, young man."

The scene now shifts to Brooklyn in the United States, and time advances fifteen years. Sankey and a friend are driving through Prospect Park.

"Do you recall a little gypsy boy standing by your carriage, and do you recall slapping him on the back and saying you hoped he would be a preacher?"

"Now, that you mention it, I recall it distinctly."

"Well, Mr. Sankey, I was that boy."

And that man was the now famous and beloved Gipsy Smith.

THE DEADLY PERIL. (A Correspondence.)

Orlando, Florida,
December 4, 1937.

A young man was telling the writer just now that he made a trip to New York and return the past week, the distance as he made it going up being thirteen hundred miles, which he covered in twenty-nine hours. He was the sole driver in the car, and stayed at the wheel without sleeping or relaxing the entire journey. Returning, a youngster with him relieved him at the wheel now and then, and so he made better time. During his two day's stay in New York and the twenty-six hundred miles traveled going and coming he slept nine hours. Did it not tire him? "Oh! not much. I had a radio and turned in on interesting programs and so enjoyed it all and feel none the worse for wear." Nothing unusual or spectacular about that, the reader will say. And there isn't. Running 60 to 70 miles an hour now, and averaging 50 miles per hour as this young man did, is nothing out of the ordinary. And staying at the wheel without sleep two days and nights is common place and ordinary, also. And there is the whole secret and substance of our day, and tells its own story. It explains why our hospitals are being filled with nervous wrecks and our cemeteries with bodies who have died—been killed before their day. The automobile is now our deadliest foe, more so than war, famine, or pestilence.

From 1776 to 1935, a period of 169 years all wars in our nation's history took 244,357 lives. From 1920 to 1935—just fifteen years—automobiles took 388,936 lives. In 1936 our motor vehicle death total was 37,800—an all time high record. And 1937 so far shows a considerable increase over that of last year, and bids fair to set another all time record. In addition to this number of deaths last year, 105,000 were permanently disabled, and 1,200,000 were temporarily disabled. This was one death for every 88 miles of our roads, one permanent disability for each 32 miles, and one temporary disability for each three miles of road. Good roads and improved cars are constantly increasing, rather than decreasing fatalities and disabilities.

In 1936, for instance, the nation's death toll by auto was more than doubled what it was in 1923. No, there was nothing unusual in what a young man did in covering two thousand, six hundred miles in twice that many hours, for nine out of ten who tell you of an auto trip will say little of what they saw or learned on the journey, but of how many miles they traveled and how quickly. In fact, our chief thought now is not of going or coming, but of arriving. And fortunate, indeed, are we if we arrive with car and person uninjured.

Well, they are arriving in Florida now in troupes and droves—such of those who are not crippled or killed on the way.

Well, the fruits are ripening here now and the green of citrus trees is all bedecked with gold and yellow. Our best ladies and gentlemen some time make one error in blending colors for their apparel, but nature never does. No colors in nature are mismatched. When our Creator made an orange tree of very deep and lusty green, He made the most golden and yellow of all fruits to trim it with. And the blend is perfect, not gorgeous nor glaring, but beautiful, restful, satisfying to the eye. And we are to hear, see, and taste much of oranges and grape fruit this winter—our whole, wide country is. This morning's paper states that the citrus growers of Florida face the greatest danger in all their experience, and for two reasons. First, California, her competitor, is well organized and advertised for handling the unusual crop in that State. Secondly, never, in all her history has Florida had such an abundant crop of both oranges and grape fruit as it has this year: therefore, "the growers should get together and only have certain days or weeks for shipping, and not too much then." So all should have the blessings and benefits of citrus fruits, and in abundance at low cost this winter. And in winter when vegetables are scarce and meats are the principal diet in many homes, physicians say oranges and grape fruit should be used in abundance for good health and proper nourishment. Again, as always, our benevolent and loving Father has done His best to supply the needs of all His children. If we self-willed and disobedient ones would only learn to obey Him, and seek in youth and age to do His will, what a glorious world this would be, in which to live, and what a life of joy and gladness this would be!

SHADOWS ON THE HILLS.

As the autumn breeze brought the leaves down from the trees, shadows hung low and dark over the hills for a while. The Elmores gave up the work here and made their way to other fields of service leaving a place among these hills which will be hard to fill. The Elmores have worked hard here and many of their dreams for our hills did not come true, but they are leaving friends among our hills and a place for others to labor which will be a little more smooth for the next workers here.

Some people try to leave a field in a shape that no one can succeed after they have left it, but I feel sure that our hills are at least some better than when the Elmores came. How much has been done no one can say, but the past two years are not lost.

I want to express our thanks to the Elmores for their service here. I wish that more of their dreams could have come true. For years I have been dreaming of workers on this field who can give several years of their lives in these rugged hills of old Virginia, and by so doing, get these hilly churches on their feet. I fully realize it will take the best years of someone's or perhaps several people's lives, but I feel that it is worth the fight. So it is with a sinking heart that I see workers leave this field. However, each one has left something here. Each one has played a part in the making of a new life for us of the hills. Even the mistakes may have helped us to see the better way—the way of the Cross that leads home.

No one has ever left our hills who will be missed more than Mrs. Elmore. She has been an ideal wife and mother for our hills. Her friendly smile and sincere prayers linger still in these rugged peaks of Carroll County. "Her price is far above rubies." Truly, Mrs. Elmore is Christian in the strongest sense of the word. May God bless her as she goes out from our hills.

Rev. Mr. Elmore preached his farewell sermon on the mount, November 7th. He brought a message on "A Place Prepared for a Prepared People," and pointed us to the way that leads Home. A student from Elon College sang—"Can the World See Jesus in You?" I was reminded once more that there are those among the throng who still love and serve God and man. It was an inspiration indeed to hear the young man sing, for he put his soul into it. When I hear the youth of our country sing praise to God, the clouds lift and the dark shadows almost flee away. Ah, surely there are enough sincere young people in our nation to carry the work of our Master forward and hold the church up forever. I hope more of our young people come to our hills. I like to shake hands with them and feel their handclasp sure, firm and strong. As long as Christian character is being built, there is something to live for, even though the clouds hang low above the mountains, and the shadows are a little dark at times.

Rev. B. J. Earp has very kindly offered to fill our pulpit twice a month until a man comes to live on this field. It was good to see Mr. Earp's friendly smile and hear him pray among the hills. I was sorry to give him so cold a welcome when he came November 20th, but I taught him how to warm one side by the open fire and then turn the other side. However, I am not sure he ever got either side very warm. A raw wind was cutting around the bend in the old Mountain trail when he came, and a little snow added a snap to the air. But I did my best to give him a warm welcome. I told him to turn around before the fire.

And now our hills are getting ready for winter. Chilly old December will be here next with a snap and a sparkle that means Christmas. Then the shadows flee away. For Christ came to all people, even the people of our hills. Yes, His Star swung above the mountains in that night long ago.

May God bless those who have helped to make the Star shine for those who walked in darkness.

Love from all,

VICTORIA OF THE HILLS,

OUR CHURCH OF JAPAN AND THE WAR.

The following is a translation of a statement regarding the Sino-Japanese conflict adopted October 8, 1937, by the Kumiai Christian Church of Japan. It came to me directly from the president of that Congregational-Christian body, and the expressed desire that I share it with the religious periodicals of America.

The Statement.

"We are deeply impressed and much inspired by the edict of His majesty at the opening session of the 72nd Imperial Parliament in which it is declared how our nation had hoped for the cooperation of the two nation which alone will establish the peace of the Far East and of the world. However, we regret that the Government of China has been unwilling to cooperate with us, thus at last bringing about the present troubles.

"We are very grateful to those of the Imperial Army and Navy who are loyal and faithful to the utmost in carrying out the will of His majesty and we, too, wish to face the present crisis in the same sacrificial spirit. We will take part actively in the spiritual mobilization, guiding the people in their spiritual life and creating the spirit of endurance.

"We pray that peace may come quickly and hope that the day may speedily come when the Christians of the two nations will cooperate to establish permanent peace in the Far East."

53RD NIPPON KUMIAI KIRISUTO
KYOKAI ANNUAL MEETING.

Comment.

The only comment I need to quote is one which came with the statement from an American Board Missionary in Japan:

"When we think back to the days of the World War and the position of the American Church at that time and when we consider the differences in governmental organization, the statement of the Kumiai Church takes on added significance at this time. In any event, we are assured of your sympathetic understanding and wise handling of its use."

Commending this to your most careful consideration, I remain,

NOTICE!

Inquiries are being received by the Presidents of our Women's Missionary Conferences concerning our days of mission study for this year. Some of our conferences were able to make this definite announcement, others met before detailed arrangements were completed. All of our groups, however, have had the good news that Miss Ruth Seabury of the American Board for Foreign Missions is to be our leader. This fact alone assures us of a good attendance, for anyone who has ever heard Miss Seabury would not wish to miss the opportunity of hearing her again; those who have not will welcome this privilege. There is probably no person of our united church who has visited so nearly every field of our Missionary Endeavor. Beside knowing her subject, "The Moslem World," there are few speakers who have her ability and charm in presenting a spirit-filled message.

Miss Seabury comes to Elon, February 14th; she will spend a week on the campus in special meetings with the students of the college. On Monday, the 21st, she will lead the North Carolina Women's Mission groups at Elon in their day of mission study, giving the evening of that day to the young people of our churches who may be able to attend. A similar program will be held in the Valley of Virginia, February 23rd, and at Suffolk, the 25th.

Of course, it is desired that all churches of every denomination share these services if possible. Pastors and presidents of missionary societies throughout our conferences are urged to see that such invitations be given to other churches of their communities before the first of February, if possible.

LEAKESVILLE, VIRGINIA, CHURCH.

The Missionary Society held its annual Thanksgiving service the third Sunday night. Special Thanksgiving music was sung by the choir. A responsive reading on Thanksgiving was also read by the choir. Miss Doris Sours gave a recitation on "What I Am Thankful For." We had as our guest speaker Miss Ethel Nunn, of Luray. She delivered a very impressive address on Thanksgiving. Our pastor, Rev. W. J. Andes, gave a fine sermon on Thanksgiving the third Sunday morning. Our Sunday school is getting along very nicely under the leadership of R. O. Rothgeb. A committee is starting work on a Christmas program.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church"

MISS EMILY CARLETON, Editor, 541 Osceola Ave., Winter Park, Fla.

NEWS OF THE HOLIDAY CONFERENCE.

The response from letters to Southeast and State Pilgrim Fellowship officers concerning the Holiday Conference to be held in Greensboro, December 28-30, has been unusually fine. However, there are many of you who have not yet let us in on the fact that you are planning to attend. We would like very much to know about this just as soon as you know. The Southeast Superintendents and resource leaders have responded in a fine way and are working hard to set up a worthwhile program. We are anxious to know just how many of you are going to attend, and thus benefit from all this planning they are doing.

Our president, Earle Ward, Winter Park, Florida, would like to know if you are planning to attend. So would the people in the Greensboro Church, who are planning for our entertainment. In fact, they must know by December 20th at the latest. If you think that it will be possible for you to attend, please drop Earle Ward a card and tell him so—and about many others you know of who are going, too.

One car-load is definitely going to the Conference from Florida, one from Tennessee area, and two from Georgia. Let us hear from you who live in that great North Carolina-Virginia section.

"ONLY TWELVE MORE SHOPPING DAYS BEFORE CHRISTMAS."

Many of you are already preparing for Christmas—either by planning to go home, to go on a trip, or at least by saving your pennies in preparation for the big event.

We hope that in your young people's group you have begun your planning for Christmas by getting material for a Christmas program for presentation sometime during the holidays. Don't wait until the last minute and then find you do not have sufficient time to get the program materials you need. Write now to the Board of Christian Education, 514 South Main St., Norfolk, Virginia, for such program helps, or to Pilgrim Press, 14 Beacon St., Boston, Massachusetts.

We hope, also, that your Christmas planning in your young people's group will include doing something for those less fortunate than you, whether it be by a special offering to help with your local welfare work, the packing of some baskets for needy families, or playing Santa Claus to some children whose Christmas would otherwise be a scanty one.

And then, as Christian young people, it seems that we should really try to do our Christmas shopping early and not wait for that last hectic rush. If we could work in a store once during that season of the year, we would realize how hard it is on the clerks when we all wait until the last minute to buy gifts. Often they are so worn out that they cannot enjoy their Christmas vacation. And most of this frantic rush at the last minute is unnecessary, if we would determine to do our shopping ahead of time this year.

Furthermore, we will approach Christmas with the wrong spirit if we persist in leaving everything until the last minute and working frantically on wrapping and purchasing gifts until late Christmas Eve. Those of us who like to approach the Christmas season with a true spirit of thankfulness and joy for the supreme gift of the ages, can hardly have that feeling while dashing around until the eleventh hour and then being so tired that Christmas becomes just a time to sleep late.

Let us endeavor this year to carry out that resolve we always make right after Christmas—to do our planning for Christmas ahead of time, so that Christmas can be a season of worship for both ourselves and others.

A LETTER.

Dear Delegates to the Holiday Conference:

We, here in Greensboro, are all excited about the Christmas Conference. We are looking forward to greeting our old friends, meeting new ones, and having all of you as our guests.

Plans are now under way to make this Christmas Conference one of the most successful conferences we young people have ever had. We are expecting a cheerful, thoughtful, interested group of young people; and we are anxious to greet you as warmly as is possible.

It would help our committees on arrangement a great deal if you, who are planning to be with us, will drop us a card telling us of your plans by

WHAT DO WE MEAN BY THE SPIRIT OF CHRISTMAS?

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR
DECEMBER 19, 1937.

SCRIPTURE: Matt. 2: 11;
Luke 2: 10-14.

Daily Readings—

Monday—The Christmas Spirit is the Spirit of Christ—Phil. 2: 1-5.

Tuesday—The Spirit of Service—Matt. 20: 25-29.

Wednesday—The Spirit of Adoration—Rev. 5: 9-14.

Thursday—The Spirit of Generosity—II Cor. 9: 6-15.

Friday—The Spirit of Sympathy—Lk. 10: 30-37.

Saturday—The Spirit of Peace—Rom. 14: 19.

In the Christian Endeavor World Magazine on this topic one discovers a service of worship and suggested program in the nature of an informal dramatization. Any Christian Endeavor would do well to use it as suggested.

Have plenty of variety in the meeting. Decorate the room in an appropriate manner. Introduce anything which you feel will help the meeting. For music and hymns use Christmas Carols. Plan to bring Christmas joy to people in your community who are lonely or sick. This is the time to think of others. Carry Christmas baskets to those in need. The group may want to visit homes of the shut-ins and sing Christmas Carols. With many people the spirit of Christmas has been lost; with many it must still be discovered. Let each person do his or her part to create the true Christmas spirit in the hearts of people.

CHRISTMAS REFUGE.

We thank Thee, God, at Christmas time
Thou turn'st us all away
From grinding gears and steel and stone
To stars and sheep and hay.

From politics and knavish tricks,
From deeds which make us rife!
From marts of trade, and pomp's parade,
To a dimpled baby's smile.

Help us, O God, at Christmas time,
While holy bells do ring,
'Mid jarring sounds and bedlam cries
To hear the angels sing.

'Mid force and fist and cloudy mist
We need Thee from above,
With a new-found peace, and sin's release,
In a Christ-Child's tender love.

CHRISTIAN FELLOWSHIP.

LESSON XI—DECEMBER 12, 1937.

GOLDEN TEXT: Our fellowship is with the Father, and with His Son Jesus Christ.—I John 1:3.

LESSON: I John 1:1-7; Rev. 21:1-7.
The Christian hymn-writer put it thus:

Blest be the tie that binds,
Our hearts in Christian love;
The fellowship of kindred minds,
Is like to that above.

Our fears, our hopes, our aims, are gone,
Our comforts and our cares.
We share our mutual woes,
Our mutual burdens bear,
And often for each other flows,
The sympathizing tear.

He was saying in poetic form what the writers of today's Sunday school lesson were saying in prose. In the one as in the other, fellowship means companionship, community of interests, sharing of life itself. If it be true, therefore, as another poet has put it, that we are a part of all that we have seen and met, how necessary as well as desirable is it that we shall have fellowship with these persons who will enrich our lives. And how obligatory is it that we shall give to others the best possible self, so that through their fellowship with us, their lives may be enriched. Fellowship is thus one of the most serious of responsibilities, as well as one of the greatest privileges.

In today's lesson, generally speaking, there are several phases or aspects of fellowship. There is, first of all:

Our Fellowship With Jesus Christ the Son of God.

Jesus Christ was, as John took pains to point out, a historic person. Docetism, which taught that Jesus just "seemed to be," that there was no actual reality to God incarnated in the flesh, was rampant at the time this letter was written. But John bears testimony to the fact that Jesus was a historic person, that His disciples including John himself had seen Him and touched Him, and that they had fellowship with Him during His days in the flesh. But more, they still had fellowship with Jesus Christ. Although He had gone from them in physical presence, He was with them in actual spiritual presence. "Our fellowship is with His Son Jesus Christ." Here is one of the most precious affirmations of the gospel—that men here and now may have fellowship, an intimate comradeship, a mutual sharing of life and interests, with their Risen Lord. He has not left us, He is with us, and as we work at our tasks or walk life's pathways, He is the Companion, the Comforter, "the One called to our side" as the word literally means.

Our Fellowship With God Through Jesus Christ.

John says "Yea and our fellowship is with the Father." During His earthly ministry the disciples realized that as they had come into intimate fellowship with their Master, they had unconsciously come into fellowship with God. God was available for them in Jesus, and it was this fact, wrought out in experience that led them to believe that He was indeed

ASPIRATION.

Rev. A. Campbell Tucker.

Let me teach in a school by the side of the road,
Where the dirty-faced children play—
The boy and the girl, cut off from the world,
Lonely the live-long day.

I would not prod, nor use the rod,
On little maid or man,
Let me teach in a school by the side of
the road,
And do the best I can.

There are children wise in their own eyes,
To be found in the city schools;
There are children bright as the stars of night
Who know all the grammar's rules.

Yet I would not teach those within reach
Of the city's vaunted "High"—
Just let me today, by life's highway,
Help the lonely to try.

Let me teach in a school by the side of the road
The children of the poor;
Little bare feet unused to the street
Pattering 'round my door.

These humble folk with their heavy yoke
Beckon me back to the sod;
Out under the stars let me teach the three R's,
And lead a child to God!

—In The Southern Churchman.

the Son of God. And of course when He was glorified after His resurrection, they still felt that through fellowship with Christ they had fellowship with God. For all practical purposes they are one and the same—he who is in fellowship with Christ is in fellowship with God, and he who is in fellowship with God is in fellowship with Christ.

Our Fellowship With One Another.

This fellowship with God through Christ was a rich and rewarding thing, so rich and rewarding that John wanted others to know about it and to enter into it. "That which we have seen and heard declare we unto you also, that ye also may have fellowship with us; yea and our fellowship is with the Father, and with His Son Jesus Christ." Like calls unto like. The "fellowship of kindred minds is like to that above." There is, to be sure some rich fellowship in life outside of the church and religion. But the highest fellowship is the fellowship of those who are united to Christ in a common loyalty and love and life, and hence are united to one another. Human fellowship at its best can come to its best only as it is sanctified by fellowship with God.

To be sure this fellowship is more than an idle boast. "If we say that we have fellowship with Him and walk in darkness, we lie and do not the truth. But if we walk in the light as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ His Son cleanseth us from all sin." Every man who desires to have fellowship with God through Christ must walk in the light, must renounce the hidden things of darkness, must keep his commandments. And every man who professes to have fellowship with Him must give evidence of it with his life as well as with his lips.

Our Continuing Fellowship.

Back of the beauty and the imagery of the vision of John of the New Jerusalem, coming down out of heaven from God, the city in which God had made all things new, and from which there had been banished all tears and death and pain and mourning, and in which God himself would be with His people, and be their God, there is the prophetic witness of the abiding fellowship in the house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. Whatever else heaven may be, it is a place or condition in which through continued conscious personal existence, we have fellowship with God, with Christ, and with all who through faith have found an abundant entrance into the Father's house of many mansions, eternal in the heavens.

At this writing, Rev. A. R. Flowers is working with the people of New Town Freewill Baptist Church in the Lake City section of South Carolina. Brother Flowers is a firm believer in Christian education, and he certainly has few equals in creating a deeper interest in the minds of those with whom he works as to the great need of better qualifications for effective Christian service. The subjects for his lectures are selected from Bible topics.

MONDAY.

A FULL FLEDGED CHRISTIAN.

"And ye shall bear witness, because ye have been with Me."—John 15:27.

A full fledged Christian is one known as a Christian both in the sight of men and of God.

First, a Christian is one who has met Christ in his life and found in that meeting a friendship that relieves him of distresses, changes purposes of his heart and gives him certain senses of direction. As such, people will say, he is a Christian.

This certainty of direction is his inspiration and boon to Christian living. He carries in his soul the sound of the voice of Christ to "bring forth" fruit, "meet for repentance"; "to be a workman that needeth not to be ashamed"; to be a witness of the gospel, of the truth and of the good life to every creature. And when he does so, God says he is a Christian. It is a wonderful feeling to believe that God would say of our work today, "well done."

Prayer—Our Heavenly Father, through Jesus Christ, Thy Son, and our Saviour, give us Thy safe graces and inspire us to be daily witnesses, we ask for Christ's sake. Amen.

TUESDAY.

CONSCIOUS KNOWLEDGE OF JESUS.

"True worshippers shall worship the Father in spirit and truth; for the Father seeketh such to worship Him."—John 4:23.

While visiting in a strange city one Sunday, we entered a church for worship. The pastor made an enthusiastic plea to come to the next service and "have a good time; have a conscious knowledge of Jesus and the blessedness of His presence and leadership."

There were only a few people present, the most of them elderly and unemotional. All but a few sat back in the vast auditorium. During prayer, they sat bolt upright, watching the pastor as he undertook to pray for almost everything.

The sermon was delivered with explosive emphasis and there seemed to be no evident feeling or sentiment beyond their passive presence. If there was a "good time" in being there or any consciousness of God's presence, it was not manifested. If Christ had been there in person, we wonder what would have happened.

It is tragic to realize that worship is so passive today. If there is one thing above all else to be prayed for by Christians as a unit, it is worship in His Spirit.

Prayer—Our Father, we know not what to pray for as we ought but help us as individuals to seek the fire of the Holy Spirit in our own souls. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH.

"Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord."—Psalm 23:12.

"When will the morality and Christianity of the nations catch up with the voice of the Church?"

There are words which we heard on the radio as we dialed for something. It seems too true that individuals, groups, states, nations and international relations are actuated more with the voice of selfishness, the voice of wealth, the voice of pride than they are with the voice of God.

When will the voice of the individual arise in the church as a whole and the voice of the church raise in the nation and direct the spirit of international affairs. God is waiting for His children to send His voice into the world. Only that will save.

Prayer—Our Father, again we pray for the Christ spirit in our souls today that we may rightly fit in the structure of Thy kingdom in this world. Amen.

THURSDAY.

A GREAT NEED.

"We ought to obey God rather than men."—Acts 5:29.

To obey God rather than men is one of the great needs of God's children today. The first realization should be, "God's way is best."

To obey God and follow Christ at any cost, is a guarantee of ultimate success. "God doeth all things well to them that love and serve Him."

The evangelization of the world is to make men realize this guarantee of the Lord and cast their lots with Him to help make the world right and a fit place to live in. Any part that one may have in this, however infinitesimal it may be, makes one a partner with God in His great work.

Prayer—Our Father, we know not what to pray for as we ought. Make us as Thy hired servants to do Thy bidding. In Christ's name, we ask it. Amen.

FRIDAY.

CHRISTIANS WITHOUT THE PRICE.

"If any man will come after me, let him deny himself and take up his cross and follow me."—Matt. 16:24.

This is the status of most Christians, desiring to be Christians and yet unwilling to pay the price. They are Christians nominally but they are not "working at it"; "no time", "not able", "I want a good time", "I must work my garden", etc. These are the excuses rendered for inactivity in Christian work.

Jesus is standing in Pilot's Hall, Friendless, forsaken by one and all, Harken! what meaneth the sudden call: What will you do with Jesus?

Jesus is standing on trial still, You can be false to Him if you will, You can be faithful thro' good or ill, What will you do with Jesus?

Will you evade Him as Pilot tried? Or will you choose Him, what'er betide? Vainly you struggle from Him to hide, What will you do with Jesus?

Prayer—(Say the Lord's Prayer, or pray as you feel).

SATURDAY.

THE TIES THAT LAST.

"God setteth the solitary in families."—Psalm 68:6.

One effect of the depression has been the widespread discovery of the value of the family. Millions of destitute persons have taken refuge with their families.

All this has set brains to working. The preciousness of the family is being freshly understood. Religion's place in the home is being revalued.

These are good days in which to get down to family fundamentals. Grace at table; family prayers; group singing of the old hymns and united attendance at church.

It is time to cultivate the graces of family life—and the grace of God which makes possible the Christian home.

Prayer—Thou art our Father, O God; and Thou didst send Thy Son to dwell in an earthly home. May He abide in our homes, too. Amen.

SUNDAY.

A STATE OF MIND.

"Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus."—Philippians 2:5-11.

Creeeds, codes, rituals, organizations, are all inadequate to express fully the Christian Way; which is a life.

Men may differ about these. But the mind of Christ, expressed in a disciple's conduct, is beyond all controversy.

To have the mind of Christ is to have acquired His way of looking at things; His attitude toward God and man.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D., Pastor.

"BLESSED ARE YE THAT SOW BESIDE ALL WATERS."
(Isiah 32: 20.)

By REV. VICTOR B. CHICOINE,
Winter Park, Florida.

"All waters"; I take this scripture to mean that the men and women who are willing to serve God must also be willing to serve childhood, youth, and age; serve the educated and the illiterate; serve regardless of color of skin; serve the sinner and the saint; serve in peace and in war; serve in life and death. But somewhere along the march of history certain banks of certain streams have been left poorly and cheaply cultivated.

Seek the choice spirits; the cultured and refined men and women of your community. Do not fail to go where all is lovely when the opportunity is yours. For this is a part of life—and one of the streams of life. But also never forget that it is only a part, and only one of the streams of life that "shall make glad the city of God."

As I study the Gospels it more and more appears to me that while Christ did sow beside the cultured waters of His day that He was more often present with His love, patience, and strength beside those other streams where the less privileged lived. I heard a young minister once say, who has a parish in the poorest section of the city, where men and women struggle for a livelihood, that it was his privilege to serve the underprivileged! It was not that he was paid for it; it was not even his duty; it was his privilege to serve the underprivileged!

That night our Saviour broke bread for the last time the results of sowing beside all waters were shown. About the table were gathered men from all walks of life—but they were an earnest and willing group. They were men who would blunder in the days that were to come, but they were also men who would die for their Lord and for those things of the spirit for which He stood. That day our Saviour died on the cross the results of His sowing beside all waters were shown. There on the ground below Him stood women from all walks in life who had been redeemed by Him. And they were the beginning of that mighty host who have gone out only to save their sisters, but to sow beside all waters!

Now, let's face the test squarely. The truth is that too often we have been very particular concerning those who would worship with us. That same spirit was back there in New Testament days. We need but to recall that scene when the lofty brows of some of the adherents of Jesus were wrinkled and they were deeply offended because of a woman with a reputation dared to seek Jesus. There are churches that have by means of social pressure, cold greeting, kept from their fellowship any nondescript group, or those with a tinted skin, or those who lacked the necessary amount of blue blood that certain communities required for social standing.

I have on my desk before me a picture that I recently clipped from a most conservative magazine called the "National Republic" that I have received for years. It shows a white man and a colored man shaking hands. And underneath the picture are these words: "James W. Ford, Negro Candidate for Vice-President on the Communist Ticket in 1936, Shaking Hands with Earl Browder, the Red's Presidential Candidate." The Communist Party, which I oppose, is frightening the world, because it dares to sow beside all waters. It sees countless men and women, unhappy, dissatisfied, eager for change, any kind of change. It may be that these people are suffering as a result of their own folly. And it may be that the leaders of the Communist Party seeing them in this condition are using them. But we need to realize that it is a sowing beside all waters—and that they are unafraid of social distinctions—and any one can become a member of the party.

It may be that the leaders are toying with the word and the idea of brotherhood. But at least we must admit that it is not for religious reasons, for they would scorn that term, but for political reasons. All the grain of the world is considered grist for their political mill! In contrast to all this I distinctly remember three years ago, when I came to the Southland for the first time, I was warned that I must never be seen shaking hands with a Negro. I say, before me is a picture of a white man and a Negro shaking hands—for political reasons.

I do not say that shaking hands with Negroes will solve the great problem of the South. But I do say that the politicians in the Communist Party have discovered something that may add millions to their party. And what have the men and women of the church to offer? Is it not true, I ask again, that the banks of certain streams have been cheaply and poorly cultivated.

I want you to notice that this text, found in the Old Testament, is really a Beatitude! And how nobly and splendidly it stands beside those other Beatitudes uttered by Jesus hundreds of years later. "Blessed are ye that mourn—Blessed are the pure in spirit—Blessed are they that hunger and thirst after righteousness—Blessed are ye that sow beside all waters!" It is saturated with the spirit of the New Testament. That lone man of long ago, Isaiah, had caught the idea that later Jesus Christ was to blazon forth.

But I am reasonably sure that what some people would call blessed, others would give a name entirely of the opposing meaning. It is the truth that they who have had the courage of their convictions to sow beside all waters in the spirit of Jesus of Nazareth have often been called fools—soft! How few times outside of the Bible have men and women been called blessed who have toiled at the unlovely and thankless tasks of life?

And one may well ask: "How can it possibly be conceived that one is blessed who sows beside all waters, especially turbid, turgid, dark whirling waters?" I'll not answer you. But you ask the soul of William Booth, of Lord Shaftsbury, of David Livingstone, of Jane Addams, of Jerry McCauley, of Elizabeth Fry, of Jeremiah, Hosea, and Isaiah.

One can say: "I choose to sow beside the waters of joy where the saints are to be found; where waters are placid; where art centers flourish; where the tones of men and women are soft and cultured; where there is no choking dust nor fumes from factories; where there are no ugly sights nor smells." And do we have people like that! But they are no comrades of the living Christ!

FAMILY ALTAR.

They who have the mind of Christ have also the glowing heart; for their spirit is suffused by the sense of unity with Him and of obedience to Him.

Prayer—We cannot understand all about Thee and Thy will, O Father; but we are humbly grateful that it is possible for us to know the mind of Christ, and to obey it. Amen.

The Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:—

Our Financial report carries us above another rung in our financial ladder this week. The fourteenth rung is behind us and we are climbing toward the fifteenth one. Just a good strong push will get us up to it. We still lack $5,416.41 being to our goal for the year. We have till the first of the year to reach it. Will you be one to push us a little higher?

Let every church and every individual come to our rescue—and give us a push.

Our children are beginning to look forward to Christmas. One little girl came to the office today with a picture of a pretty doll in her hand and said that was what she wanted “Old Santa” to bring her.

The writer read a card that a little boy was writing “Old Santa” in Greensboro, in which he asked for a pair of skates, a little car and a box of candy.

We have had two churches to call for the names of the children and they expect to send presents for them. We trust that some one will think of these two children.

The children lost a real friend when Mr. Darden passed away. He always remembered them at Christmas with oranges and candy—It always brought sunshine and happiness to them at the Christmas season. They will miss him this Christmas.

We wish every family in the Southern Convention who are members of the Congregational-Christian Church would take THE CHRISTIAN SUN, then they could keep in closer touch with what we are trying to do here and I believe they would be more interested.

In Memoriam

BARKER.

John Henry Barker was born October 6, 1862, in Guilford County, North Carolina. He died at Summerfield, in the same county, November 28, 1937. He professed faith in Christ and united with Pleasant Ridge Christian Church in his later teens, and remained true and faithful to the end. He was married to Lou Brittain, October 8, 1884. To this union were born three daughters: Mrs. T. Seroggins, Summerfield; Mrs. J. C. Knight, Greensboro; Mrs. L. T. Wagoner, Brown Summit; two sisters, and thirteen grand-children; and a great host of friends who mourn his passing away.

Funeral services were conducted at Pleasant Ridge Christian Church in the presence of a large host of people, by Revs. Gibbs and Settlemeyer of the Methodist church, assisted by this writer. Interment was in the cemetery nearby, by the side of his wife who preceeded him only twenty-one days, where they shall await the resurrection of the just.

May heaven's blessings rest upon the bereaved.

G. H. VEASEY.

PIERCE.

On October 28, 1937, God, in His infinite wisdom, called home Mr. W. C. Pierce, a member and deacon of Damascus Christian Church. He was a good neighbor and a sincere Christian. He died at the ripe old age of seventy-eight.

Mr. Pierce is survived by two children, Miss Blanche and Mr. F. L. Pierce; two brothers and one sister all of Sunbury, North Carolina.

The funeral services were conducted at the home by the writer, assisted by Revs. J. M. Jolly and Ira Harrell. The burial was in the family cemetery.

May God comfort and bless the bereaved.

H. C. HILLIARD.

STEPPE.

Mrs. A. J. Steppe, a faithful member of the Bethel Christian Church, near Elkton, Virginia, for the past 44 years, died suddenly while on her way to the church, November 28th. She was at church that morning and apparently in good health. Whenever possible, she was at her church and took an active part in the services and in the activities of the church.

Mrs. Steppe was 58 years old and is survived by her husband and three children: Vernon, Boyd, and Jesse; four grand-children; two brothers; and two sisters also survive.

Her sudden death was a great shock to the community and a large number of friends paid their last respects to this good lady at the funeral, conducted by the writer.

W. J. ANDES.

SELDON.

William Henry Seldon was born in Devonshire, England, January 22, 1865, and departed this life at his home near Highview, West Virginia, November 21, 1937. He was married to Miss Christiana Bean of Caponbridge, on April 10, 1888, and to this union were born ten children, seven of whom survive with their mother. Brother Seldon was a deacon of the Timber Ridge Church, loyal and faithful in service and in conduct a noble and consistent Christian. He served well and has entered into that rest which remains for the people of God.

mailing list of fourteen hundred?" An increase in subscriptions would mean an increase in effectiveness—an increase in financial income. If these increases can be made satisfactorily, the continuance of the paper would be justified. What say you, Brother Pastor? Shall we or shall we not? This is one responsibility which I feel can be laid squarely on our doorsteps. If it fails, we are responsible. If it succeeds, the church is to be congratulated.

The suggestion was made to the Board of Publications that the ministers in Virginia be organized into one camp for campaigning and the ministers of North Carolina be organized into another camp for campaigning, and a contest be conducted between the two camps, the goal being a minimum of five hundred new subscribers for THE CHRISTIAN SUN. If the Board decides on such a policy, I am confident that the ministers of North Carolina and Virginia will accept the challenge and take up the battle cry. What say you? Shall we or shall we not?

The Meaning of a United Church

By REV. CARL HERMANN VOSS.

Text: (Romans 12: 1, 2, 10) "I beseech you, therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service. And be ye not conformed to this world; but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is this good, and acceptable, and perfect, will of God . . . Be ye kindly affectioned one to another with brotherly love, in honour preferring one another."

"An Impossible Ideal" is the term usually applied to the hope for a united church, either locally or nationally. Part of this disbelief in the possibility of having a united church is due to the fact that some people have too long been accustomed to denominational churches; with these people a little patience on our part would not be amiss. But another reason for this denial of its possibility is due to the defeatist psychology with which so many men are cursed; with them we quickly lose all patience and are tempted to say with Jesus "O ye of little faith!" A united church is possible and these should be the hall-marks of such an enterprise.

First, a plea for tolerance and respect. Cooperation and mutual aid should be the characteristics of a united church. A local church working on such a basis should serve as a unifying force in a community. It should serve as an example of integration in a disintegrating world. Perhaps one might venture to say it should represent a little cosmos within a great chaos, for this chaotic world sorely needs an example of order and unity, interdependence and harmony. Thus the leveling of denominational barriers and the unifying of dissonant parts in Christendom compromise the basic elements of such a plea—a plea for men to find in the church a living example of Christianity's ideal of love.

Secondly, a plan for men's lives, both collective and individual, is a phase of any real united church's program. This plan implies an answer to the most grievous problems of modern life, to unemployment and insecurity as well as bereavement and doubt. If the church as the chosen vessel of religion wishes to make of religion an interpretation of life, then that interpretation must have as its main purpose the fulfilling of men's physical and spiritual needs. That interpretation must be dynamic enough to enable men to find triumph in tragedy, profound enough that they may know the heights as well as the depths of life, realistic enough that they may perceive reality behind the sham and subterfuge of modern life, and vital enough that they may do battle with the "powers and principalities of this world." So that strife, both on the international scene and on the battleground of the soul, may be overcome and the peace of God reign in the hearts of men, a united church must offer a workable plan of salvation relevant to the modern world.

And lastly, a high plane of thought and action should be apparent in a united church. This means the fellowship with like-minded and similarly-inclined people in the quest of life's meaning. In Christ-like deeds and in Christ-like thinking the members of that church will sense in part the mystery of the grace of God and partake to some degree of the mind that was in Christ Jesus. This does not mean a plaint of ill-will and woe but an elevated plane by which our common lives may become uncommon.

“God Bless You”

By LOUISE INGLES HYDE.

God bless you
When your heart is full
Of aches that other hearts, so dull
Of sympathy can't understand—
God hold your hand
And slip His arm around you then
And draw you close
To Him again
And comfort you.

God bless you
When you speak of Him
To those whose vision is so dim
They cannot follow you apace.
God give you grace
And wing your words with power
Strong to draw men close
To His White Throne
And Him alone.

God bless you
When the way is light,
Or when the dark clouds of the night
Splash rain across your weary soul;
God hold you tight—
And draw you from earth's cold
And cheerless mart
And speak
His gentle comfort
To your heart—
God bless you!

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

Next week will be the last issue of THE CHRISTIAN SUN for this year. It will be a special Christmas number.

Did you get your "love letter" from THE CHRISTIAN SUN? What better Christmas gift could you make than to give a subscription to your Church Paper? "A hint to the wise is sufficient."

The offering for Ministerial Relief comes on the birthday of the world's greatest preacher, one who in maturity had nowhere to lay His head but was constantly making life happier for other people. The church must not forget its aged ministers.

Miss Katherine Macon of Henderson, North Carolina, former secretary of the Eastern North Carolina Youth Fellowship, who was badly injured in an automobile accident in Greenwood, South Carolina, last summer is slowly improving. She hopes to be able to put some weight on her foot by Christmas Day—what a happy day that will be!

Rev. M. J. Sweet, pastor of Union Congregational Church, Chattanooga, Tennessee, certainly believes in variety in the church program. His weekly bulletins are very interesting because of this variety. On November 7th, the local Post of the American Legion shared in the service, and a week later Mrs. George L. Day, a missionary, spoke on "Men and Missions" at the morning service, and Prof. Godfrey Tietze of the University of Chattanooga spoke in the evening on "Men and Religion." November 21st was "Baby Sunday" when little children were in church. Rev. Mr. Sweet copied "Twelve Points of Service" from THE CHRISTIAN SUN in a letter sent to his members. Thanks, Brother.

THE TENNESSEE CONFERENCE.

The twenty-second Annual meeting of the Tennessee Conference of Congregational - Christian Churches met with the First Congregational Church of Soddy, Tennessee, November 30th to December 2nd, with Rev. J. W. Davenport as moderator and Rev. A. L. DeJarnette as pastor of the local church.

The program opened Tuesday evening with an address by Rev. Edwin E. White of "Highland Heritage," and another address by Dr. W. J.

Campbell, a member of the faculty of Vanderbilt University.

Interesting features of the Wednesday program included a panel discussion on "The Bible and Positive Religion," by Revs. E. E. White, M. J. Sweet, Wm. A. Keith, and A. W. Hurst; an address by Marie Gregson Wingfield on "Pictures of India"; an address by Dr. W. A. Harper on "Personal Religious Beliefs"; and a sermon by Rev. Marshall Wingfield. At the noon luncheon there was a business meeting of the Union and Branch in charge of Mrs. W. A. Harper, and a men's meeting with a discussion of the Public School Program led by Professor J. B. Brown, of the local high school. There was a young people's session in the afternoon in charge of Miss Marguerite Davison.

Features of the Thursday session included a symposium on "Church Problems and Methods Observed on Fellowship Tours in the North," a discussion of "Cooperative Pioneering," "The Plan Book" and "Rural Work." The session closed with a memorial service led by Dr. F. P. Ensminger and a communion service conducted by Revs. G. L. Day and M. J. Sweet. Among the leaders not already named were Rev. D. H. Norcross, Prof. J. L. Hair, Rev. S. E. Franklin, Mr. G. L. Day, Rev. A. Nightingale, Rev. C. C. Haun, Mr. Harry Mellons, Rev. C. Carl Dollar and Rev. W. T. Scott.

PALM STREET, GREENSBORO.

The congregation of the Palm Street Congregational - Christian Church of Greensboro has been without a pastor since the first of November, and the Pulpit Committee is very anxious to get in touch with a good man to take this work for full time. We could probably get a pastor to serve part time, but the church has worked so hard in the past to reach the place where we could have a man on the field, and we would like to continue as a full time pastorate.

A few years back the church was paying only $150 a year to a pastor, while last year we were able to pay $1,300 for pastoral service, and that with less effort than it had taken years back to pay the smaller amount.

Any minister that could consider this work can get in touch with the Pulpit Committee by writing the chairman, A. H. Hinshaw, 17 Poplar Street, Greensboro, North Carolina.

The church has a fine Sunday school with Doyle Murchison, Jr., as superintendent, a young man who has not yet reached his twentieth birthday, but is proving by his work and untiring effort in behalf of the church and Sunday school that consecrated folks can really put things over if given the proper backing of the church.

Mrs. Viola Cockman is the president of the Ladies Missionary Society, and when these ladies undertake something for the church, they always put it over in a big way.

Mrs. Charlie Hall is president of the People's Auxiliary, an organization of about fifty members who contribute monthly dues for the purpose of making improvements on our church.

Miss Mable Hughes and Mrs. W. B. Lumly are the very efficient presidents of the Senior and Junior Endeavor Societies.

This church was host to the Christian Missionary Association Conference, Tuesday, December 7th.

A. H. HINSHAW.

TIMBER RIDGE.

Our annual two weeks meeting began at Timber Ridge Christian Church, Highview, West Virginia, November 7th. Our pastor did the preaching for the first week. He had previously arranged with Rev. W. J. Andes to assist him in the meeting, but Brother Andes was taken ill with a severe cold and was advised by his doctor to take a few days rest.

Brother Andes came on Monday, November 15th, and remained with us through Friday night. His messages were timely and were delivered in a very pleasing and masterly manner. He preached the old time Gospel with eager enthusiasm and declared that Christ is the supreme need for our people of today. Members and friends of the church received Brother Andes most cordially and were delighted to have him in their homes. The people of the community remembered the faithful and loyal service of Billy's father, the late Rev. A. W. Andes, who served the church for about sixteen years as pastor.

On the closing night of the services, five young girls were received into fellowship of the church.

We believe that the meeting has been the means of strengthening the faith and giving a renewed vigor to our people and the work of the Kingdom. For all that has been accomplished we desire to give praise to God and our Lord Jesus Christ.

The regular preaching services were held Sunday, December 5th, at 7:30 in the evening. The Rev. R. A. Whitten, pastor, gave a very inspiring and interesting talk on "Moses at the Cross Roads."

SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPERINTENDENT HONORED.

The following article from the front page of "The Index," Dover, Delaware, December 2, 1937, shows something of what may well be done in other churches and certainly illustrates the type of Sunday school superintendent needed in modern schools.

"One of the most interesting features in connection with the program of People's Church last Sunday was a well planned and perfectly carried out surprise on John B. Hutton, General Superintendent of the Church school.

"Unwittingly, the General Superintendent had joined in the plans of the pastor and the Sunday school Executive Committee to have a joint meeting of all the departments of the school for a special program to be given by the four departments of the Children's Division, the real purpose of the committee being to have the entire school together to hear the announcement that the day marked the twenty-fifth anniversary of Mr. Hutton's superintendency over the People's Church Sunday school, and that all might share in the privilege of presenting him with a genuine walrus gladstone suitcase and toilet kit and outfit to match.

"In presenting Mr. Hutton with the gift of appreciation from the church school, Dr. R. C. Helfenstein, the pastor, stated that since early fall the committee had been secretly planning the surprise, not even intimating to Mr. Hutton the fact that the twenty-fifth anniversary of his election to the superintendency was near at hand and that one of the deciding factors in causing him to accept the call of People's Church to become its pastor was the fact that on his first visit to the church in response to the invitation of the pastoral committee to look over the field, a long interview with Mr. Hutton regarding his ideas of the modern program of religious education, he learned that the superintendent of the church school was keenly alive to the opportunities of a modern progressive program in Sunday school and young people's work.

"He stated that few laymen have such a comprehensive knowledge of the subject of religious education, and such a sympathetic attitude toward the latest ideas and methods presented by the leading divinity schools of the country this most important subject. He stated further that few Sunday schools have the good fortune of having such an efficient and such a devoted leader as Mr. Hutton, who during twenty-five years of service has not missed a single Sunday except on account of illness or absence from the city. In fair weather and in foul weather he has been at his post of duty always on time.

"Attention of the school was also called to the very significant fact that in the important volume of "Who's Who In the Legal Profession in America," the superintendent of People's Church Sunday school is one of the three names appearing from Kent County, Delaware."

THE OLD MINISTER.

When on my day of life the night is falling,
And in the winds, from unsunned spaces blown,
I hear far voices out of darkness
My feet to paths unknown.

Be near me when all else is from me drifting—
Earth, sky, home's pictures, days of shade and shine,
And kindly faces to my own unlifting
The love which answers mine.

I have but Thee, my Father; let Thy Spirit
Be with me then to comfort and uphold;
No gate of pearl, no branch of palm I merit
Nor street of shining gold.

Suffice it if—my good and ill unreckoned,
And both forgiven through Thy abounding grace—
I find myself by hands familiar beckoned
Unto my fitting place.

Some humble door among Thy many mansions,
Some sheltering shade where sin and striving cease,
And flows forever, through heaven's green expansions,
The river of Thy peace.

There from the music round about me stealing,
I fain would learn the new and holy song,
And find at last, beneath Thy trees of healing
The life for which I long.

—John Greenleaf Whittier.

GATES COUNTY NEWS.

DAMASCUS.

Tuesday, November 23rd, marked the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Woman's Missionary Society which was observed with an appropriate program in the evening. After the program a social hour was enjoyed. The society for these twenty-five years has been steadily growing and is always a friend to the church, willing to bear its part in helping the church. It has a history to be proud of.

EURE.

The third week in August we held our revival services with Rev. H. E. Crutchfield assisting. Brother Crutchfield brought spiritual and helpful sermons. The services were well attended from the beginning. There were twenty members added to our fellowship, seventeen by confession and three by letter.

Wednesday evening, November 24th the Young People's Missionary Society gave a program at the church. As the young people came to the church gifts were brought to the altar to be given to the needy in the community. An offering was taken for the orphanage. After the gifts to the needy were presented, the leader called the pastor to come forward. Not knowing what was in store the pastor went forward wondering what was up. He was given a real surprise when they presented to him a nice Bible. May God bless this fine group of young people in their efforts and work.

OAK GROVE.

Our revival services were held the second week in August with Rev. C. E. Gerringer assisting. We had two additions to our fellowship. The services were enjoyed by all those who attended.

The Willing Workers Society of the church is always on hand ready to help out whenever they are needed. A few Sundays ago they remembered the pastor lost his car in the summertime and they helped him some on another one. May God bless all those who had part in this.

The younger people of the church met the other evening and organized a missionary society. This is a small church but the people are willing to work.

CHRISTMAS OFFERING FOR SUPERANNUATION.

The report on superannuation to the North Carolina and Virginia Conference at its recent session in Reidsville, North Carolina, contained the recommendation that all churches of the said body take a special Christmas offering for retired ministers and their dependants.

The why of this offering: The annual allotment in money to those who have been faithful servants in the past is scarcely sufficient for the necessities of life, and the several hundred checks sent from headquarters at the Christmas season supply a real need and bring cheer to the hearts of many. The custom in sending these special gifts is made possible by the Christmas offering.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgement and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

"ONCE I WAS YOUNG."

An ancient writer said: "Once I was young, and now I am old, but I have never seen the righteous forsaken, nor his seed begging bread." That writer lived in a fortunate age and a fine community. There is truth in the statement which is eternal, but economic changes have given another color to the picture. Righteousness does not necessarily furnish bread; nor can the righteous purchase raiment without price.

We are thinking of ministers who once were young. With fresh young blood, like colts, they were ready for the race that lay ahead of them. You have heard them as eloquent words flowed from their tongues and the fire flashed in their eyes as they championed some righteous cause, or declared concerning the will of God for humankind. In their youthful assurance, they proclaimed the message of the Eternal, forgetting self or any possible rainy day that might come, they laid not up stores on earth but gave back to the world all that came to them. This self-sacrificing spirit on the part of youth for a righteous cause is the thing that stirs the heart and stimulates the soul.

It is the kind of thing that congregations like. Here and there can be heard now the murmurings of the multitude connected with the Church, "We want a young man for our pastor."

It is reported that recently a church refused to call a man because he was more than thirty years old. Youth is having its day. Young people have a challenge which has never come to any other age. The world looks to them for leadership and opens to them doors of opportunity heretofore closed to any but men of maturity. Our pulpits are being filled by young men, and will, as time passes, be filled by still younger men.

There is a plaintiff note in the words of the sweet singer of Israel who said: "I once was young." He had dreamed his dreams. He had cast his bread upon the waters. He had gone into battle with high hope and had come out victorious, but those days were gone, and now in the eventide he said: "I once was young." Memories tramped back to his mind as he thought of those youthful opportunities, the people he met, the tasks he had to do. He could almost feel again the thrill of life pulsing through his being as he went to shepherd the sheep, or to lead his army, or to play upon the harp, or to worship in the synagogue.

"NOW I AM OLD."

But the song had changed. It was no longer the clear ringing note of the youthful tenor across the hills of Judea, but rather the quieter bass notes that reverberated down the valleys: "I now am old."

It is the song of men in the ministry who live among us today. They have labored for our Church. They have given their best—their lives—for our Church. Now they are old. The pulpits are filled by younger men. Calls for service do not come as in other years, and they could not answer them if they came. Perhaps sickness has come with encroaching years. The lengthening shadows of the late afternoon bring the chill of night, while the saints of God wait for the call to come up higher.

Shall the Church forget them? Will those who have been blessed by their ministry allow them to suffer for food and clothes and shelter and love? Will the younger men who fill the pulpits forget the value of those who built the churches? Certainly not! When Christmas comes and we think of the things that are real, our minds and hearts will turn to those who have given us opportunities and taught us of God. In every church within the Southern Convention there should be an offering for ministerial relief. We will celebrate the birthday of the Christ child, the world's greatest preacher, by sending a love gift to the aged ministers of our own churches in the name of the Christ child. As God did not forget the world, but gave his best, so we will not forget the veterans of the Cross and will love them still, and loving them, help to supply their needs. Under the blessings of God, those who are now leaders in the Church will sometime say, "I once was young, but now I am old." And happy will they be if they can also say: "I have never been forsaken by the Church I love."

AN ADVENT PRAYER.

By Rev. Carl R. Key.

O Thou, Father of Light and Love, help us to live in such a manner that our lives may show forth thy praise, may bring forth fruits worthy of repentance. Make us constantly aware of the eternal presence of the ever-living Christ. Baptize us with thy Holy Spirit. Rekindle in us the Holy Fire that burns out all sin and shame. Help us to use our feet, our hands, our lips and our eyes as instruments for good in behalf of our fellowmen and thy Kingdom.

Give us, O God, the power and the will to fill every valley of human suffering with kindness, to make level with love every mountain and hill of lust and greed. Give us the courage to make straight all crooked paths and to make smooth all rough ways. Help us to convert all human waste lands into fertile fields of abundant living. Grant that this may be our intent and endeavor during this season of sharing. We ask it in the name of Jesus Christ, our Lord. Amen.

"Grow old along with me,

The best is yet to be—

The last of life, for which the first was made."

—Browning.

For God and Home and Every Land

By REV. ELISHA A. KING, D. D.

Many of you will recall that the phrase used as the subject of my talk this morning has been changed. It used to read, "For God and Home and Native Land." The change records a changed outlook on life. We are now living in a world and this globe you see before you is the representation of the world we all live in. Even if some of us may be living largely within a limited inner world; we are, as a matter of fact, living in the whole world if we read the daily newspapers, or listen to international broadcasts over the radio. The outstanding events in every part of the world are reported in the press, and any unusual event in Asia or Africa is depicted in a wire-photo almost as soon as it happens.

When Jesus spoke His message commissioning His disciples to go into all the world He was looking into the far reaches of the Roman Empire. Now, however, the whole world is open to the ambassador of Christ and is ready to listen to His word. (And so, of course, open to any other religious message.) In the early days of missionary activity missionaries used to cry aloud, "O when will the nations open so we can go in?" Now the Church has access to all the people of the world, but cannot raise money enough to send those who are anxious to go. A great change!

I shall spend no time in speaking about God or the Home, but assuming them I wish to speak about how this Church is trying to follow Christ's command to evangelize and Christianize the whole world.

We sometimes wonder what the Church is accomplishing anyway! From the outside it may seem that the Church provides a pleasant and attractive sanctuary for worship—a congregation, a musical program and a sermon; but the music and the sermon are carefully planned and woven into a worship service calculated to instruct, to encourage and to inspire those present with the higher thoughts and feelings pertaining to the Christian life. But this is not all. The Church, like other organizations with world-wide outlook has a relation to a larger world. Some of us know the meaning of the "Lion's International," some know what "Rotary International" means. So the Church is an international society, in fact, a World Movement. You will remember that last year I attended the World's Sunday School Convention in Norway. In its organization it began with itself, then its district fellowship, its state organization, its national or general council, and then its international relations. I once attended an international council of churches in Scotland. The meetings in Oxford and Edinburg were international. This means that the Church in any locality has a world outlook and the phrase, "For God and Home and Everyland," expresses its purpose.

Christian Churches in the United States are divided into many companies, or denominations. Frank Mead has written a most interesting book entitled, "See These Banners Go," in which he has told the story of how twelve leading denominations came into existence and what they stand for. In the "Year Book of American Churches" there are 148 minor denominations registered. The leading churches are all world-wide in outlook and service. In looking back through their history one gets a new understanding and discovers that there were certain good reasons for the establishing of these great denominational movements.

In our own case, for example, we came into being as a part of the English Reformation and were known as Independents. Crossing the ocean in 1620, the Pilgrims landed at Plymouth, Massachusetts, and established themselves as Congregationalists, meaning democracy in religion. The genius of that movement was in uniting people of many faiths in one independent body, giving each member the freedom of judgment in his beliefs and actions. This spirit has spread now to practically all the larger denominations, and the reason for separation is slowly disappearing. It is easy, therefore, for this church to be a Community Church where Christians of all denominations worship and work together in a happy fellowship.

Now to show you what I mean, I wish to take you all on an air-plane journey to the various parts of the world, and we shall look down upon various Christian enterprises in which this church has some special interest. We should be interested to have some report of our investment.

We will board our plane now!

1. Our first stop will be in Kentucky, in Harlan County, the great soft coal mining region where there has been great labor trouble. In the small city of Evarts, the national organization with which we are connected has a church. The minister is Eugene H. Rainey, a brave, enthusiastic, capable man who is planning great things for these miners' families. Lots of children there! One of our strong churches in New Jersey is supporting that enterprise, and without that church and its faithful leader you can guess what life would be like in Evarts.

2. Now we swing around and fly over the large areas of country and finally float over Louisiana. You have sometimes heard people say, "We have too many churches" but they have never been up in an airplane and looked down on hundreds of towns and villages in the out-of-the-way places teeming with children, where there are no churches or Sunday schools. Seth Baggett, a minister out of employment, went to a dreary section in Louisiana and started working in three centers. He now has 160 people. He has encouraged people in a burned-over area to build a little church by shared labor. Our Church Building Society helped them with gifts, just as it did our church here in Miami Beach, and as it is doing in countless places. Seth Baggett is doing a wonderful service in these lonesome spots. And so are many others like him in many other similar places.

3. We will now steer our craft to King's Mountain, North Carolina, and there we look down on the small campus where Dr. Henry C. McDowell, formerly of Africa presides over Lincoln Academy, a school for the education of Negroes, where book-learning and craft-learning go hand in hand. (Turn to page 9.)

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The Annual Session of the Eastern Virginia Christian Missionary Association was held at Waverly Christian Church, Tuesday, December 7th. Rev. J. F. Morgan presided, Rev. Carl R. Key served as Secretary. Mr. B. D. Jones, who has been the faithful Treasurer for the past twenty-three years, resigned from that office on account of his continued illness. A vote of appreciation was tendered him for his faithful service.

Rev. F. C. Lester conducted a very helpful devotional period. Rev. J. E. McCauley delivered a very helpful address on the "Great Opportunities of the Church." The total amount of dues collected was $965.00. Appropriations were made as follows: South Norfolk Christian Church on debt, $400.00; Newport News Church on debt, $300.00; Elm Avenue Church (Portsmouth) on debt, $100.00; Hopewell Church, $100.00; Ocean View Christian Church, on debt, $100.00. The next session of the Association will meet with the Ocean View Christian Church.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Rev. Jesse H. Dollar; Vice-President, Rev. T. Fred Wright; Recording Secretary, Miss Edna Fulcher; Mission Secretary, Rev. Joe A. French; Treasurer, Mr. James C. Jones, Holland, Virginia.

The attendance was not large, but the meeting was interesting and helpful. This Association needs more members and larger attendance. Years ago it was announced that the minimum goal for members should include every pastor and some organization in every local church of the Eastern Virginia Conference. At the present time eight of the local pastors are members, and fifteen of the forty-two active churches of the Conference are represented in the memberships paid into the Treasury. A majority of the churches and pastors are not represented in the membership roll. If all the churches could be enlisted on the same ratio the strength of the Association would be greatly increased. That will not be possible until the pastors can be enlisted as active members. A pastor cannot arouse much enthusiasm and support of any enterprise involving financial contributions if he is not personally identified with it. A ten dollar membership is not always easy to find in a parsonage, but one should not forget the old saying: "Where there is a will there is a way." The will is as important as the way. When the writer united with this Association thirty-three years ago his salary was $650.00 per year. It has not been easy to pay this money. There is no reason why it should ever be easy. A man who enters the ministry to find an easy way of doing things will be disappointed. This Association is a challenge to the ministers and laymen of the Conference. And out of an experience of thirty-three years, as a member, it is a joy to testify that it is a blessing to make this sacrificial gift for the growth of our churches.

It is the wish of many that some one will soon find a place where a new church should be located in our Conference. If we wait until all the churches are out of debt, some of us will be too old to be present when the corner stone is laid. Has the Conference reached its limit of extension and growth? Are we to settle down to a long period of ease and inactivity? Our attitude towards such organizations as the Missionary Association and our support of the Home Missionary Work of the Conference and the Southern Convention may indicate our trend.

I. W. JOHNSON.

NOTE: The total membership of the Eastern Virginia Conference, given in last week's issue as 818 for 1936 and 687 for 1937, should have read 9,818 and 9,687 respectfully.

WHEN A MINISTER CHANGES FIELDS—WHAT A THRILL!

It is difficult to leave a field of labor when a pastor has been serving fourteen years. Yet, it may be made less difficult by the spirit of farewells. This has been true with the parish and pastor from the Sophia-High Point Parish. Their farewells were said with suppers, entertainments, gifts, calls, and visits by friends of the field.

The Sophia-High Point Parish was extravagant with their affections, gifts, entertainments, and appreciative expressions for the pastor previous to his leaving for the new field—Richland-Doerun Parish. The High Point Christian Church set a chicken stew supper in the community house (with sixty-three people present). After supper the treasurer handed the minister $16.00, saying this will meet the expenses up here. Just before supper was set in the basement of the church (with fifty people present). Flint Hill was no less courteous. They gave an entertainment in the old day-school building. When the playtime was ended we were served with good things to eat. Not being satisfied with what had been done, they presented the writer and Mrs. Penn with a quilt. Most of the material had been donated by the men; the women pieced the squares with their names worked in each square. Then men had their names worked in a center piece. The climax was reached when the citizens of the Sophia community gave money and authorized two women to purchase a suit for the pastor. But it was the teachers and students of the consolidated school in New Market township who bought the shirt, tie, and socks, plus two dollars. The loopers of the Commonwealth Hosiery Mill, Randleman, North Carolina, would not be outdone. When the last devotional service was held Wednesday noon, Miss Ruby Robbins, representing the loopers, presented $10.40.

All this made it rather difficult to say good-bye, yet, it is much less difficult than it might be under different circumstances. There is a sad feature in leaving an old familiar field; there is also a feeling of a thrill for a minister to enter a new field (especially when one is unknown and all the people of the parish to learn). It is thrilling to be received with such genuine Christian cordiality as the writer has experienced at Richland and Red Hill. I may call it the Richland-Doerun Parish, although I have not met the other churches. On arriving at Richland, December 2nd, I was met by D. S. Hogg, who escorted the new minister to the home of a member of the church where we found a number of the Ladies Aid-Missionary Society. They were just finishing a quilt for the Christian Orphanage. The Hostess of the quilting party insisted on serving the new minister with refreshments such as apple pie and tasty buttermilk, for which Georgia is famous. A few days ago these ladies mailed the quilt and $13.00 to the Orphanage.

The first Sunday after arriving here we met in the historic church, Red Hill (Providence Chapel) for worship. Although the weather was cold and the rain falling, the heat not sufficient to compete with the weather, and wasps in numerous attendance, we worshipped with a congregation of twenty-five. This was five more than the Baptist minister had in Richland for the evening service.

The day following the snow (which was December 8th) the ladies met in the home of Mrs. D. S. Hogg for a pre-Christmas program. After the devotional, they read from the Missionary Herald of the retired ministers and their messages, experiences, and needs. I feel that these ladies are to do something about it. A number of these women have pledged a cent-a-meal to help finance the parsonage. They are also doing another unusual thing by donating the price of what milk is sold on Sunday.

We have a promising group in quality and intense interest, both locally and abroad. We are looking forward to a happy and active New Year.

SAMUEL M. PENN.

THE OLD TIME RELIGION.

What is the one great need of the church today? Did I hear you say, "The Old Time Religion?" Would you think me a bit "off" if I should confess to you that I think our one great need is the Old Time Religion? Picture in your mind a tall, narrow pulpit set on a platform, raised about six inches above the floor. Above the pulpit and over the reed organ are two lanterns providing the only light as the choir bursts forth on that old hymn:

Amazing Grace how sweet the sound
That saved a wretch like me,
I once was lost, but now I'm found,
Was blind, but now I see.

The parson with his long tail coat turns to his own page-worn Bible and slowly but emphatically reads the Word—stopping occasionally to comment as he reads. Then in prayer, Deacon Hobgood, down on his knees, opens the very windows of heaven that the power of God might descend upon the congregation. Deacon Hobgood could really contact God because he prayed at times other than when he was called upon. Then the parson, after choosing his text closes his Bible and begins. Before the message closes it is not difficult to realize that the sermon has been gotten on his knees in prayer; verily, God speaks through him. Sinners are condemned and they come as penitents to an altar of prayer. Ah, that sacred altar. Many of us recall those mountain peak experiences which have been ours at the altar. Eventually, the meeting closes. My, what a glorious fellowship has been experienced. We know God is by our side, that He walks with us every passing day.

Oh, I'm sorry. I did not realize that this was getting lengthy. But may I say again that it is "The Old Time Religion" that we need today.

Now, do not be too critical of me because this, in brief, is what I mean. We need that old time feeling with our present day equipment and methods. That feeling which impels us to live what we profess. In my candid opinion, with that feeling we are only "toiling in rowing" and, spiritually, getting nowhere.

J. E. NEESE.

A LAYMAN SPEAKS.

I learned by reading THE CHRISTIAN SUN that the Christian Missionary Association is dying. Why should it die? Is it because we ourselves are dying?

I can remember the time when the Christian Missionary Association was very much alive. I am sorry that our preachers and their congregations are allowing this very worthy enterprise to fall behind.

But not only that, there are some other important enterprises in some of our local churches that are falling by the wayside, also.

When we see and hear of important enterprises connected with our churches left out of the program, we are ready to wonder what kind of leaders our churches have.

We cannot expect our preachers to keep all the important enterprises alive, unless we laymen rally to their support. I hope that the laymen of various churches will understand that it is our duty along with our preachers to see that the Christian Missionary Association does not die.

Whenever our Boards of Deacons and Official Boards together with our pastors will wake up and see the importance of these things in question, they will not die.

A FRIEND DEPARTS.

(A Correspondence.)

Orlando, Florida,
December 12, 1937.

A letter dated Covington, Ohio, November 27th, brings this line: "Dr. Omer S. Thomas passed from this earthly life just a few hours ago. The funeral services will be held Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock, at the Greenville Creek Church, his last pastorate. Dr. Frank G. Coffin, assisted by Revs. McD. Howsace and H. A. Smith, will be in charge of the service." And thus, an able minister, a splendid executive, a noble soul, and a dear friend passes to his reward. The writer, associated and collaborated with Dr. Thomas in various capacities, and has nothing but the fondest recollections as well as a most exalted opinion of this good man. He was a man of ideas and convictions, and his forthright honesty and integrity led him to voice those ideas and defend those convictions when assailed. As a member of an A. C. C. Mission Board, and then as the efficient Secretary for Home Missions of the General Convention, he employed his great talents in a constructive program for the whole church, and his influence was felt in all parts of our wide fellowship. However, it was as a member of our Board of Control for Christian College, Franklinton, North Carolina, that one found him at his best and realized how sound was his judgment, and how proud and sane was his sympathy for mankind. To the day of his death and for many, many years prior thereto, he was a trusted and most valued member of this Board to which he contributed unsparingly of his time, energy, and wisdom.

As these dear friends, and fellow-workers in the cause of righteousness pass on, one is reminded of the lines Thomas Jefferson, then nearing the end, wrote his true and life long friend, John Adams: "The cerement will soon unfold all our sorrows and these frail bodies, and there in essence we will ascend to that ecstatic state where we will find the dear ones we have loved and lost whom we will still love but never lose again." Verily the infinite love and wisdom of Him Who created us will not allow our love for our friends to be dissolved by the thin veil, or passing cloud of death.

As we pass along the way we meet and make friends who give us strength for the journey and courage for our tasks and a hope more abundant for the future. There are noble souls like that, and one can't help loving, honoring, esteeming them for their own inherent strength and steadfastness.

Enoch of old must have been like that and both youth and maturity have cherished his name and hallowed his memory through the centuries. One read recently in the papers a little child's version of Enoch's life. It is worth reading:

"Enoch was a great friend of God's and they used to go on long walks together every day. And one day they were so interested in their talk that they walked further than usual, and presently God said, 'Enoch, it is getting late and we are nearer my house than yours. You had better come and stay with me tonight.' So Enoch went to God's house, and lived with him ever after."

The Methodist Recorder, of London, commenting on this child's version of an ancient story says:

"And that is the truth about life, for one who really knows God. Just a daily walk with God, a thing as intimate and friendly, as rich and blessed as that. And that also is the truth about death, for such a one. Death will be just a going home to God's house, to be with God for ever. No more strange and terrible than that. Just as simple and natural as that. Yes, and as glorious and wonderful as that."

Our Father, in taking our friends to be with Him is keeping them in His ample and beautiful home till we come.

THE CHRISTMAS OFFERING.

All our churches, in every conference of the Convention, are earnestly solicited to take the Christmas offering for superannuation. This should be counted a privilege, and no doubt will be by many, since it is a debt of honor, as well as gratitude, we owe our retired and disabled ministers, and the widows of former ministers who gave their life on small and inadequate salaries, to the gospel ministry.

Since the Convention voted that all our churches take this offering, some have done so; but there is greater need this year than ever, for two reasons: First, the churches fell short of their apportionments this year, hence, the amounts sent to conference is wholly inadequate to pay the meager grants heretofore made on this, our "debt of honor," to these worthy ones. Second, the number of our beneficiaries increases each year, and we cannot keep pace and make smaller grants than we have been making. We ought, in all good faith to increase the amounts of the grants to these most worthy and now dependent ones. We must not decrease the amounts granted.

Our only hope then is for a liberal Christmas offering from the churches for superannuation. This offering counts on the Conference apportionment, and should be so liberal that it will be easy for every church to reach in full its apportionment this year. Every dollar is needed and will be doubly appreciated not by the Board only, but by those worthy and most deserving ones to whom it will all go without changes.

A FRIEND IN THE HILLS.

When I heard that Rev. B. J. Earp had offered to fill our pulpit in these hilly churches of Carroll County, Virginia, until a man was found whom we liked better, I didn't think he could stand our hills. But one never gets too old to learn, and I am learning things. Brother Earp came to preach today, December 5th. I found that he had done quite a little exploring over the rugged mountain trails. He is walking right into the hearts and homes of our people. He comes just as a "friend" and not as a preacher to scare little boys. He does not put out a hand and ask: "Are you a Christian—if not, why not?" That is the best pair of roller skates a minister ever put under himself in the hills. Brother Earp simply says, "I come as a friend." And one more thing he says "Let us pray." Oh, yes, he lets people know he believes in God, but he doesn't scare us, nor try to force his religion down anyone's throat. I believe he has a message for our hills, and I also believe he can "take it" here. I believe our hills will take him, too. Any lonely heart likes a friend.

And now we are planing a Christmas program for our Sunday school here. I have been asked about gifts for the children, and I want to say here that it will be lots better if all friends and churches will leave off toys and put all the money of that kind into useful gifts. A dime toy is easily broken, and even a dime will buy a pair of socks for a little child. I hope the children will have candy or nuts, but I hope no one sends toys this year. If anyone can send even a small gift, if it is useful or has been used it will make a happier Christmas than toys will. And the little children here will appreciate your gifts, your love, and your prayers.

Now, may God give you good people of the great outside world a most happy Christmas. Our Christ of old would be glad if each church and Sunday school would put on a program more spiritual than ever before. This fast moving world so often now gets lost in the rush and excitement at Christmas and forgets that "Christ was born." God help us to take time this Christmas to remember the Babe in a manger. Save the money you meant to spend for fire crackers and feed or clothe some little child who needs it. Christmas is no time for fire works—Christmas when the Gates of Heaven swung open and gave to earth a Baby. And if any among you who read this have lost sight of your Star, may you look up once more and see it shining again for you this Christmas. God bless you.

FOR GOD AND HOME AND EVERY LAND.

4. We will make a longer flight to New York and there look down on the Italian settlement. We see the Brooklyn Italian Chapel surrounded with children. We will stop long enough in New York to note that its mayor is an Italian-American, a Protestant and recognized as a leader of honesty and sincerity. We see the neighborhood Club House presided over by Mrs. Sarah S. Beeman. It's a wonderfully worthwhile service rendered in the name of Christ. There are many more similar kinds of work being carried on in our great cities among foreigners.

5. There isn't time to visit the various homes and colonies where the elderly ministers and their wives (or widows) live. We will look down on one, however. This minister is 88 years old. He says he began working on a farm for $6.00 a month. At 14 he held a pick and shovel job at 13 cents an hour. Became a minister, married and started housekeeping at a cost of $40.00. His first church paid him $500 a year and in all his ministerial life he never received over $800 and house. He says he has been able to care for his invalid wife and himself from his accumulated savings, but he was too old to benefit from the Annuity Fund, but for the last ten years he has had a small grant from the Ministerial Relief Funds and a Christmas check. We happen to know that he is one of 792 ministers, widows and orphans who are receiving grants from national and state ministerial funds. He says that his grant is less than $300 a year.

6. As we float along over the states we can see every now and then in villages and towns great companies of children and when we ask who they are we find they are the children of Sunday schools. They are from the self-supporting schools like our own and from mission schools all over our country. The mission schools could not exist without our financial aid.

7. The time has come to cross the American continent to San Francisco. Here we re-service our plane and fly toward Japan. We discover there that the rank and file of the people, especially the Christians, are not in sympathy with the war carried on in China. The work of Christian education goes on and one of the really wonderful things to see there is Kobe College for Women that is transforming home-life in Japan.

8. We now move rapidly along across China, avoiding the war-zone. We have a chance to see two people of world-wide fame, General Chiang Kai Shek and Madame Chiang Kai Shek, both of them remarkable characters, both of them Christians. We are told that Madame Chiang Kai Shek has founded a "New Life Movement" and is bringing new spirit and new soul to China. All we have time for now is to float along over the schools, colleges, hospitals and churches that are to be found all over China. Fifty years of Christian work there has made great changes.

9. It is strange how fast time flies, faster than our plane. But we must pass over India. We can only look down on Sholapur where Miss Nicholson has her marionettes which she took back with her from the United States while on furlough. She teaches the children with these puppets. As we sail majestically on we look down on schools, churches, hospitals and social centers all contributing their part toward bringing the kingdom in.

10. We turn our craft southwest and fly over Madagascar to Natal, South Africa. Here we have Zulu Hospital, located at Durban, Natal. Here the spirit of universal Christian brotherhood is manifested as in hundreds of other places. We are going to land here for a great event. The University of South Africa confers the degree of Doctor of Philosophy on Rev. John Dube, the son of a Zulu Chieftain. This is the first time the university has so honored a Bantu. His father was a chieftain, became a Christian, was ordained to preach, sent his son to Oberlin College in Ohio to study, and now his son is honored. This is a pretty good answer to the critic of foreign missions.

11. We must start for home now though we have seen only a fraction of the Christian work that is being done. We are now landing back in Miami Beach. Our car settles gently and here we are! We have seen a lot of the world and some of our enterprises to which we give our benevolence money. To me it is a thrilling experience. It widens my vision, enlarges my interests and encourages me through and through. Something worthwhile is being done by the Christian churches. But it gives most satisfaction to those who believe in it and give some money and thought to it. The returns in joyous satisfaction are great, and the thousands of souls benefitted, a sufficient reward.

When a man is guided by reason and the rights of others—not simply what he desires to do, but what he ought to do—then the man will make friends, and these friends are bound to help him.—Selected.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church"

MISS EMILY CARLETON, Editor, 541 Osceola Ave., Winter Park, Fla.

NEWS OF THE HOLIDAY CONFERENCE.

We are very happy to be able to tell you that Edwin C. White of Pleasant Hill Academy, Pleasant Hill, Tennessee, will be with us at the Holiday Conference in Greensboro, December 28-30. Mr. White is the author of the mission study book for young people of all denominations this year—'Highland Heritage.' We have been very proud to know that one of the leaders in our denomination in the southeast was asked to write this book—and now we are going to hear from him first-hand information about our mountain friends.

We have asked Mr. White if he will talk to the whole group about any phases of home missions in the southeast, in which he thinks we will particularly interested. Then he will give invaluable aid to the group of Mission Superintendents, for he is to be the resource leader for that group in planning their work for the coming year.

Miss Marguerite Davison, representative of the Home Missions Board in Alabama and Tennessee, writes that one car load will come to the Conference from Tennessee and Kentucky and that they are hoping another will be able to come from Alabama. It thrills us to hear of young people coming these long distances to the Conference and we hope that those of our nearer at hand will take advantage of this opportunity, too, and will join together in making this the best conference ever held in the Southeast.

Be sure to let the Greensboro people know about your coming—write to Miss Mary Armfield, 633 Walker Avenue, Greensboro.

OUR HYMNS.

All of us will agree that songs are more meaningful to us if we know something about the conditions under which they were written—the background of the writer, the circumstances at the time of writing, and the purpose for writing them.

Since our Christmas hymns are the most beloved of all our church songs, it seems that this would be an appropriate time of the year in which to spend a profitable evening in our young people's groups studying something about them as we sing them. There are many good books which contain the needed information, one of the best being "Lyric Religion," by Smith.

In the December issue of the Pilgrim Highroad there is a very lovely dramatic Christmas service entitled "Thank God for Song." This is the story of the writing of "Silent Night," giving the circumstances of its writing in the form of a drama. This is a very lovely Christmas service, and one which is different from the usual type of program.

If any groups would like to have a program on "Hymns" at any time, the editor of this page will be glad to send you information to use in preparing such a meeting.

LOVES NECESSITY.

Dr. D. L. Moody had been recounting the events that centered in the meetings that had been held in his Chicago church, when Harry Moorehouse from Ireland preached night after night on the great love verse—John 3:16. Said Mr. Moody:

"A man that has no one to love him, no mother, no wife, no children, no brother, no sister, belongs to the class that commits suicide. I tell you there is one thing draws above everything else in this world and that is love.

"I used to preach that God was behind the sinner with a double-edged sword ready to hew him down. I have got done with that. I preach now that God is behind him with love, and he is running away from the God of Love.

"It's pretty hard to get a crowd out in Chicago on a Monday night, but the people came. They brought their Bibles, and Moorehouse began, Beloved friends, if you will turn to . . . ' and from Genesis to Revelation he showed that God loved us. Well, I thought that he struck a high note and it was sweet to my soul to hear it. He just beat that truth down into my heart, and I have never doubted it since.

"In closing his week of meetings in my church, Mr. Moorehouse said: 'For a whole week I have been trying to tell you how much God loves you, but I cannot do it with this poor stammering tongue. If I could borrow Jacob's ladder and climb up into the heaven and ask Gabriel, who stands in the presence of the Almighty, to tell me how much the love of the Father is for this world, all he could say would be: "God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on Him should not perish, but have everlasting life." ' "

Pastors and church leaders will surely be careful to see that proper representatives attend the Christmas Conference of young people in Greensboro, North Carolina, December 28 to 30. This is not a mass meeting but it is primarily for officials of conference and Southeast young people's organizations.

THE BIRTH OF JESUS.

LESSON XII—DECEMBER 19, 1937.

GOLDEN TEXT: There is born to you this day in the city of David a Saviour, who is Christ the Lord.—Luke 2:11.

LESSON: Luke 2:1-20.

Once again we come to the Christmas season. It is an old, old story, and there is not much that is new that can be said about it. And yet the story itself is ever new even if ever old. There is a freshness and a charm and an appeal about it that warms our hearts and touches our deeper natures. It lends itself rather to poetry, however, than to prose. But alas, your scribe is no poet, so prose it will have to be in these Notes.

In the Fullness of Time

Christ was born in the fullness of time. The world was practically a unified world, Roman Peace prevailed, there was a heart-hunger in the world and the Greek language, a language that lent itself to the fine shades of meaning and which was universally spoken was the language of the day. God had made all things to conspire to have Christ born in the fullness of time.

In the Fulfillment of Prophecy.

Christ was also born in fulfillment of prophecy. Cynics may easily say that it was mere coincidence that Joseph and Mary happened to be in Bethlehem for the enrollment or census but that is too easy an explanation. Seen in its proper setting Christ's birth was an amazing fulfillment of prophecy as to time and place and purpose. The more one thinks of it the more the wonder grows.

In a Manger.

"And she brought forth her first-born son, and wrapped him in swaddling clothes and laid him in a manger." Crowded out of the inn by the throng of people who, like them, had come to be enrolled, Joseph and Mary had to take such accommodations as they could get—in this case an humble stable or shelter for animals. Here in the humblest of surroundings, unheralded and unattended, perhaps without even privacy, the Son of God was born. It would seem that God would teach us that that life is poor, indeed, which must depend upon its outward trappings. And, of course, here is the lesson written so plainly that even he who runs can read, that preoccupation with the many good things may crowd out of our lives the best. If only that Inn-keeper had known that night what he had missed! If only we knew what we miss by our preoccupation with "many things" so that there is no room or time for the Christ Child.

The Secret of the Lord.

It was not to the learned or the high and mighty or even to the scrupulously religious that the announcement of the birth of the Saviour first came, but to shepherds, humble, untutored, unlettered men, who had ears to hear and hearts to feel, the play and pressure of the spiritual. How important it is to keep the humble, child-like mind and heart. Except we have that we cannot see, much less enter the Kingdom of God.

The Message of Christmas.

"Be not afraid, or fear not, for behold I bring you good tidings of great joy which shall be to all people." God would have His children learn not to be afraid of Him, but rather

THE AGED MINISTER'S PRAYER.

Forsake me not when I am old,
When youthful vigor is no more;
When in the twilight grey and cold,
I sit and wait the summons o'er.

Forsake thee not when thou art old?
We hear the call; the churches wake,
The heart that won us to the fold
Our grateful love shall ne'er forsake.
—A Church Bulletin.

to see in the coming of His Son the basis of trust and joy. It was good news which the angel brought, indeed the word translated good tidings is the word evangel itself. It is to be noted that this good news is for all peoples. The Christmas message is essentially missionary in spirit and outreach.

A Saviour Which is Christ the Lord.

Here are three momentous words. We call Him Jesus for he is a Saviour—the angel who appeared unto Mary said that that should be his name, as did the angel who appeared unto Joseph, for He should save His people from their sins, from the power, from the penalty of sin. His supreme mission was not as Teacher but as Saviour. Jesus saves men by bringing them into the right relationship with God.

"Christ," the Anointed One. Here is the fulfillment of Old Testament prophecy. Here is the One Promised by God through His prophets. Here is the Desire of All Nations. God has sent forth His Messiah, we need not look for another, Christ is the Omega, God's final word.

"The Lord" this humble child was to become Lord of Lords and King of Kings, of the increase of His kingdom there was to be no end, He is to rule until He hath put all enemies under His feet. The Saviour who fulfilled the role of God's Anointed One is to be enthroned as Lord—this is the significance of the title: The Lord Jesus Christ."

A Babe Wrapped in Swaddling Clothes.

"And this shall be a sign unto you: ye shall find the Babe wrapped in swaddling clothes and lying in a manger." Strange sign indeed—He who had come as the Son of God was to be found in the form of a baby and in the humblest of surroundings. God works in mysterious ways, his wonders to perform. The Lord Jesus Christ "emptied himself" and humbled himself and was fashioned not only as a man but even as a Babe.

Peace Among Men in Whom He Is Well Pleased.

This is perhaps the better rendering of the original Greek. There is no peace for the earth except among men in whom God is well pleased. This child came into the world as Dr. G. Campbell Morgan says, in order that the race that is displeasing to God because of its sin and revolt and pollution may be made pleasing to God." But He is the Prince of Peace. "Of the increase of his peace as of his government there is to be no end."

Obedient to the Heavenly Vision.

"Let us now go even unto Bethlehem and see this thing which is come to pass." How much we lose because we do not immediately obey the heavenly vision. How much we miss because we do not walk in the light we have. The Shepherds obeyed the divine urge and they got the blessing. Because we so often fail to act upon our highest impulses or obey our inner divine urges, we lose the desire and the power to do it better.

In A Mother's Heart.

"And Mary kept all these things and pondered them in her heart." She "brought them together in her mind" she considered them and pondered over them. Ah, the dreams of a mother with an infant in her arms! If only we could keep faith with all their high hopes for us!

NOTES: There will not be any Notes on the Lesson for December 26th. All good wishes to my readers for a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

MONDAY.

DO YOUR CHRISTMAS THINKING
EARLY.

"Let us now go even to Bethlehem and see this thing which has come to pass."—Luke 2:15.

Every year there is a slogan, "Do Your Christmas Shopping Early" and the most of us are learning to do some of it early.

But what about our Christmas thinking? Will we let the shopping, the business and the busy whirl of everything take up our time until finally there will be no time for the essential celebration, the worship of the Christ Child. Let us go to Bethlehem in a little prayer each day this week, and let us go to Bethlehem in religious thinking concerning the Christ Child in order that the Christmas celebration may be everything it ought to be to us. Let us be sure that the celebration of our Lord's birth is not crowded out by other activities.

Thus, Christmas will find our hearts prepared for a day of honest and delightful worship.

Prayer—Our Father, we pray that we may have all the beauty and significance of the birth of our Lord Jesus Christ impressed upon our minds. May we have Thy guidance in our activities this season. In the name of Christ, we ask it. Amen.

TUESDAY.

THE CALL TO WORSHIP.

"We saw His star when it rose and are come to worship Him."—Matt. 2:2.

When Jesus was born, the world, in one particular at least, was quite like the world of today; vastly pre-occupied with its own affairs. At that time the star of the east shown in a world of confusion and of conflict, interests and purposes. That star still shines, but it still shines in a world of confusion and conflict, interests and purposes.

But throughout the years gone by, one by one has seen the star, until now there are Christians throughout the world. We are told that there are more Christians in India alone today than there were in the entire Christian world in the second and third centuries. As men and women see this star and are wise enough to follow it, they step out from the narrow confines of secular life and bow down and worship Him. This is the hope of the world.

Prayer—Our Heavenly Father, grant, we beseech Thee, that we may have the discernment to follow the Divine light of life till the coming perfect day. Though the brilliance of the garish light at Christmas time is beyond description, grant that the star of our Lord Jesus Christ, may be brighter and outshine them all. This we ask for Jesus' sake. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

THE ANGELS' SONG.

"Glory to God in the highest, and on earth, peace, good will to men."—Luke 2:14.

Christianity broke upon the world in a flood of song. It put new song in the mouths of men by giving them something to sing about and the greatest songs of mankind since that time have been about Christ.

The blessing of religious song gives us a new faith, inspires new hope, kindles a new love in our breast and gives us courage and strength to be faithful until the end. Blessed songs.

Prayer—Our Father, put a new song into our mouths everyday this week and may every thought of Christmas time be filled with the spirit of understanding. Give us ears to hear the Angels' song in our souls. In Christ's name we ask it. Amen.

THURSDAY.

THE GREATEST REVOLUTIONIST.

"For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given and the government shall be upon his shoulder, and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, the Might God, the Everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace."—Isaiah 9:6.

"He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest; the Lord shall give unto Him the throne of His Father, David."—Luke 1:32.

It is remarkable that practically everything became new after the birth of Christ; new experiences, new songs, new hopes, and new religion. The whole world seems to pivot upon the birth of Christ.

Strike the name of Christ from the world and try to enumerate the loss. The dearest and sweetest songs could not be sung, the greatest art that the world has known would have to be done away with, Christian literature would be discontinued, all business related to Christmas activities would cease. We cannot imagine what the picture would be like.

Jesus changed the world, Jesus, the highest, the loveliest, the noblest, and the mightiest. Let us not fail to give thanks and worship Him.

Prayer—Dear Saviour Divine, give us a widening conception and an intelligent understanding of what Christ means to us and to the world, and help us this day and this week in all our doings. We ask it in His name. Amen.

FRIDAY.

INCARNATE WITH CHRIST.

"And the word was made flesh and dwelt among us."—John 1:14.

The first chapter of John is a story of the existence of Christ before he was manifested in the flesh. John tells what Christ was doing throughout the unnumbered years of time. It seems that Christ had been working with unregenerates—though they did not recognize Him. Nevertheless, it is stated that he was in the world and "as many as received Him, to them He gave power to become the sons of God." But there came a time when it was necessary for Him to be manifested in the flesh, and thus He was born.

The key message of Christmas is, that we also "must be born again." Christ was born in the world that He might dwell in us. We are born in Christ, which is called "born again," that that union might be perfected and that He might be manifested through us to the world. This new birth was what Paul was talking about when he said: "I am crucified with Christ; nevertheless, I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me; and the life which I now live in the flesh, I will live by the faith of the Son of God."

Prayer—Our Father, make us realize the supreme importance of our union with Christ for the salvation of the world. Enable us to throw wide open the doors of our souls. Come, Lord Jesus and abide with us. Amen.

SATURDAY.

THE GLORIOUS MANGER.

"She laid Him in a manger."—Luke 2:7.

The manger identifies Christ with all humanity. From His birth to the cross, the life of Jesus is delightfully human. He dwelt among men humbly, but gloriously; gloriously because He lived as others lived. Everywhere He "dwelt among them full of grace and truth." Everywhere the people hung upon His words and when He was gone from them, we are told that they "felt that He was a friend."

This is our King. Let us worship Him.

GIVING JOY TO CHILDREN.

By REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D.

"Whosoever shall receive one of such children, receiveth me; and whosoever shall receive me, receiveth not me, but him that sent me."—Mark 10:37.

Giving joy to children is one of the things that makes Christmas such a time of universal happiness. Giving joy is joy-giving, and should be an all year round business. Giving joy to children is a very happy business, indeed. If one wishes to be remembered throughout the months, and years of a long lifetime let him give joy to little folks along the way. He will store up treasures in the heaven of their hearts which neither time nor tears can erase. I see them still standing out in my memory. Those adults who gave the little boy that I used to be happiness. And if I may speak a word today to carry you in pleasant memory in scores of little folks hearts until the years grow old I shall be happy.

Jesus received the children. And He taught us to receive them. And He tells us an advantage that comes from receiving the children that we may often overlook. He says that they who receive children receive Him. And He then tells us that they who receive Him, receive God who sent Him. He is saying that through the heart of a little child we may walk into the throne-room of God! One of life's greatest questions is: How may I receive God? How may I have Him? How may I know, fellowship, and commune with God? You will find an answer in the text of the morning: "Whosoever shall receive one of such children, receiveth me; and whosoever receiveth me, receiveth not me, but him that sent me."

That day when Jesus entered the house in Capernaum He had a very important matter to discuss with the men who were to carry forward that which He began to do and teach. It was a very important matter. He had heard them disputing along the way about who should be greatest among them. There was no more perilous proposition than that. That dispute has wrecked many a man and measure since that day. Jesus must set that right with His followers at once. So the conference which He would have now that He was "in the house" and ready would be a most important one. "Go away, children, the Master is busy" is not what He said to the little folks in that house.

And by which I do not mean that there are not times when children themselves may be much happier and the business at hand the better attended to if they ran along. But I am calling your attention to a consideration of the Children by Jesus which is unusually beautiful.

What did Jesus do? "He sat down and called the twelve." Was there ever a much more important meeting in the light of history, and all that followed, than that? What did He say? "If any man desire to be first, the same shall be last of all and servant of all." One man takes up his time with leading great armies of great men; Jesus takes up part of His time loving the little children of Palestine. Was there ever such heroism and growth of the church shown as that which followed about the time the little folk of Jesus' day marched forward with the picture of the Master in their minds?

The disciples would never forget that hour. They perhaps sat about that circle afraid of what the Master might say to them. Even when Jesus asked them what they had been disputing about they held their peace, for they were quite conscious of their error. But instead of upbraiding them for their selfishness, "He took a child, and set him in the midst of them; and when he had taken him in His arms He said unto them: Whosoever shall receive one of such children receiveth me; and whosoever receiveth me, receiveth not me, but him that sent me."

So, at the council table of Jesus sat the children. They were never overlooked. Their innocence. Their need. Their future. Their teachableness all attracted the attention of the Great Teacher. He blessed them, and loved them. He was one man who loved little children, who also loved great sinners. Today we hear the expression, "Oh! I am so fond of little children, but I simply have no patience with that impetuous father of theirs." Not Jesus that! Jesus had in that house in Capernaum one of the world's most impetuous men—of him he made the first apostle of all time! He had plenty of patience with Peter! Thank God for that. He had patience with the children, and with the childish, so there is room in His heart for all.

And there will be room in the heart of His saints for the little ones. They will not forget the lesson in Capernaum taught. They will still place the child in the midst of their hearts, of their homes, and of their hopes.

"There are idols of hearts and of households, They are angels of God in disguise; His sunlight still sleeps in their tresses,, His glory still gleams in their eyes; Those truants from home and from heaven They have made me manly and mild; And I know now how Jesus could have likened The Kingdom of Heaven to a child."

Two of the greatest departments of this church's school are the Cradle Roll, and the Beginner's departments. And the hope of a home is not the guest room, as beautiful and necessary as that is, but the hope of the home is the nursery. The hope of the church is its children. And by the children I mean here all those this side of adulthood. A few years ago it was a favorite pastime of many reformers to tell how the church had neglected the children. Well, I am thankful to say that I have never known personally any such church. Forty years ago I was a little child in a little one-room country church. But notice, I say I was in the church. And so were there dozens of others. And there was no place in all that countryside that the children loved more than that church. That church had a heart and mind for the children and so have the churches I have known personally ever since that day.

This church seeks to give joy to its children. It spares nothing to make them happy. It seeks to teach them the true secret of happiness. All of us are not teachers in the Children's Division of our Sunday School, but we all have a part in providing for their churchly needs. And there is even a larger place we may fill than that, namely, our attitude toward the children in our homes, in our schools, on our streets, everywhere. We can love the children. Not a thoughtless sentimentality that ruins the child for lack of direction, faith, encouragement, understanding, and discipline; but a love which seeks to give children immediate joy, and at the same time everlasting happiness.

And there are returns. God has seen to that. For whosoever receives the children receives God. Many a young man has been rather too free and thoughtless until he has felt his own child in his arms, and then life has taken on a fuller meaning, and a greater joy. And yet we do not have to be a parent to love and serve little children. Jesus was not a parent, and yet all that is best in loving little

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:—

You certainly did give us a strong push this week. By your strong pushing we were able to climb above three rings in our financial ladder. We passed the fifteenth, sixteenth and seventeenth rung. We have three more to pass to reach our goal. Just $2,923.08 to reach the goal—what are you going to do about it? Are you going to push us up to it or will you let us fail. It depends entirely upon you. We are doing our best. Are you doing your best.

The Thanksgiving offering taken in our churches goes to support the little children in our orphanage. Did you make any sacrifice at all when you made your offering? Did you realize that it takes a lot of money to run an orphanage with nearly a hundred children in it? They are to be trained for good citizenship. How much are you doing to help?

Our churches at Wincheste and Timber Ridge sent us a truck load of 150 bushels of fine apples several weeks ago. It was fine of them to do this and the entire orphanage family was made happy.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON,
Superintendent.

A GOOD FAMILY HONORED.

On Sunday morning, December 5th, Rev. J. F. Morgan, just before the sermon, said:

"I want to take this opportunity this morning to express to Brother J. R. Morrison, Sr., my personal congratulations, and also the best wishes and congratulations of Rosemont Christian Church on this his 77th birthday. Brother Morrison has been a deacon and a trustee of his church during her entire history of 35 years, and has meant a great deal to the church during this time. He was also the first Sunday school superintendent. "Nor has this service to his church been confined to Brother Morrison alone. Beginning with the fine service rendered by his mother, and carried on by his faithful wife, and himself, the good work is still being carried on by his splendid children and grand-children.

"Of his family of six children, four have been teachers in our Sunday school, all six have been officers of our school, and all six have at times been officers of Rosemont Church. Five of his grand-children have been officers or teachers in our Sunday school.

"His daughters-in-law have also been most helpful workers in our church. Of these Mrs. Annie, Mrs. Ella, and Mrs. Dorothy Morrison deserve special mention.

"Special mention should be made of the long and most efficient service of H. R. Morrison, our Sunday school superintendent, and Mrs. Sallie Roane, as teacher and leader of our young people. I deserve to express to these my personal appreciation for this faithful service, and to all the other members of the Morrison family for what they have meant to Rosemont Church through the years.

"So, Brother Morrison, we congratulate you on this your birthday, and we thank you not only for the good you have rendered our Rosemont Church, but we also thank you for the splendid family you have given to our church and to our community."

Do not let Santa Claus push the Christ-child out of the Christmas program.

In Memoriam

BROWN.

On Thanksgiving Day, November 25, 1937, the death angel entered the home of Mr. Roy Brown and bore the spirit of his loving wife, Mrs. Erma Gerringer Brown, to God's mansion of love and glory beyond.

Our beloved sister and friend was a lifelong, faithful and active member of Apple's Chapel Congregational-Christian Church and also a charter member of the Ladies Aid Society.

While knowing the pew she filled in her church, home, and community will always be vacant, we believe that our loss is her divine gain and that she is now happy with the redeemed in God's mansion of glory.

Whereas, by her going we shall sadly miss her kindly smile, her quiet manner, and her great and steady devotion to her church, Sunday school, and Ladies Aid Society, being always ready to give of her time and means; therefore be it resolved:

First, that we submit to God's will, trusting in His great wisdom and loving kindness and mercy;

Second, that the memory of her life shall ever be an inspiration and encouragement to us all;

Third, that we extend our deepest sympathy to her bereaved family and commend them to God who is ever present and can heal all sorrows;

Fourth, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to her bereaved family, a copy sent to "The Christian Sun" for publication, and a copy be spread on the minutes of the Ladies Aid Society.

TAYLOR.

On August 18, 1937, Almighty God, in His infinite wisdom saw fit to call to His home beyond the grave our dearly beloved Brother, Deacon H. Tazewell Taylor, of Bethlehem Christian Church. He died as he had lived, a saintly worshipper of Christ which characterized the ideals of a firmly established faith, and the beauties of the presence of God graced him and revealed a quiet, peaceful, Christian spirit.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That in the passing of Brother Taylor, the Board of Deacons lost a faithful member and that we will hold in loving remembrance his faithfulness, and be guided by the light of the useful life he left behind.

2. That we bow in humble submission to the will of our Heavenly Father always remembering that "He doeth all things according to His loving kindness and tender mercy."

3. That we extend our heartfelt sympathy to his family and commend them to God whose grace is sufficient in the hour of trouble.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, that copy be sent to "The Christian Sun" for publication and a copy be entered upon the records of our church.

Respectfully submitted,
Board of Deacons,
Bethlehem Church.

BRINKLEY.

Whereas, in the Providence of our Heavenly Father, Mr. Fairlee F. Brinkley has been called from labor to reward, and whereas he was a faithful and devoted member of Liberty Spring Christian Church, and, as such, filled a number of official positions in said church with great acceptance, and whereas we desire to record our sincere appreciation of his life and work in our fellowship, therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we hereby express our gratitude to God for his life in our midst.

2. That we bow in humble submission to the will of our heavenly Father in this hour of bereavement.

That we express to his family our sympathy and assure them of our prayers and Christian fellowship.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be entered upon our church records, a copy sent to the bereaved family, and a copy sent to "The Christian Sun" for publication.

FAMILY ALTAR.

Prayer—Our Father, we pray for the gift of Jesus Christ in our hearts, in greater reality than we have known. Enable us to see His humanity as well as Divinity. Enable us to feel His grace and His goodness. Make us know His friendship and brotherhood and from now on guide our spirits into union and deep fellowship with Him. In His name we ask it. Amen.

SUNDAY.

LOVE IS BORN.

"We know that we have passed from death unto life because we love the brethren."—Jno. 3:14.

When Christ was born into the world, a love was born which the world had never known before. The birth of our Lord Jesus Christ has for its counter-part, the "new birth" of the soul, a birth which He described as fundamentally necessary for union with Him and for the perfection of Christian graces in us. It is by this new birth that we become "the salt of the earth," and it is by this saving force, which He imparts to us in this spirit I like, that we can say, "we know that we have passed from death unto life because we love our brother."

Prayer—Our Father, we thank Thee for Thy tender affections through Jesus Christ. We thank Thee for the tender affections of our kin, for the loving embrace of our brothers and sisters, for the brotherhood of Christian people. We thank Thee for Jesus who is our love on earth. We pray for the deep consciousness of the "new birth" and its meaning. And so we dedicate ourselves to Thee. Amen.

SUN'S PULPIT.

folks is epitomized in Him. I am reminded of Helen Welshimer's poem:

"I'll not send little girls to school,
Blue ribbons on their hair;
I'll not warn little boys to watch
For fear their pants will tear.

"I'll never fill a cookie jar
With spicy, fragrant things
And know a whispered secret,
Or a round, red mouth that clings.

"Or hum a snatch of lullabies
When heads begin to nod,
And figure how to buy new shoes—
I wanted to though, God!"

Do flowers sweeten your day, and music sway your spirit? In a far larger and more lasting way let the children sweeten your soul. Many a hard heart has been made soft, and a cold heart warm by the friendship of a little child.

"Perhaps there are tenderer things
Somewhere in the sun-bright land;
But I thank the Lord for His Blessings,
And the clasp of a little hand."

CAROLINA ACCEPTS!

Virginia Congregational and Christian ministers and Churches challenged the Carolina ministers and Churches to a battle-royal for "Sun" subscriptions. Carolina accepts!

"The Sun" is the Cause of both Virginia and Carolina. The ministers feel it is a sacred Cause. The Cause is losing ground. It is hard pressed at a most strategic and vital point. Virginia challenges Carolina to an intense rivalry in support for "The Sun." "The Sun" is in a bad way financially. The exchequer has gotten lower than low. It must be built up, restored to a condition of dignity and strength. It must be more than balanced! How can this be done? At what point can our attack be most effective? The answer to this question is simple. The first and chief and most legitimate source of income for "The Sun" is through subscriptions. The battle really is to find whether we want "The Sun." If we want "The Sun," then we will have to increase the circulation of "The Sun." Virginia challenges Carolina to engage with her in a conflict for "Sun" subscriptions. The challenge is to increase the circulation of "The Sun." These Virginians have the effrontery to suggest there is more devotion to "The Sun" in Virginia than there is in Carolina. That among them there is a finer loyalty. And they state they will prove these things are so by securing for "The Sun" more new subscriptions than we, in Carolina, can. Does this not make the tar ooze?

Come, Carolinians! Gird yourselves for the fray! Prepare for battle! To your tents, O Carolinians! The bugles will be blowing the charge in a few days. Up and at them. Sore their backs!

Come, Western Conference! Come, Eastern Conference! Come, North Carolina and Virginia Conference! Follow your noble and courageous leaders—Brady, Hyde and Crutchfield. These men never batted an eye in the presence of any enemy.

The plan of campaign will presently be forwarded these leaders from General Headquarters. Be prepared to the last button to move forward to victory at their command.

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

EASTERN NORTH CAROLINA CONFERENCE NOTES.

Arrangements will soon be completed for the formation of a Pastorate at Franklinton, North Carolina.

A special Committee appointed at Conference has placed Rev. Emmanuel Hedgebeth at the Mebane Church. Mr. Hedgebeth began his work there the second Sunday in December.

* * *

Rev. S. E. Madren and Rev. J. Everette Neese attended the regular monthly meeting of the Piedmont Congregational-Christian Ministers' meeting at Elon College. Rev. Mr. Madren reviewed a portion of E. Stanley Jones' book, "Victorious Living." This was the second in three reviews to be given on this book.

* * *

Rev. J. Everette Neese, Rev. S. E. Madren, and Mr. E. M. Powell conducted a joint Christmas and Communion service at the Beulah Christian Church, Tuesday night, December 14th. This church has been without a pastor since conference, but arrangements have been made for a supply pastor until spring.

There was presented at the Henderson Congregational-Christian Church, Sunday night, December 19th, a Christmas Pageant entitled "The Holy Nativity." The pageant was written and directed by Mrs. J. Everette Neese. The pageant began with the prophecy of the Prophet Isaiah and the story was taken up in the New Testament when Mary and Joseph visited the Inn in Bethlehem. The scene of the Shepherds was given and the pageant closed with the Holy Family being visited by the Shepherds and the Wise Men. A special offering was received for Superannuation.

I take this means of extending to the readers of my Sunday School Notes, and to readers of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, too, my sincere and hearty good wishes for a Merry Christmas Season, and a Happy New Year. May the Spirit of Christmas, the spirit of good will be yours. May the joy of Christ gladden your hearts. And may the faith that brought the shepherds and the wise men to worship Him stimulate and steady you through the days of the New Year and bring you peace.

THE CHRISTMAS SECRET.

By REV. ROY C. HELFENSTEIN, D. D.

Have you learned the Christmas Secret? It is the most wonderful secret in life!

Why is it that Christmas seems to bring heaven nearer to earth? As if by magic, joy and cheer seem to spring up everywhere at Christmas time. The clouds of life seem to brighten, the burdens of life seem to lighten, the anchors of life seem to tighten and life for us seems more secure as Christmas draws near.

The reason for all this is the fact that Christmas is the time of all the year when people think most of others. This is the secret of Christmas cheer and the Christmas joy which is seen and felt wherever you go. That is the secret of the change in the very atmosphere during the Christmas season. Selfishness gives place to altruism. Indifference toward others gives place to thoughtfulness of others. The happiness of others becomes our chief concern. People think about those they love—how to make them happy. They think about the needy, those less fortunate than themselves—and how to minister to their needs.

That is why some people are the happiest at Christmas time—it is because they think more of others, and try to do more for others than at other times. People who do not think of others, and of how to make others happy at Christmas, do not find Christmas any different than any other days.

Christmas joy and cheer are largely an expression of our own creative powers. We create for ourselves and for others the Christmas atmosphere by thinking of others more than of self. We could create the Christmas Joy every day of the year if we would but practice the wondrous Christmas Secret every day—"thinking of others more than of self." The Apostle Paul reminded the Elders at Ephesus about this wonderful secret given the world by Him whose birthday Christmas celebrates. "Remember the words of the Lord Jesus, how He said 'It is more blessed to give than to receive',"—in other words said Paul, "People find greater happiness in giving than in getting."

And the true joy of Christmas is only expressed by those who at this time and at all other times of the year are conscious of the fact that they have given themselves to the Christ and that they are daily giving themselves to the world in Christian service. Those who have sincerely given themselves to Christ and are giving their best in Christ-like service to their fellowman find that Christmas joy is not determined by gifts received from others but by the love they may show to others in His name.

If this great Christmas Secret were known and practiced by everyone, what a happy world this would be.

WHAT WE WANT FOR CHRISTMAS.

For Christmas this year we want many things. We do not ask for gifts of substance or trinkets of a passing day; these are too cheap.

We want a real Christmas this year. A Christmas which will bring us anew the vision of the Star in the East, the Bethlehem Babe, the Song of the Angels and the assurance of Peace on Earth and Good Will Among Men.

We want a new appreciation of life abundant; even though we must purchase it at the price of hardship and suffering.

We want work which will utilize all of our talents; work that will be constructive the whole year around in building a better society; work so purposeful that by-standers may desire to emulate it.

We want courage, much of it, too! Courage to think and live at the maximum. Courage that assures us that yesterday's defeats shall put no restraints on tomorrow's victories. Courage that will keep our faces toward the sunrise, our hearts unafraid and our feet in the path of duty.

We want friends, many of them—old friends and new friends of whom we may prove worthy—whose burdens we may lighten and whose confidence and understanding we may share.

What we want for ourselves we desire for you also.

A Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

JOE AND CAROLINE.

THE BIRTH OF JESUS.

By REV. GEORGE OLEJAR.

[Read before the Minister's Union of the Eastern Virginia Conference.]

One who would faithfully and worthily speak or write about the birth of Christ must have a profound knowledge and a pen dipped in the imaginative sympathy of a poet, in the prophet's fire, in the artist's charm and grace and in the reverence and purity of the saint. No one has all of these qualifications that would enable him to present the perfect picture of the birth of Jesus. It is a difficult task for me to speak about Christ's nativity before a group of ministers who have a deep insight and great understanding about the matter. But since some of you insisted that I should speak I will endeavor to do the best I can.

First, let us see what political situation existed before Christ was born. From the age of the Exile, the Jews in Palestine were greatly dominated by Persians, Greeks, Egyptians, and Syrians. Then we see the country incorporated in the Roman Empire as a division of Syria. Herod-the-Great reigned over Palestine. When he died his dominions were divided among his three sons; but on the deposition of Archelaus in 6 A. D., Judea and Samaria were placed under a Roman procurator. Herod Antipas ruled over Galilee and Philip over Iturea. The Roman rule was felt by the Jews when they expressed any national feeling, and also the exactions of the publicans to whom the taxes were farmed. Internal administration was largely an affair of the Jewish Church. To the Jews, with memories of former freedom and power, the loss of national independence was bitter, and their national restlessness under the foreign yoke, combined as it was with the Messianic hopes that formed a most vital element of their religion, was a source of anxiety and worry, not only to the Roman authorities, but to their leaders also.

The religious situation was dark, uncertain. The exaltation of the ceremonial and formal side of religion was used as a substitute for personal piety and righteousness of life. The Pharisees were covetous and inhuman, which gave the colour of hypocrisy to their ritualistic scruples. Then there were Sadducees who composed the powerful ecclesiastic sacred institution, which veiled the living God of Israel. They were the ones who filled the priestly offices, controlled the Sanhedrin and tried to have correct relations with their Roman masters. Josephus tells us that they professed an aristocratic dislike to public business but which they dominated; and that they humored the multitude by an occasional show of religious zeal.

But not a few men and women nourished on the religion of the Old Testament were patiently waiting for the salvation of God. This is just a fractional description of the political situation of the Jews when Jesus was born.

Now, may we open the best Book of books, and search for the light that would lead us to the source of knowledge in regard to the prophecies of Christ's birth.

IF CHRIST HAD NOT BEEN BORN.

Christmastide, 1937.

By John H. Horst.

Our times are out of joint, it seems,
Accursed by strife and greed;
And many lands are swept by war
Whose wake leaves direful need.
And yet amid this maze of woes,
Chaotic and forlorn,
We wonder what this world would be—
"If Christ had not been born."

Around us there are lovely souls,
So many we recount,
Who still embody in their deeds
The sermon on the mount.
And in the days of stress we find
No matter where we go,
Samaritans still ride to serve
The roads to Jericho.

Dispirited at times we feel
The world has sealed its doom,
And then we hear that symphony
Dispelling all our gloom;
Our dormant faith has soared anew,
To Bethlehem we bring;
We mingle with the shepherds band
And hear the angels sing.

Oh yes, the times are out of joint,
So many feel depressed,
And yet withal we glimpse the things
By which our lives are blessed.
We call to mind the ancient days
Before that Natal morn,
And visualize the ghastliness—
"If Christ had not been born."

In Genesis 3:15, we read:

"And I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed; it shall bruise thy head, and thou shalt bruise his heel."

No doubt that the seed of the woman refers to the Saviour. "The sceptre shall not depart from Judah, nor a law-giver from between his feet, until Shiloh comes and unto him shall the gathering of the people be."—Gen. 49:10. Here is the prophecy of Moses by which he upheld the hopes of the Jewish people in regard to the coming of Messiah, and Isaiah prophesied the birth of Jesus when he said: "For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given, and the government shall be upon his shoulders; and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counselor, The Might God, The Everlasting Father, and The Prince of Peace"—Isaiah 9:6.

As to the place of birth of Jesus, the prophet Micah foretold it in these beautiful words: "Bethlehem Ephrata, though thou be little among the thousands of Judah, yet out of thee shall he come forth unto me that is to be the ruler in Israel!"—Micah 5:2. Jeremiah gave Israel the wonderful insight of the safety and righteousness in Jesus: "Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will raise unto David a righteous Branch and a King shall reign and prosper and shall execute judgement and justice in the earth. In his days Judah shall be saved, and Israel shall dwell safely; and this is his name whereby he shall be called, The Lord Our Righteousness"—Jer. 23:5. Of course, there are so many other Old Testament prophecies that you are well familiar with.

The people of Israel had a vivid picture of the Deliverer and it ever was the burden of their prayers that the day might come quickly. The question, whether their hope has been realized—or rather, whether One has appeared whose claims to be the Messiah have stood the test of investigation and of time—impartial history can make only one answer. It points to Bethlehem and to Nazareth—Bethlehem, House of Bread.

Bethlehem, the sacred spot where Jacob had his great grief, when his beloved Rachael was taken from him. There are the fields where Ruth came to reap, and to win the heart of Boaz, and one which she and her husband afterwards make so many reapers happy. There are the plains where David kept his father's sheep, and learned to sing those songs that to the end of time are to supply the worship of all nations. It was in these plains that the shepherds were keeping their flocks by night, when the announcement was made by the angel: "Fear not; for behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord"—Luke 2:10. It was there, too, that the great gospel anthems fell upon their ears in all its divine beauty and thrilling force—"Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men"—Luke 2:14. So Bethlehem became surrounded with a halo of glory to the end of time.

Nazareth was a town in the north of the Plains of Esdraelon. Here it was where Mary and Joseph lived. It was here where Mary had that most beautiful, mystical manifestation of

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgement and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

Christ's Birthday

THE CHRISTMAS MESSAGE OF DR. LUKE.

The Third Gospel was written by the beloved physician who traveled with St. Paul. He says in the introduction that he had full knowledge of the story of Jesus from the very beginning. It is not strange that the doctor tells about a mother and a baby. Neither is it strange that he has something to say concerning relatives whose lives are intermingled with those of the hero and the heroine in the story which he presents.

The doctor tells of a faithful priest ministering in the temple whose wanted son should be called John. He tells of Elizabeth whose son John was born in her old age. The doctor describes a fair virgin who is told by an angel that she is to become the mother of the Messiah.

The doctor gives the date and place of the birth of the baby Jesus. Probably no attending physician ministered at the manger in Bethlehem, but shepherds watching their flocks by night out on the hills nearby saw the glory of the Lord, listened to the message of an angel and heard the melody that came from the heavens on the night of the birth of "Christ the Lord." The doctor says there was no room in the Inn, but the heavens made room for an angel-choir to sing "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men." The inn keeper had no room for poor people of Nazareth, but the shepherds rushed down from the hills to see what had come to pass, and returned rejoicing and praising God because they had found a Saviour even as the angels had told them.

This writer does not understand all of the things that the doctor said, but he does hope that at the Christmas time members of "The Christian Sun" family will hear some of the harmony of God's heavens, will get some new message from the heart of the father, and will, like the shepherds, go to some lonely quarter where babies are born in places not fit for cattle and by helping to lift these babies out of their unhappy surroundings find for themselves exceeding great joy. Christmas is the time for singing and for service. The two must go together, or else they both fail. There are multitudes of fathers and mothers and little children who await the Christmas message that tells about a saving influence here in the world that lifts men into the presence of God.

MATTHEW'S MESSAGE.

The writer of the First Gospel was probably the same Matthew, or Levi, who sat at the receipt of custom until Jesus called him to be His disciple. He was the servant of a king, and he knew rich men when he saw them. It is not strange, therefore, that when he wrote an account of the One for whom he left the table of the tax collector and the service of a king, he told not of angels, but of wise men (rich men, kings) who came from afar to bring gifts to the Christ child.

He explained that Joseph was a good man and was not willing to make a public example of the girl he had promised to marry. He thought to put her away privately, but the messenger of God told him that she was a good girl and that Mary should be his wife. Joseph obeyed the message of God rather than the impulse of his own heart and the dictates of public opinion. Mary became his bride, and when her baby was born they called Him Jesus—Saviour, for He saved them as well as others.

Matthew, the publican, says that wise men, kings, brought their gifts to a baby king without being compelled to do so. They studied the stars, looked up into heaven, and were directed to a Bethlehem Babe where they presented rich gifts of gold, and frankincense, and myrrh. The man who left his money changers tables and the service of King Herod would have us believe that it is wise to travel far and make costly gifts for the sake of the Christ. The advice is valuable, for he knows kings, wise men, rich men, good men, and little children. At Christmas time we make our love offering for the Christ in order that the people of earth may know more of the joys of every day experience.

A CHRISTLESS CHRISTMAS.

For long centuries the Christian Church has celebrated the birth of Christ. Special services have been held in the churches, greetings sent to friends, and the spirit of giving allowed to dominate for a day. Great literature and music have come into being for this special occasion. One serious thought makes it seem reasonable that all who love the Christ should gather in the Father's house on this day to enjoy His fellowship.

But, alas! Thousands and thousands of churches are cold and closed on this great day of days. The world offers its entertainment, business demands attention, and social engagements almost make us forget what it is all about. It seems to the writer that on Christmas Eve every Christian should take the time to go to his church and there on bended knee say, "Father, I thank Thee." That will not take long, and certainly God would be pleased and your heart will be the happier. Watch for the church with a light in it at Christmas Eve, slip in and pray, and pass out quietly. Keep Christ in your Christmas.

Many are now spelling it "Xmas." In Algebra an "x" stands for an unknown quantity. Christmas with Christ left out is a thing of doubtful value. "Xmas Greetings" are as poor as an "Xmas program" in which Santa Claus becomes the hero and Christ has no room. The great men slept in the inn while Jesus was born in a manger, but now Jesus is loved by millions while the "great men" of the inn are forgotten. Keep Christ in your Christmas—in its greetings and in its programs.

Did you ever hear it said, "Christmas comes but once a year, and if I get drunk you need not care?" Even some church people have thought that the way to do homage to Christ on His birthday was to get drunk. This Christmas hundreds and perhaps thousands of mothers will anxiously await the coming of the husband and father only to be greeted by a beastly brute full of alcoholic liquors. Instead of joy, there will be sorrow; instead of the laughter of children, there will be weeping. And the reason for this is that Christ is left out of Christmas.

KEEP CHRIST IN YOUR CHRISTMAS.

JOY IN THE WORLD.

Writing to "The Sun" from Puerto Rico, in November, several years ago the statement was made that I would not like to spend Christmas there as there could not be much Christmas where mosquitoes were humming around. To me Christmas cheer and joy were somehow dependent upon falling snow, cold, crisp air outside and a blazing fire inside. A blending of youthful and erroneous ideas! Christmas joy and cheer do not depend upon climate, weather or whereabouts. From war-maddened, suicidal Japan comes a lovely card, "Greetings and a Merry Christmas"; one also from suffering, bleeding, peace-loving, but now war-torn China, "A Happy Christmas, a Glad New Year"; and from sunny, tropical Puerto Rico, "Gladness and Joy this Happy Christmas Time." Thus, the Christ-spirit is confined to no tongue, nation or people. On the night of the Nativity, when the angel of the Lord appeared and spoke to the shepherds who were tending their flocks on the Judean hills this is what they heard: "Behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy which shall be to all the people." These tidings of joy have not yet gone to all "the people" though they have now gone to all the nations. And so, in all parts of earth, though not yet among all the people, will be heard again at this Christmas season, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace among men in whom He is well pleased." If the earth is not filled with joy and gladness now, it is all due to the folly, stupidity and weakness of man. God has done His part and wishes that peace may rule in every heart.

It is only commonplace, and a platitude to say we have commercialized Christmas, turned it into a revelry and mad rush of buying and selling. And yet in spite of all that the greed and avarice of man can do, the spirit of Him who gave us Christmas persists. Much of the trading is for presents—something to give to others, with the hope and expectation that somehow we may make other hearts glad and other homes happy.

This city of Orlando is indeed in her regalia and most colorful adornment. Christmas carols float from and across her placid, brilliantly lighted lakes; her shops are brilliant within and without with electrical illuminations of every color of the rainbow; and hundreds of her beautiful homes and inviting hotels are competing with each other with their appropriate and lovely Christmas lights and decorations in windows, over arched doorways, and her tropical lawns. Dwellers from the four corners come here to live through the winter and bring the happiest ideas of Christmas each year from his own home town, and when thus blended, the best from everywhere here the effect is appalling, amazing, and glorious. But however varied and distinct the display and the decorations, all know that it spells just one word—"Christmas." This reveals something of the significance and real meaning of Acts 2:7-11: "And they marvelled, saying, Behold, are not all of these that speak Galileans? And how hear we every man in our own language wherein we were born? Parthians, and Medes, and Elamites, dwellers in Cappadocia, in Pontus and Asia, in Phrygia and Pamphylia, in Egypt, and sojourners from Rome, both Jews and Proselytes, Cretans and Arabians, we hear them speaking in our own tongues the mighty works of God." Yes, in spite of man's folly the language of Christmas is the same everywhere and speaks the wonderful words of God.

A CHRISTMAS PRAYER.

Lord, make my heart Thine inn!

Wide-open door;

Clean rushes on the floor;

Each lamp well trimmed and burning bright;

My table set for Thee on Christmas night—

No manger now awaits, if Thou wilt come

To grace this home!

All, all is Thine!

O Guest divine!

Lord, enter in!

Lord, make my mind Thy star!

A shining world

That sees unfurled

Heaven's banners waving over Thee, its King,

And stops to listen while the angels sing!

So let me pause in all the rush and roar

Of passion seeking more;

Shine with Thy light

On Christmas night,

Thy flaming star!

Lord, make my life Thy song!

Help me to sing

While anvils ring!

Let brain and body join Thee in Thy toil,

Till love and labor build God's city; foil

The lust and hate and selfishness and wrong

That spoil the song;

Till heaven's choirs

And pealing spires

Join in Thy carillon!

So would I keep Thy birthday, Christmas, Lord;

Kneel at Thy feet

With shepherds; greet

Thy coming with the Magi's wondrous gift;

Enfold Thee, as Thy gracious mother lifts

Thee in her arms, the miracle of time,

God's gift sublime!

An inn, a star, a song—

All, all to Thee, belong,

O Guest adored!

SUFFOLK LETTER.

For four years it has been my privilege to furnish a weekly contribution to the readers of THE SUN, under the familiar heading, "Suffolk Letter." This title or "heading" was popularized by the pen of my dear friend the late Dr. W. W. Staley. I have not often used the first person in these messages. Because this is a "Christmas Issue" readers will be charitable enough to permit me to make this personal chat.

I wish to thank the many friends who, by letter and in person, have been kind enough to express to me their appreciation of these "Letters." I have enjoyed the privilege extended to me, although I have had a sense of responsibility every week, when I have turned to my typewriter to write for THE SUN. I have been under the impression that the spirit of my dear friend, who wrote for this column, so acceptably, for so many years, was near me. And I have thought much about the needs of that company of people who read the Church Paper. Many of them are shut in because of age or infirmity. All have a heart hunger. It has been my wish that some sentence may help in an hour of spiritual need.

And now we are thinking of Christmas. Many changes have come during the year. Some names have been stricken from the list of those to be remembered by giving presents. Vacant chairs in the living room and at the Christmas dinner table speak silently of bereavements in the family and in the circle of friends. The silence of a vacant chair is more eloquent than human speech. To those who know the meaning of that eloquence I would be a message of mutual understanding and sympathy. When our parents are away Christmas is different. Any break in the family is keenly felt at this season of the year. But memory will review other days and associations, and the heart will be enriched by the return of this festive season.

Christmas belongs to the Christians of the world. Pagan business has commercialized the birthday of Jesus, and tried to rob the day of its spiritual significance. Dispensers of alcoholic beverages prepare for an increased trade for those who wish to celebrate by drinking. A woman, yes, a mother, passed along the streets of Suffolk last night half singing: "Christmas is coming and I'll get drunk and walk where I please." Christmas is largely in the hands of paganism and worldliness, and it is the privilege of the Christian people to rescue it and elevate this day to its rightful place as a religious occasion. Here is a wish that readers of THE SUN may have a Happy Christmas, enriched by the conscious presence of Jesus Christ and observed as the birthday of the King, of Kings and Lord of all the earth.

Christmas should be a joyful day. "Joy to the World the Lord is

FOLLOW THE STAR.

By Mildred M. North.

Shepherds were out on the hillsides
Watching their flocks in the night,
Suddenly out of the heavens
God sent an angel of light:
"Fear not, I bring you good tidings,
News of a Saviour's birth,
Yonder in Bethlehem's manger
Christ has come down to the earth."

Follow the Star! Hear the angels again
Singing of peace and goodwill unto men!

Out of the East in their splendor
Wise men came riding from far,
Over the sands of the desert
Led by a wonderful Star,
Straight to the Baby it led them—
Jesus—so winning and sweet,
Gladly they gave him their treasures
Kneeling in joy at His feet.

Follow the Star! Still it shines for us now,
Still at the feet of the Christ we may bow!

Agnes have passed since the angels
Sang over Bethlehem's hill,
Telling the shepherds of Jesus,
Singing of peace and goodwill.
Still we repeat the glad tidings
Telling the story again,
How that from sin He might save us
Jesus came down among men.

Follow the Star! Let us worship again

Come," should ring in every Christian household. Let the family come home. Renew family ties. Eat together at the family table. Exchange presents. Let heaven and earth rejoice over the sanctity of the Christian home. Let us take courage because of the new hope of peace born afresh in human hearts. Jesus shall reign over the earth. His name will be heard around the world over radio on Christmas night. Little children will sing His praise in chapel and church. In spite of paganism Jesus has a great place in Christmas. And may it be the occasion when He shall find a larger place in our hearts.

I. W. JOHNSON.

CHRISTMAS.

At this season of the year we think of prophesy and of the fulfilling of prophesy, of the time when holy men of old, moved by the spirit, spoke of the far away time when one would come as the gift of God to a sinful world. Very rapidly we cross the centuries and hear the strange music of an angels' chorus singing, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men." Prophesy had been fulfilled, Christ had been born, and a new day had come for men and for the world.

Today as our minds and hearts are refreshed with such promise and reality, we find joy in trying to translate such facts into our own individual experiences. Truly, Christ was born in Bethlehem, He lived His life, He died His death on the cross, He arose from the dead and liveth ever more in the hearts of the faithful. The purpose of His coming was to save men from their sins in order that there might be peace and good will on earth toward all. After more than nineteen centuries His kingdom has increased and His church has spread to almost every land, and still man is void of the peace that he would bring. The good will which He died to insure, in far too many instances, has been turned into hatred. Today we find ourselves in the midst of a warring world. Nation is arrayed against nation, race against race, and section against section.

It is time for the fulfillment of another prophesy. "... The nations shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning-hooks: nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more." It is the responsibility of the church of Christ in the earth to see that this prophesy is fulfilled. This does not mean that the church shall take up the sword and march to battle to teach the warring nations of the world the way of peace, but it does mean that the church is to purify herself and possess Christ and His spirit in such a marked degree that we—that is, the church—shall become the leaven that shall leaven the whole of society from one end of the world to the other. The church can hardly become the leaven for the purification and the redemption of society so long as her members are selfish and grafty, seeking for material gain from every possible avenue—not refusing gain from the profits of war and war material, but welcoming the opportunity for such increases.

When the Christ was born in the hearts of the disciples themselves, they gladly forsook the world, denied themselves, took up the cross, and followed Him. May this be the day, even though it be in great travail, when Christ shall be born anew in the heart of His church and the "refiners fire" be made to burn within until worldliness, selfishness, and greed are no more. Then in the freedom of the spirit and the strength of the Almighty she shall go forth conquering and to conquer in His name. May Christ, born centuries ago, have the right of way in our services and in our churches through the Christmas season.

Elon College wishes for all a joyous Christmas and a happy New Year.

L. E. SMITH.

THE CHRISTMAS MESSAGE.

The Christmas message is that a Babe was born in Bethlehem about nineteen hundred years ago. The announcement may seem commonplace and cause wonder that such an event should send waves of gladness surging around the world. The birth of a babe is such an ordinary event.

But babes differ as much as men. They are bundles of possibilities and one of them may have wrapped up in it enough power to change the world.

When Caesar was born the Roman Empire flung its mighty circumference around the known world and turned the Mediterranean into a Roman lake, and when Napoleon first set his infant foot on his little island the continent of Europe trembled.

When Christ was born he was only a Babe, but never did such a Babe appear in this world before nor since. The patter of his infant feet was the prophecy and forerunner of the footsteps by which he strode through the centuries and mounted to his mastery today. When Christ was born the Christ Child was born in the heart of the world, and Christianity started out on its worldwide march. Christendom lay in the cradle and all the angels of joy that now sing his birth throughout all lands played around it. The waves of gladness that will soon spread to the rim of the planet started from that cave in Bethlehem; from its rocky ridge gushed the stream that is now flooding the world.

Joy was the initial note of the gospel, the keynote of all its music, and this is the song we now sing. Never did the world need it more than it does today. Men have wrought ruin and caused tragedies and shed blood and tears enough to make the world infinitely sad; now let Christ come and sing us a song of joy, even of glory to God in the highest and on earth peace, good will among men.

AN APPRECIATED LETTER.

Dear Brother Lester:

THE CHRISTIAN SUN under your editorial pen has sought through the whole year to carry messages of faith, hope, and love to all your readers, and now at this Christmas time your own heart can sincerely join the celestial chorus "Peace on Earth . . ."

And all your readers, whose lives have been enriched by your unselfish service, will join in wishing for you a very Merry Christmas and a New Year of renewed strength, energy, and consecration for your great task. THE CHRISTIAN SUN is well named, for it sheds light on many an otherwise dark pathway. Our prayer shall be that you may have wisdom and strength to let that Light shine, which is the true Light—to all who will walk in it.

Cordially yours,

J. O. ATKINSON.

Whenever a man by word of mouth seeks to impress upon his fellows that that he is the very embodiment of truth and honor, or that he possesses a superior brand of piety, it is then time to set a guard of a thousand eyes over that man. The stars of heaven send out no messengers with silver trumpets. All they do is to shine. And in like manner, truth, and piety "let their lights so shine that others may see their good works and glorify their Father which is in heaven."

CHRISTMAS.

"A little child shall lead them." None other than a child could lead the world into such a holiday and season as Christmas. The real Christmas spirit this year and every year, the Christmas holiday this year and every year will be found most perfectly in those homes where there are children. It is their season. They compel us. They lead us. Their young life fills us with joy, and the hope of an eternal Christmas. Not that Christmas will not be observed in homes where there are no children, for the spirit of childhood will flow over into other homes than where children are. But the spirit of the child, the abandon, the glow, the fervor, the unselfishness of childhood, must be there if there is to be any Christmas.

It is, indeed, a glorious and unspeakable thing that the birth of a Child in a manger, in far away Bethlehem of Judea, should grow in its significance and power, should increase in volume and momentum, till its influence spreads among the nations. But so it is, and we celebrate Christmas.

We have a long way to go yet, but of His Government there shall be no end. Only one-third of the human race, we are told, will observe Christmas this year, two-thirds of the family of man knowing nothing of the event or, knowing, will only regard it indifferently as some celebration to a pagan or an idol god somewhere. Two thirds of the human family are yet to be taught the Name of the Child and the power, the love and the life of the Child. The two-thirds wait on the one-third till we who know shall tell those who do not know; and so in our Christmas songs and joys and delights we shall long for that time when the whole world shall have the spirit of a child, and be led by that spirit. J. O. A.

A WORTHY PLEA.

Again we seek the attention, and the cooperation of all pastors. The Christmas offering for our disabled, retired ministers, and the widows of ministers, should not be neglected by any church. No more worthy or deserving cause or plea, and certainly none more appropriate, and needed at this time, will go to our churches and people at this time than this. As stated last week, it is a debt of honor and gratitude we owe to the faithful, and now needy ones who are looking to us for help, and whose plea we must not ignore. The amounts we allow are painfully meager, and unless these offerings are taken and increased, the Board will be driven to curtail the size of past and present grants.

Let every church take and send in a liberal Christmas offering for Superannuation. Gratefully and hopefully,

GREETINGS FROM MISS JILLSON.

To Friends in the Christian and Congregational Churches of Virginia and North Carolina:

I want to send a Christmas greeting to you and think a few words in your CHRISTIAN SUN may reach more than separate cards or messages.

I have thought often of my interesting visits with you in September and early October. I have spoken to many friends of your very fine work and earnest spirit and of your interest in our missionary life and of your cordial hospitality while I was with you. May the Christmas season bring to you all joy and blessing in life and service.

Good words come from Beirut—schools are well filled—good teachers have been secured and all are working well together. Gifts are helping the work of finishing the little building for social work—the kindergarten there is full to overflowing.

Soon the Christmas season will begin—December 25th will be observed by the missionaries—the Americans, English and French. January 6th will be Christmas for the Greek Orthodox Church and January 7th for the Armenian Church. For them the day is very sacred with early services and then visiting with friends to exchange greetings. In many houses there will be the representation of the manger and the shepherds and wise men bringing gifts. Joyous festivities with trees and gifts will be held on New Year's Day, January 1st. It was a joy to me to receive a gift from friends for the Christmas tree at our Beirut school, so we may be glad that they are to have oranges and nuts and a little candy, when they celebrate. It means so much to them. How full the world is of kindness and of love!

That the Christmas season may bring you joy and the New Year be full of gladness in the service of the Master is the wish of,

Your sincere friend,

WHAT CHINESE CHRISTIAN SAY.

Dr. Chester S. Miao of the National Christian Council of China says:

- (1) Everyone should do his best to steady the morale of his community and help to secure peace and order.
- (2) We should endeavor to carry on our daily work and help others to do their regular work.
- (3) War conditions are a breeding ground for rumour and propaganda. Let us do our best to act as agents for reliable news and for the dissemination of truth.
- (4) There is no better time than this to bring home to our people the Christian message of the cross of suffering. We need faith to sustain our hope and to endure suffering.
- (5) Let us launch a movement in every city for raising relief funds and needed materials for suffering people.
- (6) Let us pray for peace and the advancement of the cause of Christ.
- (7) Let us show that we love justice and seek to manifest the love of God.

The Chinese Christian leader, Mr. C. K. Lee, gave this answer to a student who asked why we should teach Christianity to China when it has the ethics of Confucianism:

"There are three reasons. First of all, Confucius was a teacher and Christ is a Saviour. China needs a Saviour more than she needs a teacher. In the second place, Confucius is dead and Christ is alive. China needs a living Saviour. In the third place Confucius is some day going to stand before Christ to be judged by Him. China needs to know Christ as Saviour before she meets Him as Judge."

CHRISTMAS AND THE CHILDREN.

"'Twas the night before Christmas, and all through the house not a creature was stirring, not even a mouse," for mother had gathered about her the children to tell them that marvelous story of Christmas. No mother should get too busy to sit with the children on this great night and enjoy with them the delights of the wonderful stories that have gathered around Christmas. But what stories shall be told?

There is the splendid story of good old Saint Nicholas who is supposed to have lived about sixteen hundred years ago in far away Asia Minor. He is said to have been a good boy, and he became the archbishop of the church at Myra. But his goodness did not keep the wicked Emperor Diocletian from persecuting him and keeping him in prison for a long time. Constantine was more lenient with him and his life was far happier. It is thought that he attended the great Church Council at Nicea in 325. There is no record as to his death.

But many believe that death did not end his good works. Many good deeds were thought to have been done by him. Among the many stories is the one of a very poor father who had three daughters but was unable to find husbands for them because of his poverty. Just as they were about to be sold as slaves to get some money, good Saint Nicholas heard of it and came one night with a purse of money which he threw through the window. With the money the oldest daughter got married. Then he came again with more money and the second daughter got married. The third time he came with money the father was watching and caught him by his clothes and found out who it was that had been bringing the money.

Nicholas has traveled nearly all over the world, especially on Christmas Eve, leaving good things for those who have been good. On the way to America with the early Dutch settlers who made their homes in New York he changed his name to Santa Claus and swapped his gray horse or ass for reindeer and made considerable change in his appearance.

On Christmas Eve this generous spirit of saints will go to the ends of the earth filling plates, baskets, shoes, stockings, and even the corner of the room with lots, and lots of things little boys and girls like. It's a great story, this story of Santa Claus.

But, mother, that anxious little boy or girl will also delight in the story of the shepherds who watched their sheep on the Judean hills the night the stars shone so bright and their hearts were so happy. They would love to go with the wise men of the East, riding a camel and following the star till they come to the little manger where the mother holds in her arms her first little baby and Joseph explains that this is the best place he could find for there was no room in the Inn. Help them to bring their gifts to Jesus, and worship him.

Saint Nicholas is fine, but please do not forget the baby Jesus, for without him there would have been no Christmas and children would still cry for a better place than a manger. Turn to Luke 2:1-20 and Matthew 2:1-12, and read it again. There are no words too hard for the children, read it to them, tell it to them, let them tell it, and then all say:

"FATHER, I THANK THEE."

CHRISTMAS.

It was the gift of God that made Christmas. It is the gift of man that continues Christmas.

At Christmas time we are reminded of peace, not the peace of the world but the peace of God—the peace that passeth human understanding. Man has been the pursuer of peace through all the ages. His pursuit of peace has brought him into conflict, forced him through wars, and finally brought him to the altar for the signing of treaties. In the giving of his signature as a representative of a nation, he has fancied that at last peace has come. But, alas, again the clouds of war become black and lowering, and the sound of battle is not far. The peace that he purchased by sword and found in battle has lasted but for a season, and again he faces the hell of war.

War comes as a result of selfishness, greed, and graft. One nation becomes aware of its poverty and at the same time discovers the riches of a sister nation. It builds up a fighting force under the pretence of keeping the sister nation from coming and robbing it of its poverty, but in reality it is an aggressive force that the poverty-stricken nation is generating that it may share, even if by force, the riches of its more fortunate sister nation. Selfishness, greed and graft are at the bottom of most wars.

Peace that is enduring is not the result of sword and battle, but it is the fruit of submission, generosity, and trust. When Christ died, He willed to the world and to all men His peace. "Peace I leave with you, My peace I give unto you, not as the world giveth, give I unto you." On a later occasion the Apostle Paul declared, "The peace of God that passeth all understanding shall keep your hearts through Christ Jesus."

Peace that passeth all understanding, peace that is enduring, is the result of submission and not the result of subjugation.

THE EVANGELISTIC SPIRIT IN EASTERN VIRGINIA.

From the report in the Suffolk Letter last week some may be laboring under a false impression. The figures showed a decrease of one hundred and thirty-one as over a year ago. This decrease was not due to deaths, letters of transfers, or not receiving new members altogether. Churches are beginning to apply a stricter check-up on their members than in former years. Several of the churches in revising the rolls found they had names on the rolls who could not be accounted for. Therefore, the roll has been revised.

The Conference actually had around five hundred additions to its churches for the Conference year of 1936 and 1937. This was far too small but it denotes some progress.

We have made a good start for the present year. Your committee on Evangelism has received reports of the following for the first month: Newport News received 17; Suffolk, 18; South Norfolk, 19; and Holland, 3. That is not a bad start. We hope the growth will continue throughout the year.

The President of our Conference, Rev. R. L. House, suggested to the ministers that we have a series of Sunday Afternoon meetings for promotional work throughout our Conference. The committee on Evangelism is acting upon his suggestion and is arranging for a Conference to be held at the Windsor Church, Sunday afternoon, January 16, 1938, at 2:30. To this service we are inviting all the ministers within the bounds of the Conference, as many laymen and laywomen from each church as can come and all the ideas that we can bring toward helping to further the cause of Evangelism.

We want the most expansive evangelistic campaign within the bounds of our Conference that has ever been launched in one year. Will you pray for this movement and work with us to that end?

J. E. McCAULEY,
Chairman.

Offerings for the Orphanage and Superannuation count on your conference apportionments. The amounts are small, why not send it all?

CHRISTMAS GREETINGS.

Dear Friends:

I should like to take advantage of this opportunity of wishing you a very Merry Christmas. Some of you I have never met, but that makes this Christmas wish for you no less sincere.

It is with a great deal of joy that I look forward to meeting some of you at the Holiday Conference next week. Somehow it seems to me very fitting that part of our Christmas vacation should be spent in planning for young people's work in our Church for the next year.

Throughout this season of the year, let us remember that we are celebrating Christ's birthday and that our efforts should be spent in doing those things which will best show our appreciation for His birth. I hope that all of you will have the joy that comes from taking some part in the Christmas activities of your church; in doing something for someone less fortunate than you; in remembering some of those who are often forgotten; and in endeavoring to make this a more Christian world.

May God bless you as you work and play during this Christmas week.

WHEN CHRISTMAS COMES.

Have you any old grudge you'd like to pay,
Any wrong laid up from a by-gone day?
Gather them all now, and lay them away
When Christmas comes.

Hard thoughts are heavy to carry, my friend,
And life is short from beginning to end;
Be kind to yourself, leave nothing to mend
When Christmas comes.

Do you know some fellow stranded and poor,
As good as you, but with much to endure?
Do not forget him, however obscure,
When Christmas comes.

Are'nt there some little ones, fair and sweet?
Who know not as yet what they have to meet?
Perhaps with joy you could make their hearts beat
When Christmas comes.

Any cloud you could lift from hearts of care,
Any kind word needed—try to be there;
And always add help to sympathy's prayer
When Christmas comes.

Fear not, my friend giving more than your due;
Remember the gift presented to you
In the long ago, and try to be true
When Christmas comes.

"THE SPIRIT OF CHRISTMAS."

The spirit of Christmas is the spirit of self-giving love, of joy, peace and good will. The Babe of Bethlehem was the love gift of God the Father to the world. The birth of Jesus Christ was the beginning of a new date and a new era in the life of mankind. The life of Jesus Christ opened the way of eternal life to all who would follow Him and walk therein, and a multitude whom no man can number have entered into the life of salvation through faith in Him and through the sacrificial power of His cross.

The Christmas spirit has brightened the world through the centuries since the angel proclaimed the tidings of great joy to the shepherds and the angelic chorus raised its hymn of "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace and good will among men." A sorry and sad world it would be were the spirit of Christmas to die out.

It is ours to help see to it that instead of declining in influence, that spirit shall increase in power and in practical effort. This is a special part of the great task committed to the Christian Churches. It is to be accomplished in largest measure by the daily exemplification of this wonderful spirit in the life of its members. Not by pulpit pronouncement but by personal practice is the spirit of Christmas to be made operative in every community. When this truth is realized and made a general fact in life, we shall have a church of new spiritual power and a greatly improved atmosphere in home, school, church, state, and nation; and that will react upon the world at large.

The place for a new birth of the Christmas spirit of joy, love, self-giving, peace, and good will is, first of all, in each one of us. Let us pray God for it this Christmas and for grace to live it out.

NOEL.

How soft the fingers of the snow
Across the winter grass!
How white the waxen mistletoe!
'Tis Nature's holy mass—
O winter wind, breathe low, breathe low,
And let the Christmas spirit pass.

A CHRISTMAS MESSAGE.

Dear Children:

Nearly two thousand years ago a little baby was born in a manger in Bethlehem. Angel voices announced his birth and God sent a brilliant star to guide men to where the baby Jesus lay. He was God's greatest gift to the world. Shepherds watching their flocks heard the angel's voices and following the star found the baby Jesus. Wise men from the far away East came following the light of the star and brought rich gifts of gold, and frankincense and myrrh and offered them to the baby Jesus. Many other people came bringing gifts of love.

Today, all over the world people celebrate Christmas as the birthday of Jesus. Many gifts are exchanged because that is the way Jesus would have us celebrate His birthday, by giving gifts of love to one another, not to only those who can give us gifts but to those, also, who are not able to give us gifts. By giving without thinking of what we will get is the real Christmas way of giving.

As we plan for our Christmas gifts, let us aim to make them real gifts of love. A poet once said: "The gift without the giver is bare." Let us be unselfish in our giving and not only to those who can give us something in return. I wonder if you would not like to make some real gifts to Jesus, some "White Gifts" to Him, some promises that you really mean to keep. Such gifts as: unselfishness, truth-telling, courtesy to members of the family as well as to outsiders, cheerfulness, honest work at home and at school, obedience, and friendliness to everyone, would be gifts that would be pleasing to Jesus.

May you have the happiest and most joyous Christmas ever.

Sincerely,

YOUR FRIEND.

"THE CHRISTMAS FAIRIES GIFT."

It was Christmas morning in the great Children's hospital. The night lights were still burning and it was very quiet, but through the eastern windows a rosy glow could be seen over the tops of the near-by buildings. The far-away clatter of the milk wagon broke the stillness.

Little Rosie O'Neill was wide awake. She hadn't slept very much for she was in a plaster cast having her twisted back straightened. But who could be sleepy on Christmas morning?

Nurse Mary had been quite firm the night before. "We must have it quiet in the morning," she said. "I'll hang up a stocking for every one of you down in the nursery, and just as soon as you have had your breakfast, I'll bring them to you." Then with a

Lord, I'm just a little boy,
Hidden in the night;
Let Your angels spy me out
Long before it's light.

I would be the first to wake
And the first to raise

You shall hear me first, Lord,
Blow my Christmas horn;
Let Your angels awaken me
On Your birthday morn.

smile she tucked them in and bade them good-night, hoping they would soon be sound asleep.

Many times during the night as the nurse gave medicine here and there, Nurse Mary had answered the question, "Is it morning yet, Nurse?" by her quiet "Sh-h-h—not yet. Time for another sleep now or you won't be able to keep awake on Christmas."

But as the eastern sky grew rosy, one by one they awakened, and from cot to cot the joyous whisper spread: "It's Christmas morning."

Just outside in the corridor stood a lovely Christmas tree, ready to be wheeled into the room as soon as breakfast was over. Down in the diet kitchen a dainty little Christmas card was placed on each tray. The churches and the Junior Red Cross had sent enough gifts and cards for every one in the hospital.

Breakfast was over at last and each little card had been lovingly examined and carefully laid where it might be looked at frequently.

"Sh!" said Nurse Mary, "It's not stockings this time; it's a surprise. Close your eyes tight. Not a single peep! Cross your heart and hope to die! All right Jean, we are ready."

Such a queer noise, such a tinkling and swishing and a sound of something heavy being wheeled in. What could it be?

"Oh, I know," cried one little lad. "I smell it, Nurse; it's a Christmas tree!"

Then every eye was open, and there it stood so tall, all covered with shining tinsel, red bells, and such a lot

MUSINGS OF A CHILD.

I was wondering today if Jesus had a birthday party when he was a little boy. If He did—who did He invite? Was His little cousin, John, there? Did He invite all the little boys and girls near Him? Did they bring Him gifts to show their love for Him? What kind of games did they play?

I wonder if His mother baked Him a birthday cake, and if there were any candles to light? I wish I knew, don't you?

Anyway, I wish I had been a child when Jesus was, because I would liked to have been one of His play-mates—wouldn't you?

I know what I'll do—I'll be a friend of His today, and bring Him a gift on His birthday. Will you? If we have not already brought Him our hearts and dedicated our lives to His service, I know that He would appreciate the gift of ourselves more than anything else. Don't you think so?—V. W.

WE THANK THEE.

We thank Thee, Lord, for birds and flowers,
Day and night, sunshine and showers,
For all the grass, for every tree,
O Lord, of all, we thank Thee.

MONDAY.

CHEAP CHROMOES.

"Covet earnestly the best gifts."—I Cor. 12:31.

We are told that Emerson lamented the money which he had to spend for wine—then deemed a social necessity—when with the same money, he might have bought fine engravings which would delight his family.

This reminds us of how much people clutter up their walls with cheap chromoes when the masterpieces of the world are available at very small sums. They are reproductions, of course, nevertheless, they represent the original, and have the same aesthetic value.

This reminds us also that we clutter up our lives with a lot of cheap and useless things, cheap pleasures, half-baked ideals, frosty indifferences, half truths of things, etc., when all the riches of God are at our disposal.

Prayer—Our Father, forgive us for our engrossment in second rate and trivial things. Help us to cultivate a love for the beautiful, both in life and soul. Amen.

TUESDAY.

THIRSTY FOR GOD.

"My soul thirsteth for the living God."—Psalm 42:2.

Sometimes one suffers the experience of great thirst—lost, perhaps, in the waterless wilds or the sandy desert, or, perhaps, in sickness when it is necessary for one to be deprived of water for a time.

This thirsty experience seems to be the picture which David gives us of his own soul's thirst for God. How much do we thirst for God? In all spiritual quests, it is doubted whether one ever had the passionate intensity of physical thirst. However, one thing remains for us; we can yearn for a kindred eagerness in our constant desire for God.

Prayer—Our Father, increase our thirst for the waters of eternal life. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

MAKING A NEW WORLD.

"Wait on the Lord; be of good courage."—Psalm 27:7.

In his meditations in the Christian Herald not long ago, William T. Ellis said that hard times are a necessary preparation for the vast changes that come in civilization. He said that men have to be violently shaken loose from their faith in the old orders and "given a simpler faith, but undoubtedly a wiser one." It is a hard "shock," he said, nevertheless, one which teaches the world that "no man liveth to himself and no man dieth to himself."

Is Dr. Ellis right? Looking back over the history of the growth of civilization, we believe that he is, that somehow God is working out a purpose unto a great cosmic end. That purpose must be human brotherhood, justice and peace.

Whatever the sacrifices that have to be made, if mankind can learn control and cooperation and can be imbued in the spirit of Jesus, the result warrants the sacrifice.

Prayer—Dear Heavenly Father, we pray that Thy rule may be established on the earth. Help us to give our hearts in obedience to Thy will and follow Christ all the way. Amen.

THURSDAY.

BATTLING OUT THE GOOD.

"He led them through the depths as through the wilderness."—Psalm 106:9.

All achievement comes through suffering. Throughout the ages, men have sought to battle out sufferings; but in vain.

Our text refers to that experience of the Israelites which has become the epitome of life's advancement from what it is to what it ought to be. It took forty years in the desert to weld Israel into a nation; and all the while the people complained of their sufferings.

The most of us have the same experience in our personal affairs. Often we have been taken through unknown ways unto blessings unforeseen. "God works in mysterious ways His wonders to perform." "He doeth all things well to them that will love and serve Him."

Prayer—Our Father, Thou knowest best what we need and it is so often different from what we think we need. Have Thine own way and lead us on to perfection. Amen.

FRIDAY.

BY THE GRACE OF GOD.

"The steps of a good man are ordered by the Lord; and he delighteth in his own way."—Psalm 37:23.

This little text explains itself. The writer was pleased recently by a visitor who spent the night. When he left, he left something with us, something we know not what and yet something that made us feel good—an inspiration—to live closer to God.

Not every guest is a Saint. Not every guest leaves a trace of the special goodness of the Lord. This reflects, however, that personal Godliness affects others whom we meet. We do not need to be brilliant, or learned. The mere acknowledgment of God's ways, of God in life, or the mere manifestation of trusting Him is an unconscious ministry to others.

Prayer—Our Father, we pray for a simpler faith and for a more child-like trust in Thee. Amen.

SATURDAY.

A CHRISTIAN'S "MORNING AFTER."

"With my spirit within me will I seek Thee early."—Isa. 26:9-13.

Sin always has a "morning after."

This "morning after" test is a good one to apply to religious life. The Christian arises with a hymn on his lips. His waking thoughts are precious words of Scripture.

And the morning sets the tone of the day. That is why so many religious movements have stressed the

HIS UNSPEAKABLE GIFT.

By REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D.

"Thanks be unto the Lord for His unspeakable gift."—II Cor. 2:15.

In these days when gift-giving is foremost in our minds, let us here consider "God's unspeakable gift." Let us remember that Christmas giving comes from God's giving; and that His gift was the Babe of Bethlehem. Our giving will fall far short of what it might mean to our own lives if it does not partake of something of the spirit of that Gift, and if our gifts are not given in somewhat of a remembrance of the giving of God when He gave Jesus in Bethlehem. If our Christmas could only keep Christ in its center how happy would be our giving, how wonderful our dinner parties, and how beautiful the re-assembling of our families about the sacred hearth-side once again.

It would not mean less joy, but more; it would not mean less enthusiasm, but more; it would not mean less of the finest and best of Christmas sentiment, but more—far more. So, then let us think about God's gift. St. James says: "Do not err, my beloved brethren, every good gift, and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights, in whom there is no variable-ness, neither shadow of turning." God not only gave us the gift of Jesus, but He gave us the gift of giving. It is His purpose that first in all our giving should be the giving of Jesus to others. We cannot give Him unless we have accepted Him for our own selves. If we have Him in our heart and daily living we have God's unspeakable gift.

"Unspeakable gift," is Paul's way of saying the gift which cannot be described in speech—that gift which is beyond the words of man. It is a burst of beauty upon the lips of one of His humble servants saying, "How I love Him!" What great deliverance He hath given my soul! What great victory He hath given my life! What opening doors of duty and challenge He hath set before me! What courage He hath given my heart, what peace He hath given my soul!

Paul has just been writing down the immortal words of his commendation to his newly established Corinthian Church, telling them how they have bountifully given of their gifts for the "poor saints in Jerusalem"; and telling them how their example has been used to bless others in the art and joy of giving; and further telling them that their giving has worked out a two-fold good, in that it not only hath blessed the needy ones in old Jerusalem, but also it has given them the spirit of thankfulness to God. This spirit of gratitude to God, thinks Paul, is a most worthwhile grace to covet. He keeps it ever uppermost in his own heart.

How Is Jesus Indescribable?

I cannot tell you what it is to have Him born in my heart. I remember the day I went to the altar, and the sweet victory that came into my soul. But how shall I describe it? And even that seems so far away today. It is the Christ born in my heart today that does for today. And how shall I describe that? Paul's description was little more than an ascription of thanks to God for that unspeakable gift.

Mary was the first one to try to describe His coming into her life, and how lovely her words are! How they seek to tell what great things He has done for her! No more beautiful lines can be found:

"My soul doth magnify the Lord,
And my spirit hath rejoiced in God my Saviour.
For He hath regarded the low estate of His handmaiden.
For behold, from henceforth all generations shall call me blessed.
For He that is mighty hath done great things, and holy is His Name.
And His mercy is on them that fear Him from generation to generation."

Her beautiful words have been set to sweet music, and having sung their way down across the centuries; but far more has happened in the soul than on the lips when they have sung—for he is an indescribable gift!

Luke tells us that there was a man of God living in Jerusalem in the days when Jesus was born; "and the same man was just and devout, waiting for the consolation of Israel; and the Holy Ghost was upon him." Yes, he was a good man, just and devout, and, perhaps, versed in the sweet songs, and lovely language of the temple psalter; but when the Babe of Bethlehem was tenderly laid in his arms, his words, sublime as they are, could never describe what he felt in his soul:

"Lord, now lettest Thou Thy servant depart in peace,
According to Thy word:
For mine eyes have seen Thy salvation,
Which Thou hast prepared before the face of all people;
A light to lighten the Gentiles,
And the glory of Thy people Israel."

Striking are the words of Jesus in the light our thinking thus far, when He said to the woman at the well, "If thou knewest the gift of God, and who it is that asketh for drink. . . ." Knowing the will and mind of God, Jesus looked upon Himself as God's gift to the world. Jesus is saying to this woman at the well—a deep-dyed sinner—if you know the gift of God, and who I am, you would not hesitate to ask for living water! My friends, God so loved the world that He gave Jesus, in order that sinners, the very lowliest of them, might have living water, everlasting life; and that none should go without the mercy and love of God, choose they only to accept that so great a gift.

There was something, indeed, for the Heavens to sing about when the first Christmas bells rang in Bethlehem; when a star out of the pathway of the worlds hovered over the Judean village; and when the angels announced to mortal men: "For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord." And strange, beautiful words of that self-same Saviour when He says: "Likewise, I say unto you, there is joy in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth." In other words when When Christ is born in our hearts heaven rejoices. The gift is accepted, and only heaven itself can know the glory and value of that gift.

Why men will be without Him I cannot see! Why we should ever turn a deaf ear to Him I do not know. Why we should ever doubt His goodness, mercy, and love, I cannot understand; for He is such an unspeakable Gift—the glorious Gift of God. May He be born in our hearts today, and may our love and worship of Him be so great that He shall never be dethroned in our lives!

"O holy Child of Bethlehem,
Descend to us, we pray;
Cast out our sins and enter in;
Be born in us today.
We hear the Christmas angels
The great glad tidings tell;
O come to us, abide with us;
Our Lord Emmanuel!"—Amen.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:—

Our financial report this week carries us above the eighteenth rung in our financial ladder for the year.

We are just $1,769.55 from our goal of $20,000.00. Let every church and Sunday school that has not taken the offering for Thanksgiving take it now, and mail it in. We will not close our books until after the first week in January. Give us a few more strong pushes and we will be to our goal.

I am quoting a letter I received a few days ago. I thought it would be interesting to you:

December 13, 1937.

C. D. Johnston,
Elon College,
North Carolina.
Dear Mr. Johnston:

I have just found out that the young lady by the name of Dorothy Miller who sings in our Community Chorus, came from the Christian Orphanage, of which you are in charge.

I believe you should know of the wonderful cooperative spirit she has shown in Burlington. She has been of the greatest help to our Chorus this year, has faithfully attended rehearsals, and to top it all off, on Sunday, December 5th, she traveled in a pouring rain to Greensboro, where we put on a Broadcast, at which she sang beautifully.

Yesterday, December 12th, she was the outstanding soloist at our Annual Christmas Concert at the First Baptist Church. We had a Chorus this year numbering one hundred and twelve, of which there were a couple out sick. Miss Miller not only sang throughout all the difficult Chorus parts, but to top it all off, at the end she was the soloist in the Inflammatus from Stabat Mater taking a solo part that probably could not have been done by any other soprano soloist in Burlington.

Her work was beautiful, her spirit sweet and I wanted you to know how much I, as Director of the Chorus appreciate it. I not only speak for myself, but for everyone who had the privilege of listening to her. A wonderful girl and deserving of a great deal of credit from us all.

Sincerely yours,

W. R. DAVIS.

The young lady mentioned in this letter came to the orphanage a few years ago—a little girl. She graduated in High School. A friend made it possible for her to take Voice and Piano at Elon College; also the Commercial course. Today she holds a splendid position with one of the largest knitting mills in the South. Are you glad you had a part in giving her a chance in life?

"CHRISTIAN SUN" CAMPAIGN HEADQUARTERS.

Virginia welcomes the pugnacious letter of Generalissimo J. H. (Joshua Herceles) Lightbourne. How can one fight except there be an enemy? And how can there be a victory without a battle?

The contest is for subscriptions to THE CHRISTIAN SUN. The goal is 700—for Virginia, 350, and the same for North Carolina. The victory will be to the general who leads his forces over the top and farthest into no man's land of new subscriptions.

The zero hour will be February 1st at the crack of dawn. Every soldier will be trained. Ammunition will be supplied. Every minister will be in uniform brandishing his receipt book. All will be ready when the trumpet sounds. Amiable hostilities will begin. The battle will roar by the way of Bunker Hill, Appomattox, Armageddon and Waterloo. The armistice will be signed at sunset, February 15th. Unto the victor will be the spoils. To your guns, Ole Virginians! Let every sore-back, razor-back, half-back gird himself to scalp the heels of tar-heads. Lay hold on every jaw bone to put to flight the army of the aliens.

All subscriptions, superscriptions, prescriptions, inscriptions will be sent to campaign headquarters at 514 S. Main Street, Norfolk, Virginia.

CORPORAL CABIN (R. L.) HOUSE.

A WONDERFUL GIFT.

By Mrs. J. Everette Neese.

There came a wonderful gift to the earth
One night in the long ago,
To open the hearts of people
That they a dear Father might know.
It was just a Babe, this wonderful gift,
And in a stall of a manger He lay,
But He was Messiah, Redeemer and King,
Who brought a lost world "The Way."

The Wise Men and Shepherds received Him with joy;

O'er hills and plains they traveled,
Seeking to worship the Virgin's Son,
At the star in His course they marveled.
At last came a message, and in their hearts
A new hope was born forsooth,
So they hastened to Bethlehem, and, lo,
Found Him as the Angels declared—
"The Truth."

There was never a gift so precious as He,
And none is so good today,
He is ours if we earnestly seek Him,
He'll enter our hearts to stay.
Oh, you, who are weary of toiling,
And burdened with worldly strife,
Look to Him; He's a Friend and a Brother, Yea, He's even more—"The Life."

BIRTH OF JESUS.

the angel Gabriel that announced the coming birth of Christ (Luke 1:28-38). Nazareth was the dwelling place of the Holy Family after the flight to Egypt (Matt. 2:23). The obscure years of Christ's boyhood were spent here, and in its synagogue He preached a sermon for which He was rejected by his fellow-townsmen (Matt. 13:54; Luke 4:29). Nazareth and Bethlehem were the great sacred abodes of the revelation of the spiritual, everlasting truth and Light through Christ.

Here then, in the town of Bethlehem, Jesus was born under peculiar circumstances.

Matthew and Luke have a narrative of the birth and infancy of Jesus, and agree in the following points: that Jesus was of David's line; that He was miraculously conceived, that He was born in Bethlehem, and that the Holy Family permanently settled in Nazareth. The additional incidents mentioned by Matthew are the appearance of the angel to Joseph, the adoration of the Magi and the flight into Egypt. Luke mentions the annunation to Mary, the visit of Mary to Elizabeth, the vision of angels, and the adoration of the shepherds.

The narratives have two ideas which are impressive and which make a profound appeal to the feelings and the imagination. One idea is the humiliation of the Saviour; the lowly parentage, the birth in a stable, the rage of Herod, the flight of his parents to a distant land. The other idea shows Him as honored and accredited by heaven, while earth also agreed in the representatives of its wealth and its poverty, its wisdom, and its ignorance, to do Him honor at His coming.

We commemorate the birth of Jesus. We teach our children about the wonderful God, the Christ, the salvation, the life that is to come, etc.; but at the same time we do not know Him. For to know Him is to be like Him. To know Him is to love Him and to follow Jesus in all of our activities.

God, we say, though seldom believe it, is everywhere, in all things. In Him we live and move and have our being. But through the cloud of our material body and physical senses we make God distant, God in heaven (somewhere above the stars) and we on the earth. Jesus came to unite us with God so we could be one as He is one with the Father. We have the beautiful and most wonderful teaching of the blessed Saviour.

It is the spiritual formula which is but understood and seldom actually used by men. Some religious alchemists tried it, but not knowing the secret symbolism they always mixed wrong ingredients and when they expected peace on earth they actually obtained war; when they wanted love, they obtained hatred. Only when their spiritual formula of Christ will be used by this world properly shall the Glory to God in the Highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men be truly fulfilled. Then the birth of Jesus will not be a meaningless formality, but a powerful reality in this world.

FAMILY ALTAR.

Quiet Hour, the Morning Watch, the Quiet Time.

These first moments of the day, when powers are at their fullest should belong to God, in prayer, praise and meditation.

Whoever begins the day with God is less likely to go astray from Him in the hours that ensue.

"Still, still with Thee,

When purple morning breaketh,

And the bird waketh,

And the shadows flee."

—W. T. Ellis.

SUNDAY.

THE IRRESISTIBLE GOD.

"And David said unto Saul, I cannot go with these, for I have not proved them." 1 Samuel 17:39.

David would accept nothing that he had not proved of use to him. Even then, his choices were made with his determined purpose to glorify God.

This reminds us also of Daniel who would not eat the King's meat and compromise his faith. On the contrary, while a prisoner, before the open window of his room, he poured out his soul to God.

The experience of these two heaven-born souls is often duplicated in our lives. We read not long ago of a minister who was so powerful in his attack on vice that his enemies decided to silence him. He was trapped in a brothel upon the pretence of his being called to a sick person. When his enemies sprung upon him and demanded that he cease his activities or they would ruin him, without waiting to protest or to plead, he fell upon his knees before an open window and poured out his soul to the Lord with such volume that all the neighbors heard him. This frightened the captors and they dragged him out of the house before the police could come.

This man fought with his own weapons—prayer and God. It pays to trust God and lean on Him. Such a trust is the Soul's greatest defense.

Prayer—Our Father, forgive us for depending so much upon ourselves and our wisdom. Keep us ever conscious of Thy nearness and readiness to answer prayer and blessings. Amen.

CHRISTMAS FAIRIES' GIFT.

of mysterious parcels! And a kind-faced lady and some real fairies.

One of the fairies told the story after she had gone back to her own Christmas tree at home.

"O Mother," I am so glad Miss Atkinson took us down there. It was just wonderful to see those sick children, some of them too sick to sit up and others able to be lifted out of bed and watch from big chairs. And every one of them seemed to get just the right thing. Then we sang carols, and one little girl said, 'Will the fairies come back again?' She thought we were really truly fairies. But do you know what I thought of mother? It was of the Wise Men and how they brought gifts to Jesus. I always wished I'd been there to bring gifts, too. But somehow, this morning, I felt that this was the happiest time I ever had, and the perhaps it was just like giving him things. Anyhow, Miss Atkinson said it was."

Translating Christmas

By MARSHALL WINGFIELD.

Essay not the Christmas story with prosaic dissertation;
Nor lecture like the pedant on wise academic themes;
Only poets, priests and singers can give interpretation
To stories born of poetry and cradled in our dreams.

Put the message of the Yuletide in minstrelsy compelling;
For it cannot be embodied in the sermons preachers preach;
The glory of the story must elude the tongue of telling,
Transcending all the homilies and all the arts of speech.

The Hymn of Love Incarnate must ever limp and falter,
When translated into sermon with logic cold and clear;
The poet-priest must chant it by holiest, highest altar,
Or the song of Christmas angels will never gain an ear.

Preach the prose tomorrow in all the learned variations;
Turn then today's emotions into parched fields of need;
Render then seraphic singing into practical translations;
But today give us the mystery and the music for our need.

Forgetting storied doctrines and their keen interpretations,
Fain our hearts would follow where the stars in beauty beam;
For the fields dry and dusty with old creedal fossilations,
Are never cheered by seraph-song nor lighted by a gleam.

Our ears would hear of naught today but happiest hosannas,
And exultant hallelujahs to the wondrous Prince of Peace;
We would march with eyes uplifted to the everlasting banners
Of a King whose mighty Kingdom shall evermore increase.

In strains of sky-born music would we find a hidden meaning
Of earth's strange denials of the life for which we long;
Learn that joy now and forever is only for the gleaner
Of the wise who turn denials into faith's exultant song.

Fain would we soar today in realms of heavenly glamour,
So that our dull and dreary lives in beauty rare may shine;
While the far-off angel-song stills our fretful clamour,
And stamps our jaded souls anew with God's own mark and sign.
